How to Access Our Reports

We've got you covered! Access our reports in the way that works best for you.

On Your Computer

All three of the the Department's flagship reports on international child labor and forced labor are available on the USDOL website in HTML and PDF formats, at <https://www.dol.gov/endchildlabor>. These reports include Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, as required by the Trade and Development Act of 2000; List of Products Produced by Forced or Indentured Child Labor, as required by Executive Order 13126; and List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor, as required by the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005. On our website, you can navigate to individual country pages, where you can find information on the prevalence and sectoral distribution of the worst forms of child labor in the country, specific goods produced by child labor or forced labor in the country, the legal framework on child labor, enforcement of laws related to child labor, coordination of government efforts on child labor, government policies related to child labor, social programs to address child labor, and specific suggestions for government actions to address the issue.

On Your Phone

The Department's Sweat & Toil mobile application contains more than 1,000 pages of research from all three reports. Sweat & Toil helps you easily sort data by region, country, assessment level, good, and type of exploitation, all without the need for an internet connection. You can download the free app from Apple's App Store or the Google Play store and access the data on our website: <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/apps>.

The Department's Comply Chain: Business Tools for Labor Compliance in Global Supply Chains mobile application contains best practice guidance for companies on ways to develop strong social compliance systems to reduce child labor and forced labor in supply chains. The application includes eight modules ranging from stakeholder engagement to code of conduct provisions, and from auditing to remediation to reporting. Companies that are new to social compliance can work through the modules in order, and more experienced companies can select modules based on their continuous improvement goals. You can download the free App from Apple's App Store or the Google Play store, or access it on the Department's website: <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/apps>.

On Paper

Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor report is available in a hardcopy magazine format, which provides an overall summary of the report, regional findings related to meaningful efforts made and gaps for countries to address, and the assessment levels of each of the 131 countries. In addition, our List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor also is available in hardcopy format. Send an email to GlobalKids@dol.gov to request hard copies or download them from the Department's website at <https://www.dol.gov/ilab/reports>.

Foreword

Patrick Pizzella
Acting U.S. Secretary of Labor

At the G20 Leader's Summit in Buenos Aires in September 2018, the U.S. Department of Labor signed on to a strategy to eliminate child labor, forced labor, human trafficking, and modern slavery globally. It did so because eliminating child labor and forced labor is the right thing to do and is a priority for the Trump Administration. The Department takes seriously our enforcement of labor rights included in all U.S. free trade agreements and preference programs, including prohibitions on child labor and forced labor.

Exploitative child labor is inexcusable—it robs children of their childhoods, restricts their ability to attend school, and undermines the efforts of governments and employers that play by the rules. Not only are these outcomes unacceptable for children, but workers in the United States and in other countries should not have to compete with unscrupulous producers who use child labor or forced labor. These reprehensible practices undercut the higher standards we maintain and that are needed to safeguard the well-being of our workforce here at home and to protect vulnerable children and their families from exploitation in countries around the world.

The Department's Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor assesses government efforts to eliminate child labor in 131 countries and territories. More importantly, it provides concrete recommendations on areas where additional efforts are needed in order to make meaningful progress, including in labor and criminal law enforcement.

For more than 25 years, the Department's Bureau of International Labor Affairs has funded initiatives to combat child labor and forced labor in more than 90 countries, including by increasing enforcement capacity, researching the nature and extent of these problems, and supporting policy actions to protect children and adult workers from labor exploitation. These projects have helped demonstrate effective approaches that have been replicated and expanded by many governments. The Department also worked with private sector and civil society actors to support their efforts to confront this problem.

As the Department's experience has shown, it will take a broad-based, coordinated push from all sides to accelerate progress and achieve the goal of eradicating child labor worldwide. Let us work together to do the right thing for children—and to do right by our workers.

Martha E. Newton, Deputy
Undersecretary for International Affairs

One hundred years ago, in early 1919, representatives from governments around the world came together to draft the Constitution of what would become the International Labor Organization, powerfully asserting that “the failure of any nation to adopt humane conditions of labour is an obstacle in the way of other nations which desire to improve the conditions in their own countries.” These first principles regarding the world of work inspired global action, including at the U.S. Department of Labor. The Department’s Bureau of International Labor Affairs (ILAB) has worked on these issues globally for more than 70 years, and that includes more than 25 years of concerted efforts to end child labor and forced labor.

One of the ways we carry out these principles today is by shining a spotlight on child labor and forced labor around the world, and supporting innovative ways to eradicate these abuses. It is part of our mission at ILAB to ensure a fair global playing field for workers in the United States and around the world by combating international child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking.

This latest edition of our flagship report, the 2018 Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, mandated by the Trade and Development Act of 2000, includes more than 1,900 recommendations that governments can take to address child labor, including nearly 1,200 that concern improvements in labor and criminal laws and enforcement. This and more than 1,000 pages of research also are available via a mobile app, called Sweat & Toil.

What the research shows us is that despite global efforts, child labor remains a problem. About 152 million boys and girls ages 5 to 17—more than double the entire child population in the United States—are involved in child labor; half of those are in hazardous work that endangers their safety, health, and moral development.

To end these objectionable abuses requires strong resolve. It requires governments to pass laws that protect against labor exploitation and to convert those laws into adequate enforcement practices. It requires investing adequately in their labor inspectorates and doing a better job of prosecuting perpetrators of child labor and forced labor.

ILAB is committed to working in partnership to support governments in doing these things and doing them better. In Brazil, for example, we have a project that has trained more than 1,000 government officials to better recognize indicators of forced labor, set up an online platform for the government to receive complaints of forced labor from rural workers, and developed a monitoring tool to help the government identify hot spots for locating forced labor. Such efforts have the potential to positively transform the lives of workers who might otherwise be vulnerable to forced labor.

Employers need to be a part of the solution, too. Business leadership is vital in addressing these abuses in global supply chains. That is why we work to support the private sector to do its part to address child labor and forced labor. We engage directly with a variety of business and industry groups such as the Global Battery Alliance, Nestlé, and the global cocoa and chocolate industry, to name a few. We also have developed a mobile app, Comply Chain, that provides companies with practical, step-by-step guidance on how to develop robust social compliance programs to prevent, detect, and address child labor in their supply chains.

Finally, we have collaborated directly with numerous NGOs around the world through technical cooperation projects. For instance, in 2018, we funded a global project to strengthen labor and criminal legal frameworks concerning child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking, as well as their enforcement; a project to foster accountability in the recruitment of fishery workers in Thailand; and a project to prevent and reduce child labor and forced labor in palm oil supply chains in Colombia and Ecuador.

Achieving the elimination of child labor and forced labor demands more than wishful thinking. It demands strong and decisive action. The Department remains fully committed to partnering with governments, businesses, civil society, and international organizations to end child labor, forced labor, and any form of modern day slavery. We are all in this fight together, and through our collective efforts, I am confident that we can succeed.

Acknowledgments

The U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of International Labor Affairs (ILAB) published this report under the leadership of Martha Newton, Deputy Undersecretary for International Affairs; Mark Mittelhauser, Associate Deputy Undersecretary for International Affairs; Grant Lebens, Chief of Staff; Marcia Eugenio, Director of the Office of Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Human Trafficking (OCFT); and Kevin Willcutts, Deputy Director, OCFT.

Chanda Uluca, Rachel Raba, and Austin Pedersen managed the research, writing, and production of this report, with major contributions from Fan Yang, Dan Arp, James Gyenes, Thomas Szymanski, and Caitlin Harwood. The following OCFT staff carried out the underlying research that made the report possible: Ahoura Afshar, Marco Campos, Marina Colby, Claudia Guidi, Erica Herrmann, Jacqueline Jesus, Yune Lee, Kyle Livingston, Teodora Mladenovic, Jennifer Oetken, Caleb Owen, Leyla Strotkamp, Sarah Sunderlin, Jon Underdahl-Peirce, and Pilar Velasquez. Tina Faulkner, Brandie Sasser, and Tanya Shugar edited critical portions of the report. Alexa Gunter, Oryza Astari, Daisy Flores, and Julia Reinitz provided vital research and administrative support.

Other personnel within OCFT who made important contributions include Christine Carlson, Kathryn Chinnock, Miles Copley, Lorena Davalos, Cortney Donnalley, Rana Dotson, Marisa Ferri Light, Carolyn Huang, Quinn Marschik, Eileen Muirragui, Ingris Ramos, Sherry Richmond, Doris Senko, Pamela Wharton, Shelley Stinelli, and Honoré Tchou.

Micole Allekotte, Deborah Birnbaum, and Derek Baxter from the Department's Office of the Solicitor, along with Jay Berman from the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Policy, made major contributions. Other staff from ILAB, the Employment and Training Administration, the Executive Secretariat, the Office of Public Affairs, the Office of the Solicitor, the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Policy, and the Wage and Hour Division who contributed include Olaoluwa Abina, Giorleny Altamirano Rayo, Andy Bailey, Ryan Carrington, Donna Chung, Pat Del Vecchio, Cleveland Fairchild, Jane Garrido, Keith Goddard, Shannon Golden, Jennifer Goodyear, Ashley Higgins, Rob Hines, Tamara Hoflejer, Emma Laury, Marie Ledan, Steve Marler, Kelsey Massey, Katy Mastman, Ed McCarthy, Tecla Murphy, Everett

Purpose of this Report

The U.S. Department of Labor has prepared this 18th annual report on the 2018 Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor in accordance with the Trade and Development Act of 2000 (TDA). (1) The TDA set forth the requirement that a country implement its commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor for the President of the United States to consider designating the country a beneficiary developing country under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) program. (2; 3) The TDA also mandated that the President submit to the United States Congress the Secretary of Labor’s findings with respect to each “beneficiary country’s implementation of its international commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.” (1) The Department’s Bureau of International Labor Affairs (ILAB) carries out this responsibility on behalf of the Secretary.

Research Focus

Country Coverage

This report covers 119 independent countries and 15 non-independent countries and territories designated as GSP beneficiaries. This includes former GSP recipients who have negotiated free-trade agreements with the United States. (4) Because the population of children is extremely small (fewer than 50) or non-existent in the British Indian Ocean Territory, Heard Island and McDonald Islands, and the Pitcairn Islands, the report does not contain a discussion of these three non-independent countries and territories. This 2018 report presents information on child labor and the worst forms of child labor and efforts to eliminate this exploitation in the remaining 119 countries and 12 non-independent countries and territories. The use of “countries” in this report includes territories, and because the report focuses on government efforts, non-independent countries and territories are classified by their associated regions.

Population Covered

In undertaking research on the “worst forms of child labor,” ILAB relied on the TDA definition of a child, which is the same definition contained in ILO Convention No. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor (ILO C. 182). The TDA and ILO C. 182 define “child” as a person under age 18.

Reporting Period

The reporting period for this year’s report is January 2018 through December 2018. In certain cases, significant events or government efforts that occurred in early 2019 were included, as appropriate.

Type of Work

This report focuses on child labor and the worst forms of child labor. Definitions related to these types of work are guided by ILO C. 138 on Minimum Age and ILO C. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Child labor includes work below the minimum age as established in national legislation (excluding permissible light work), the worst forms of child labor, and hazardous unpaid household services. The definition of the “worst forms of child labor” is found in the TDA and is the same as that included in ILO C. 182. It includes (a) all forms of slavery or practices similar to slavery, such as the sale or trafficking of children, debt bondage and serfdom, or forced or compulsory labor, including forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict; (b) the use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, for the production of pornography, or for pornographic performances; (c) the use, procuring, or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs; and (d) work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety, or morals of children. (1) Similar to ILO C. 182, the TDA states that the work described in subparagraph (d) should be “determined by the laws, regulations, or competent authority of the country involved.”

the Chaco region of Paraguay, 2019.

Strong Enforcement

A Critical Tool for Combating Child Labor

"I want to help my people."

—Erundina Machune, Regional Director, Paraguayan Labor Inspectorate

When Erundina Machune arrived for her first day at the brand new regional office of the labor ministry in the remote Chaco region of Paraguay, she had no idea what she was in for. “I was scared,” she said. She had just been named the new regional director—in fact, the first regional director—overseeing labor law compliance in a vast region covering more than 60 percent of Paraguay’s territory. In the Chaco, forced labor was a well-known problem, particularly in the export-intensive cattle industry, but with only a 1-week training to get her up to speed and few resources at her disposal, she faced a daunting challenge.

Erundina knew about the forced labor situation all too well. She was indigenous to the Chaco region and had worked since age 4 helping her father, mother, brothers, and sisters tend cattle on a ranch. For all of their work, they received a single, meager salary for the entire family, and after deductions for things like food and shelter, it was not much. Erundina knew that she wanted more from her life than milking cows for next to nothing. So, at age 16, she went back to school. This led her down a new path that eventually landed her this opportunity as regional director. But what to do with it? How could she educate her people and help them assert their rights? She barely had a budget and did not even have a vehicle.

Then one day, an expert on forced labor from the U.S. Department of Labor-funded project, Paraguay Okakuaa, arrived. She accompanied Erundina as they conducted outreach in the widely dispersed communities throughout the region. The project also set up a radio-based communications campaign that was broadcast in nine languages to get the word out about labor rights and where workers could go to file complaints.

“From that point on, everything changed,” Erundina said. She went from running an office with no visitors to one that fielded dozens of complaints about issues such as unpaid wages—and received more than 100 workers who visited to lodge a complaint or learn about their labor rights in the space of a year. Of the 65 cases of labor rights violations reported, 2 have gone to court, and Erundina has worked with employers and workers to resolve all of the other ones. Support for the office has grown, with the local government even chipping in to provide her with a vehicle for her work.

Although the Okakuaa project is ending soon, Erundina remains determined.

Erundina’s story typifies the kind of transformation that needs to occur in so many pockets of the world to end abusive labor practices, including child labor and forced labor. Without the capacity for strong labor law enforcement, these abhorrent practices will continue to flourish in communities the world over. Moreover, these labor abuses have a ripple effect, contributing to an unfair playing field for workers in the United States and around the world whose employers play by the rules.

Once again, this year, the majority (60 percent) of the more-than-1,900 country-specific recommendations in the Department’s 2018 Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor focus on the need to strengthen and improve enforcement of labor laws. Here is a look at why these issues are so important—and what governments and other stakeholders can do to move forward in this critical area.

Good Laws: A Necessary Precondition

For enforcement to be adequate, a country first needs laws on the books that align with international standards. A solid legal framework demonstrates a government’s commitment to protecting its citizens, lays out the rights and the respective responsibilities of the different actors, prescribes punishments for violators, and provides legal redress for victims. To sum up, good laws provide specific, much-needed protections and lay the groundwork for redress and accountability.

While most countries have ratified the relevant international conventions—including ILO C. 182, prohibiting child labor in its worst forms—much work needs to be done before we can feel confident that children in every country enjoy full labor protections under the law.

An encouraging sign has been the continued momentum of more countries developing or expanding hazardous work prohibitions in line with international standards (see Figure 1). Over the past 2 years, for example, 19 countries evaluated in ILAB’s reporting developed or expanded their hazardous work lists. At the end of 2018, more than 75 percent of the countries assessed had hazardous work lists that included the sectors of work in which there is evidence of child labor under dangerous and unhealthy conditions.

What is Hazardous Child Labor?

ILO Recommendation 190¹ calls on governments to consider the following when determining work that is prohibited for children.

Work which exposes children to physical, psychological, or sexual abuse

Work underground, under water, at dangerous heights, or in confined spaces

Work with dangerous machinery, equipment and tools, or which involves the manual handling or transport of heavy loads

Work in an unhealthy environment which may, for example, expose children to hazardous substances, agents or processes, or to temperatures, noise levels, or vibrations damaging to their health

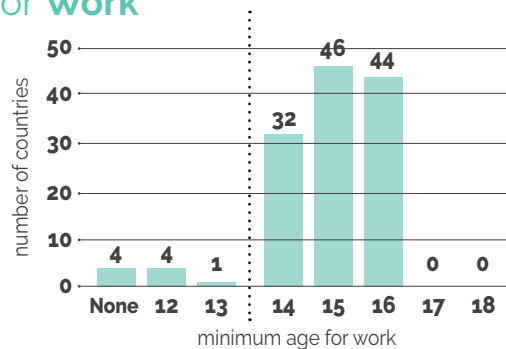

Work under particularly difficult conditions such as work for long hours or during the night or work where the child is unreasonably confined to the premises of the employer

Less encouraging is the fact that more than one-third of these countries still have not established a minimum age for work in line with international standards (see Figure 2). Almost the same percentage do not adequately prohibit the use of children for illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.

That is why ILAB’s latest reporting includes more than 470 country-specific suggested actions that governments can take to address gaps in their existing legal framework (see Figure 3). It also is why ILAB has devoted resources in its programming to helping countries strengthen their legal protections. The ILAB-funded CLEAR projects, for example, have worked in 18 countries to increase the capacity of governments to reduce child labor, including by strengthening legal frameworks. For example, in Liberia, a hazardous work list and light work list were recently validated in accordance with international labor standards. In Suriname, CLEAR led work on revising the National Action Plan on Child Labor that was announced by the Minister of Labor as one of the main guiding documents that will help support the prevention and elimination of child labor in that country.

Additional work is also needed to improve laws and policies related to workplace inspections. While some steps are incremental, continued progress in this area will rely on individual country governments stepping up and enacting legislation that closes the gap between the international standards they have committed to upholding and their national laws designed to protect children from labor exploitation.

*Capacity-Building:
Fuel For On-The-Ground Change*

While improved legislation is important, laws mean little if not enforced. For countries that have solid laws on the books, adequate monitoring and enforcement of these laws is the next hurdle. Labor inspectorates and criminal law enforcement agencies need the resources, capacity, and authority to do their jobs. Moreover, additional progress is needed to ensure that governments hold those who perpetrate child labor abuses accountable.

ILAB’s research reveals that workplace inspection systems remain generally weak around the world because of capacity and resource constraints, such as inadequate budgets, shortages in personnel, lack of vehicles and fuel, and insufficient training.

For example, an astounding 72 percent of countries assessed in the Department’s 2018 Findings do not have adequately staffed labor inspectorates in accordance with ILO technical advice. Law enforcement efforts also are hindered by corruption and inefficient legal mandates, data collection, and coordination (see Figure 4).

Only half of all labor inspectorates are authorized to assess penalties for violations. This means that most inspectorates are prevented from holding violators accountable. Even in countries in which workplace inspection systems are in place and are functioning well, such as Costa Rica, Panama, Paraguay, and Peru, inspections of workplaces in the informal economy, in which most child labor tends to be found, are rare.

In the absence of resources and recourse available to labor inspectors, the burden in these countries mainly falls on businesses to ensure that their supply chains are clean.

Unscrupulous employers who exploit workers, or governments that fail to act to end abusive labor practices, unfairly undermine the competitiveness of law-abiding businesses and the goods and services they produce for global markets.

That is why ILAB is using nearly 1,200 suggested actions regarding laws and enforcement as a basis to work with foreign governments and their partners to strengthen labor law enforcement and accelerate efforts to end child labor and human trafficking.

In Colombia, for example, the Department has been engaging with the government on labor law enforcement for several years, including by installing a labor attaché at the U.S. Embassy in Bogotá. In 2018, the Ministry of Labor significantly increased its resources dedicated to labor law enforcement, specifically to generate strategies to improve its labor inspectorate and create an electronic case management system. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs also coordinated numerous multilateral efforts for cooperation and technical assistance with other countries to share best practices in the areas of prevention, investigation, and assistance to victims of trafficking.

In Ghana, an ILAB-funded project to combat the trafficking of children by fishermen has had a profound and lasting impact in one community along Lake Volta. Through awareness raising and social mobilization efforts early on in the project, which closed 10 years ago, the community took ownership of making their village a child labor-free zone, which it continues to be to this day. The village's child protection committee monitors activities on the lake through a surveillance system of security cameras along the village's coastline. For repeat offender and urgent cases, the Ghanaian Navy steps in to rescue the trafficked children and arrest the slave master. In addition, the Navy routinely conducts inspections of boats and canoes on the lake to ensure the enforcement of Ghana's child labor and human trafficking laws.

In the cotton industry, for several years, an ILAB-funded project in Uzbekistan has been building the capacity of the labor inspectorate to enforce labor laws regarding forced and child labor. The project provided training in national child labor monitoring; conducted roundtables and training workshops with labor inspectors to improve forced labor identification and reporting; and trained government agencies, social partners, and civil society organizations on the need to combat forced labor. All of this work contributed to a breakthrough in 2018. The Government of Uzbekistan prosecuted and sanctioned more officials in 2018 for facilitating forced labor than ever before. Evidence suggests that child labor in the cotton harvest was nearly non-existent, and there were no reported cases of forced child labor (although forced labor of adults continues to be a concern).

In Burma, an ILAB-funded project implemented by the ILO has been developing the first generation of experts on child labor, both in the government and in civil society. With project support, the newly established Myanmar National Committee on Child Labor Eradication, chaired by the Vice President, approved the country's first national plan of action to eliminate child labor and approved a draft hazardous work list. The project has supported training on child labor fundamentals to more than 220 local government officials in every state and region in the country as well as the training of nearly 40 percent of the inspectorate on child labor concepts.

Such progress on enforcement is essential—and efforts must be accelerated across the globe—if we are to see sustainable reductions in the number of child laborers worldwide.

The Importance of Partnerships

It is crucial for all parties—governments, private sector, and civil society—to come to the table to openly discuss past and planned efforts, challenges, and successes, and to find better ways to collaborate and increase their impact. That is why, in addition to governments, ILAB continues to partner with businesses and civil society organizations in efforts to combat child labor.

In Turkey, for example, ILAB recently completed a project, implemented by the Fair Labor Association (FLA) in partnership with Nestlé and two of its Tier 1 suppliers, which established and piloted a sustainable program to prevent child labor and forced labor in the hazelnut supply chain. The pilot program utilized the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Guidelines for Eliminating Child and Forced Labor in Agricultural Supply Chains, which provide a systematic approach to identifying, addressing, and preventing child labor and forced labor in the production, processing, and distribution of agricultural commodities.

One important accomplishment was the project's work to assist Nestlé in mapping their hazelnut supply chain. Today, Nestlé has 100 percent traceability over their hazelnut supply chain in Turkey, meaning that it knows exactly where every nut it buys from its Tier 1 suppliers comes from. As part of this project, the FLA produced a valuable report on lessons learned that can help other companies adopt the best practices identified through the pilot project, serving as an example for companies working in many other sectors around the world.

ILAB also has developed a smartphone app, Comply Chain, to assist businesses around the world in identifying risks and remediating abuses in their supply chains. This app was developed to provide businesses with information about child labor, forced labor, and systems that can be put in place to combat these problems. Numerous private sector stakeholders have indicated how helpful this app has been to them and they suggested the creation of foreign language editions to support their efforts to work with their suppliers around the world. In 2018, ILAB released the app in French and Spanish, and in 2019, ILAB introduced a redesign and enhancements to the app to make it more user-friendly.

Moving the Ball Forward on Enforcement

There is broad international agreement that trade between nations should be fair, and profits should not come off the backs of children or slaves. The onus is now on the global community to respond by increasing our commitment to and focus on combating child labor as an urgent priority.

Governments must enact stronger legislation and strengthen enforcement—in addition to improving coordination, implementing better policies, broadening social protections for children and families, and providing thorough oversight to ensure the integrity of private sector partners and other contracted entities. Companies should develop robust social compliance systems to ensure that their supply chain is free of child labor. Ordinary citizens can empower themselves with knowledge about this problem—including by downloading the Department’s Sweat & Toil app that puts more than 1,000 pages of research in their hands—and spread the word among friends and family as well as tell the companies from which they buy, and in which they invest, that this is an issue about which they care.

ILAB continues to do its part by engaging with willing partners to strengthen legal frameworks and improve labor law enforcement efforts.

In 2018, the Department announced more than $50 million in grants to strengthen labor law enforcement and combat child labor and modern slavery among trade partners.

For example, in December, the Department awarded $7.5 million to Winrock International to help governments strengthen their laws, improve law enforcement, and increase coordination among law enforcement and social protection organizations to address child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking. The project will initially work in Thailand and Paraguay, with at least two other countries to be added later.

The Department also awarded $6 million to Partners of the Americas to improve conditions of work and to reduce child labor and forced labor in palm oil supply chains. This project will help strengthen the capacity of businesses in the Colombian and Ecuadorian palm oil sectors to implement robust social compliance systems. It also will support an increased understanding across the global palm oil industry of effective practices to reduce labor abuses.

Good laws and strong enforcement may not be the only elements needed to address child labor and forced labor globally; however, they are essential to doing so. By focusing on the adoption of strong legislative frameworks and better enforcement of national laws, governments can form a strong foundation of protections that vulnerable children and families need, at a minimum, to escape child labor or forced labor. Governments, companies, and even individuals like Erundina Machune can all be part of the solution. The world owes it to the 152 million children still engaged in child labor and the 25 million people still trapped in forced labor to redouble efforts in these areas – in every corner of the globe (see Figure 5).

Espacios para Crecer:

Education to End Child Labor

How ILAB made an award-winning, world-class education model possible

Partners of the Americas/U.S. Department of Labor
A facilitator leads a group of children at an Espacios
center in Paraguay, 2018.

“I would like to be a great professor. I would like to go back to school.”

— Luis, Espacios para Crecer Participant

Children excitedly shared their dreams for the future during a lively discussion in Daniel Mueses’ afterschool Espacios para Crecer, or “Spaces to Grow,” group in Cotama, Ecuador. Cotama is an indigenous community in the Andes with high levels of poverty and child labor. A young boy named Luis, who has autism and had dropped out of school in the fourth grade, stood up and said, “I would like to be a great professor. I would like to go back to school.”

Luis is one of the many vulnerable children whose lives have been changed by the internationally recognized program Espacios para Crecer developed and implemented by ILAB projects across Latin America.

The program has reached children working in garbage dumps in the Dominican Republic, those displaced by violence in Colombia, and indigenous children in Ecuador, Panama, and Paraguay. Its materials are available in multiple indigenous languages. UNESCO and the Inter-American Development Bank have recognized the Espacios para Crecer model as a Best Practice for Youth in Latin America for its impact, efficiency, and relevance.

The Espacios program hinges on the idea that getting children interested in learning and developing their self-confidence keeps them in school. This is particularly important because school absenteeism is often associated with a high risk of child labor.

According to Entrena, the organization that developed the Espacios methodology and curriculum, 95 percent of Espacios participants remain in school the next school year following completion of the program.

The success of the Espacios model has been due, in no small part, to ILAB’s support. Saschia Seibel, project director at Entrena, said that ILAB’s ability to recognize best practices and encourage information sharing among its grantees has allowed them to spread.

“Without ILAB, Espacios never would have happened,” said Seibel, who was Entrena’s education specialist when the Espacios were first developed. Seibel recalled how ILAB has encouraged her over the years to share the model with other grantees at conferences and in informal telephone conversations. “When you have a donor that truly believes in you, it makes so many things possible.”

Promising Beginnings

In 2004, the first Espacios para Crecer groups were launched as summer pilots in 44 communities across the Dominican Republic. Designed for children ages 6 to 13 who had dropped out of school or were struggling to stay in school, the groups were an opportunity to catch up on school in a positive and fun environment. Group facilitators began delivering engaging lessons that stressed the immediate, practical application of academic concepts.

“Without ILAB, Espacios never would have happened. When you have a donor that truly believes in you, it makes so many things possible.”

— Saschia Seibel, Project Director at Entrena

The program was found to have been a resounding success. More than 5,000 children had been withdrawn or prevented from child labor (specifically informal urban work, commercial sexual exploitation, and hazardous commercial agriculture) and enrolled in some form of schooling. Teachers reported that reading and writing among students had improved greatly and that they were now passing their classes and completing grades.

After showing such promise in the Dominican Republic, the Espacios groups took on a central role in an ILAB project in Colombia, where more than 10,000 children and youth were withdrawn from exploitative child labor. Both a final evaluation and an impact evaluation of the project found improved school enrollment and academic performance due to the Espacios model.

“The teachers at the schools would see the changes in the children who had been participating and they would say, ‘What have you done to these children? They are participating and asking questions now,’” said Piedad Rivero Cruz, who was Partners of the Americas’ education specialist for the project.

Adults also became more aware of the importance of education and more connected to the problems children faced. Project surveys found that 75 percent of parents’ attitudes toward child labor changed as a result of the project.

Keys to Success

Part of the key to Espacios’ success has been that curriculum developers and project implementers have emphasized the involvement of the communities as a whole. Group facilitators are community volunteers who receive training and support from project staff. There are repeated engagements with parents and community leaders. In many cases, teachers coordinate with facilitators in following up on children’s academic progress. Such shared responsibilities are a big part of the Espacios’ success and have become a central tenet of the program.

Another key to the groups’ success is their minimal overhead—they need only an enthusiastic facilitator and a place for children to gather.

Moreover, the changes made to the Espacios as they moved from country to country are a loud testament to the program’s greatest strength—its adaptability. Even the very first groups in the Dominican Republic adapted the content for variations in different regions, such as including different cultural traditions. In Colombia, many of the groups had to adjust the academic content to fit varying educational levels. Partners again adjusted it for beneficiaries in Ecuador,

Panama, and Paraguay by using translated materials with updated cultural references.

A Bright Future

The spread of the Espacios model shows no sign of slowing. All told, more than 1,000 Espacios have cropped up, serving more than 37,000 children in six countries throughout the region. The Dominican government has recently scaled up the concept of keeping children in a safe, educational environment for a full day as opposed to a half day. As of December 2018, the program covered roughly two-thirds of the nation's schoolchildren and was aiming to provide coverage nationwide by the end of 2020.

Meanwhile, ILAB is currently funding a project in Paraguay to support and strengthen systems for combating child labor. The educational initiative has already reached 1,022 children. An independent evaluation showed that parents and teachers felt that participating in the Espacios “motivates children to learn more and that their performance in formal schooling tends to improve.” More than that, the children have fun—valuing the opportunity to play, paint, sing, and receive additional support to strengthen their formal education. And the national government has signed an agreement to adapt the curriculum to an existing afterschool program so that the good work being done will continue beyond the life of the project.

As the Espacios groups spring up in more locations throughout Latin America, they do so with the wisdom gained from 15 years of experience. It is only a matter of time before another vulnerable child announces to her community that she, too, sees a bright future for herself in continuing her education.

ILAB's Projects

Strengthening Labor Enforcement

PROTECTE, Tunisia - Trained labor inspectors, raised awareness of child labor laws, and established a specialized unit to address child labor at the Ministry of Social Affairs.

Paraguay Okakuaa, Paraguay - Trained labor inspectors in agricultural fields with support from an Enforcement Coordinator from USDOL's Wage and Hour Division.

CLEAR, *Serbia - Provided labor inspectors, social workers, and police officers with training on child labor identification and prevention.

ENHANCE, Vietnam - Built the capacity of key enforcement actors, including labor inspectors, to identify and address child labor violations through targeted training workshops, as well as by ensuring that child labor is integrated into data collection systems.

SAVABE, Madagascar - Trained 37 labor and criminal law enforcement agents on national child labor laws, and helped to develop an action plan to reduce child labor in the informal economy.

The Year in Review

Striving to Match Reality to Aspirations

In 2019, Tonga began the process of ratifying ILO C. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, a measure that would bring the world to universal ratification of this important and fundamental labor standard. But this is far from the end goal. A total of 152 million children still toil in child labor, roughly half of them in hazardous conditions. The problem is not that society fails to value its children, but that there is a disconnect between the harsh reality of child labor and awareness of its impact on the lives of children; between recognition that this practice is wrong and action that effectively addresses it.

Beyond adopting standards and passing legislation, governments need to take meaningful action, including stronger enforcement, to effectively confront the problem of child labor worldwide. The Department's Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor is a tool to raise awareness about child labor and a roadmap to help countries take the necessary steps to confront the realities that contribute to the persistence of this global problem. The 2018 report offers more than 1,900 suggested actions that governments in 131 countries and territories can take to combat child labor. This year's report also highlights the meaningful efforts that many governments have made to prevent and eliminate the worst forms of child labor, including through enacting and enforcing laws, coordinating more effectively among stakeholders, establishing policy frameworks, promoting quality education for children, and implementing social protection programs and poverty alleviation strategies that address the root causes of child labor.

Last year, ILAB instituted minimum requirements that countries must meet in order to receive ILAB's highest assessment of Significant Advancement. This year's report goes even further, adding three new criteria for assessing each country's efforts. Figure 6 outlines the 12 criteria being used in this year's report and highlights the three new criteria. Together, these 12 criteria serve as a baseline that countries must meet in order to receive ILAB's highest assessment level.

This year, 12 countries—Argentina, Colombia, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, India, Paraguay, Rwanda, Serbia, and Tunisia—received the highest assessment of Significant Advancement (see Figure 7 for a global breakdown of assessments for this year). These countries made meaningful efforts during the reporting period in all relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking suggested actions recommended in 2017. Furthermore, each of these countries met the baseline, outlined above, of laws and regulations, enforcement mechanisms, and programs to address and prevent the worst forms of child labor. In fact, 17 more countries and territories would have received an assessment of Significant Advancement had they met this baseline level of protections. These include Albania, Belize, Brazil, Chile, Honduras, Madagascar, Montenegro, Morocco, Niger, Nigeria, Pakistan, Panama, Philippines, Suriname, Thailand, Uzbekistan, and Western Sahara.

Despite these stricter criteria, it is worth noting that El Salvador achieved an assessment of Significant Advancement this year for the first time in the history of the report. The government extended its National Action Plan for the Protection of Children and Adolescents into 2019 and modified its process for granting work permits to adolescents, both with the goal of aligning laws and policies with international standards and national legislation. El Salvador also published its Annual Household Survey with data on child labor, as well as a guide highlighting efforts to combat child labor in the sugarcane industry. In addition, the government launched the local government component of its Sustainable Families Strategy in 16 municipalities and implemented an inter-agency protocol to improve coordination of services for human trafficking victims.

This year, we also saw the achievement of another milestone by Côte d'Ivoire, as the country extended its term—to six in a row—at the level of Significant Advancement.

Sixty-seven countries received a Moderate Advancement assessment in 2018. A country is said to have moderately advanced efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in 2018 if it made meaningful efforts during the reporting period in some relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs. Meanwhile, 29 countries received an assessment of Minimal Advancement for making efforts in only a few relevant areas.

Other governments made positive efforts to address their country's child labor situation during the year but simultaneously continued or established a detrimental law, policy, or practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. In those cases, the highest assessment level the countries could receive was a Minimal Advancement. Thirteen countries—Armenia, Azerbaijan, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Gabon, Iraq, Mauritania, Moldova, Mongolia, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Tanzania, Tonga, and Yemen—implemented or maintained a law, policy, or practice related to education access, minimum age for work, labor inspection, or the recruitment and use of child soldiers that undermined other advancements made toward eliminating the worst forms of child labor.

In addition, countries could not receive an assessment level beyond No Advancement if they had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents. Unfortunately, four countries—Afghanistan, Burma, Eritrea, and South Sudan—were found to be complicit in the use of forced child labor during the reporting period, whether it be for commercial sexual exploitation, public works projects, compulsory recruitment, or participation in armed conflict. Urgent action is needed to resolve these abhorrent situations that shatter the lives of affected children.

Altogether, 2018 saw the continuation or emergence of certain troubling trends regarding the labor exploitation of children. In Africa, children in some countries, including Mali and South Sudan, faced displacement due to conflicts, especially between sheep or cattle farmers and agriculturalists, which increased their vulnerability to child labor. Cambodia has seen a rise in children exploited in conditions of begging in the tourist areas of that country. And, sadly, in South America, some countries have seen a rise in the use of social media platforms as tools to entrap children into commercial sexual exploitation, leading some countries to promulgate new laws to ensure that children are protected on the internet.

Meaningful Efforts

Numerous countries made meaningful efforts with respect to the legal framework. In Colombia, the government drafted two new bills. One bill sought to strengthen penalties in the Penal Code for crimes of commercial sexual exploitation. Responding to the rising use of social media platforms to entrap children, the second bill established more comprehensive public policies to protect children against cybercrimes involving commercial sexual exploitation. In Central America, Costa Rica amended its Criminal Code to align with international standards on trafficking in persons, nearby Suriname ratified ILO C. 138 on the Minimum Age, and the Cook Islands ratified ILO C. 182 helping drive the world towards universal ratification. Peru's Congress also enacted a law merging the regional labor inspectors and remaining Ministry of Labor inspectors with the Superintendency. This decision strengthened the impact of the labor inspectorate and increased interagency cooperation on child labor eradication efforts through the opening of two new inspection offices and the addition of $14 million to the 2018 labor enforcement budget. In Bolivia, after declaring provisions in the 2014 Child and Adolescent Code unconstitutional in 2017, President Evo Morales signed legislation in December 2018 modifying Bolivian law to change the minimum age of legally permitted work from 10 to 14.

In the Near East, the Sultan of Oman promulgated a new Penal Code for the country that enhanced some penalties related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children. In the southern part of Africa, in Namibia, the government passed the Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act to prevent, suppress, and punish trafficking in persons, especially of women and children. And the King of Eswatini signed the Sexual Offenses and Domestic Violence Act, which provides new legal protections for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.

Of course, it is not enough to simply have good laws; strong enforcement is also key. The Democratic Republic of the Congo is known as a pivotal link in the sourcing chain of a number of key mined minerals and ores that are critical to the operations of many companies. In 2018, in an effort to protect against risks in the sourcing chain, the government's Ministry of Mines launched a traceability and monitoring system for artisanal mines. Farther up the continent on the western coast, Senegal created a new police division with a focus on migrant smuggling and transnational crimes, taking proactive steps to put in place the enforcement structure to address child labor. Indonesia increased its labor inspectorate's budget from $2.1 million to $10.2 million. Thailand hired an additional 394 labor law enforcement personnel, moving the country closer to a more robust enforcement environment.

Globally, some countries undertook efforts to enhance and improve the function of coordination mechanisms to address child labor. In Europe and Eurasia, North Macedonia's National Coordination Body for the Protection of Children from Abuse and Neglect was reconstituted. In nearby Serbia, the Council for Children's Rights published three draft documents on child protection, including a Strategy for the Prevention and Protection of Children Against Violence for the period of 2018 to 2020.

The year 2018 also saw the enactment and continuation of several national plans of action to protect children from child labor and trafficking. Ghana launched the National Plan of Action Phase II on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor, along with a strategy to combat child labor in the fishing sector. Off the coast of West Africa, the island nation of Cabo Verde approved and published a National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons. Similarly, Mali finalized the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking of Persons and allocated a budget of $10 million over 5 years for its implementation. In Egypt, the government formally adopted the National Plan of Action Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Supporting Family, and the National Strategy on Childhood and Motherhood, which also has a section on child labor. Elsewhere in the world, this year also saw Kazakhstan formalize a new national action plan to counter trafficking in persons. Each of these plans helps provide a key tool to prevent and eliminate child labor.

There were numerous examples of countries adopting constructive programs designed to combat child labor. In the Caribbean, the Dominican Republic continued to fund and participate in multiple programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including two new programs that will strengthen the capacity of the Ministry of Labor to enforce laws and regulations related to child and forced labor, particularly in the agricultural sector. In the Sahel region of West Africa, Burkina Faso worked in partnership with a local NGO to launch a campaign to remove vulnerable children from the streets of the capital, placing them in government-run shelters with a plan to provide vocational training and re-integration with families. During the course of the reporting period, the government also removed more than 2,000 children from artisanal mining sites and placed them in the care of social services. Guinea-Bissau implemented the Code of Conduct Against Sexual Exploitation in Tourism by conducting various awareness campaigns on the commercial sexual exploitation of children to hotel and night club owners throughout Bissau and the Bijagós archipelago.

Meanwhile, many countries are working diligently to expand the knowledge base on child labor, which is a vital first step in addressing it. Nepal launched the Nepal Labor Force Survey, which promises to provide valuable information on child labor, including the number of children engaged in hazardous work. In Argentina, the new Secretariat of Labor worked with Argentina's National Institute of Statistics and Census to publish the country's first national child labor survey, with representation from every region in the country. In Pakistan, four provincial governments began conducting child labor surveys that together will constitute a nationwide child labor survey.

As for social programming, Bangladesh launched the 3-year, Phase IV portion of its $35 million government-funded project to eliminate hazardous child labor, seeking to identify 100,000 child laborers, integrate them into schools, and provide livelihood support for their parents. In Turkey, the Integrated Model for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Seasonal Agriculture in Hazelnut Harvesting was extended to 2020. The program has already prevented more than a thousand children from working in hazelnut harvesting, a leading industry in Turkey, which produces the largest quantity of hazelnuts in the world each year. Turkey signed a Joint Declaration on the Elimination of Child Labor, declaring 2018 “The Year of Elimination of Child Labor.”

Major Gaps

Despite these efforts, there are significant gaps in efforts to address and prevent the worst forms of child labor. Somalia, for example, continues to implement a practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. The Somali National Army recruited and used children in armed conflict in violation of its national law during the reporting period. South Sudan, through its People’s Defense Force, recruited children, sometimes forcibly, to fight opposition groups. The use of children in armed conflict continues to afflict others across the continent—including the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Nigeria. The recruitment of children in armed conflict is not a problem unique to Sub-Saharan Africa. In Iraq, children who were forcibly recruited into ISIS were subject to detention and prosecution by Iraqi authorities without legal representation.

Mali, where a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding hampered labor inspectors’ ability to conduct child labor inspections, underlines the resource constraints facing many countries that limit their ability to adequately enforce their laws. In the Americas, countries such as Costa Rica, Ecuador, Guatemala, Jamaica, and Peru all noted issues with insufficient resources for labor and criminal law enforcement related to the worst forms of child labor. In Eastern Europe, laws or practices limit unannounced inspections in Armenia and Moldova, while in Georgia, the labor inspectorate is allowed to conduct unannounced inspections only in harmful, hazardous, and heavy industries, requiring a court order to inspect all other businesses in the country. More drastically, the Government of Azerbaijan extended a moratorium on all labor inspections through 2021, which will leave potential violations of child labor laws undetected in workplaces. In many countries, such as Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Bolivia, Chad, Ethiopia, Gabon, Madagascar, Mauritania, Sri Lanka, Tanzania, and Togo, among others, labor inspectorates are not even authorized to assess penalties.

Financial and resource limitations hindered government coordination efforts to address child labor. In a large number of Sub-Saharan African countries, such as Benin, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Côte d’Ivoire, the Republic of the Congo, Eritrea, Ghana, and Malawi, key coordinating committees did not meet or were otherwise unable to carry out their intended mandates, often due to issues of funding. Elsewhere, in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Anti-Trafficking Task Force, responsible for coordinating child trafficking investigations across government agencies, lacked funding and coordination for a second consecutive year, resulting in a lack of participation of key stakeholders.

Globally, a number of countries do not have in place, or have not implemented, governmental policies that address the worst forms of child labor. Lack of funding and resources limited or delayed implementation of key child labor elimination and education policies in Angola and Papua New Guinea. Highlighting these challenges, the Government of Argentina adopted a new action plan—the Biennial National Plan against Human Trafficking and Exploitation and for Protection and Assistance of Victims—to fortify interagency cooperation around human trafficking, but did not allocate a special budget to ensure the policy’s implementation. The governments of Burundi, Jamaica, and Malawi also failed to renew key policies addressing the worst forms of child labor that expired.

Despite enduring progress to address the social conditions that contribute to child labor, challenges continue. Many countries ranging from Guatemala to India to Lebanon lack programs that address all forms of exploitative labor in which children work. Some countries continue to place restrictions that delay advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. In Sierra Leone, for example, girls face restrictions on attending school, with school administrators continuing to prohibit girls who were pregnant from attending regular public schools or taking secondary and postsecondary school entrance exams during the reporting period, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Similarly, the Mainland Tanzania government continues to support the routine expulsion of pregnant girls from school. The even more basic challenges of school fees, textbook and uniform costs, transportation, and infrastructure pose significant barriers to educational access in various countries, including Bangladesh, Belize, Gabon, Guatemala, Indonesia, South Africa, and Tunisia, among others.

Collectively, these examples paint a picture of a world in which child labor—although universally condemned in its worst forms—continues to persist in practice. Governments, as well as other stakeholders, have their work cut out for them in addressing this abusive form of labor.

As we celebrate the universal ratification of ILO C. 182 in the 100th year of the ILO (see Figure 8), it is important to remind ourselves about the persistent disconnect between society’s values and the reality of our world. As ILO’s Director General Guy Ryder stated this year in support of World Day Against Child Labor: “How we treat our children is a reflection of our societies and values.” It is vital that we view these abuses as the human rights issues that they are, ensuring that we treat our children in a way that lives up to our ideals and shared commitments.

ILO Celebrates 100 Years

This year, the Department joins the ILO in celebrating its 100th anniversary. Since 1919, the ILO has helped protect the rights of working people and has played a leading role in the fight to eliminate child labor and forced labor and to end human trafficking. It also has provided technical assistance programs to numerous governments that have helped them improve their labor laws and strengthen enforcement.

With participation by both employers and workers, the ILO is the only international organization that includes the private sector in all facets of its operation. The ILO’s efforts to improve labor market policies, promote employment, and protect workers’ rights help level the playing field for both workers and employers. America’s trade agreements and preference programs require our trading partners to protect internationally recognized worker rights. ILO standards provide the legal framework that defines these rights that benefit workers here and abroad.

The U.S. Experience

“The United States remains steadfast in its commitment to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, and we are leading those efforts at home and abroad.”

— Acting Secretary of Labor Patrick Pizzella

Under the Trump Administration, ILAB has remained steadfast in its mission to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking. In addition to previous initiatives, such as ratification of ILO C. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor in 1999, new steps have been taken within the past year to ensure that illegal, dangerous, and damaging labor practices around the world are addressed.

In September 2018, for example, ILAB spearheaded the development of a strategy to eliminate child labor, forced labor, human trafficking, and modern slavery within the G20, which the United States signed with all of the G20 countries at the Leader’s Summit in Buenos Aires. (5) ILAB also allocated $56.8 million in Fiscal Year (FY) 2018 technical assistance funds to help governments combat child labor and forced labor, particularly in high-risk sectors. (6) ILAB also released an updated version of the Comply Chain app with Spanish and French translations, which allows more companies in the United States and abroad to access this information. These accomplishments demonstrate ILAB’s continual dedication to the prevention of child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking.

The Department’s domestic enforcement agencies have also continued to make important strides. The Wage and Hour Division (WHD) is responsible for implementing and enforcing regulations pertaining to the legal work age, permissible hours of work, earned wages, and hazardous occupations prohibited for minor employees. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) provides regulation and enforcement on safe work environments for all employees, regardless of age. The Office of Disability Employment Policy (ODEP) works to improve the transition outcomes of youth and young adults with disabilities toward successful employment and adulthood, and the Department’s YouthRules! initiative seeks to promote positive and safe work experiences for young workers. The Employment and Training Administration (ETA) offers programs and services to help youth enter the workforce in a way that allows them to be productive. In addition, the Bureau of Labor Statistics gathers statistics on a variety of subjects, including child labor.

In recent years, these agencies have secured record levels of reclaimed wages for workers, promoted worker safety, and increased the efficiency of the Department's enforcement efforts.

The Federal Minimum Ages for Work

For more than 80 years, the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) has established Federal regulations that apply to child workers in various occupations. Child labor provisions under the FLSA are designed to protect children's involvement in educational opportunities and prohibit children's employment in jobs that are detrimental to their health and safety. The FLSA includes restrictions on maximum working hours and types of permissible occupational fields for children under the age of 16.

The FLSA and its implementing regulations have established the following standards:

- A minimum age of 14 for most employment in non-hazardous, non-agricultural industries, and limits on the times of day, number of hours, and tasks that can be performed by 14- and 15-year-olds.

- A minimum age of 18 for employment in hazardous occupations as deemed by the Department's issuance of 17 non-agricultural Hazardous Occupation Orders.
- Exceptions for agricultural and non-agricultural employment. For example, the FLSA does not restrict the work that 16- and 17- year olds may perform in agricultural employment, and it permits youth under the age of 14 to work in non-hazardous agricultural employment outside school hours with parental approval.

All states have child labor standards and mandatory school attendance laws. When state and Federal child labor standards are different, the rule that provides the most protection is the one that must be followed.

There were 2,237,000 youth ages 16 to 17 employed in the United States in 2017, and 1,838,000 employed in 2018. (6) Despite the restrictions and limitations placed on their work, in 2017, the most recent year for which data are available, there were 7 fatal occupational injuries among youth ages 16 to 17, and 15 fatal occupational injuries among youth below age 16 in the United States. Wage and Hour Division

WHD looks for employer compliance with the FLSA's child labor provisions in every investigation it conducts. In FY 2018, WHD concluded more than 850 investigations in which child labor violations were disclosed; 300 of these investigations found violations of the agency's Hazardous Occupations Orders. WHD found more than 2,000 young workers employed in violation of the FLSA's child labor requirements, with nearly 600 of them employed in violation of the Hazardous Occupations Orders (see Figure 9).

For example, following an investigation by WHD, Tuff Automation Inc. paid a civil money penalty of $28,474 after a 17-year-old employee suffered an amputation of his right index finger while operating an unguarded band saw in Grand Rapids, Michigan. WHD investigators found that the company violated the child labor provisions of the FLSA by employing a worker under the age of 18 to operate prohibited hazardous equipment. (8) In another case, WHD found that eight retailers operating at The Mills at Jersey Gardens in Elizabeth, New Jersey, allowed underage employees to operate and unload potentially dangerous paper baling and cardboard compacting machines, in violation of the FLSA's child labor requirements. WHD assessed a total of $40,667 in penalties to the retailers. (9)

"Employment standards for minors ensure that they gain a positive work experience that does not interfere with their education, health, and well-being. Child labor violations can be avoided when employers understand the rules."

—Wage and Hour Division District Director Kevin Hunt,
Salt Lake City, Utah

"The safety of young workers remains a priority for the Wage and Hour Division. Employers have a responsibility to fully understand and comply with the child labor provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act to ensure minors work in a safe environment."

— Wage and Hour Division District Director Daniel White,
Jacksonville, Florida

Employment and Training Administration

ETA oversees a number of workforce development programs. These programs include the Registered Apprenticeship Program, YouthBuild, Job Corps, and Reentry Employment Opportunities. Consistent with Executive Order 13801, Expanding Apprenticeships in America, the Department is expanding apprenticeship opportunities and creating the Industry-Recognized Apprenticeship Program system, which will increase apprenticeship opportunities for all Americans, especially in sectors where apprenticeships have been underutilized. In addition, the Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act provides funds to promote opportunities for youth. ETA's programs help youth who face barriers to employment, including out-of-school youth and those involved with the justice system, with work-readiness skills and opportunities to gain industry-recognized credentials. YouthBuild and Job Corps also help low-income, unemployed young Americans continue their education and gain the skills they need for employment.

About the Iqbal Masih Award

The United States Congress established the Iqbal Masih Award for the Elimination of Child Labor in 2008 to recognize exceptional efforts by an individual, company, organization, or national government to end the worst forms of child labor.

The award reflects the spirit of Iqbal Masih, a Pakistani child sold into bonded labor as a carpet weaver at age 4. He escaped his servitude at age 10 and became an outspoken advocate of children's rights, drawing international attention to his fight against child labor. Masih was killed in Pakistan at age 13 in 1995.

Further information about the Iqbal Masih Award and USDOL's efforts to combat child labor, is available on the USDOL website at www.dol.gov/ilab.

In 2018, the U.S. Secretary of Labor selected two individuals to receive the Iqbal Masih award: Teresa Martínez Acosta of Paraguay and Stephanie Odegard of the United States.

Teresa Martínez Acosta has been a leader in Paraguay on child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking for the past 20 years. She served as the Lead Prosecutor for the Government of Paraguay's Specialized Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit and played a critical role in strengthening the unit's efforts to combat forced labor and human trafficking. Her efforts as a prosecutor led to an increase in the number of human trafficking cases prosecuted in Paraguay, including cases involving children and indigenous populations.

Ms. Martínez led investigations and raids that freed hundreds of victims from exploitation, resulting in dozens of arrests and prosecutions. In one high-profile case in Paraguay's Chaco region, she led an investigation that rescued 35 indigenous victims, including children, and prosecuted 3 labor traffickers. She also set up an effective coordination mechanism with the Paraguayan Secretariat for Social Action that helped expedite the receipt of benefits for trafficking victims from various social protection programs.

Recently, the President of Paraguay appointed Ms. Martínez to serve as Minister of Childhood and Adolescence.

2018 Iqbal Masih Award Co-Recipient: Stephanie Odegard

The U.S. Ambassador to India, Ambassador Kenneth J. Juster, with Ms. Odegard, the co-recipient of the 2018 Iqbal Masih Award. India. March 6, 2019.

Stephanie Odegard's work on the issue of child labor began when she started working with the Oriental Rug Importers Association. In 1987, she established the Stephanie Odegard Collection (Odegard Carpets) to help address the rampant use of child labor in carpet production occurring in South Asia. After realizing that rug companies profited by paying low wages, allowing the continuation of dangerous work conditions, and using bonded and child labor, she aimed to help tackle the region's child labor problem by ensuring that her looms were child labor-free.

When Ms. Odegard learned about GoodWeave, an internationally recognized organization founded by Kailash Satyarthi, working to end child labor in the carpet industry's global supply chains, she left the Oriental Rug Importers Association to join forces with them. In doing so, she risked her own relationships within the carpet industry, since many carpet dealers shunned GoodWeave. Ultimately, Ms. Odegard succeeded in encouraging other companies to join the struggle to combat child and bonded labor. Serving for 13 years on GoodWeave's board, her efforts helped give the NGO access to carpet looms across South Asia, contributing to a nearly two-thirds reduction in child labor in the sector and the removal of almost 6,000 children from child labor.

Today, Odegard Carpets, made in Nepal, carry GoodWeave's label as a sign that no child, forced, or bonded labor was used in the manufacturing process. For every Odegard rug sold, a small percentage goes to GoodWeave, which has resulted in the generation of more than $450,000 in contributions to help fund educational and prevention programs for nearly 26,000 children in Afghanistan, India, and Nepal.

In recognition of the outstanding impact that Ms. Martínez and Ms. Odegard have made on efforts to combat child labor, the U.S. Secretary of Labor selected them as co-recipients of this honor. They are the tenth recipients to receive this non-monetary award.

Definitions Related to Child Labor

Definitions related to child labor are guided by ILO C. 138 on Minimum Age and ILO C. 182 on Worst Forms of Child Labor. ILO's Resolution Concerning Statistics of Child Labor, developed during the 18th International Conference of Labor Statisticians, provides the international framework for measuring children's work. See Appendix 7 for additional definitions.

WORKING CHILDREN

Working children are those engaged in any productive activity for at least 1 hour during the reference period. Productive activity includes market production and certain types of non-market production, principally the production of goods and services for their families' use. The work children perform may be in the formal or informal economy, inside or outside family settings, whether paid or unpaid. This includes children working in domestic service outside the child's own household for an employer, paid or unpaid. (1; 2)

CHILD LABOR

Child labor is a subset of "working children" and is work below the minimum age for work, as established in national legislation that conforms to international standards. The definition includes the worst forms of child labor. Child labor is a subset of working children because child labor excludes children who work only a few hours a week in permitted light work and those who are above the minimum age who engage in work not classified as a worst form of child labor. (1; 3)

FORCED CHILD LABOR

Forced labor, under international standards, is defined as all work or service that is exacted from any person under the menace of any penalty and for which the worker does not offer him or herself voluntarily. (4) Forced labor is work obtained by force, fraud, or coercion, including (a) by threat of serious harm to, or physical restraint against, any person; (b) by means of any scheme, plan, or pattern intended to cause the person to believe that, if the person did not perform such labor or services, that person or another person would suffer serious harm or physical restraint; or (c) by means of the abuse or threatened abuse of law or the legal process. (5) Circumstances that may give rise to involuntary work, when undertaken under deception or uninformed, include, inter alia, unfree recruitment at birth or through transaction such as slavery or bonded labor; situations in which the worker must perform a job of a different nature from that specified during recruitment without his or her consent; abusive requirements for overtime or on-call work that were not previously agreed with the employer; work in hazardous conditions to which the worker has not consented, with or without compensation or protective equipment; work with very low or no wages; in degrading living conditions imposed by the employer; work for other employers than agreed to; work for a longer period of time than agreed; and work with no or limited freedom to terminate the work contract. (6)

Forced child labor is a categorical worst form of child labor under ILO C. 182. (7) Children older than the minimum age for work are in forced child labor if work is involuntary and they are under the menace of penalty. For children younger than the minimum age, voluntariness does not need to be established because children cannot legally consent to work. Forced child labor also includes work performed with or for the child's parents for a third party under the threat or menace of any penalty directly applied to the child or parents. All children who are made to work as a result of parental forced labor are engaged in forced child labor. (4)

WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Worst forms of child labor refers to activities described and as understood in ILO C. 182: Worst Forms of Child Labor, 1999. (5) Under Article 3 of the Convention, the worst forms of child labor comprise the following activities:

- All forms of slavery or practices similar to slavery, such as the sale and trafficking of children, debt bondage and serfdom, and forced or compulsory labor, including forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict;
- The use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, for the production of pornography, or for pornographic purposes;
- The use, procuring, or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs as defined in the relevant international treaties; and
- Work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety, or morals of children.

CATEGORICAL WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

For this report, categorical worst forms of child labor refers to child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182. This category does not include the worst forms of child labor identified under Article 3(d) “hazardous work.” See also ILO C. 182: Worst Forms of Child Labor, 1999. (7)

HAZARDOUS WORK

Hazardous work refers to the worst form of child labor identified in ILO C. 182, Article 3(d), “work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety, or morals of children.” ILO C. 182, Article 4, directs countries to consult with employers and workers to identify the types of hazardous work that should be prohibited by law or regulation. Hazardous work lists may describe specific activities, occupations, industries, or conditions. (2)

ILO Conventions Related to Child Labor

The ILO brings together government, employer, and worker representatives of member states to establish and supervise the implementation of international labor standards, and develop policies and implement programs to advance decent work. (48) International labor standards are legal instruments drawn up by these ILO constituents that set out basic principles and rights at work. They can take the form of either conventions, protocols, or recommendations. Conventions and protocols are international treaties that are legally binding on ratifying member states. Ratifying countries commit themselves to implementing the convention or protocol in national law and practice and reporting on its application at regular intervals. Recommendations are non-binding and provide guidelines for action either as a complement to a convention, or as a stand-alone instrument. The following paragraphs describe key ILO instruments related to child labor and the minimum ages set by countries related to these instruments.

ILO CONVENTION 138: MINIMUM AGE FOR ADMISSION TO EMPLOYMENT, 1973

ILO C. 138 establishes that the minimum age of admission into employment or work in any occupation “shall not be less than the age of completion of compulsory schooling, and, in any case, shall not be less than fifteen” (Article 2(3)). Countries whose economy and educational facilities are insufficiently developed may initially specify a minimum legal working age of 14 when ratifying the convention. In addition, Article 7(1) says that national laws or regulations may permit the employment or work of children ages 13 to 15 years in light work. Countries that have specified a minimum legal working age of 14 may permit light work for children ages 12 to 14. (8)

ILO CONVENTION 182: WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR, 1999

ILO C. 182 defines the worst forms of child labor and requires ratifying countries to take immediate action to secure the prohibition and elimination of the worst forms of child labor for persons under the age of 18.

Among other actions, ILO C. 182 requires ratifying countries to take effective and time-bound measures to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor; help remove children from the worst forms of child labor and provide for their rehabilitation and social integration; ensure that children removed from the worst forms of child labor have access to free basic education and, wherever possible and appropriate, vocational training; identify and reach out to children at special risk; take into account the special situation of girls; consult with employer and worker organizations to create appropriate mechanisms to monitor implementation of the convention; and assist one another in implementing the convention. (7)

ILO CONVENTION 29: FORCED LABOR, 1930

ILO C. 29 prohibits all forms of forced or compulsory labor, which is defined as “all work or service which is exacted from any person under the menace of any penalty and for which the person has not offered himself voluntarily.” (4)

ILO CONVENTION 105: ABOLITION OF FORCED LABOR CONVENTION, 1957

ILO C. 105 prohibits forced or compulsory labor as a means of political coercion or education, or as a punishment for holding or expressing political views or views ideologically opposed to the established political, social, or economic system; as a method of mobilizing and using labor for economic development; as a means of labor discipline; as a punishment for having participated in strikes; and as a means of racial, social, national, or religious discrimination. (9)

PROTOCOL OF 2014 TO THE FORCED LABOR CONVENTION, 1930

The Forced Labor Protocol reaffirms the forced labor definition in ILO C. 29. It requires ratifying countries to take effective measures to prevent and eliminate forced and compulsory labor, to sanction perpetrators, and provide victims protection and access to appropriate remedies, such as compensation. It also requires ratifying countries to develop a national policy and plan of action to address forced or compulsory labor in consultation with employers’ and workers’ organizations. (10) The protocol supplements ILO C. 29; as such, only ILO member states that have ratified the convention can ratify the protocol.

FORCED LABOR (SUPPLEMENTARY MEASURES) RECOMMENDATION, 2014 (NO. 203)

Recommendation No. 203 provides non-binding practical guidance in the areas of prevention, protection of victims and ensuring their access to justice and remedies, enforcement and international cooperation. It supplements both the protocol and the convention. (11)

How to Read a Country Profile

Country Overview. Each country profile begins with an overview for 2018 in a single paragraph, starting with a statement identifying the assessment level assigned to the country for 2018. Following the statement of assessment, the paragraph offers a summary of key findings in the country profile. The narrative includes any meaningful efforts taken by a government, defined as efforts in key areas where the government advanced its commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The narrative also notes the most common or egregious forms of child labor found in the country and highlights areas in which key gaps in government efforts remain.

Section I: Prevalence and Sectoral Distribution of Child Labor. The first section of each country profile attempts to provide, to the extent that information is available, a comprehensive picture of the worst forms of child labor in the country.

Table 1, Statistics on Children's Work and Education, contains at least four variables: percentage of working children, school attendance rate, percentage of children combining work and school, and primary completion rate. The majority of the country profiles have data for at least one of these variables. A smaller set of profiles contain data on children's work by sector. The age and methodologies of the original surveys that provide the underlying data vary, and in some cases, the surveys may not reflect the true magnitude of the child labor problem in the country.

Table 2, Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity, groups types of children's work by sector, using categories established by the ILO for national child labor surveys (Agriculture, Industry, and Services), as well as a category intended to capture work understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182, referred to by the report as "Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor." Sectors and specific activities performed by children are sorted into these categories according to internationally accepted industry and occupational codes.

The first footnote identifies sectors or activities determined to be hazardous by national law or regulation as understood under Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182, and the second footnote provides the definition of "Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor."

The table is followed by a narrative highlighting additional sector-specific information and social, economic, or political issues that affect the prevalence of child labor, such as barriers to accessing education, or major socioeconomic shocks to the country that may inhibit the government's ability to address child labor, such as a natural disaster or armed conflict.

Colombia

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, Colombia made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government drafted two new bills: one to strengthen penalties in the Penal Code for crimes of commercial sexual exploitation, and one to establish more comprehensive provisions to protect children against cyber crimes that involve commercial sexual exploitation. The Ministry of Labor also significantly increased its resources dedicated to labor law enforcement and launched the campaign "Working is Not a Child's Task," which aims to prevent and eliminate child labor through awareness raising efforts. The government adopted the National Policy on Childhood and Adolescence. It also began implementing the Center for the Crime of Trafficking in Persons, which collects information and analysis on human trafficking and uses this information to develop effective public policies. However, children in Colombia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. In addition, the government does not employ a sufficient number of labor inspectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Colombia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) The government publishes annual statistics on children's work from its National Household Survey. (3) However, activities and ages are not sufficiently specified in these data to determine child labor rates per sector. (3,4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Colombia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.9 (332,253)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Commercial sexual exploitation of children occurs more often in private homes rented online than in commercial establishments. (4,9) In Bucaramanga, child victims of commercial sexual exploitation are allegedly recruited in schools by other students. (35) In mining areas, trafficking of children for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation is widespread. (4,25,36) Reports also indicate that criminal gangs and dissident groups recruit Colombian and Venezuelan children to produce and traffic drugs and commit homicides and extortion. (37,38)

Some civil society groups report that the forced recruitment and use of minors in Colombia by illegal armed groups, including Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de Colombia (FARC) dissidents, the National Liberation Army, the Popular Liberation Army, and non-ideological criminal organizations such as the Gulf Clan, continued and

Section II: Legal Framework for Child Labor

The second section indicates whether a country has ratified key international instruments related to child labor and assesses whether a country's legal framework meets international standards. This section begins with a statement about the extent to which the government has ratified key international conventions concerning child labor.

Table 3, Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor, lists the relevant UN conventions concerning child labor. A checkmark indicates the country's ratification, acceptance, accession, or succession to the instrument, considering that these actions have the same practical legal effect regarding the substantive obligations of the instrument as ratification. If other relevant international instruments, beyond those listed in the table, were ratified during the reporting period, this may be recognized in a short narrative following the table.

A statement above Table 4, Laws and Regulations on Child Labor, indicates whether the government's laws and regulations related to child labor meet ILO C. 138 and C. 182 or whether gaps exist in the legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor.

Table 4 lists each of the relevant legal standards and notes which laws meet and do not meet international standards. Table 4 footnotes identify whether a government does not use conscription for military service, whether a government does not have a standing military, and whether an age is calculated based on available information.

The table is followed by a narrative describing any relevant laws the government enacted, or advanced to a significant step in the legislative process during the reporting period. If the government failed to take action on an existing draft bill that would fill a gap in the legal framework related to child labor, this also may be noted. The narrative also discusses why existing laws do not meet international standards.

Section III: Enforcement of Laws on Child Labor

The third section describes the roles of government agencies in enforcing laws related to child labor and reports on efforts made during the reporting period. It begins with a statement about whether the government has established institutional mechanisms to enforce laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5), notes whether gaps exist within the authority or operations of the ministries responsible for law enforcement, or whether enforcement data are missing.

Table 5, Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement, lists the agencies charged with enforcing such laws and identifies each agency's role. A footnote identifies whether an agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period. A subsequent narrative describes gaps in agency responsibilities or new information during the reporting period.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Colombia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4). However, gaps remain, including the differences in the minimum age for work and the compulsory schooling age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 35 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence (44)

Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 162 of Law 599; Article 20 of Law 1098; Article 14 of Law 418 (44,48,49)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Decision C-376/10 of the Colombian Constitutional Court (51)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 1 of Decree 4807 (52)

During the reporting period, members of Congress drafted a bill to strengthen penalties in the Penal Code for crimes of commercial sexual exploitation and to expand the range of criminal practices considered under these crimes. (4,53) The bill also increases minimum sentences to 26 years in prison for the procurement of a minor for commercial sexual exploitation, demanding a minor to perform sexual acts for money, and any involvement in sex tourism. (53) In addition, Congress drafted a bill that would revise the Penal Code to establish more comprehensive criminal provisions to protect children and adolescents from commercial sexual exploitation

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor's (MOL) Inspection, Monitoring, Control, and Territorial Management Department	Receives complaints of labor law violations and conducts labor inspections, including inspections to verify labor conditions for adolescent workers and compliance with other child labor provisions. Oversees the Internal Working Group on Child Labor Eradication. (55) Operates the Integrated Registration and Information System for Child Labor, a child labor monitoring system that identifies children engaged in or at risk of child labor. (1,56)
Active Search Team for Trafficking in Persons, Sexual Exploitation of Children, Girls, and Adolescents and Related Crimes*	Uses a proactive investigation model to identify these crimes in regions where they occur instead of waiting for victims to seek attention at the national level. Created in 2018 by the Bogota Mayor's office. (25)
National Police	Investigates cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (4) Judicial police and the Technical Investigation Corps support the Attorney General's Office throughout the investigation process. (4)

Table 6 and Table 7 provide data on labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts, respectively, in 2017 and 2018.

Table 6, Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor, provides information on labor law enforcement data, including information about the labor inspectorate's financial and human resources; authority to conduct inspections and assess penalties; and actions and mechanisms to enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor.

Table 7, Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor, provides information on criminal law enforcement data, including information about actions and mechanisms to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor.

Footnotes under each table identify whether the data included in the tables fall outside of the calendar year. A narrative follows each of these tables with more specific information on government mechanisms and efforts, and includes findings in which ILAB has concluded that government efforts fall short.

Section IV: Coordination of Government Efforts on Child Labor The fourth section provides information on institutions charged with coordinating efforts related to child labor. It begins with a statement indicating whether the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, and whether any gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor.

Table 8, Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor, lists the country's key coordinating bodies; their composition, if known; and their respective mandates, as well as their efforts during the reporting period. A footnote states whether a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period. A subsequent narrative may include findings on gaps in their efforts.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Colombia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including resource allocation.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist including the inconsistent coordination in human trafficking victim identification.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Interagency Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (CIETI)	Coordinates efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by MOL, includes 13 government agencies and representatives from trade unions, business associations, and civil society organizations. (7) Oversees 32 department-level CIETIs throughout the country, each comprising municipal-level committees. (62) In 2018, department-level CIETIs were trained on the provisions in the National Policy Guidelines to Eradicate and Prevent Child Labor and Protect Adolescent Workers (2019–2029) and subsequently created department-level Action Plans to implement the guidelines in various regions. (4,66)
ICBF's National System of Family Well-Being	Promotes interagency coordination to protect children's rights, including rights related to child labor. (7) Designs, implements, monitors, and evaluates policies that affect children from early childhood to adolescence. Comprises the offices of the President and Vice President, 15 government ministries, and other government agencies. (70) ICBF provided technical assistance in 2018 to 125 officials in agencies comprising the National System of Family Welfare on protocols for referring children engaged in mining to social services in the departments of Cordoba, La Guajira, and Cesar. (4)
National Interagency Committee for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Commercial Sexual Exploitation	Coordinates and implements efforts to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Led by MOL and comprises 15 government agencies. (7) Was active during the reporting period. (4)
Interagency Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Leads and coordinates efforts among government agencies to combat human trafficking. Created by Law 985, chaired by the Ministry of the Interior, and comprises 16 government entities and 6 permanent invitees, including private sector and international organizations. (1) In 2018, conducted 44 technical advisory meetings with 32 departmental, municipal, and district-level committees to improve coordination. (4,25) Also provided multiple trainings for government agencies, including judicial branch officials and the Colombian National Police, businesses, indigenous communities, and academic institutions on how to identify and combat human trafficking crimes. (4) In May 2018, the Committee formalized an action plan that defines coordinating actions in prevention and awareness raising. The plan came into effect on June 1, 2019. (65)

Section V: Government Policies on Child Labor The fifth section describes a country's policies and plans to combat child labor and development policies that explicitly incorporate the issue of child labor. It begins with a statement indicating whether the government has established policies related to child labor, and whether policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor.

Table 9, Key Policies Related to Child Labor, lists the country's key policies, providing a description of each policy's objectives and any developments in implementation that occurred during the reporting period. Footnotes identify policies that were approved during the reporting period and notes small-scale policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor.

The narrative following the table includes findings related to whether existing policies sufficiently address child labor issues in the country.

Section VI: Social Programs to Address Child Labor The sixth section describes social programs launched or implemented during the reporting period that focus on child labor and programs that address poverty, education, and other related matters that could have a beneficial effect on child labor. It begins with a statement as to whether the government funded or participated in social programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, and whether gaps exist in these social programs.

Table 10, Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor, lists the country's key social programs and a description, including its activities and accomplishments, to the extent known, during the reporting period. Where possible, programs are hyperlinked to project websites for additional information. Footnotes identify policies that were approved during the reporting period, and whether the government had small-scale social programs with the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor.

The narrative following the table includes an analysis of the extent to which social programs were sufficient to address the scope of the problem or covered the key sectors in which children are known to work in the country.

Section VII: Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor The last section of each country profile (Table 11) is a set of suggested actions for the country to consider taking in order to advance the elimination of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy Guidelines to Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor and Protect the Adolescent Worker (2019–2029) [†]	Aims to focus on child labor eradication in agricultural policy, develop child labor prevention strategies, improve the quality and coverage of child protection services, protect adolescent workers from hazardous work, create strategies to address child labor in domestic work, and establish evaluation and monitoring mechanisms to assess progress. (66) The government updated this policy during the reporting period and held workshops for civil society in various regions of the country. (4) The Colombian Government, along with the Somos Tesoro Project, the School of Public Administration, and ILO developed an online course to train civil servants on implementation of the policy. (78)
National Policy on Childhood and Adolescence (2018–2030) [†]	Articulates multiple sub-policies on the worst forms of child labor, protection of adolescents, prevention and eradication of commercial sexual exploitation of children, and prevention of recruitment of children and adolescents by illegal armed groups. (4,79) Policy adopted in June 2018 to contribute to the comprehensive welfare and development of children and adolescents, recognizing them as rights-bearing subjects and integral to national development. (4,79)

In 2018, the Attorney General's Office reported conducting numerous trainings on the worst forms of child labor. Participants included the Colombian National Police, the ICBF, the Judicial Police Investigation Unit, and members of the Family Defenders Offices. (4) The Ministry of the Interior held numerous anti-trafficking in persons trainings, and the Colombian National Police, in cooperation with Interpol and UNODC, trained 130 law enforcement investigators at the national level. (4)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which cover the main sectors where child labor has been identified in the country (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Present Against Child Labor	Program developed by ICBF to address child labor throughout the country. In 2018, the ICBF's mobile teams conducted 1,962 "Present Against Child Labor" workshops to combat child labor in 267 municipalities across the country, with 6,166 participants, including children, adolescents, and their families—with activities including family strengthening and education on fundamental rights restitution. (4,92,93)
Projects Addressing Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children [†]	As part of the National Policy Guidelines for the Prevention of the Commercial Exploitation of Children, the Colombian government continued its Eyes Everywhere (Ojos en Todas Partes) public awareness campaign, which aims to prevent the commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism sector. Led by the Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Tourism, and implemented in coordination with ICBF and the National Tourism Fund. (1,4,25,94) In 2018, it focused on the goal of better identifying solicitors and victims of child sex tourism. (4) The Government of Colombia also supports the "We Protect" program, a web-based tool to collect, monitor, and address complaints of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (95) ICBF also created the Colombia Present Against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Girls, Boys, and Adolescents campaign, an awareness-raising campaign on commercial sexual exploitation and call to action for the public to report cases. (65)

Despite the requirement that children between the ages of 15 and 17 obtain official authorization to work, many adolescents work without such authorization. (62) Although the government did not provide the total number of labor inspections conducted in 2018, it did report that 2,757 inspections were conducted to determine whether authorizations for minors of the legal minimum work age were properly granted and 2,099 followup inspections of work sites were conducted to verify the appropriate conditions of work for authorized minors of the legal minimum work age. (4)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Colombia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Enforcement	Ensure that all labor inspectors have sufficient resources to perform inspections.	2009 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice and ensure the Ministry of Labor employs inspectors trained in victim identification of forced labor.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive timely approval from the Attorney General's Office and judicial officers to conduct timely inspections on private property.	2018
	Collect and publish data on penalties and sentencing for crimes related to the commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking of children.	2018
	Ensure that government efforts on human trafficking victim identification and assistance are adequately coordinated between agencies.	2018
Government Policies	Publish information on activities taken under all policies related to child labor, including its worst forms.	2018

Appendix 5

Country Assessment Criteria

Each country in this report receives an assessment to indicate the USDOL's findings on the country's level of advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period. There are five possible assessment levels: Significant Advancement, Moderate Advancement, Minimal Advancement, No Advancement, or No Assessment. (41)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

For a country to be assessed as having significantly advanced efforts in 2018, the country must have (a) instituted the minimum requirements related to laws and regulations, enforcement mechanisms, and programs to address and prevent the worst forms of child labor (see Box A); and (b) during the reporting period made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking the suggested actions recommended in the 2017 report.

Box A:

Minimum Requirements Needed to be Considered for a Significant Advancement Assessment

In order for a country to be eligible to receive an assessment of Significant Advancement, a country must have:

- Established a minimum age for work that meets international standards;
- Established a minimum age for hazardous work that meets international standards;
- Established legal prohibitions against forced labor that meet international standards;
- Established legal prohibitions against child trafficking that meet international standards;
- Established legal prohibitions against commercial sexual exploitation of children that meet international standards;
- Established legal prohibitions against the use of children for illicit activities that meet international standards;
- Designated a competent authority or implemented institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor;
- Imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor;
- Taken active measures to ensure that children are not inappropriately incarcerated, penalized, or physically harmed for unlawful acts as a direct result of being a victim of the worst forms of child labor;
- Taken active measures to investigate, prosecute, convict, and sentence public officials who participate in or facilitate the worst forms of child labor;
- Made a good faith effort to collect and publish labor and criminal law enforcement data; and
- Directly funded a significant social program that includes the goal of eliminating child labor or addressing the root causes of the problem, such as lack of education opportunities, poverty, or discrimination.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

A country moderately advanced efforts in eliminating the worst forms of child labor in 2018 if it made meaningful efforts during the reporting period in some relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking the suggested actions recommended in 2017.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Three types of countries made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in 2018. The first is a country that made meaningful efforts during the reporting period in a few relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking the suggested actions recommended in 2017.

The other two types of countries are those that, regardless of meaningful efforts made in relevant areas, minimally advanced as a result of establishing or failing to remedy regressive or significantly detrimental laws, policies, or practices that delayed advancement in the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Examples of regressive or significantly detrimental laws, policies, or practices include lowering the minimum age for work below international standards, recruiting or using children in armed conflict, and continuing to impose administrative barriers to child labor inspections. The following points make distinctions between regression and continued law, policy, or practice:

- Regression in Law, Policy, or Practice that Delayed Advancement. This type of country made meaningful efforts in a few or more relevant areas but established a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice during the reporting period that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor.
- Continued Law, Policy, or Practice that Delayed Advancement. This type of country made meaningful efforts in a few or more relevant areas but failed to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice established in previous years, which delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor.

NO ADVANCEMENT

Three types of countries made no advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in 2018. The first is a country that made no meaningful efforts to advance the elimination of the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period.

The other two types of countries are those that, regardless of whether meaningful efforts in relevant areas were made, had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents, which is considered an egregious form of exploitation. Complicity can occur when a government is involved in forced child labor at any level of government, including at the local, regional, or national level. Such incidents involve direct or proactive government action to compel children under age 18 to work. The following points make distinctions between a country making no efforts and being complicit and a country making efforts but being complicit:

- No Efforts and Complicit in Forced Child Labor. This type of country made no meaningful efforts, took no suggested actions reported in 2017, and had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents in 2018.
- Efforts Made but Complicit in Forced Child Labor. This type of country made meaningful efforts, which may have included taking the suggested actions reported in 2017, but had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents in 2018.

NO ASSESSMENT

This assessment is reserved for countries in which the population of children is either non-existent or extremely small (fewer than 50), there is no evidence of the worst forms of child labor, and the country appears to have an adequate preventive legal and enforcement framework on child labor; or when a country is included in the report for the first time or receives a suggested action for the first time. Currently, only Wallis and Futuna falls into this category.

CHILDREN'S WORK AND EDUCATION STATISTICS: SOURCES AND DEFINITIONS

In this report, 96 countries include a statistical table (Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education) with data on the percentage of working children, school attendance rate, percentage of children who combine school and work, and/or primary completion rate. For a smaller set of profiles, a chart lists the percentages of children who work by sector.

This appendix provides definitions and descriptions of the sources for these data and some of the strengths and weakness inherent in these data. In a few cases, more current sources of data may be available than the ones used in this report; however, the most reliable, standardized sources available to date are used to allow for cross-country comparisons. Because reliable child labor surveys are not available for many countries, in some cases, USDOL uses statistics from child labor surveys that are more than 10 years old (data from 2008). If data did not exist from the sources described below, if no other reliable and publicly available source of data exists for a country, or if data exists but has not been analyzed to allow for cross-country comparisons, this report concludes that the statistics are "unavailable."

WORKING CHILDREN

Many of the statistical tables in the country profiles in this report present data on the percentage and number of working children. Data presented in the current report may differ from data that were presented in previous reports because updated data have become available.

DEFINITION

"Working children" describes children engaged in any productive activity for at least 1 hour during the reference period. Productive activity includes market production and certain types of non-market production, principally the production of goods and services for own use. The work children perform may be in the formal or informal economy, inside or outside family settings, or for pay or profit. This includes children working in domestic service outside the child's own household for an employer, paid or unpaid. This definition is in accordance with the Resolution to amend the 18th ICLS Resolution concerning statistics of child labour, adopted by the 20th International Conference of Labour Statisticians in 2018, and the report, ILO Global Estimates of Child Labour: Results and Trends, 2012–2016. (1; 3)

WORKING CHILDREN VERSUS CHILDREN ENGAGED IN CHILD LABOR

This report presents statistics on "working children" rather than on "children involved in child labor." These terms are defined precisely in the section "Definitions Related to Child Labor." The definition of working children does not vary among countries and, therefore, statistics on working children are comparable across the country profiles. In contrast, the definition of "children involved in child labor" is based on national legislation, including, for example, the minimum age for work, which varies from country to country. As a result, child labor data are not comparable across countries. Further, these country-level statistics may not disaggregate child labor from the broader category of child work, thereby including children who work only a few hours a week in permitted light work. For the purposes of this report, ILAB is unable to clearly articulate the proportion of working children who are involved in child labor.

DATA SOURCES AND LIMITATIONS

Data are from the ILO's analysis of primarily four survey types: (a) the ILO's SIMPOC surveys; (b) UNICEF's Multiple Indicator Cluster Surveys (MICS); (c) national Labor Force Surveys (LFS); and (d) other national and regional level household surveys, including Demographic and Health Surveys (DHS). (13)

According to the ILO researchers, typical surveys on children's work do not collect sufficiently detailed information on children's activities to accurately measure economic activity. (14) This observation was repeated in December 2008 at the 18th International Conference of Labor Statisticians. A resolution adopted at the conference provides guidelines for governments on collecting child labor data. Specifically, the guidance indicates that countries can choose to use a broad framework to measure children's work and child labor that encompasses unpaid household services or that countries can use a narrower definition of children's work that excludes such services, as long as the definition used is clearly specified. (15) This resolution is contributing to the collection of more comparable data on children's involvement in non-market activities.

In analyzing the data from the above-mentioned surveys, the ILO attempted to apply a standard definition of children's work. Although UNICEF's MICS and ILO's SIMPOC reports, for example, each use a different definition of work. As of the writing of this report, MICS reports include household chores in their definition of work, while SIMPOC reports do not. To the extent possible, the ILO applied a common definition of work to the micro-data described. To date, this has resulted in the individual analysis of more than 184 data sets. While every attempt was made to present a standardized child work statistic, differences across the surveys have the potential to affect the comparability of statistics across countries and across years. Some of these differences are explained in greater detail here; however in general, they include differing age groups, questionnaire content and wording, purpose of the survey, sample design, non-sampling errors, and the year of data collection.

In general, data are presented for children ages 5 to 14, but some of the profiles present a work statistic for children ages 6 to 14, 7 to 14, or 10 to 14, depending on the age categories used in the original survey. The wording of work-related questions also may affect the results. For example, the question on work in these surveys usually refers to work during the past 7 days; however, some surveys may refer to work activities during the past 12 months, and therefore, they are likely to capture a higher proportion of working children than surveys with 7-day timeframes. The purpose of the survey—whether specifically to measure children's work and child labor (SIMPOC surveys) or to measure the labor force participation of adults—may affect estimates of children's work. (16) In addition, sample design may affect the survey results. For example, children's work is often clustered geographically; SIMPOC surveys are designed to capture children's work in such geographic areas. As a result, estimates of working children vary across surveys that do not use the same sample design. (16) The ILO and UNICEF continue to investigate the effects of these survey differences on estimates of children's work.

As noted, some country profiles also include the sector in which children reportedly work. For some surveys, the sector of work was not reported by the entire sample of working children. Therefore, the distribution of children working by sector—agriculture, industry, and services—represents children with non-missing data for the sector of work. Additional information on the sectors of work reported in the chart appear in Table 1.

PERCENTAGE OF CHILDREN ATTENDING SCHOOL

The percentage of children attending school is the share of all children within a specified age group that reported attending school. The ILO data described above in the section “Working Children” are used to develop country-specific school attendance statistics. To be consistent with estimates of working children, the age group for which attendance statistics are calculated for children is generally ages 5 to 14. In some cases, however, different age categories are used, usually ages 6 to 14 or 7 to 14.

PERCENTAGE OF CHILDREN COMBINING WORK AND SCHOOL

The percentage of children who combine work and school is the share of all children within a specified age group reporting both working and attending school. The ILO data described earlier under “Working Children” are used to develop country-specific statistics on children combining work and school. The age group for which these statistics are calculated is usually for children ages 7 to 14.

PRIMARY COMPLETION RATE

This report uses the “gross intake ratio to the last grade of primary education” as a proxy measure for primary completion. This ratio is the total number of new entrants in the last grade of primary education, regardless of age, expressed as a percentage of the population at the theoretical entrance age to the last grade of primary education. A high ratio indicates a high degree of current primary education completion. The calculation includes all new entrants to the last grade, regardless of age. Therefore, the ratio can exceed 100 percent, due to over-aged and under-aged children who enter primary school late or early, or repeat grades.

DATA SOURCES AND LIMITATIONS

Unlike the other statistics presented in the country profile data tables, which are all based on the ILO analysis described earlier, primary completion rate data are from the UNESCO Institute for Statistics. The data were downloaded on March 16, 2019, and are available at <http://data.uis.unesco.org/>. Further information on this statistic is available from the UNESCO Institute for Statistics Glossary at <http://uis.unesco.org/en/glossary>.

UNESCO uses population estimates from the UNDP to calculate some of the rates it publishes, including the gross intake ratio to the last grade of primary education. These population estimates change over time. The last revision that affected the statistics used in this report was in 2018. All population-based indicators, including the gross intake ratio to the last grade of primary education, for all years are re-calculated using these latest estimates. For some countries and years, when the new UNDP population estimates are found to be inconsistent with education data, related indicators are removed. All updates made to UNESCO data on the gross intake ratio to the last grade of primary education are reflected in the primary completion rate statistic included in this report.

LABOR LAW ENFORCEMENT: SOURCES AND DEFINITIONS

LABOR FORCE CALCULATION

This report uses data from the CIA World Factbook, which lists the most recent estimates for countries’ total labor force. This number is used to calculate a “sufficient number” of labor inspectors based on the country’s level of development, as determined by the UN. (17)

COUNTRY CLASSIFICATION

For analyses, the Development Policy and Analysis Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat (UN/DESA) classifies all countries of the world into one of four broad categories: (a) developed economies, (b) economies in transition, (c) developing economies, and (d) least developed countries. The composition of these groupings is intended to reflect basic economic country conditions. Several countries, in particular the economies in transition, have characteristics that could place them in more than one category; however, for analyses, the groupings have been made mutually exclusive. This is decided upon by the UN Economic and Social Council and, ultimately, by the General Assembly deciding on the list of the least developed countries based on recommendations made by the Committee for Development Policy. The basic criteria for inclusion require that certain thresholds be met for per capita GNI, a human assets index, and an economic vulnerability index. For the Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor report, “developed economies” equate to the ILO’s classification of “industrial market economies,” “economies in transition” to “transition economies,” “developing economies” to “industrializing economies,” and “the least developed countries” equate to “less developed countries.” Countries that appear on both “developing countries” and “least developed countries” lists are considered “least developed countries” for calculating a “sufficient number” of labor inspectors. (18)

NUMBER OF LABOR INSPECTORS

Article 10 of ILO Convention No. 81 calls for a “sufficient number” of inspectors to do the work required. Because each country assigns different priorities of enforcement to its inspectors, there is no official definition for a “sufficient number” of inspectors. The factors that need to be considered include the number and size of establishments, and the total size of the workforce. No single measure is sufficient, but in many countries, the available data sources are weak. The ratio of inspectors per workforce is currently the only internationally comparable indicator available. In its policy and technical advisory services, the ILO has taken as reasonable benchmarks that the number of labor inspectors in relation to workers should approach: 1/10,000 in industrial market economies, 1/15,000 in industrializing economies, 1/20,000 in transition economies, and 1/40,000 in less developed countries. (19)

ILO COMMITTEE OF EXPERTS ON THE APPLICATION OF CONVENTIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

The ILO CEACR examines and makes two types of comments on the application of international labor standards by states that are party to the relevant conventions. Direct requests contain the Committee’s technical comments or questions about the state’s application of a particular convention, and these requests are sent directly to governments. Observations, which are published in the Committee’s annual report, contain comments on fundamental questions raised by a state’s application of a particular convention and recommendations for the state. (21)

GLOSSARY OF OTHER TERMS

BASIC EDUCATION

Article 7(c) of ILO C. 182 requires countries to “ensure access to free basic education.” According to the International Standard Classification of Education, basic education corresponds to the first 9 years of formal schooling and comprises primary and lower secondary education. Primary education is considered to be the first stage of “basic education” and covers 6 years of full-time schooling, with the legal age of entrance normally being no younger than 5 years or older than 7 years. Primary education is designed to give pupils a sound basis in reading, writing, and mathematics, along with an elementary understanding of other subjects, such as history, geography, natural science, social science, religion, art, and music. Lower secondary education is more subject-focused and requires specialized teachers. It corresponds to about 3 years of schooling and marks the end of compulsory education where it exists. Basic education also can include various non-formal and informal public and private educational activities offered to meet the defined basic learning needs of groups of people of all ages.

Article 13 of the 1966 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights indicates that primary education should be compulsory and free to all. Secondary education, including technical and vocational education, should be available and accessible to all, and free education should be progressively introduced. Article 28 of the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child affirms the right of the child to education and the state's duty to ensure that primary education is free and compulsory. (22; 23; 24; 25; 7)

BONDED LABOR, DEBT BONDAGE

Bonded labor or debt bondage is “the status or condition arising from a pledge by a debtor of his personal services or those of a person under his control as security for a debt if the value of those services as reasonably assessed is not applied towards the liquidation of the debt or the length and nature of those services are not respectively limited and defined,” as defined in the UN Supplementary Convention on the Abolition of Slavery, the Slave Trade, and Institutions and Practices Similar to Slavery (1956). (25)

Bonded labor typically occurs when a person who needs a loan and has no security to offer, pledges his or her labor, or that of someone under his or her control, as security for a loan. In some cases, the interest on the loan may be so high that it cannot be paid. In others, it may be deemed that the bonded individual's work repays the interest on the loan but not the principal. Thus, the loan is inherited and perpetuated, and becomes an intergenerational debt. (26; 27)

Bonded labor is prohibited as one of the worst forms of child labor in ILO C. 182. (7)

CHILD DOMESTIC WORKER

A “child domestic worker” works in third-party private households under an employment relationship. Child domestic workers engage in various tasks that include cleaning, cooking, gardening, collecting water, and caring for children and the elderly. Child domestic workers sometimes have live-in arrangements, whereby they live in their employer's household and work in exchange for room, board, and sometimes education. Child domestic workers are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including sexual, physical, and verbal abuse, in large part because they often depend on their employers for basic needs and work in locations hidden from public view. (28; 29)

CHILD LABOR ELIMINATION PROJECTS

Since 1995, USDOL has funded 332 projects in 98 countries. USDOL currently oversees more than $249 million in active programming to combat exploitative child labor. To date, USDOL-funded projects have provided nearly 2 million children with education and vocational training opportunities as a strategy for preventing and reducing child labor and increasing access to education in disadvantaged communities. In addition, USDOL's projects have improved livelihoods for approximately 185,000 vulnerable families as a means of reducing their reliance on child labor. (30)

CHILD TRAFFICKING

The Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, (Palermo Protocol) provides a definition of “human trafficking” for children that states “the recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring or receipt of a child for the purpose of exploitation shall be considered ‘trafficking in persons’ even if this does not involve any of the means set forth in subparagraph (a) of this Article.” Therefore, there does not need to be abuse of power, control, coercion, or fraud present to constitute child trafficking, as the definition for adults requires. The Palermo Protocol provides a commonly accepted definition of “human trafficking” in Article 3(a) that trafficking in persons means “the recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring, or receipt of persons, by means of the threat or use of force or other forms of coercion, of abduction, of fraud, of deception, of the abuse of power or of a position of vulnerability, or of the giving or receiving of payments or benefits to achieve the consent of a person having control over another person, for the purpose of exploitation. Exploitation shall include, at a minimum, the exploitation of the prostitution of others or other forms of sexual exploitation, forced labor or services, slavery or practices similar to slavery, servitude or the removal of organs.” (32)

The trafficking of children is prohibited as a worst form of child labor in ILO C. 182, Article 3(a). (7)

COMMERCIAL SEXUAL EXPLOITATION OF CHILDREN

Based on the 1996 Declaration and Agenda for Action of the First World Congress Against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children, “commercial sexual exploitation of children” (CSEC) is defined as “sexual abuse by the adult and remuneration in cash or kind to the child or third person or persons.” (32; 33; 34) The remuneration dynamic distinguishes CSEC from the sexual abuse of a child, which does not include commercial gain; however, sexual exploitation also includes abuse. The definition of CSEC includes these activities:

Prostitution in the streets or indoors, in such places as brothels, discotheques, massage parlors, bars, hotels, and restaurants, among others:

- Child sex tourism
- The production, promotion, and distribution of pornography involving children
- The use of children in sex shows (public or private)

ILO C. 182, Article 3(b), prohibits using, procuring, or offering a child for prostitution or for the production of pornography or for pornographic performances. (7)

COMPULSORY EDUCATION AGE

The age up to which children and youth are legally required to attend school. (21)

CONVENTION ON THE RIGHTS OF THE CHILD

The Convention on the Rights of the Child spells out the basic rights of children, such as the right to survival; to develop to the fullest; to be protected from harmful influences, abuse, and exploitation; and to participate fully in family, cultural, and social life. The Convention protects children’s rights by setting standards in health care; education; and legal, civil, and social services. According to Article 32 of the Convention, children have the right “to be protected from economic exploitation and from performing any work that is likely to be hazardous or to interfere with the child’s education, or to be harmful to the child’s health or physical, mental, spiritual, moral, or social development.” (35)

HAZARDOUS WORK

Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182 sets forth the following as a worst form of child labor: “work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety or morals of children.” This is colloquially referred to as “hazardous work.” Countries must determine which types of work are considered to be hazardous work by law or regulation. ILO R. 190 includes options for consideration in determining which types of work are hazardous.

ILLICIT ACTIVITIES

ILO C. 182, Article 3(c), prohibits “the use, procuring or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs.” Illicit activities in this context can include crimes, but the activity need not be illegal to be considered illicit. (16) According to ILO R. 190 and the General Survey on the Fundamental Conventions Concerning Rights at Work, illicit activities can include “activities which involve the unlawful carrying or use of firearms or other weapons,” and “the use of children by criminal organizations for transporting weapons and carrying out arson attacks or destroying public or private property, illicit activities such as housebreaking and petty theft, and... children being engaged by adults in car breaking, housebreaking, selling drugs and selling stolen goods, use of children for forced or organized begging, gambling, the unlawful carrying or use of firearms or other weapons, or for the commission of an offence or a crime using violence or the threat of violence.” (37; 38)

ILO RECOMMENDATION NO. 190: WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

ILO R. 190 supplements the provisions of ILO C. 182 and provides guidance to ratifying countries regarding its implementation. It provides guidelines to assist countries in determining what types of work should be considered hazardous and thus what type of work countries should prohibit for all children as a worst form of child labor, in accordance with Article 4 of ILO C. 182. ILO R. 190 describes populations in need of specific attention regarding the worst forms of child labor, such as girls and children involved in hidden forms of work. It also provides guidance regarding specific steps that countries which have ratified ILO C. 182 should take to combat the worst forms of child labor, such as the collection and exchange of data on both the problem and best practices to address it; passage and enforcement of laws that penalize violations with criminal penalties; awareness-raising about the problem; establishment of policies against the worst forms of child labor; and international cooperation through technical, legal, and other forms of assistance. (37)

INFORMAL SECTOR

While the concept of the informal sector was introduced into international usage in the 1970s, it was only in 1993 at the 15th International Conference of Labor Statisticians that an internationally recognized definition was established for data collection to delineate the “informal sector” as unincorporated, small, or unregistered enterprises, and the employees of those enterprises. An enterprise is unincorporated if no complete set of accounts are available that would permit a financial separation of the activities of the enterprise from that of its owners, and it produces marketable goods or services. The registration and size criteria are determined according to national circumstances and legislation, which provide a degree of flexibility in identifying the informal sector from country to country. However, all interpretations of this sector share the notion of enterprises whose activities are not covered or are insufficiently covered by law, or whose activities are not covered by law in practice, meaning that the relevant law is not applied or enforced. Workers in such enterprises often lack the benefits of regular, stable, and protected employment. Because employers in the informal sector are generally either not covered by labor laws or are not held accountable for complying with labor protections, including occupational safety measures, children who work in “hazardous” or “ultra-hazardous” informal settings likely face increased risk of exploitation, including injury. In addition, because businesses in the informal sector are not usually included in official statistics, children working in informal sector enterprises may not be counted in labor force activity rates. (39; 40)

LIGHT WORK

This report uses the definition of “light work” as established in ILO C. 138, Minimum Age for Admission to Employment. Under Article 7(1) of the Convention, “National laws or regulations may permit the employment or work of persons 13 to 15 years of age on light work which is—(a) not likely to be harmful to their health or development; and (b) not such as to prejudice their attendance at school, their participation in vocational orientation or training programmes approved by the competent authority or their capacity to benefit from the instruction received.” Countries that have specified a minimum legal working age of 14 may permit the employment or work of persons ages 12 to 14 in light work as defined in Article 7(1), but should specify limitations on their hours of work, as well as activities and conditions in which light work may be undertaken. (8)

MINIMUM AGE FOR WORK

The minimum age for work is the age at which a child can enter into work. ILO C. 138 states that the minimum age for admission to employment should not be less than the age of completion of compulsory schooling and should not be less than age 15, or age 14 for developing countries that specified a minimum legal age of 14 upon ratification of ILO C. 138. (27)

NON-FORMAL EDUCATION

Non-formal education is any organized educational activity outside of the established formal school system—whether operating separately or as an important feature of some broader activity—that is intended to serve identifiable learning objectives. Non-formal or transitional education programs can enable former child workers to catch up or be mainstreamed with their peers who began their schooling at the appropriate age. (27)

OPTIONAL PROTOCOL TO THE CONVENTION ON THE RIGHTS OF THE CHILD ON THE INVOLVEMENT OF CHILDREN IN ARMED CONFLICT

This optional UN protocol, adopted in 2000, addresses and commits ratifying countries to take action against the involvement of children in armed conflict, which is a worst form of child labor per ILO C. 182, Article 3(a). (40)

OPTIONAL PROTOCOL TO THE CONVENTION ON THE RIGHTS OF THE CHILD ON THE SALE OF CHILDREN, CHILD PROSTITUTION AND CHILD PORNOGRAPHY

This optional UN protocol, adopted in 2000, addresses and commits ratifying countries to take action against the commercial sexual exploitation of children, which is a worst form of child labor as defined in ILO C. 182, Article 3(b). (41)

POVERTY REDUCTION STRATEGY PAPER

This document is written by the government of a developing country with the participation of civil society to serve as the basis for concessional lending from the World Bank and IMF, as well as debt relief under the World Bank’s Highly Indebted Poor Countries Initiative. A poverty reduction strategy paper (PRSP) should be used to measure poverty in the country, identify goals for reducing poverty, and create a spending and policy program for reaching those goals. A PRSP also should ensure that a country’s macroeconomic, structural, and social policies are consistent with the objectives of poverty reduction and social development. A new PRSP must be written every 3 years to continue receiving assistance from international financial institutions such as the World Bank. (42)

PROTOCOL TO PREVENT, SUPPRESS AND PUNISH TRAFFICKING IN PERSONS, ESPECIALLY WOMEN AND CHILDREN, SUPPLEMENTING THE UNITED NATIONS CONVENTION AGAINST TRANSNATIONAL ORGANIZED CRIME (PALERMO PROTOCOL)

The Palermo Protocol supplements the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and covers the trafficking of children, also delineated as a worst form of child labor under ILO C. 182, Article 3(a). (32) See “Child Trafficking” above.

RATIFICATION

Ratification is a serious undertaking whereby a state formally accepts the terms of an international agreement, thus becoming legally bound to apply it. Other ways of becoming bound to an international agreement include acceptance, approval, accession, signature, or through an exchange of notes.

To ratify an agreement, a country must adopt new laws and regulations, if necessary, or modify the existing legislation and practice to support the agreement and formally deposit the instruments of ratification with the appropriate depositary. In the case of ILO Conventions, ratifications must be registered with the Director-General of the ILO. (43)

For certain international agreements that require ratification, signing an agreement or enacting an agreement into domestic law by congress, or a similar state organ, does not mean that the international agreement has been ratified. Signing an international agreement serves as a preliminary endorsement, albeit a formality, because signatories are not bound by the terms of the international agreement or in any way committed to proceed to the final step of ratification. However, a signatory is obliged to refrain from acts that would defeat the objective and purpose of the international agreement, unless it makes clear its intention not to become a party to the international agreement. Appropriate state entities may signal approval of an international agreement, but that is only one of the requisite steps on the path toward official ratification. The final step requires that the instruments of ratification be submitted to the ILO's depositary. (44)

In the case of ILO Conventions, ILO procedures provide the option of ratifying or not ratifying a convention, but they do not include the option of signing a convention as a preliminary endorsement. Generally, an ILO convention comes into force in a ratifying country 12 months after the government has deposited the requisite instrument of ratification. This grace period provides ILO members time to enact or modify legislation to comply with the convention before it comes into force. (7; 9; 44)

UNPAID HOUSEHOLD SERVICES

For this report, the term “unpaid household services” by children refers to the domestic and personal services a child performs within the child's own household, under the following conditions: (a) for long hours; (b) in an unhealthy environment, including equipment or heavy loads; or (c) in dangerous locations. (3)

Research Framework and Organization of Country Profiles

RESEARCH METHODS

This section describes the research methods used for data collection, as well as the sources, analysis of information, and the limitations of these methods in this report.

DATA COLLECTION AND SOURCES

Information was gathered for this report through desk research, U.S. embassy reporting, and limited fieldwork. Information also was received from some foreign governments. Desk research consisted of an extensive review of mostly online materials, which included both primary and secondary sources. The sources included academic and independent researchers, media outlets, NGOs, international organizations, foreign governments, and U.S. Government agencies. Information also was collected from U.S. Government-funded technical assistance and field research projects.

Examples of the sources used in this report are the most recent available editions of country laws relevant to child labor; national-level child labor surveys; NGO reports on the nature of child labor in various countries; and UN reports, including direct requests and observations by the ILO Committee of Experts. (21)

The U.S. Department of State and U.S. embassies and consulates abroad provided important information by gathering data from contacts, conducting site visits, and reviewing local media sources. A request for information from the public was published in the Federal Register, and a copy of the request was mailed to the Washington, D.C.-based foreign embassies of the countries included in this report. (45) Data also were gathered through site visits to certain countries covered in this report, and included the collection of additional documents and key informant interviews.

ANALYSIS OF INFORMATION

The existence of child labor, particularly in its worst forms, often involves violations of laws and regulations, including serious criminal violations in some egregious cases. Information on child labor may be intentionally suppressed. Victims of the worst forms of child labor are often unable to claim their rights or even communicate the abuse they are suffering because they are traumatized, unaware of their rights under the law, or politically underrepresented or marginalized. These factors make information on the worst forms of child labor difficult to obtain. Therefore, to compile a credible and comprehensive report, ILAB used the following criteria to assess information:

NATURE OF THE INFORMATION

Whether the information about child labor and government efforts to combat it gathered from research, public submissions, or other sources was relevant and probative, and covered the “worst forms of child labor” and “government efforts” as used in this report (see “Key Definitions”). Specific evidence of government efforts was preferred when it was available.

DATE OF THE INFORMATION

Whether the source information about child labor was no more than 5 years old. More current information was given priority, and to the extent possible, ILAB used sources published during the reporting period. Information from sources older than 5 years was generally not considered.

In the case of child labor statistics, however, certain factors contribute to less frequent generation of new data. Because government and other efforts to address exploitative child labor take time to have an impact on national-level rates of child labor, children's involvement in such activities does not change dramatically from year to year. Child labor surveys are carried out infrequently, in part, because the child labor picture does not change frequently, although the number of surveys have increased recently. To present an overall picture of children's work in as many countries as possible, ILAB used statistics that are, in some cases, more than 10 years old (from 2008) as of the writing of this report. For more information on the statistics used in this report, see "Children's Work and Education Statistics: Sources and Definitions".

In addition, in cases in which previous editions of this report have asserted that the worst forms of child labor exist in the production of goods, and in the absence of evidence that the problem has been effectively eliminated, sources more than 5 years old may be used. This practice makes the report's information on such forms of child labor consistent with USDOL's List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor, as mandated by the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005 (TVPRA). Statements that the worst forms of child labor exist in the production of goods will be removed when there is evidence that the problem has been effectively eliminated.

SOURCE OF THE INFORMATION

Whether the information, either from primary or secondary sources, was from a source in which methodology, prior publications, degree of familiarity and experience with international labor standards, or reputation for accuracy and objectivity warranted a determination that it was relevant and probative.

EXTENT OF THE CORROBORATION

Whether the information about the use of child labor was corroborated by other sources.

LIMITATIONS

While data on the worst forms of child labor and information about government efforts to provide remediation are improving, data are still insufficient to provide a complete understanding of the problem. A lack of information may create the impression that a country has less serious problems with the worst forms of child labor than it actually has. At the same time, a dearth of information may create the impression that a government is doing less than it should when, in fact, efforts to combat child labor exist, but are simply unreported or unpublicized. Although countries with open and available information may sometimes appear to have greater problems relative to other countries, this may not be the case. In fact, countries that collect information on child labor are in a better position to eliminate the problem than countries in which such information is suppressed, because with better information, they can target their policies and programs at identified problem areas to achieve maximum impact.

Due to an inability to travel to each country covered in the report, ILAB relies on U.S. embassies, internet research, and submissions received in response to the Federal Register notice to gather primary and secondary sources of information. For countries where internet access and technology are limited, there may be less information available online. Countries with more closed government processes and less civil society participation also may have less information readily available. When ILAB was unable to find information about report topics, including the content of important laws or enforcement efforts, this was noted in the report.

Most of ILAB's online research was conducted in English; however, we also gathered and read source materials written in Spanish, French, and, to a limited extent, Portuguese, Russian, Bosnian, Serbian, and Arabic. Materials written in other languages were generally not reviewed.

Despite ILAB's best efforts to cover relevant topics as comprehensively as possible, this report cannot address every salient issue that may affect children's involvement in child labor. For example, there are many factors that affect whether a household sends a child to school, to work, or both. A lack of available information, however, limits the discussion of these issues for some countries. In these cases, we note that the profile's information is incomplete. Furthermore, ILAB chose to limit its reporting of education to the issue of access, and generally does not cover the quality of education because research on the relationship between the quality of education and child labor is lacking.

ORGANIZATION AND CONTENT OF COUNTRY PROFILES

ILAB organized country profiles to track the types of efforts outlined in the TDA Conference Committee report. In this report, the Conference Committee indicated that the President should consider certain criteria when determining whether a country has met its obligation under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) program to implement its international commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. (46) Each country profile contains an introductory paragraph that provides an assessment of government actions to advance efforts in eliminating the worst forms of child labor, six sections that describe the problem and different aspects of government efforts to address it, and a set of suggested actions. The following section describes the content in the country profiles.

CONTENT OF COUNTRY PROFILES

Each country profile begins with an overview of 2018 in a single paragraph, beginning with a statement identifying the assessment level assigned to the country for 2018. (See “Framework for Country Assessments” in this appendix for more details on the criteria used to determine a country's assessment.) Following the statement of assessment, the summary includes meaningful efforts taken by a government to implement its commitments to eliminate child labor. The summary also notes where children are engaged in the worst forms of child labor or if no worst forms of child labor exist, where they are engaged in tasks for which there is evidence that such tasks fall into the categories suggested by ILO R. 190 for hazardous work—referred to as “dangerous tasks” in this report. Depending on the situation in the country, the summary also may discuss child labor that does not rise to the level of hazardous work. Finally, the paragraph highlights areas in which key gaps in government efforts remain.

SECTION I: PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

The first section of each country profile attempts to provide, to the extent that information is available, a comprehensive picture of child labor in the country. This section begins with a review of available data on working children and school attendance, followed by a presentation of the most common sectors and activities in which children are engaged. The narrative also provides information about the nature and conditions of the work, specific populations that are particularly vulnerable to child labor, government complicity in the use of forced child labor, circumstances that make accessing education difficult, and events during the year that destabilized the country.

SECTION II: LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The second section of each country profile provides information on whether the country has adequate laws and regulations proscribing the worst forms of child labor. This section describes a country's legal framework with regard to child labor and assesses the adequacy of that legal framework by comparing it, in general, to the standards set forth in ILO C. 182 and ILO C. 138, and to other international instruments, including the Palermo Protocol and the Convention on the Rights of the Child and its Optional Protocols. ILAB considered whether the laws criminally prohibited the categorical worst forms of child labor in ILO C. 182, Articles 3(a)–(c), as suggested by ILO R. 190. In line with the ILO Committee of Experts, ILAB considered any law that could be used to prohibit child labor, including its worst forms. ILAB also considered whether the country had ratified key international instruments related to child labor.

It is important to note that ILAB analyzes a country's legal framework regarding compliance with international standards, regardless of whether a problem exists in a country. This is to ensure that legal frameworks also serve as preventive mechanisms. For example, even in the case of a country that does not have a problem with the use of children in illicit activities, if there are no laws to prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, the report points out a gap when comparing laws on this issue against international standards.

The corresponding table indicates where the legal framework meets international standards and where it does not. For example, the table indicates whether the country's minimum age for work complies with the international standard.

ILAB assessed whether a country's laws prohibit forced labor, human trafficking, and debt bondage. For child trafficking specifically, ILAB reviewed the adequacy of existing legal protections related to international and domestic trafficking for both commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor against the Palermo Protocol's standard for child trafficking, including whether the legal protections prohibit the five possible elements of the human trafficking process—recruiting, harboring, transporting, transferring, and receiving persons.

In all cases in which countries maintain a military force, ILAB assessed whether the country prohibited the compulsory military recruitment of children and whether the minimum age for voluntary military recruitment is at least 16, with certain safeguards to ensure voluntariness. For all countries, ILAB assessed whether the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups is prohibited, even if non-state armed groups are not present in the country.

For the issue of commercial sexual exploitation of children, ILAB assessed whether a country's laws criminally prohibit the using, procuring, and offering of children for prostitution; the production of child pornography; and the use of children in pornographic performances. For illicit activities, ILAB assessed whether laws criminally prohibit the using, procuring, and offering of a child in the production and trafficking of drugs.

ILAB assessed whether a country has created a hazardous work list and whether the types of hazardous work prohibited are comprehensive, based on whether there is evidence that children engage in work where, according to ILO R. 190, the work may be hazardous. Because the standards on the minimum age for work in ILO C. 138 provide a foundation for protections against the worst forms of child labor, ILAB used the standards embodied in that convention to assess each country's minimum age for admission to work and the age up to which education is compulsory. (21) ILO C. 138 establishes that countries should set a minimum age of 15 for work, or age 14 for countries with less-developed economies where the country has specified an age of 14 upon ratification of the convention. For countries that permit children to engage in light work, the profile also indicates whether the country has set a minimum age of 13 for light work, or age 12 for less-developed economies, and whether legislation related to light work determines permitted activities, and the number of hours per week and the conditions under which light work may be conducted.

ILAB assessed whether the age for compulsory education aligns with the minimum age for work, in accordance with ILO C. 138, which states that the minimum age for work should not be less than the age up to which education is compulsory, and that it should be at least age 15, or age 14 for developing countries. However, the opposite situation—in which the minimum age for work is higher than the upper cut-off age for compulsory education—also should be avoided because when children are not required to be in school or permitted to work, they are susceptible to falling into the worst forms of child labor. This section points out when a country's age up to which education is compulsory is below or above the minimum age for employment and suggests that the government rectify this gap. It also notes whether a country has free public education through at least the basic level.

SECTION III: ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The third section of the country profiles addresses the second and third criteria included in the TDA Conference Committee report, concerning whether the country has “adequate laws and regulations for the implementation and enforcement of such measures,” and “established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor.” (46) This section describes the role of government agencies in enforcing laws relevant to child labor, including its worst forms, and reports on labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts during the reporting period.

In this section, ILAB analyzes whether and to what degree the country defines enforcement agency roles and investigates and addresses complaints related to allegations of child labor. Because ILO C. 182 only discusses enforcement to a limited extent, other international standards and practices also are considered as general evaluation guidelines, including from ILO C. 81 and ILO C. 129 on Labor Inspection and Labor Inspection in Agriculture, respectively. To the extent possible, ILAB assesses whether the country has taken these actions:

- Established labor inspection systems, including a functioning labor inspectorate.
- Provided sufficient funding and resources to enforce child labor laws and regulations.
- Employed a sufficient number of inspectors, according to the ILO's technical advice, to enforce the country's child labor laws and regulations.
- Provided sufficient training for inspectors, including initial training for new employees, training on new laws related to child labor, and refresher courses.
- Developed and implemented an adequate labor inspection strategy that allows for different types of on-site inspections of worksites—such as routine, targeted, complaint-driven, and unannounced—and conducted inspections with sufficient frequency and in all relevant sectors.
- Provided sufficient authority to the labor inspectorate to penalize child labor violations and follow through with sanctions where appropriate.
- Published information on specific inspection results and fines or sanctions imposed for violation of child labor laws and regulations, including the worst forms of child labor.

- Established a complaint mechanism for labor violations.
- Set up a reciprocal referral mechanism between labor authorities and social services.

Although ILAB researched and requested law enforcement information on the topics for this year’s report, the information was not available in all cases. For example, in many cases, ILAB did not have enough information to determine whether the number of inspectors was sufficient in the country. Only in certain situations, where a country’s government acknowledged that it did not have a sufficient number of labor inspectors or ILAB obtained information indicating that the number of labor inspectors was insufficient relative to the size of the country’s workforce, did ILAB issue findings of insufficiency. In the latter situation, and in determining whether a finding should be included, ILAB considered the ILO’s technical advice of a ratio of labor inspectors in relation to workers should approach 1:10,000 in industrial market economies, 1:15,000 in industrializing economies, 1:20,000 in transition economies, and 1:40,000 in less developed countries. (19)

In addition, ILO R. 190 states that countries should criminally prohibit the categorical worst forms of child labor as set forth in ILO C. 182 Articles 3(a)–(c). Therefore, the report also assesses whether criminal law enforcement in the country has taken these actions:

- Established criminal investigation systems.
- Provided sufficient funding and resources to enforce the worst forms of child labor laws and regulations.
- Provided sufficient training for investigators, including initial training for new employees, training on new laws related to child labor, and refresher courses.
- Conducted a sufficient number of investigations related to the worst forms of child labor.

- Published information on specific investigation results and violations, prosecutions, and convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.
- Imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.
- Established a reciprocal referral mechanism between criminal authorities and social services.

SECTION IV: COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The fourth section of the country profiles also addresses the third criterion included in the TDA Conference Committee report—whether the country has established “formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor.” (46) This section provides information on key institutions in the country charged with coordinating overall efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms. Although the TDA Conference Committee report speaks only to whether such mechanisms are in place with regard to investigation and complaints of the worst forms of child labor, ILO C. 182, Article 5, states that “[e]ach Member shall, after consultation with employers’ and workers’ organizations, establish or designate appropriate mechanisms to monitor the implementation of the provisions giving effect to this Convention.” ILAB applied this concept of monitoring to all provisions of the convention, not just those directly related to the enforcement of child labor laws. However, because the term monitor is often associated exclusively with enforcement activities, ILAB uses the term coordinate to describe this function.

SECTION V: GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The fifth section of the country profiles provides information on the fourth criterion in the TDA Conference Committee report—whether the country has “a comprehensive policy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.” (46) This section describes a country’s key policies and plans to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

ILAB used the framework provided in ILO R. 190, Article 15(f), which illustrates measures that countries might take to combat the worst forms of child labor, such as “encouraging the development of policies by undertakings to promote the aims of the Convention.” (37) In ILO C. 182 and in comments from the ILO Committee of Experts, the terms programs and plans of action are often used interchangeably. Indeed, in some cases, it is difficult to distinguish among a policy, a plan, or a program. (7) For the TDA Conference Committee report, a policy on child labor is defined as a framework that lays out general principles that are intended to guide a government’s actions on child labor. Although policies may call for the passage of new laws and the establishment of new programs, the actual adoption of laws and program implementation are reported in the “Legal Framework for the Worst Forms of Child Labor” or the “Social Programs to Address Child Labor” sections of the profiles.

Specifically, ILAB assessed whether governments have achieved the following activities:

- Established specific child labor policies, any related development policies that explicitly incorporate the issue of child labor, or any related development policies that do not explicitly target child labor but that could have an impact on the problem. (ILAB determined that because so few governments distinguish between worst forms of child labor and child labor, any policy on child labor, whether targeted toward the worst forms of child labor or not, would be reported).
- Ensured that these policies include specific action plans, assign responsibilities, establish goals, and set timetables.
- Implemented established policies and plans.

SECTION VI: SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

The sixth section of each country profile provides information on the fifth criterion in the TDA Conference Committee report—whether social programs exist in the country “to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor and assist in the removal of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.” (46) This section of the country profiles reports on key programs focused on child labor and the worst forms of child labor because countries often do not distinguish between the two when creating child labor programs. This section of the profiles also reports on programs that focus on child labor specifically, and programs that address poverty, education, and other related matters that could have a beneficial impact on child labor. Only programs launched or implemented during the reporting period are included in this section.

ILAB generally considers the implementation of projects through international organizations to be government efforts because the projects can be carried out only with the consent of the government, and such efforts are sometimes considered part of a country’s national budget.

ILAB applied standards embodied in Articles 6 and 7 of ILO C. 182 to assess country programs to combat child labor. ILO R. 190 also is considered to determine the types of efforts that governments might make, such as giving special attention to girls, providing training to employers and workers, and raising awareness. With this in mind, ILAB assesses whether governments have taken the following actions:

- Participated in any social programs to combat child labor, including programs aimed at directly preventing and withdrawing children from participation in child labor.

- Implemented social programs with sufficient resources to combat the scope and magnitude of the child labor problem at issue.
- Targeted at-risk populations.
- Implemented social programs successfully and sustainably.

SECTION VII: SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

The last section of the country profiles is a set of suggested actions. These suggested actions serve as a roadmap of efforts that individual countries can follow to more fully address the worst forms of child labor. The year in which a suggested action was first provided is listed in the table, followed by every year in which the action was included in the report and not addressed.

FRAMEWORK FOR COUNTRY ASSESSMENTS

OBJECTIVE FOR COUNTRY ASSESSMENTS

ILAB is using an assessment tool to clearly indicate and highlight the status of efforts by each country which benefits from U.S. trade preferences to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

RESEARCH QUESTION GUIDING COUNTRY ASSESSMENTS

The research question that ILAB is asking in its assessment of an individual beneficiary country is “To what extent did the beneficiary country advance efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period?”

SCOPE OF COUNTRY ASSESSMENT

As discussed, the TDA Conference Committee report outlines the following six criteria that the President is asked to consider in determining whether a country is implementing its international commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor:

- Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations proscribing the worst forms of child labor;
- Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations for the implementation and enforcement of such measures;
- Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints related to allegations of the worst forms of child labor;
- Whether the country has a comprehensive policy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor;
- Whether social programs exist in the country to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor, and assist in the removal of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor; and
- Whether the country is making continual progress toward eliminating the worst forms of child labor.

The country assessment tool is intended to inform the sixth criterion—whether the country is “making continual progress toward eliminating the worst forms of child labor.” In preparing the assessments, ILAB evaluated the first five criteria, grouping them into the same five areas addressed in the individual country profiles: laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs. The assessment is based on an analysis of the status of each country’s efforts in these five areas considered as a whole, and compared to the country’s prior efforts. The assessments do not take into account the impact of government actions on the problem, or whether they have a documented effect on eliminating child labor. This type of analysis would require rigorous impact evaluations and assessments based on data from solid research designs, which is beyond the scope of this report. It is important to note that the assessment is not intended to reflect a determination of “whether a country has implemented its commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.” That determination is reserved for the President.

METHOD FOR DETERMINING A COUNTRY ASSESSMENT

Each country profile in this report identifies a set of suggested actions for governments to take to advance its efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The implementation—or lack of implementation—of these suggested actions establishes a baseline or point of reference from which to assess a country’s advancement. These actions, in combination with other efforts undertaken by a country, were considered when assessing the level of a country’s advancement during the current reporting period in comparison with the previous reporting period.

After ILAB identified and assessed a country’s efforts, we considered the significance of the efforts undertaken during the reporting period—actions that could have an impact on eliminating the worst forms of child labor, and the extent to which these efforts addressed the first five TDA criteria, outlined above, in a limited or meaningful manner during the reporting period. In addition, ILAB reviewed whether the government established or failed to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice that delayed advancement in eliminating child labor. Finally, ILAB also examined whether countries had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in forced child labor in more than isolated incidents at the national, regional, or local level.

To promote consistency and transparency, and to operationalize these first five TDA criteria, each country’s efforts were analyzed according to a uniform set of guidance questions related to the five general areas of laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs. Detailed information is given in “TDA Guidance Questions.”

Appendix 9

TDA Guidance Questions

ASSESSMENT LEVEL

TDA CONFERENCE REPORT CRITERION:

- Whether the country is making continual progress toward eliminating the worst forms of child labor

GUIDANCE QUESTIONS

- What efforts did the country make to address child labor during the year?
- Has the government instituted minimally acceptable laws and regulations, mechanisms, and programs to address and prevent child labor?
- Did the government of the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice that delayed advancement in the elimination of child labor?*
- Was the government of the country complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents?*

PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

GUIDANCE QUESTIONS

- Were government officials complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents?*
- What are the prevalent types of child labor in each country?
- Has the government conducted research on the prevalence and nature of the worst forms of child labor and made the results publicly available?
- Are specific populations vulnerable to child labor due to gender, race, ethnicity, origin, disability, language, or socio-economic status?

- Were there events during the year that destabilized the country, such as armed conflict; health epidemics and natural disasters; or other social, economic, and political crises?

* Note: A “yes” response likely means that the country will automatically receive an assessment of Minimal Advancement or No Advancement.

LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA CONFERENCE REPORT CRITERION:

- Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations proscribing the worst forms of child labor

GUIDANCE QUESTIONS

- Did the laws meet international standards?
- Is the minimum age for admission to employment in line with ILO C. 138?
- Is the minimum age for admission to hazardous work in line with ILO C 138 and C. 182?
- Are criminal prohibitions on forced child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and use of children in illicit activities in line with ILO C. 182?
- Is the prohibition against recruitment of children under age 18 for state compulsory military service in line with ILO C. 182 and the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict?
- Is the minimum age for recruitment into state voluntary military service in line with the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict?
- Is the prohibition against recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups in line with ILO Convention 182?

- Does the age up to which education is compulsory align with the minimum age for work and meet the standards in ILO C. 138?
- Is the provision of free public basic education in line with ILO C. 182?
- If the law permits light work, is the minimum age in line with ILO C. 138 and are there appropriate safeguards as outlined in ILO Convention 138?
- Has the country ratified ILO C. 182 and C. 138, as well as other relevant conventions and protocols?
- If the country's constitution and laws are not compliant with international standards embodied in ILO C. 138 and C. 182, has there been any change in the constitution or laws that brings the country closer to being fully compliant?
- Are laws related to child labor available to the public?
- Did the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law that delayed its advancement in the elimination of child labor?*

* Note: A “yes” response likely means that the country will automatically receive an assessment of Minimal Advancement or No Advancement.

ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA CONFERENCE REPORT CRITERIA:

- Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations for the implementation and enforcement of such measures
- Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor

In this section of the country profiles, ILAB analyzes whether, or to what degree, a country has defined enforcement agency roles, conducted routine and unannounced inspections, and investigated and addressed complaints related to allegations of the worst forms of child labor. The analysis is based on the following guidance questions.

GUIDANCE QUESTIONS

- Does the country have a labor inspectorate?
- Does the country have labor inspectors? Are its labor inspectors public servants as opposed to contractors?
- What was the amount of funding for the labor inspectorate? Was there an increase or decrease in the funding and resources to enforce child labor laws and regulations, and were these resources adequate given the incidence of child labor in the country?
- Was there an increase or reduction in the number of labor inspectors to enforce child labor laws and regulations, and was the number of labor inspectors adequate given the size of the country's workforce?
- Did the country offer initial training to new labor inspectors and investigators, including specialized training on child labor; training on new laws related to child labor, including its worst forms; and refresher courses?
- Did the labor inspectorate fail to conduct labor inspections during the reporting period?*
- Does the labor inspectorate lack legal authorization to conduct unannounced inspections?*
- Did the inspectorate conduct unannounced inspections?
- Did the government develop and implement a labor inspection strategy that allowed for different types of on-site inspections of worksites, such as routine, targeted, complaint-driven, or unannounced?
- Were inspections conducted with sufficient frequency and in all relevant sectors?
- Did the government provide the labor inspectorate with sufficient authority to sanction child labor violations?

- Did the country make available information on labor law enforcement efforts related to child labor, including the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites and by desk review, the number of child labor violations found, and the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected?
- Does the government have a mechanism for filing and resolving complaints expeditiously regarding child labor?
- Does a reciprocal referral mechanism exist between labor and criminal authorities and social services?
- Did the government investigate, prosecute, convict, and sentence cases of violations of criminal child labor statutes, including public officials who participate in or facilitate the worst forms of child labor?
- Did the government impose penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor?
- Did the country make available information on criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, including the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions obtained, and penalties imposed? Did the government establish or improve a process for information sharing among enforcement authorities?
- Did the government ensure that all children engaged in the worst forms of child labor were protected from inappropriate incarceration, penalties, or physical harm?
- Did the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law enforcement practice that delayed its advancement in the elimination of child labor?*

* Note: A “yes” response likely means that the country will automatically receive an assessment of Minimal Advancement or No Advancement.

COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA CONFERENCE REPORT CRITERION:

- Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor

In this section, ILAB analyzes whether, or to what degree, the country has institutions charged with coordinating overall efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms. The analysis is based on the following guidance questions.

GUIDANCE QUESTIONS

- Does the government have an agency or committee created to coordinate government efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor? Did it create such an agency or committee during the reporting period?
- Does the agency or committee address all sectors of child labor that are prevalent in the country, or does it address only certain sectors?
- Did such an agency or committee meet regularly and take actions, or did it not meet regularly and take few or no actions?

GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA CONFERENCE REPORT CRITERION:

- Whether the country has a comprehensive policy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor

GUIDANCE QUESTIONS

- Did the government establish any new policies or plans that specifically address the worst forms of child labor or any one of the worst forms of child labor?

- Did the government incorporate the worst forms of child labor specifically as an issue to be addressed in poverty reduction, development, educational, or other social policies, such as poverty reduction strategy papers?
- Did the government establish poverty reduction, development, educational, or other social policies, such as poverty reduction strategy papers, that did not explicitly address the worst forms of child labor or any one of the worst forms of child labor, but that might have had an impact on it or them?
- If the country established any of the above policies or plans, do they designate responsibilities, establish goals, and set timelines?
- Did the government effectively implement existing policies and plans?
- Did the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental policy that delayed its advancement in the elimination of child labor?*

* Note: A “yes” response likely means that the country will automatically receive an assessment of Minimal Advancement or No Advancement.

SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

TDA CONFERENCE REPORT CRITERION:

- Whether social programs exist in the country to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor, and assist in the removal of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor

GUIDANCE QUESTIONS

- Did the government fund or participate in any new or ongoing programs that aim to eliminate or prevent the worst forms of child labor?

- Did the government fund or participate in any social protection programs that could reasonably be expected to have an impact on child labor? Were any of the country’s programs shown, through research, to have had an impact on child labor?
- Did the government make efforts to reduce children’s vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor by addressing factors such as
 - country- and region-specific practices that make children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, and
 - barriers to education, such as a lack of teachers; lack of schools or inadequate facilities; lack of infrastructure to access schools; lack of transportation; violence, including physical and sexual abuse; birth registration requirements; and the charging of school fees.
- Are the country’s programs sufficient to combat particular forms of child labor, considering the scope and magnitude of those problems?
- Do the programs provide services directly to children?
- Do the programs adequately target at-risk populations?
- Were the programs fully funded?
- Are the programs meeting their goals?
- Are the program efforts sustainable?
- Did existing government programs improve or worsen in quality or effectiveness compared with the previous year?
- Did the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental social program or other practice that delayed its advancement in the elimination of child labor?*

* Note: A “yes” response likely means that the country will automatically receive an assessment of Minimal Advancement or No Advancement.

Farahedee School for boys and girls was refurbished by UNICEF. Now, 1,500 children attend the school, where they take classes and receive Mine Risk Education sessions. While many of the children are from east Mosul, increasing pressure has been put on the school as an influx of students from west Mosul have arrived and enrolled at the school. Iraq, June 12, 2017.

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2018, Afghanistan is receiving an assessment of no advancement. Although Afghanistan made some efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, government officials are complicit in the use of forced commercial sexual exploitation of boys through the practice of bacha bazi. The government opened a juvenile rehabilitation center for children previously engaged in armed conflict and provided services to 34 children. It also opened child protection units in 27 provinces, which helped prevent the recruitment of 364 children into the Afghan National Police. The Child Protection Action Network provided educational and social services to at-risk internally displaced families and removed 50 children from mines where they engaged in child labor and enrolled them in schools. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, the government was also complicit in the use of forced child labor.

Afghanistan is receiving an assessment of no advancement because government officials, particularly officers of the Afghan Local Police and Afghan National Army, are complicit in the practice of bacha bazi and, unlike in previous years, did not make meaningful efforts to address this crime during the reporting period. Afghan Local Police officers and members of the military continued to recruit children for the purpose of bacha bazi and, in at least one case, police sexually assaulted a boy who sought police assistance to report his exploitation in bacha bazi. The government lacked the political will to enforce laws prohibiting bacha bazi and, despite receiving more than 63 cases of bacha bazi among Afghan military and police, did not initiate any prosecutions or achieve any convictions for bacha bazi. Children in Afghanistan also engage in other worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict and forced labor in the production of bricks and carpets. Afghanistan's Labor Inspectorate is not authorized to impose penalties for child labor violations, and the government lacks sufficient programs to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Afghanistan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict and the forced production of bricks and carpets. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Afghanistan. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are subject to commercial sexual exploitation throughout the country. Of significant concern is the practice of bacha bazi, or boy play, in which men—including national and local police commanders, military members, tribal leaders, warlords, and mafia heads—force boys to provide social and sexual entertainment. (46,51,52) In many cases, these boys are dressed in female clothing, used as dancers at parties and ceremonies, and sexually exploited. (46) According to the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission, the practice exists in all provinces of the country. (5,53,54) A national inquiry conducted in 2014 found that most boys engaged in bacha bazi were between ages 13 and 16, and that 60 percent of them had been subjected to physical violence, confinement, and threats of death. (46) Boys are sold into the practice by their families or are abducted on the streets, including by local police commanders. (47,48,54) Members of the Afghan National Police, the Afghan Local Police, Afghan National Army, and the Afghan Border Police, exploit boys for bacha bazi. Boys who work for these government officials as tea servers or cooks in police camps are vulnerable to being exploited for bacha bazi. (3-5,46-49,51,53,55-57,39) NGOs reported that Afghan security forces and pro-government militias—some of whom may have received direct financial support from the government—recruited boys specifically for use in bacha bazi. (5) Police and education officials acknowledged that some teachers coerce male students to perform commercial sex acts to pass exams. (5)

Afghan children are trafficked both domestically and internationally. Some Afghan traffickers subjected Afghan boys to bacha bazi in Germany, Hungary, Macedonia, and Serbia. (5) Afghan boys are used for forced labor in agriculture and construction abroad, and girls are used for commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work in destination countries, primarily Iran and Pakistan. (49) Children were trafficked to settle their family’s debt,

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

including for the production of bricks and illicit drugs. (2,49) Some Afghan girls are subjected to forced marriage in exchange for money for their families. (58) Girls from Iran, Pakistan, and China are trafficked to Afghanistan for commercial sexual exploitation. (58) Some Islamic State fighters kidnapped, raped, and forcibly married Afghan girls. (40) There were widespread reports of child laborers being subjected to sexual violence. (12,14,19,33)

Widespread violence and lack of economic opportunities lead some Afghan children to leave Afghanistan. (59-63) Some children go to Iran specifically to engage in child labor and do not attend school. (64,65) According to the UN, some Afghan refugee children in Iran engage in child labor and do not attend school. (30) The Iranian government and the Islamic Revolutionary Guards Corps continued to coerce Afghan children as young as age 12 to fight in Iranian-led and -funded Shia militias deployed to Syria by threatening them with arrest and deportation to Afghanistan. (5) Boys, especially those traveling unaccompanied, are particularly vulnerable to trafficking. (49,65,66) Some Afghan boys are subjected to sex trafficking in Greece after paying high fees to be smuggled into the country. (5,49,66)

Non-state groups, such as the Islamic State in the Khorasan Province, the Taliban, the Tehrik-i-Taliban, and pro-government militias, recruited children to engage in activities such as planting improvised explosive devices, gathering intelligence, and fighting. (3-5,40,41,67) Armed groups subjected children to sexual violence, as well as bacha bazi. (68,69) The Taliban recruited and forced children to attend madrassas in Afghanistan and Pakistan, where they received religious and military training. Some families received cash payments in exchange for sending their children to the Taliban-run schools. (67) The UN verified 38 cases of recruitment and use of children by non-state armed groups, and 5 cases of recruitment by the government in 2018, consisting of 4 cases of recruitment by the Afghan Local Police, and 1 by the Afghan National Police. (4) The Afghan National Army, National Directorate of Security, and Afghan Border Police also recruited and used children in both combat and non-combat roles, although to a lesser extent. Afghan National Army soldiers as young as age 13 were killed, wounded, and captured by Taliban insurgents. (5) Low birth registration and falsified identity documents contribute to the problem because it makes the determination of a recruit's age difficult. (65,70,71) Observers reported that some officials accepted bribes to produce false identity documents that indicated the recipient boys were more than 18 years old. (49)

In 2018, more than 805,000 refugee and undocumented Afghans returned to Afghanistan: 773,000 from Iran and 32,000 from Pakistan. (72) Many of these returnees are unaccompanied minors. (5) Some deportee children are subject to sexual and physical violence or forced labor while in deportation process camps, particularly in Iran. (67,73,74) An indeterminate number of children were also returned from Europe, including those whose asylum application had been rejected. (75,76) Such children are vulnerable to recruitment by armed groups and traffickers. These children have difficulties enrolling in school, for example, due to the lack of necessary identity documents. (3,5,17,76) For example, about half of returnee children from Pakistan do not attend school and are also particularly vulnerable to child labor, including debt bondage in brick factories. (30,50,77-79) Some individuals who facilitate repatriation take returnees to brick factories and keep them in debt bondage to repay their transportation costs. (51) International organizations noted that traffickers specifically targeted these returnees for forced labor upon return to Afghanistan. (5)

During the reporting period, a severe drought in the northern and western part of the country led to the displacement of approximately 266,000 people, including 182,000 in Badghis and 84,000 in Herat. (80,81) Many of these IDPs were food insecure and resorted to child labor or selling daughters for marriage as a way of settling family debt. (3,81-83) Overall, there were more than 343,000 new IDPs during the reporting period. (84) Child labor is particularly prevalent among urban IDPs, and they are vulnerable to recruitment by armed groups. (3,20)

In 2018, UNICEF reported that approximately 3.7 million school-age children are out of school in the country, 60 percent of whom are girls. (85) Barriers to education for children include displacement of populations due to conflict, the use of schools as military bases, attacks on schools, long distances from schools, school-related fees, lack of security, and lack of identity documentation. (20,85-87) Girls face additional barriers to education including discrimination, lack of hygiene facilities, shortage of female teachers, and not being allowed by parents to go to school. (17,85,87) Schools do not provide sufficient services to children with disabilities. (30) Some nomad, or kuchi, children do not attend school because they travel to tend livestock. (30)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Afghanistan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Afghanistan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including debt bondage.

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

A new Penal Code entered into force in February 2018. It explicitly prohibits and sets penalties for the use of male or transgender children for bacha bazi. (30,90) However, it does not include criminal penalties for the use of female children in prostitution and, therefore, does not meet the international standard on commercial sexual exploitation of children.

A Law on Protection of Child Rights was adopted and entered into force in 2019. The law reiterates some of the minimum age protections. (97)

Afghan law does not sufficiently criminalize forced labor or debt bondage.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MoLSA) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Child Protection Action Network (CPAN)	Operates as a coalition of government agencies, NGOs, and community and religious leaders. Receives complaints of child labor; investigates such cases, and refers them to NGO and government shelters that provide social services, coordinate, and provide case management. (3,98) Not all provinces have a CPAN. The capacity of CPANs is not uniform or based on need, and the type of intervention depends on members of a particular CPAN and resources available. (3)
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MoLSA)	Responds to complaints of child labor; child trafficking, and child sexual exploitation; refers cases to the Attorney General's Office and NGO shelters; and operates a shelter for trafficking victims in Kabul. (3)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforces laws related to child trafficking, the use of children in illicit activities, and child sexual exploitation. (3)
National Directorate of Security	Identifies human trafficking victims and refers these cases to the Ministry of the Interior. (3)
Attorney General's Office	Investigates and prosecutes human trafficking, abduction, and sexual exploitation cases. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Afghanistan took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of MoLSA that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Unknown (30)	Yes (3)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (99)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (30)	No (3)

Labor inspectors do not have legal authority to inspect worksites for compliance with child labor laws or impose penalties for non-compliance. (100,101) However, CPANs, of which MoLSA is a component, can respond to complaints of child labor; investigate cases, and issue warnings or refer criminal cases to the Attorney General's Office. A person wishing to file a complaint must specify the legal statutes for labor violations in writing. (98,99)

In 2018, MoLSA had 27 inspector positions, 21 of which were filled. (3) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Afghanistan's workforce, which includes more than 7.9 million workers. (102) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Afghanistan would employ about 200 labor inspectors. (100,103,104) Government officials, NGOs, and UNICEF acknowledge that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient. (100)

Business owners are not required to allow unannounced inspections. (100) Based on available information, MoLSA inspects only public organizations, such as government ministries, that are registered with MoLSA, but not private businesses. (3,30,98) Many forms of child labor occur in the informal sector. (12) Government officials and other stakeholders stated that the government lacked resources, including training, for enforcement of child labor laws. (3)

During the reporting period, CPANs removed 50 children from coal mines in Baghlan and Panjshir provinces and enrolled them in schools. Although CPANs could refer children to social services through MoLSA, and they did so in 2018 on an ad hoc basis, there was no formal process for reciprocal referral between law enforcement and social services. (3) CPANs also mapped and monitored IDP families, providing educational, nutritional, and social services to families at risk of child labor. (83)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Afghanistan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (30)	Unknown (3)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (58)	Unknown (3)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (30)	Yes (67)
Number of Investigations	10 (30)	Unknown (3)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (30)	Unknown (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (30)	0 (3)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (30)	0 (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	N/A
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (30)	Yes (67)

During the reporting period, the National Directorate for Security investigated 29 cases of human trafficking, the Ministry of the Interior investigated 58 separate cases, and the Attorney General's Office investigated 64 cases. It is unknown how many of these cases may have involved children. (67)

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government prosecuted no cases related to the worst forms of child labor in 2018. (67) Moreover, the government did not consistently or adequately prosecute officials for bacha bazi and acknowledged the pervasive lack of accountability. (5,54,67) However, some government officials contributed to the problem of bacha bazi during the reporting period. (3,49,52,57) An international organization reported receiving 63 complaints of bacha bazi by Afghan officials since December 2017. (54) Despite this, individuals who subjected boys to bacha bazi were not prosecuted. (3,49,52,57) Observers noted that perpetrators of bacha bazi often paid bribes to, or had relationships with, law enforcement, prosecutors, or judges who protected them from prosecution. (5) In one case in 2018, police sexually assaulted a boy who reported his own exploitation in bacha bazi. (54)

Moreover, victims of human trafficking were routinely prosecuted and convicted of crimes. (67,106) Male victims of child trafficking, especially those engaged in bacha bazi or armed conflict, were sometimes referred to juvenile detention or rehabilitation facilities on criminal charges, instead of appropriate victim support services. (5,49,107,108) The government arrested, detained, and prosecuted for terrorism-related crimes some children younger than age 12 who had been forcibly recruited by non-state armed groups. NGOs reported that authorities housed some child trafficking victims in juvenile detention centers, sometimes for several years. (5) Such children are considered criminals even after being transferred to rehabilitation centers. (54) The UN reported that some of these children were subjected to torture and ill treatment. (108,109)

In 2018, the High Commission for Combating Crimes of Abduction and Human Trafficking launched a training manual on countering human trafficking to raise awareness about the difference between human trafficking and human smuggling, techniques for identifying and interviewing victims, and the roles and responsibilities of stakeholders and service providers. (67,105) Although information was unavailable for 2018, government officials had previously stated that they lacked equipment and transportation to carry out investigations. (55) Based on available information, security agencies and the Ministry of Justice did not have a reciprocal referral mechanism to ensure that child victims of human trafficking and other worst forms of child labor receive social services. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
High Commission for Combating Crimes of Abduction and Human Trafficking	Addresses human trafficking in general, including child trafficking. Led by the Ministry of Justice; comprises nine ministries, such as MoLSA, and five other entities. (30,91) The High Commission met only once in 2018, but its technical committee met 11 times. (5) It published a training manual and conducted training on the manual on countering human trafficking. (67,105) The High Commission also carried out 450 awareness-raising programs, disseminated through TV, radio, and newspapers, reaching approximately 20 million individuals. (67)
Inter-Ministerial Steering Committee on Children and Armed Conflict	Coordinates efforts to eliminate the recruitment and use of child soldiers. Led by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and monitored by the UN and NGOs. (30) The Committee remained active during the reporting period. (98)

Although there are two sectoral mechanisms to coordinate government efforts to combat trafficking in persons and child soldiering, the government has not established an overarching coordination mechanism to address all child labor present in the country, including forced labor, debt bondage, and commercial sexual exploitation of children.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that may hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Afghanistan

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Labor Policy	Includes objectives to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, such as those involving hazardous activities; pass legislation prohibiting child labor; and effectively enforce child labor laws. (110) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Action Plan for the Prevention of Underage Recruitment	Aims to prevent the recruitment of minors into the Afghan National Security Forces, including the Afghan National Army, the Afghan National Police, the National Directory of Security, and pro-government militia groups. Seeks to ensure the release of children under age 18 from the armed forces and facilitate their reintegration into families and communities. (111) In 2018, the government prevented recruitment of children into the Afghan National Police. (4)
National Strategy for Children at Risk	Creates a framework to provide social services to at-risk children and their families, and guides donors in contributing toward a comprehensive child protection system. Focuses specifically on working children, trafficked children, child soldiers, and other children affected by conflict. (113) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Policy for Protection of Children in Armed Conflict	Reiterates the commitment to protect children from recruitment and sexual exploitation in the armed forces, and provides services to children rescued from engagement in armed conflict. Assigns the Ministry of Defense and the Afghan National Police with monitoring that children's rights are safeguarded and coordinating with CPANs and the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission. (114) In 2018, the Ministry of Justice opened a juvenile rehabilitation center in Kabul for children previously engaged in armed conflict. (98,115)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate coverage of all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects to address child labor	USDOL-funded projects that aim to build capacity of government law enforcement officials and address child labor in the carpet industry. Includes Project to Prevent Child Labor in Home-Based Carpet Production in Afghanistan, a $2 million project implemented by GoodWeave; and Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor, a capacity-building project implemented by ILO in at least 11 countries to build local and national capacity of the government to address child labor. (116,117) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Age Verification of New Afghan National Security Forces Recruits†	Joint government and UNICEF program that operates child protection units in the Afghan National Security Forces recruitment centers. Aims to ensure that new recruits meet the minimum age requirement of age 18 by carefully screening applicants. (118) The process includes an ID check and a requirement that at least two community elders vouch that a recruit is age 18 or older and is eligible to serve. (119) In 2018, the Ministry of the Interior established 5 new child protection units, totaling 27 units for the country. (5) During the reporting period, the child protection units prevented the recruitment of 364 children into the Afghan National Police. (4)
Juvenile Rehabilitation Center*†	Center in Kabul that provides educational, social, psychological support, and vocational training to children who were previously engaged in armed conflict. (41,115) In 2018, the Center was opened as the first of its kind in the country, providing services to 34 children ages 12–17. (115)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Afghanistan.

There is no evidence of programs designed specifically to prevent and eliminate child labor in all relevant sectors, such as agriculture or forced child labor in the production of bricks. Moreover, the government acknowledged the dearth of shelters and government resources for victims of human trafficking. At times, the government placed child trafficking victims in orphanages, and some orphanages subjected children to human trafficking. (5) Some boys who are victims of human trafficking were arrested, and some were sent to juvenile rehabilitation centers due to the lack of shelters. (51,56)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Afghanistan (Table 11).

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that forced labor and debt bondage are criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2018
	Create criminal penalties for the use of any child in prostitution.	2017 – 2018
Enforcement	Establish Child Protection Action Networks in all of Afghanistan's 34 provinces and ensure that they can provide all services needed by victimized children.	2016 – 2018
	Track and publish information on labor inspections, including the labor inspectorate funding, number and type of child labor inspections, and number of violations found.	2015 – 2018
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for violations of Afghan law.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive training on child labor.	2011 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2011 – 2018
	Simplify the child labor complaint mechanism to allow oral complaints, and eliminate or waive the requirement that the individual filing a complaint must specify the legal grounds for the violation.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate has legal authority to enforce child labor laws, including by legally requiring businesses to comply with unannounced inspections.	2014 – 2018
	Publish data on criminal investigation, including the number of violations for all crimes involving the worst forms of child labor.	2011 – 2018
	Prosecute and convict individuals who use children for engagement in the worst forms of child labor, including bacha bazi and child soldiering.	2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators are available and receive resources, including equipment and transportation, to enforce criminal child labor laws.	2012 – 2018
	Ensure that child victims of human trafficking and other worst forms of child labor are correctly identified as victims, and referred to appropriate social services, and not detained or subject to mistreatment or torture.	2014 – 2018
	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor, including its worst forms.	2013 – 2018
	Government Policies	Implement the National Labor Policy and the National Strategy for Children at Risk.
Social Programs	Institute a birth registration campaign.	2015 – 2018
	Institute programs to increase access to education and to improve security in schools, especially for girls.	2014 – 2018
	Institute programs to address child labor in all relevant sectors, such as agriculture and bonded child labor in brick kilns.	2009 – 2018
	Provide financial support to open shelters for victims of human trafficking and to ensure that sufficient shelter services are available for male child trafficking victims.	2010 – 2018

In 2018, Albania made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government enacted the Decision of the Council of Ministers No. 91, which establishes rules and procedures to follow when a child's rights have been violated and strengthens the role of the State Agency for Rights and Protection of Children. Moreover, it adopted the Decision of the Council of Ministers No. 353 to regulate the functioning of the cross-sectorial technical group to adequately address child protection needs. The government also increased the number of child protection units, trained police officers on countering child trafficking, and volunteered to be a Pathfinder Country for Alliance 8.7 in order to expedite the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals related to eliminating child labor and human trafficking by 2025. However, children in Albania engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and mining chromium. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, the law does not explicitly prohibit using, procuring, or offering children for illicit activities. In addition, the labor inspectorate needs to be strengthened so it can inspect all sectors in which child labor is known to occur.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Albania engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and mining chromium. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1-4,5) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Albania.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,3,5,8,10,20,23,24,28-30)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Albania lacks recent, comprehensive data on children engaging in the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture and construction. (3) Children are trafficked internally in Albania and abroad to neighboring and EU countries for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, including forced begging. (2,3,5) Internal child trafficking and forced begging have increased in recent years, particularly during the tourist season. (3,5,31) Street children, especially those from Roma and Balkan Egyptian communities, are particularly vulnerable to becoming victims of human trafficking, in some cases because they lack adult supervision. (3,5,20,31,32)

In addition, children in Albania informally collect chromium around mines where debris from mine tunnels are found, and they sometimes carry heavy rocks for miles. (3,4,9-11,16,17,33) The work is not coerced, and parents are aware that their children collect chromium. (3,10,11,33)

During the reporting period, some children, particularly those located in the city of Shkodër, were unable to access school due to their families’ involvement in blood feuds based on the Kanun, a set of traditional Albanian laws. (3,34) Children were confined to their homes due to fear of revenge attacks. (34)

Although Albania allows children without a birth certificate to enroll in public schools, some children from Roma and Balkan Egyptian families and refugees may face obstacles in obtaining birth certificates, which may affect their access to social services and education. (3,35,36) Children not in school are more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Some Roma and Balkan Egyptian children also experienced financial hurdles to accessing education, such as transportation. (3,10,24,36) Discrimination in schools and being physically separated in classrooms are also challenges faced by Roma and Balkan Egyptian students. (24,36)

Some migrant and refugee children from Syria, Algeria, and Libya faced difficulties accessing education due to language barriers. (3) Children with disabilities also experienced hurdles to accessing inclusive education. (3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Albania has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Albania's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 28 of the Law for the Protection of the Rights of the Child (38)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 22 of the Law on Pre-University Education System (44)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 57 of the Constitution of the Republic of Albania; Article 5 of the Law on Pre-University Education System (44,45)

* No conscription (43)

In 2019, the government approved Law 69/2018, which addresses statelessness, including lack of registration or absence of parents' documentation. The law empowers the courts to solve registration issues, including for Roma and Balkan Egyptian communities, and requires Child Protection Units (CPUs) to initiate registration procedures. (3,46)

During the reporting period, the Decision of the Council of Ministers No. 91 was passed, which sets the rules and procedures for when a child's rights have been violated and aims to strengthen the role of the State Agency for Rights and Protection of Children. (3,47) The government passed the Decisions of the Council of Ministers No. 499 and No. 578 regarding the identification and referral process for victims or potential victims of human trafficking, including exploited children. (3,48,49) In addition, Albania adopted the Decision of the Council of Ministers No. 54 to regulate the functioning of the National Council for the Rights and Protection of the Child and enable the Council to undertake actions in line with the UN CRC. (3,50) Lastly, the Decision of the Council of Ministers No. 353 was adopted to regulate the functioning of a cross-sectoral technical group to adequately address child protection needs. (3,51)

The law in Albania does not explicitly prohibit using, procuring, or offering children under age 18 for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. Article 129 of the Criminal Code only prohibits inducing or encouraging children under age 14 to participate in criminality. (42) In addition, although Albania has a list of activities in which light work may be permitted, it does not limit the number of hours for light work. (37,38)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Finance, Economy, and Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Finance, Economy, and Labor	Enforces laws related to child labor and hazardous work, and monitor the quality of social services provided through the State Labor Inspectorate. (3) Receives, documents, and responds to child labor complaints through the State Social Services Agency. (3) Child Protection Units (CPUs) are the responsible agencies at the local level. (3)
Ministry of Health and Social Care	Develops policies and laws related to child protection. (3)
Ministry of Interior	Enforces all laws, including laws related to the worst forms of child labor through protection officers. (10,22) Coordinates the work of the 12 illicit human trafficking sections in the Regional Police Directorate through the General Directorate of State Police. (3) Establishes the government's policy on combating human trafficking through the State Committee Against Trafficking in Persons, chaired by the Interior Minister. (52)
Office of the Prosecutor General	Investigates and prosecutes child trafficking cases through the Serious Crimes Prosecution Office. (23,53)
Child Protection Units (CPUs)	Identify at-risk children, take case referrals from enforcement agencies, and conduct initial evaluations of each case at the municipal level. Manages cases of at-risk children and refer them to appropriate social services. (23,54,55) Coordinates the assistance of an ad hoc technical group with social services, police, health, education, justice, and NGOs. (3) Every municipality or administrative unit with at least 3,000 children is required to have at least 1 CPU. (10)

The number of CPUs increased from 221 in 2017 to 235 in 2018. (3,19,56,57) However, CPUs lack communication with the State Labor Inspectorate and Social Services (SLISS) and do not possess adequate knowledge of child labor issues. (18-20)

During the reporting period, the government reclassified police positions to focus on specific criminal cases related to minors. (3) However, NGOs alleged that the Ministry of Interior focused more on issues related to judicial and police reform than on child trafficking and migration. (3,32)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Albania took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Finance, Economy, and Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including inspection planning and human resource allocation for all relevant sectors in which child labor is known to occur.

During the summer tourist season, the inspections focus on child labor in tourist areas. (21,58) The SLISS can inspect all registered private entities but cannot inspect private homes, private farms, or unregistered businesses. (3,21) The SLISS has an inspection plan, but in 2018 it did not include other sectors in which child labor is known to occur, specifically the agricultural sector, wholesale and retail trade, hotel restaurants, and mining. (58,59)

There is no dedicated referral mechanism for child labor unless it relates to child trafficking and protection. (3,60) If a child is trafficked for labor exploitation, the case is referred to the police and state social services by the agency that detected the violation. The case may also be referred to CPUs, which connect the child to social services. (3,49,51)

The government noted that the 2018 budget did not cover all resources needed for labor inspectors, such as vehicles and office space. (3,21,59) According to the SLISS, the number of labor inspectors was insufficient, given that only 5 percent of workplaces were inspected in 2018. Although labor inspectors received training during the reporting period, NGOs and the SLISS commented on the lack of specialized skills and understaffing of SLISS employees. (3,21,31,59,61) In addition, the SLISS lacks clear anti-human trafficking jurisdiction, which may have allowed some businesses to continue using forced labor. (31)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Albania took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating human resources.

During the reporting period, police officers received trainings on child protection and human trafficking, especially in the context of migration flows through the Western Balkans. (3) In addition, 180 police officers were trained to handle cases involving minors, and the European Border and Coast Guard Agency and the IOM held trainings on countering human trafficking. (3)

In 2018, a source reported that the anti-trafficking police had sufficient resources. (31) NGOs, however, noted that due to police turnover, frequent training for police officers is needed to improve identification of child trafficking victims and street children, including child beggars trafficked from neighboring countries. (2,31,62)

If a child is trafficked for labor exploitation, the agency identifying the child refers the child to the police and state social services and then to an anti-trafficking shelter. (3,10) Standard operating procedures (SOPs) exist to identify and refer victims of trafficking, including children. In 2018, SOPs were reviewed to align with the new legal framework and institutional changes. (31)

Sources reported that border police did not consistently identify human trafficking victims from Kosovo and failed to identify migrants or other potential victims. (18,20,31) In addition, gaps exist in the screening of minors, including among children traveling to and from neighboring countries. (18,20,31,62)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
State Agency for Rights and Protection of Children	Oversees implementation of the government's child rights protection policies, including monitoring the National Action Plan for the Identification and Protection of Children in Street Situations. (22,24) Manages cases of at-risk children and refers them to appropriate social services. (23,54,55) Sanctions those who fail to protect children from violence and exploitation. (54) Under the new law on children's rights and protection, coordinates local and central structures on health, security, and education of children. (3)
Office of the National Coordinator for the Fight Against Trafficking in Human Beings (ONAC)	Coordinates all antitrafficking efforts in Albania. Oversees 12 regional anti-human trafficking committees that carry out local action plans in cooperation with civil society partners. (24) Leads data collection and report writing for the National Database for Human Trafficking Victims/Potential Victims. (24) Runs the Closed Case Task Force with the Serious Crimes Prosecution Office and Albanian State Police. (2)
Ad-Hoc Cross-Sectorial Technical Groups (CTGs)	Addresses child protection cases in municipalities with more than 30,000 children. CTGs include representatives from the police, social services, education, health, justice, and NGOs. (3) Council of Ministers Decision 353 defines the roles and responsibilities of CTGs regarding strengthening local-level coordination. (3,51)
National Referral Mechanism	Coordinates the identification, protection, referral, and rehabilitation of trafficking victims between government and civil society organizations. (63) Chaired by the Ministry of the Interior's ONAC vis-à-vis an agreement signed by 13 government agencies. (3,63,64) Met four times in 2018. (31)

The Closed Case Task Force did not meet in 2018 due to government reorganization. (32) Coordination among the SLISS and the Albanian State Police has traditionally been sporadic. (18,65)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementing a new national child labor action plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for Combating Trafficking in Persons (2018–2020)†	Ensures the identification and referral for the protection of child victims and potential victims of human trafficking in accordance with standard operating procedures. (3,66) Increases the use of CPUs, police, and border controls to identify victims, including children in street situations. Raises public awareness of all forms of human trafficking, including forced labor. (3,31,66)

The Albanian National Agenda for Children's Rights (2017–2020)	Aims to protect and promote children's rights by supporting physical and psychosocial development, and the social inclusion of children. (67) Objectives include improving children's access to services and enhancing legal and institutional mechanisms for child protection. (10,67) Goals include promoting, respecting, and protecting children's rights through governance; eliminating all forms of violence against children; and creating child-friendly systems and services in education, justice, health, and social protection. (2,10) In early 2019, held a conference on child protection workers (CPWs) with the goal of strengthening coordination among CPW professionals. (32)
The Action Plan for the Social-Economic Reintegration of Women and Girl Victims of Trafficking (2018–2020)	Increases resources available to victims and attempts to reintegrate female trafficking victims by providing education and social services to combat future forced labor and human trafficking. (71) Part of the Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Persons Action Plan. (24) Active in 2018. (32)
National Action Plan for Roma and Balkan Egyptian Community Reintegration (2016–2020)	Aims to provide Roma and Balkan Egyptian children with full access to education, reduce discrimination, enhance social inclusion, and promote intercultural dialogue between different actors in the community. (59,68,73) Active in 2018. (32)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (3,31,74)

Although the Government of Albania has adopted the National Action Plan for Combatting Trafficking in Persons, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, including children used in scavenging chromium. During the reporting period, the State Agency for Rights and Protection of Children completed drafting the National Action Plan for the Protection of Children from Economic Exploitation. (3,56) Once passed, the Action Plan will define interactions among responsible institutions on child protection, including children working in mining, in street situations, and in other situations that violate the law. (3,56)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program of Cooperation for Sustainable Development (2017–2021)	UN program that aims to increase access to education for vulnerable children and improve protections for child victims of human trafficking. (75,76) Active in 2018. (3)
Human Trafficking Hotline and Shelters	ONAC program supported by USAID, UNODC, World Vision, and the Vodafone Albania Foundation. Through the Human Trafficking Helpline, Report, and Save Mobile App, provides services to victims of crime, improves prevention of human trafficking, and serves as a public awareness tool. (2,63) The National Shelter Coalition† comprises one state-run and three NGO-run shelters. The National Reception Center for Victims of Trafficking, under the supervision of the Directorate General of State Social Services, provides shelter and access to social services for human trafficking victims. (2,77) The Tjeter Vizion NGO shelter provides services for minors. (2,3) Active in 2018. (3)
National Emergency Transition Center†	Government-run center that aims to provide vulnerable families with housing, health care, psychosocial and educational services, legal assistance, and employment placement aid. (3) Accommodates 39 families. Active in 2018. (3)
Child Allowance Program (Ndihma Ekonomike)†	$46 million government-funded cash transfer program that provides an allowance for families receiving economic aid through the Law on Social Assistance and Services. Active in 2018. (3)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (31,57)

During the reporting period, police occasionally referred street children or unaccompanied minors to human trafficking shelters and contacted their parents. (32) Some state- and NGO-run services were available for children who were forced to beg; however, research found no evidence that programs were carried out to assist children scavenging chromium. (3,4,10,29,64) In addition, programs did not specifically target all types of human trafficking. A lack of financial and human resources and issues of decentralization of social funds from central government to municipalities were also cited as gaps in efficiently carrying out all of the social programs. (3,4,31,59)

Albania

In 2018, the Government of Albania volunteered to be a Pathfinder Country for Alliance 8.7 to expedite the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals related to eliminating child labor and human trafficking by 2025. (3,61) Activities include tracking child labor data, organizing workshops, and developing strategies to eliminate child labor. (3,61)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Albania (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that using, procuring, and offering children under age 18 for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs, is criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions limit the number of hours for light work.	2018
Enforcement	Increase coordination and communication between child protection units and the SLISS, and provide child protection units with sufficient training to carry out their work.	2018
	Ensure that the Ministry of Interior focuses on child trafficking and does not dedicate all resources to judicial and police restructuring.	2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors can inspect the informal sector in which child labor is known to occur, and that the labor inspectorate plan is adequate, targeting sectors in which child labor is known to occur.	2010 – 2018
	Strengthen and promote the labor complaint referral mechanism so that the general public can report cases of child labor.	2017 – 2018
	Provide the labor inspectorate with the necessary equipment and training, and increase the number of labor inspectors.	2017 – 2018
	Include enforcement of human trafficking prohibitions in the labor inspectorate's jurisdiction.	2018
	Ensure that both labor inspectors and police investigators receive frequent training to identify children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that the border police officers properly screen minor children, including children from Kosovo and migrants, and properly implement standard operating procedures to identify victims of child trafficking.	2016 – 2018
Coordination	Increase coordination between the SLISS and the Albanian State Police.	2016 – 2018
Government Policies	Ensure that the government implements the National Action Plan for the Protection of Children from Economic Exploitation.	2018
Social Programs	Conduct research to further identify children's activities in agriculture and construction to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2018
	Set measures to assist children whose families are involved in blood feuds so they can attend school.	2018
	Increase resources, access to civil registration, and social services available to children, including Roma and Balkan Egyptian children engaged in or at risk of engaging in child labor.	2011 – 2018
	Ensure that barriers to education, such as the prohibitive cost of school supplies and discrimination against Roma and Balkan Egyptian children and children with disabilities, are removed.	2013 – 2018
	Provide language teachers for migrant and refugee children and inclusive education for children with disabilities.	2018
	Increase the number of shelters for children who are referred by police officers.	2017 – 2018
	Institute programs to assist children who are victims of human trafficking and those who are used in scavenging chromium.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that funding and human resources are increased for social programs for child labor and that decentralized social funds to municipalities are appropriately allocated to adequately carry out programs.	2018

In 2018, Algeria made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In addition to conducting routine labor inspections, the government conducted a dedicated period of inspections focused solely on child labor, and achieved 98 convictions. The National Committee for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons held six public events to raise awareness on human trafficking and training sessions for law enforcement and judicial personnel. The government also altered policy regarding labor law enforcement, allowing labor inspectors to assess penalties on those who violated labor laws. However, children in Algeria engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous street work tasks. The government has not sufficiently prohibited the use of children in illicit activities or determined by national law or regulation the types of work that are hazardous for children to perform. Furthermore, the government's number of labor inspectors is not in accordance with the ILO's technical advice to ensure that child labor laws are enforced in all geographic areas.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Algeria engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous street work tasks. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Algeria.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	6.7 (413,729)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	7.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		105.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2012–2013. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including harvesting olives (1,6-10)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown (2,6,7,9,11)
Services	Street work, including vending, collecting plastics, and begging (2,3,6,7,10,12-16)
	Domestic work (1,2,11)
	Working in small workshops and businesses, including mechanics' shops (6,8,10,11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,7,15)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (9)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (11-13,15)
	Forced domestic work, including drawing water from wells, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (15)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Algeria

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Evidence suggests that children, primarily unaccompanied sub-Saharan migrants, are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic work, including sexual abuse at the hands of smugglers and traffickers, confiscation of passports, and withheld pay. (2,10,17-19) The government reported that child labor was most prevalent in the provinces of Algiers, Batna, Constantine, and Oran, and was often part-time and informal in nature, with some migrant children working in small-scale family-run businesses, such as restaurants or small stores. (10,11,20) Research could not find a current and comprehensive study on the activities and scope of the child labor situation in Algeria.

The Algerian public education system is free and open to all children, regardless of ethnicity and nationality. Non-Algerian children must provide documentation of grade level or sit for testing to determine their level. (10,11,21) There are no laws or regulations that prevent access to school, although there are reports of isolated cases of migrant children without valid documentation being denied enrollment and reported to authorities. (10) Many children with disabilities do not have the opportunity to access mainstream education because of social stigma, the relatively low number of teachers with specialized training, the lack of a transportation system for children with disabilities, and the limited accessibility of school buildings. In addition, an estimated 300,000 children remain outside formal schooling and 500,000 high school-age children are at risk of dropping out due to pressures stemming from barriers to education. (10,21) Barriers to education, including those placed on migrant children and children with disabilities, result in absence from school and increased vulnerability to child labor. (10,19,20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Algeria has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Algeria's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a prohibition against using children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 15 of the Labor Code; Article 7 of Executive Decree No. 96-98 on the List and Content of Special Books and Registers Mandatory for Employers (22,23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 15 of the Labor Code; Article 7 of Executive Decree No. 96-98 on the List and Content of Special Books and Registers Mandatory for Employers (22)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 303 bis 4 of the Penal Code (24)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 303 bis 4 and 319 of the Penal Code (24)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 319, 333 bis 1, 343, and 344 of the Penal Code (24)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 195 bis of the Penal Code (24)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 14 of Presidential Decree No. 08-134 on the National People's Army (25)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 3 of Law No. 14-06 on National Service (26)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 12 of Law No. 08-04 on National Education (27)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 13 of Law No. 08-04 on National Education (27)

The Labor Code prohibits anyone under age 19 from working at night and anyone under age 18 from performing work that is harmful to their health, safety, or morals. Algeria has not determined by national law or regulation the types of work that are hazardous for children; however, the government commission tasked with proposing a list of hazardous professions continues to work on this issue. (2,3,10,22,28,29) Algerian law does not provide increased penalties for or categorize as a separate crime the involvement of children in either the production or trafficking of drugs. (24)

Despite a drafted bill, research was unable to determine further efforts related to the revision of the Labor Code. (10)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MTESS)	Enforces labor laws, including laws related to child labor, through its General Labor Inspectorate; distributes written notices and issues tickets in response to violations; and refers violations to the Ministry of Justice. (6,21) Supervises the application of laws and regulations related to labor relations, working conditions, and worker safety. (9) Shares child labor reports with the Ministry of National Solidarity to ensure follow up with social services. (9,12)
Ministry of the Interior and Local Assemblies	Enforce criminal laws related to child trafficking through the Directorate General for National Security, which comprises 8 active brigades of 77 specialized police officers, focused on illegal immigration and human trafficking, and 50 brigades of 300 police officers, specializing in the protection of children. (9,15,20,30)
Ministry of National Defense	Enforces criminal laws pertaining to child labor, including child trafficking, in rural and border regions through the National Gendarmerie. (14) Works with the Directorate General for National Security and NGO Algerian Network for the Defense of Children's Rights to administer hotlines for the reporting of child abuse. (12,30-32)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes child exploitation cases, including those related to non-compliance with labor laws, through its Office of Criminal Affairs and Amnesty Procedures, which is the lead enforcement agency for human trafficking issues. (31)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Algeria took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the insufficient number of labor inspectors relative to the size of Algeria's workforce.

Algeria

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$17,600,000 (11)	$15,900,000 (10)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (11)	Yes (10)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (11)	Yes (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (11)	Yes (10)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Algeria's workforce, which includes more than 11.8 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Algeria would employ roughly 788 inspectors, notably in all geographic areas of the country, both urban and rural. (10,34,35) Algeria currently employs 645 inspectors. Labor inspections in Algeria focus mainly on the formal economy; visits to the informal sector generally involve work to formalize an enterprise. (10,36)

In March 2018, during a dedicated period of inspections focused on child labor, the Government of Algeria identified four children working below the minimum age and subsequently removed those children from work and placed them in vocational training. In 2018, the ILO, in conjunction with the Government of Algeria, conducted a workshop for approximately 30 labor inspectors to help them understand and measure the informal economy. (10) The government reported conducting 254,453 total labor inspections in 2018, in contrast with last year's figure of 11,419, which referenced only child labor inspections as opposed to total inspections. (10,33,36)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Algeria took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of published information on the number of criminal investigations and violations found related to child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (11)	Yes (10)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (36)	Unknown (36)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (11)	Yes (10)

In 2018, the government convicted 98 persons of crimes related to the worst forms of child labor, 20 of whom were sentenced to prison terms, 54 of whom received fines, and 24 of whom received suspended sentences. (10) During the reporting period, the National Gendarmerie held one course on child trafficking, seven seminars on victim identification and the protection of children, and one national day of study for officers on victim identification and protection. (19) The government has an ad hoc practice in place for law enforcement personnel to refer potential victims of human trafficking to the prosecutor, who notifies social services, as needed. (9,11,15,30)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Authority for the Protection and Promotion of Children (ONPPE)	Protects and promotes children's rights and provides advocacy for children in danger of economic exploitation. Acts as a liaison between the Ministry of Justice and members of the public alleging violations of children's rights. Oversees efforts of the National Commission for the Prevention of and Fight Against Child Labor. (2,9,10,30,37,38) Runs a national hotline and website to field questions and complaints about the mistreatment of children, with an average of more than 2,000 calls daily; however, since April 2018, only 712 calls were related to actual infringements of child rights. (10,39) In 2018, ONPPE conducted training sessions for judges on the protection of childhood and the involvement of children in judicial proceedings; workshops for governmental ministries; and training for members of the Algerian media on the protection and promotion of the rights of children. (10)
National Committee for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons	Monitors implementation of the National Action Plan for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons. Comprises representatives from the President's Office; the Prime Minister's Office; 12 ministries, including the MTESS; and other government entities. (9,37,40,41) In 2018, the Committee held six public events to raise awareness on human trafficking and training sessions for law enforcement and judicial personnel; however, there was no evidence of continued progress on a comprehensive anti-trafficking in persons bill to strengthen existing laws. (19,37)
National Commission for the Prevention of and Fight Against Child Labor	Prevents and eliminates child labor by coordinating government ministries and all other agencies that oversee labor activities. (6,32) Led by the MTESS, with members from the National Labor Union, NGOs, and nine other governmental agencies. (32,42) In 2018, research indicated that although the Commission continued to operate, ONPPE's role as the main hub of all issues concerning child protection, including issues of child labor, is expanding. (33)

The National Committee for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons held the first of four planned national meetings on human trafficking in the southern province of Adrar. The event included participation by 80 representatives from local authorities, elected officials, and civil society. (19,33,37)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including no evidence of a policy regarding other worst forms of child labor beyond the government's policy related to trafficking in persons.

Algeria

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons	Aims to prevent and reduce human trafficking by raising awareness of the issue, strengthening legislation, prosecuting human trafficking crimes, improving the provision of protective services to victims, and increasing collaboration with national and international NGOs. (9,15) In 2018, the National Committee for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons organized a Day of Awareness for civil society figures on the role of civil society in combating child trafficking, while the National Gendarmerie held one course on child trafficking and seven seminars on victim identification and the protection of children for internal agency officials. (36)

Although the Government of Algeria has adopted the National Action Plan for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons, research found no evidence of a policy regarding the worst forms of child labor. Nevertheless, the government is working on a national plan to address child labor issues; specifically, the Government of Algeria intends to launch an anti-begging campaign, which will commence in 2019. (10,43) The government has also formed a commission to draft a national action plan to address issues of begging. (37)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Labor Awareness Campaign†	Through ONPPE and other government agencies, the government makes various efforts to raise awareness about child labor. In 2018, the government organized an awareness-raising event in partnership with UNICEF on the dangers of child labor in the informal economy. (37)
Children Assistance Facilities†	The government operates 53 children assistance facilities to provide support for children, namely orphans and children in dangerous situations who are taken into custody by the state. In the first half of 2018, these shelters provided services to 4,925 children. (37)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. (11,14,37)

Although Algeria has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, forced begging, and street work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Algeria (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws prohibit the use of children in all illicit activities, including using, procuring, and offering children for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2018
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under age 18, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information on the enforcement of child labor laws, including the number of penalties collected and the number of criminal investigations, violations, and penalties imposed.	2009 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors in accordance with the ILO's technical advice and ensure that child labor laws are enforced in all geographic areas, including the informal sector.	2009 – 2018
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that includes all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation, forced begging, and street work.	2015 – 2018
Social Programs	Research and publish information on children involved in child labor, or at risk of being involved; specify these activities and publish information to inform policies.	2014 – 2018
	Take measures to remove barriers to accessing education, namely transportation and accessibility to schools, particularly for migrant children and children with disabilities.	2015 – 2018
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, forced begging, and street work.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that isolated cases of school administrators denying enrollment to migrant children are stopped in accordance with laws allowing for free public education for all children.	2018

In 2018, Angola made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved the Penal Code, which prohibits the use of children for the production of pornography. It also approved a National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor, which aims to eliminate child labor by strengthening the rights of children, including increasing their access to education, and mapping child labor found throughout the country to better inform policies and programs. In addition, the government deployed the Southern African Development Community Trafficking in Persons regional database, which collects national data to facilitate the development and implementation of policies and programs to combat human trafficking. However, children in Angola engage in forced labor in agriculture. Children also perform dangerous tasks in construction. The gap between the compulsory education age and minimum age for work leaves children ages 12 and 13 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. There are not enough labor inspectors to provide sufficient coverage of the workforce, and social programs do not target all sectors in which children work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Angola engage in forced labor in agriculture. (1,2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in construction. (3) The 2015–2016 Survey on Multiple Health Indicators found that 23 percent of children ages 5 to 17 engage in child labor. The percentage of children engaged in child labor is higher in rural areas compared to urban areas; Cuanza Sul and Cuando Cubango provinces have the highest percentage of child laborers. (4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Angola.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	15.1 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	69.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	13.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		46.1

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey, 2015–2016. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including plowing, planting and picking tomatoes, harvesting vegetables, and the production of rice (1,3,7-10)
	Fishing, including artisanal fishing, and cleaning fish for deep freezing or sun drying (11-13)
	Cattle herding (2,11)
Industry	Artisanal diamond mining (2,11)
	Mining coal (2,3,11)
	Construction, including making and transporting bricks† (3,9,10)
Services	Slaughtering animals,† including cattle, goats, and pigs (9,14)
	Street work, including vending, car washing, shoe shining, and transporting heavy loads† (1,3,8-10)
	Domestic work (9)

	Use in illicit activities, including the transport of illicit goods across the border of Angola and Namibia (2)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Undocumented Congolese migrant children enter Angola for work in diamond-mining districts, and some experience conditions of forced labor or commercial sexual exploitation in mining camps. (2,7) Girls as young as age 12 are trafficked from Kasai Occidental in the Democratic Republic of the Congo to Angola for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Angolan boys are taken to Namibia and forced to herd cattle or work as couriers to transport illicit goods. (2)

Although tuition is free up to the sixth grade, families often face difficulty paying informal school fees, such as books or fees paid to education officials. (16) Additional barriers to education for children include poor infrastructure and lack of teachers, which have led to several school closings, resulting in thousands of elementary school children being unable to begin or continue their education. (17-19) The government permits children to attend school without birth registration, but only up to the fourth grade. (20)

II. Legal Framework for Child Labor

Angola has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Angola’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including lack of a compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 254 of the Labor Law (21)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 3(21) and 256 of the Labor Law (21)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 256 of the Labor Law; Hazardous Work List (14,21)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 18–19 and 23 of the Money Laundering Law (22)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 19 and 23 of the Money Laundering Law (22)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 19 and 22–23 of the Money Laundering Law; Articles 197-200 of the Penal Code (22,23)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 4 and 7 of the Drug Trafficking Law (24)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 11 of the Military Service Law (25)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of the Military Service Law (25)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	12‡	Articles 8 and 17 of the Basic Law of the Education System (26)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 7 of the Basic Law of the Education System (26)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (26,27)

During the reporting period, the government drafted legislation to protect human trafficking victims, including children, through all stages of an investigation and the prosecution of cases. (28) The Penal Code, approved in January 2019, criminalizes the use of children for the production of pornography; however, it does not prohibit the procuring or offering of a child for the production of pornography, or the use, procuring, or offering of a child for pornographic performances. (23) Although the list of hazardous activities and occupations prohibited for children identifies 57 activities that are prohibited for children, the legislation does not include diamond mining, a sector in which there is evidence of work conducted underground. (9,14)

Ending compulsory education at age 12 leaves children ages 12 and 13 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school, but they also are not legally permitted to work. (26,27) In addition, this age conflicts with the National Development Plan (2018–2022), which sets the compulsory education age at 14. (29)

III. Enforcement of Laws on Child Labor

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Administration, Labor, and Social Security (MAPTSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Administration, Labor, and Social Security	Enforces laws against child labor. Fines employers or sends cases to the Ministry of Interior for further investigation and to the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights for prosecution. (7) Employs labor inspectors nationwide to carry out inspections and joint operations with social services providers. (30)
National Children's Institute (INAC)	Receives complaints about cases of child exploitation, including child labor. Conducts inspections and responds to reports of child labor. (7,11)
Ministry of Interior's National Police	Enforces criminal laws and conducts operations and investigations related to the worst forms of child labor. (7) Through its Criminal Investigation Services, collaborates with the Juvenile Court on child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and illicit recruitment investigations. (11)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Investigates and prosecutes the worst forms of child labor. (7)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Angola took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the framework of the MAPTSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the allocation of human resources.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Angola's workforce, which includes approximately 12.51 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Angola would employ about 313 labor inspectors. (9,33-35)

During the reporting period, the government aggressively targeted forced labor in the artisanal diamond mining trade by closing informal diamond trading houses and unlicensed artisanal mine operations. In addition, it established new regulations to license artisanal mines that aim to reduce the demand for forced labor in the sector. (28)

Inspectors from the MAPTSS work with the National Children's Institute (INAC) and the Ministry of Social Action, Family, and the Promotion of Women (MASFAMU) to ensure that child labor victims receive the appropriate social services. (9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Angola took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, the government investigated nine human trafficking cases, six of which originated in Cunene Province, which borders Namibia. They involved 21 victims, mostly Angolan minors, and an unspecified number of Angolan and Namibian perpetrators. (28) In addition, the government secured nine convictions during the reporting period, involving adults and children being trafficked to Namibia for forced labor. The Governments of Angola and Portugal cooperated on one case of three minors, two boys and a girl, who were trafficked by two Angolan men, who were subsequently convicted by a Portuguese court. (28) In addition, the government deployed the Southern African Development Community Trafficking in Persons regional database, which collects national data to facilitate the development and implementation of policies and programs to combat human trafficking. (28)

The Ministry of Interior refers victims of the worst forms of child labor to INAC and the MASFAMU to receive social services. (9,38) Reports indicate that the government assisted 35 human trafficking victims during the reporting period, the majority of whom were children. (28)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Commission to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates enforcement efforts on human trafficking, including child trafficking for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Led by the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights. (39) Continued to meet periodically during the reporting period. (2) Worked on the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons. (28)
National Council for Social Action	Promotes and defends children's rights through social consultation and monitoring of public policies. Led by the Ministry of Social Action, Family, and the Promotion of Women (MASFAMU). (31,40) Research was unable to determine activities undertaken by the National Council for Social Action during the reporting period.
MASFAMU	Ensures coordination among various government agencies related to social welfare and victim protection. (7,36) A network of institutions and shelters protect children from abusive, exploitative, and dangerous situations. (41) In 2018, launched the National Plan of Action to Eradicate Child Labor. (2,28)
INAC	Coordinates child protective services. Works with MASFAMU to provide shelter and helps reintegrate children found in child labor situations, with their families. (36) In 2018, conducted a seminar on Child Victims of Human Trafficking and Child Labor. (28)

Despite the existence of the Commission to Combat Trafficking in Persons, the government faces challenges aggregating and synthesizing data on human trafficking cases. (28) Research shows that there is no specific coordinating mechanism dedicated solely to addressing issues related to the worst forms of child labor outside the scope of human trafficking.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor (2018–2022)†	Aims to eliminate child labor by strengthening the rights of children, including increasing access to education, and mapping areas and types of child labor found across the country to better inform relevant policies to combat child labor. (42)
Plan of Action and Intervention Against the Sexual and Commercial Exploitation of Children	Aims to protect and defend the rights of child victims of sexual and economic exploitation, including by providing rehabilitation. (43) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Plan of Action and Intervention Against the Sexual and Commercial Exploitation of Children during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (29,44)

Angola

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Reports indicate the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons remained in draft form during the reporting year. (28)

Although the government has adopted the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor, research indicates lack of funding hindered its implementation during the reporting period. (11)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Protection Programs†	National network of child support centers implemented by the government, in coordination with NGOs, that offer meals, shelter, basic education, and family reunification services to crime victims, including child trafficking victims. MASFAMU and the Organization of Angolan Women operate 52 children's shelters. (36,45) In 2018, MASFAMU, along with partners, held a workshop aimed at framing an integrated and inclusive Social Protection program, in accordance with the new guidelines of the National Development Plan (2018–2022). This program provides financial support for families in situations of social vulnerability, particularly those with children under age 5. (13)
Birth Registration and Justice for Children†	Government-run program making birth registration free for all Angolan citizens. In 2018, continued to expand its birth registration goals through the campaign "Registered at Birth," launched in July 2017, with the aim of automatically registering all children born in maternity wards. (46) Currently 118,000 children have been registered. (46) Program also launched a campaign encouraging fathers to register their children. (47,48)
UNICEF Country Program (2015–2019)	UNICEF program, in coordination with the government, designed to plan and implement education and child protection-focused interventions. (49) Collaborates with the government to run a child helpline in Luanda Province. (50) During the reporting period, in flood-affected communities, 839 children accessed education services through the provision of UNICEF tents, recreational kits, and school kits for children in Bié, Cunene, and Huila provinces. (13,51)
National Institutes of Job and Professional Training†	Government-funded program of 555 centers that provide professional training for youth so that they have the skills to enter the formal labor market. (7,52) Reports indicate a merging of government training centers across the country during the reporting period, due to the financial crisis. It is unknown how many centers remain open. (53)
Mobile Schools and Free Meals for Children†	Ministry of Education program that provides education in mobile schools to migrant children who work with their parents in cattle herding. Specifically targets children at the highest risk of involvement in child labor in southern Angola. (7) Supports some mobile schools with kitchens, which facilitate the free school meals program. (7,54) In 2018, the program continued to be introduced in schools throughout the country. (55,56)

Although Angola has implemented programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. Furthermore, research did not identify programs that seek to reach children engaged in certain worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Angola (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law prohibits hazardous occupations or activities for children in all relevant sectors in Angola, including diamond mining.	2011 – 2018
	Ensure that the legal framework prohibits the procuring and offering of children for the production of pornography, and the use, procuring, and offering of a child for pornographic performances.	2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Increase the compulsory education age to 14 to be consistent with the National Development Plan and the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2018
Enforcement	Publish information regarding the labor inspectorate's funding and the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, and the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2011 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2018
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all forms of child labor.	2016 – 2018
	Increase the capacity to aggregate and synthesize data on human trafficking cases.	2018
	Ensure that the National Council for Social Action, responsible for the monitoring of public policies related to promoting and defending children's rights, is active and capable of adhering to its mandate.	2018
Government Policies	Ensure that the Plan of Action and Intervention Against the Sexual and Commercial Exploitation of Children is effectively implemented.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor has sufficient funds for implementation.	2018
	Ensure that the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons is approved and implemented.	2018
Social Programs	Develop and expand existing social programs to ensure that all children have access to education and are not restricted by informal fees, lack of birth certificates, lack of teachers, or poor school infrastructure.	2013 – 2018
	Institute programs that target children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, and expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem.	2010 – 2018

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Anguilla, the government made a minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor in 2018. During the reporting period, the government worked with the United Kingdom's Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service to develop a National Social Protection Policy and Action Plan and provided awareness-raising sessions, school programs, training, and workshops on child protection. However, the law does not prohibit the involvement of children in illicit activities and the minimum age for work does not meet international standards.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Anguilla. (1-5)

Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report. (4,5) However, the Government of Anguilla collected data on child labor for 2018 at the request of the Child Safeguarding Unit, which is part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland's Foreign and Commonwealth Office Overseas Territories Directorate. (3,6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (BOTs) are under the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they are not constitutionally part of the UK. (7) They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic UK law does not generally apply unless explicitly extended to BOTs. (7) Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that territory. The following Convention has been extended to Anguilla (Table 1). (7,8)

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of Anguilla has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in Anguilla's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	12	Articles 1 and 3–4 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 1–2 of the Employment of Children (Restriction) Act (9,10)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	14	Articles 1 and 3–4 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 1–2 of the Employment of Children (Restriction) Act (9,10)

Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 147–148, 150, and 152–153 of the Criminal Code (11)

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 106 of the Education Act (13)

* No conscription (14)

† No standing military (8,14)

The minimum work age of 12 does not meet international standards. There is also a minimum work age of 14, but it only applies to industrial undertakings, transportation of passengers or goods by roads or rail, and work on ships. (9,10) Moreover, the minimum age of 14 for hazardous work does not meet international standards. However, there is a prohibition of night work for children under age 16 in manufacturing of raw sugar, and a prohibition of night work in other industrial undertakings for children under age 18. (9) Additionally, Anguilla does not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. (11,15,16) The law does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (11)

Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor. However, in Anguilla, the UK government has established an institutional mechanism for the enforcement of labor laws (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor of the Ministry of Finance, Economic Development, Investments, and Tourism	Enforces child labor laws through the Labor Commissioner, pursuant to the Employment of Children (Restriction) Act. (17)
Department of Social Development of the Ministry of Social Development	Safeguards the well-being of children and investigates reports of child abuse. (18,19)
Royal Anguilla Police Force	Investigates child protection cases. (18,19)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor. However, the Government of Anguilla has established a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Social Development	Implements child protection efforts and ensure that Anguilla complies with the CRC. (19)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, the Government of Anguilla has established the Child Protection National Action Plan, Safeguarding and Child Protection Protocols and Procedures, and an Inter-Agency Child Protection Protocol. All of these policies may contribute to the prevention of child labor. (20,21,22,23)

In 2018, the Government of Anguilla worked with the UK's Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service (CAFCASS) to develop a National Social Protection Policy and Action Plan. The Action Plan includes programs for child protection. (6)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor. However, the Government of Anguilla has established the Safeguarding Children in Anguilla Project and the Child Safeguarding in the Overseas Territories Regional Project, which may contribute to the prevention of child labor. (24,25)

During the reporting period, the Government of Anguilla worked with CAFCASS to provide awareness-raising sessions, school programs, training, and workshops on child protection. (6)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Anguilla (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law establishes age 15 as the minimum age for work in all sectors.	2016 – 2018
	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for all hazardous work.	2011 – 2018
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure the law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including drug trafficking and production.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018

In 2018, Argentina made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The new Secretariat of Labor worked with Argentina's National Institute of Statistics and Census to publish the country's first national child labor survey, with representation from every region in the country. Provincial courts also rendered the first ever criminal conviction for child labor in Argentina. In July 2018, the government approved the 2018–2020 Action Plan against Human Trafficking and Exploitation. In addition, the Secretariat of Labor and Special Prosecutor for Human Trafficking published guides for investigators and justice sector officials in understanding and applying Argentina's human trafficking and child labor legislation. However, children in Argentina engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities such as the sale and distribution of drugs. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The government does not publish federal and provincial labor and criminal law enforcement data on child labor, and social programs that address child labor in agriculture do not appear to address the full scope of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Argentina engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities such as the sale and distribution of drugs. (1,2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (3-5) In November 2016, the government, in collaboration with the ILO, began conducting the National Survey on Children and Youth Activities (EANNA) to assess child labor in urban areas, and in 2017 extended the survey into rural areas. (6) The report was published in November 2018 and is Argentina's first nationally representative child labor survey. (7,8) It concluded that there are 291,335 working children between the ages of 5 and 15. (8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Argentina. Raw data from the government's EANNA survey have not been made publicly available for analysis.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.2 (258,286)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	98.5

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Forced labor in the production of garments (1,12,39)
	Use in illicit activities, including selling and distributing drugs (2,12,41,42)
	Forced labor in domestic work (1,12)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Misiones—the producer of 90 percent of Argentina’s and 60 percent of the world’s yerba mate—is one of the provinces most affected by child labor. (43) Children as young as the age of 5 help their parents harvest yerba mate, sometimes carrying heavy loads. (43) In Salta and Jujuy, children between the ages of 5 and 17 harvest tobacco. (27,44)

Although the extent of the problem is unknown, reports indicate that girls from Argentina’s Northern provinces are victims of human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation. (1,45) Bolivian children and children of Bolivian immigrants in Argentina engage in child labor in agriculture, production of bricks, and domestic service, and in forced child labor in the production of garments. (1,12,17,34,39,46) Reports also indicate that Paraguayan children are victims of human trafficking for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation in Argentina. (1,40,47)

In Argentina, education is compulsory until age 18. However, reports indicate that many children, including those ages 16 and 17, drop out of school. (48,49) Those children are not eligible for youth employment programs, including most apprenticeships, as the minimum age to qualify for those programs is 18. (50–49) Thus, they are likely to engage in jobs in the informal sector and, without formal training, may remain in informal work as adults. (49)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Argentina has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Argentina’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a gap between the minimum age of work and the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 15–16 of the Child and Adolescent Rights Protection Law (52)

* No conscription (68)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (65)

In September 2018, the Argentine government reformed its cabinet, reducing the number of ministries from 20 to 10 and transforming the prior Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security into the Secretariat of Labor, Employment, and Social Security, which now falls under the Ministry of Production and Labor. (7,69) The newly formed Secretariat of Labor continues to conduct enforcement efforts in coordination with provincial-level labor authorities in each of Argentina’s 23 provinces and the City of Buenos Aires, known as CABA. All inspectors are tasked with enforcing laws related to child labor as part of the Secretariat of Labor’s broader enforcement strategy, the National Plan for the Regularization of Labor (Plan Nacional de Regularización del Trabajo). (7) In 2018, the Secretariat of Labor also worked with the ILO to update its list of hazardous work. (7) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (52-55,65-67)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Secretariat of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws, including human resource allocation.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
The Secretariat of Labor, Employment, and Social Security	Enforces child labor laws, in part through its Coordinating Body for the Prevention of Child Labor and the Regulation of Adolescent Work (COODITIA). Oversees the National Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor (CONAETI). (70,71) Collaborates with the National Registry of Rural Workers and Employers (RENATRE) in enforcing child labor laws in the agricultural sector. (71,72) Maintains a national hotline through which labor violations can be reported. (7,71)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Maintains a tribunal for adjudicating disputes involving domestic work, and hotlines for reporting cases of child labor and forced labor. (73)
Office for the Rescue and Care of Trafficking Victims	Provides emergency legal and other assistance to victims of labor and sex trafficking, including child victims. Under the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights. (74) Maintains regional offices that coordinate the provision of legal and social services to human trafficking victims in the Provinces of Chaco, Chubut, La Pampa, La Rioja, Mendoza, Rio Negro, and Santa Fe. (47,75-77) Maintains a hotline through which alleged crimes of trafficking in persons can be reported. (74)
Special Prosecutor's Office for Human Trafficking and Exploitation (PROTEX)	Prosecutes crimes of trafficking in persons for labor and commercial sexual exploitation, instructs federal personnel in the investigation of human trafficking, and designs criminal policy related to human trafficking. (78-80) Manages Line 145, the anonymous national hotline that allows the public to report suspected human trafficking cases and assists in responding to these calls with the Rescue Program Office (Oficina de Programa de Rescate), which is part of the Ministry of Justice. (74,81)
National Directorate of Criminal Intelligence, Human Trafficking Unit	Improves the ability of the Ministry of Security and federal police forces to collect information and investigate trafficking in persons. (81)
National Immigration Directorate	Directs the National Immigration Police, oversees the rights of migrants, and assists in investigating cases of transnational human trafficking. (82)
Federal Police	Conduct human trafficking investigations through the Trafficking in Persons Division. (83)
Federal Administration of Public Revenue (AFIP)	Ensures employer compliance with national laws, assists in workplace and labor-related inspections, and initiates prosecutions of labor violations through the Penal Section of its Social Security Directorate. (84)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Argentina took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Secretariat of Labor, and between the national Secretariat and the provincial authorities, that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

From August to November of the reporting period, the Secretariat of Labor carried out several training sessions for labor inspectors, both in person and virtually. (7) The Special Prosecutor’s Office for Human Trafficking and Exploitation (PROTEX) provided training to judicial officials, law enforcement agents, students, and NGOs. Representatives from PROTEX also spoke at training sessions for officials at the National Registry for Rural Workers and Employers (RENATRE), and in August provided training to judicial officials on the differences between labor trafficking and other related crimes. (1,7) However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Argentina’s workforce, which includes approximately 17.7 million workers. According to the ILO’s technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Argentina should employ roughly 1,200 labor inspectors. (86) The government does not report on the number of provincial inspectors, so the totals reflect only the number of federal inspectors; NGOs continue to report the number is insufficient. (7,70) The Secretariat of Labor is also unable to provide information regarding the number of penalties because it does not have an integrated national/provincial-level system for collecting such data from the provinces or CABA, which report child labor violations. (7)

The Secretariat of Labor’s inspection protocol requires that federal labor inspectors notify the relevant provincial child protection authorities after detecting a child labor violation. (7) Labor inspectors are also required to file a criminal complaint with the provincial courts of the relevant jurisdiction for any child labor violation detected. (7,12) The government reports that, in 2018, in every child labor case detected, children were referred to the relevant Provincial Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor (COPRETI), the local interagency authorities responsible for coordination of social services for children rescued from child labor. (7) During the reporting period, Argentine authorities removed 25 children from child labor stemming from 21 complaints. (7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Argentina took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

‡ Data are from January 1, 2017 to August 31, 2017.

Santa Fe Province courts rendered the first ever criminal conviction for child labor in Argentina during the reporting period. The case began in 2016 following a provincial labor inspection that discovered child labor involving at least six minors at a blueberry farm. (7) The provincial court rendered a 1 year conditional sentence for the couple operating the farm, providing the defendants would serve prison time if they failed to comply with 2 years of probationary oversight by the Provincial Office of Post-Prison Control and Assistance. (7) PROTEX reported three labor trafficking cases involving nine minors in 2018, seven of whom were Bolivian. Defendants in all three cases were indicted. (7,71) Prosecutors’ offices from around the country also informed PROTEX of three criminal cases involving sex trafficking of minors that resulted in indictments. (7) However, the total number of federal and provincial investigations and prosecutions involving the worst forms of child labor is unknown. (7)

The Secretariat of Labor issued new guidance and standardized electronic forms for national labor inspections,

Argentina

which are designed to assist labor inspectors and ensure the inspection lays a documentary foundation for administrative sanctions, criminal investigation, and social services for victims. (7) As part of the Argentine government's ongoing efforts to implement the National Labor Regularization Plan (Plan Nacional de Regularización del Trabajo), both PROTEX and the Secretariat of Labor published guides that serve as resources for investigators and justice sector officials for understanding and applying legislation that criminalizes human trafficking and child labor. (7,87,88)

National authorities were unable to provide information about the budget for labor investigations. Argentine law enforcement authorities report a lack of funding and resources. (7) UNHCR identified the need for the government to build the capacity of its judiciary and police to investigate cases of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, including those involving children, and recommended that the government increase funding for shelters and assist girl victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (89)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies to provide services to child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor (CONAETI)	Coordinates national efforts to monitor and eliminate child labor and implement the National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor. (90-93) Led by the Secretariat of Labor and re-established in 2016 to comprise 16 government agencies, representatives from UNICEF, the ILO, industry associations, and labor unions. (85,94-96) In November 2018, hosted officials from the 24 provincial COPRETI for training and exchanges of best practices. (7) Also held a conference in November 2018 to host officials from the 24 provincial COPRETI for training and exchanges of best practices, increasing coordination activities between national and provincial authorities. (7)
Provincial Commissions for the Eradication of Child Labor (COPRETI)	Coordinates efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor at the provincial level, including through Local Roundtables on Child Labor at the municipal level. (95,97,98) Comprises representatives from government agencies, NGOs, labor unions, and religious institutions. (95,97) Held various trainings and outreach activities throughout the reporting period and established additional offices in the Provinces of Santa Cruz and Chubut, creating a total of 24 commissions throughout the country. (7,99-100)
National Secretariat for Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (SENAF)	Establishes public policies through its Childhood and Adolescence Protectorate to secure the rights of children and adolescents, coordinate child protection efforts with other government ministries and NGOs, and assist human trafficking victims. Overseen by the restructured Ministry of Health and Social Development. (101) Operates an assistance hotline to field anonymous complaints regarding any violations of children's rights, including child labor. Provided comprehensive assistance to 47 victims, both adults and children, during the reporting period, five of whom were labor trafficking victims. (1)
Coordinating Body for the Prevention of Child Labor and the Regulation of Adolescent Work (COODITIA)	Implements audits to detect child labor and irregular adolescent labor; trains inspectors on auditing and monitoring child and adolescent work; promotes the creation of special inspection units; and provides technical assistance and advice to inspectors. (7) Held training in October 2018 for Mendoza labor inspectors on how to detect signs of labor exploitation. (1)
Child and Adolescent Labor Monitoring Office (OTIA)	Conducts qualitative and quantitative research on child and adolescent labor to provide policy analysis and inform programming to eradicate child labor and regulate adolescent labor. Created through the Undersecretariat of Technical Programming and Labor Studies of the Secretariat of Labor. (91,95,102) The Secretariat of Labor reported that the OTIA now falls under the Ministry of Production and Labor. Its principal activity in 2018 was to publish the final report of the National Survey on Children and Youth Activities (EANNA). (103)
Programa Andares (Coordinating Unit for Children and Adolescents in Danger of Commercial Sexual Exploitation)	Provides guidance to relevant institutions; runs workshops and research programs on commercial sexual exploitation; and assists children, adolescents, and their families. Formed within the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights. (104,105) Program was active during the reporting period. (103,106)
Federal Council to Fight Human Trafficking and to Protect and Assist Victims	Coordinates government-wide efforts to combat human trafficking. Comprising representatives from the three branches of government and NGOs. (106) Presided over by the Undersecretary for Access to Justice of the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights. (6,85) Led by the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights and oversees five thematic working groups. (12) Held four meetings during the reporting period and approved the Biennial National Plan against Human Trafficking and Exploitation, and for Protection and Assistance of Victims (TIP Action Plan 2018–2020) (1)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Executive Council to Fight Human Trafficking and to Protect and Assist Victims	Coordinates executive branch efforts to combat human trafficking. Comprising representatives of the Ministries of Justice and Human Rights, Security, and Social Development, and the Secretariat of Labor. (107) Conducted awareness campaign on social media and held several video conference trainings on human trafficking during the reporting period. (1)
Network of Businesses Against Child Labor	Formed through a partnership of the Ministry of Production and Labor, the Secretariat of Labor, CONAETI, and the businesses that comprise it, the network develops initiatives to raise awareness of child labor and programs to prevent and eradicate child labor. (7,90,108) The network held awareness raising campaigns in 2018 to increase business membership and strengthen cooperation between provincial businesses and their local COPRETI. (7)

The Federal Council to Fight Human Trafficking and Assist Victims held four meetings in Neuquén, Misiones, Mendoza, and Chubut Provinces and drafted its first-ever annual report in 2018, which includes information on victim assistance services. (1) The Secretary of Tourism developed training in the prevention of sexual exploitation, child labor, and human trafficking to promote the implementation of a Code of Conduct for the tourism sector. (1,106) Civil society groups report, however, that coordination to provide services to child victims of commercial sexual exploitation is ineffective, causing program proposals to remain in the implementation state, and some programs' objectives and target groups to overlap. (109)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of information on activities taken under each policy during the reporting period.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Third National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Regulation of Adolescent Work (2018–2022)†	Aims to prevent and eliminate child labor, including its worst forms, and to regulate adolescent work. Promotes the dissemination of information on child labor, strengthens the COPRETI and creates local roundtables on child labor, promotes families' livelihoods, strengthens the labor inspectorate, fosters civil society engagement on child labor issues, provides for a more inclusive educational system, raises awareness of the safety and health implications of child labor, and promotes institutional and legislative strengthening for child labor issues. (12,110-113)
Strategic Framework for Cooperation Between Argentina and the UN System for Development (2016–2020)	Establishes development priorities for Argentina as agreed upon by the government and the agencies comprising the UN System for Development in Argentina. Comprises five areas for cooperation, including the expansion of social protection support and the promotion of inclusive and sustainable economic growth, which prioritizes the prevention and elimination of child labor and forced labor, and the protection of adolescent workers. (114) The government did not provide information on activities taken under this policy in 2018 for inclusion in this report.
Inter-agency Agreement for Prevention of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker	Collaborative agreement between the Secretariat of Labor and the Ministry of Education to integrate child labor prevention and protection of adolescent workers in curricula and teacher training courses. (12,115) The government did not provide information on activities taken under this policy in 2018 for inclusion in this report.
Biennial National Plan against Human Trafficking and Exploitation, and for Protection and Assistance of Victims (TIP Action Plan 2018–2020)†	Approved unanimously August 10, 2018 by the Federal Council to Fight Human Trafficking and to Protect and Assist Victims, focuses on prevention, prosecution, and protection of human trafficking victims and fortifying inter-agency coordination. (1,116) The Executive Committee will serve as its implementer and the Federal Council will monitor compliance every 6 months. (1) The plan focuses on prevention, prosecution, and protection of human trafficking victims and incorporates an institutional goal of fortifying inter-agency coordination, including by establishing a unified database on human trafficking victims. (1) The government did not allocate a special budget for the TIP Action Plan, but encouraged relevant agencies to make itemized provisions in their budgets to meet the plan's goals, which NGOs and civil society see as a major obstacle to the plan's implementation. (1)

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action on Human Rights (2017–2020)	Contains over 200 actions to apply government policies in various areas, including the prevention and restitution of rights for children and adolescents exposed to violence, commercial sexual exploitation, human trafficking, and child labor. (117,118) Under the Human Rights Plan in 2018, the government created a national plan to protect the human rights of people of African descent, the First National Committee for the Prevention of Torture, the First Cultural Center for Migrants and Refugees, and approved the National Action Plan for the Prevention, Assistance, and Eradication of Violence Against Women. (119)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (120)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs in the agricultural sector to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Universal Child Allowance Program (Asignación Universal)†	Government program funded in part by the World Bank that provides a cash transfer to unemployed parents and workers in the informal economy, contingent upon parents' fulfillment of health and education requirements for their children. (95,121) In 2018, the Argentine government increased the program's allowance to keep pace with inflation. (7,122)
RENATRE Awareness-Raising Campaigns†	RENATRE campaigns raise awareness of child labor in agriculture and inform families and children of the right to education. (103,123) Activities in 2018 included signing agreements with regional governments to improve education in rural areas, training both adolescents and adults on labor rights, and participating in working groups to address child labor and human trafficking. (124-127)
Secretary of Labor, Employment, and Social Security - Ministry of Production and Labor - CONAETI Awareness-Raising Campaigns†	CONAETI/Network of Businesses Against Child Labor campaigns that make businesses and the general public aware of child labor in sourcing and supply chains. (6,108) During the reporting period, the Secretariat of Labor requested that "public officials" be included among the participants of awareness raising campaigns, along with businesses and the public. (7)
National Campaign Against Child Labor in Brickmaking†	Developed by the Secretariat of Labor and the Argentine Brickworkers Union (UOLRA) in 2017. (128) Aims to develop policies that improve labor inspections in this sector and better support brickworkers so their children do not have to work. (128,129) The government continued to implement this program during the reporting period, including by hosting a gathering of more than 200 people in the Municipality of Florencio Varela to raise awareness among brickworkers and their families. (7,130)
USDOL-funded Projects	$3 million Project to Promote Workplace-Based Training for Vulnerable Youth in Argentina (2016–2020), implemented by Centro de Desarrollo y Autogestión (DyA); $2.9 million Promoting Apprenticeship as a Path for Youth Employment in Argentina, Costa Rica, and Kenya through Global Apprenticeships Network (GAN) National Networks (2016–2019); SafeYouth@Work Project: Building a Generation of Safe and Healthy Workers (2014–2019), an $11 million global project implemented by the ILO; also awarded in 2018, $2.5 million Multi-Stakeholder Strategy for Child Labor Elimination in Agriculture in Argentina (2019–2021), implemented by Centro de Desarrollo y Autogestión (DyA); and $2.5 million «Offside Project»: Improving the Capacity of Labor and Agriculture Stakeholders to Address Child Labor in Agricultural Areas of Argentina Project, implemented by the ILO. Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Good Harvest Day Care and Future Programs†	COPRETI/Network of Businesses Against Child Labor programs that aim to reduce child labor in the production of crops, in which work is often performed by entire families. Provides child care and recreational activities to children up to the age of 9. (7,12,131) The government expanded the program into new regions during the reporting period, including the Province of Salta, and increased the number of participants. In 2018, more than 1200 children of tobacco families in Salta and Jujuy Provinces participated in activities to end child labor. (71,131-134)
Program to Strengthen Schools in Agricultural Areas†	RENATRE program which includes the Centers for Rural Care and Education (CRECER) and provides infrastructural developments, operating costs, and pedagogical development to rural schools located in agricultural areas where children may be at risk of child labor. (36,135) In February 2018, CRECER was implemented in San Juan, Jujuy, and Salta where children of rural tobacco workers received services. (103)

Program	Description
More Care = Less Child Labor (Mas Cuidado = Menos Trabajo Infantil)†	Promotes the formulation and execution of local projects that articulate access to care, decent work, and good practices in critical sectors of child labor in the Buenos Aires Province. Involves participation of unions, business leaders, government officials, and civil society. (136) In June 2018, as part of the activities for World Day Against Child Labor, the program organized child care and recreation activities in collaboration with the Cooperative Union of Trash Collectors (Cooperativa Unión de Cartoneros) in the Salta region to discourage child labor in that sector. (137)
Campaign to Report Human Trafficking (La trata no se ve a simple vista)†	Government campaign to raise public awareness of human trafficking and to encourage use of the national human trafficking hotline. (77,138) In 2018, the campaign included a commemorative video for the International Day Against Human Trafficking. (103)
Work is Not for Children†	A child care service funded by the provincial government of Santa Fe since 2010. (12) In June 2018, the program held an awareness-raising event on National Day Against Child Labor for over 150 children, and in August 2018, opened a new center in Santa Rosa de Lima to serve the children of informal trash collectors. (139,140)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (6,7,12,19,34,77,141,142)

Reports indicate that the Universal Child Allowance Program has had a positive impact on the reduction of child labor since it began in 2009. (7,143-145) Programs that address child labor in the agricultural sector do not appear to address the full scope of the problem. Additionally, research found no evidence of social programs that specifically target children engaged in street begging and performing, windshield washing, and guarding parked cars.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Argentina (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Enforcement	Publish federal and provincial information on the level of funding allocated to the labor inspectorate, the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected, and the number of criminal investigations and violations found.	2015 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws on child labor to meet the ILO's technical advice, and ensure that inspections are conducted in rural areas.	2015 – 2018
	Publish information on the total number of federal and provincial inspectors responsible for enforcing labor laws nationwide.	2017 – 2018
	Publish federal and provincial information on the total number of children removed from child labor nationwide, including whether they received appropriate protective services.	2014 – 2018
	Publish federal and provincial information regarding the adequacy of the budget and resources available to agencies responsible for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2018
Coordination	Improve government coordination in the provision of services to child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.	2017 – 2018
Government Policies	Publish information on activities taken under key policies to address child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking.	2018
	Allocate a special budget for the Biennial National Plan against Human Trafficking and Exploitation, and for Protection and Assistance of Victims to ensure its implementation.	2018
Social Programs	Expand the coverage and scope of programs that target child labor in the agricultural sector.	2012 – 2018
	Develop specific programs that target child labor in sectors in which child labor is prevalent, including street begging and performing, windshield washing, and guarding of parked cars.	2009 – 2018
	Extend youth employment and vocational training programs to children ages 16 and 17, while ensuring these programs allow children to complete their compulsory schooling.	2015 – 2018

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, Armenia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government adopted a new program to protect children’s rights. In addition, it continued to pursue labor inspection reform, including establishing the Health and Labor Inspection Body; this body, however, will have limited ability to monitor prohibitions on hazardous child labor. Despite new initiatives to address child labor, Armenia is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because the government has lacked a functioning labor inspectorate since the 2014 repeal of Article 34 of the Labor Code, which previously established the government’s authority to implement labor legislation and collective agreements. Since that time, the government has lacked a mechanism to monitor, inspect, and enforce child labor laws, including a mechanism with the authority to conduct unannounced inspections. Children in Armenia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The government lacks a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address all forms of child labor, including its worst forms. In addition, no government programs exist to aid children engaged in work activities in agriculture.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Armenia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-6) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1,2,7-12) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Armenia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	7.0 (24,602)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	8.6

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Working in shops (9,10)
	Dancing in clubs (1,9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,3-5,6)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3,6)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Reports indicate that significant numbers of children, including some below the age of 14, leave school to work in informal sectors in agriculture and construction, and increasing numbers of children are engaged in begging. (17)

Although Article 38 of the Constitution of Armenia and Article 6 of the Law of the Republic of Armenia on Education guarantee free universal education, children from ethnic minority and low-income families continue to have reduced access to education. (18,19) Children of families who travel for seasonal labor and work on farms in remote rural areas are also less likely to be enrolled in school and are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor in agriculture. (11)

In addition, the Law on Public Education requires all schools to be inclusive for children with disabilities by 2025. (20,21) However, NGOs report that children with disabilities face difficulty accessing mainstream education due to the inaccessibility of school buildings, lack of community-based support services, and general social stigma against individuals with disabilities. (22,23)

Despite government efforts to decrease institutionalization of children, nearly 3,500 children remain in government boarding schools, orphanages, and special education institutions. (24) These children are more likely to experience physical and psychological violence and are at a higher risk of becoming victims of human trafficking. (15,24) Children living in these institutions are reportedly also vulnerable to exploitation in child labor, including labor within the institutions. (25,26)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Armenia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Armenia’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including definitions of forced labor and light work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 15 and 17 of the Labor Code; Article 57 of the Constitution (19,27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 257 of the Labor Code (27)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Decree on Approval of the List of Occupations and Work That Are Likely to be Heavy and Hazardous for Persons Under the Age of 18 Years, Pregnant Women, and Women Taking Care of a Child under the Age of 1 Year; Articles 140, 148–149, 153, 155, 209, 249, and 257 of the Labor Code (27,28)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 57 of the Constitution; Article 3 of the Labor Code; Articles 132 and 132.2 of the Criminal Code (19,27,29)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 132 and 132.2 of the Criminal Code (29)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 132.2, 166, and 261–263 of the Criminal Code (29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 63, 165, 166.1, and 266 of the Criminal Code (29)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	16‡	Law on Military Service and Status of the Military Servant; Article 11 of the Law on Conscription; Government Decree No. 525-N of April 26, 2012. (30,31, 61)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 11 of the Law on Conscription (31)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 29 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Articles 165 and 224 of the Criminal Code. (29,32)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 18 of the Law on Education (33)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 38 of the Constitution; Article 6 of the Law on Education (19,33)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (61)

The Labor Code allows for children ages 14 and 15 to work restricted hours with the permission of a parent or guardian, but does not list specific activities that constitute light work. (27) In addition, the Constitution, Criminal Code, and Labor Code prohibit forced labor, but enforcement of this prohibition may be hindered by the lack of a definition of “forced labor” in Armenian law. (34)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (19,27,33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Armenia may impede the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Health and Labor Inspection Body (HLIB)	Enforces limited range of labor laws for persons up to age 18, and for pregnant or breastfeeding women and workers with children under their care. In 2018, the Health Inspection Body was reorganized and renamed the Health and Labor Inspection Body (HLIB). (12,35)
Police	Enforce anti-human trafficking laws. Every Republic of Armenia police unit throughout the country has a designated officer whose portfolio includes human trafficking issues. (12,36) All cases suspected to be human trafficking are referred to the anti-trafficking unit within the national police. (37)
Department of Investigation of Crimes on Human Trafficking and Illegal Drugs within the General Department of Investigation of Particularly Important Cases within the Investigative Committee	Investigates all cases of human trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children referred to the Investigative Committee by the police. (22,37,38)

Organization/Agency	Role
Department on Defending the Rights of Minors and Combating Domestic Violence Within the Police	Identifies and conducts preliminary investigation of crimes in which children are victims or perpetrators. (22,38) Enforces laws against the worst forms of child labor under the General Department of Criminal Intelligence. Refers identified crimes to the Investigative Committee for further investigation. (22)
Anti-Trafficking Unit Within the Police	Identifies and conducts preliminary investigation of crimes related to human trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children through a staff of seven field officers. (36,39) Operates within the Department of Combating High Tech-related (Cyber) Crimes, Human Trafficking, Illegal Migration, and Terrorism of the General Department on Combating Organized Crime. (39) Refers identified crimes to the Investigative Committee for further investigation. (22)
Police Hotline	Receives complaints related to human trafficking and migration issues. (40)

As part of a broader inspection reform agenda, Armenia’s labor inspectorate was abolished in 2013 and the responsibility for conducting labor inspections was transferred to the new State Health Inspectorate, created the same year. (39) In 2014, legislative changes repealed Article 34 of the Labor Code, which had previously established the government’s authority to implement labor legislation and collective agreements. (41) In 2015, subsequent changes to legislation regulating labor inspections left the State Health Inspectorate unable to conduct labor inspections. (34,42) In 2017, continued inspection reform led to the dissolution of the State Health Inspectorate and the creation of the Health Inspection Body, which is tasked with monitoring occupational safety and health standards for employees, along with monitoring a variety of public health standards. (43) In 2018, a law on the State Bodies of Governance Systems came into force changing the Health Inspection Body to the Health and Labor Inspection Body. (44) The Health and Labor Inspection Body has the ability to respond to complaints in relation to legislation protecting workers under the age of 18, but cannot proactively inspect for child labor issues. (45) Additional legislation and regulations need to be passed for the Health and Labor Inspection Body to begin conducting labor inspections. (11) As a result, in 2018 the Health and Labor Inspection Body was unable to enforce child labor laws in Armenia. (12,36)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Armenia may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, the Health and Labor Inspection Body (HLIB) had 23 labor inspectors. (37) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Armenia’s workforce, which includes more than 1.5 million workers. According to the ILO’s technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transition economies, Armenia would employ about 75 labor inspectors. (47,48)

In Armenia, some labor inspectors are hired as contractors rather than civil servants. (37,50) Civil servants in Armenia must receive training at least once every 3 years and there is no such requirement for contractors. Officials have expressed concern that a high proportion of contracted labor inspectors will negatively impact the overall training and competency of the labor inspectorate over time. (50)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Armenia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including investigation planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (50)	Unknown

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (11)	Yes (12)

In 2018, the national police investigated six criminal cases on the suspicion of labor trafficking and trained 208 officers on human trafficking and exploitation. (12,36) The Ministry of Labor partnered with the United Methodist Committee on Relief to conduct regional trainings on child trafficking for local government agencies, local police and other interested stakeholders. (36) The government reports that nearly 300 police officers and investigators are engaged in investigations of crimes involving children. (38,52,53)

Child victims found during the course of criminal investigations are referred to the Fund for Armenian Relief Children’s Center, where they are provided with specialized social services. (52)

A source reported that because not all the children who are referred to social service providers by the police are officially registered as victims, official statistics for begging, forced begging, and commercial sexual exploitation may underreport the scope of the problem. (1)

Research found that, although the police work with social service providers when conducting the pre-investigation, the Investigative Committee does not typically work with social service providers to ensure the well-being of the children during the investigation period. (1) In addition, a source reported that law enforcement officials do not receive sufficient specialized training on interviewing child victims of crime, which in some cases can prevent local investigators from collecting sufficient evidence to build a prosecutable case. (1,42) In 2018, the police created specialized interview rooms for cases involving children. (37) The government’s implementation of provisions on victim and witness protection in the Criminal Procedural Code continued to be inadequate, including victim-centered practices relating to prosecution, due to the lack of an appropriate mechanism and insufficient funding for these efforts. (6,36)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Armenia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission on the Protection of Child Rights	Coordinates activities of state bodies responsible for child protection, assists in developing state policy and programs aimed at the protection of children's rights, and assists in developing solutions to new child welfare problems as they arise. Facilitates cooperation between state and local government and NGOs. (53) Research was unable to determine whether the National Commission on the Protection of Child Rights was active during the reporting period.
Ministerial Council to Combat Human Trafficking	Implements, coordinates, and monitors government efforts on trafficking in persons. Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister. (3,36) In 2018, The Ministerial Council to Combat Human Trafficking and the Inter-Agency Working Group Against Trafficking in Persons continued to implement the 2016–2018 national action plan, published semi-annual and annual reports of its activities, and drafted a subsequent national action plan for 2019–2021. (6,36)
Inter-Agency Working Group Against Trafficking in Persons	Advises, organizes, and implements decisions made by the Ministerial Council to Combat Human Trafficking. Comprising officials from government entities; non-governmental stakeholders participate in regular meetings. Reports to the Ministerial Council. (36) In 2018, the Inter-Agency Working Group Against Trafficking in Persons met regularly and worked with the Ministerial Council to publish semi-annual and annual reports on trafficking in persons issues. (36)

The National Commission on the Protection of Child Rights coordinates government efforts to prevent child begging, and the Ministerial Council to Combat Human Trafficking coordinates government efforts on child trafficking. (3) However, Armenia lacks a mechanism to coordinate efforts to prevent child labor in other forms of street work, the services sector, and agriculture. (17)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Strategic Program for the Protection of Children's Rights	Includes an Action Plan for 2017–2021 that calls for the development and introduction of oversight and monitoring mechanisms to prevent the involvement of children in the worst forms of child labor. (21) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
2019 Annual Program on Protection of Children's Rights†	Aims to provide social protection for vulnerable children. (12,54)
Concept on Combating Violence Against Children	Defines government priorities for combating violence against children and outlines a list of related activities. Addresses labor exploitation of children, especially in rural communities, and commercial sexual exploitation of children, especially child trafficking. (38) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons and Exploitation (2016–2018)	Aimed to improve the legal framework and enforcement of legislation related to trafficking in and exploitation of children. Planned activities included developing tools for identification of the worst forms of child labor, and a guide for the proper identification and referral of child trafficking victims. (34,55)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2018, the government's Inter-Agency Working Group Against Trafficking in Persons drafted a new National Action Plan on Trafficking in Human Beings (2019–2021) which is currently in the approval process, including review by the Ministerial Council to Combat Human Trafficking. (36)

The UNDAF Plan for Armenia, which focuses on poverty reduction, lacks specific provisions on child labor. (23) In addition, research found that the National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons and Exploitation lacks funding for identified activities and is not actively monitored for progress. (51) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the oversight and monitoring mechanisms included in the Action Plan for 2017–2021 of the Strategic Program for the Protection of Children's Rights during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (CLEAR)	USDOL-funded capacity-building project implemented by ILO in 11 countries to build local and national capacity of governments to address child labor. In 2018, a draft hazardous child labor list was developed. (12) Additional information is available on the USDOL website. (57)
Family Benefits Program†	Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs-funded poverty-mitigation program for families with children recorded in the Family Poverty Assessment System. Families receive a monthly payment based on their financial situation, the number of children in the family, and the geographical location of their home. (52) In 2018, poor and extremely poor families with children received benefits on a regular basis; analyses indicated that lack of information about the program may reduce participation rates. (17,58)
UNICEF Country Program for 2016–2020	Seeks to improve child protection systems, including through expanding programs for children in extreme poverty, improving social integration of children with disabilities, and developing a victim-witness protection system. (59) In 2018, the UNICEF Armenia Country Program undertook a Strategic Moment of Reflection (SMR) to analyze the status of the country program implementation and progress. (58)
Day Care Centers‡	Government-supported day care centers that provide alternatives to working children and daytime centers that provide services for children with special needs. (39) Research was unable to determine whether the Day Care Centers were active during the reporting period.
Shelter for Victims of Human Trafficking†	Government shelter co-funded and run by the United Methodist Committee on Relief (UMCOR) that provides medical, psychological, social, and legal services to victims of human trafficking and access to education for children. (4) In 2018, this shelter was operational and assisted 41 individuals, although research was unable to determine how many of these individuals were children. (6)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (52,60)

Although the Government of Armenia has implemented programs to address child labor, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs to assist children engaged in child labor in street work or in agriculture.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Armenia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that Armenian law specifies the types of light work acceptable for children ages 14 to 15.	2014 – 2018
	Facilitate enforcement of labor law by codifying a definition of forced labor.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2018
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Enforcement	Establish a functioning labor inspectorate by ensuring that the legal framework on inspections clearly empowers the Health and Labor Inspection Body to monitor, inspect, and enforce child labor laws. Ensure that the Health and Labor Inspection Body's mandate includes the ability to conduct quality inspections, including targeted, complaint-based, and unannounced inspections; and that data on the number and type of inspections, violations, and penalties are made publicly available.	2017 – 2018
	Make information on the Health and Labor Inspection Body's funding publicly available.	2017 – 2018
	Strengthen labor inspection by increasing the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice and ensuring that labor inspectors are civil servants rather than contractors.	2017 – 2018

Armenia

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Protect children by providing law enforcement officials with specialized training on interviewing child victims of crime, by ensuring that law enforcement officials coordinate with social service providers during investigations, and by ensuring that all child victims, including those referred to social services, are counted in official statistics.	2018
	Implement and sufficiently fund a victim-witness protection mechanism for criminal proceedings.	2011 – 2018
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor, including all its worst forms.	2009 – 2018
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into national policies, including the UNDAF Plan for Armenia.	2011 – 2018
	Ensure that the National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons and Exploitation has sufficient oversight and funding to allow for effective implementation.	2017 – 2018
	Publish information about activities undertaken to implement the Concept on Combating Violence Against Children.	2016 – 2018
	Publish information about activities undertaken to implement the Strategic Program for the Protection of Children's Rights.	2018
Social Programs	Ensure that all children, including children in remote areas, those from low-income families and families that travel for seasonal labor, and those belonging to ethnic minorities, have equal access to education.	2010 – 2018
	Increase efforts to prevent institutionalization of children and to ensure that children currently residing in government institutions are not engaged in child labor.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that mainstream education is accessible to children with special education needs and children with disabilities by improving the accessibility of the physical infrastructure, expanding community-based support services, and ensuring that social stigmas against disabilities do not prevent children from accessing schools.	2014 – 2018
	Implement programs to address child labor in street work and in agriculture.	2009 – 2018
	Publicize information about the Family Benefits Program to encourage participation by eligible families with children.	2018

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, Azerbaijan made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved the State Program on developing official statistics, including on child labor, for 2018–2025 and drafted a new National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Persons for 2019–2023. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Azerbaijan is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement a regression in law that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. In 2017, the government extended a moratorium on all labor inspections through 2021, which will continue to leave potential violations of child labor laws undetected in workplaces. Children in Azerbaijan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. Legal protections only apply to workers with written employment contracts, leaving self-employed children and children working outside of formal employment relationships vulnerable to exploitation. In addition, research found limited evidence of government programs to address child labor in agriculture, the sector in which child labor is most prevalent.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Azerbaijan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. (1-3) Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (1,2) In 2017–2018, the government, in collaboration with UNICEF, conducted a survey in two regions of the country, which determined that families use child labor in family businesses. (2,4,5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Azerbaijan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3,6,7,10,16) Forced begging (1-3,6,7,10,14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child labor in Azerbaijan occurs in the agriculture sector; however, there are limited data available to indicate how many children are currently engaged in child labor in this or other sectors. (2) To augment family incomes, children under age 15 voluntarily worked alongside their parents picking cotton; however, the prevalence of child labor, as well as the use of forced child labor, if any, is unknown. (23)

Cotton production in Azerbaijan is partially governed by a quota system, which holds regional and local government officials responsible for mobilizing sufficient labor to meet established production targets. (17-21) In 2018, the Azerbaijan State Agricultural University forcibly sent more than 100 students to fields to harvest cotton. (17-22,24-26) Azerbaijani students typically enter university at age 17; however, research did not indicate whether any of these students were children under age 18 at the time they picked cotton. (17-22)

Children in Azerbaijan are subjected to sexual exploitation domestically. (2,3,27) Street children, many of whom become homeless after they are released from government-run orphanages and correctional facilities, and children from marginalized communities are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking. (1-3,27) Children living in border towns and economically depressed rural communities are also especially vulnerable to human trafficking. (2,3,28)

Although Article 5 of the Education Law guarantees free universal education, children with disabilities face difficulty accessing mainstream education. Barriers to education include inaccessibility of the physical infrastructure of schools, and a general social stigma against individuals with disabilities and children from the Roma ethnic community. (2,29) Only an estimated 10 to 17 percent of children with disabilities are able to attend school. The remaining children with disabilities are either educated at home or do not receive an education. (2,29) In addition, children in rural areas have low rates of school attendance. (2) Children not attending school are vulnerable to engaging in child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Azerbaijan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Azerbaijan’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including minimum age for work.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 42 of the Labor Code (30)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 250 of the Labor Code (30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 98 and 250–254 of the Labor Code; Decree 58 of the Cabinet of Ministers in 2000; Article 9 of the Law on the Rights of the Child (30-32)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 35 of the Constitution; Article 144-2 of the Criminal Code (33,34)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		The Law on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 106, 144-1, 144-3, and 173 of the Criminal Code (34,35)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 108, 151–152, 171, 171-1, and 242–244 of the Criminal Code (34)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 28 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Article 170 of the Criminal Code (32,34)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	19	Article 36 of the Law on Military Obligation and Military Service (36)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 2–3, and 12 of the Law on Military Obligation and Military Service (36)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Articles 5 and 19 of the Education Law (37)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 5 of the Education Law; Article 22 of the Law on the Rights of the Child (32,37)

Azerbaijan’s Labor Code applies only to workers with written employment contracts. (5,30) The government introduced both administrative and criminal penalties in 2014 for employing people without an employment agreement. (8) Although this strengthened protections for working children by attempting to ensure that all working children are employed under a contract, self-employed children and children working outside formal employment relationships, especially children performing work on the streets and child beggars, remain unprotected. (5, 11,38)

Within the framework of the State Program for the Development of Inclusive Education for Children with Disabilities for 2018–2024, amendments to the Law on Education (Special Education) for Persons with Disabilities were introduced to the Cabinet of Ministers and await presidential signature. (27) The amendments include measures on inclusive education involving children with learning disabilities. (5)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Azerbaijan may impede the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Protection of Population (MLSP)	Enforces labor laws related to the worst forms of child labor through the State Labor Inspection Service. (2,5)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Functions as the central executive agency responsible for public security and the prevention of criminal offenses, including child trafficking and begging. (2,5) Through the Anti-Trafficking Division (ATD), enforces human trafficking laws, investigates human trafficking violations, and enforces criminal laws related to the use of children in illicit activities. (2) Refers children who are victims of human trafficking to social services for assistance with school enrollment, participation in recreational activities, and obtaining proper documentation. (2)
Commission on Juvenile Issues and Protection of Minors’ Rights	Coordinates the enforcement of laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Located in the Cabinet of Ministers. (40)

National Referral Mechanism for Trafficking in Persons (NRM)	Refers victims of human trafficking to the relevant authorities to ensure the protection of their rights. (41) Refers human trafficking cases to the ATD for prosecution. (2) Led by the National Coordinator and the Deputy Minister of MIA and counts a large number of government agencies as members, including MLSPP and the State Committee on Family, Women and Children's Affairs. (15)

During the reporting period, sources reported a lack of coordination between law enforcement agencies. (2,3) In addition, the Commissions on Guardianship and Custody did not meet in 2018. (2)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Azerbaijan may impede the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (29)	Yes (5)

In 2016, as part of a broader anti-corruption drive, the government suspended all routine and unannounced labor inspections. In 2017, this moratorium was extended through 2021. (2) Although the labor inspectorate can sanction businesses for labor violations and inspections may still occur if a formal, written complaint is filed through its Electronic Information System on Notification of Labor Contract, or if a complaint is filed from the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA) through the Prosecutor's Office, no child labor inspections were conducted in 2018. (2,4,5,29) In 2018, the labor inspectorate received five child labor complaints in the catering industry but failed to take further action on these cases. (2)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Azerbaijan's workforce, which includes more than 5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transition economies, Azerbaijan would employ about 256 labor inspectors. (42,43) Government officials also assess the number of inspectors as insufficient to fully enforce child labor laws in Azerbaijan. (39)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The MOIA provided workshops and trainings on child labor to its investigators, including on the definition of child labor and national legislation to combat child labor. (4,27) However, limited evidence suggests that the institutionalized training program on child labor issues, including hazardous child labor, may be inadequate, because prosecutions, convictions, and sentences of child labor are not robust. (27,39)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Azerbaijan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including in the referral of victims to appropriate services.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (9)	Yes (2)

Investigators receive training as new employees and when the laws change. (3) During 2018, criminal law enforcement officials, including investigators, prosecutors, and judges received training on anti-human trafficking and participated in workshops and conferences on the topic. (3,39) However, government agencies, the IOM, and NGOs reported that additional training is needed specifically on child labor and addressing stereotypes related to victims engaged in commercial sexual exploitation. (2,3)

In 2018, MOIA reported that 450 children were identified as being forced by their parents to beg in the streets; 207 parents were subjected to administrative punishment. (2) Some of the children were removed from the exploitative situations; however, parents forcing their children into begging is not treated as a criminal offense, but rather as a family issue. (2) During the reporting period, the Azerbaijani Children Union referred one case of commercial sexual exploitation to the MOIA for investigation; the status of this case is unknown. (2)

NGOs report that children identified in child labor were not referred to social services and resumed work almost immediately after being identified by law enforcement officials. (29,39) In addition, child labor law enforcement efforts are concentrated in Baku, with limited investigations being undertaken outside of the capital. (27)

In 2016, the government reported that it created a database to collect information on crimes against children, including child trafficking, street work, and begging. (29) In 2018, as in 2017, it did not release any information on the database or any data it has collected. (9,27)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor. Although the State Committee on Family, Women and Children's Affairs coordinates child-related policies, the committee's success as a coordinating body is limited. (39) The Committee's staff members have reported that they lack the legal authority to give instructions to other government organizations about child labor and child welfare matters, which limits the Committee's ability to harmonize policies across the different agencies. (39)

Azerbaijan

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 8). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 8. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
State Program on Azerbaijani Youth (2017–2021)	Guides government policy on youth development, and includes a provision on increasing awareness of trafficking in persons risks among youth. (44) In 2018, the Ministry of Youth and Sports organized 183 awareness-raising events for youth, including theater performances, as part of the program. (27,39)
National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Human Beings (NAP) (2014–2018)	Aimed to identify and combat the causes of vulnerability to human trafficking in Azerbaijan through improved coordination among government agencies, NGOs, and intergovernmental organizations. Also sought to improve the identification and provision of services to victims. (45) Placed special emphasis on protecting the rights of child victims and preventing child trafficking. (28,45) In 2018, continued to inform the public about human trafficking, especially at border crossings, through the Victim Assistance Center (VAC). (2,3,27) Drafted a new NAP for 2019–2023. (3)
State Program for the Development of Inclusive Education for Children with Disabilities (2018–2024)†	Aims to create inclusive education for children with disabilities. In 2018, made amendments to legislation, ensured participation of children with disabilities in exams, and trained professionals on providing appropriate equipment and education for children. (5) UNICEF monitored the pilot schools in early 2019 to assess the government's success, which yielded promising results. The government plans to expand the program to additional schools in 2019. (5)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Although the Government of Azerbaijan has adopted the National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Human Beings (NAP) and the State Program on Azerbaijani Youth, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, including forced begging or hazardous child labor in agriculture. In addition, the NAP addresses many prior international recommendations, but lacks clear indicators of the source and amount of funding to implement the plan's associated programs, resulting in a lack of funding necessary for full implementation. (39)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including with funding.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL-funded projects supporting the elimination of child labor in Azerbaijan include Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues (GAP), implemented in approximately 40 countries by the ILO; and Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (MAP), implemented by the ILO in 11 countries. (46,47) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Decent Work Country Program (2016–2020)	Aims to promote decent employment opportunities and improve social protection and labor administration mechanisms. Includes a focus on youth employment. (48) In 2018, seminars were conducted for government employees and youth, including on entrepreneurship training. (27)
Social Shelters and Rehabilitation Centers for Minors†	Government-funded program comprising 13 centers that provide social services to vulnerable children, including street children. (5,49) NGOs reported that the centers are successful in providing services and may contribute to a reduction in child labor. (8) In November 2017, MLSPP opened an additional shelter and rehabilitation center to provide services to vulnerable children. (44) Active in 2018. (2,5)
Resources for Child Trafficking Victims†	The government maintains one shelter for human trafficking victims run by the MOIA. In 2018, the VAC organized 100 awareness-raising events in schools, municipalities, and at border crossings throughout the country. (2,27)
Targeted Social Assistance Program†	MLSPP-run program that provides cash transfers to families. (2) Continued activities in 2018. (39)
MIA Identification Document Program†	Provides identification documents to undocumented minors who may be street children or victims of human trafficking. (8) Continued activities in 2018 by assisting 58 street children, teenagers, and adults with the issuance of ID cards. (27,39)

† Program is funded by the Government of Azerbaijan.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (3,5)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, the Government of Azerbaijan approved the State Program for the Development of Official Statistics in the Republic of Azerbaijan in 2018–2025. (5,50) The program aims to improve and further develop the statistics system in the country, including statistics on child labor. (4,5,50)

Although the government has implemented programs to address child trafficking, research found little evidence to indicate that it has carried out programs to assist children working in agriculture.

NGO-run shelters that are tasked by the NAP with providing victim services do not receive consistent funding from the government. (3) Directors of these shelters note that the unpredictable nature of funding prevents long-term planning and capacity building of shelters. (3,44,51) Child victims have limited access to facilities that offer specialized care. (39) One shelter that provides such services does not receive consistent government funding, and most of its staff worked on a voluntary basis due to the lack of government funding and an inability to receive foreign assistance caused by government restrictions. (3,44,51)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Azerbaijan (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all working children are protected by law, including children working without a written employment agreement or outside of a formal employment relationship and children who are self-employed.	2011 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that forcing children to beg is treated as a criminal offense.	2018
Enforcement	Resume routine, targeted, and unannounced labor inspections to ensure that child labor laws are enforced.	2016 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2016 – 2018
	Publish information on the labor inspectorate's funding.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors, criminal investigators, and prosecutors receive sufficient training on the enforcement of laws pertaining to child labor and commercial sexual exploitation.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that children are sent to social centers or other services, as appropriate, so they do not return to child labor.	2018
	Ensure that labor law enforcement conducts sufficient child labor investigations outside Baku.	2018
	Publish complete data from the database on crimes against children.	2014 – 2018
Coordination	Increase coordination between law enforcement agencies and ensure that the Commission on Guardianship and Custody meets.	2018
	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor, including its worst forms.	2016 – 2018
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as forced begging and hazardous work in agriculture.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure the National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Human Beings receives the funding necessary for full implementation of associated programs.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that neither adults, students, nor children are forced to harvest cotton or other crops during the 2019 harvest.	2018
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that children with disabilities have equal access to education.	2016 – 2018
	Institute programs to address child labor in agriculture and on the streets.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that NGO-run shelters for victims of human trafficking are sufficiently and consistently funded to provide services to victims adequately, as dictated by the National Action Plan and National Referral Mechanism for Trafficking in Persons.	2015 – 2018

In 2018, Bangladesh made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched a $35 million, 3-year project to eliminate hazardous child labor by identifying and rehabilitating 100,000 child laborers. In addition, the Bangladesh Army and Rapid Action Battalion were deployed to assist in the identification and investigation of trafficking and smuggling cases among Rohingya refugees. The government also adopted a five-year National Plan of Action for the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking. However, children in Bangladesh engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor in the production of dried fish and bricks. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of garments and leather goods. Laws do not cover children working in the informal sector, and hazardous work prohibitions are not comprehensive. Moreover, the number of labor inspectors is insufficient for the size of Bangladesh's workforce, and fines are too low to deter child labor law violations.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Bangladesh engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor in the production of dried fish and bricks. (1,2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of garments and leather goods. (3-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Bangladesh.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.3 (1,326,411)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	89.4

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Harvesting and processing crops, including tobacco, raising poultry, grazing cattle, and harvesting tea leaves (10-14)
	Fishing and drying and processing fish (1,10,12,13,15)
	Harvesting and processing shrimp (13,16)
Industry	Quarrying and mining, including salt (10,17)
	Producing garments, textiles, and jute textiles (7,18-23)
	Producing leather,† leather goods, and footwear† (4-6,24-30)

	Working in tea shops and retail shops (10,12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in the drying of fish and the production of bricks (1,15,39,44,45)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (44,46,47)
	Forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (12,13,44,48-51)
	Use in illicit activities, including smuggling and selling drugs (13,50,52)
	Forced begging (44,50)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Many children in Bangladesh engage in dangerous work in informal manufacturing sectors and the dried fish industry. (3-6,15) Children working in informal garment production work as many as 16 hours a day and often carry heavy loads, use hazardous machinery, and handle chemicals without protective equipment. (7,29) In addition, due to large workloads, children may eat, shower, and sleep inside the factories where they work, often surrounded by water polluted by the factories. (7) Reports of violence against child workers has also been documented. (22) Children employed in tanneries also lack protective equipment and experience continuous exposure to heavy metals, formaldehyde, and other hazardous substances. (4,5) In the dried fish industry, children work all day without protective gear and are exposed to the insecticide DDT, salt, and the sun. (15) In addition, some children in Bangladesh work under forced labor conditions producing bricks and drying fish. (1,15,44)

Nearly 350,000 Rohingya children are living in refugee camps in Bangladesh following the Burmese military’s ethnic cleansing operations in 2017. Children residing in the camps are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor. (50,53,54) Rohingya girls are trafficked from the refugee camps for commercial sexual exploitation in Bangladesh, India, and Nepal. In some cases, girls are promised jobs in domestic service but are instead forced into commercial sexual exploitation. (44,47) Rohingya children recruited to work outside the refugee camps are reported to be underpaid or unpaid, unable to communicate with their families, and subjected to excessive working hours. (44,50) Girls typically work in domestic service, and boys work in construction, fishing, and shops. (44,51,55) Some girls are forced into domestic service, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and are abused by their employers. (49-51) There is also a report that Rohingya children are exploited in bonded labor in the fish drying industry, predominantly in the city of Cox’s Bazar. (45)

Although the 2010 National Education Policy raised the age of compulsory education from fifth grade (age 10) to eighth grade (age 14), the new compulsory education age is not enforceable until the legal framework is amended to reflect the revised policy. (70) Additionally, several factors contribute to children not attending school, such as inadequate access to water and sanitation facilities and the costs associated with education, including books and uniforms. (10,13) Although Rohingya refugee children are not permitted to attend school in Bangladesh due to their lack of documentation, the government has permitted international organizations, such as UNICEF, UNESCO, and UNHCR, to provide some limited, basic education services to Rohingya children. (13,56,57)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bangladesh has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bangladesh's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Section 34 of the Bangladesh Labor Act (58)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 39–42 of the Bangladesh Labor Act (58)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Sections 39–42 of the Bangladesh Labor Act; Statutory Regulatory Order Number 65 (58,59)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 370 and 374 of the Penal Code; Sections 3, 6, and 9 of the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking Act (60,61)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 3 and 6 of the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking Act; Section 6 of the Suppression of Violence Against Women and Children Act (61,62)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 372–373 of the Penal Code; Sections 78 and 80 of the Children's Act; Sections 3 and 6 of the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking Act; Section 8 of the Pornography Control Act (60,61,63,64)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Section 79 of the Children's Act (63)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	No
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	10	Section 2 of the Primary Education (Compulsory) Act (65)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution (66)

* No conscription (67)

In 2018, the Bangladesh Labor Act was amended, banning all child labor in factories, and only allowing children age 14–18 to engage in light work. The former provision permitted children as young as 12 to perform light work. (57,58,68) Minimum age protections in the Bangladesh Labor Act do not cover children working in the informal sector. Child labor in Bangladesh is most prevalent in the informal sector, which includes domestic work, street work, and work on small agricultural farms. (57,58) In addition, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover garment production and drying fish; both are areas of work in which there is evidence that children work in unsafe and unhealthy environments for long periods of time. (1,6,15,59)

Bangladesh has also not criminally prohibited the use of children in pornographic performances and in the production of drugs. (61,63,68) In addition, there are no published laws setting the minimum age of voluntary recruitment by the state armed forces at age 16 and setting safeguards to ensure that children under age 18 who join do so voluntarily. Moreover, the legal framework does not prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (69)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Inspection for Factories and Establishments (DIFE) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Inspection for Factories and Establishments	Enforces labor laws, including those relating to child labor and hazardous work. (71)
Bangladesh Police	Enforces Penal Code provisions protecting children from forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (72) In the case of the Trafficking in Persons Monitoring Cell, investigates cases of human trafficking and enforces the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking Act's anti-trafficking provisions. (73)
Bangladesh Labor Court	Prosecutes labor law violations, including those related to child labor, and imposes fines or sanctions against employers. (74)
Child Protection Networks	Responds to violations against children, including child labor. Comprises officials from various agencies with mandates to protect children, prosecute violations, monitor interventions, and develop referral mechanisms at the district and sub-district levels between law enforcement and social welfare services. (75)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Bangladesh took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of DIFE that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (13)	Yes (57)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (13)	Yes (57)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (71)	No (57)

† Data are from June 2016 to July 2017.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Bangladesh's workforce, which includes more than 66 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Bangladesh would employ about 1,666 labor inspectors. (77-79) Reports indicate that DIFE rarely inspects unregistered factories and establishments, in which children are more likely to be employed. (16,57,80,81) In addition, the current penalty for a child labor law violation, a $63 fine, is an inadequate deterrent. (75,81)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Bangladesh took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Bangladesh Police that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (13)	Yes (57)

In 2018, the Bangladesh Police reported that 80 children were victims of human trafficking. (84) The Bangladesh Army and Rapid Action Battalion were also reported to have been deployed to assist in the identification and investigation of possible trafficking of Rohingya refugees, a population with children vulnerable to child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (44,83) However, the Trafficking in Persons Monitoring Cell reportedly lacks the necessary funds and staff to adequately address cases of child trafficking. (85) Reporting also indicates that Child Protection Networks, intended to be a referral mechanism between law enforcement and social services, are not operating due to a lack of funds. (86)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

Bangladesh

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Child Labor Welfare Council	Coordinates efforts undertaken by the government to guide, coordinate, and monitor the implementation of the National Plan of Action on the Elimination of Child Labor. (87) Chaired by the Ministry of Labor and Employment, comprises officials representing relevant government ministries, international organizations, child advocacy groups, and employer and worker organizations. (88) Met in 2018 to discuss upcoming programs to eliminate child labor. (89)
Counter-Trafficking National Coordination Committee, Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA)	Coordinates the work of government agencies and international and local NGOs on international and domestic human trafficking, including child trafficking, through bimonthly meetings. (73) Oversees district counter-trafficking committees, which manage counter-trafficking committees for sub-districts and smaller administrative units. (73,90) Some district and sub-district committees allocated funding for coordination activities and victim support in 2018. (44)
Rescue, Recovery, Repatriation, and Integration Task Force, MHA	Coordinates efforts of Bangladesh and India to rescue, recover, repatriate, and reintegrate victims of human trafficking, particularly children, between the two countries. Liaises with various ministries, government departments, NGOs, and international organizations that assist trafficked children. (90,91) During the reporting period, implemented and monitored the Memorandum of Understanding and the Standard Operating Procedures between Bangladesh and India on the repatriation of human trafficking victims between the two countries. (44,92)

Bangladesh and India’s Rescue, Recovery, Repatriation, and Integration Task Forces reportedly are not well coordinated between the two countries, database and case management systems have not been developed, and the process to repatriate human trafficking victims takes too long. (92)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Child Labor National Plan of Action (2012–2021)	Identifies strategies for developing institutional capacity, increasing access to education and health services, raising social awareness, strengthening law enforcement, and creating prevention and reintegration programs. (93) During the reporting period, the government provided stipends to working children to help them return to school through the fourth phase of the Elimination of Hazardous Child Labor program. (89,94)
Domestic Workers Protection and Welfare Policy	Sets the minimum age for domestic work at 14 years; children ages 12 and 13 can work as domestic workers with parental permission. (95) However, the policy is not legally enforceable until the legal framework is amended to reflect the revised policy. (96) During the reporting period, the government sought to ensure the rights and welfare of domestic workers. (94)
National Plan of Action for Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking (2018–2022)†	Establishes a plan to build government capacity to address trafficking in persons and provide economic and social safety nets for victims and vulnerable populations, particularly children. (97,98)
National Education Policy	Specifies the government’s education policy, including pre-primary, primary, secondary, vocational and technical, higher, and non-formal education policies. Sets the compulsory age for free education through eighth grade (age 14). (70) During the reporting period, primary education was extended to eighth grade in 609 schools, new secondary schools were constructed, and existing secondary schools were renovated, including the installation of girls’ toilets. (94)
Seventh Five Year Plan (2016–2020)	Includes the elimination of the worst forms of child labor, with a focus on child domestic workers and other vulnerable groups. Sets out actions to be taken by the government, including forming a policy for children working in the formal sector; providing assistance to street children to protect them from exploitation, coordinating with the government and other stakeholders for effective rehabilitation, increasing working children’s access to formal and non-formal learning, and providing livelihood support to poor households with children. (99) During the reporting period, the government reported that training centers and homes were established for vulnerable children. (94)

† The policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2018, the government published a budget for the implementation of child-relevant policies. (94) The government has yet to include child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Education Policy. (70)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Elimination of Hazardous Child Labor, Phase IV (2018–2021)*†	$35 million Government of Bangladesh-funded, 3 year project implemented by the Ministry of Labor and Employment. Seeks to identify 100,000 child laborers, reintegrate these children into vocational schools, and provide livelihood support for their parents. (76,89)
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce (CLEAR) Child Labor Project	USDOL-funded, capacity-building project implemented by the ILO in 11 countries to build the capacity of local and national governments to address child labor. During the reporting period, 300 children were withdrawn from work and re-enrolled in school with the support of the pilot child labor monitoring system that was launched in 2017. (89) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Enabling Environment for Child Rights‡	Ministry of Women and Children's Affairs program, supported by UNICEF, which rehabilitates street children engaged in child labor and enrolls them in school. (100,101) During the reporting period, supported vulnerable children with cash transfers. (94)
Child Help Line 1098†	Ministry of Social Work-implemented and UNICEF-supported 24-hour emergency hotline. Connects children vulnerable to violence, abuse, and exploitation with social protection services. (102) The program continued to be implemented during the reporting period. (94)

† Program is funded by the Government of Bangladesh.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (104,105)

Although the government has implemented social programs to eliminate hazardous child labor, research found that the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem. In addition, research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children working in tanneries, the informal garment sector, and the dried fish industry. (29)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bangladesh (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2018
	Amend the national law to reflect the amended Domestic Workers Protection and Welfare policy.	2018
	Extend the law's minimum age protections to children working in the informal sector, including in domestic work, on the streets, and in small-scale agriculture.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive, in particular by including garment production and fish drying.	2016 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the use of children for pornographic performances.	2015 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, particularly in the production of drugs.	2015 – 2018
	Establish age 16 as the minimum age for voluntary recruitment by the state military, with safeguards for voluntariness.	2016 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that education is compulsory through eighth grade and is consistent with the minimum age for work.	2012 – 2018
	Publish information related to labor law enforcement, including the amount of labor inspectorate funding, whether inspectors received refresher training, the number of labor inspections conducted, the number of inspections conducted at worksites, the number of child labor violations, the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, the number of penalties imposed for child labor violations that were collected, and whether routine inspections were conducted.	2012 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure enforcement of citations and penalties for labor law violations, including authorizing the inspectorate to assess penalties for child labor law violations and increasing penalties for child labor law violations to be an adequate deterrent.	2014 – 2018
	Create mechanisms for labor law enforcement to refer children involved in child labor to appropriate legal and social services.	2013 – 2018
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspections are conducted with sufficient frequency at unregistered factories and businesses.	2013 – 2018
	Publish information on the enforcement of laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including the number of investigations, the number of prosecutions, and the number of convictions. In addition, publish information on whether a referral mechanism exists between criminal law enforcement authorities and social services.	2012 – 2018
	Provide police with sufficient resources and training to enforce violations involving human trafficking, forced labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that Child Protection Networks are sufficiently funded to provide a functional referral mechanism between law enforcement and social services.	2016 – 2018
Coordination	Adequately coordinate with India's Rescue, Recovery, Repatriation, and Integration Task Force to ensure the timely repatriation of human trafficking victims.	2018
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Education Policy.	2014 – 2018
Social Programs	Implement programs that seek to address inadequate access to water and sanitation facilities and prohibitive fees associated with education.	2013 – 2018
	Provide sufficient education services for Rohingya refugee children and remove other barriers to their school attendance.	2017 – 2018
	Expand programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, including developing and implementing programs to address child labor in tanneries and in the informal garment and fish drying industries.	2016 – 2018

In 2018, Belize made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government drafted legislation to create a hazardous work list and light work framework and created a curriculum for labor inspectors to help identify child workers. The Labor Department appointed a Senior Labor Officer dedicated specifically to child labor and improving interagency coordination. In addition, the government expanded its secondary school subsidy program to serve all rural areas in the country. However, children in Belize engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, fishing, and construction. Although Belize made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, the country's minimum age for work is 12 and does not meet international standards. In addition, the country lacks prohibitions against the use of children in illicit activities. Also, the government does not appear to have programs that aim to reduce child labor in agriculture, except in the sugar industry.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Belize engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, fishing, and construction. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Belize.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	1.6 (1,405)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	1.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		103.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from National Child Activity Survey, 2013. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of beans, bananas, citrus fruits, cereals, corn, rice, sugarcane, papayas, and vegetables (3,6,7,8-11)
	Fishing, including for fish, lobster, and conch (3,6,7)
	Butchering or raising livestock, including poultry and cattle (6,7)
Industry	Construction, carpentry, masonry, wood carving, carrying heavy loads, and using power tools (3,6,7)
	Quarrying, including operating stone crushers (7,8)
Services	Street and retail vending (7)
	Yard work, including using lawnmowers, weed-eaters, and machetes (6,7,12)
	Sewing (7)
	Working and cooking in food service, including using large mixers and grills (3,6,7)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Work in tourist sector, including in food and alcohol service and hospitality, and as tour guides, maintenance personnel, and security guards. (3)
	Auto repair (6,7)
	Welding (7)
	Pumping gas (6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3,8,10,13,14)
	Illicit activities, including trafficking of drugs and weapons (3,7,15)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Belize lacks a recent, comprehensive child labor study, which makes it difficult to clearly determine the sectors and activities in which working children are engaged. (3) However, reports suggest that children in rural areas work in the agriculture and fishing industries, and children in urban areas work in the construction and tourist industries. Children work on family-owned farms and accompany adults to employment sites to assist in planting and harvesting. (3)

Among Belize’s ethnic groups, Mennonites had the highest percentage of child labor with approximately 9.5 percent of Mennonite children engaged in child labor. (6,7,12) Non-Mennonite children are also engaged in child labor on Mennonite-owned land. (9) Children working on Mennonite land often use dangerous tools like machetes, tractors, and plows, and work long hours in the sun without proper hydration. (9,12) Limited reporting also indicates that boys working mainly in Mennonite communities may be involved in operating heavy machinery and flying small airplanes to spray crops. (3)

Children in Belize are also engaged in child labor in diving and fishing for fish, lobster, and conch. Many of these children cannot swim or may be involved in swimming at extreme depths, and have been injured working with dangerous tools such as anchors, fish traps, chipping hammers, and spears. (3,7)

Government officials indicate that Belize has a reputation as being a destination for child sexual exploitation, with reports of children being trafficked in areas frequented by tourists or seasonal workers, such as San Pedro, Punta Gorda, and Belize City. (3,14,16) Girls from impoverished communities and LGBTI children are particularly vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation and labor trafficking in Belize. (14,15,17,16) In 2018, there were reports of girls in Punta Gorda being exploited by family members and made to engage in sexual relationships with American expats, who would reward the families financially. (3) Anecdotal reports also indicate that boys from Belize City and San Pedro were recruited to transport and sell drugs and firearms and commit murders as part of gang warfare. (3,7,12,15)

Primary and secondary education is tuition free in Belize up to age 14, but children’s access to education is sometimes hindered by the cost of school fees, textbooks, uniforms, and meals. (3,15,18-20) In 2018, the government expanded its secondary school subsidy program to serve all rural areas in the country and Punta Gorda, Dangriga, and Corozal, with anecdotal reports indicating that the expansion has resulted in more rural children having access to high school education. (3,21) Still, some Spanish-speaking children in northern districts face language barriers at schools that provide instruction only in English. (9) In addition, Belize lacks qualified teachers, basic supplies, and facilities to educate children. (3,7)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Belize has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Belize's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and hazardous work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	12	Articles 54, 164, and 169 of the Labor Act; Articles 2–3 of the Shops Act (22,23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	14	Articles 2 and 7 of the Families and Children Act; Articles 54 and 169 of the Labor Act (22,24)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 8 of the Constitution; Articles 157–158 of the Labor Act (22,25)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 11–14 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Act; Article 9 of the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (Prohibition) Act; Articles 49–51 of the Criminal Code (26-28)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 2, 11, and 13–14 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Act; Articles 2–9 of the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (Prohibition) Act; Articles 49–51 of the Criminal Code (26-28)

* No conscription (29)

In 2018, the Government of Belize cooperated with USDOL to launch the Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor II (CLEAR II) project, which was designed to review and amend legislation addressing child labor issues and improve monitoring and enforcement efforts. The project's Legislative Review Committee drafted a hazardous work and light work list and is proposing extending the compulsory education age to age 16, but these efforts are pending ministry- and cabinet-level review and approval. (3)

Belize

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Belizean law does not conform to international standards because it sets the minimum age for employment at age 12. (22) However, the minimum legal age for work in wholesale or retail trade or business is age 14. (23) Belizean law is also inconsistent with international standards on hazardous work. Children under age 14 are prohibited from working in industrial undertakings—including activities such as mining, manufacturing, and construction—but children over age 14 are explicitly permitted to work in those types of activities. (22) Although Belizean law indicates that children under age 18 are prohibited from being employed or engaged in any activity that may be detrimental to their health, education, or mental, physical, or moral development, the law does not specify which employment activities are detrimental to children. (22,24) A list of hazardous work prohibited for all children has not been adopted as law. (31,32,33) Furthermore, Belizean law is inconsistent with international standards on light work, because the types of light work permissible for children have not yet been identified. (22,33)

The Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (Prohibition) Act and the Criminal Code prohibit all forms of child sexual exploitation, with the former explicitly prohibiting child pornography. (26,27) However, consensual sex with children ages 16 or 17 is permitted, including in cases in which a person gives or promises remuneration, goods, food, or other benefits in exchange for the sexual act. This provision leaves children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (31,26) Research could not determine whether laws prohibit the use of children in specific illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. (34,35)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and other relevant ministries that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Local Government, and Rural Development	Identifies cases and enforces laws related to child labor and hazardous child labor through its Labor Department. (8,13)
Ministry of Human Development and Social Transformation, Department of Human Services	Receives referrals for child labor cases; trains immigration officials, labor inspectors, and the Belize Police Department (BPD) in making referrals; and handles human trafficking cases. (10,36) Provides victims with welfare services, including medical and social services and counseling assistance. (8,37)
BPD	Investigates cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking through Sexual Offense and Family Violence Units. (10)
Ministry of Education, Youth, Sports, and Culture	Investigates truancy offenses in schools and issues fines for these violations. (38)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecution	Prosecutes criminal offenses, including cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (39)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Belize took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient inspections and penalties to deter child labor violations.

The government does not publish information regarding labor inspectorate funding. However, government officials indicate that the level of funding is insufficient and that the inspectorate has a need for more vehicles, fuel, and inspectors. (3) Although the Labor Department is required to visit every business at least once a year, it usually falls short of this goal due to a lack of resources. (3,7) Labor inspectors are able to assess penalties, but the current fine for child labor infractions is only $13.50. Thus, inspections and penalties may be insufficient to deter child labor violations in Belize. (3,41) Although training is provided to new inspectors, funding is insufficient to address the inspectorate's full need for refresher training on existing laws throughout the year. (3)

In 2018, the labor inspectorate carried out 50 child labor-specific inspections in the Orange Walk and Corozal districts and identified 25 cases of child labor. However, these inspections were limited to the sugarcane industry and did not include other sectors in which children work, such as in tourism, construction, fishing, and commercial sexual exploitation. (3)

In 2018, 16 labor officers, 2 truancy officers, 2 Social Security Board inspectors, 1 immigration inspector, and 2 community police officers participated in a training of trainers workshop as part of the CLEAR II project; this training introduced participants to curriculum on identifying, addressing, and preventing child labor that could then be shared within participants' respective organizations. (3,42) The CLEAR II project also developed a curriculum in collaboration with the Ministry of Labor to guide labor inspectors on how to monitor and enforce child labor laws. (43)

Child labor complaints can be submitted to the Labor Department, the Belize Police Department (BPD), or the Department of Human Services. Limited reporting from local NGOs and the private sector indicates that it is difficult to follow up on the status of complaints made. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Belize took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, Belize increased its efforts to combat human trafficking. The Ministry of Human Development signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU) with a domestic violence shelter that will house trafficking victims, and the BPD signed an MOU with the Human Trafficking Institute to improve victim identification and support. (2) The government initiated investigations into at least two cases of child sexual exploitation that possibly involved human trafficking and referred five child trafficking victims to social services. (2) The government also provided specialized training to various government representatives on trafficking in persons, including sending various government representatives to the International Law Enforcement Academy’s Executive Policy and Development Symposium on Human Trafficking and Model Law in New Mexico, which focused on responding to human trafficking and child exploitation. (2) Belize continued to implement a public awareness campaign on child sex tourism, which includes public service announcements and billboards at the international airport and border crossings. (2)

Despite these efforts, there have been no human trafficking convictions in Belize since 2005, and although the country’s laws allow for the imprisonment of violators, trafficking cases are often dismissed by lower courts. (2,44) Belize lacks official statistics on child sex tourism, and criminal investigators and police officers lacked sufficient resources—such as vehicles, fuel, office supplies, and adequate training—to investigate violations of criminal law, including the worst forms of child labor. (2,12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Child Labor Committee	Coordinates efforts among ministries to combat child labor and implement the National Child Labor Policy. Led by the Ministry of Labor and 14 government and civil society members, and chaired by a Senior Labor Officer. (45,46) In 2018, the committee held at least 10 regular meetings. (3)
Anti-Trafficking in Persons Council	Identifies and rescues human trafficking victims, trains law enforcement officials, and educates the public about the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Led by the Vice Minister of Human Development and Social Transformation; includes 12 other government agencies and civil society organizations. (1) In 2018, the Council provided human trafficking training to prison staff as well as immigration personnel. (2)
National Committee for Families and Children (NCFC)	Promotes, monitors, and evaluates Belize’s compliance with its national and international commitments to children, including the UN CRC. (37) Implements the National Results Framework for Children and Adolescents 2017–2030, also referred to as the Children’s Agenda. (11,47,48) In 2018, the Ministry of Labor and NCFC collaborated with municipal governments and UNICEF to host a 2-day event to review provisions and mechanisms outlined in the Children’s Agenda. Nine participating mayors signed a memorandum of understanding to express their commitment to implementing the Agenda’s initiatives. (49)

In 2018, the Labor Department appointed a Senior Labor Officer dedicated specifically to child labor, who serves as the secretary of the National Child Labor Committee (NCLC). The appointment has resulted in improved communications from the Labor Department on child labor issues with stakeholders. (3,50)

Although the NCLC was re-activated in 2017 and the committee met regularly in 2018, there is no record of actions or recommendations produced by this committee in 2018. (3,51) Furthermore, limited reporting revealed government concerns that the committee was not functioning properly. (52)

In 2018, the Labor Department collaborated with the Belize Sugar Cane Farmer's Association to study child labor in the sugarcane industry, specifically in the northern Corozal and Orange Walk districts. (3) The study identified 25 cases of child labor, and the Department applied a new approach of education and awareness instead of imposing penalties, because the cases were not considered severe. (3,50) The results of the study were shared with the Ministry of Human Development in late 2018. (53)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Policy	Focuses on strengthening child labor laws, creating legislation to address existing gaps, and providing educational assistance to children who have been or who are currently engaged in child labor. (54,55) Aims to strengthen government institutions and services and to train labor officers. (45,55)
CARE Model	Coordinates the protection, care, and monitoring of sexually exploited and trafficked children. Outlines the role of the Department of Human Services and the BPD in receiving allegations of commercial sexual exploitation of children and referring children to services. (56)
National Results Framework for Children and Adolescents (Children's Agenda) 2017–2030	Launched in June 2017. (11,47,48) Sets out the government's agenda and priorities to protect the rights of children and adolescents, including in education, health, economic security and opportunity, and protection from discrimination, abuse, and exploitation, including child labor. (47) Raises awareness of the role of families in promoting early childhood education. (48) As part of this policy, government ministries received training from UNICEF Belize and private partners in 2018 on how to develop data dashboards that highlight outcomes of the Children's Agenda. (57)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (17)

Research was unable to identify actions taken during the reporting period under the National Child Labor Policy or the CARE Model.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor II (CLEAR II)	$7 million, USDOL-funded project, implemented by Winrock International and partners Verité and Lawyers Without Borders in seven countries to build local and national capacity of governments to address child labor. (3) As part of the CLEAR II project, Belize collaborated with USDOL to create the inter-agency Legislative Review Committee, which met regularly in 2018 to review legislative amendments on child labor. The committee has provided an opportunity for greater inter-agency collaboration and cooperation between responsible agencies that previously did not frequently interact or share information. (3,50) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (10,13,58)

Research found no evidence of government programs to combat commercial sexual exploitation of children or assist children working in agriculture, fisheries, or construction.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Belize (Table 11).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law prohibits all forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children ages 16 and 17.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that the minimum age for work is age 14 in all sectors.	2013 – 2018
	Adopt a list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children and ensure that all children under age 18 are prohibited from engaging in hazardous work.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that laws prohibit the use of children in specific illicit activities, such as the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that law enforcement agencies have sufficient resources to conduct labor inspections and criminal investigations, especially in rural areas and in areas where children are more vulnerable.	2009 – 2018
	Provide initial and refresher training on the worst forms of child labor to criminal investigators, and ensure that funding is sufficient to implement adequate training systems.	2018
	Ensure that the level of inspections and penalties are sufficient to deter child labor law violations.	2018
	Conduct targeted inspections in sectors in which child labor is known to occur.	2018
	Improve complaint mechanisms so that the case status of labor complaints can be tracked.	2018
	Impose criminal penalties for the worst forms of child labor and ensure that courts hear and try human trafficking cases.	2017 – 2018
	Publish complete information on enforcement efforts to combat child labor, including labor inspectorate funding and the number of criminal investigations.	2015 – 2018
Prosecute and penalize violations of the worst forms of child labor.	2018
Coordination	Ensure that the National Child Labor Committee is developing and implementing recommendations, and provide oversight to ensure that the committee functions as intended.	2015 – 2018
Government Policies	Ensure that regular actions are taken to implement the National Child Labor Policy and CARE Model.	2018
Social Programs	Conduct a comprehensive study of children’s activities to determine whether they are engaged in or at risk for involvement in the worst forms of child labor, to inform policies and programs.	2018
	Increase access to education by eliminating fees, improving educational facilities, hiring additional qualified teachers, providing textbooks, uniforms, and meals, and addressing language barriers for Spanish-speaking students.	2011 – 2018
	Develop programs aimed at reducing child labor, including in agriculture, construction, and fisheries, and that address the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2009 – 2018

In 2018, Benin made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved a National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor, and approved a new Penal Code that enhances protections to victims of trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. During the year authorities provided temporary shelter and assistance to 1,214 child victims of trafficking and exploitation. However, children in Benin engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the production of cotton and crushed granite. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work and street vending. Children with disabilities have no access to the regular education system, leaving these children at risk of becoming victims of child labor and exploitation. In addition, limited resources for the adequate enforcement of child labor laws impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Benin engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the production of cotton and crushed granite. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work and street vending. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Benin. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	20.9 (680,004)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	71.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	16.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		80.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (4)
Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey, 2011–2012. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cotton† (3,6)
	Capturing,† cleaning, and descaling fish (7-9)
	Raising livestock† (9)
Industry	Collecting,† crushing,† washing,† and sieving stones† for gold mining† and gravel† and granite quarrying† (1,8,10)
	Construction, including brickmaking† (7,8,10)
Services	Domestic work† (1,2,10,11)

	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,12,16,17)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Benin

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children are trafficked mostly within Benin but also to other countries, primarily Gabon, Nigeria, and the Republic of the Congo, for domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, and to work in vending, farming, and stone quarrying. Children living in the northern regions of Benin are the most vulnerable to trafficking. (1,2,11,15,18-20) Traditionally, under a practice known locally as vidomégon, children, up to 95 percent of them girls, live with relatives or family friends to perform household services in exchange for educational opportunities; however, many children become victims of labor exploitation and sexual abuse. (1,2,11,15,18,21,22)

The Constitution guarantees free compulsory primary education; nevertheless, some parents are expected to pay school fees because many schools lack funds. (23,24) In addition, evidence suggests that incidences of physical, psychological, and sexual abuse, including corporal punishment and rape of students by teachers, prevent some children from remaining in school. (2,12,15,16,23,25) Children with disabilities have no access to the regular education system, and a lack of reliable transportation forces some children to walk long distances to school. (22,23,26) In rural areas, in particular, children are often unregistered due to a limited understanding of procedures for receiving a birth certificate and the associated costs. Unregistered children face denial of public services. (20,23,27)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Benin has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Benin's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including insufficient penalties.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 166 of the Labor Code; Article 210 of the Child Code (28,29)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 1 of the Hazardous Occupations List (30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Occupations List (30)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 3 and 303 of the Labor Code; Article 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors; Article 212 of the Child Code (28,29,31)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 3 and 303 of the Labor Code; Articles 2–4, 6, 18, and 22 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors; Articles 212 and 352–353 of the Child Code; Articles 499–501 and 504 of the Penal Code (28,29,31,32)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 3 of the Law on the Prevention and Repression of Violence Against Women; Article 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors; Articles 212 and 378 of the Child Code; Article 504 of the Penal Code (29,31-33)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 212 of the Child Code; Article 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors (29,31)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 6 of Law 2005-43 (34)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 6 of Law 2005-43; Title II, Article 32 of the Constitution (24,34)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 2 and 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors (31)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 24 of Act No 2003-17; Article 4 of the Law on the Prevention and Repression of Violence Against Women (33,35)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 13 of the Constitution; Article 114 of the Child Code (24,29)

On June 5, 2018, the National Assembly approved the Penal Code, and on December 28, the Constitutional Court declared the new Penal Code consistent with the Constitution. The new Penal Code enhances criminal provisions for trafficking offenses, offenses related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children, and some abuses related to the practice of vidomégon. (8,11,32) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (36) Currently, Article 22 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors prescribes insufficient penalties, especially in comparison to punishments for other serious crimes, such as rape. (19,31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Civil Service (MOLCS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Civil Service (MOLCS)	Enforces child labor laws and investigates labor code infractions, including those related to child labor. (12,16,37) Provides support to victims of child labor and human trafficking. (2,16,38)
Ministry of Social Affairs and Microfinance	Offers social assistance and social support services to vulnerable populations. Through its Office of Family, Childhood, and Adolescence, provides assistance to trafficking victims by means of 85 Social Promotion Centers across the country. (9,11) Through the Family and Child Monitoring Office, maintains a database on child trafficking. During the reporting period, trained 456 child protection officials, including police officers, labor inspectors, and social workers on children's rights and capacity building to improve social services to vulnerable children. (11)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforces criminal laws related to the protection of minors, including the worst forms of child labor, through the Central Office for the Protection of Minors (OCPM) under the Criminal Police Department. (2,8,16,19) Through OCPM, maintains a child trafficking database to track and process child trafficking cases. (11) The government allocated approximately $94,545 for OCPM activities in 2018. (8) Through its Brigade des Moeurs (vice squad), addresses human trafficking for sexual exploitation. (21)

In 2018, the Central Office for the Protection of Minors (OCPM) established child protection services in the cities of Tindji, Parakou, Segbana, Karimama, and Malanville. (8) Services provided include investigation, initial legal and psychological assistance, and referral to appropriate social services providers. (39)

Benin

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Benin took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOLCS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018

In 2018, the General Directorate of Labor trained 40 labor inspectors, police officers, and social workers on topics related to child labor, including the interpretation and application of relevant laws. (8,39) During the year, labor inspections were conducted in centers at which apprentices learn assorted trades in the cities of Bohicon, Lokossa, Abomey, Azovè, Parakou, and Porto-Novo. Inspectors observed violations that included a failure to adhere to minimum age requirements, lack of apprenticeship contracts, and poor hygiene and safety conditions. (11) During the year, government authorities imposed penalties for two child labor violations in Cotonou and in Porto-Novo. In Cotonou, two perpetrators paid a fine of $524 for labor exploitation of a mason apprentice, and in Porto-Novo, a vendor in an open market received a 5-year suspended prison sentence and a fine of $175 for economically exploiting a child. (8,39) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Benin's workforce, which includes more than 3 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Benin would employ about 92 inspectors. (41,42) Despite the significant increase in budget in 2018, the labor inspectorate stated that it lacks material and financial resources to adequately conduct inspections. (2,12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Benin took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, six individuals were convicted and punished for involvement in child trafficking for labor exploitation. Three of the individuals were sentenced to 3 to 60 months in prison, and the other three individuals received 2 to 18-month suspended sentences. (11,40) In 2018, UNICEF assisted the OCPM in keeping a registry of every child that entered a government-built shelter used as a temporary transit facility for child victims of human trafficking. (8) The OCPM, under the Ministry of the Interior, works together with Social Promotion Centers under the MOLCS to provide social services to child victims and ensure criminal investigation of the cases. (45) However, the OCPM remained understaffed, underfunded, and without sufficient office supplies, transportation, and fuel to adequately enforce laws and provide victims with immediate assistance. (2,11) Police lacked the transportation resources to investigate human trafficking cases and the tools with which to maintain database records. Court officials continued to express their difficulties with maintaining database records on human trafficking, and reported a lack of personnel and infrastructure to efficiently prosecute cases. (11,18,46)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of clarity regarding institutional mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Executive Committee to Combat Child Labor	Provides policy guidance; approves programs; and coordinates, monitors, and evaluates efforts to combat child labor in Benin. (2) Led by MOLCS, and comprising delegates from multiple ministries, UNICEF, ILO, trade unions, and NGOs. (16,47) In November 2018, held a 2-day session attended by 30 officials representing the government, NGOs, trade unions, and employers' associations to discuss activities undertaken since the previous meeting, and the implementation of the National Action Plan. (8,39)
National Commission on Children's Rights	Coordinates and promotes efforts on children's rights at the national level. Chaired by the Ministry of Justice, with the participation of delegates from multiple ministries and representatives of civil society groups, who are appointed by the Minister of Justice. (2) Research was unable to determine whether the National Commission on Children's Rights was active during the reporting period.
National Monitoring and Coordination Working Group for Child Protection (CNSCPE)	Coordinates government efforts to address child protection through five technical committees: trafficking and exploitation, juvenile justice, violence against children, orphans and vulnerable children, and early childhood. Led by the Ministry of Social Affairs and Microfinance, and represents 40 members from government ministries, NGOs, donor agencies, and international and bilateral technical partners. (8) CNSCPE did not meet in 2018. (8,39)
Inter-Ministerial Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates government efforts to address trafficking in persons through five committees: prosecution, prevention and protection, statistics, intellectual, and policy. Led by the Ministry of Planning and Development and includes the membership of key ministries and NGOs. (9,20,46) The task force met regularly in 2018 to discuss trafficking in persons issues. (8,11) During the reporting period, the government finalized a National Policy to Fight Trafficking in Persons with an accompanying action plan, which are expected to be implemented in 2019. (44,48)

In November 2018, a delegation comprising representatives from the Ministry of Social Affairs, the OCPM, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of Justice, and UNICEF traveled to Libreville to sign a cooperative agreement with Gabon to fight child trafficking. In addition, during the reporting period, the government, with the assistance of the National Institute of Statistics and Economic Analysis and UNICEF, undertook efforts to consolidate the Ministry of Social Affairs' database on the social and justice sectors. (8,39) The mandates of the National Executive Committee to Combat Child Labor and the National Commission on Children's Rights overlap and are a source of confusion. (2) In addition, although there is an information management system at the national level, data are rarely analyzed or used to affect implementation on the ground. (49)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including incorporating child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Education Sector Plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2019–2023)†	Approved in May 2018, aims to reduce the worst forms of child labor in Benin by 70 percent by the end of 2023. Targets six focus areas: strengthening the legislative and institutional framework related to child labor; information, awareness, and social mobilization; education and training; victim monitoring; protection and referral; inspection and repression; and institutional mechanisms and monitoring and evaluation of the plan. (8)
Action Plan to Eradicate Child Exploitation in Markets	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the major markets of Benin, including Dantokpa in Cotonou, Ouando in Porto-Novo, and Arzèkè in Parakou. Strengthens child labor laws, raises awareness of child labor in markets, and creates social programs for children rescued from labor exploitation in the targeted markets. (20,50,51) In 2018, the government continued open market inspections, and showed a documentary on child economic exploitation at the markets of Cotonou, Porto-Novo, Parakou, Lokossa, Abomey, and Bohicon. (8)
National Policy for Child Protection (2014–2025)	Aims to improve child protection in Benin. Includes components to improve school feeding programs and combat the worst forms of child labor, with a focus on child trafficking. (12,51,52) Although the policy paper was disseminated at the end of 2018, research was unable to determine whether the policy had received formal approval or whether activities were undertaken to implement the policy during the reporting period. (20,48)
Bilateral Commitments to Combat Cross-Border Trafficking†	Bilateral cooperative agreements with the Republic of the Congo, Nigeria, and Gabon to coordinate investigation, extradition, and prosecution of child traffickers between the respective countries. In October 2018, the government, with the assistance of a local NGO, supported a workshop in the Republic of the Congo to assess cooperation efforts since the signing of their bilateral agreement. (11) During the reporting period, the government repatriated 99 Beninese child trafficking victims from Gabon, Nigeria, and Niger, and provided the social services needed for social reintegration. (11) In November 2018, the government signed a bilateral cooperative agreement with the Government of Gabon to combat child trafficking. (11,53) In addition, during the reporting period, the government, in cooperation with IOM, facilitated the repatriation and reintegration of six boys trafficked from Niger and nine girls trafficked from Gabon. Each boy received a stipend to assist in learning a trade and developing income-earning activities. (11)
Education Sector Plan (2018–2030)†	Aims to improve access to education, including targeted interventions for orphaned children and children outside of the formal school system. Approved in June 2018. (6,54)
UN Development Assistance Framework (2014–2018)	Outlines the collective actions and strategies of the UN system for achieving national development goals, including specific activities to address child labor by increasing access to social protection services. (55) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement UNDAF during the reporting period.
Standard Operating Procedures for the Protection of Abused Children†	Seeks to improve the quality of services provided by OCPM, harmonize police activities, and create synergy between the police and other actors involved in child protection. Approved in February 2018. (8)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (25)

In February 2018, the government released new Standard Operating Procedures for the Protection of Abused Children that aim to improve coordination efforts between the OCPM and social services providers. In May, the government approved a new National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor that addresses the deficiencies of the old national plan. (8)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Government-Funded Shelters†	Social Promotion Centers (CPSs) provide food, shelter, education, and vocational training to vulnerable children, including victims of labor exploitation, in 85 centers. During the reporting period, CPSs conducted 225 anti-trafficking education campaigns. (11) OCPM also operates an interim care facility for human trafficking survivors before their placement in a long-term shelter. (9,16,20,38,47) In 2018, OCPM provided temporary shelter and assistance to 1,214 child victims of trafficking and exploitation. (11)
Government-Funded Re-Training Centers†	MOLCS, with the assistance of UNICEF, maintains a vocational school program to train survivors of child trafficking in a trade. (47,49) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the vocational school program during the reporting period.
Benin Global Partnership for Education Program (2014–2018)	Approximately $42.3 million World Bank-funded project to provide equity in access to basic education in impoverished districts. (9,57) The project concluded in April 2018. (58)
Integrated National School Feeding Program (2017–2021)*†	$87 million Government of Benin-funded program that is managed by the World Food Program and aims to reach 3,000 schools in Benin. (59) In his end-of-the-year speech, President Patrice Talon stated that, in 2018, the program benefited 537,400 girls and helped reduce the overall number of school dropouts. (8)
McGovern-Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program (2018–2022)*	$19 million U.S. Department of Agriculture-funded project implemented by Catholic Relief Services in the Alibori and Borgou regions. Aims to improve literacy and attendance of school-aged children, improve the health and dietary practices of students, and increase government capacity and ownership of school meal programs. (60) The project is implemented in 146 schools, and will reach an estimated 50,965 school-aged children. (60)

*Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Benin.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (12,38,61,62)

In July 2018, the National Assembly passed a law to allow, by way of derogation, the issuance of birth certificates to citizens, including children, who do not have one. In November, the government and UNICEF launched an SMS-based platform—“Rapid Pro”—which allows parents to declare births via a text message and mitigates challenges related to the issuance of birth certificates. (8) Although the Government of Benin has implemented programs to protect children from human trafficking and participated in programs focused on child labor in quarrying and mining, research was unable to determine whether the government has conducted programs to assist children engaged in other worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, or agriculture. (12)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Benin (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the compulsory education age to be consistent with the minimum age for employment.	2018
Enforcement	Provide consistent training for criminal law enforcement officials, including refresher courses on child labor.	2013 – 2018
	Increase resources to enforce laws against child labor; provide immediate victim assistance, and increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO’s technical advice.	2009 – 2018
	Publish data on whether unannounced inspections are conducted and the number of inspections conducted at worksites, and violations and convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2018
Coordination	Take measures to coordinate efforts between the National Executive Committee to Combat Child Labor and the National Commission on Children’s Rights, ensuring that the committees meet and coordinate mandates.	2013 – 2018
	Analyze the data received from national information management systems and disseminate the results nationwide.	2013 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Ensure that existing policies addressing child labor are implemented as intended.	2018
	Ensure that child labor elimination and prevention strategies are integrated into the Education Sector Plan.	2010 – 2018
Social Programs	Increase access to education by eliminating school-related fees, ensuring that children with disabilities have access to regular schools, ensuring the safety of children in schools, providing reliable transportation, and increasing birth registration rates.	2010 – 2018
	Ensure that social programs to address child labor are implemented in accordance with their mandates.	2018
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, and agriculture, and monitor and report annually on the progress of these programs.	2010 – 2018

In 2018, Bhutan made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government drafted standard operating procedures for identifying and referring human trafficking victims. In addition, government personnel received training on human trafficking. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Bhutan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Bhutan's minimum age for work is inconsistent with international standards and education is not compulsory. The government has not adopted a national policy to address child labor, including its worst forms.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Bhutan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Bhutan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.8 (6,338)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	84.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	3.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		95.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (3)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2010. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (5,6)
Industry	Construction,† activities unknown (7)
Services	Domestic work (5,6) Work in hospitality services (6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1) Forced labor in karaoke bars, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1) Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2) Use in illicit activities, including the smuggling of tobacco (8)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

There is a lack of current data on child labor in Bhutan. To date, no national survey on child labor has been conducted.

Bhutan

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The government provides a minimum of 11 years of free education to all Bhutanese citizens, and has committed to increasing free education by an additional 2 years. However, children living in remote villages, children of nomadic communities and migrant populations, and children with disabilities face significant difficulties in accessing public schools. (5,6,9,10)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bhutan has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	N/A
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bhutan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	13	Sections 170–171 of the Labor and Employment Act; Section 7 of the Regulation on Acceptable Forms of Child Labor (11,12)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 170–171 of the Labor and Employment Act (11)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Section 9(e) of the Labor and Employment Act; Section 9 of the Regulation on Acceptable Forms of Child Labor (11,12)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 6 and 9(a) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 154, 227, and 379 of the Penal Code; Section 221 of the Child Care and Protection Act (11,13,14)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Section 9(a) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 221 and 224 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Sections 227, 379, and 380 of the Penal Code (11,13,14)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 9(b) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 222–224 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Sections 225 and 375–380 of the Penal Code (11,13,14)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 9(c) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 216 and 220 of the Child Care and Protection Act (11,13)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Defense Service Rules and Regulations (15)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 9(a) of the Labor and Employment Act (11)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 9.16 of the Constitution of the Kingdom of Bhutan (16)

* No conscription (15)

The minimum age for work is not compliant with international standards because the Labor and Employment Act allows children under age 14 to work. (11) In addition, Bhutan has no compulsory age for education, which may increase the risk of children’s involvement in child labor. (17)

Bhutan’s criminal prohibitions against child trafficking do not adhere to international standards because Bhutan’s laws require proof of use of force, fraud, or coercion to criminalize child trafficking. (11,13)

While sources report that the minimum age for voluntary recruitment into Bhutan’s military is 18, research was unable to uncover a public version of the Defense Service Rules and Regulations. (15)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Human Resources (MOLHR) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Human Resources (MOLHR)	Investigates child labor complaints and ensures that employers comply with child labor laws. Refers cases involving the worst forms of child labor to the police. (6)
Royal Bhutan Police	Investigate and enforce criminal laws relating to the worst forms of child labor. (6) Includes 3 Women and Child Protection Units and 10 Women and Child Protection Desks to enforce laws protecting women and children. (18,19) Refer abused and exploited children to child welfare officers and the National Commission for Women and Children. (14)
Child Welfare Officers	Protect and assist children in difficult circumstances, including children abused and exploited for illegal purposes. (6,14)
Royal Court of Justice	Adjudicates cases involving child labor. (6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Bhutan took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOLHR that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including limited resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$23,000 (17)	Unknown (6)

Bhutan

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The MOLHR has reported that limited resources place constraints on the number of inspections conducted and inspectors employed. (20)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Bhutan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including data on efforts to investigate, prosecute, and convict crimes involving child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (17)	Unknown (6)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (17)	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (21)	Unknown (6)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (17)	Unknown (6)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (17)	Unknown (6)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (17)	Unknown (6)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (17)	Unknown (6)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (17)	Yes (6)

In 2018, government agencies collaborated with UNODC to conduct human trafficking training programs for government personnel, including 129 law enforcement officials, legal officers, and prosecutors. (22)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Labor Task Force	Coordinates government efforts on child labor across multiple government agencies and ministries. Led by the MOLHR and comprises representatives from government, international organizations, civil society, and the private sector. (23,24)
National Commission for Women and Children (NCWC)	Coordinates the implementation of laws and policies that promote and protect the rights of women and children. Comprises a chairperson at the cabinet level, and high-level officials who represent relevant government agencies, non-government organizations, and the private sector. (25)
Department of Law and Order	Coordinates anti-trafficking in persons efforts, including leading regular meetings with all government agencies and other relevant stakeholders. (22)

Research was unable to determine whether the coordinating bodies for the government's child labor initiatives undertook activities during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established policies to address child labor. The government had policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor; however, child labor elimination and prevention strategies have not been included in these policies. (26,27)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to the prevention or elimination of child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the lack of information on whether efforts are being taken to address child labor in all relevant sectors.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Project Hope†	National Commission for Women and Children program that provides residential shelters for children at risk of labor exploitation. Targets children on the street and provides them with counseling, group therapy, and assistance enrolling in school. (28) Research was unable to determine what activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.
Women and Children's Shelter‡	Respect, Education, Nurture, and Empower Women, a Thimphu-based NGO, receives government funding to provide shelter, counseling, and rehabilitation for women and children who have been victims of human trafficking. (28) Research was unable to determine what activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.
Enhance Government and Civil Society Responses to Counter Trafficking in Persons (2013–2018)	$750,000 UNODC-funded program that sought to improve law enforcement responses, strengthen coordination, increase awareness, and improve protection mechanisms for addressing trafficking in persons. (29,30) In 2018, worked with the government to draft standard operating procedures for identifying and referring human trafficking victims, coordinating across agencies, and collaborating across borders. Additionally, conducted 18 awareness-raising programs for individuals in high-risk industries and district government officials. (22)
Improving Rural Children's Access to Basic Education with a Focus on Primary Education (2014–2018)	$8.58 million WFP-funded program that provided financial support to rural primary schools. (29) Aimed to increase primary school enrollment, retention, and graduation by providing school breakfasts and lunches to students. Implemented in 232 schools across the country, reached 37,000 children annually, and supported school construction and kitchen improvements. (28,29) Research was unable to determine what activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (30)

While the Government of Bhutan has implemented programs that target children at risk of labor exploitation, research found no evidence that these programs target children working in agriculture or domestic service, or children involved in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bhutan (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that laws on child labor comply with the international standard for the minimum age for work.	2010 – 2018
	Make primary education compulsory and ensure that the compulsory age extends to the minimum age for employment.	2010 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit child trafficking without needing proof of the use of force, fraud, or coercion.	2018
	Publish the Defense Service Rules and Regulations that prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 into Bhutan's military.	2018
Enforcement	Publish child labor law enforcement data, including the amount of funding for the Labor Inspectorate, and if new and veteran labor inspectors received training.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the MOLHR has the resources necessary to enforce labor laws and combat child labor.	2014 – 2018
	Publish information on training of investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws prohibiting the worst forms of child labor; and publish data on the number of investigations, violations, prosecutions, and convictions of crimes involving the worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies take actions to address child labor.	2017 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government	Adopt a policy to address child labor, including its worst forms.	2016 – 2018
Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing relevant policies.	2014 – 2018
Social Programs	Conduct a national child labor survey and publish the results.	2013 – 2018
	Implement programs to make education more accessible for children living in remote locations, children of nomadic communities and migrant populations, and children with disabilities.	2014 – 2018
	Create social programs targeting working children, particularly in agriculture, and children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including forced domestic work.	2009 – 2018
	Publish information about the implementation of child labor-related programs, such as Project Hope.	2017 – 2018

In 2018, Bolivia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Following the Plurinational Constitutional Tribunal (TCP) decision that ruled unconstitutional provisions of the 2014 Child and Adolescent Code which allowed children as young as 10 years old to work, in December 2018 President Evo Morales signed complementary legislation that further clarified the minimum age of 14 years. The legislation eliminated remaining provisions that permitted children to work at ages 12 and 13. The labor inspectorate also increased the number of labor inspectors, mobile inspection units, and the number of inspections conducted throughout the year. In addition, the major sugar-producing Department of Santa Cruz addressed child labor in the sector through several social programs. However, children in Bolivia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Although Bolivian law requires that apprentices attend school, it does not set a minimum age for participation in apprenticeships. In addition, Article 1 of Supreme Decree No. 1875 sets the minimum age for compulsory military service at 17 years, which does not comply with international standards.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Bolivia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Bolivia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

	Forced begging, and forced labor in mining and domestic service (2,9,11,21,23)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,24)
	Forced illicit activities, including robbery and producing or transporting drugs (9,11,21,25)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children produce and harvest sugarcane and Brazil nuts in the Departments of Beni, Pando, Santa Cruz, and Tarija. (1,7) Indigenous children are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (21) Some indigenous Guaraní families live in debt bondage and work on ranches, including raising cattle, in the Chaco region of Bolivia. (21) In Tarija, the sugar cane and Brazil nut harvest seasons attract over 3,000 internal migrants, increasing the vulnerability of these workers—many of them children—to forced labor and human trafficking. (11)

The cultural practice known as padrinazgo, which involves rural families sending their children to urban areas to live with individuals for better access to education, social services, and food, often leads to forced labor, including in domestic work and third party businesses. Girls, on average age 14, were found to be engaged in commercial sexual exploitation in El Alto. (11) Bolivian children are also smuggled to other countries, where they are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation. (21) The government does not have a system in place to track data on forced child labor, commercial sexual exploitation of children, or engagement of children in illicit activities. (11)

Bolivian law requires children to attend school up to age 17. Ministry of Labor (MOL) officials report that the school desertion rate dropped from 5 percent in 2006 to 2 percent in 2018. (2) However, attendance rates for secondary education remain low in rural areas. (23,27,28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bolivia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bolivia's legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including the prohibition of military recruitment.

Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 17 and 81 of the Constitution; Article 1 of the Avelino Siñani-Elizardo Pérez Education Law; Article 115 of the Child and Adolescent Code (30,33,41)

*The minimum age for combat is 18 per Article 36 of the Law of National Military Service (37)

‡ Age calculated based on available information

On December 19, 2018, the Bolivian National Assembly passed legislation modifying the 2014 Child and Adolescent Code, which President Evo Morales officially signed into law on December 20. The amendments removed provisions of the Child and Adolescent Code that allowed children ages 12 and 13 to work, clarifying that the minimum age of work in Bolivia is 14. (30,32,42,43) The Code allows children ages 14 to 18 to work with authorization from the Offices of the Child Advocate on the conditions that the work is not precarious to the child's well-being and is not conducted for more than 8 hours a day and 40 hours a week. (32) However, because the minimum age for work is still lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (32)

Although Bolivian law requires that apprentices attend school, it does not set a minimum age for participation in apprenticeships. (29,44) Articles 108 and 249 of the Constitution require Bolivian males to perform compulsory military service in accordance with national law. (33) Article 1 of Supreme Decree No. 1875, passed in 2014, lowered the minimum age at which compulsory military service may begin from age 18, as previously established, to age 17, which does not comply with international standards. (39,40)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws, in part through its Fundamental Rights Unit, which also addresses forced labor of indigenous peoples. (45) Refers cases to the Labor Courts for adjudication of penalties and unpaid wages. (9) Engages municipal Offices of the Child Advocate to ensure the protection of children's rights. (2,46) Assists in the implementation of the Child and Adolescent Code. (2,30)
Municipal Offices of the Child Advocate	Authorizes children from the age of 14 to engage in work and registers them in the government's Child and Adolescent Information System (SINNA), pursuant to the Child and Adolescent Code. Protects the rights and welfare of children, including by accompanying child labor inspectors and referring criminal child labor cases to prosecutors and for social services. (2,30)
Prosecutor's Office	Enforces criminal laws against forced labor, trafficking of children, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities at a departmental level in coordination with the Attorney General. (2,47)
Ministry of Justice and Transparency	Creates and administers the SINNA, in which municipal Offices of the Child Advocate register children ages 14 and up to work, as required by the Child and Adolescent Code. (30,32)
Attorney General's Office	Oversees all human trafficking investigations and prosecutions on a national level. (47) Oversees through its National Coordinator's Office regional prosecutors who, in conjunction with the Bolivian National Police, pursue cases of human trafficking. Maintains a database of human trafficking cases. (47)
Bolivian National Police	Maintains the Special Force in the Fight Against Crime (FELCC), which runs 15 investigative human trafficking units, and the Police Unit for Migratory Control and Assistance, which patrols national borders. (8,48,49)

During the reporting period, the Child Advocate Offices worked on awareness-raising campaigns for children and their parents on their rights and responsibilities under the new Child and Adolescent Code. (2) In La Paz, the Child Advocate Office conducted interviews on radio and television to inform families about the new code, and UNICEF is working with the city government to organize an informational campaign. (50) Following the amendment of the Code, Municipal Offices of the Child Advocate are now responsible for registering working children ages 14 and older in the government's Child and Adolescent Information System (SINNA). (2,32) However, the 2014 Code transferred this registration responsibility to municipal governments without additional resources.

Reports indicate that up to 15 percent of municipalities in Bolivia lack an Office of the Child Advocate; many more are reported to lack sufficient resources and the capacity to perform their mandate and raise awareness of children's rights and their parents' obligations under the Code. (11) This lack of institutional coverage may leave certain children particularly vulnerable to child labor. (8,9,51)

In La Paz and Santa Cruz, Child Advocate Offices reported additional barriers to implementation of the registration section of the Code. These barriers include lack of cooperation from parents to register their working children and prohibitive financial obstacles to obtain the proper paperwork required for registration. (11)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Bolivia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of proper financial resource allocation.

In 2018, government officials reported contributing additional resources for monitoring, evaluating, and addressing child labor in all sectors, though they did not provide monetary specifics. (2) The labor inspectorate increased the number of inspectors, including the number of child labor inspectors, from 6 in 2017 to 14 in 2018. All 106 labor inspectors received specialized training to identify forced and child labor infractions during the reporting period. (2)

The MOL also continued to use mobile inspection offices to augment the ability of inspectors to examine child labor issues. The number of mobile units increased from 20 in 2017 to 42 in 2018, which greatly contributed to the MOL's ability to conduct additional inspections during the reporting period. (50) Each mobile unit is made up of 2 general labor inspectors and 1 child labor specialist who travel to predominately rural areas throughout the country to conduct unannounced inspections. (2) However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Bolivia's workforce, which includes approximately 5.7 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Bolivia would employ about 380 labor inspectors. (53)

The MOL, Prosecutor's Office, and the Ministry of Justice do not have a consolidated database or systemized records of the number of violations found related to child labor. (2) Labor inspectors lack necessary resources to enforce labor laws, especially in the Chaco region. (6) Additionally, the government does not publish information regarding labor inspectorate funding. (2)

The government reported that children removed from child labor are referred to the municipal Offices of the Child Advocate for services. While law mandates that every municipality in the country have a dedicated Child Advocate Office, not every municipality does, and information on the number of children removed from child labor and whether they received services is not publicly available. (2) Rural offices of the Child Advocate in municipalities throughout the country lack proper funding, personnel, and materials. While municipalities are required to allot a certain percentage of their budget to the Child Advocate's office, this percentage has decreased over the last few years. (2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Bolivia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating financial resources to conduct criminal investigations.

In 2018, the Bolivian National Police held the Second National Conference of Human Trafficking Divisions of the Special Anti-Crime Force and conducted training and communication courses on trafficking in persons for the public. (24) The Public Ministry registered 359 trafficking-in-persons investigation in 2018, 77 of which related to child pornography. (24) Although the government provided data on human trafficking cases during the reporting period, the data were not disaggregated to reflect cases of the worst forms of child labor. (24)

Children rescued from the worst forms of child labor are often not referred to social service providers because some cities lack shelters and other social services for children. (11,24,54,55) Shelters maintained by departmental governments are underfunded and child victims were often cast out of shelters on the basis of fixed timelines—after spending the maximum number of days allowed—rather than an assessment of need. (24) The government did not report the number of children referred to receive social services. While children can report workforce abuse to the Child Advocate’s Office, they rarely do. (11)

Many criminal law enforcement agencies reported that funding levels were inadequate to carry out their mandates. (56) Additionally, low rates of dedicated training on human trafficking hampered law enforcement efforts. The high rate of rotation among police, prosecutors, and judges—a standard practice to help combat corruption—leads to insufficient knowledge, lack of experience on human trafficking, and a judicial backlog for these types of cases. (54)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor (CNEPTI)	Coordinates national enforcement efforts on child labor issues. Led by the MOL, and includes the Ministries of Justice, Education, and Planning, and several NGOs. (2)
Plurinational System for the Comprehensive Protection of Children and Adolescents (SIPPROINA)	Coordinates national efforts to manage and implement the Plurinational Plan for Children and Adolescents, the Coordinating Council for Children and Adolescents, and the Congress on Children’s Rights. Evaluates and advises on national plans, public policies, reports, and budget allocation relating to children’s and adolescents’ rights. (30) In coordination with the National Institute of Statistics, monitors and updates the SINNA. Led by the Ministry of Justice. (30)
Plurinational Council to Combat the Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons	Coordinates anti-trafficking efforts and implements national laws and policies on human trafficking and smuggling. (2,35,57) Chaired by the Minister of Justice and comprising eight ministries, the Public Advocate, and NGOs. (48) Leaders from the Council participated in the Ministry of Government’s National Convention Against Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Migrants held in September 2018. (24)
Department-Level Councils against Human Trafficking and Smuggling	Coordinates efforts of the Plurinational Council in Bolivia’s nine departments. Comprising officials from the Special Force in the Fight Against Crime, the MOL, the Ministries of Migration and Education, the Human Rights Ombudsman’s Office, and NGO representatives. (8,35,57)

The National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor has not fulfilled its role as the central coordinating body, and its activities, while ongoing, have not resulted in any significant coordination. (2) Reports also indicate that some of the MOL's departmental sub-commissions on child labor have not been active, due in part to a lack of resources. (8,23)

The Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling mandates that the Plurinational Council to Combat the Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons include NGOs. However, reports indicate that NGOs have not participated fully in this Council despite NGOs' efforts to be included. (48) Reports also indicate that some Department-Level Councils against Human Trafficking and Smuggling have yet to develop department-level plans to combat human trafficking, as mandated by law. (9,35,56,57)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementing a new national action plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Bolivian General Plan for Economic and Social Development (2016–2020)	Sets goals for economic and social development including eliminating child labor. (58) The Plan was active during the reporting period. (47)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons (2015–2019)	Establishes eight lines of action drawn from the five core areas of the Plurinational Policy to Combat Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons, including building capacity and coordination among criminal law enforcement agencies. Replaces the 2013–2017 policy. (24,47,61) During the reporting period, the technical secretary of the National Council on Human Trafficking reported that the government used the 2015–2019 National Action Plan as a general guide while updating their 2016–2020 National Action plan. (24,47)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (62)

Bolivia's national policy for addressing child labor, the National Plan for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor (2000–2010), expired in 2010. (63)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding and adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors and regions.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Juancito Pinto Subsidy Program†	Government program that provides a conditional cash transfer to all primary and some secondary school students to increase school attendance and reduce the dropout rate. In 2018, provided $68.1 million to more than 2 million participating students. (2)
Safe Terminal Program*	A child sex tourism prevention campaign launched by the Bolivian government in 2018 which includes training, awareness activities, and informational workshops for officials of transport and accommodation companies in the city of La Paz. (24) In the department of Tarija, the campaign focuses on the development and implementation of codes of ethics and conduct to promote children's' rights in private sector companies' corporate social responsibility programs. (24)
Human Rights of Children Working in Sugarcane, Brazil Nuts, and Mining†	Human Rights Ombudsman's Office program that promotes the elimination of the worst forms of child labor, along with labor and social protections for working adolescents ages 14 to 17. Launched in 2013 in the Tarija, Potosí, and Beni Departments and expanded in 2014 to monitor the use of child labor in sugarcane harvesting in Santa Cruz. (64) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.

Program	Description
Bolivian Foreign Trade Institute's Triple Seal Initiative	Ministry of Labor collaboration with the Bolivian Institute of Standardization and Quality (IBCE), UNICEF, and the ILO to develop a voluntary certification program that recognizes companies that comply with Bolivian law and ILO conventions on child labor, forced labor, and worker discrimination in the production of their goods. (8,65) In 2018, the Santa Cruz government continued to collaborate with private industry to implement this initiative to reduce child labor, which was established in 2016. Through the government led initiative, the IBCE trains sugarcane workers in Santa Cruz on child labor laws, monitors product sites for violations, supports school attendance for the children of sugarcane workers, and audits the producers, providing a "Triple Seal" if child labor is not used in the production of the sugar. (2,65)
Child Trafficking Awareness-Raising Campaigns†	Government program implemented with the Bolivian Network for the Fight Against Human Trafficking and Smuggling that conducts awareness-raising campaigns to educate the public about the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling. (46,66) In 2018, the Human Rights Ombudsman's Office carried out a public awareness campaign, entitled Seducción/Trabajo + Trampa = Tráfico de Personas (Seduction/Work + Tricks = Human Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons), which focused on measures to prevent human trafficking. (24) The Ministry of Government also conducted two human trafficking prevention campaigns: Que la Trata no Borre tu Sonrisa (Don't Let Human Smuggling Erase Your Smile) and Una Persona Informada es una Víctima Menos (One Informed Person is One Less Victim). (24)
Program to Protect the Rights of Children and Adolescents	Government collaboration with UNICEF and funding from the Government of Italy and the Swiss Cooperation Agency. Provides education assistance in 17 Bolivian Brazil nut and sugarcane-producing municipalities. Seeks to improve living conditions of 2,300 families and reintegrate 3,400 children in school. (67) The program continued to be implemented during the reporting period. (50)
Social Risk Program	Established by the Mayor of La Paz, provides financial support to allow children to choose school over work, or to finish their school day before attending work. (2) The Mayor's Office continued to implement this program in 2018. (2)
Critical Route (Ruta Crítica)*	Program created by the La Paz Child Advocate's Office to better identify working children, facilitate registration of working children with the Advocate's Office, and help working children understand their legal rights. (2)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Bolivia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (23,67-70)

In 2018, the major sugar-producing Department of Santa Cruz created the Responsible Consumer Program (Programa de Consumidor Responsable), a strategic communication program to educate consumers on the harm of supporting products made with child labor. (2) The program has broadcast information on Bolivian television and radio programming and is working with the private sector to encourage labels to identify products free of child labor. (50) The Santa Cruz Department government and the Child Advocate's Office continue to implement the "Markets that Support Childhood" Program, which offers education, health, and childcare centers in markets throughout the city (called "Mercados amigos de la niñez") to provide a safe environment where parents can leave their children instead of having them also engage in work. (2)

Although Bolivia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to address the extent of the problem, particularly in the production of Brazil nuts and sugarcane, ranching and cattle raising, mining, domestic work, street work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (23) Although the Juancito Pinto subsidy program continues to expand and has been adequate in rural areas, reports indicate that the $29 per year subsidy is insufficient to meaningfully cover costs, such as transportation, associated with attending school in larger cities. For example, reports indicate that costs associated with attending school in La Paz's sister city, El Alto, may reach $410 per year. (23)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bolivia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law prohibits children under the age of 14 from participating in apprenticeships.	2010 – 2018
	Ensure that the law establishes 18 as the minimum age for compulsory recruitment by the state military, and criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2015 – 2018
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Enforcement	Establish and maintain in every municipality an Office of the Child Advocate with sufficient resources to ensure that legal protections are extended to all children who are permitted to work, and to coordinate the provision of services to children who are removed from child labor, including its worst forms.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that Offices of the Child Advocate publicly report on the number of children authorized to work and the number of children rescued from child labor and referred for social services.	2015 – 2018
	Provide sufficient funding to increase the MOL's capacity to ensure the adequate enforcement of child labor laws.	2013 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws on child labor to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2013 – 2018
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for child labor, including its worst forms.	2015 – 2018
	Publish information on child labor law enforcement, including the number of children found in child labor as a result of inspections, the number of violations found, the number of penalties imposed and collected, and whether routine inspections were conducted and targeted.	2009 – 2018
	Disaggregate data between inspections involving child labor and criminal investigations involving the worst forms of child labor.	2018
	Provide sufficient funding and training, including training on human trafficking, to criminal law enforcement agencies to ensure adequate enforcement of laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that victims of the worst forms of child labor and trafficking are not turned out of shelters due to fixed timelines.	2018
Coordination	Ensure that the National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor fulfills its central coordinating role and develops concrete mechanisms to improve coordination among participating agencies and organizations.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that all MOL departmental sub-commissions designed to combat child labor convene and receive sufficient resources to carry out their functions.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that NGOs participate in the Plurinational Council to Combat the Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons, as required by the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that all Department-Level Councils against Human Trafficking are fully operational as required by the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling.	2014 – 2018
Government Policies	Establish and implement a new National Plan for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor.	2010 – 2018
Social Programs	Expand national programs, especially those targeting children in rural areas to increase secondary school attendance.	2010 – 2018
	Increase the Juancito Pinto subsidy to ensure that school children are able to cover the costs associated with attending school.	2014 – 2018
	Expand social programs to address the worst forms of child labor at sites in which hazardous child labor exists, particularly in the production of Brazil nuts and sugarcane, ranching and cattle raising, mining, domestic work and street work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2018

In 2018, Bosnia and Herzegovina made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government's Daily Centers identified 130 children as potential victims of human trafficking and referred them to shelters, and the number of Regional Monitoring Teams is being increased from 4 to 17. In addition, the Government of Canton Sarajevo implemented a protocol on cooperation and treatment in cases of unlawful behavior at the detriment of children, which includes protection for child beggars and sexually abused children. However, children in Bosnia and Herzegovina engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. The minimum age protections in the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Republika Srpska, and Brčko District do not apply to children who are self-employed or work outside of formal employment relationships. In addition, the Anti-Trafficking Strike Force lacks coordination between prosecutors, police, and other relevant government stakeholders, and border police officers and social workers failed to properly identify unaccompanied migrant and refugee children as potential victims of human trafficking due to lack of proper protocols.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Bosnia and Herzegovina (BiH) engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (2,3) Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (6,2,7,8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in BiH. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	8.9 (44,017)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	83.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	10.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (9)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2006. (10)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work, including begging, vending, and washing car windows (2,11,12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging and forced domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,3,13-17)
	Commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking (2,3,15,17,18)
	Use in illicit activities, including for pickpocketing (2,12,15,17,18)
	Use in the production of pornography (4,12,18-21)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Bosnia and Herzegovina

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Street begging is the most common form of child labor in BiH. (2,3,17) Organized groups sometimes traffic children to lucrative locations, both domestically and internationally, in regional and European Union countries, where they are forced to beg. (2,3,16)

Children from the largest minority group in BiH, the Roma, remain vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (2,3,5,16,17,22,23) The Roma custom of paid and arranged marriages between families has resulted in the exploitation of some Roma girls as domestic workers. (6,2,16,24) Birth registration is required to attend school in BiH, and some Roma children lack identity documents, which may affect their access to education. (2,24-26) Children who are not attending school are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Sources also indicate that some Roma children face discrimination by some teachers and peers, travel long distances to schools, and are unable to afford school supplies, clothing, and food. (2,12,19,22,27) In addition, research found that discrimination against some Roma children by school administrators has led to disproportionately high enrollment rates of Roma children in schools for children with intellectual disabilities. (28)

Schools in Republika Srpska (RS) deny the right for some Bosniak children to attend classes in the Bosnian language. (23,29,30) Some Bosniak children from RS travel long distances to the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (FBiH) to receive education in their language. (2,23,31,32) In addition, discrimination persists under the “Two Schools Under One Roof” practice between Bosniaks and Croats in FBiH. The practice creates obstacles for students to attend schools other than those which match their ethnic identity, and therefore enabling ethnic separation among students. (23,33-35) Ethnic discrimination in schools may lead to violence and class absenteeism. (33,34)

In 2018, BiH experienced an increase in migrants from Africa and the Middle East. (17) More than 23,700 refugees and migrants, including children, from Pakistan, Iran, Syria, Afghanistan, Iraq, Libya, Palestine, Algeria, Bangladesh, and India were registered in the country. (17,36) From this total, 972 children participated in informal learning activities, 330 unaccompanied minors benefited from child protection support, and 17 children were enrolled in primary school. However, more than 800 refugee and migrant children from this group remain vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation. (3,36)

Children with disabilities generally face barriers to accessing education, which may make them vulnerable to child labor. (24,25,37) Although the number of school programs for children with disabilities is increasing, parents of such children often receive little support from the government, and many schools are unable to provide accommodations for their disabilities. (23,37,38)

II. Legal Framework for Child Labor

BiH has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

BiH is a democratic republic with a bicameral parliament. Governmental responsibility lies within the entities of BiH, FBiH, RS, and the self-governing Brčko District (BD). (25) The Government of BiH has established laws and regulations related to child labor, at the state, entity, and district levels (Table 4). However, gaps exist in BiH's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and the prohibition of military recruitment by non-state armed groups.

The Criminal Code in FBiH criminalizes trafficking for forced labor but fails to specifically outlaw forced labor, debt bondage, and slavery independent of each other. (2,44,47)

Laws related to illicit activities in BiH are not sufficient because using, procuring, and offering children for the production and trafficking of drugs is not criminally prohibited. (43) Also, minimum age protections in the FBiH, RS, and BD labor codes do not apply to children who are self-employed or working outside of formal employment relationships. (39-41) Therefore, most children engaged in street work, the most common form of child labor, are not protected by the law due to law enforcement practices and legal interpretations of the laws. (4-8,39-41,52,53) In addition, BiH, FBiH, RS, and BD do not have laws that prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (11,43,45-47) Finally, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not include begging, an area of work in which there is evidence of associated dangers. (54-56)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministries of Labor for FBiH, RS, and BD that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Related Entity	Role
FBiH Ministry of Labor and Social Policy Federal Inspection Agency and Cantonal-Level Labor Inspectorates	FBiH	Enforces labor laws, including those on child labor, in FBiH. (2,8)

BD Administrative Support Department	BD	Enforces labor laws, including those on child labor, in BD. (8)
Entity and Cantonal-Level Police	BD, FBiH, RS	Enforces criminal laws against human trafficking, forced labor, prostitution, and begging. (57)

Organization/Agency	Related Entity	Role
Ministry of Security (MOS)	BiH	Enforces a national policy to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Collects data on human trafficking. (58) Ensures that victims are placed in government-approved shelters. (58)
State Investigative and Protection Agency (SIPA) and State Border Police (SBP)	BiH	Investigates human trafficking crimes and enforces anti-trafficking laws across the entire country (SIPA). Identifies victims of human trafficking at the border (SBP). (57,58)
State, Entity, and FBiH Cantonal-Level Prosecutors' Offices	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Prosecutes human trafficking, forced labor, enticement to prostitution, and forced begging cases at their respective levels, based on applicable laws. (57,58)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in BiH took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministries of Labor for FBiH, RS, and BD that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including labor inspector training.

Inspectors in all entities are not trained on detecting child labor in agriculture, including handling agricultural chemicals. (2,59) However, labor inspectors have a quarterly plan for inspections. (60) A complaint mechanism exists in all entities, and each entity inspectorate has a mechanism for receiving online complaints. (53,60) All three labor inspectorates are authorized to inspect any formal sector site without receiving prior approval. (2) Inspectors who find violations of the child labor law are permitted to assess administrative penalties or issue fines. (2) As in previous years, forced begging cases are pursued by entity-level police and state-level prosecutors; however, labor inspectors do not have jurisdiction to investigate such cases. (12) In addition, research found that BiH does not have an official system for referring children found during labor inspections to appropriate social services, unless they are victims or potential victims of human trafficking. (2)

Bosnia and Herzegovina

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, officials in each entity reported that labor inspectors had sufficient resources to carry out inspections. (2) However, labor officers who monitor fraudulent job offers had limited resources, including a lack of funding. (17)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in BiH took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including prosecution planning.

During the reporting period, the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) supported trainings for judges and prosecutors on differentiating between human trafficking and child negligence. Human trafficking topics were also taught at police academies for classes of new officers. (17)

Police refer children detained for begging to appropriate social services providers. (2) NGOs receive funding from either the Ministry of Security or the Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees to provide shelter to these children. (8,17) However, law enforcement personnel and prosecutors are often unwilling to pursue investigations and prosecutions against parents involved in the trafficking of their children, particularly for forced labor, and the shelters subsequently return the children to the parents who trafficked them. (2,12,53) In addition, law enforcement officials sometimes penalize child victims of begging by issuing fines against the children. (37)

NGOs acknowledged that, although judges and prosecutors receive some basic education on human trafficking through the Agency for Education and Training, additional instruction is needed on identifying children used for forced labor and begging. (16,17,61,62) Prosecutors, police, and social workers continuously fail to identify cases of forced begging as trafficking and instead classify them as child negligence or Roma custom, impose sentences under the legal minimum, decrease the severity of the sentences, or dismiss the charges against the perpetrators altogether. (2,16,17,53)

During the reporting period, border police officers and social workers failed to properly identify unaccompanied migrant and refugee children as potential victims of human trafficking, due to the lack of proper government protocols and awareness of mechanisms in place to assist them. (37,63)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the inclusion of all relevant agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Department of the State Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons (State Coordinator) within the MOS	Coordinates human trafficking victim protection efforts among relevant ministries at the entity level and among prosecutors at the state, entity, and local levels, as well as with NGOs. (2, 15, 17, 37, 64) Oversees the human trafficking database, which includes data from NGOs, SIPA, SBP, and police agencies and prosecutors' offices at all levels. (17, 37, 57) Publishes data from this database in its annual report on human trafficking. (15) Oversees shelter management and monitors NGO compliance with the agreed-upon provisions on victims' assistance. (37, 57)
Strike Force for Combating Trafficking in Persons and Organized Illegal Migration (Anti-Trafficking Strike Force)	Coordinates human trafficking investigations across government agencies. (15, 37) Convenes monthly, with additional meetings scheduled as needed. (11, 14, 17, 62) Chaired by the Chief State Prosecutor; includes BiH, FBiH, RS, and BD ministries and agencies. (2, 15) Met four times in 2018. (17)
Inter-Ministerial Working Group	Monitors implementation of the National Action Plan to Counter Trafficking, the corresponding Action Plan, and the National Referral Mechanism. (2, 15, 37, 65) Comprises appointed representatives from the state and entity governments, including labor inspectors and elected representatives from NGOs. (4) Met once in 2018. (37)
Regional Monitoring Teams	Facilitates anti-human trafficking coordination among state, entity, and cantonal-level institutions, as well as between NGOs and intergovernmental organizations. (15, 66) Includes labor inspectors. (18) In 2018, a new structure of 17 teams instead of 4 was agreed upon and is expected to be completed next year. (17) In addition, representatives from daily Centers were included in Regional Monitoring Teams. (17)
Council for Children	Coordinates children's issues among state-level agencies and institutions under the Action Plan for Children of BiH. (37, 67, 68) Met in 2018. (37)

Labor inspectors are included in the National Referral Mechanism, which allows them to determine how a child became part of a begging ring. However, labor inspectors are not part of the Anti-Trafficking Strike Force. (2, 12)

During the reporting period, research found that the Regional Monitoring Teams would benefit from training on human trafficking issues. (17, 37) The Anti-Trafficking Strike Force also lacked funding for a second consecutive year due to political disagreements. (37) In addition, the Strike Force's coordination between ministries remained low across all levels of government. Although it met in 2018, meetings tapered off, and the Strike Force faced additional challenges, including a lack of records of active cases; the BiH Prosecutor's Office has not assigned a permanent new representative, FBiH has not appointed additional members, and the State Investigative and Protection Agency rarely participated in the meetings. (17, 37)

Although the Inter-Ministerial Working Group met once in 2018 to review the Annual Report of the National Coordinator's Office for Combating Trafficking, it failed to continuously monitor human trafficking initiatives or activities. (37)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Action Plan for Children of BiH (2015–2018)	Outlined a multidisciplinary approach to continue improving the government's efforts to protect children's rights. (69) In 2018, the Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees completed its report on the Plan's implementation. (37)

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Counter Trafficking (2016–2019)	Mandates that the government provide assistance to human trafficking victims, efficiently prosecute trafficking crimes, work to prevent human trafficking, and strengthen collaboration and coordination among stakeholders involved in combating human trafficking in BiH. (12,15,70) In 2018, the government reported that 63 out of 80 planned activities for 2018 were completed. (17)
Guidelines for Work of Regional Monitoring Teams†	Enhances the cooperation of monitoring team members and the national referral mechanisms. (17,71) Includes a section on mixed migration flows, in which unaccompanied migrant children and victims of human trafficking are addressed. (17)
Protocol on Cooperation and Treatment in Cases of Unlawful Behavior at the Detriment of Children in Canton Sarajevo‡	Prevents begging, exploitation of children, and abuse of children in Canton Sarajevo. (72,73) Sets rules on state cooperation on victim protection and mandates the provision of physical, psychological, health, and social protection for children. (73)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (74)

Although the Government of BiH has adopted the National Action Plan to Counter Trafficking and the Action Plan for Children, research found no evidence of a policy on other forms of child labor, including forced labor or illicit activities. (2,4,12,75) Sources indicated that the government has not allocated enough financial resources for adequate implementation of inclusive education initiatives. (37,38,76,77)

In addition, Roma organizations and government agencies have expressed intentions to develop an action plan to combat child begging; however, the plan has not been completed. (37)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including in funding.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Registration Project	UNHCR-funded project, implemented by NGO Vaša Prava , which promotes the registration of Roma people to increase their access to social benefits and schools. (15,58) Helped 1,300 Roma individuals register for citizenship and enabled 19,000 individuals to apply for social inclusion programs from 2009 to 2016. (16,67,78) In 2018, provided legal assistance to foreign victims of human trafficking. (17)
Daily Centers†	Center for Social Welfare-supported and NGO-operated drop-in centers in seven locations across the country for vulnerable children, especially street children. (2,16,17) Provides direct assistance for children, including educational activities, counseling, food, and hygiene. (7) In 2018, 130 children were identified as potential victims of human trafficking, and of these, 55 had received assistance at the centers previously. (2)
Assistance for Trafficking Victims†	Government program that allocates small grants to local NGOs for the provision of shelter and social services to victims of human trafficking, including counseling, educational assistance and job training for domestic victims, and visa and legal services for foreign victims of human trafficking. (61) In 2018, MOS and the Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees allocated $76,200 for shelters and $5,860 for the European Anti-Trafficking Day. (17,30)
United Nations Program and Common Budgetary Framework (2015–2019)	UN-funded project implemented by UN-affiliated implementing partners. Aims to provide inclusive education for Roma children and children with disabilities, as well as social protection for vulnerable individuals. (80)

† Program is funded by the Government of BiH.

Because labor inspectors do not have a mandate to inspect informal work on the streets, staff from Daily Centers are often the first to identify children engaged in hazardous street work. Sarajevo's Center for Social Welfare's Mobile Team engages in daily outreach to children on the streets and to families in vulnerable communities. (14,37) The Mobile Team staff stated, however, that they lack sufficient resources for their work, especially reliable transportation. (7,37,53) Government support for outreach to street children in areas outside of Sarajevo varies significantly. Although most Daily Centers collaborate with local Centers for Social Welfare,

Daily Centers are not institutionalized and, therefore, lack consistent financial and technical support. (37,53,81) This may limit the ability of Daily Centers to identify and assist children working on the streets. Although the government provides some social services for low-income families through the Center for Social Welfare, many families do not receive enough assistance to reduce their reliance on child labor, especially begging. (7,37,53)

Some organizations that provide services to victims of domestic human trafficking lack financial resources. (4,14,28,68) During the reporting period, research found that most NGOs that provide social services rely exclusively on grant funding from foreign donors. Their capacities have diminished as foreign assistance to NGOs has decreased, creating obstacles for continued implementation of their programs. (17) In addition, many domestic victims were left without assistance because unused funds allocated for human trafficking victims are returned to the state treasury. (17)

Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the UN Program and Common Budgetary Framework during the reporting period. (37)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in BiH (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Related Entity	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure that all children are protected by labor law, including those who work in the informal sector, such as children engaged in street work.	2015 – 2018
	FBiH	Criminalize forced labor, debt bondage, and slavery separately from human trafficking in FBiH's laws.	2018
	BiH	Ensure that BiH law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including using, procuring, and offering children for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2018
	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure that the laws criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups and that children are not punished for engagement in non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	BD, FBiH, RS	Include child begging in the list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children for all entities.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	BD, FBiH, RS	Collect and publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including labor inspectorate funding and number of labor inspections conducted.	2015 – 2018
	BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure that labor inspectors receive training on sectors in which child labor is known to occur, enable them to inspect for child labor in agriculture and child begging, and provide training for new employees and refresher courses for all labor inspectors.	2017 – 2018
	BD, FBiH, RS	Create an official referral system for referring children found during labor inspections who are not victims of human trafficking.	2018
	BiH	Collect and publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts, including number of investigations, prosecutions initiated, and convictions.	2018
	BD, FBiH, RS	Enable labor inspectors to pursue forced child begging cases, hold parents legally accountable for child trafficking, and do not penalize the children.	2017 – 2018
	BD, FBiH, RS	Increase funding for labor officers who monitor fraudulent job offers so job seekers do not engage in forced labor.	2018
Enforcement	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Increase training for law enforcement prosecutors and judges on how to properly apply criminal law in cases of child labor trafficking, forced labor, and forced begging, rather than classifying cases as Roma custom or decreasing the severity of sentences.	2014 – 2018
	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Train border police and social workers to properly identify migrant children vulnerable to human trafficking and implement proper referral mechanisms.	2018

Area	Related Entity	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Include labor inspectors in the Anti-Trafficking Strike Force, properly fund the Strike Force, and ensure that the Strike Force fulfills its coordinating mandate with the inclusion of all relevant government entities and law enforcement.	2017 – 2018
	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Provide additional training to the regional monitoring teams on the referral and protection of human trafficking victims.	2016 – 2018
	BiH	Ensure that the Inter-Ministerial Working Group meets regularly to actively monitor human trafficking initiatives and activities.	2018
Government Policies	BiH	Adopt a policy designed to address child labor and its worst forms, other than child trafficking, including for forced labor and illicit activities.	2015 – 2018
	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure that inclusive education initiatives receive adequate funding.	2017 – 2018
	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Create an action plan to address forced begging for the children of the Roma population.	2017 – 2018
Social Programs	BiH	Collect data on children involved in the worst forms of child labor to enhance policymakers' ability to identify problems more accurately and address them more adequately.	2009 – 2018
	BD, FBiH, RS	Promote inclusive education for minority children, including Roma, by assisting parents in registering their children for birth and identity documentation that entitles them to access school, expanding efforts to reduce discrimination in schools, and mitigating the costs to families associated with education.	2011 – 2018
	FBiH, RS	Allow all Bosniak children in RS to access education in the Bosniak language and remove the "Two Schools Under One Roof" practice to eliminate discrimination in schools based on ethnicity in FBiH.	2018
	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure that unaccompanied minors who are vulnerable to human trafficking receive proper social services and education.	2018
	BD, FBiH, RS	Remove barriers to education for children with disabilities by ensuring that schools have adequate resources to provide the necessary accommodations, enabling children to attend school and not be vulnerable to engage in child labor.	2015 – 2018
	BiH	Institutionalize and provide sufficient funding for Daily Centers to ensure that they have the resources and technical support necessary to assist children involved in child labor and those who are at risk of involvement.	2014 – 2018
	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Strengthen social protection programs that provide support to economically vulnerable families, reducing their reliance on child labor.	2014 – 2018
	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure that resources for human trafficking victims are sufficient to meet the needs of domestic victims.	2014 – 2018
	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Increase funding for programs that provide social services, including housing, for child trafficking victims.	2015 – 2018
	BiH	Ensure that the UN Program and Common Budgetary Framework is active and completes its mandate.	2018

In 2018, Botswana made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the year, the government provided funding for education programs and supported school feeding programs. However, children in Botswana engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor in cattle herding, and forced domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Key gaps remain in the country's legal framework, including the lack of a minimum age for compulsory education and insufficient prohibitions for hazardous work. In addition, social programs do not always reach intended child labor victims, especially those engaged in cattle herding and domestic work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Botswana engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor in cattle herding, and forced domestic work, each sometimes the result of human trafficking. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Botswana. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		102.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2013, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (6)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2019. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming activities, including picking beans (2,3,5,8)
	Herding cattle (1-4)
Services	Street work, including vending (3)
	Domestic work (2-4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in herding cattle and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2-4)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,8-10)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Reports indicate that children in Botswana are victims of commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and debt bondage. (2,9) In addition, children of San ethnic minority groups may be subjected to forced labor conditions on private farms and cattle posts. (1,2,9) Research was unable to determine the sectors, types of activities, and hazards that children encounter as child laborers.

In its 2017 and 2018 budget, the Government of Botswana allocated 17.2 percent of total government spending ($672 million) to education. (8) Primary education is free, and poor families receive free meals, toiletries, and school uniforms through government-funded programs. (3)

Botswana

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Botswana has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Botswana's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a compulsory education age that is consistent with the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Articles 2 and 107 of the Employment Act (11)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 2 and 110 of the Employment Act (11)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 108 and 109 of the Employment Act (11)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2 and 71 of the Employment Act; Articles 175 and 262 of the Penal Code; Section 114 of the Children's Act; Articles 9 and 10 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act (11-14)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 175 of the Penal Code; Section 114 of the Children's Act; Articles 9 and 10 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act (12-14)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 25 and 57–59 of the Children's Act (12)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 60 of the Children's Act (12)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 17 of the Botswana Defence Force Act (15)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 26 of the Children's Act (12)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 18 of the Children's Act (12,16)

* No conscription (15)

Under Botswana law, children working without a contract do not benefit from minimum age protections. Although the Employment Act allows children at age 14 to conduct light work activities, the government has yet to determine the types of light work activities permitted for children. (17) In addition, the Employment Act prohibits night work and hazardous underground work for children, but fails to prohibit other types of hazardous work, including work with dangerous machinery, equipment, and tools. (11) Although the government compiled a comprehensive list of hazardous occupations in 2013, the list has yet to be approved. (18)

Despite the provision of free primary education, there is not a compulsory education age consistent with the minimum age of employment. (19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment, Labour Productivity and Skills Development (MELSD) and the Ministry of Defense, Justice, and Security (MDJS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Labour Productivity and Skills Development	Enforces child labor laws and policies. Authorized by the Employment Act to conduct labor inspections. (3,11) Facilitates coordination with local leaders and law enforcement officers. Posts labor inspectors to District Council offices to carry out their duties. (3)
District and Municipal Council Child Welfare Divisions	Enforce child labor laws at the local levels. (3)
Botswana Police Service	Investigates cases of the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation of children and child trafficking. (3)
Ministry of Defense, Justice, and Security (MDJS)	Monitors suspected human trafficking cases and leads the Human Trafficking (Prohibition) Committee. (3)
Ministry of Local Government and Rural Development	Houses the Department of Social Protection, which identifies vulnerable children, including those in the worst forms of child labor, and reports cases to the police. Works with the judiciary to place vulnerable children in safe environments. (20)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Botswana took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MELSD that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of authority to assess penalties.

Botswana

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

An NGO reported that two children were found in child labor in domestic work. (8) The MELSD recently received eight new vehicles to support inspection and enforcement capabilities. (10) However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Botswana's workforce, which includes approximately 1,177,000 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Botswana would employ roughly 78 labor inspectors. Labor inspectors are not authorized to inspect domestic households, therefore hindering identification of certain instances of underage child domestic labor. (3) The government did not provide information regarding the funding of its labor inspectorate, the training of its labor inspectorate, and the number of inspections conducted at worksites for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Botswana took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MDJS that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	N/A (8)	Unknown (3)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (8)	Unknown (3)
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown (8)	Unknown (3)
Number of Investigations	1 (8)	0 (3)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (8)	0 (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	1 (8)	0 (3)
Number of Convictions	0 (22)	0 (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (8)	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (3)

Currently, the Botswana Police Service (BPS) and Department of Social Services coordinate to provide referral services for victims of human trafficking. During the reporting period, the IOM, in collaboration with ministry officials, developed a draft national referral mechanism for unaccompanied and separated children and stranded migrants, which will include referral procedures specific to human trafficking victims as part of the updated Human Trafficking National Action Plan. (10) In addition, the MELSD and BPS operate toll-free hotlines to report crimes, including child trafficking. (10)

The government did not provide information on its training for criminal investigators and penalties imposed for child labor violations for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Advisory Committee on Child Labor	Oversees child labor issues and reports to the government three to four times a year. Includes representatives from government agencies, various NGOs, worker federations, and employer organizations. (3) Research was unable to determine actions taken by the committee during the reporting period.
Human Trafficking (Prohibition) Committee	Created by the 2014 Anti-Human Trafficking Bill and led by the MDJS. (3) Establishes a reporting and referral mechanism for children subjected to human trafficking. Met and facilitated a desktop review of the Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan, which has yet to be launched. (3,20)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Labor Committees	Identify child laborers at the village level. Include social workers; school teachers; members of the Village Development Committees, which are local government structures; labor inspectors; and community leaders, including chiefs and priests. (3) Research was unable to determine actions taken by the committees during the reporting period.

The MDJS reported the need for technical support, training, and increased coordination among agencies to address human trafficking. It indicated that referral and rehabilitation services for human trafficking victims are also needed. (3,10,23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Outlines the government's plan to address child labor through legislation and policy, and includes awareness-raising programs and training on child labor for relevant stakeholders and implementers. (3) Research has not been able to confirm status of implementation.

‡ The Government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor.

Child labor elimination and prevention strategies are not included in some national policies, including the Education and Training Sector Strategic Plan, Ministry of Local Government Development Plans, National Plan of Action for Orphans and Vulnerable Children, and Botswana National Youth Policy. (24,25) During the reporting period, the government committed $94,200 to implement the Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan, approved in 2017, but has yet to launch the policy. (3,10,20)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Government-Funded Programs to Combat Child Labor†	NGO-run shelters, with financial support from the government, that cater to human trafficking victims, including children. (3) The National School Feeding Program focuses on providing meals to children (grades one through seven) in all public primary schools in the country. The Remote Area Dweller Program provides a second meal to school children living in remote areas and children from marginalized communities. (3,26) The Orphan Care Program provides orphans with meals and subsidizes the cost of school fees and transportation costs. (3) Poor families receive free meals, toiletries, and school uniforms through the Needy Children and Needy Students program managed by Ministry of Local Government and Rural Development. (3) Programs were active in 2018.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (27)

Although Botswana has programs that target child labor, the design and implementation of these programs are insufficient to fully address the scope of the problem, especially in commercial sexual exploitation, cattle herding, and domestic work.

There are no official government-run shelters to assist child victims of human trafficking. The government authorized and partially funds NGO-run shelters, but the government does not provide its own services. (3,10)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Botswana (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish light work provisions specific enough to prevent children's involvement in child labor.	2016 – 2018
	Prohibit hazardous work for children younger than age 18 in all relevant sectors, including in agriculture.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that the law's minimum age protections apply to children working without a contract.	2010 – 2018
	Determine a compulsory education age consistent with the minimum age of employment.	2010 – 2018
Enforcement	Authorize labor inspectors to assess penalties for labor violations.	2016 – 2018
	Publish information about the labor inspectorate's funding, number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, and training for labor inspectors on child labor issues.	2016 – 2018
	Publish information about the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions involving the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors are authorized to inspect domestic households.	2018
Coordination	Ensure that the Advisory Committee on Child Labor and Child Labor Committees are providing effective coordination between government agencies.	2018
	Ensure that the Ministry of Defense, Justice, and Security receives sufficient training and that there is increased coordination among agencies to address victims of human trafficking.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the Ministry of Defense, Justice, and Security provides rehabilitation services for human trafficking victims.	2018
Government Policies	Implement the Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan.	2018
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into relevant policies, such as the Education and Training Sector Strategic Plan, Ministry of Local Government Development Plans, National Plan of Action for Orphans and Vulnerable Children, Botswana National Youth Policy, and National Action Plan for Youth.	2011 – 2018
	Implement key child labor elimination policies, such as the National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor.	2017 – 2018
Social Programs	Collect and publish child labor data on the sectors in which children work, the types of child labor activities, and the hazards child laborers encounter, to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2018
	Develop programs to fully address the scope of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and cattle herding.	2012 – 2018
	Establish official government-run shelters to assist child victims.	2018

In 2018, Brazil made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In January 2018, the state of Ceará signed a law requiring businesses to publicly display signs highlighting the dangers of child labor and establishing administrative fines for those who violate the law, as well as those who fail to display the required signage. Furthermore, Brazilian police conducted the largest operation to date to combat child pornography, resulting in 89 arrests in more than 24 states. The number of children removed from situations of forced child labor increased by 40 percent, from 1,008 children in 2017 to 1,854 in 2018. The government also adopted its third National Plan to Eradicate Child Labor, and its third National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking. However, children in Brazil engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the production of coffee. Although Brazil made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, the government has not established legislation related to child trafficking in compliance with international standards. In addition, there are not enough labor inspectors to provide sufficient coverage of the workforce, and local governments lack the capacity to fully implement and monitor the National Program to Eradicate Child Labor, Bolsa Familia, and other social protection programs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Brazil engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. (1-3) Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the production of coffee. (4,5) The 2016 National Household Survey, published in November 2017, estimated that 998,000 children ages 5 to 17 engaged in child labor: 190,000 children ages 5 to 13, and 808,000 adolescents ages 14 to 17. (6-8) The North and Northeast regions had the highest number of child laborers, with almost half working in agriculture. (6) Table I provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Brazil. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table I. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	2.1 (638,943)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	98.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	2.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (9)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of bananas, ceramics, citrus fruits,† cocoa, coffee, corn, cotton,† manioc, mate tea, pineapples,† rice, sisal,† soy, sugarcane,† and tobacco† (4,5,11-16)
	Cattle ranching and raising livestock, including hogs, poultry, and sheep (5,11,13,17)
	Fishing and harvesting mollusks† (5,13,18)
	Forestry, including logging,† extracting carnauba palm leaves, and producing charcoal† (5,13,19-21)
Industry	Slaughtering animals,† including for beef production (22,23)
	Processing manioc flour† and cashews† (24,25)
	Production of bricks† (26,27)
	Production of footwear† and textiles, including garments (11,13,28)
Services	Street work,† including vending,† washing cars,† and garbage scavenging† (29-32)
	Work in markets and fairs, including hauling fruits and vegetables and transporting heavy loads (22,32,33)
	Work in fast-food establishments (34)
	Selling alcoholic beverages† (33)
	Artistic and sports related activities and cultural work (11)
Domestic work† (33)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3,29-31)
	Forced domestic work and playing in soccer clubs, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (29,35,36)
	Forced labor in agriculture, including in the production of coffee and manioc (4,29,37,38)
	Use by gangs to perform illicit activities, including drug trafficking, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (29,31,33,39-42)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The overall scope and magnitude of commercial sexual exploitation of children is unknown, however in 2018, the Federal Highway Police, in collaboration with Childhood Brazil, published a report that identified 2,487 areas along highways in the country where children are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation. (1,43) The states with the highest number of vulnerable areas for commercial sexual exploitation of children were Ceará, Goiás, Pará, Minas Gerais, and Paraná. In addition, the Northeast region was found to have the highest number of vulnerable areas in the country, followed by the South. (1,44) Child sex tourism is also particularly common in tourist and coastal areas, and girls from other South American countries are exploited for commercial sex in Brazil. (36)

In November 2018, the ILO and the Labor Prosecution Service (MPT) of Brazil published a report indicating that at least 8,000 children and adolescents were found to be working in the country in the production of cocoa. The study was conducted during the period of July 2017 to June 2018, and aims to expose companies and hold them accountable for their child labor and forced labor violations. (45,46)

Research found that schools, particularly those in rural areas, are overcrowded, have poor infrastructure, and lack basic resources and teachers. (29,31,47) In addition, children in remote rural areas, including approximately 11,000 indigenous children, do not have birth certificates, which may affect their ability to access education or social services because birth registration documents are required for school enrollment. (29,31,48) In November 2018, the Brazilian Chamber of Deputies deliberated over draft legislation approved by the Senate in 2016 that would alter the National Education Law to require schools to register children without birth certificates. (49) However, multiple state and municipal governments continued implementing a policy that required schools to guarantee school registration even in the absence of a birth certificate. (50)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Brazil has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Brazil's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking for labor exploitation.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 403 of the Labor Code (51)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 2 of the Hazardous Work List (52)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Work List (52)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 149 and 149-A of the Penal Code (53,54)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Article 149-A of the Penal Code; Article 244-A of the Child and Adolescent Statute (54,55)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 218-A, 218-B, and 227–228 of the Penal Code; Articles 240–241 and 244-A of the Child and Adolescent Statute (53,55)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 33 and 40 of the National System of Public Policies on Drugs; Article 244-B of the Child and Adolescent Statute (55,56)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 127 of the Military Service Regulation (57)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 5 of the Military Service Law (58)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 4 of the National Education Law (59)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 4 of the National Education Law (59)

During the reporting period, the city of Fortaleza, in the state of Ceará in the Northeast region of the country, signed a law requiring businesses to publicly display signs highlighting the dangers of child labor and featuring the national Dial 100 human rights hotline. (60) The law also establishes administrative fines, ranging from $130 to $1,300, for those who violate child labor laws, as well as those who fail to display the required signage. (61) In addition, the Ministry of Labor (MTE) published a new version of the “Dirty List” in October 2018, comprising 209 employers found to be using slave labor. At the beginning of 2019, the Secretariat of Labor Inspection, now overseen by the new Ministry of Economy, added 202 employers to the list. (61-63)

Brazil

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Prohibitions against child trafficking for forced labor exploitation require the use of threats, violence, coercion, fraud, or abuse to be established for the crime of child trafficking and therefore do not meet international standards. (54) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completions of compulsory education. (51, 59)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MTE that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Economy	Oversees the Secretariat of Social Security and Labor, which is responsible for the enforcement of labor laws, including those related to child labor and forced labor. Mobile inspection units also conduct unannounced inspections at sites in which forced labor, including forced child labor, is suspected. (60) In January 2019, the President of Brazil restructured the executive branch of government. As a result, the responsibilities of the Ministry of Labor were transferred to the Ministry of Economy and the Ministry of Justice. (64)
Labor Prosecution Service (MPT)	Prosecutes child labor and forced labor violations by working with prosecutors from its National Committee to Combat Child and Adolescent Labor, an in-house body that coordinates efforts to combat child labor. Collects fines for forced labor violations and allocates funds for initiatives that address child labor and forced labor. (65)
Military, Civil, and Federal Police	In the case of military police, operate at the local level and refer cases to the civil police for investigation. (60) Regarding federal police, work on interstate or international cases and maintain a database to track cases of human trafficking for sexual exploitation. (11,31) The Federal Highway Police help identify areas at high risk of commercial sexual exploitation. (66)
Ministry of Justice	Leads efforts to combat human trafficking, oversees the operations of Advanced Posts (Postos Avançados) and state-run Anti-Trafficking Coordination Centers (Núcleos de Enfrentamento). Provides guidance to federal, state, and local government officials on referrals for victims of human trafficking, including to Anti-Trafficking Coordination Centers, Specialized Social Assistance Reference Centers, and NGOs. (67) Twelve Advanced Posts operate throughout the country to identify human traffickers and potential victims in high-transit areas, including airports and bus stations. (67)
Ministry of Human Rights	Administers Dial 100, a human rights violations hotline that directs child labor, child trafficking, and child sexual exploitation complaints to the appropriate institution for follow up. In 2018, Dial 100 received 1,860 calls reporting cases of child labor, 14 cases of child trafficking, and 2 cases of forced child labor. (60)
National Forum of the Judiciary for Monitoring the Effectiveness of Policies on Forced Labor and Human Trafficking	Collects data on forced labor and human trafficking cases. Comprising 15 judges, including the president of the Supreme Federal Court, judges from the Supreme Labor Court, and 12 members of the National Council of Justice. (67)

In January 2019, the President of Brazil restructured the executive branch of government. As a result, the responsibilities of the Ministry of Labor were transferred between the Ministry of Economy (MOE) and the Ministry of Justice. (64) The MOE subsequently created the Secretariat of Social Security and Labor, which is responsible for the enforcement of labor laws. (64)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Brazil took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps existed within the operations of the MTE that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In May 2018, MTE's Secretariat for Labor Inspection launched a dashboard accessible to the public with data on labor inspections, including modules with disaggregated data on child labor and slave labor inspections; the child labor module was still under development by the end of the reporting period. The MPT also maintains an online platform with information on slave labor. (70,71)

Although the government had experienced significant funding issues limiting their ability to enforce child labor laws during the previous reporting period, reports indicate that the MTE was able to carry out all planned inspections during this reporting period resulting in a 40 percent increase in the number of children rescued from situations of forced labor—from 1,008 children in 2017 to 1,854 in 2018. In addition, the government conducted 9,898 child labor inspections, an increase from 7,491 inspections in 2017. (60) Labor inspectors also identified 1,700 cases of slave labor and rescued 1,133 victims during 231 inspections. (61) It is unknown how many of these victims were children as the majority of slave labor cases were found in rural areas, where the practice is historically common. (61,72) Upon finding children in hazardous working conditions, MTE officials immediately remove the children and return them to their families or refer them to social services providers. (60) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Brazil's workforce, which includes approximately 104.2 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Brazil would employ about 6,947 labor inspectors. (73-75)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Brazil took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including holding violators of child labor laws accountable in accordance with the law.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Brazil

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, the Brazilian police conducted the largest operation to combat child pornography in the country's history, resulting in the arrest of 89 individuals for their involvement in the production, storage, and distribution of child pornography. (60) Law enforcement officials also received training on how to use the Child Protective System software to investigate cases of online child commercial sexual exploitation. (60,61) Moreover, in October 2018, Brazil and Argentina launched a joint police operation to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children, which resulted in the identification and arrest of more than 30 perpetrators. (61)

Although the Federal Police claim to maintain a database to track cases of human trafficking for sexual exploitation, there is no process for collecting and tracking the data, and it is not disaggregated by victims' ages. (76) In addition, according to the government, the judicial system does not sufficiently hold perpetrators accountable for child labor law violations, including forced child labor, which may lead to a sense of impunity among violators. (11)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor	Leads the implementation of the National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Working Adolescents. Led by the Ministry of Labor (MTE) and includes 17 government agencies and representatives from trade unions, business associations, and civil society organizations. (76,77) In 2018, the committee drafted the third National Action Plan to Eradicate Child Labor and Protect Adolescent Workers. (78)
Inter-sectoral Commission to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents	Monitors implementation of the National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents. Led by the Ministry of Justice's Special Secretariat for Human Rights (SDH). (79,80) In 2018, the Inter-sectoral Commission worked on a decree to legitimize the plan on the municipal level. This decree gives guidelines for social services and programs to guarantee the rights of children and adolescents. (68,81)
National Committee to Combat Forced Labor	Coordinates and evaluates the implementation of the National Plan for the Eradication of Forced Labor and led by SDH. (82) From 2017 to 2018, the State Commission for the Eradication of Slave Labor in Bahia, the State Secretariat of Education, MPT, and the NGO Repórter Brasil implemented a joint project to raise awareness of forced labor that reached approximately 20,000 students and 655 educators in 90 schools in Bahia. (83)
National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates activities to address human trafficking. Led by the Ministry of Justice. (84) In 2018, conducted awareness-raising events during the annual Trafficking in Persons Mobilization Week. (83)
Inter-agency Committee to Implement Strategies to Ensure the Protection of Children's and Adolescents' Rights	Coordinates the implementation of policies to protect children's and adolescents' rights, including the National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Working Adolescents. Led by SDH. (85) In 2018, created Resolutions 213–215 for the protection of children's and adolescent's rights, including protections against violence, child trafficking, exploitation, and abuse. (68,86-88)
Labor Justice Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents	Coordinates efforts to eliminate child labor and ensure that adolescents have decent work opportunities. (89) Includes 11 representatives from the Superior Labor Court and regional labor courts. (90) Reports indicated that no activities were undertaken by the Labor Justice Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents during the reporting period. (68)
Anti-Trafficking Coordination Centers (Núcleos de Enfrentamento)	Coordinates activities carried out by local, state, and federal agencies to combat human trafficking. Established in 16 states and the Federal District. (67) In 2018, conducted awareness-raising campaigns and seminars about human trafficking throughout the country and reached several thousand students, teachers, and civil society. (83,91-93)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding and implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan to Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor and Protect Adolescent Workers III (2019–2022)†	Aims to eradicate child labor by 2025 by increasing access to quality education and pathways for adolescents of minimum working age to enroll in apprenticeship programs. (61,94)
National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents (2013–2020)	Identifies strategies to prevent the sexual exploitation of children, protect children's rights, and assist child victims. (80) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents during the reporting period.
National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking III (2018–2022)†	Outlines Brazil's strategy to address human trafficking. Includes 58 goals that aim to increase victim assistance and prevention, raise public awareness, and improve information and policy management by 2022. (61,95)
National Plan for the Eradication of Forced Labor	Establishes the policy framework to address forced labor. (96) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Plan for the Eradication of Forced Labor during the reporting period.
Federal Pact for the Eradication of Forced Labor	Aims to establish a forced labor database to share research and data, create state-level plans to combat forced labor, and strengthen inter-agency coordination. Led by the Ministry of Justice's SDH, and signed by 15 states. (97,98) As of the reporting period, the Federal Pact has been signed by 23 states, up from 15 states in 2016. (97-100)
National Education Plan (2014–2024)	Aims to expand access to education and improve the quality of education. Plans to allocate 10 percent of Brazil's gross domestic product to public education by 2024. (101) Although progress has been made across many of the 20 goals, only 1 goal was completed during the reporting period. Research indicates that five goals were due to be completed as of 2016. (60,102)
National Policy to Promote Full-Time Schools	Aims to combat child labor by implementing longer school hours and providing academic and vocational training. (103)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies which may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (104)

During the reporting period, the state of Pará approved a plan to address slave labor. The policy seeks to promote the creation of municipal plans and committees to combat slave labor. (105)

In May 2018, a regional court, São Paulo City Hall, and Infraero, the company that operates Congonhas Airport, the third busiest airport in the country, reached an agreement to eradicate child labor from the airport. The agreement was the final step of a process that began in 2013, when seven children were found during labor inspections working as shoe shiners in the airport. Under the agreement, Infraero will provide training to airport employees on combating child labor, maintain a permanent space for children to receive social assistance, and create an apprenticeship program for qualifying youth who are of the minimum working age. (61,106) São Paulo City Hall also will provide a team of social workers to facilitate the child social assistance space. (61)

Research found that greater resources are needed to ensure adequate implementation of the National Education Plan. (104,107)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to assist child victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Program to Eradicate Child Labor (Programa de Erradicação do Trabalho Infantil [PETI])†	Ministry of Citizenship (MOC) social assistance program that combats child labor through awareness-raising activities, victim identification and protection, and conditional cash transfers. (108,109) To receive program benefits, family participants must ensure that children are not working and maintain at least 85 percent school attendance. (110) In 2018, PETI developed a step-by-step guide to help municipalities to implement the program, and removed 11,625 children and adolescents from child labor. (60,111) By the end of 2018, more than 83,000 families had participated in the program. (111)

#StopChildLabor Campaign (#ChegaDeTrabalhoInfantil)	MPT campaign that uses celebrities to raise awareness of child labor. (112) In March 2018, the Public Labor Ministry in Porto Alegre, in Rio Grande do Sul, partnered with the city's running club for three runs leading up to the city's international marathon in June to raise awareness of child labor. (60)
Living Together and Strengthening Links Program (Serviço de Convivência e Fortalecimento de Vínculo)†	MOC social assistance program for vulnerable groups, including child laborers. Aims to strengthen familial and communal ties through sports, artistic, and cultural activities. Offers services at Social Assistance Reference Centers and Living Centers. (113) Active in 2018. (60)
Social Assistance Reference Centers‡	MOC program that provides vulnerable populations, including victims of child labor and commercial sexual exploitation, with psychological, social, and legal services. (114,115) Active in 2018. (60)
Family Stipend (Bolsa Família)†	MOC program that provides families living in poverty and extreme poverty with cash transfers. (39,116) During the reporting period, 14 million families participated in Bolsa Família . (117)
Brazil Without Extreme Poverty (Brasil Sem Miséria)†	MOC program that lifts people out of extreme poverty by guaranteeing a minimum income; expanding access to public services, including education, health, and citizenship; and increasing job opportunities and income generation for the poorest families. (118) One program component, Caring Brazil (Brasil Carinhoso), focuses on Bolsa Família participants with children ages 0 to 15 and a monthly family income of less than $22 per person. (119) In 2018, the government approved an increase in funds for the program Caring Brazil, and distributed several educational kits to pre-schools around the country. (120-122)
National Program on Job Training and Employment (Programa Nacional de Acesso ao Ensino Técnico e Emprego)†	Ministry of Education program that provides job training and employment opportunities to workers and social program recipients, including high school students. (123,124) Active in 2018. (60)
South-South Cooperation Projects‡	Government of Brazil-funded projects implemented by ILO to combat child labor and promote South-South cooperation. (125) In July 2018, the Government of Brazil and ILO provided technical assistance and funding to the Ministry of Labor and Social Services of Jamaica to host a 5-day national training of trainers workshop on labor inspection, with a focus on child labor. The workshop aimed to promote a better understanding of the importance of labor inspections in the prevention and elimination of child labor; and in the enforcement of national laws on child labor. (126)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL-funded projects implemented by ILO that aim to combat child labor and forced labor. Consolidating and Disseminating Efforts to Combat Forced Labor in Brazil and Peru (2012–2018) is a $6.8 million project that combats forced labor, and shares Brazil's best practices with the Government of Peru and Peruvian stakeholders. The Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor MAPI6 conducts research and develops new survey methodologies, improves awareness, strengthens policies and government capacity, and promotes partnerships to combat child labor and forced labor. In 2018, (MAPI6) supported development of a forced labor questionnaire module that will be attached to the 2019 National Health Survey. Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (127,128)

In 2018, the state of Maranhão created a program to provide victims of slave labor with protection and reintegration services, raise awareness of slave labor, and promote coordination amongst state government agencies. (129) The state of Maranhão also partnered with NGO Repórter Brasil to raise awareness of forced labor in schools and reached more than 109,000 children, teachers, and school personnel in 2018. (130)

Because the National Program to Eradicate Child Labor and Bolsa Família are decentralized, municipal governments are responsible for their implementation and monitoring, and some municipalities struggle to carry them out. The challenges include responding to the needs of program participants, complex local contexts and geographic areas, excessive program requirements, and high staff turnover. (39) In addition, many states report a lack of resources to adequately assist victims of human trafficking, and research found a lack of specialized shelters for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (29,36)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Brazil (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws do not require the use of threats, violence, coercion, fraud, or abuse to establish the crime of child trafficking for forced labor exploitation.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Enforcement	Publish information regarding the number of labor inspections conducted, number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected, number of criminal investigations conducted, and number of violations found.	2012 – 2018
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2014 – 2018
	Impose penalties for convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.	2018
	Collect and track data on cases regarding human trafficking for sexual exploitation and ensure that the data are disaggregated by victims' ages.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that all violators of child labor laws, including the worst forms of child labor, are held accountable in accordance with the law.	2015 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure the Labor Justice Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents is active.	2018
Government Policies	Provide adequate resources to ensure that the goals outlined in the National Education Plan are achieved.	2015 – 2018
Social Programs	Remove barriers to education, including by ensuring an adequate number of trained teachers, improving school infrastructure, and taking steps to enroll children in rural areas.	2013 – 2018
	Expand the accessibility of birth registration services in remote areas and ensure that indigenous communities are aware of the benefits of birth registration.	2013 – 2018
	Support local governments in the implementation and monitoring of PETI and Bolsa Família .	2009 – 2018
	Provide adequate resources to state governments to ensure that child trafficking victims receive appropriate social services, and ensure the availability of specialized shelters for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.	2012 – 2018

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the British Virgin Islands. However, in 2018, the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The law does not have a list of hazardous work prohibited for children and does not prohibit the involvement of children in illicit activities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the British Virgin Islands. (1-5) Table I provides one key indicator on children's education in the British Virgin Islands. Data on other key indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		81.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (6)
All other data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2019. (7)

The cost of uniforms, books, and lunches prevent some children from attending school. In addition, violence in schools can deter children from attending. (5,6) Children not in school may be vulnerable to engage in child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (BOTs) recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but are not constitutionally part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (8) Domestic UK law does not generally apply unless explicitly extended in the British Virgin Islands. Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. (8) If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that territory. (1,8) The following Convention has been extended to the British Virgin Islands (Table 2).

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of the British Virgin Islands has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in the British Virgin Islands' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 3. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 128 of the Labor Code (9)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 130 of the Labor Code (9)

British Virgin Islands

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Articles 130 and 146 of the Labor Code (9)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 14 of the Constitution Order; Section 201A of the Criminal Code; Article 130 of the Labor Code (9-11)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 201A of the Criminal Code (11)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 284A of the Criminal Code; Article 130 of the Labor Code (9,11)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Section 2b of the Education Amendment Act of 2014; Division 3, Paragraph 28 of the Education Act (12,13)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 22 of the Constitution Order; Section 17 of the Education Act (10,12)

* No conscription (14)

† No standing military (8,14)

In the British Virgin Islands, the Labor Code specifies that hazardous work is to be defined by the Minister of Labor, but the Minister of Labor has not defined hazardous work for children. (1,4) The law does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (11)

Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor. However, in the British Virgin Islands, the UK government has established an institutional mechanism for the enforcement of labor laws (Table 4).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforces labor laws and collects data and statistics on violations of the Labor Code. (9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor. However, the Government of the British Virgin Islands has established child protection programs promoting children's rights, which may contribute to the prevention of child labor. (3,15)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor in the British Virgin Islands (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2012 – 2018
	Ensure that the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs, is criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Social Programs	Ensure that all children can attend school by eliminating prohibitive school costs and violence in schools.	2018

In 2018, Burkina Faso made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the course of the reporting period, the government has removed more than 2,000 children from artisanal mining sites and placed them in the care of social services. The government also employed 255 full-time labor inspectors, an increase of more than 50 percent with respect to the previous reporting period, and launched a new National Program of Economic and Social Development, which includes child labor elimination and prevention strategies. However, children in Burkina Faso engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in artisanal gold mining and quarrying. Children also perform dangerous tasks in cotton harvesting. Limited resources for the enforcement of child labor laws may hinder government efforts to protect children from engaging in the worst forms of child labor. In addition, the Labor Code does not identify the activities in which children may engage in light work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Burkina Faso engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in artisanal gold mining and quarrying. Children also perform dangerous tasks in cotton harvesting. (1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Burkina Faso.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	42.1 (2,116,752)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	41.9

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Planting, weeding, and harvesting crops, including cotton and mangos (1,3,4,6,9,10) Raising and herding† livestock, including cattle and goats (3,9,11,12)
Industry	Artisanal mining† of gold, including digging† and crushing† rock, installing dynamite,† working underground,† carrying water and other heavy loads,† and using cyanide† and mercury† (1,4,10,12-22) Quarrying† and transporting heavy loads† while working to extract granite (20,23-27) Working in carpentry† and construction (11,12)
Services	Domestic work (5,9,11,12,28,29) Street work, including vending† (5,9,11,12,24)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,9,30,31) Farming, including production of cotton and livestock raising, domestic work, begging, gold mining, and quarrying, each as a result of human trafficking (1,3,30,32)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Burkina Faso

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Burkina Faso is a destination, transit point, and source for child trafficking to and from other West African countries. Child trafficking also occurs within Burkina Faso. (5,30,33,34) The practice of confiage, which involves sending a child to live with a relative or friend to attend school in a larger town or city, may place children at risk of internal human trafficking. (35) Child labor in artisanal gold mining is particularly acute and often exposes children to dangerous chemicals used in the gold extraction process, such as cyanide and mercury. (3-5,36-39) In 2018, Burkina Faso was the second-largest producer of cotton in Africa, with a reported 250,000 children involved extensively in the production of cotton, primarily on small family farms. Children involved in the production of cotton are exposed to many health risks, including exposure to pesticides, injury from the use of sharp tools, animal bites, and respiratory issues due to the inhalation of cotton dust. (6) Terrorist attacks and mass displacement of people in the north and east of the country resulted in a large number of internally displaced people, with the UN Office of Humanitarian Affairs estimating 102,000 at the end of 2018, with a large number of those being children left in more precarious and vulnerable situations. (39-41)

According to the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, in early 2019, more than 1,000 schools have closed due to security threats, mostly in the north and east, affecting more than 100,000 students. (38) Although the Law Orienting the Education System mandates free education until age 16, the costs of uniforms, school-related fees, teacher shortages, and school infrastructure shortfalls in rural areas hinder children's access to education. (1,2,23,42) During the reporting period, the government worked with the UNHCR to deploy mobile courts to remote villages, issuing birth certificates and national identity documents to qualified citizens. (40) About a quarter of children under age 5 in Burkina Faso lack a birth certificate. Birth certificates are required to attend school, so many of these children remain out of school and vulnerable to child labor. (40,43)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Burkina Faso has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Burkina Faso's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including unspecified light work provisions.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 152 of the Labor Code; Order Deviating the Age of Admission to Employment (44,45)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 149–150 of the Labor Code; Article 1 of the Hazardous Work List (44,46)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 3–6 of the Hazardous Work List; Article 77 of the Mining Code (44-47)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 5 and 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 3–5 of the Law Suppressing the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography; Article 1 of the Law on Combating Trafficking of Persons and Similar Practices (44,48,49)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 1–5 and 14–15 of the Law on Combating Trafficking of Persons and Similar Practices (44,49)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 3–4, 7–10, and 20 of the Law Suppressing the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography (44,48)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code (44)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	20	Article 2 of the Decree Organizing Operations Related to Convoking the Contingent (50)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 153 and 424 of the Labor Code (44)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 4 of the Law Orienting the Education System (42)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 6 of the Law Orienting the Education System (42)

* No conscription (51)

The light work provisions in the Labor Code are not sufficiently specific to prevent children from involvement in child labor, because activities in which light work may be permitted are not identified in legislation. (44,45)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security (MFPTSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security (MFPTSS)	Enforces labor laws, including child labor laws and laws on the worst forms of child labor, and establishes a government policy to combat child labor. (9,52-54) Uses provincial committees to raise awareness, conducts workshops for community members, and enforces laws at the local level. (55)
Ministry of Women, National Solidarity, and Family (MFSNF)	Removes children from exploitative child labor; provides reintegration services through its mobile unit for intervention, and works with local village surveillance committees on awareness-raising efforts through participation in joint routine inspections with MFPTSS, the lead agency on child labor law enforcement. (9,53,56) Operates a free hotline to report child abuse. Maintains civil registry offices in maternity wards to register newborn babies. (2,57,58) Uses its National Council for Childhood to oversee all policies for the survival, protection, development, and participation of children in broader policy initiatives. (59)
Ministry of Territorial Administration, Decentralization and Interior Security (MATDSI)	Oversees criminal cases involving children and women, which are referred to the Ministry of Justice for prosecution, through its Morals Brigade in the MATDSI National Police Force. (60,61) Assists MFPTSS through joint routine inspections related to child labor in the course of actions against traffickers. (56)
Ministry of Justice	Appoints one or more judges who specialize in child protection issues to each high court to oversee juvenile court cases. Collaborates with MFSNF social workers in charge of child protection to conduct investigations on behalf of vulnerable children, including victims of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, exploitative child labor, and begging. (62)
Parliamentary Network for the Promotion of Child Rights	Trains government officials on children's rights, including child labor laws and other issues affecting children. (1,63,64)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Burkina Faso took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MFPTSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (65)	$126,000 (38)
Number of Labor Inspectors	169 (65)	255 (38,66)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	Yes (65)	Yes (38)
Initial Training for New Labor Inspectors	Yes (65)	Yes (38)
Training on New Laws Related to Child Labor	N/A (65)	N/A (38)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (65)	Yes (38)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	Unknown (51)	Unknown (38)
Number Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (51)	Unknown (38)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (51)	Unknown (38)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (51)	Unknown (38)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (51)	Unknown (38)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (65)	Yes (38)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (65)	Yes (38)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (65)	Yes (38)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (65)	Yes (38)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (65)	Yes (38)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (65)	Yes (38)

The Government of Burkina Faso employs 255 full-time labor inspectors, an increase of more than 50 percent with respect to the previous reporting period, surpassing the ILO's technical advice. (38,66) The government indicated that it lacks adequate resources to enforce labor laws throughout the country, including the human and financial resources needed to carry out a sufficient number of preliminary labor inspections and follow-up inspections to ensure remediation of notices as part of labor law compliance. (2,30,34,38,53,65) The government did not provide information on the number of labor inspections conducted, including those conducted at worksites, and the number of child labor violations found, including the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected for inclusion in this report. (34,38)

Law enforcement collaborates ad hoc with the Ministry of Women, National Solidarity, and Family (MFSNF) to provide social services to child labor victims. (23,67) It is unknown how many cases of child labor are identified as a result of complaints made to the MFSNF hotline. (51,66) Furthermore, the MFPTSS publishes an annual report listing 12 types of labor infractions; however, none relate to child labor. (9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Burkina Faso took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including haphazard application of standard victim identification and inconsistent referral procedures by authorities and frontline responders.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (65)	Yes (38)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A (38)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (65)	Yes (38)

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Number of Investigations	Unknown (51)	Unknown (38)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (51)	Unknown (38)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (51)	Unknown (38)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (51)	Unknown (38)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (34)	Unknown (34)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (65)	Yes (38)

During the course of the reporting period, the government has removed more than 2,000 children from artisanal mining sites and placed them in the care of social services. (38) Although the government has standard victim identification and referral procedures, authorities and frontline responders do not apply them uniformly. (34,38,68) The government did not provide information on the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions for inclusion in this report. (34,38)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordination Committee for the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (CNC-PAN/PFTE)	Supervises, evaluates, and oversees implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Chaired by the MFPTSS Directorate to Combat Child Labor and its Worst Forms. Includes representatives from various civil society organizations, 24 government ministries, and 6 observers from donor countries and international NGOs. (9,12,53) Holds meetings twice a year to review efforts to combat child labor and identify needs. (53) Research indicated that this coordination body continued to operate during the reporting period. (38)
MFPTSS Directorate to Combat Child Labor and its Worst Forms	Coordinates and leads interagency efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms; collects information on child labor; and conducts awareness-raising activities. Serves as the Secretariat for CNC-PAN/PFTE. (65) Research indicated that this coordination body continued to operate during the reporting period. (38)
National Committee for Vigilance and Surveillance Against the Trafficking in Persons and Assimilated Practices (CNVS)	Coordinates actions at the national level to combat the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking. Oversees Committees for Vigilance and Surveillance in each of the regions. (30) MFSNF serves as president and MATDSI is vice president. (30,57) Includes representatives from MFPTSS, the Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Women and Gender, and NGOs. (30) Research indicated that this coordination body continued to operate during the reporting period. (38)
Child Protection Networks	Assist CNVS with coordinating and facilitating the collection of statistical data on human trafficking, specifically the trafficking of women and children. Established by MFSNF, the Networks comprise social workers, magistrates, judges, police officers, health workers, and NGOs in 23 of the country's 45 provinces. (69) Research indicated that this coordination body continued to operate during the reporting period. (38)

Poor coordination among ministries and a lack of resources, such as computers and electricity, continued to hamper the government's ability to coordinate efforts to fully address child trafficking. (2,30,38,39)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies covering all worst forms of child labor.

Burkina Faso

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
2015 National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking	Combats human trafficking; developed by MFSNF and implemented by CNVS. (30) In 2018, as part of implementation of the plan, CNVS conducted an awareness-raising campaign, reaching approximately 500,000 people in the country. (34)
Communal Action Plan Against Trafficking (2013–2018)	Seeks to prevent child trafficking, raise awareness in local communities, and rehabilitate and reintegrate victims of child trafficking. Includes government plans for replication elsewhere in the country with a pilot in Diébougou. (30,69) In 2018, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy. (34)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (23,30,70,71)

Although the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor ended in 2015, the new National Strategy to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor is with the National Development Planning Commission for review. (38,51,65,66,72-74) In addition, the new National Program of Economic and Social Development includes aspects that address child labor elimination and prevention strategies, such as an objective to halve the number of street children by 2020 through the enforcement of existing law. (38,73)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Program for the Fight Against Child Labor on Artisanal Gold Mining Sites and Quarries (2015–2019)†	MFSNF program that aims to prevent and withdraw children from working in artisanal gold mines as part of the government's efforts to eliminate child labor in mining by 2025. (2,30,67,75,76) Seeks to strengthen child protection systems, improve coordination among stakeholders, and implement existing legislation. Builds on the previous project (2009–2013) that aimed to eliminate child labor in mines and quarries. (67) Approximately $42.9 million (40 percent of the program costs) is provided by the government. (2) In 2018, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken. (1)
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor II	USDOL-funded capacity-building project implemented by Winrock International and partners Verité and Lawyers Without Borders in six countries to build local and national capacity of the governments to address child labor. (77-79) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
MFSNF Projects to Combat Human Trafficking†	MFSNF-funded programs aim to combat human trafficking through the operation of transit centers that provide food, medical assistance, and counseling to child trafficking victims and children vulnerable to trafficking. (30,33,68) The transit centers aim to reintegrate victims into their communities and facilitate repatriation of foreign victims when possible. (60) The National Parenting Program assists parents in managing and educating their children to combat child trafficking. (30,69) The government funds nationwide media campaigns to combat human trafficking by providing advocacy, raising awareness, and building capacity for key actors involved in child protection issues, including child trafficking. (30,69) The government operates watchdog and monitoring committees to ensure that all cases of alleged trafficking of children are reported to the justice system by social workers. (80) In 2018, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken. (34)
Campaign to Remove Street Children*†	Project funded by NGO MinWomen, with coordination by the Ministry of Women, Family, and Humanitarian Action, that began in August 2018 and includes outreach missions in the streets to identify and refer vulnerable children, including forced begging victims, to one of the four youth shelters established in the Somgande, Basjuy, Nongremassom, and Cissin districts of Ouagadougou. (34,38)
World Bank-funded Projects	Includes a $51 million Education Access and Quality Improvement Project to support the government in increasing access to preschool education in the two poorest regions and secondary education in the five poorest regions, and improve teaching and education; and a $50 million Social Safety Net Project to provide income support to poor households and lay the foundation for a basic safety net system in Burkina Faso. (81,82)

Program	Description
Resilience and Economic Growth in the Sahel–Enhanced Resilience (November 2013–November 2020)	More than $76 million USAID-funded project that builds food security and improved livelihoods in Niger and Burkina Faso. Works to increase the resilience of chronically vulnerable populations in Niger and Burkina Faso, particularly in 23 communes in the marginal agricultural and agro-pastoral belt. (36,83,84) In 2018, the program was extended for another 2 years in Burkina Faso, with an emphasis on the empowerment of local institutions in the 12 focus communes and 232 villages. It also worked to build animal assets through microfinance as an alternative to traditional practices, and to support conservation farming and remedy problems in water, sanitation, and hygiene sectors. (34)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Burkina Faso.

Although Burkina Faso has social programs to address the worst forms of child labor in the production of cotton and in gold mining, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. (1,2,5)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Burkina Faso (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that light work provisions are sufficiently specific to prohibit children's involvement in child labor.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that labor law enforcement receives sufficient resources to fulfill their mandates, including by conducting an adequate number of inspections and following up after preliminary inspections to ensure remediation of notices to comply with labor law obligations.	2009 – 2018
	Publish statistics on the enforcement of child labor laws, including the number and type of labor inspections conducted and labor violations found, as well as penalties imposed and collected.	2009 – 2018
	Include the number of child labor infractions in the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security annual report.	2015 – 2018
	Establish and publish data on a mechanism to log all calls to the government child protection hotline and track cases of child labor for referral to law enforcement or social services providers.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that authorities and frontline responders apply standard victim identification and referral procedures uniformly.	2016 – 2018
	Publish statistics on the criminal enforcement of child labor laws, including the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions, convictions, and imposed penalties.	2016 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies receive adequate resources, such as computers and electricity, to accomplish their mandates.	2015 – 2018
Government Policies	Take steps to implement the Communal Action Plan Against Trafficking.	2016 – 2018
Social Programs	Improve access to education by eliminating school-related fees and costs, and increasing the number of schools and teachers in rural areas.	2010 – 2018
	Make efforts to register children at birth to ensure access to social services, including education.	2010 – 2018
	Expand existing programs to fully address child labor in the production of cotton and in gold mining.	2009 – 2018
	Undertake activities to support the National Program for the Fight Against Child Labor on Artisanal Gold Mining Sites and Quarries projects and the Ministry of Women, National Solidarity, and Family projects to combat human trafficking.	2016 – 2018

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2018, Burma is receiving an assessment of no advancement. Although, Burma made some efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, government officials were complicit in the use of forced child labor. The government extended the Supplementary Understanding with the ILO to continue the forced labor complaint mechanism through 2018. During the June 2018 Union Peace Conference, the government also committed to the elimination of six grave violations against children, including the recruitment and use of children as soldiers. The government also established a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor. Despite these initiatives, Burma is receiving an assessment of no advancement because, in previous years, it forcibly recruited children into its national armed forces, and there is a lack of evidence that it has fully ceased this practice and that these children have been released from the armed forces. The government’s “self-reliance” policy has created an ongoing risk of forced labor in conflict areas as the national armed forces continues to coerce civilians, including children, to work as porters, cleaners, and cooks in conflict areas. In addition, several of the armed ethnic groups recruited and used children, including as combatants in armed conflict. Children in Burma engage in other worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Government policies increased children’s vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor by denying Rohingya children, displaced by conflict, access to education because of government restrictions on their movements. The penalties imposed for recruiting and using children in the military are not sufficient for the seriousness of the crime. In addition, the government did not publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts to investigate, prosecute, and convict cases involving the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Burma engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in armed conflict and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) Table I provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Burma.

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including rubber, sugarcane, beans and pulses, rice, betel nut, and bamboo (2,4-9)
	Fishing and processing fish and seafood (4-6,10)
	Forestry, including on teak plantations (4,11)
Industry	Producing garments (12-17)
	Construction and carrying stones (2,4,12,13,18-20)
	Food processing (12,13)
	Brickmaking (21)
	Quarrying and mining, including for jade and rubies (1,4,22-24)
Services	Domestic work (2,4,25-27)
	Working in teashops and restaurants, including waiting tables and washing dishes (2,4,12,20,28)
	Vending, including in fish markets, collecting garbage and recyclables, and working in transportation (5,13,20,29)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced recruitment of children by state and non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (1,2,30)
	Forced labor in agriculture, including harvesting bamboo and producing beans, rice, rubber, sugarcane, and teak (1,7,11,31)
	Forced labor in manufacturing bricks and construction (1,21)
	Forced labor in domestic work, teashops, and begging (1,26,27)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,8)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

At least 174 unverified cases of recruitment into Tatmadaw ranks were under review at the end of 2018. (30) In previous years, the Tatmadaw used force and coercion to recruit children. (32,33) Civilian brokers with military connections facilitate the entry into the military of underage recruits, in some instances bypassing standard age verification procedures. Individuals recruited as children have been to the front lines of armed conflict as combatants, and there have been reports that some military officers employ children to serve as messengers or domestic workers. (1,30) The Tatmadaw’s “self-reliance” policy has led to some units using children to porter goods, cook, and clean barracks in conflict areas. (1) During the reporting period, there were at least two documented cases of children working in these types of support roles. (1,30) In addition, the Border Guard Police use children for unpaid labor. (30,34) Children were also recruited and used in armed conflict by non-state armed groups, including the Karen National Liberation Army, the Kachin Independence Army, the Karenni Army, the Shan State Army-South, the United Wa State Army, the Ta’ang National Liberation Army in Kachin, Kayin, and Shan states, and in other unidentified armed groups. (1,30)

Between August 2017 and August 2018, over 700,000 people, primarily from the Rohingya minority, fled from Burma to Bangladesh following acts of violence and ethnic cleansing perpetuated by the military in northern Rakhine State. (1,35-37) While the displacement of Rohingya people abated in 2018, conditions in Rakhine State were not conducive to the safe and voluntary return of refugees in Bangladesh. (37) As a result, an estimated 350,000 Rohingya children live in refugee camps in Bangladesh, at sites in which they are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (37,38) Rohingya girls are trafficked from refugee camps for commercial sexual exploitation in Bangladesh, India, and Nepal. In some cases, girls are promised jobs in domestic service but are instead forced into commercial sexual exploitation. (39,40) There are also reports that some girls are forced into domestic service, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and are abused by their employers. (35,41,42) Rohingya children recruited to work outside of the refugee camps, such as in shops, fishing, and transportation, are reported to be underpaid or unpaid, unable to communicate with their families, and subjected to excessive working hours. (35)

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Rohingya children internally displaced in northern Rakhine State by the ethnic violence are at increased risk to the worst forms of child labor due to a lack of access to education. During the reporting period, approximately 129,000 of these children were forced to reside in internally displaced persons (IDP) camps in central Rakhine State. (37) Government restrictions on the movement of Rohingya in these IDP camps limit children’s access to education, among other basic services. (37) Furthermore, schools in Rohingya villages in Maungdaw, Rathedaung, and Buthidaung townships where the 2017 ethnic cleansing occurred have not re-opened, while schools for ethnic Rakhine children have re-opened. (43)

Rohingya children throughout Rakhine State face severe restrictions on attending school due to discriminatory government policies and practices adopted following the 2012 riots and violent clashes between ethnic Rakhine and Rohingya communities. (44) Local officials and school authorities typically ban Rohingya children from attending government schools with ethnic Rakhine children. (44,45) The government also imposed severe travel restrictions on Rohingya, making it difficult for children to access schools outside of their IDP camps, villages, or townships. (37,46-48) These restrictions particularly impact Rohingya children ages 10 to 17 because they must travel to attend middle school and high school. (45-48) Many Rohingya children also lack the documentation that is required to attend middle schools and high schools in Rakhine State because the government denies them citizenship or officials refuse to register their household residency. (49,50) Rohingya children’s access to primary school in their villages is limited due to a lack of schools, particularly in IDP camps, and teacher absence in Muslim villages due to security concerns. (51,52) In addition to Rakhine State, children throughout Burma face barriers to education, such as long distances to schools and expenses that include uniforms, books, transportation, and “extra fees” charged by teachers and schools. (2,13,24,53)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Burma has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Burma’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including establishing a minimum age for work consistent with international standards and comprehensively identifying the types of hazardous work prohibited for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Section 75 of the Factories Act; Article 14 of the Shops and Establishments Law (54,55)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	16	Article 15(d) of the Shops and Establishments Law; Sections 25 and 29 of the Factories Act; Rule 146 of the 2018 Mining Rules; Section 65(a) of the Child Law (54-57)

Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 372–373 of the Penal Code; Section 66(f) of the Child Law (56,59)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Sections 20(a) and 22(c) of the Narcotics and Psychotropic Substances Law; Sections 65(b)–(c) and 66(c) of the Child Law (56,61)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	10‡	Section 20(b)(i) of the Child Law; Section 4(j) of the National Education Law (56,63)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 20(a)(ii) of the Child Law; Section 4(j) of the National Education Law (56,63)

* No conscription (64)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (56,65)

If passed, the Child Rights Law would extend hazardous protections for children up to age 18; however, it remained under discussion in the Parliament in 2018. (2) In May 2018, a draft hazardous work list was approved following a national consultation. However, the list has not been published and will not have the force of law until the Child Rights Law is approved. (66)

In certain sectors, age 14 has been established as the minimum age for work; however, there is no minimum age for work for all sectors in which children are employed, including agriculture and informal work. Some sector-specific laws identify activities that are prohibited for children under age 18. (55,57) The general minimum age of 16 for hazardous work, established in the Child Law, is also not in compliance with international standards. (56)

The legal framework does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation of children, as there are no criminal prohibitions of the procurement and offering of children for the production of pornography or for pornographic performances, and Burma's Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law requires a demonstration of force, fraud, or coercion to constitute a child trafficking offense. (56,58,59) In addition, the legal framework does not sufficiently prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, as the use of children ages 16 and 17 for the production and trafficking of drugs is not criminally prohibited. (56,61) The legal framework also does not prohibit non-state armed groups from recruiting children for use in armed conflict. (67)

Children in Burma are required to attend school only up to age 10. This standard leaves children ages 10 through 13 vulnerable to child labor since they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. (56,65)

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within operations of the law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate child labor enforcement.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Immigration, and Population's (MOLIP) Factories and General Labor Laws Inspection Department (FGLLID)	Inspects factories, shops, and establishments for child labor law violations. (54,55)
Myanmar Police Force's Anti-Trafficking in Persons Division (ATIPD)	Investigates trafficking in persons crimes and engages in human trafficking prevention efforts through its 32 regional Anti-Trafficking Task Forces. Oversees Child Protection. Operates Task Force units in Rangoon, Mandalay, and Naypyidaw. (68)
Ministry of Defense's Committee for the Prevention of Military Recruitment of Underage Children	Sanctions perpetrators that recruit or use children in the armed forces. (69)
Department of Social Welfare, Relief, and Resettlement	Investigates cases in which children need protection. (56) Provides social services for children rescued from human trafficking and those affected by conflict in Rakhine, Shan, and Kachin states. (68)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Burma took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Immigration, and Population that may hinder adequate child labor law enforcement, including the lack of publicly available enforcement information and an inadequate number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Burma's workforce, which includes approximately 22 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Burma would employ about 558 inspectors. (64,73,74)

Burma

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the Lower House of Burma’s Parliament approved the new Occupational Safety and Health Bill, which expands the legal jurisdiction of the labor inspectorate to include additional industries, including agriculture and construction. In March 2019, the bill was adopted by the Upper House and signed into law by the President. (66,75,76)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Burma took actions to combat the worst forms of child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the Burmese military’s practices that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of publicly available data on enforcement efforts.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown	Unknown (2)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (77)	Unknown (2)

As of September 2018, the government released 75 children and young people who had been recruited into the military. (78) While the government continued training its personnel on age verification at recruitment centers, the military’s oversight and monitoring of recruitment procedures were still insufficient to fully prevent the recruitment of children. (1,68) The penalties imposed for recruiting and using child soldiers are not commensurate with the seriousness of these crimes. (1,33) In past years, most of these cases reportedly culminated in reprimands, demotions, relocations, fines, or decreases in pensions, penalties significantly less than those prescribed by criminal law. (79)

During the reporting period, the government sentenced a man to 20 years for forcing a child to work on a chicken farm without pay and prosecuted 3 cases involving child trafficking. The Myanmar Police Force’s Anti-Trafficking in Persons Division (ATIPD) also rescued 31 child trafficking victims. (68) In addition, the ATIPD increased its staff, bringing the total number of officers to 490, and conducted awareness-raising programs in IDP camps in Rakhine and Kachin states, where children and adults are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking. (68)

The Department of Social Welfare, Relief, and Resettlement continued to lack sufficient staff and resources to provide adequate services for victims. However, in 2018, it did establish a Department of Rehabilitation to coordinate rehabilitation services for human trafficking victims. (68)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
UN Country Task Force on Monitoring and Reporting (CTFMR) on Grave Violations Against Children	Coordinates with the government to end and prevent the recruitment and use of children in Burma’s armed forces. (78) Co-chaired by the UN and UNICEF, members include Save the Children, World Vision, and relevant UN agencies, such as the ILO. Mandated by UN Security Council Resolution 1612 in response to children in Burma being subjected to grave violations, including the recruitment and use of children as soldiers. (78)

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Technical Working Group on Child Labor	Coordinates the implementation of ILO Convention 182, including drafting the list of hazardous work prohibited for children, developing a national plan of action against child labor, and establishing a mechanism for identifying, monitoring, and referring child labor cases. Chaired by MOLIP, consists of stakeholders from eight government ministries, employers, and civil society organizations. (80,81) The group held quarterly plenary sessions during the reporting period. (82)
Myanmar National Committee on Child Labour Eradication*	Oversees the implementation of the Myanmar Child Labour Eradication Project, which was approved by the committee in December 2018. (2,24,83) Chaired by the Vice President and consists of 13 government ministries, including MOLIP, chief ministers of 10 states, mayors of Rangoon and Mandalay, and employer and civil society organizations. (83) Officially launched on February 5, 2018. (84)
Central Body for the Suppression of Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates efforts to address trafficking in persons. Chaired by the Minister of Home Affairs and includes six government agencies and several non-governmental stakeholders. (69) In 2018, organized anti-trafficking in persons awareness-raising activities, which included participatory events, distribution of informational pamphlets, and placement of billboards and posters in areas with high risk of recruitment. (68)
Township Committees of the Rights of the Child	Coordinates local child welfare and protection activities. Led by the Township Administrator and consists of government agencies, including the Department of Social Welfare, police, and NGOs. (2,56) As of 2018, established in 318 of 330 townships in Burma. (85)

*Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the adoption of policies that address all relevant worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Joint Action Plan with the UN to Prevent the Recruitment and Use of Children for Military Purposes	Aims to end all government recruitment and use of children in its armed forces. Seeks to ensure the release of children under age 18 from the armed forces and facilitate their reintegration into families and communities through the CTFMR. Resulted in the release of 924 children and young people since the start of the policy in 2012, including the release of 75 children and young people in 2018. (78)
Myanmar Child Labour Eradication Project†	Establishes a national plan of action to eliminate child labor, including hazardous child labor. (2)
Myanmar Sustainable Development Plan (2018–2030)†	Sets out a strategy to expand the social safety net and social protection services, including the introduction of measures to keep children enrolled in schools and out of child labor. (86)
Myanmar Decent Work Country Programme (2018–2021)†	Seeks to strengthen protections against child labor and forced labor by building on existing ILO-programs in Burma and continuing engagement between the ILO and the government. (87)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

During the July 2018 session of the Union Peace Conference between the government, national armed forces, and non-state armed groups, the parties committed to eliminating the six grave violations against children, including the recruitment and use of children as soldiers, in accordance with UNCRC. (78,88)

Although the government has adopted a policy to end the military's recruitment and use of child soldiers and hazardous child labor, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor or commercial sexual exploitation of children.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address all worst forms of child labor.

Burma

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Forced Labor Complaint Mechanism	Joint government-ILO program that gives citizens a mechanism to lodge complaints of forced labor and seek remedies from the government. (89) On January 22, 2018, the ILO and the Government of Burma signed an extension to the Supplementary Understanding on Complaints Mechanism, which was in effect until December 31, 2018. (66) During the reporting period, 115 cases of child soldiers were received through the complaint mechanism; most of the complaints reported were from people who are no longer children. (90) In addition, 42 cases were referred to CTFMR in 2018. (66)
Hotlines	UNICEF and World Vision-operated hotlines for reporting suspected cases of child recruitment or use by Burma's military. (91) In 2018, 44 tips were received and 5 cases of child soldier recruitment were confirmed, resulting in the release of the victims. (90)
Myanmar Programme on the Elimination of Child Labour (My-PEC) Project (2014–2019)	$6.25 million, USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO to expand the knowledge base on child labor in Burma, increase awareness and knowledge of child labor, improve laws to meet international standards, and build the capacity of stakeholders to address child labor. (82,92) In 2018, trained 78 social partners to advocate against child labor; published and provided training materials on child labor to labor inspectors, members of parliament, employer organizations, workers organizations, and civil society organizations; provided education services to 359 children, livelihood services and skills training to 196 households, and occupational safety and health training to 156 employers and local authorities. (66,84) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
SafeYouth@Work Project: Building a Generation of Safe and Healthy Workers (2014–2019)	USDOL-funded global project implemented by the ILO, with Burma as one of the three pilot countries. In Burma, focused on young workers ages 15 to 24 in the construction and agricultural sectors. Sought to improve availability and use of occupational safety and health (OSH) data, improve regulations and programs on OSH, build the capacity of the government and social partners to promote and enforce compliance with OSH laws and regulations, and increase youth knowledge and awareness of hazards and risks. (93) In 2018, participated in the development of Burma's first OSH questionnaire to be included in the Labor Force Survey that will be administered to over 15,000 households by MOLIP. Assisted in the development of the data collector's manual and provided training for data collectors. (94) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

Overall, the government lacks sufficient social programs to adequately address the worst forms of child labor, including the recruitment of children by state and non-state armed forces, forced child labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Burma (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2016 – 2018
	Establish a minimum age of at least 14 years for work for all sectors.	2016 – 2018
	Establish a minimum age of 18 for hazardous work.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive by including all sectors and activities in which children engage in hazardous work.	2016 – 2018
	Prohibit all forms of child commercial sexual exploitation, including procuring and offering of children for the production of pornography or pornographic performances.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the law does not require a demonstration of force, fraud, or coercion to constitute a child trafficking offense.	2017 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the use of children in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2016 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the age up to which education is compulsory is the same as the minimum age for work, as established by international standards.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that conditions are safe in Rakhine State for the voluntary return of Rohingya refugees, including children in Bangladesh.	2018
	Publish information related to labor law enforcement, including the amount of funding for the labor inspectorate, the number of inspections conducted at worksites, the number of penalties issued for child labor violations, and the number of penalties collected for child labor violations.	2016 – 2018

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Establish a referral mechanism between the labor inspectorate and social services.	2016 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2016 – 2018
	Publish data on training for investigators and the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2018
	Cease the military's continued use of children in its armed forces, including for forced labor in conflict areas.	2016 – 2018
	Improve military oversight and monitoring of recruitment procedures to prevent the recruitment of children.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the penalties for the recruitment and use of children in the military are appropriate for the seriousness of the crime.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the Department of Social Welfare, Relief, and Resettlement has sufficient resources to provide services to victims of the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2018
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as armed conflict by state and non-state armed groups, hazardous work, forced child labor, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2016 – 2018
Social Programs	Remove all restrictions on Rohingya access to education, including school segregation, travel restrictions, and barriers to enroll in school.	2017 – 2018
	Develop and implement education programs that reduce physical barriers for children who live long distances from schools and eliminate prohibitive expenses for attending school.	2016 – 2018
	Develop and implement programs to address all worst forms of child labor, including the recruitment of children by state and non-state armed groups, forced child labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2016 – 2018

In 2018, Burundi made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government hired additional labor inspectors, more than doubling the number of those employed to enforce labor laws across the country. However, children in Burundi engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Burundi lacks a compulsory education age that is equal to the minimum age for work. The government's ability to address the worst forms of child labor was constrained by a lack of necessary resources to conduct labor inspections and criminal investigations, a lack of well-trained educators, materials, and infrastructure in the education sector, and insufficient social programs to address child labor in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Burundi engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Burundi.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Burundi is one of the poorest countries in the world, with more than 90 percent of its citizens engaged in subsistence agriculture, and approximately 80 percent of the workforce employed in the informal economy. (2,16,17) Burundian children are trafficked within the country, often from rural areas, for domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. (6,15,16) Women who offer room and board to children sometimes force the children into commercial sexual exploitation to pay expenses. (15,18) Burundian girls are also trafficked internationally for commercial sexual exploitation in Kenya, the Middle East, Rwanda, and Uganda. (11,15,19) Evidence also suggests that children are trafficked to Tanzania for work in agriculture and domestic work. (2,11,15,17,20)

Although the government abolished school fees in 2012, the cost of books and uniforms has prevented many children from accessing free public schooling. A dearth of well-trained educators and poor infrastructure has also limited educational opportunity. Moreover, because birth certificates are required to attend school, many unregistered children, in particular children of the Batwa ethnic group, remain out of school and vulnerable to child labor. (2,10,16,21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Burundi has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Burundi’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a compulsory education age through the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 3 of the Labor Code; Article 3 of the Ministerial Ordinance to Regulate Child Labor (22,23)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Articles 200.2.27 and 200.5.7 of the Penal Code (25)
Compulsory Education Age	No	12	Legislation title unknown (10)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 17 of the Law on Basic and Secondary Education (27)

* No conscription (26)

The Labor Code prohibits work by children under age 16 in public and private enterprises; however, the law's minimum age protections do not apply to children outside of formal employment relationships. (22,28,29) The Penal Code does not prohibit the use of children in the production and trafficking of narcotics. (25) Although the Constitution prohibits the use of children in armed conflict, the Penal Code criminalizes only the use of children under age 15 in armed conflict, leaving children between the ages of 15 and 18 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (25,30) However, Burundian law does prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by the state armed forces, and available evidence indicates that the government continued to comply with this provision. (2,16,17)

In addition, the prohibitions against hazardous work are not comprehensive, including in agriculture, an area of work in which there is evidence of children working with dangerous machinery, equipment, and tools. (11,23) Education in Burundi is not compulsory through the minimum age for work, and research did not uncover a public version of the law establishing compulsory education. (10,31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security	Administers and enforces all labor laws, including those on child labor, through the General Directorate of Labor and Professional Development. (32)
Ministry of Public Security	Conducts criminal investigations on the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor, child trafficking, and the use of children in illicit activities. (1,3) Through the National Police's Brigade for Minors and Morals, protects children from commercial sexual exploitation, illicit activity, and military recruitment. (1,2,11,17)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes cases of the worst forms of child labor through its General Prosecutor's Office. (2,11,13)

(20,34)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Burundi took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The government increased the number of employed labor inspectors from 11 to 35 through the reassignment of other civil servants in the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Employment. (2) However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Burundi's workforce, which includes approximately 5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Burundi would employ about 125 inspectors. (36,37) Research found that financial constraints hamper the General Directorate of Labor and Professional Development's enforcement of child labor laws, because annual funding does not cover fuel costs, per diem, or office supplies, and, furthermore, the labor inspectorate does not own any vehicles. (10,11,18,38) The government did not provide information on its labor inspectorate funding or the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites for inclusion in this report. (18)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Burundi took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of published information on the criminal enforcement of child labor law.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (11)	Unknown (2)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (11)	Yes (2)

The Ministry of Public Security refers cases to the Ministry of National Solidarity, Human Rights and Gender, which then sends the child to one of four specialized centers in the country that takes care of the child's psychological, medical and legal needs or to civil society service providers. (2) In December 2018, the International Organization for Migration trained 25 judicial police officers on the international and national legal framework, the differences between human trafficking and smuggling, protection and assistance to victims (including children), procedures for interviewing victims and witnesses, the rights of suspects, and investigation techniques. Training remains reliant on international organizations and donor funding. (2,17,34)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that may hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including non-operational coordination mechanisms.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Multi-Sector Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor, including implementation of community development programs that address the education and socioeconomic reintegration of children engaged in or removed from the worst forms of child labor. (32,39) Includes nine ministries, including the Ministry of Labor, organizations and representatives from UNICEF, youth associations, and civil society organizations. (3) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period.
Ad Hoc Committee for Consultation and Monitoring on the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons	Oversees national anti-trafficking in persons efforts, including implementation of the National Action Plan for Combating Trafficking in Persons, with a more formal entity instead of the current ad hoc structure called for in legislation. (15,17,34,35,40) Includes officials from the Ministry of National Solidarity, Human Rights, and Gender, and the Ministries of Justice, Public Security, Foreign Affairs, and Interior. (3) In 2018, the ad hoc committee, in partnership with the International Organization for Migration, formalized the new National Action Plan for Trafficking in Persons. (34)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that may hinder efforts to address child labor, including inactive and expired policies.

Burundi

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for Combating Trafficking in Persons (2019–2020) †	Aims to significantly reduce human trafficking in Burundi by 2020 through the adoption of political, social, economic, and institutional measures. Identifies women and children as being the most vulnerable to human trafficking, noting sectors of high prevalence and human trafficker profiles. (34,41)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (42,43)

The government has not taken steps to renew the expired National Revised Action Plan for the Fight Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor during the reporting period. (2)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Centers for Family Development†	Ministry of National Solidarity, Human Rights, and Gender-operated centers that address human rights issues, including child exploitation, and reintegrate victims in their home communities. Coordinate with Child Protection Committees to refer victims to local NGOs for care, when necessary. (20) In 2018, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken.
“Back to School” Campaign†	UNICEF and the Ministry of Education “Back to School” campaign to promote equitable access and retention in school for 2.6 million basic education students, half of them girls. (44) In 2018, project efforts focused on strengthening capacity of community agents in mobilization, analyzing the causes of school dropout, and creating community structures, such as clubs, mentorships, and networks, to ensure re-enrollment in school. (34)

† Program is funded by the Government of Burundi.

Research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs to assist children working in agriculture or victims of commercial sexual exploitation. Further, the scope of existing programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Burundi (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, particularly in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2018
	Establish by law a compulsory education age equal to the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that all children are protected by law, including children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2012 – 2018
	Ensure that all children are protected from hazardous work activities, including in agriculture, that have hazardous conditions and in which child labor is known to occur.	2016 – 2018
	Publish the law establishing compulsory education for review.	2017 – 2018
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO’s technical advice, and provide sufficient training and resources to all inspectors to ensure that labor inspections, including unannounced and routine targeted inspections, are conducted nationwide.	2009 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information on the budget of the labor inspectorate and the number of labor inspections conducted at work sites, training for criminal enforcement investigators, and the number of investigations, violations, prosecutions, convictions, and imposed penalties related to the criminal enforcement of child labor laws.	2017 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that the National Multi-Sector Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor is operational and make efforts to combat and prevent child labor.	2015 – 2018
Government Policies	Take steps to renew the expired National Revised Action Plan for the Fight Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor.	2015 – 2018
Social Programs	Increase access to education by eliminating school-related costs for books and uniforms, increasing the number of well-trained educators, expanding the infrastructure, and increasing birth registration rates.	2015 – 2018
	Institute and expand existing programs to address child labor, including in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2018
	Undertake activities in support of the Centers for Family Development.	2016 – 2018

In 2018, Cabo Verde made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved and published its first National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons and revised the Education Law to extend free tuition up to the eighth grade. In July, the national government established the Observatory for Monitoring and Rapid Identification of Situations of Trafficking in Persons, a major coordinating body created to respond to all human trafficking situations around the archipelago, which convened twice during the year. However, children in Cabo Verde engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Law enforcement officials lack the necessary resources to follow up on investigations, and communication between enforcement agencies is limited. In addition, social programs to assist children involved in agriculture and domestic work are not sufficient to address the scope of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Cabo Verde engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Cabo Verde.

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 261 of the Labor Code (11)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 264 of the Labor Code; Article 133 of the Civil Code (11,13)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		National List of Dangerous Work for Children (14)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 14 of Chapter 3 of the Labor Code; Articles 149, 271, and 271-A of the Penal Code (11,15)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 149 and 271-A of the Penal Code (15)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 144–145, 148–150, and 271-A of the Penal Code (15)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 8 of the Drug Trafficking Law (16)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 31 of the Military Service Law (17)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of the Military Service Law (17)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 268-C of the Penal Code (15)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Articles 13 and 20 of the Education Law (18)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 14 of the Education Law (18)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (18)

The Civil Code includes a list of light work activities that children age 14 are allowed to perform; however, the law does not prescribe the number of hours per week permissible for light work or specify the conditions under which light work may be performed. (13,19)

During the reporting period, the government extended free tuition from sixth grade up to eighth grade by revising the Education Law. (2,20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Inspector General for Labor (IGT) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Inspector General for Labor	Monitors and enforces child labor laws, working closely with the Cabo Verdean Institute for Children and Adolescents (ICCA). (21,22)
Judicial Police and National Police	Judicial Police conducts criminal investigations; National Police makes arrests related to the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking. (22,23)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Cabo Verde took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the IGT that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial and human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$26,100 (24)	$26,000 (2)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (24)	Yes (2)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (25)	Yes (2)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (25)	Yes (2)

Although the total number of child labor violations is unknown for the reporting period, the Cabo Verdean Institute for Children and Adolescents (ICCA) reported 10 cases of child labor violations in 2018. (2,26)

The IGT conducted labor inspections in the formal sector throughout the country and received several trainings during the year, including on child labor; however, reports indicate that inspectors lack the necessary resources to perform inspections in sectors in which child labor is known to occur, including the informal sector. (2)

When IGT inspectors find a case of child labor, they inform the ICCA for referral to social services providers. (27)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Cabo Verde took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating human resources.

During 2018, UNODC led two training workshops on human trafficking for various law enforcement and government personnel, including representatives of civil society organizations from all over the country. The trainings prioritized the investigation and prosecution of cases, and the protection and assistance of victims. An annual work plan was developed to incorporate objectives of the National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons. (28) Law enforcement officials attended and participated in several other human trafficking trainings, including a training at the West Africa Regional Training Center in Ghana. (29)

Although the government did not provide specific data on child trafficking, reports indicate that the Judicial Police investigated a labor trafficking case involving two Chinese minors, ages 16 and 17, on the island of Sal. Three suspects were detained, a Cabo Verdean female and two Asian males, in connection to the case; as of the end of the reporting period, the case was still pending in Cabo Verdean courts. (2,30) In February 2018, convictions were secured for the first cybercrime case prosecuted in the country known as the quadrilha, which involved four defendants, two men and two women, who targeted and coerced 13 victims online and forced them into prostitution, including a 13-year-old girl. (31,32) The sentences given to the two male defendants were the highest given in Cabo Verdean courts; however, in April 2019, the sentences were reduced. (32,33)

Reports indicate that the Judicial Police and the National Police lack the necessary financial and human resources to follow up on investigations, including cases of child labor. The Judicial Police is present on only three of the islands, hindering its ability to address all child labor investigations. (2,34) Furthermore, the government did not maintain comprehensive anti-trafficking law enforcement and victim protection data among its criminal enforcement agencies, and awareness-raising efforts on human trafficking, including child sex tourism, remained insufficient on some islands. (35) Although law enforcement agencies work well together, information sharing and confirmation of case status is extremely limited. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for Child Labor Prevention and Eradication in Cabo Verde	Coordinates the execution of the National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and provides a functional mechanism for reciprocal referrals between law enforcement and social services. Led by ICCA. (23,36) It is unknown whether this committee was active in 2018. (2)
ICCA	Coordinates and monitors the implementation of all national programs and activities to prevent and combat child labor. (25) In 2018, worked with UNICEF on a draft law addressing the sexual exploitation of children and on a child protection policy that will be aligned with the UN CRC objectives. (29) In addition, established a hotline for sexual abuse and exploitation cases of children during the reporting period. (29) The hotline received 1,182 reports, including 24 child labor-related cases. (37)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Children and Adolescent Committee to Prevent and Combat Sexual Abuse and Exploitation	Contributes to the prevention and elimination of child sexual exploitation by coordinating the activities of member organizations and public and private services. (23) Supervises, monitors, and evaluates the National Plan to Combat Violence Against Children and Adolescents. (2) Led by ICCA. (38) Research was unable to determine whether any activities were undertaken by this committee in 2018.
Observatory for Monitoring and Rapid Identification of Situations of Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates and monitors all efforts to combat human trafficking. Comprises law enforcement, NGOs, civil society and various government agencies. (2,39) Led by the Ministry of Justice and Labor. Met twice in 2018. (29)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor	Prioritizes the eradication of child labor. Outlines specific objectives, including data collection, institutional capacity building, and enhancement of measures to prevent, protect, and remove children from involvement in child labor. (36) During the reporting period, ICCA implemented the Plan. (40)
National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents (2017–2019)	Aims to prevent and combat the sexual exploitation of children. The plan incorporates five principle themes: participation of children and adolescents; prevention of situations of vulnerability; mobilizing material and social resources; treatment for both victims and perpetrators; and accountability. (2,41) In February 2018, the first evaluation of the situation in the country was conducted. Results indicated a need for a more comprehensive approach to the treatment of child victims and their families. (42)
Code of Ethics Against the Sexual Exploitation of Children	Guides and governs agencies involved in the tourism sector to combat the sexual exploitation of children and adolescents. (43) Remained in force during the reporting period. (29)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2018–2021)†	Prioritizes five strategic areas: prevention, awareness, protection, investigation, and coordination. (44) Establishes the Trafficking in Persons Observatory, a coordination mechanism dedicated to monitoring responses to all human trafficking situations around the country. (2,39)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating and preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Labor Awareness Campaigns†	Government program implemented by ICCA and the National Committee for Child Labor Prevention and Eradication that conducts national awareness campaigns on the worst forms of child labor. (45) In 2018, ICCA continued to work with the government on a project to remove children from street vending on Santiago Island and combat child labor in the rural parts of the island. ICCA also began a second project to combat school dropout rates by raising awareness of the importance of education by addressing parents, children, and educators. (5,46)
Help for At-Risk Children†	ICCA-implemented program that provides education, health services, and professional training to vulnerable children and their families. Eight day centers for street children vulnerable to sexual and labor exploitation operate on Boa Vista, Fogo, Sal, Santiago, Santo Antão, and São Vicente islands. (45) Active in 2018. (2)
Child Emergency Centers and Social Protection and Reintegration Centers†	ICCA-implemented program that operates emergency centers for child victims of abuse and sexual exploitation on Santiago, Santo Antão, and São Vicente islands. (23,36,45) The government also operates five social protection and reintegration centers that provide support and educational integration services to children who have experienced long-term trauma. (1,23,27) Active in 2018. (2)
Government Efforts to Increase Access to Education†	Donor-funded programs implemented by the government that ensure access to education for disadvantaged children by paying for school fees, materials, and meals. (47) Active in 2018. (31)

† Program is funded by the Government of Cabo Verde.

Research found that programs to assist children involved in agriculture and domestic work are not sufficient to address the scope of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Cabo Verde (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Prescribe the number of hours per week and conditions under which light work may be undertaken.	2015 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that the Inspector General for Labor receives sufficient resources to enforce child labor laws on all islands, including in the informal sector.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure the National Police and Judicial Police have sufficient financial and human resources to follow up on child labor cases, and that all inhabited islands benefit from the presence of the Judicial Police.	2018
	Ensure information sharing between law enforcement agencies for better coordination of active child labor cases.	2018
	Develop a system to compile and share comprehensive anti-trafficking law enforcement and victim identification data among agencies.	2018
	Conduct awareness raising activities on human trafficking, including child sex tourism, on all islands.	2018
	Make law enforcement data publicly available, including information on the number of child labor violations found, penalties imposed and collected, criminal investigations conducted, convictions secured, and whether penalties were imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2011 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure the National Committee for Child Labor Prevention and Eradication in Cabo Verde is active and able to carry out its intended mandate.	2018
	Ensure the Children and Adolescent Committee to Prevent and Combat Sexual Abuse and Exploitation is active and able to carry out its intended mandate.	2018
Social Programs	Institute programs to address child labor in agriculture and domestic work.	2010 – 2018

In 2018, Cambodia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government issued a Royal Decree authorizing the National Committee on Child Labor, within the Cambodian National Council for Children, to begin operations. In addition, the labor inspectorate revamped its factory inspection questionnaire to align with the ILO Better Factories Cambodia questionnaire. Moreover, the government institutionalized a counter trafficking in persons training curriculum for the Cambodian National Police Academy. However, children in Cambodia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in brickmaking, as well as in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Due to challenges in accessing basic education and the absence of a compulsory education requirement, children are vulnerable to involvement in the worst forms of child labor. Insufficient resources also may hamper the labor inspectorate’s capacity to enforce child labor laws, especially in rural areas where the majority of child laborers work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Cambodia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in brickmaking, as well as in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Cambodia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	8.1 (236,831)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	81.6

	Growing, cutting, tying, carrying, and spraying pesticides† on sugarcane (11,14-16)
	Logging† for the production of timber (8,11)
	Making bricks,† including feeding clay into brickmaking machines, removing wood fuel from trucks and feeding to brickmaking machines, drying bricks, transporting bricks to the oven,† and loading bricks onto and off of trucks (1,6,8,13,17-20)
	Production of salt (13)

	Street work, including begging, vending, scavenging, collecting garbage, and exploited in orphanages to solicit funds from tourists (9,11,13,21,26,27)
	Work as garbage pickers in dumpsites (11,28)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (9,13,29)
	Street vending, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,9,26,30)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (21)
	Forced labor in the production of bricks (1,21,31)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are trafficked domestically, from rural to urban areas, and internationally, to countries such as Thailand and Vietnam, for commercial sexual exploitation. (3,9,24)

In Cambodian brick factories, some children engage in forced labor, including in dangerous conditions, to offset family debt to employers. (3,11,13,31,32) The rapid growth in the construction industry, particularly in Phnom Penh, has increased the demand for bricks, fueling child labor and debt bondage. (3,32,33) Compounded by failed harvests resulting from droughts, farmers who are in debt sell their debt to brick kiln owners, placing their families into situations of hereditary debt bondage until the debts are repaid. (3,31-33)

A worrying trend is the emergence of online sexual exploitation of children (OSEC) within Cambodia. (11) An NGO-funded survey indicated that, although in nascent stages, the issue of OSEC in Cambodia is increasing. (11)

Although the Education Law establishes free basic education, children may be required to pay school-related fees, such as for building maintenance, which are prohibitive for some families. (13,21,35,36) Other barriers to education include limited transportation to schools in remote areas, lack of drinking water and toilet facilities in some schools, language barriers, and an insufficient number of teachers. These barriers particularly affect ethnic minority children and children with disabilities. (8,13,37)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Cambodia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Cambodia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a minimum age for work and prohibiting the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

In May 2018, the MOLVT issued a regulation that provided clear definitions of household work and set the minimum age for household work to 18. However, the regulation does not specify rights for household workers who are employed by their relatives. (11,45)

Although the Labor Code prohibits work by children under age 15, the law does not apply to children outside of formal employment relationships, which does not conform to international standards that require all children be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (39) While MOLVT's regulation on household work extended minimum age protections to domestic workers, children participating in other forms of work outside of formal employment relationships are still not protected under existing minimum age laws. (37,38,46-48) Suggested amendments to the Labor Law would ensure that the application of the minimum age for admission to all types of work outside of an employment relationship, including self-employment is enforced; however, the Government of Cambodia has put on hold any drafting of amendments to the Labor Law until 2020. (20)

The government plans to research the impact of applying minimum working age requirements to the informal sector. (48)

Laws do not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation of children, as the use or offering of a child for pornographic performances is not criminally prohibited. In addition, laws do not prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups. (21,40)

Education is free, but not compulsory, through grade nine. (36,48) The lack of compulsory schooling makes children under age 15 particularly vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to be in school but are not yet legally permitted to work. (36,38,48) Additionally, research has shown that children living in provinces bordering Thailand are at a higher risk of dropping out of school, in large part due to poverty and parents migrating to Thailand for work, leaving children at home and requiring them to drop out of school to find work. 49)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MOLVT that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
National Committee on Countering Child Labor (NCCCL), Ministry of Labor and Vocational Training (MOLVT)	Enforces child-related provisions of the Labor Law, and trains Commune Committees for Women and Children that oversee local child labor monitoring systems. (50) Includes 24 MOLVT interdepartmental inspection teams. (51) The NCCL is not dependent on MOLVT for funds. (11) This agency was active during the reporting period. (20)
Cambodian National Police Anti-Human Trafficking and Juvenile Protection Department, Ministry of the Interior	Enforces laws against human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children, in collaboration with municipal and provincial anti-human trafficking and juvenile protection offices. Commanded by the Ministry of the Interior. (21,52) Fields complaints about human trafficking, which can be filed through the anti-human trafficking hotline. (29) This agency was active during the reporting period. (20)
Ministry of Social Affairs, Veterans, and Youth Rehabilitation (MOSAVY)	Refers victims of child labor to NGOs for services. Operates the Poipet Transit Center to identify children at risk of being trafficked or children who have been trafficked. (3) This agency was active during the reporting period. (20)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Social Affairs, Veterans, and Youth Rehabilitation (MOSAVY) promulgated guidelines on “Minimum Standards on Residential Care for Victims of Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation,” and distributed them to shelters and other relevant stakeholders. These guidelines served to address the management of residential care facilities, as well as the care given for victims of human trafficking and sexual exploitation. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Cambodia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MOLVT that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

MOLVT has initiated meetings with the ILO to draft a Work Plan for Strategic Inspection Compliance, which will set standards for conducting labor inspections in the sectors of greatest need, including construction and entertainment. (11) The National Committee on Countering Child Labor (NCCL) employs 1 child labor inspector in each of Cambodia's 25 provinces. (11,53) When child labor inspections occur, they are concentrated in the city of Phnom Penh, as well as in the provincial, formal-sector factories producing goods for export, such as textiles and garments, rather than in rural areas where the majority of child laborers work. (6,11,22,54) In addition, the NCCL reported that the labor inspectorate does not conduct inspections in hospitality or nightlife establishments after business hours, because the inspectorate lacks funds to pay inspectors for overtime. (11) Enforcement related to child labor abuses in domestic work is conducted by the Sub-National Committee of Women and Children, not labor inspectors. (11)

Although unannounced inspections are permitted, they rarely happen in practice; however, when they do, anecdotal evidence suggest that most occur on cassava farms. (11) The government, ILO, and NGOs all agree that the labor inspectorate is insufficiently funded, affecting its ability to conduct inspections outside of Phnom Penh. Labor inspectors are in need of more technical training. (11)

In 2018, the NCCL let child labor violators off with just a warning, and did not assess penalties for the offenders. Children discovered in these situations were removed and referred to MOSAVY for assessment. (11,51,54) The NCCL claims that it will begin fining violators of child labor laws in 2019. (11)

In 2018, the NCCL claimed that all labor inspectors received training on child labor laws, with on-the-job training offered to inspectors throughout the year. The NCCL has also indicated that it would like to develop its capacity to conduct inspections at construction sites, where child labor is prevalent, and this will require the cooperation of the Ministry of Land Management. (11) During the reporting period, the MOLVT provided 6 labor inspection-related trainings for 635 inspectors. In addition, NCCL officials and inspectors attended 33 workshops on the legal framework related to the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. (11)

During the reporting period, the labor inspectorate revised its questionnaire for factory inspections to align with the ILO-Better Factories Cambodia questionnaire. This was done as a long-term aspiration to make the labor inspectorate the primary inspection institution, with the ILO-Better Factories Cambodia working to assist and audit the inspectorate's performance. (11,20)

The MOLVT has established regulations on hazardous work for children in several sectors, including in agriculture, brickmaking, fishing, tobacco, and cassava production; however, insufficient training of labor inspectors and corruption within law enforcement limits the capacity of local authorities to adequately enforce these regulations. (8,31,50,55,56) In 2018, the NCCL removed 400 children from plantations. (11) All children removed during labor inspections were referred to MOSAVY for social services, including 119 alleged child labor victims deported from Thailand and Vietnam back to Cambodia. (11,20) Sanctions for labor violations, including those related to child labor, are rarely imposed in accordance with the law. (11,51,54)

Cambodia

The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts in regards to the number of child labor violations found.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Cambodia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Justice that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of information regarding enforcement actions.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (8)	Yes (11)

MOSAVY organized 2 workshops on responding to trafficking in persons (TIP) victim needs, with 148 officials from government and NGO entities. In collaboration with NGOs and IOM, MOSAVY also conducted 7 trainings in 6 provinces on guidelines and procedures for TIP victim identification, attended by 358 officials. (11) In 2018, with the assistance of a USAID-funded Counter Trafficking in Persons (CTIP) program, the government institutionalized CTIP training into the curriculum of the Cambodian National Police Academy, which included helping authorities identify human trafficking victims and treat them respectfully while collecting evidence. (11,57) Also with assistance from USAID, the NCCL is working to establish a national database for TIP identification and referral for services. (11,20)

The Ministry of Justice does not provide disaggregated data on crimes or child labor violations. (11) In Cambodia, judges have discretion to determine whether perpetrators of crimes related to child labor will be imprisoned or fined, as well as the amount of the fine. The penalties imposed are not uniformly administered and do not adhere to the parameters prescribed by law. (3,37,58)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of investigations conducted, the number of prosecutions initiated, the number of convictions, and the number of penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee on Child Labor of the Cambodian National Council for Children (NCCL)	Coordinates child labor issues at the national level. Ensures that projects and programs follow the National Plan of Action on Child Labor. (8) Includes concerned ministries, businesses, trade unions, and NGOs. Oversees Provincial Committees on the Protection of Child Rights and Provincial Committees on Child Labor. (8,59) Coordinates all government ministries, institutions, international non-governmental organizations, development partners, and the community in promoting and protecting children's rights. In 2018, worked to strengthen legal protections under the National Plan of Action. (20)
Commune Committees for Women and Children	Advisory entities that raise awareness of child labor regulations, promote school attendance, collaborate with provincial labor departments to monitor for child labor violations, and refer children at risk of or engaged in child labor to social protection services. Led by the MOLVT's Department of Child Labor. (21,50,60) This body was active during the reporting period. (20)
National Committee for Counter Trafficking (NCCT)	Coordinates government, NGOs, civil society, and private sector efforts to address human trafficking and sexual exploitation. (57,61) Focuses on children's affairs, international cooperation, justice, law enforcement, migration, prevention, protection, recovery, reintegration, and repatriation. (61) Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister and the Ministry of Interior, with 4 vice chair ministries and 14 participating ministries. Oversees Provincial Committees for Combating Trafficking in Persons in each province. (3,53,61) During the reporting period, signed an action plan with China, signed a memorandum of understanding with India, attended a Working Conference of the Six Countries' Joint Action Against Human Trafficking in China, and convened the National Anti-Human Trafficking Day to raise public awareness. (3) In addition, conducted inspections that resulted in the removal of 240 children from brick kilns, and suspended operations at 3 kilns. (11)

The government issued a Royal Decree authorizing the National Committee on Child Labor, of the Cambodian National Council for Children, to begin operations and effectively function as a coordinating mechanism. (20) In addition, the Commune Committees for Women and Children are underfunded and have insufficient technical capacity to provide social protection services to children involved in or at risk of child labor. (60)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including integrating child labor elimination and protection strategies into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action on Worst Forms of Child Labor (2016–2025)	Aims to build the capacity of law enforcement officers, strengthen the enforcement of relevant laws, raise public awareness of child labor issues, and enhance child labor monitoring systems at the community level. (21) This policy was active during the reporting period. (11)
Action Plan to Prevent and Respond to Violence Against Children (2017–2021)	Aims to prevent and respond to violence against children, including the worst forms of child labor. (62) During the reporting period, UNICEF and Save the Children conducted positive parenting trainings in 14 provinces, and launched a national social behavior change campaign to address child protection. (11)
National Policies on the Elimination of Child Labor in the Fisheries Sector	Two policies address child labor in the fisheries sector: the National Plan of Action to Tackle Child Labor in Inland and Coastal Fisheries; and the Action Plan for Gender Equality Promotion and Child Labor Elimination in the Fisheries Sector. Seek to prevent and withdraw children from child labor and promote increased access to education and livelihood opportunities. (63) During the reporting period, held 6 workshops in 3 provinces on “gender equality and elimination of child labor in fisheries,” with 218 community members in attendance. (11)
Policy on Childhood Development and Protection in the Agricultural Sector (2016–2020)	Establishes a strategic framework to protect children working in the agricultural sector. Seeks to prevent and reduce child labor, especially in hazardous work, and improve agricultural vocational training for youth ages 15 through 17. (7) During the reporting period, the government conducted workshops and trainings for over 440 agricultural officials in 10 provinces. (11,20)

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action on the Suppression of Human Trafficking, Smuggling, Labor, and Sexual Exploitation (2014–2018)	Aims to prevent and eliminate all forms of human trafficking, including by strengthening criminal law enforcement to protect children from exploitation in entertainment venues, integrating anti-human trafficking and child safety issues into the public school curriculum, and promoting the inclusion of vulnerable children in both formal and informal education. (61) Coordinated by the NCCT, with input from Ministries of Justice; Women's Affairs; Foreign Affairs; Labor; and Social Affairs, Veterans, and Youth Rehabilitation. (11) During the reporting period, prosecuted 421 trafficking cases and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation repatriated and provided limited services to 8,489 Cambodians from 6 countries. The government continued to carry out awareness-raising activities, including through more than 33,000 NCCT information "dissemination events" and 25,000 public fora. (20) The General Department of Immigration issued 92,081 border passes to Cambodians living in western border regions to encourage safe labor migration to Thailand. (20)
The Education Strategic Plan (2014–2018)	Sought to ensure equitable access to education and improve the education system's response to human trafficking and child labor. (64) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Education, Youth, and Sports conducted teacher trainings and implemented improvements to early-grade reading curricula in 14 provinces. (11,20)
National Social Protection Strategy (NSPS) (2017–2021)	Aims to expand access to healthcare, nutrition, and educational services and to promote the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. (65,66) Expanded the number of employers making use of the National Social Security Foundation. (20) During the reporting period, the government worked with development partners to expand the ID Poor Program, which will enable a provision of public benefits for those in extreme poverty, thus children vulnerable to child labor. (11)
National Plan of Action on the Reduction of Child Labor and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2016–2025)	Overseen by MOSAVY. Creates a roadmap to the complete eradication of the worst forms of child labor by 2025 in various sectors, including service, agriculture, mining, and energy. (20,48,67) Conducts awareness raising activities, legal action, and collaborations with civil society actors. (20) This plan of action was active during the reporting period. (20)
National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor in Fisheries	Overseen by the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry, and Fisheries under the Fisheries Administration of Cambodia (FiA). Aligned with the Strategic Framework for Fisheries (2010–2019). (48,67) This national action plan was active during the reporting period. (20)
Action Plan for Gender Equality Promotion and Child Labor Elimination in the Fisheries Sector (2016–2020)	Overseen by the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries under FiA. Aligned with the Strategic Framework for Fisheries (2010–2019). Seeks to prevent and withdraw children from child labor and hazardous work in the fisheries sector. (48) This action plan was active during the reporting period. (20)
Capacity Development Plan for Family Support, Foster Care, and Adoption‡	Overseen by MOSAVY. Improves services for children without parental care, vulnerable to child labor, and ensures that children can still live in a family setting. (11) Maintains a comprehensive database of all children living in residential and foster care. Funded by USAID through UNICEF. (11) In 2018, completed a desk review on clinical supervision and provided ongoing training with First Step Cambodia, Hagar, Angkor Hospital for Children, and This Life Cambodia. The aim of this training was to induct individuals into the role of clinical supervision in social work practice in Cambodia. (20) In addition, provided training on clinical supervision to 17 social worker professionals in 5 Family Care First partner organizations in Siem Reap and Phnom Penh. Provided continuous training for social work supervision to 25 people from the same organizations. (20) Worked with other partners to develop the guidelines on kinship care, foster care and domestic adoption for MOSVY. (20)
Strategic and Operational Plan for the Implementation of Juvenile Justice Law (2018–2020)†	Overseen by MOSAVY, funded by UNICEF. Seeks to build a sustainable juvenile justice system, and to provide effective protection and support to incarcerated juveniles who are vulnerable to child labor. (11) In 2018, met with relevant social partners and held consultations to prepare for the 3-year plan. (20)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (68-71)

The government has not specifically included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the National Employment Policy and the Multilingual Education National Action Plan. (72,73)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Cambodia Countering Trafficking in Persons (2015–2019)	$8.5 million, USAID-funded, 4-year program implemented by Winrock International to strengthen the capacity of government and community stakeholders to prevent human trafficking, protect at-risk populations, and increase the number of successful prosecutions of perpetrators. (74,75) In 2018, made revisions to improve the National Plan of Action on the Suppression of Human Trafficking, Smuggling, Labor, and Sexual Exploitation. Distributed 75,666 public awareness materials on safe migration and human trafficking, including leaflets, videos, posters, and information cards. (20) Assisted approximately 180 trafficking victims and 160 abused migrants. (20)
Better Factories Cambodia†	USDOL, the Government of Cambodia, Garment Manufacturers in Cambodia, and ILO-funded program to monitor garment factories' compliance with national and international labor standards, including those related to child labor. (8,76) Additional information is available on the program's website. In 2018, reported a minimal number of child workers in export-oriented garment factories. (11) Provided training to 2,341 participants in 198 factories. Removed 10 children in child labor conditions, along with the NCCL's removal of 400 children, for a total of 410. (11,20)
UN WFP Country Program† (2011–2018)	Multi-government and private sector-funded, 8-year program implemented in collaboration with the Government of Cambodia that included a school feeding program for children in need. (77) This program was active during the reporting period. (20)

† Program is funded by the Government of Cambodia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (79)

Many poor households in rural communities lack access to a social protection safety net, which increases the vulnerability of children to child labor as a means to supplement family income. (3,80) Although Cambodia has implemented programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. (11)

In addition, the Ministry of Commerce and the Ministry of Labor and Vocational Training (MOLVT), in collaboration with the ILO, reportedly plan to fund a Cambodian Labor Force and Child Labor Survey, to be executed by Cambodia's National Institute of Statistics, in 2019. (11,20)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Cambodia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Extend labor protections to child household workers employed by their relatives.	2018
	Ensure that all children are protected by law, including children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2018
	Criminally prohibit the offering and use of a child for pornographic performances.	2015 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Institute a compulsory education age that is at a minimum equal to the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2018
Enforcement	Provide sufficient resources for the enforcement of child labor laws to ensure that all inspections, including unannounced inspections, are conducted throughout the country, especially in rural areas and in the informal sector.	2010 – 2018
	Build the capacity of local-level authorities to enforce child and forced labor regulations, as applicable, in agriculture, brickmaking, tobacco, cassava, and fishing sectors, by providing more technical training opportunities for labor inspectors.	2012 – 2018
	Collect and publicly release disaggregated data on criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of investigations conducted, the number of prosecutions initiated, the number of convictions, and the number imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2018
Enforcement	Establish and uniformly administer penalties for violations of laws on child labor, including its worst forms, in accordance with the parameters prescribed by law.	2009 – 2018
	Strengthen inspectorate to include more on-site investigations, particularly at establishments that operate outside regular business hours	2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	Increase funding and enhance training for Commune Committees for Women and Children to enhance social services provision for children involved in or at risk of child labor.	2016 – 2018
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Multilingual Education National Action Plan and the National Employment Policy.	2015 – 2018
Social Programs	Increase access to free basic education by eliminating unofficial school fees and addressing issues related to limited transportation, inadequate school infrastructure, insufficient number of teachers, and language barriers.	2013 – 2018
	Expand social protection safety nets in rural areas to ensure that poor children and their families have access to services that may mitigate the risk of involvement in child labor.	2016 – 2018

In 2018, Cameroon made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government more than doubled the number of labor inspectors, and removed more than 300 children from situations of exploitation and provided them with social services. It also hired more than 3,000 teachers and expanded the scope of a school feeding program which aims to benefit 81,500 children in the Adamawa, East, North, and Northwest regions. However, children in Cameroon engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in cocoa production. The government has not acceded to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography. In addition, it has not prohibited the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Cameroon engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in cocoa production. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Cameroon. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	56.2 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	79.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	52.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		70.1

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Recruitment of children by Boko Haram , a non-state armed group, for use in armed conflict, including as suicide bombers and concubines (10,24,25)
	Forced labor in agriculture in the production of cocoa, cotton, onions, and tea; fishing; livestock raising; domestic work; spare parts shops; in artisanal gold mines and gravel quarries; street vending; and construction, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,10,13,23,26)
	Forced begging as talibés in Koranic schools (3,8)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Cameroon is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking from neighboring countries in Central and West Africa. (3,8,18) Due to increased awareness among parents of the risks associated with entrusting children to intermediaries who often promise to take children to urban centers to pursue education or an improved living arrangement, some perpetrators of human trafficking have resorted to kidnapping children. (3) Children engaged in cocoa production are exposed to dangerous working conditions, including exposure to pesticides and the use of sharp tools such as machetes. (11) The NGO, Child Soldiers International, alleged that some officially sanctioned community neighborhood watch groups, known as vigilance committees, may have used and recruited children as young as age 12 in military operations against Boko Haram. (9) In Cameroon, Boko Haram uses boys as child soldiers, and girls as forced suicide bombers and sex slaves. (10)

Although Decree N° 2001/041 on the Organization of Public Schools guarantees free education in Cameroon, costs associated with education may be prohibitive to some families who are required to pay for uniforms, books, and other school-related fees. (7,8,26-31) In addition, a lack of schools and teachers in rural areas, the absence of potable water and sanitation facilities, and long distances to schools also hinder access to education. (11,18,26,29,32,33) Children in refugee camps may have a particularly difficult time accessing education due to a lack of school infrastructure, teachers, and resources to pay for school-related expenses. (29,34-37) Since November 2016, the Anglophone Northwest and Southwest regions have experienced strikes and boycotts protesting systemic government discrimination against Anglophone speakers who have demanded more political autonomy or secession. Protests have become increasingly violent, and school infrastructure and personnel have been directly targeted. (9,38) As of June 2018, at least 58 schools were damaged in the two Anglophone regions as a result of the conflict, leaving an estimated 42,500 children with limited access to education. Additionally, between January and July 2018, there were 10 reported threats or attacks on education personnel, including the deaths of at least 2 teachers and the kidnapping of 3 school principals. (38,39) These events have disrupted schooling for children in these areas due to school closures, an absence of teachers, and voluntary or forced displacement as a result of the protest. The disruption of children’s access to education places children at high risk of becoming victims of exploitation and child labor. (39-46)

In 2018, in the Far North region, Boko Haram continued to forcibly recruit child soldiers for use in attacks against civilian and military targets, including using three girls between the ages of 14 and 17 as suicide bombers. Children in refugee or IDP camps are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. (11,24) However, during the reporting period, the government reopened 40 schools in the Far North region that had been closed since 2014 due to threats from Boko Haram. (9,47,48) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Basic Education signed new employment contracts with 3,051 primary and nursery school teachers, and in December 2018, launched a campaign to recruit an additional 1,000 teachers. (20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Cameroon has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Cameroon's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities and the establishment of a compulsory education age that is consistent with the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Cameroon

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, the government brought together social partners, members of the judiciary, and law enforcement in a series of three workshops with the goal of raising awareness on the application of ILO conventions in participants' respective categories of work. (9,20) The government has not established a compulsory education age, which may lead to children being out of school and vulnerable to engaging in child labor. Human trafficking provisions remain discordant with international standards, as they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking, and individuals ages 16 to 18 are not considered children. (51,52) In addition, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under age 18 are not comprehensive, as work underwater or at dangerous heights is not prohibited. (15,50) In 2018, the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MINTSS) undertook efforts to begin revising the list of prohibited hazardous work. (9)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of MINTSS that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MINTSS)	Leads efforts to enforce all labor laws, including those related to child labor, promotes decent working conditions, and leads the National Committee to Combat Child Labor (CNLCTE). (7,59)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Prosecutes cases referred by the General Delegate for National Security (DGSN) or the Ministry of Defense's National Gendarmerie (SED) and contributes to investigations as appropriate. (60)
Ministry of Social Affairs (MINAS)	Leads efforts to combat human trafficking. Provides social services through its National Referral System. (7,11,61,62) Through its Minors Brigade, supports local police in their investigations of child trafficking and the use of children in hazardous work. (63) Through its Joint Mobile Brigade, prevents and combats the phenomenon of street children through identification, reintegration, and education; reintegrates street children to assist in the Joint Mobile Brigade's work. (64) In 2018, conducted a nationwide campaign against the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (10)
Ministry of Women's Empowerment and Family (MINPROFF)	Promotes and protects the rights of the child. (7)
General Delegate for National Security (DGSN)	Enforces laws against the worst forms of child labor and investigates violations in urban areas. (60) Through its Special Vice Squad, investigates cases of human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and other forms of abuse against women and children. (15,60) Refers cases to the MOJ or Ministry of Defense for investigation by SED. (64)
Ministry of Defense's National Gendarmerie (SED)	Investigates cases of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation in both urban and rural areas before referring cases to MOJ for prosecution. (64)

Although it does not play a direct role in enforcement, Cameroon's National Commission on Human Rights and Freedoms advises government ministries on the enforcement of laws related to child labor and advocates for sanctions as appropriate. (11,65) Local representatives from the Ministry of Territorial Administration may settle child labor disputes amicably or refer the case to the Ministry of Defense's National Gendarmerie, the General Delegate for National Security (DGSN), or the Ministry of Justice for further investigation and prosecution. (64) In 2018, the Ministry of Social Affairs (MINAS) identified 877 street children exposed to situations of potential exploitation, and successfully removed 307 of them from their situations by referring them to a MINAS-run center or reuniting them with their families. (9) Also during the reporting period, MINAS spent approximately $1,004 to train one of these children at the Regional School of Agriculture in Ebolowa, South Region. (10)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Cameroon took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MINTSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial and human resource allocation.

‡ Data are from January 1, 2018 to October 31, 2018. (9)

Although the government significantly increased its number of labor inspectors from 2017, it likely is still insufficient for the size of Cameroon's workforce, which includes more than 9 million workers. (9,11,52,58,60,66) According to the ILO's recommendation of 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Cameroon would employ about 660 labor inspectors. (58-60,66-68) Furthermore, inspectors are tasked with conciliation duties which may detract from time devoted to their primary duties; and labor inspections are not conducted in the informal sector in which the majority of child labor occurs. (41,49,61,69,70) In general, the labor inspectorate lacked resources during the reporting period, and field inspectors in particular lacked transportation. However, the 2018 budget included funding to purchase vehicles for some divisions with heavy workloads. (9,11)

The government has not created a specific mechanism for filing and responding to complaints about child labor. (9) In an attempt to increase its scope, MINAS, Interpol, and DGSN all maintain hotlines for reporting the worst forms of child labor. Calls are routed to the National Referral System for assistance to victims. (13,15,24,26,71,72) However, the system has not been well-publicized since it was established in 2013, leaving the public unaware of its existence, and some calls may go unanswered. (24,71) Research was unable to determine how many cases of child labor were identified as a result of complaints made to these hotlines.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Cameroon took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resources and collaboration between ministries.

It is unclear how many investigators were employed by the government in 2018, although several government bodies work together to enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. In general, these agencies do not receive adequate funding or training to investigate the worst forms of child labor, and high staff turnover is a challenge. (3,9,11) As a result, NGOs are critical in bringing child trafficking cases to the government's attention and providing services to victims. (3,9,64) During the year, there were credible reports of children involved in commercial sexual exploitation. However, the government does not appear to have initiated investigations into any of these cases. (9)

During the reporting period MINAS, in collaboration with the Ministry of Territorial Administration and the national police, implemented activities to raise awareness among parents on the negative effects of child labor. In June, authorities in Kribi identified 21 children, ages 6 to 13, engaged in street vending. (9) The police took custody of the children until their parents could be reached. The police then interrogated the parents, informed them of the risks of street vending, and warned the parents that they would be prosecuted if the children returned to the street. (9) The government acknowledges that a lack of awareness of child trafficking issues may prevent citizens from reporting offenses to enforcement agencies and that children may be afraid to speak against perpetrators in court. (3) During the reporting period, border police increased efforts to ensure that children do not cross borders without being accompanied by a parent. Adults accompanying children must show proof of their relationship with the child by presenting the child's identification documents. (10,73) The ongoing participation of lawyers in the Anglophone protests also impacted the ability of victims to seek justice and may have contributed to delayed court proceedings, including those related to the alleged complicity of government officials in a child trafficking ring. (24) A lack of collaboration between NGOs and the government, combined with judicial inefficiencies, led some cases to be settled outside the judicial system. (3,74) Although the government generally considers children to be victims rather than offenders, reports indicate that the government has held children as young as age 5 in detention facilities for prolonged periods due to suspicion of being affiliated with Boko Haram, or to prevent them from being recruited into Boko Haram. (65,75-81) During the reporting period, 55 children affiliated with Boko Haram voluntarily surrendered to military authorities and were arrested, detained, and denied access to support services. (81) In July 2018, the government announced that it had arrested seven military personnel suspected of being involved in the killing of two children in the Far North. (48,82,83)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of resources to carry out mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee to Combat Child Labor (CNLCTE)	Coordinates government efforts to combat child labor, proposes measures to harmonize Cameroon's legal framework to international standards, and implements the National Plan of Action to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking in Children (PANETEC). (58,84,85) Led by MINTSS, includes representatives from 10 other ministries and government bodies. (59,84) The CNLCTE held its third session on September 26, 2018. (9)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Ministerial Committee (IMC)	Coordinates government efforts to combat human trafficking. Chaired by the Secretary General of the Office of the Prime Minister, includes members of eight ministries, law enforcement personnel, civil society organizations, and NGOs. (3,24) Oversees Regional Taskforces on Trafficking in Persons in Northwest, Southwest, and Littoral Provinces. (3,86) In 2018, continued to hold meetings with stakeholders to discuss efforts in combating human trafficking. (73)

A lack of resources and socio-political unrest in the Anglophone regions hampered government efforts to effectively coordinate to combat the worst forms of child labor. (20)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
MOJ's National Action Plan for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in Cameroon (2015–2019)	Strives to combat exploitative child labor by disseminating standard operating procedures for the National Referral System, raising awareness about how to identify and report cases of child trafficking, increasing punishments for offenders, and building the capacity of labor inspectors. (60,87,88) Also aims to improve access to education for vulnerable groups by increasing the number of teachers and classrooms, establishing a legal framework to regulate parent teacher associations, and increasing the rate of educational attainment for girls. (88) In 2018, implementation was impacted by security concerns and a lack of resources. (73)
Decent Work Country Program (2014–2019)	Incorporates child labor concerns into the national strategy for work. (6) In 2018, the government extended the program by two years. (9)

Although the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking in Children (PANETEC) expired in 2016 before its official adoption in October 2017, in 2018 the Government of Cameroon updated the PANETEC objectives and implementing mechanism as part of its commitment to the Sustainable Development Goals. (9,11,65) The Trafficking in Persons Action Plan (2014–2019) does not receive dedicated funding; however, member ministries of the Inter-Ministerial Committee (IMC) use their ministry funds to carry out activities in support of the Action Plan. (64) The government is drafting a new Trafficking in Persons Action Plan for 2017–2019. (65) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper (2010–2020) or the IMC's National Gender Policy Document (2011–2020). (89-91)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Project to Fight the Phenomenon of Street Children (Project 559)†	MINAS-funded program that provides street children with health care, education, and psychosocial care. (11,27,31) Through its partnership agreement Project 559, in conjunction with the National Employment Fund, supports the reintegration of street children and provides vocational training opportunities. (11) In 2018, MINAS worked to reintegrate into school 53 children who had been working on the street. (9,20)
UNICEF Country Program (2018–2020)*	Prioritizes strengthening the child protection system to prevent violence and exploitation, especially sexual violence against girls. Provides financial and technical support to the government for the implementation of an inclusive birth registration project, with a particular focus on indigenous communities. (9) In September 2018, the project team, which included officials from the National Civil Status Bureau and MINAS, visited the Betare Oya health district to engage with members of the Baka indigenous community to commit to facilitating birth registration. (9)

Program	Description
School Feeding Program (2018–2022)*	$27 million U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA)-funded McGovern-Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program, which improves literacy and nutrition in 265 primary schools. In 2018, the USDA and the government expanded the scope of the program which now benefits 81,500 children in the Adamawa, East, North, and Northwest regions. (9)
Services for Displaced or Refugee Children†	UNICEF programs that provide educational services to children affected by conflict, including: CARED2, which offers accelerated education curriculums for children in refugee camps in the Far North; ETAPES, which establishes temporary schools and protection centers in Adamawa and East regions; and the Child Protection and Education Project, which works with Catholic Relief Services in the East to enroll and retain refugee children in schools. (92) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement activities during the reporting period.
Northern Cameroon Initiative	A USAID/Office of Transition Initiatives $25.6 million program to stabilize border communities impacted by crisis, and to counter the spread of violent extremism. In 2018, the program undertook activities to combat child labor including rehabilitating schools, promoting birth registration by issuing birth certificates, and strengthening parent teacher associations. (73,93)
World Bank Projects	Programs that aim to provide social safety nets and improve educational outcomes, including Social Safety Nets (2014–2018), a $50 million program by the Ministry of Economy, Planning, and Regional Development to provide direct cash transfers to vulnerable families for healthcare and education expenses; and the Equity and Quality for Improved Learning Project (2014–2018), a $55.8 million program by the Ministry of Basic Education to distribute textbooks for grades 1 to 3, promote girls' education, increase the number of teachers in Cameroon, and improve access to primary education as part of the Education for All initiative. (94,95)
Cameroon Institute of Childhood (ICE) Rehabilitation Project (2017–2020)†	$2.9 million project financed by MINAS and its partners to rehabilitate a center in Betamba, which serves children in conflict with the law and provides vocational training to area youth. (11) During the reporting period, upgrades were made to the health unit, a multipurpose hall, and a dormitory. Additionally, in June 2018, Orange Foundation provided computer equipment to the center. (96)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Cameroon.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. (3,16)

During the reporting period, the government, in conjunction with civil society partners, launched a birth registration process for returnee children, internally displaced children, and children from the host population of Mozogo in the Far North Region. In June 2018, the government distributed 368 birth certificates. (9)

Although the government has implemented programs to assist victims of child trafficking and children engaged in street work and domestic work, the scope of these programs is insufficient and does not fully address the extent of the problem in other sectors such as agriculture, mining, quarrying, and commercial sexual exploitation. (1,9,95) Government-run centers can temporarily house victims, but space is limited. (24,74,97) In 2018, the government has made efforts to increase the capacity of victim support centers by rehabilitating the Betamba Child Institute, but this effort does not adequately address the magnitude of the need. (20)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Cameroon (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2013 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the use of children for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Establish a minimum age for compulsory education that is consistent with the minimum age for admission to work.	2009 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws prohibiting child trafficking do not require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be considered child trafficking and that all children under age 18 are protected.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and include work underwater and at dangerous heights.	2014 – 2018
Enforcement	Collect and publish comprehensive statistics on enforcement efforts, including labor inspectorate funding, the number of inspections conducted at worksites, and number of criminal labor law violations found.	2009 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate and criminal law enforcement agencies receive an adequate amount of funding, training, and resources with which to conduct inspections and investigations.	2009 – 2018
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by conducting inspections in all sectors, including in the informal sector.	2013 – 2018
	Establish a formal institutional mechanism to investigate and address complaints related to allegations of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation.	2018
	Ensure that all hotlines for reporting the worst forms of child labor are well-publicized and operational, and that all calls are logged so that cases of child labor may be tracked for referral to law enforcement or social services providers.	2015 – 2018
	Raise awareness of child trafficking issues to encourage citizens to report offenses to enforcement agencies, and ensure that such cases are resolved within the judicial system.	2016 – 2018
	Cease the practices of subjecting children to physical violence and detaining children for their alleged association with armed groups, and ensure that enforcement officials do not carry out extrajudicial killings.	2015 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that existing coordinating mechanisms function effectively and receive sufficient resources to carry out their stated mandates.	2014 – 2018
Government Policies	Ensure that existing policies, such as the Ministry of Justice's National Action Plan for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in Cameroon (2015–2019) and the Inter-Ministerial Committee's Trafficking in Persons Action Plan (2014–2019), receive adequate funding and are implemented as intended.	2016 – 2018
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper and the Inter-Ministerial Committee's National Gender Policy Document.	2010 – 2018
Social Programs	Ensure that all children, regardless of refugee status, have access to education by eliminating school-related fees, minimizing the disruption of teacher strikes. Ensure that schools are free from violence and not re-appropriated for other purposes.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that social programs to address child labor are implemented in accordance with their mandates.	2018
	Ensure that the number of schools and teachers, and potable water and sanitation facilities are adequate throughout the country.	2009 – 2018
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem in Cameroon, and institute programs to address child labor in agriculture, mining, quarrying, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that all government-run centers have sufficient space to accommodate victims.	2016 – 2018

In 2018, the Central African Republic made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Justice began drafting a law that will reinforce existing laws on the recruitment of children under the age of 18 by armed groups, and criminally prohibit recruitment by non-state groups. In addition, the government participated in the identification, removal, and referral to social services of more than 1,800 children associated with armed groups, hired additional labor inspectors, and provided some inspectors with child labor-specific training. However, children in the Central African Republic engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in diamond mining and armed conflict by non-state armed groups. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture and domestic work. An estimated 1.3 million children lacked access to education as a result of ongoing instability, and limited resources hampered the government's implementation of policies and programs to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Central African Republic (CAR) engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in diamond mining and armed conflict by non-state armed groups. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture and domestic work. (1-4,5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in CAR.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	31.0 (373,742)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	63.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	28.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		42.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2010. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working in agriculture, activities unknown (5)
	Working in forestry, including carrying tools (8)
	Fishing, activities unknown (9)
Industry	Diamond and gold mining† (5,9-14)
	Working in sawmills, forges, and foundries, including sharpening sawblades and maintaining fires (8,9)
	Construction, activities unknown (9)
Services	Domestic work (5,14)
	Street work, including carrying heavy loads, garbage scavenging, and market vending (8,9)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict, including as combatants, cooks, porters, informants, concubines, domestic workers, and guards (5,14,15,35)
	Domestic work and working in agriculture, markets, and mining, including in diamond mines, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,5,14,16-18)
	Forced labor of indigenous Ba’aka children in farming (2)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,5,14,16-21)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Although the government worked with the UN Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in CAR (MINUSCA), UNICEF, and other partner agencies to demobilize and reintegrate children into community life, there were allegations of abuse and commercial sexual exploitation lodged against UN peacekeepers. (2-4,15,22-24) As of September 2018, approximately 643,000 people were displaced within CAR. (25)

The Ministry of Education has attempted to improve access to education by providing free school admission to children from camps for IDPs, waiving school exam fees for children affected by conflict, and expanding programs to provide birth registration, which may be required for school enrollment. (16,26-28) However, children continued to experience difficulties accessing education due to school fees, an absence of teachers, security concerns, destruction or looting of school materials and buildings by armed groups, and the unavailability of schools, especially in rural areas or IDP camps. (16,18,23,29-34) Fewer than three in five children in CAR complete primary education. (25) In 2018, at least 34 schools were direct targets of attacks, and in February 2018, 6 education workers were killed. (25,35) Forty schools were non-functional due to conflict, of which at least 28 were occupied by armed groups, peacekeeping troops, or IDPs. (3,4,13,30-32,36-40) Because the government exercises limited authority outside of Bangui, government-funded educational opportunities were not provided in rural areas. (5) The UN estimates that, in 2018, 1.3 million children lacked access to education, of which 280,000 school-aged children were displaced due to conflict. (40) During the reporting period, some civil society organizations reported that ethnic minority Muslims in the eastern region of the country were denied access to education. (5)

In 2018, the government, in conjunction with UNICEF and civil society organizations, identified and removed 1,816 children from armed conflict. However, during the reporting period, at least 299 children were recruited by non-state armed groups, some as young as 6 years old. (5,23,35,41)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

CAR has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in CAR's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 259 of the Labor Code (42)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 263 of the Labor Code (42)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Articles 261 and 262 of the Labor Code; Article 190 of the Mining Code (42,43)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 7 of the Labor Code; Article 151 of the Penal Code (42,44)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 151 of the Penal Code (44)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 262 of the Labor Code; Articles 90–92 and 110–111 of the Penal Code (42,44)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 262 of the Labor Code (42)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Decree N° 85.432; Declaration to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict (45)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Article 22 of the Constitution; Articles 262 and 393 of the Labor Code (42,46)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 262 and 393 of the Labor Code; (42)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Ordinance N° 84/031 Orienting the Teaching System; Article 7 of the Constitution; Article 13 of Law N° 97/014 Orienting the Education System (46,47)
Free Public Education	Yes		Ordinance N° 84/031; Article 9 of the Constitution (46,47)

* No conscription (46,48)

In 2018, the Ministry of Justice began working on a draft law of the Child Protection Code, which will reinforce existing laws on the recruitment of children under age 18 by armed groups and forces, and criminally prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state actors. (49-51) This draft of the Child Protection Code is still pending adoption by the National Assembly. (28,52) Despite a 2016 study on hazardous work, CAR has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (42,53,54) Although the Labor Code prohibits work by children under age 14, the law does not apply to children outside of formal employment relationships, which does not conform to international standards that require all children be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (42,55) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service, Modernization of Administration, Labor, Employment and Social Protection (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Central African Republic

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Modernization of Administration, Labor, Employment and Social Protection (MOL)	Monitors and enforces laws related to child labor. (9)
Ministry of the Promotion of Women, Family, and Protection of Children	Responsible for the enforcement of criminal laws against forced child labor. (5,28)
Internal Security Forces Police and Gendarmes	Enforces all laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. (55)
Ministry of Justice	Protects the rights of the child through its Rapid Response for Child Protection team and combats the worst forms of child labor through its courts and tribunals. (28,56)
Ministry of Social Affairs, Promotion of Gender, and Humanitarian Action (MSA)	Oversees child soldier issues and leads the government's anti-trafficking policy efforts through the National Council on Child Protection. Refers victims of child trafficking to NGOs and maintains an orphanage for children at risk of child trafficking. (56)
Special Criminal Court	Investigates serious human rights abuses committed since 2003, including the use of children in armed conflict. Hybrid court comprising international and national judges and prosecutors. (57,58)

Victims of child labor may be referred to the Ministry of the Promotion of Women, Family, and Protection of Children. (28) However, judicial authorities lacked the staff and resources to conduct investigations, and government authority was largely absent outside Bangui. (11,16,34,59,60) The Special Criminal Court held its inaugural session on October 22, 2018 and the Special Prosecutor has announced a prosecutorial strategy. (51) Cases were widely resolved outside of formal legal proceedings due to a lack of public trust, access, or knowledge about the justice system. (34,61-63)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in CAR took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including adequate financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Research indicates that violations were common in all sectors of the economy; however, government efforts to combat child labor were hindered by a lack of labor inspectorate capacity and inadequate financial and material resources, including transportation, office facilities and supplies, and computers. (28,54,64,66,67) Although child labor violations may be reported in person to the labor inspectorate in Bangui, due to Decree No. 12.177 of 4 August 2012, regional inspection offices are no longer under the authority of the central labor inspectorate. Consequently, regional offices do not submit periodic reports on inspection activities as required under ILO C. 81. (64,68) In addition, due to civil unrest, many labor inspectors were unable to conduct inspections outside of Bangui, where many mining operations take place. Furthermore, labor inspections were only conducted in businesses within the formal sector, and did not target the informal sector, in which child labor is most prevalent. (5)

In 2018, the government hired 7 additional labor inspectors, bringing the total number of labor inspectors employed to 53. While five labor inspectors received child labor-specific training, newly hired labor inspectors did not receive any initial training. (5,23) While a complaint mechanism exists, in practice, during the reporting period, there was no evidence that the complaint mechanism for filing and responding to reports of child labor functioned. (5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in CAR took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

There is approximately only 1 police officer for every 1,300 Central Africans, and government authority is largely absent outside the capital. However, in 2018, with the support of MINUSCA, 500 police and gendarmes have been recruited and trained, thus increasing the number of the Internal Security Forces. (51,55,70) Government officials outside of the capital may lack the resources and knowledge to enforce the law, including lack of access to copies of relevant laws. (60) Research found evidence that law enforcement officers may subject children to violence during criminal investigations, which amounts to inhumane treatment. (18) In addition, there is evidence that children released from non-state armed groups are detained, interrogated by state law enforcement agencies, and denied access to humanitarian assistance and social services providers. (59) Furthermore, juvenile criminal offenders are regularly imprisoned with adults despite a 2016 decree that prohibits this practice, as no separate juvenile cells or juvenile prisons exist. (2,18,26) During the reporting period, eight children were detained for their alleged association with non-state armed groups. Seven of the children were eventually released, though one was still in police custody at the end of the reporting period. (35)

The MOL is supposed to work with other ministries and UNICEF to provide assistance to victims of child labor; however, due to a lack of resources, the government relies primarily on MINUSCA, NGOs, and UNICEF to provide social services to victims. (5,18,41,65) In 2018, UNICEF trained government officials on identification and prevention of child trafficking. The trainings also included modules on how to handle victims of trafficking. (14) Although the government has referral mechanisms that enable enforcement authorities and social services to refer children found in child labor situations, due to limited resources the majority of cases were handled by NGOs. In 2018, civil society organizations and NGOs removed children from forced labor situations and provided social services for their rehabilitation, including enrollment in school or vocational training, and placement in stable homes. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Children Associated with Armed Forces or Groups (EAFGA)	Secures the release of children used in armed conflict and provides appropriate care with the support of UNICEF. (2,28) Research indicates that EAFGA was not active during the reporting period. (71)
Mixed Unit for Rapid Intervention and Repression of Sexual Violence (UMIRR)	Combats sexual violence against women and children. Comprising representatives from MSA, the Ministry of Justice, and law enforcement. (28) During the reporting period, UMIRR operated a 24-hour hotline to report cases, but did not provide statistics on the number of calls received. (72)

The government lacks a body designated to coordinate efforts related to all forms of child labor. Although the Inter-Ministerial Committee to Combat Human Trafficking still exists, it is no longer functional due to a lack of resources. (18,56)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Child Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Policy (DDR)	Based on the Bangui Forum Agreement, this MSA policy aims to facilitate initiatives to disarm, demobilize, and reintegrate child soldiers, in cooperation with UN agencies, other ministries, and armed groups. (9,26,48,63,75) Through its National Strategy for Community-Based Reintegration of Children Formerly Associated with Armed Forces and Armed Groups, provides temporary care to children separated from armed groups and establishes Community Child Protection Networks (RECOPE) throughout the country. (27,75,76) In February 2018, the government, UN Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in CAR (MINUSCA), and UNICEF launched a 1-month campaign in Bangui against the recruitment of child soldiers. (77) In addition, on December 12, 2018, the government launched a DDR program in the northwest of the country, targeting ex-combatants, including former child soldiers. (51)
National Recovery and Peacebuilding Plan (RCPCA) (2017–2021)	Aims to re-establish peace and security, and support reconciliation by disarming and reintegrating children associated with armed groups, promoting legal reform, seeking justice for victims, and improving access to education. Aims to construct 218 schools and 1,200 school canteens, train 1,000 teachers, and distribute 150,000 school kits. (16,48) In November 2018, the RCPCA Permanent Secretariat organized several workshops to prepare the annual review of all the RCPCA Pillars. (51)
National Strategy for the Community-Based Reintegration of Children Associated with Armed Groups in CAR	Aims to coordinate the reintegration of ex-combatant children into communities as civilians and prevent re-recruitment by armed groups. (78) Between April and June 2018, 162 children, including 24 girls, were released by armed groups, including Anti-Balaka and Ex-Seleka militias. All children were received by a UNICEF partner agency before their reintegration. (79)

In May 2018, an Action Plan to end and prevent grave violations against children was signed between the United Nations and the Mouvement Patriotique pour la Centrafrique (MPC), which is a party to the conflict. (80) The Action

Plan covers four areas for which MPC is listed, including, recruitment and use, killing and maiming, rape and other forms of sexual violence, and attacks on schools and hospitals. The MPC has appointed four commanders to serve as child protection focal points in areas under its control. (41,80) Although the Government of CAR has adopted the Bangui Forum Agreement, which seeks to address child soldiering, the Child Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Policy has yet to be fully implemented due to a lack of funding and ongoing instability. (3,81) During the reporting period, the Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Family, and Protection of Children, in partnership with United Nations Population Fund, the UNHCR, UNICEF, and UN Women, drafted a National Strategy to Fight Gender-Based Violence in CAR. Research was unable to determine whether the policy was finalized and adopted during the reporting period. (51) In addition, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, and a draft of a national policy addressing the elimination of child labor has yet to be adopted. (53,56) Furthermore, the government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the National Strategy for the Education Sector (2008–2020). (82)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Awareness-Raising Programs†	MOL program that aims to raise awareness of child labor and international conventions. (9,26,27) In 2018, MINUSCA trained 1,337 people on topics related to child protection. (5)
Shelters for Unaccompanied Children†	MSA and UNICEF-supported centers that provide immediate care, food, and psycho-social support to vulnerable children and former child soldiers. (2) Between January and November 2018, 73,846 children affected by conflict were able to continue schooling through the establishment of 296 temporary learning spaces. (83)
Education Programs	Programs to restore educational infrastructure. Includes: a $23.4 million EU-funded Education Program to rehabilitate and equip more than 300 schools in 4 prefectures and the capital; a Bangui Ministry of Mines and Ministry of National Education and Scientific Research program to construct schools in mining zones; and UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs' Education Clusters, led by UNICEF and in collaboration with the Ministry of Education, to provide access to education in conflict-affected areas. (26-28,33,84-87) In 2018, UNICEF provided education assistance to 69,719 children in crisis-affected areas who were at risk for child labor exploitation. (5) In addition, during the reporting period, UNICEF, in conjunction with MINUSCA, supported the organization of the national baccalaureate exams. (15)
Birth Registration Campaign†	In support of the 2014 decree mandating free birth registration to children born during the 2012–2014 conflict, re-opens civil registration centers in areas affected by conflict and provides registration to children. (26) In 2018, although more than 7,000 birth certificates were issued by the courts, court clerks refused to print the certificates without additional payment. (23)

† Program is funded by the Government of CAR.

Although the government participates in a program that assists former child soldiers, coordination with non-government actors is weak and the scope of this program is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. (5,12,28,63,76) In May 2018, government officials participated in a workshop organized by the NGO Child Soldiers International to identify actionable steps to ensure that the government meets the requirements of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child. (50) The absence of resources and government authority throughout much of the country significantly hindered the government's ability to combat child labor, and research found no evidence that the government has programs to assist children engaged in other worst forms of child labor. (28)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in CAR (Table 11).

Central African Republic

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children are protected by law, including children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2017 – 2018
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations, and ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive.	2013 – 2018
	Publish the legal source that establishes a minimum age for voluntary military service.	2015 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that courts are allocated sufficient resources to be fully operational and that citizens can report violations and access formal judicial processes throughout the country.	2016 – 2018
	Publish information on the labor inspectorate's funding level; type of training provided to inspectors and investigators; and data related to enforcement efforts, including the number and type of investigations conducted, violations found, penalties imposed and collected, prosecutions initiated, and convictions obtained.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that enforcement agencies have sufficient staff, resources, and funding to enforce laws related to child labor and provide services to victims throughout the country.	2009 – 2018
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2018
	Ensure that newly hired labor inspectors receive initial training.	2018
	Ensure that the complaint mechanism for filing and responding to reports of child labor functions in accordance with its mandate.	2018
	Ensure that children are not subject to violence during criminal investigations, are not kept in detention centers with adults, and are granted access to social services providers and humanitarian assistance when released from armed groups.	2016 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating mechanisms are functional and establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all forms of child labor, including its worst forms.	2011 – 2018
Government Policies	Implement the established Child Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Policy and the National Recovery and Peacebuilding Plan related to child labor, including its worst forms.	2013 – 2018
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2018
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Strategy for the Education Sector.	2009 – 2018
Social Programs	Ensure that children affected by conflict are not subject to the worst forms of child labor by peacekeeping forces.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that social programs to address child labor are implemented in accordance with their mandates.	2018
	Ensure that birth certificates issued by courts are delivered without additional payments required by court clerks.	2018
	Improve access to education for all children, including in rural areas, regardless of IDP status or religious affiliation, by eliminating school-related fees, making additional efforts to provide all children with birth registration, establishing an adequate number of teachers and classrooms throughout the country, and ensuring that schools are safe spaces and free from armed groups.	2009 – 2018
	Expand programs to assist former child combatants and children associated with armed groups, and improve coordination among relevant actors.	2013 – 2018
	Allocate sufficient resources and implement programs to address the worst forms of child labor throughout the country.	2009 – 2018

In 2018, Chad made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In March 2018, the Government of Chad ratified an ordinance prohibiting trafficking in persons and sent three labor inspectors to attend a 45-day refresher training at the ILO-accredited African Regional Center for Labor Administration in Cameroon. The government also launched the Refugees and Host Communities Support Project, which aims to improve access to health and education services for refugees, including children engaged in the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Chad engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in cattle herding and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The country's legal framework does not contain criminal penalties for the use of children in illicit activities, and austerity measures imposed in 2016 continue to limit government funding for efforts to combat child labor. The government does not collect data on law enforcement efforts and has no active policies for relevant sectors of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation, and forced labor in domestic work and herding cattle.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Chad engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in cattle herding and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Chad.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	48.8 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	49.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	28.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		41.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey, 2014–2015. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating and harvesting crops, including rice and corn (4)
	Collecting and chopping wood (1,2)
	Production of charcoal (4)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3) Forced labor in agriculture, begging, cattle herding, domestic work, fishing, and street vending, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3,5)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child trafficking occurs primarily in Chad for the purposes of forced labor in cattle herding, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. Boko Haram may be responsible for some child trafficking in Chad, and refugee children from the Central African Republic are particularly vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation. (3,4) In isolated incidents, boys may be forced to herd cattle for military or government officials. (3) Domestically, boys may be sent to Koranic schools to receive an education, but they are forced to beg and then surrender the money they receive to their teachers. (3-5)

The Constitution and the Law Orienting the Education System mandate free and compulsory education in Chad. (10,11) However, there is a lack of schools, classrooms, and teachers throughout the country. (4,12,13) Some schools do not offer all grade levels, and parents are often required to pay for school-related fees. (4,12) In 2018, a 3-month teacher strike due to non-payment of wages significantly disrupted the school year. (4,14,15) In addition, birth certificates may be required for enrollment in school, but only 12 percent of children nationwide are registered at birth, with some areas experiencing birth registration rates as low as 5 percent. (4,16)

Government resources for addressing social issues continued to be limited during the reporting period due to Chad’s continuing economic crisis, large refugee population, and security spending. (4,17)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Chad has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Chad’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 3, 5, 6.2, and 7.1 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 330, and 331 of the Penal Code (20,21)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 335 and 336.a of the Penal Code; Articles 81–85 of the Law on Cyber Security and Fight Against Cyber Criminality; Articles 5, 16, and 22 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 362 and 364 of the Penal Code (20-22)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 32 of the Law on the Organization of the Armed Forces; Article 1 of the Ordinance Prohibiting the Use of Children in Armed Conflict; Article 52 of Military Statute N° 006/PR/06; Article 5 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 286 (cc), 288 (g), and 370 of the Penal Code (20,21,23-25)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 32 of the Law on the Organization of the Armed Forces; Article 22 of the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child; Article 5, 18, and 22 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 286 (cc), 288 (g), and 370 of the Penal Code (20,21,23,26)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 1 of the Ordinance Prohibiting the Use of Children in Armed Conflict; Articles 5, 18, and 22 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 286 (cc), 288 (g), and 370 of the Penal Code (20,21,24)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16‡	Articles 21, 23, 25, and 28 of the Law Orienting the Education System; Article 35 of the Constitution (10,11)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 9 of the Law Orienting the Education System; Article 35 of the Constitution (10,11)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (10)

In March 2018, the Government of Chad issued an Ordinance prohibiting trafficking in persons, which was ratified into law in June. (20,27) Several laws are still awaiting approval by the National Assembly, including the Child Protection Code, Labor Code, and Family Code, which contain additional provisions criminalizing child trafficking and extending protection to children working in the informal sector. (4,5,8,28,29)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (8,10,19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Public Service, Employment, and Social Dialogue that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Employment, and Social Dialogue (MOPS)	Drafts and implements child labor laws. (4,12) Includes a directorate and specific point of contact to assist in coordinating child protection and human trafficking issues. (4)
Ministry of Justice, Human Rights, and Guardian of the Seal (MOJ)	Drafts and enforces laws and coordinates efforts to protect human rights. Through its Directorate for Protection and Legal Monitoring of Children, enforces child labor laws. (4)

Organization/Agency	Role
National Police	Enforce and investigate criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking, and refer them to other ministries as appropriate. (3,4) Through its Child Protection Brigade, work in collaboration with the MWCPNS, MOPS, and MOJ to specifically monitor violations of children's rights. Active in six cities: N'Djamena, Moundou, Sarh, Mongo, Mao, and Abéché. (4)
Ministry of Women, Childhood Protection and National Solidarity (MWCPNS)	Protects children's rights, provides temporary shelter to victims, and assists with reintegration when appropriate. Through its Child Protection Directorate, leads government efforts on child protection, including from child labor; and liaises with the Child Protection Directorate at the MOJ. (4,17)

Research indicates that the Child Protection Brigade within the National Police is not well known by the public, thus limiting its impact. (30)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Chad took actions to combat child labor.

In 2018, three labor inspectors attended a 45-day refresher training at the ILO-accredited African Regional Center for Labor Administration in Yaoundé, Cameroon. (4)

In addition to 30 inspectors, the government employs 50 labor controllers who assist labor inspectors. Although a hiring freeze has prevented any new labor inspectors from joining the Labor Inspectorate, 12 trainees from the National Administration School are scheduled to graduate in 2020. (4) However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Chad's workforce, which includes approximately 5.6 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Chad would employ about 140 labor inspectors. (5,31,32) In addition, the government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

Continued austerity measures limited funding and affected inspectors' ability to conduct inspections. (3,4) Inspectors lack sufficient resources, including transportation, to conduct investigations outside the city in which they are based. (4,12) Research indicates that the informal sector, in which the majority of children work, is largely unmonitored. (5,12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Chad took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (30)	No (17)

In July 2018, Chad's Minister of Justice issued a directive to all prosecutors and attorneys general to proactively enforce the new Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons. (33) The government also issued a press release to the public advertising the new Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons and increased border patrols, and enforced a requirement that children travelling unaccompanied by their parents must have authorization from a competent authority. As a result, approximately 30 children were identified and reunited with their families. (33) Two cases of child trafficking are currently being investigated. However, because knowledge of the new law is uneven within the judiciary and enforcement agencies, some perpetrators of human trafficking were released. (17,33,34) Furthermore, child victims may be detained with their traffickers due to a lack of available service providers. (34) The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report because it does not maintain a centralized electronic system. (4)

Civil society organizations typically assist with providing temporary shelter, legal assistance, and family reintegration services; they also track prosecutions and convictions. (4) A lack of infrastructure, erratic and insufficient funding allocations, and under-enforcement of existing penalties also pose barriers to enforcement. (4,12,17) Prolonged strikes during the reporting period also affected the judicial system's ability to function. (3,14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including funding and efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Working Group on the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates government efforts on child trafficking, including providing training, conducting awareness-raising activities, and strengthening the network of government organizations that address human trafficking. Chaired by the MWFNS Child Protection Directorate and includes representatives from four other ministries, including MOPS. (30) In 2018, met regularly and supported the work of the Child Protection Brigade, including by purchasing beds for children removed from abusive situations. (34)
MWFNS's Regional Child Protection Committees	Coordinate regional government efforts to address the worst forms of child labor and refer victims as appropriate. (3,17) Includes representatives from relevant ministries, police, and civil society. (17) In 2018, facilitated the placement of child victims in safe spaces. (34)

In January 2019, the Minister of Justice authorized the creation of a technical committee to create a national action plan to combat trafficking in persons, in accordance with the Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons. (17) Research was unable to determine whether existing coordination bodies were active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding and implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Five-Year Plan for Development (2017–2021)	Ministry of Economy and Development Planning policy which aims to conduct a survey on child labor every 3 years, increase the rate of birth registrations, increase educational opportunities, and strengthen the human and financial capacity of the MOPS's directorate charged with combating the worst forms of child labor. (34,35)
Vision 2030	Ministry of Economy and Development Planning policy which aims to increase educational opportunities, establish social protection policies, and implement a national employment policy with a youth focus. (36)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (4,37,38)

The Ministry of Justice drafted an Action Plan for 2019 to publicize the Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons, which focuses on training members of the courts, local authorities, traditional and religious leaders, members of civil society, and members of enforcement agencies. (33) Research was unable to determine whether existing policies were implemented during the reporting period and found no evidence of a policy on relevant forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor in domestic work, and herding cattle.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding and adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
World Bank-Funded Projects	Projects which aim to improve access to basic services and improve safety nets. Includes: Safety Nets Project (2016–2020), a $10 million project which provides conditional cash transfers and cash-to-work programs; Refugees and Host Communities Support (2018–2023),* a $60 million project to improve access to health and education services for refugees and host communities by rehabilitating and constructing primary schools; and the Education Sector Reform Project Phase 2 (2013–2020), a $65 million project to improve education conditions in primary and secondary schools. (39–42) By the end of 2018, the Safety Nets Project provided on-time cash transfers to 6,200 households, and the Education Sector Reform Project provided training to 9,000 teachers and extended coverage throughout all of the country. (43,44)
Reception Centers†	Run by MWFNS with the assistance of UNICEF and local NGOs; centers located throughout the country provide temporary assistance to victims of child trafficking, including food, education, medical and psychological care, and reintegration services. (3,4) The National Solidarity Fund, maintained by the Prime Minister's Office, funds temporary shelter or reunification assistance for victims. (45) Child Protection Directorates at various ministries and the Child Protection Brigade work together to provide support and reintegration services to victims of exploitation. (4) Shelters continued to provide victim services during the reporting period. (4)
UNDAF (2017–2021)	Aims to provide access to quality education for children who are school age, refugees, and vulnerable, and to improve social protection and promote good governance. (46) As of August 2018, the government, in cooperation with UNHCR, issued 28,500 birth certificates to refugees, internally displaced persons, returnees, and community members living around refugee camps. (12)
WFP Strategic Plan (2019–2023)*	$1.3 billion program funded by the WFP to improve food security and educational outcomes. Aims to provide technical assistance to the Ministry of Education and distribute school lunches to crisis-affected areas and cash to girls who are attending school. (47)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Chad.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (17)

The government's funding to social programs continued to be limited due to austerity measures during the reporting period, and social services are limited to urban areas. (3,4) Although Chad has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem, particularly the use of forced child labor in herding cattle, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (48)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Chad (Table II).

Table II. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws specifically prohibit children from being used, offered, or procured for illicit activities.	2011 – 2018
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Enforcement	Ensure that the roles of enforcement agencies are well known and understood by the public, that law enforcement agencies receive sufficient resources to carry out their mandate, and that children are not detained with alleged perpetrators due to a lack of available service providers.	2016 – 2018
	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by authorizing inspectors to assess penalties, ensuring inspectors are authorized to conduct unannounced inspections, and by providing sufficient resources to conduct inspections in both the formal and informal sectors and to prosecute offenders.	2014 – 2018
	Institutionalize training for labor inspectors and criminal law investigators, including at the beginning of labor inspectors' employment, and ensure that criminal investigators receive regular refresher courses and training on new laws related to child labor.	2014 – 2018
	Collect data on law enforcement efforts and publish information about Labor Inspectorate funding, the number and type of inspections conducted, whether violations were found, penalties imposed and fees collected, and the number of criminal investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, and convictions obtained.	2014 – 2018
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO technical advice.	2012 – 2018
	Ensure that penalties are enforced according to the law.	2015 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating committees receive adequate resources to meet and carry out their mandates to coordinate efforts and respond to child labor issues.	2014 – 2018
Government Policies	Adopt a policy to combat all relevant worst forms of child labor in Chad and ensure that existing policies are implemented.	2009 – 2018
Social Programs	Ensure access to education for all children by eliminating school-related fees and paying teacher salaries; ensure that schools are safe spaces; and increase the number of schools, grade levels, classrooms, and teachers available throughout the country, including for children in refugee camps.	2014 – 2018
	Make additional efforts to provide all children with birth certificates, as they may be required for school enrollment.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that existing programs receive adequate funding and can support victims of child labor throughout the country.	2016 – 2018
	Establish or expand programs to provide services to children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, such as the use of forced child labor in herding cattle, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2018

In 2018, Chile made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government passed a law creating the Office for the Rights of Children, which is charged with disseminating, promoting, and protecting the rights of children and adolescents. The newly established Undersecretary for Childhood, whose designated objectives include ensuring the rights of children and adolescents and coordinating the provision of services, also created a new National Plan of Action for Children and Adolescents. In addition, the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights created Chile's first National Human Rights Plan, which includes plans to complete and publish the results of an update to the 2012 child labor survey. However, children in Chile engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in construction. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, prohibitions related to forced labor do not meet international standards. In addition, there is a lack of publicly available enforcement information, including the number of criminal investigations and prosecutions related to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Chile engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1,2-3) The results of the 2012 National Survey on Activities of Children and Adolescents (Encuesta de Actividades de Niños, Niñas y Adolescentes) indicate that 70.6 percent of working children ages 5 to 17 are engaged in work classified as dangerous. (4,2) The Ministry of Social Development, Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare, ILO, and UNICEF are currently conducting a new Survey of Activities of Children and Adolescents, an update of the 2012 survey, and expects to publish results in 2020. (3,5) This survey will be more comprehensive in coverage than that of 2012, as it will look at child labor at the regional and sectoral levels, focusing on hazardous work, adolescent workers, and domestic work. The budget for the survey is nearly ten times that of the previous survey. (5) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Chile.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

	Commercial sexual exploitation, including in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (15,4,9,3,11,13,17,21)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In Chile, children are subjected to human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work. (9,3,13) Children, some of whom may be trafficking victims, are also used to steal, or to produce, sell, and transport drugs near the borders of Peru and Bolivia. (9,3,13) In 2018, the National Minors’ Service (SENAME) identified 1,459 children and adolescents who were victims of commercial sexual exploitation. Among those children, approximately 90 percent were girls and 10 percent were boys. (3) According to SENAME’s Worst Forms of Child Labor Registry, during the reporting period 231 children were involved in the production and trafficking of drugs. (3)

Indigenous children and adolescents from Otavalo, Ecuador, are especially vulnerable to human trafficking for labor exploitation in Chile. (20,17) Children are also involved in street work, especially in Santiago, including selling handicrafts, clothes, or other goods. (13,23,24) In Coquimbo, children sell products in street markets and work as jugglers. (10)

In Chile, education is compulsory through secondary school; however, some educational barriers do exist, including the lack of transportation to school in rural areas. (3,5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Chile has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Chile's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of forced labor.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 13 of the Labor Code (25)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 13–14 and 18 of the Labor Code (25)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Chapter 1, Article 13 of the Armed Forces Recruitment and Mobilization Law No. 2.306 (35)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 26 of Law No. 20.357 (36)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18‡	Articles 4, 25, and 27 of the General Education Law No. 20.370 (5)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 4 of the General Education Law No. 20.370 (5)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (5)

In 2018, the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare began drafting a bill that would increase penalties for child labor violations, including hazardous work violations. (3,37) However, Chilean laws related to forced labor are not sufficient because they do not criminally prohibit forced labor except when it results from human trafficking. (29,37) In addition, as Chile's minimum age for work is lower than the age for compulsory education, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (5,25)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the National Labor Directorate that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MINTRAB)	Designs and implements national strategies on child labor and generates public awareness of child labor and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (4,38) The National Labor Directorate and its specialized support unit, the Child Labor Program Office (PCTI), functioning in parallel with the MINTRAB, enforce child labor laws. (3,17) In early 2019, MINTRAB passed an administrative regulation to elevate the PCTI to a department-level entity. This changes the program's legal character from provisional to fully established, allowing it to more adequately combat child labor by developing short and long-term department goals and activities, and establishing clear management and operating procedures. (37)
National Minors' Service (SENAME)	Coordinates the provision of services to vulnerable children in collaboration with Rights Protection Offices. (39,40) Operates under the Ministry of Justice. (17)
National Investigations Police (PDI)	Investigates and prevents the worst forms of child labor by conducting community outreach activities, including trainings and information sessions. (41) Operate under the Ministry of the Interior. (17) Within the PDI, sex crime brigades look specifically for the commercial sexual exploitation of children (CSEC). (41)

Organization/Agency	Role
National Uniformed Police (Carabineros)	Investigates, prevents, and detects crimes, including child labor violations, by conducting community policing and specialized investigations. The Directorate for Family Protection provides specialized orientation on policies and operating plans for detection and prevention of domestic violence and child abuse, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (21) Operates under the Ministry of the Interior. (17) Receives referrals on the worst forms of child labor from the National Labor Directorate. (3)
National Prosecutor's Office (Fiscalía Nacional)	Investigates and prosecutes crimes, including those involving commercial sexual exploitation and the trafficking of children. Trains and coordinates with interagency partners, including the PDI, Carabineros , and regional and local prosecutor's offices. (3,42,43)
Rights Protection Offices (Oficinas de Protección de Derechos)	Refers cases of children whose rights have been violated to appropriate social services, and monitors and raises awareness of the worst forms of child labor. Located in municipalities throughout the country and part of a social protection network overseen by SENAME. (44)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Chile took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the National Labor Directorate that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial and human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The number of vehicles available to labor inspectors is insufficient, especially in areas where distances between regional offices and employers can be great. (11) The number of labor inspectors is also likely insufficient for the size of Chile's workforce, which includes nearly 9 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Chile would employ about 592 inspectors. (45)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Chile took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including penalties for promoting or facilitating the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† The National Prosecutor's database does not differentiate between investigations and prosecutions.

In 2018, the National Minor's Service (SENAME) reported that 819 children and adolescents were identified in the Worst Forms of Child Labor Registry, which collects information from the National Uniformed Police (Carabineros), the Labor Directorate, and the SENAME network. Of those, 252 were cases children used by adults for illicit activities. (13)

During the reporting period, the National Office of the Public Ministry (Ministerio Publico) developed a new Protocol for the Investigation of Crimes related to the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents, including the investigation of crimes under the trafficking in persons statute. This internal protocol will serve as a tool for prosecutors and attorney advisers. (13) In addition, the Public Ministry (Ministerio Publico) held several trainings throughout the year for prosecutors and regional police on human trafficking and migrant smuggling laws and victim assistance. (13) In 2018, the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MINTRAB) used the Child Labor Risk Identification Model developed by the ILO and the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (CEPAL) to inform its operations and inspections on child labor. (37,45) When an inspection uncovers a case of the worst forms of child labor, the National Labor Directorate immediately notifies the Carabineros who will open a criminal investigation in coordination with the National Prosecutor's Office. (3) The National Prosecutor's database does not differentiate between investigations and prosecutions. (47)

During the reporting period, 2 individuals were convicted of trafficking a minor and were sentenced to 10 years of effective jail time and fined approximately $7,340 each. (47) However, the penalties for promoting or facilitating the commercial sexual exploitation of children, ranging from 3 to 5 years imprisonment, are not commensurate with those for other serious crimes, such as rape. (9) Additionally, judges frequently suspend or commute sentences of individuals convicted of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of information on activities taken under each coordinating mechanism during the reporting period.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Advisory Committee to Eradicate Child Labor	Oversees implementation of the National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Workers (2015–2025) and formulated with the Social Observatory to Eradicate Child Labor. (21) Led by MINTRAB and includes representatives from the Ministries of Agriculture, Education, and Justice; the National Statistics Institute; the National Tourism Service; SENAME; PDI; and the Carabineros . (48) The government did not provide information on activities of this committee for inclusion in this report.
Regional Advisory Committees for the Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers	Led by the Regional Secretary of Labor and replicates at the regional level the functioning of the National Advisory Committee to Eradicate Child Labor. (17) MINTRAB continued to provide technical assistance to the regional committees during the reporting period. (3) The government did not provide information on activities of these committees for inclusion in this report.

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Worst Forms of Child Labor (WFCL) Task Force	Oversees the WFCL Registry, which tracks incidents of the worst forms of child labor and provides information on programs designed to assist child workers. Compiles data in the WFCL Registry and presents it to the National Advisory Committee to Eradicate Child Labor and other government stakeholders. (21) The government did not provide information on activities of this committee for inclusion in this report.
Social Observatory to Eradicate Child Labor	Located under MINTRAB's Child Labor Unit and established by Decree No. 131, conducts technical studies on child and adolescent labor issues and evaluates current policies to eliminate child labor. (19,49) In 2018, the Observatory worked on a Roadmap on Child Labor, which was released in early 2019, and includes the goal of ending all forms of child labor in Chile by 2025. (37,50)
Undersecretary for Childhood*	Established in April 2018 and located under the Ministry of Social Development. Will replace the National Council for Children in 2019. Coordinates the development and implementation of public policies and programs to protect children, namely the Subsystem of Integral Protection of Children Chile Crece Contigo program. (3,51,52) Tasked with enacting the proposed National Policy on Children and developing coordination mechanisms for inter-agency work. (3,51,52)
National Council for Children	Managed by the Ministry General Secretariat of the Presidency, integrated efforts across government agencies to uphold the rights of the child at the national, regional, and local levels. (53) Will be replaced by the Undersecretary for Childhood in 2019. (3)
Office for the Rights of Children*	Created in July 2018 and promotes compliance with the Convention on the Rights of the Child and other international conventions ratified by Chile related to children's rights. (3,54,55)
Inter-agency Task Force on Trafficking in Persons (MITP)	Coordinates the government's anti-human trafficking efforts. Led by the Ministry of the Interior with support from law enforcement agencies, the Ministry of Foreign Relations, the Ministry of Justice, the National Prosecutor's Office, SENAME, and others. (3) Met twice during the reporting period and following an egregious case of human trafficking in the Punta Arenas Province, MITP reported that it is re-activating its regional Punta Arenas task force which was previously defunct due to a lack of cases. (13)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of information on activities taken under each policy during the reporting period.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Workers (2015–2025)	Establishes a strategy to eradicate child labor by (1) combining efforts across national and regional agencies and private and public entities and (2) requiring regions to establish a strategy to address child labor issues in the area. (56) The MINTRAB oversees the implementation of regional strategies, including the design and implementation of regional operating plans. (21) Remained active in 2018. (3,37)
National Plan of Action for Children and Adolescents (2018–2025)†	Created by the new Undersecretary for Childhood, the Action Plan works to consolidate, monitor, and improve all public initiatives that protect the rights of children and adolescents. (3,37,57) Among the Plan's many objectives is the increased coordination of and strengthening of the National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Workers (2015–2025), including expanding programs that help families at risk of child labor find employment so that their children will be less likely to work. (37,54,57) MINTRAB participates and provides information and guidance regarding child labor. (58,59)
Third Action Plan against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents (2017–2019)	Creates cooperation mechanisms for private and public institutions to collaborate on preventing and detecting commercial sexual exploitation of children and providing social services and rights restitution to victims. (60,61) The government did not provide information on activities taken under this plan for inclusion in this report.
Anti-Trafficking National Action Plan (2019–2022)†	Seeks to prevent and combat human trafficking, with a focus on women and children. Encompasses four strategic areas: (1) prevention and awareness raising, (2) prosecution, (3) victims' assistance and protection, and (4) inter-institutional cooperation and coordination. (14) The MITP began updating the Action Plan during the reporting period and published the plan in 2019. (16,47,62) The plan focuses on complex human trafficking issues, including partnerships with public policy offices, re-integration of victims into society, post-catastrophe situations, and support for victims whose traffickers were prosecuted under laws not specific to human trafficking. (13,47)

Policy	Description
Inter-Agency Protocol on Assistance for Trafficking-in-Persons Victims	Creates a system to register, monitor, and assist victims of human trafficking. (63) Coordinated by the Undersecretariat for Crime Prevention and Citizen Security at the Ministry of the Interior. (64) In 2018, provided victims with safe housing, health and psychological services, legal assistance and representation, and support to regularize their migratory status. (13)
Chilean Ministry of the Interior and Public Security and U.S. Department of Homeland Security Joint Statement on Trafficking in Persons	Signed in 2015 by Chile and the United States. Seeks to enhance collaboration and information exchanges between enforcement agencies on combating human trafficking and protecting vulnerable populations. (65) The government did not provide information on activities taken to implement this policy for inclusion in this report.
National Action Plan on Business and Human Rights	Fosters respect for human rights in business, prevents potential negative impacts of business on human rights, promotes human rights due diligence within business operations and supply chains, strengthens remedial mechanisms, and contributes to the fulfillment of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. (66) The General Directorate of International Economic Relations (DIRECON), located within the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, acts as the chair for the implementation of the plan. In 2018, DIRECON organized a seminar to review and document the work completed under this Plan. (67)
First National Human Rights Plan†	Adopted in 2018 by the Undersecretary of Human Rights, the plan is a holistic approach to improving human rights in Chile, including by addressing child labor and violence against children. (68,69)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (70,71)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of information on activities taken under each social program during the reporting period.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Walking Together for the Eradication of Child Labor (2017–2019)†	Aims to strengthen the employability of family members and guardians of children and adolescents who are at-risk for child labor. Includes job training and assistance with job search. (72) Led by MINTRAB in collaboration with the Catholic Church and implemented in Maipú, Quilicura, Quinta Normal, and in the metropolitan region of Santiago. (72) Program remained active in 2018 and continued to register households with children at risk of child labor. (73-75)
Regional Action Group for the Americas†	Conducts prevention and awareness-raising campaigns to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism sector in Latin America. Administered in Chile by the National Tourism Service. (4) The government did not provide information on activities taken under this social program for inclusion in this report.
SENAME Programs for Children at Risk of or Engaged in the Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Approximately 132 programs serving disadvantaged youth and children at risk of or engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. Includes programs implemented by municipal governments and local branches of the Office for the Protection of Children's Rights (OPCR). (19,39,64) Through these programs in 2018, SENAME held several awareness-raising workshops, trainings, and events on child labor in regions throughout Chile, including the commemoration of World Day Against Child Labor. (76-83)
Employability of Families of Working Children and Adolescents*†	Created by the Undersecretary of Labor and fully implemented in 2018, the program seeks to help find work for family members of children and adolescents who are working or at risk of working and provide support and information on the negative effects of child labor. (3,84,85) Began as a pilot project in 2017 and received USD $235,407 in financial support by MINTRAB in 2018. (3,84)
Here I am and I act (Aquí Estoy y Actuo)	Led by Fundación Telefónica and MINTRAB under the fifth principle of the UN Global Pact to help businesses contribute to the eradication of child labor in supply chains. Implemented by 17 businesses, this program feeds into the National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor. (86,87) The government did not provide information on activities take under this social program for inclusion in this report.
Programs on Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (CSEC)†	Administered by the SENAME, includes 18 programs and 1 residential center to serve victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (64) The Child Labor Survey on commercial sexual exploitation is a collaboration of the government and ILO to collect data on CSEC from police and other governmental agencies. (15,4) In 2018, a total of 1,459 children were assisted through these programs. (13)

Program	Description
Indigenous Language Sector Program (Sector de la Lengua Indígena)†	Ministry of Education program that seeks to increase the quality of education available to indigenous children. (88) The government did not provide information on activities taken under this social program for inclusion in this report.

*Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Chile.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (39,89-91)

Walking Together for the Eradication of Child Labor officially ended in February 2019 and MINTRAB is looking for funds to restart the program and expand it to a nationwide effort. (37)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Chile (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Criminally prohibit forced labor.	2016 – 2018
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Enforcement	Ensure that inspectors receive sufficient resources, such as vehicles, to carry out their duties.	2016 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws on child labor to meet the ILO's technical advice and ensure that inspectors receive refresher training courses.	2018
	Ensure that penalties for promoting or facilitating the commercial sexual exploitation of children are commensurate with those for other serious crimes and that judges do not suspend or commute such sentences.	2016 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that each coordinating government body conducts activities relevant to the protection of children against child labor, including in its worst forms.	2018
Policies	Ensure that activities are carried out under all policies relevant to the protection of children against commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking.	2018
Social Programs	Ensure that educational barriers, such as the lack of transportation to school in rural areas, are addressed to prevent child labor.	2018
	Ensure that activities are carried out under all social programs relevant to child labor.	2018

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists on Christmas Island, the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor in 2018. Christmas Island does not meet the international standard for the prohibition of child trafficking. In addition, a gap in the legal framework for light work leaves children vulnerable to involvement in child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Christmas Island. (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Christmas Island is included as part of the territory of the Australian Commonwealth, which provides for its defense. (2-6) All legislation of the Federal Parliament applies, unless specifically excluded. (7)

Because Australia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor, the following conventions apply to Christmas Island (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Christmas Island is subject to the laws and regulations related to child labor of the Commonwealth of Australia and the state of Western Australia (Table 2). However, gaps exist in its legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including the prohibition of child trafficking.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Section 190 of the Western Australia Children and Community Services Act (8)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 10.4 of the Western Australia Mines Safety and Inspection Regulations (9)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Section 10.4 of the Western Australia Mines Safety and Inspection Regulations (9)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 270.6–270.7 of the Commonwealth Criminal Code Act of Australia; Sections 270.6–270.7 and 271.9 of the Crimes Legislation Amendment Act (10,11)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Canberra Act 2600 (13)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Sections 268.68 and 268.88 of the Commonwealth Criminal Code Act of Australia (10)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17.5	Section 6 of the Western Australia School Education Act (14)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 98 of the Western Australia School Education Act (14)

* No conscription (13)

In Christmas Island, the Government of Western Australia's Children and Community Services Act sets the minimum age for light work in delivery employment at 10 years if the child is accompanied by a parent or an authorized adult. This is not in compliance with international standards, which set the minimum age for light work at age 13. (8,15) Laws related to child trafficking are not sufficient as the recruitment, harboring, transfer, and receipt (domestically) of children for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation are not clearly prohibited. (10)

In Christmas Island, the Western Australia School Education Act notes that education is compulsory until the end of the year in which a child reaches the age of 17 years and 6 months, until the child finishes the minimum requirements for secondary school graduation under the Curriculum Council Act of 1997, or until the child reaches age 18, whichever comes first. (14) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

Although there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of Australia has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Australian Federal Police, the Department of Immigration, and the Department of Regional Development	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (16) In the case of the Child Protection Operations Team, coordinates and investigates online and multi-jurisdictional online child sex exploitation issues, including child pornography. (17) In the case of Human Trafficking Teams, investigate human trafficking for the purpose of transnational sexual and labor exploitation. (18)
Australian Department of Child Protection	Issues orders to stop a child from working if there is a risk of harm. (19) Authorized to inspect all workplaces where children are employed for compliance and issue penalties. (20,21)

Western Australian WorkSafe Inspectors provide services on Christmas Island, where they have the right to enter, at any time, any workplace including aircraft, ships, and vehicles in which employees work or are likely to be in the course of their work. Inspectors have unrestricted access to workplaces, except where there is a statutory restriction, to determine whether employers are in compliance with the Occupational Safety and Health Act. (1,22)

Labor Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor.

Criminal Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for criminal law enforcement actions to address child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

Although there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of Australia has established mechanisms to coordinate government efforts on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Interdepartmental Committee on Human Trafficking	Chaired by the Attorney General's Department, deals with child labor issues, including its worst forms, from a human trafficking perspective and consists of 10 government agencies, including the Australian Federal Police, Department of Employment, and Department of Foreign Affairs. (1,18) This Committee was active in 2018, but information regarding its work was unavailable for inclusion in this report. (23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Although there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of Australia has established policies related to child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and Slavery 2015–2019	Outlines cooperation and participation by government and non-government entities to combat human trafficking and slavery, including commercial sexual exploitation of children. (1,24) While this policy was in effect in 2018, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement it during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Christmas Island (Table 6).

Table 6. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for all light work to age 13 to comply with international standards.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that child trafficking, including the recruitment, harboring, transfer, and receipt of children for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation, is clearly criminalized both domestically and internationally.	2018
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018

Cocos (Keeling) Islands

NO ADVANCEMENT

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands, the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor in 2018. The Cocos (Keeling) Islands does not meet the international standard for the prohibition of child trafficking. In addition, a gap in the legal framework for light work leaves children vulnerable to involvement in child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands. (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Cocos (Keeling) Islands are included as part of the territory of the Australian Commonwealth, which provides for its defense. (2-6) All legislation of the Federal Parliament applies, unless specifically excluded. (7) Because Australia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor, the following conventions apply to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Cocos (Keeling) Islands is subject to the laws and regulations related to child labor of the Commonwealth of Australia and the state of Western Australia (Table 2). However, gaps exist in its legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including the prohibition of child trafficking.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

In 2018, Colombia made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government drafted two new bills: one to strengthen penalties in the Penal Code for crimes of commercial sexual exploitation, and one to establish more comprehensive provisions to protect children against cyber crimes that involve commercial sexual exploitation. The Ministry of Labor also significantly increased its resources dedicated to labor law enforcement and launched the campaign “Working is Not a Child’s Task,” which aims to prevent and eliminate child labor through awareness raising efforts. The government adopted the National Policy on Childhood and Adolescence. It also began implementing the Center for the Crime of Trafficking in Persons, which collects information and analysis on human trafficking and uses this information to develop effective public policies. However, children in Colombia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. In addition, the government does not employ a sufficient number of labor inspectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Colombia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) The government publishes annual statistics on children’s work from its National Household Survey. (3) However, activities and ages are not sufficiently specified in these data to determine child labor rates per sector. (3,4) Table I provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Colombia.

Table I. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.9 (332,253)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		105

	Use in illicit activities, including in forced begging, by illegal armed groups and criminal organizations to commit homicides and traffic drugs, and in the production of marijuana and coca (stimulant plant), each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,4,7,9,25,33,34)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Commercial sexual exploitation of children occurs more often in private homes rented online than in commercial establishments. (4,9) In Bucaramanga, child victims of commercial sexual exploitation are allegedly recruited in schools by other students. (35) In mining areas, trafficking of children for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation is widespread. (4,25,36) Reports also indicate that criminal gangs and dissident groups recruit Colombian and Venezuelan children to produce and traffic drugs and commit homicides and extortion. (37,38)

Some civil society groups report that the forced recruitment and use of minors in Colombia by illegal armed groups, including Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de Colombia (FARC) dissidents, the National Liberation Army, the Popular Liberation Army, and non-ideological criminal organizations such as the Gulf Clan, continued and increased from 2017 to 2018. (2,25,39,40) Children are recruited to perform intelligence and logistical activities, store and transport weapons, and engage in commercial sexual exploitation. (4,7,25,32) However, the Colombian government has reported that this recruitment and use of children remained significantly lower than levels prior to the signing of the 2016 peace accord with FARC. (41)

In Colombia, impassable roads, long distances between children’s homes and schools in rural areas, a lack of teachers, and continued violence and insecurity in parts of the country hinder access to education. (4,9,42) Indigenous and Afro-Colombian children in particular face difficulties in accessing education. (7,42) In several communities, classes were interrupted, sometimes for weeks at a time, because of illegal armed group activity in those areas. (40,42) Venezuelan children in Colombia who lack identity documents are provided temporary identification numbers, enabling them to access all aspects of the education system. (4) In 2018, the Ministry of Education and the Director General of Migration jointly issued a circular to facilitate enrollment in school for these children, regardless of their residency or citizenship status. (4,43) UNICEF and NGOs reported that overall implementation of the circular has been successful, if uneven in some districts because of the challenges created by the large number of Venezuelan children, noting strained classroom space and resources. (4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Colombia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4). However, gaps remain, including the differences in the minimum age for work and the compulsory schooling age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 35 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence (44)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 117 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence (44)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 3 of Resolution 1796 (45)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Articles 141 and 188A of the Penal Code; Article 5 of Resolution 3597 (46-48)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Articles 188A–188C of the Penal Code; Article 5 of Resolution 3597 (46-48)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 213–219B of the Penal Code (48)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 162, 188D, and 384 of the Penal Code; Article 2 of Resolution 3597 (46,48)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 13 of Law 418; Article 2 of Law 548 (49,50)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 13 of Law 418; Article 2 of Law 548 (49,50)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 162 of Law 599; Article 20 of Law 1098; Article 14 of Law 418 (44,48,49)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Decision C-376/10 of the Colombian Constitutional Court (51)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 1 of Decree 4807 (52)

During the reporting period, members of Congress drafted a bill to strengthen penalties in the Penal Code for crimes of commercial sexual exploitation and to expand the range of criminal practices considered under these crimes. (4,53) The bill also increases minimum sentences to 26 years in prison for the procurement of a minor for commercial sexual exploitation, demanding a minor to perform sexual acts for money, and any involvement in sex tourism. (53) In addition, Congress drafted a bill that would revise the Penal Code to establish more comprehensive criminal provisions to protect children and adolescents from commercial sexual exploitation perpetrated through the internet, social media, and mobile devices. (4,54) This modification would ensure that crimes committed online related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children, including child pornography, would be punished in the same way as similar crimes committed in person. (54)

Challenges remain concerning differences in the minimum age for work and the compulsory schooling age. The minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, and children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (44)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor's (MOL) Inspection, Monitoring, Control, and Territorial Management Department	Receives complaints of labor law violations and conducts labor inspections, including inspections to verify labor conditions for adolescent workers and compliance with other child labor provisions. Oversees the Internal Working Group on Child Labor Eradication. (55) Operates the Integrated Registration and Information System for Child Labor, a child labor monitoring system that identifies children engaged in or at risk of child labor. (1,56)
Active Search Team for Trafficking in Persons, Sexual Exploitation of Children, Girls, and Adolescents and Related Crimes*	Uses a proactive investigation model to identify these crimes in regions where they occur instead of waiting for victims to seek attention at the national level. Created in 2018 by the Bogota Mayor's office. (25)
National Police	Investigates cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (4) Judicial police and the Technical Investigation Corps support the Attorney General's Office throughout the investigation process. (4)
Attorney General's Office	Investigates and prosecutes cases of child recruitment for armed conflict, commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, and human trafficking, with support from the Office's Technical Investigation Unit, which also advises the Attorney General in the design of policies and strategies related to the role of judicial police investigators. (4,44) Oversees the Articulation Group for Combating Trafficking in Persons, which includes four prosecutors who focus on investigating and prosecuting cross-border human trafficking and other related crimes. (57)
National Training Service	Collects fines imposed by MOL for labor law violations. (58)

* Agency was created during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Colombia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018

† Data are from January 2017 to October 2017.

In 2018, the MOL significantly increased its resources dedicated to labor law enforcement, including approximately $600,000 dedicated specifically to improving training for labor inspectors. (4) The budget also included resources for improving the connectivity and implementation of the electronic case management system which was created in 2017. (4) However, reports indicate that resource allocation for labor law enforcement in rural areas, such as Amazonas and Vichada, was insufficient. (7,59) In some cases, inspectors carried out inspections in a small geographic area due to a lack of transportation resources to reach areas accessible only by boats or small planes. (1) Although unannounced inspections are permitted by the Labor Code, inspectors must obtain prior approval from the Attorney General's Office and be accompanied by judicial police officers to inspect certain kinds of private property, such as private homes, farms, and brothels, which may create delays. (4)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Colombia's workforce, which includes over 25 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Colombia should employ roughly 1,645 inspectors. (7,61) In Colombia, labor inspectors are not considered full civil servants until they are hired through a state-provided civil service exam, which occurs infrequently. (4) To address the high turnover among inspectors and fill all of the MOL's 904 labor inspector positions with permanent inspectors, the government held an exam in April 2018. (4) However, in September, the Council of State suspended the appointments made under the exam based on a legal action filed by the National Association of Labor Inspectors, which argued that proper notification of the exam had not been provided in accordance with the law. Until the Council makes a ruling on these appointments, the hiring of inspectors can only be done through a complex legal process. (4) Despite the government's concerns about forced labor in areas such as illegal mining, domestic servitude, agriculture near the coffee belt, cattle herding, and crop harvesting, the MOL did not have inspector trainings in victim identification. (41) In 2018, with the support of an international organization, the MOL worked to finalize a victim identification protocol for labor inspectors. (41)

Despite the requirement that children between the ages of 15 and 17 obtain official authorization to work, many adolescents work without such authorization. (62) Although the government did not provide the total number of labor inspections conducted in 2018, it did report that 2,757 inspections were conducted to determine whether authorizations for minors of the legal minimum work age were properly granted and 2,099 follow-up inspections of work sites were conducted to verify the appropriate conditions of work for authorized minors of the legal minimum work age. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Colombia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for new employees and funding.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown	Unknown (4)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (9)	N/A (4)

In 2018, the Attorney General's Office reported that of the 3,280 children and adolescents registered as victims of crimes related to the worst forms of child labor, 36 percent involved child pornography, 18 percent involved the use of children to commit illicit activities, and the remaining 46 percent included cases of child recruitment into criminal ranks, commercial sexual exploitation, and trafficking in persons. (4) The Ministry of Defense reported that it received 177 cases of children and adolescents demobilized from illegally armed groups, all of which were referred to the Office of the Attorney General and the Colombian Institute of Family Well-Being (ICBF) for investigation and prosecution. The children were referred to social services. (4)

During the reporting period, the ICBF registered 1,396 children for assistance through its Administrative Program for Reestablishing the Defense of Rights (PARD), a set of procedures to defend the rights of children who have been abused by adults, including through trafficking, forced labor, forced military action, or commercial sexual exploitation. (4,39,65) The process includes psychological evaluation, nutritional assessment, verification of birth registry, and assessment of family environment. (65) Between January and October 2018, 18 children and adolescents entered the PARD process by reason of human trafficking for the purpose of sexual exploitation. (25) In 2018, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs coordinated numerous multilateral efforts for cooperation and technical assistance with other countries to share best practices in the areas of prevention, investigation, and assistance to victims of trafficking. (25) In 2018, the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement Agency's Office of Homeland Security Investigations helped establish the Child Exploitation Unit in the Colombian National Police's Transnational Criminal Unit. During the reporting period, this unit opened 24 child exploitation cases, executed 9 search warrants, and arrested 10 individuals for the sexual exploitation of children. (25) Although the government took action on crimes related to the commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking of children and collected data on these crimes, the Attorney General's Office reported that its case management system tracks processes through conviction only and does not include sentencing. (4,63,64)

In 2018, the Attorney General's Office reported conducting numerous trainings on the worst forms of child labor. Participants included the Colombian National Police, the ICBF, the Judicial Police Investigation Unit, and members of the Family Defenders Offices. (4) The Ministry of the Interior held numerous anti-trafficking in persons trainings, and the Colombian National Police, in cooperation with Interpol and UNODC, trained 130 law enforcement investigators at the national level. (4)

In September 2018, the government launched the National Information System on Trafficking in Persons to collect, process, and analyze trafficking in persons data from the Inter-institutional Committee for the Fight against Trafficking in Persons and 32 regional committees. (25) Despite these efforts, the government did not provide clear information on whether funding provided to criminal law enforcement agencies was sufficient. (4) In addition, civil society noted a lack of specific budget allocations by government institutions for addressing trafficking in persons. (25)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist including the inconsistent coordination in human trafficking victim identification.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Interagency Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (CIETI)	Coordinates efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by MOL, includes 13 government agencies and representatives from trade unions, business associations, and civil society organizations. (7) Oversees 32 department-level CIETIs throughout the country, each comprising municipal-level committees. (62) In 2018, department-level CIETIs were trained on the provisions in the National Policy Guidelines to Eradicate and Prevent Child Labor and Protect Adolescent Workers (2019–2029) and subsequently created department-level Action Plans to implement the guidelines in various regions. (4,66)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Colombian Institute for Family Well-Being (ICBF)	Operates mobile units to coordinate government actions to protect children's rights, including protection from child labor. Supports demobilized child soldiers by strengthening family networks and increasing access to health services, food, education, and shelter. (16) Serves as Administrator of the Fund Against Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents. (67) Processes child labor complaints, operates hotlines to report child labor cases, and provide social services to children engaged in or at risk of child labor. (4,68) In 2018, expanded from 40 to 58 mobile units, comprising 174 professionals nationwide. (4,69) In addition, mobile teams conducted 1,962 workshops on child labor in 267 municipalities across the country in 2018. (4) Also coordinated with the Ministry of Interior (MOI) on a working group to more closely and effectively coordinate service provision for child and adolescent victims of human trafficking. (25)
ICBF's National System of Family Well-Being	Promotes interagency coordination to protect children's rights, including rights related to child labor. (7) Designs, implements, monitors, and evaluates policies that affect children from early childhood to adolescence. Comprises the offices of the President and Vice President, 15 government ministries, and other government agencies. (70) ICBF provided technical assistance in 2018 to 125 officials in agencies comprising the National System of Family Welfare on protocols for referring children engaged in mining to social services in the departments of Cordoba, La Guajira, and Cesar. (4)
National Interagency Committee for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Commercial Sexual Exploitation	Coordinates and implements efforts to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Led by MOL and comprises 15 government agencies. (7) Was active during the reporting period. (4)
Interagency Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Leads and coordinates efforts among government agencies to combat human trafficking. Created by Law 985, chaired by the Ministry of the Interior, and comprises 16 government entities and 6 permanent invitees, including private sector and international organizations. (1) In 2018, conducted 44 technical advisory meetings with 32 departmental, municipal, and district-level committees to improve coordination. (4,25) Also provided multiple trainings for government agencies, including judicial branch officials and the Colombian National Police, businesses, indigenous communities, and academic institutions on how to identify and combat human trafficking crimes. (4) In May 2018, the Committee formalized an action plan that defines coordinating actions in prevention and awareness raising. The plan came into effect on June 1, 2019. (65)
Center for the Crime of Trafficking in Persons* (Observatorio del Delito Trata de Personas)	Implemented in October 2018, the Center serves as a mechanism for the collection, registration and systematization of information related to human trafficking. (71) This information is used to strengthen government mechanisms for prevention. (71) The Center's priorities include analysis of Venezuela migration and trafficking in persons, the development of guides for victim assistance at the regional level, and training for judicial officials. (4) In 2018, the Observatory carried out two academic conferences focusing on investigation and prosecution. (4,39)
Inter-sectorial Commission for the Prevention of the Recruitment and Use of Children by Illegal Armed Groups (CIPRUNNA)	Coordinates efforts to prevent child recruitment by illegal armed groups, including for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation. Created by Law 552, led by the High Commissioner for Post-Conflict, Human Rights, and Security, and comprises 23 entities, including the Attorney General's Office and MOL as permanent members. (72,73) The Commission held 7 meetings in 2018 and issued a decree that requires relevant government agencies to create a 4-year action plan to implement guidelines under the oversight of the Commission. (4,65,74,75) The Commission also published an extensive progress report in July 2018 that highlighted CIPRUNNA's coverage of 96 percent of the Colombian territory with at least one strategy, program, or prevention project in 1,056 municipalities in the 32 departments of Colombia. (75)
National Reintegration Council	Supervises the reintegration of Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de Colombia (FARC) members, including children, and the preparation of a socioeconomic survey of former FARC combatants. (76) Established on December 20, 2016, pursuant to the Peace Accord, and continues coordination efforts. (4,77) Was active during the reporting period. (4)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In 2018, the Ministry of Tourism hosted the International Summit for the Protection of Children and Adolescents in the Tourism Sector, which brought together representatives from 90 countries to address challenges related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism sector. (4)

Civil society organizations have noted inconsistent coordination in the areas of human trafficking victim identification and assistance, may hinder anti-trafficking efforts. (25)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy Guidelines to Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor and Protect the Adolescent Worker (2019–2029)†	Aims to focus on child labor eradication in agricultural policy, develop child labor prevention strategies, improve the quality and coverage of child protection services, protect adolescent workers from hazardous work, create strategies to address child labor in domestic work, and establish evaluation and monitoring mechanisms to assess progress. (66) The government updated this policy during the reporting period and held workshops for civil society in various regions of the country. (4) The Colombian Government, along with the Somos Tesoro Project, the School of Public Administration, and ILO developed an online course to train civil servants on implementation of the policy. (78)
National Policy on Childhood and Adolescence (2018–2030)†	Articulates multiple sub-policies on the worst forms of child labor, protection of adolescents, prevention and eradication of commercial sexual exploitation of children, and prevention of recruitment of children and adolescents by illegal armed groups. (4,79) Policy adopted in June 2018 to contribute to the comprehensive welfare and development of children and adolescents, recognizing them as rights-bearing subjects and integral to national development. (4,79)
Child Labor Pact (2014–2018)	Seeks to address the revision of policies on the prevention and eradication of child labor and to make such policies an integral part of national strategies; improve coordination among MOL and other government agencies, ILO, and industry associations; raise awareness of child labor issues in capital cities and tourist destinations; and train department-level officials on laws related to child labor and services available to victims. (62) The government did not publish information on activities taken under this pact in 2018 for inclusion in this report.
National Strategy for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (2016–2018)	Aims to prevent human trafficking by raising awareness to detect potential victims, providing immediate assistance to victims, promoting inter-institutional collaboration, strengthening and developing international cooperation mechanisms, and developing a data-gathering mechanism. (80) Established by Decree No. 1036 in 2016 and led by the Interagency Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons. (81) During the reporting period, the government implemented the strategy with participation from trafficking survivors and civil society. (25)
Progressive Plan for the Social Protection and Defense of Rights for Rural Workers†	Includes campaigns for the eradication of child labor, including its worst forms. Across 75 municipalities, 2,111 people received training on fundamental rights at work during the reporting period. (4) Created under the 2016 peace accord, this plan was implemented in 2018 in municipalities targeted for rural development. (4)
2016 Peace Accord (Final Agreement to End the Armed Conflict and Build a Stable and Lasting Peace)	Provides for the creation of the National Reincorporation Council to oversee the demobilization and release of minors from FARC's ranks. Under the policy, the government and FARC agreed to conduct a child labor eradication campaign, take immediate measures to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, strengthen onsite labor inspections, create a mobile inspection unit to reach rural areas, and increase access to education. (7,81) In 2018, the Progressive Plan for the Social Protection and Defense of Rights for Rural Workers was developed under this agreement, which includes campaigns for the eradication of child labor, including its worst forms. (4)
Roadmap for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Mining	Aims to reduce and eliminate child labor in mining through the following activities: (1) create municipal diagnostics, (2) define criteria to determine risks of child labor, (3) create mechanisms to focus municipal governments on addressing child labor, (4) create protocols and questionnaires to report child labor cases, (5) design strategies to strengthen coordination of child labor monitoring at the municipal level, and (6) design strategies to prevent and remove children from child labor. (82) The government did not provide information on activities taken under this roadmap in 2018 for inclusion in this report.
National Policy to Prevent the Recruitment of Children and Adolescents by Illegal Armed Groups	Directs actions to prevent the recruitment and use of children by illegal armed groups. Aims to address violence against children, including the worst forms of child labor, and improve interagency coordination. (83) In 2018, the government updated the policy through a presidential decree which mandates that specific institutions include prevention of child recruitment in their programming and operational focus. (25,84)
National Development Plan (Todos por un Nuevo País) (2014–2018)	Outlined Colombia's strategy to promote inclusive economic growth and national development. Sought to improve access to quality education, lengthen the school day to 7 hours, and provide preschool for children under age 5. (85) In 2018, the government cited trafficking in persons as one of the main crimes committed by organized criminal organizations in its forthcoming National Development Plan. (4)

Policy	Description
Cooperative Agreement Between the Ministry of Mining and Energy and the ICBF to Prevent Child Labor in Mining	Aims to strengthen and implement initiatives to prevent and eradicate child labor in mining. (86,87) Under the agreement, ICBF provided training to 125 officials in 2018 on protocols for referring children engaged in mining to social services agencies in the departments of Cordoba, La Guajira, and Cesar. (4) ICBF also provided social services to 257 children engaged in or at risk of child labor in mining. (4)
Roadmap for the Restoration of Rights, Assistance, and Reparation for Children and Adolescent Victims of the Armed Conflict	Establishes protocols to assist child victims of armed conflict. Approved in 2016 and implemented through inter-institutional mechanisms in various departments. (9,88) The government continued to use the roadmap in 2018. (4)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (4,7,62,89-91)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which cover the main sectors where child labor has been identified in the country (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Present Against Child Labor	Program developed by ICBF to address child labor throughout the country. In 2018, the ICBF's mobile teams conducted 1,962 "Present Against Child Labor" workshops to combat child labor in 267 municipalities across the country, with 6,166 participants, including children, adolescents, and their families—with activities including family strengthening and education on fundamental rights restitution. (4,92,93)
Projects Addressing Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children†	As part of the National Policy Guidelines for the Prevention of the Commercial Exploitation of Children, the Colombian government continued its Eyes Everywhere (Ojos en Todas Partes) public awareness campaign, which aims to prevent the commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism sector. Led by the Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Tourism, and implemented in coordination with ICBF and the National Tourism Fund. (1,4,25,94) In 2018, it focused on the goal of better identifying solicitors and victims of child sex tourism. (4) The Government of Colombia also supports the "We Protect" program, a web-based tool to collect, monitor, and address complaints of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (95) ICBF also created the Colombia Present Against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Girls, Boys, and Adolescents campaign, an awareness-raising campaign on commercial sexual exploitation and call to action for the public to report cases. (65)
Model for Identification of Child Labor Risks	Pilot project led by ILO's Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor. Aims to design a system that classifies territories according to their probability of risk for child labor and identifies the principal factors associated with this risk based on existing databases in participating countries. (96) Participating countries include Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Jamaica, Mexico, and Peru. (96) The government did not provide information for activities taken under this model in 2018 for inclusion in this report.
Projects Addressing Trafficking in Persons	Eye on Trafficking† aims to increase awareness of human trafficking among high school students, and School Environments in Coexistence and Peace† focuses on identifying potential trafficking victims. (7) Ministry of Foreign Affairs' campaign, Do not Ignore Trafficking (#AnteLaTrataNoSeHaga), is directed at border populations with limited access to digital platforms. (97) In 2018, the Attorney General's Office launched the #EsoEsCuento* public awareness campaign to prevent Colombians from being engaged in domestic and international trafficking in persons crimes, employing social media and audiovisual tools in public spaces to raise awareness of false employment efforts. (4,25,65,98) Through the crime prevention program Futuro Colombia , coordinated by the Attorney General's Office, the government held prevention campaigns in 30 cities throughout the country. (65)
Development for Social Prosperity Programs†	More Families in Action (Más Familias en Acción) uses a conditional cash transfer program seeking to combat poverty and build human capital, United Network (Red Unidos) coordinates actions to reduce inequality and end extreme poverty, Healthy Generations (Generaciones con Bienestar) operates a children's rights program offering cultural and recreational activities for children ages 6 to 17 identified as vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, and Youth in Action (Jóvenes en Acción) provides technical job training and conditional cash transfers to vulnerable urban youth ages 16 to 24. (99-106)

Program	Description
Mobile Teams for Comprehensive Protection—Child Labor (EMPI)†	Led by ICBF, assist families with children vulnerable to child labor by linking them to the National System of Family Well-Being. (7) In 2018, EMPI mobile teams strengthened procedures for providing assistance to children, adolescents, and their families, and expanded their capacity from 39 to 58 teams comprising 174 professionals nationwide. (4,69,107)
Public-Private Partnerships‡	Colombia Network Against Child Labor (Red Colombia Contra el Trabajo Infantil), a public-private partnership that builds on the UN Global Pact Initiative to create collaboration between Colombian businesses and MOL to eliminate child labor. Comprises 32 businesses and 17 partners that continued to collaborate in 2018. (4,108-111)
Differential Path to Life Program	Office of Presidential Counselor for Human Rights and ICBF-managed program, with support from USAID and other international organizations, that establishes a reintegration process for disengaged FARC minors. Has successfully reintegrated more than 124 rescued child soldiers as of May 2018. (4,25,76,114)
I Stay at School, Protecting My Dreams†	Ministry of Education-led program that provides strategies for teachers to prevent school desertion due to the worst forms of child labor, including forced recruitment, the use of children in illicit activities, and other forms of child exploitation by illegal non-state armed groups. (9) The government did not provide information on activities taken under this program in 2018 for inclusion in this report.
USDOL-Funded projects	Preventing and Reducing Child Labor and Forced Labor in Palm Oil Supply Chains (Palma Futuro), a $6 million project that works to improve the implementation of social compliance systems that promote acceptable conditions of work and the prevention and reduction of child and forced labor in palm oil supply chains; Building a Generation of Safe and Healthy Workers, a $11 million global project implemented by ILO with Colombia as one of eight countries that works to promote the safety and health of young workers; Promoting Compliance with International Labor Standards, which strengthens the institutional capacity of MOL to adequately enforce Colombian labor laws and promote social dialogue among organizations and their stakeholders; Colombia Avanza , a $2 million project that focuses on building the capacity of civil society to more adequately combat child labor and other abuses in Colombia's coffee sector; Building the Capacity of Civil Society to Combat Child Labor and Improve Working Conditions in Colombia (Pilares), a $2 million project that strengthens the capacity of civil society organizations to detect and address child labor and working conditions in gold mining; and We Are a Treasure (Somos Tesoro), a $11.25 million, 4 year project to combat child labor and promote safe work in the mining sector, implemented by PACT, Inc., in partnership with the Alliance for Responsible Mining, Mi Sangre Foundation, and the Fund for Environmental Action and Childhood. Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Campaigns Against Child Labor†	ICBF-led campaigns to increase coordination among ICBF, Child Protection Police, MOL, and municipal authorities on child labor issues, and to promote education about the risks of hazardous work. (59) In 2018, MOL also launched a campaign, "Working is not a child's task" (Trabajar no es tarea de niños), which aims to prevent and eliminate child labor through awareness-raising efforts. (4,115,116)
Anti-trafficking hotline	Ministry of Interior-led hotline that reports and tracks cases of human trafficking and facilitates access to social services for victims. (117) Continued to maintain the hotline in 2018. (4)

*Program was launched using the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Colombia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (4,9,118-123)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Colombia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Enforcement	Ensure that all labor inspectors have sufficient resources to perform inspections.	2009 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice and ensure the Ministry of Labor employs inspectors trained in victim identification of forced labor.	2009 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including information on training for inspectors and investigators, the total number of labor inspections conducted, the number of child labor violations found, penalties imposed that were collected for child labor violations, and whether criminal investigators receive initial training.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that all adolescents who work in permissible sectors have received official authorization.	2015 – 2018
	Provide sufficient resources to criminal law enforcement officials to enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive timely approval from the Attorney General's Office and judicial officers to conduct timely inspections on private property.	2018
	Collect and publish data on penalties and sentencing for crimes related to the commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking of children.	2018
	Ensure that government efforts on human trafficking victim identification and assistance are adequately coordinated between agencies.	2018
Government Policies	Publish information on activities taken under all policies related to child labor, including its worst forms.	2018
Social Programs	Ensure that children are protected from armed conflict while at school.	2013 – 2018
	Expand efforts to improve access to education for all children, particularly for indigenous and Afro-Colombian children, including by improving transportation infrastructure, building more schools in rural areas, and increasing the number of teachers.	2013 – 2018
	Collect data on work activities and ages of workers as part of the National Household Survey questionnaires to allow for a determination of child labor rates.	2017 – 2018
	Publish information on activities taken under the I Stay at School, Protecting My Dreams and the Model for Identification of Child Labor Risks social programs.	2018

In 2018, Comoros made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government carried out labor inspections for the second consecutive year, adding routine and unannounced inspections in 2018. Under the National Policy for the Protection of Children, the government also established two pilot listening sessions for child victims of violence and gathered data from the listening sessions to improve child protection. In addition, the National Commission of Human Rights and Freedoms and the General Delegation organized trainings for the police, gendarmerie, and army on children's rights. However, children in Comoros engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work. A gap between the minimum age for work and compulsory education age leaves children ages 13 to 15 vulnerable to child labor. In addition, social programs to combat child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Comoros engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Comoros.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	23.0 (42,145)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	81.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	20.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		76.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey, 2012. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Some parents who are unable to care for their children send them to wealthier families that are expected to provide food, shelter, and schooling to the children in exchange for housework. In practice, some of these children receive care and an education, while many become domestic workers and are victims of labor exploitation and abuse. (3-5,13,14) In Comoros, it is a traditional practice to send children to Koranic teachers to receive an education. Some Koranic teachers, however, force their students to work in lieu of a school fee; girls usually perform domestic work, and boys perform agricultural labor. (4,5,14) In nearby Mayotte, which is administered by France, reports indicate that there are more than 3,000 unaccompanied children from Comoros, some of whom are exploited in the worst forms of child labor or may be vulnerable to trafficking. (5,14-16)

The Constitution guarantees free compulsory primary education until age 12 and states that no child younger than age 14 may be prevented from attending school, but this provision is not adequately enforced. In addition, although approximately equal numbers of boys and girls attended public primary schools, fewer girls completed primary education. (18,19) There are limited reports that, due to lack of school infrastructure and teacher availability, some primary and secondary schools had high student dropout rates, which disproportionately affected children from rural areas or poor and disadvantaged backgrounds. The Ministry of Education, in conjunction with UNICEF, is revising the school mapping system to ensure better access to education in rural areas. (19) However, the lack of school infrastructure and the limited availability of teachers may impede access to education, which may increase the vulnerability of children to the worst forms of child labor. (1,9,11,18,19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Comoros has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Comoros' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 129 of the Labor Code (20)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 131(d) of the Labor Code; Article 7 of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (20,21)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		List of Dangerous Occupations; Article 131(d) of the Labor Code; Article 7 of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (20-22)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2.1 and 131 of the Labor Code; Article 13 of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (20,21)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 131 of the Labor Code; Article 13 of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (20,21)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 131 of the Labor Code; Articles 8–11 and 13 of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking; Articles 322 and 323 of the Penal Code (20,21,23)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 131(c) of the Labor Code; Article 6(c) of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (20,21)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 41 of Law No. 97-06/AF (24)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 6(a) of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (21)
Compulsory Education Age	No	12	Article 2 of the Outline Act on the Education System (25)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 1 of the Outline Act on the Education System; Preamble of the Constitution (25,26)

* No conscription (27)

The government has drafted a Penal Code and a Code of Criminal Procedures that increase the penalties for human trafficking crimes, and has submitted a proposal to ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons; however, neither of these legislative proposals was enacted during the reporting period. (15,27-30)

The Labor Code allows children under the minimum age to perform light work in domestic work or agriculture as long as it does not interfere with education or physical or moral development. (20) The Labor Code, however, does not specify the conditions under which light work may be conducted or limit the number of hours for light work, as defined by international standards on child labor. (31) In addition, the Labor Code applies only to workers who perform work under a formal employment agreement, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (3,31)

Children in Comoros are required to attend school only up to age 12. This standard makes children ages 13 through 15 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. (32)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws, investigates allegations of child labor, and refers cases of the worst forms of child labor for criminal investigation. (4,5,18)
Police Morals and Minors Brigade	Investigates allegations of child abuse, including child trafficking, and refers cases for prosecution. (4,17,33) Operate nationwide, covering the islands of Grande Comore, Anjouan, and Mohéli. Collaborates with the Services d'Ecoute . (8,34,35)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Prosecutes criminal cases, including those related to child trafficking. (4,27)
National Commission for Human Rights and Freedoms (CNDHL)	Receives complaints of the worst forms of child labor, investigates violations, and refers cases to the MOJ for prosecution. (12,34)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Comoros took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial and human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspectors	4 (4,12)	4 (35)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	No (4,13)	Yes (35)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (36)	Yes (35)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Unknown	Yes (35)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Comoros' workforce, which includes approximately 278,500 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Comoros would employ about 7 inspectors. (13,37-39) Reports indicate that there is a lack of training, equipment, transportation, and funding available to conduct child labor inspections and legal proceedings. (4,17,28,35,39,40)

Reports indicate that this is the second consecutive year that there has been an increase in complaint-based labor inspections carried out; however, the number of inspections remains insufficient, and none of the inspections carried out were due to complaints related to child labor. (35)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Comoros took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Morals and Minors Brigade that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating financial and human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (4)	No (35)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (4)	N/A (35)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (4)	No (35)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (4)	Unknown (35)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (4)	Unknown (35)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (4)	Unknown (35)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (4)	Unknown (35)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown (35)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (4)	Yes (8,35)

In 2018, the National Commission of Human Rights and Freedoms and the General Delegation of Human Rights organized a training for the police, gendarmerie, and army on children's rights on the island of Anjouan. (35)

Reports indicate that a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding inhibit criminal law enforcement efforts on the worst forms of child labor. (1,3-5,33) Due to limited financial and human resources, police are, in some cases, unable to open an investigation unless the victim can contribute a portion of the expenses associated with the investigation, including fuel and telephone fees. Thus, investigations are sometimes reactive and may depend on the victim's wealth and knowledge of the criminal justice system, making cases related to violations of the worst forms of child labor unlikely to be investigated. (3,29)

The Services d'Ecoute offices, which are funded by the Government of Comoros, investigate allegations of violence against children, including the worst forms of child labor, and refer perpetrators to criminal authorities for prosecution. (29,35)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee against Child Labor	Coordinates government efforts on child labor. Chaired by the MOL. (4,11,31)
Monitoring Group for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates actions against human trafficking and implements the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Action Plan. Headed by the Secretary General of the Government and includes representatives from the MOL, MOJ, CNDHL, police, international organizations, and NGOs. (3-5,33)

Research could not determine whether the National Committee against Child Labor and the Monitoring Group for the Fight against Trafficking in Persons were active or received funding during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementing a new national child labor action plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy for the Protection of Children (2016–2021)	Aims to improve child protection in Comoros; includes components to combat the worst forms of child labor, with a focus on child trafficking. Led by the Ministry of Health, Solidarity, Social Cohesion and Gender. (4,5,11,17) In 2018, established two pilot listening services to protect child victims of violence and created a database to harmonize the collection of information from the listening services. (8,35)
Strategy for Accelerated Growth and Sustainable Development (2015–2021)	Aims to reduce poverty, promote sustainable development, and increase access to social services. Integrates strategies that target child labor. (41,42) In 2018, the Strategy for Accelerated Growth and Sustainable Development was extended by the government until 2021. (29)

In 2018, the government did not adopt the draft National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. (43)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding and adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2015–2019)	Program that aims to guarantee labor rights and extend social protection programs for vulnerable populations, including by improving the operational environment for the elimination of child labor and its worst forms. (10) Overseen by the MOL and supported by the ILO. (44) In 2018, conducted a training to improve the capacity of tripartite constituents, including government officials and social partners, on ILO conventions. (45)
Services d'Ecoute †	Government program that provides listening and protection services to vulnerable and abused children. Comprises four government-operated units on the islands of Anjouan, Grande Comore, and Mohéli. (3,15,35,46,47) In 2018, added a second hotline and additional listening service units. (29,35)
UNICEF Country Program (2015–2021)	$20,885 UNICEF-funded program that supports the government's efforts to strengthen children's rights to survival, development, education, protection, and social inclusion. (1,29,41) In 2018, continued to fund assistance for victims of the worst forms of child labor operated by the Services d'Ecoute . (4,28,35)
Early Childhood Development Program*	$2,000,000 Dubai Cares-funded program that aims to improve school readiness and enhance lower primary learning outcomes and retention rates. The program is set to benefit at least 269,382 children and 1,725 teachers, school head teachers, and inspectors across all 394 primary schools in Comoros. (48,49)

* Program was established during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Comoros.

In 2018, the government continued to fund the Services d'Ecoute on all three islands, which conducted public awareness campaigns and worked closely with officials on Anjouan to ensure that families who send their children to stay with relatives comply with the requirement to have a judge approve the agreement. (15)

Although the government has programs that target child labor, their scope is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in agriculture and domestic work. (17,27,28,33) Comoros also lacks a specific program to assist children exploited by religious instructors.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Comoros (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions prescribe the number of hours per week that light work may be undertaken, and specify the conditions under which light work may be conducted, as defined by international standards on child labor.	2012 – 2018
	Ensure that the law's minimum age provisions and protections apply to children in unpaid or non-contractual work.	2015 – 2018
	Raise the compulsory education age to 15 to be equivalent to the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2018
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by conducting targeted inspections rather than performing inspections based solely on complaints received.	2017 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2018
	Increase labor inspections and carry out labor inspections to enforce compliance with laws that address child labor.	2018
	Publish information on the labor inspectorate's funding and increase the resources, training, available transportation and equipment, and number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws on child labor to provide adequate coverage of the workforce.	2009 – 2018
	Publish information on the number of criminal law investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions related to cases of the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2018
	Increase the resources, training, available transportation and equipment, and number of criminal law investigators responsible for enforcing laws on child labor.	2009 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that there are sufficient funds and no restrictions to investigate crimes related to the worst forms of child labor and allocate funds to conduct investigations.	2018
	Carry out criminal investigations to enforce compliance with the laws that address child labor.	2009 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that the National Committee Against Child Labor and the Monitoring Group for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons are active and receive adequate funding to fulfill their mission.	2014 – 2018
Government Policies	Adopt the draft National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor.	2016 – 2018
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including girls, by increasing school infrastructure and teacher availability.	2014 – 2018
	Implement and expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, particularly in agriculture and domestic work and under the tutelage of religious instructors.	2009 – 2018
	Implement programs to assist children exploited by religious instructors and return unaccompanied minors.	2016 – 2018

Congo, Democratic Republic of the

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT - EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, the Democratic Republic of the Congo made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government convicted two former militia leaders of war crimes, including for the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict. The Ministry of Mines also launched a traceability and monitoring system for artisanal mines to detect cases of child labor. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, the Democratic Republic of the Congo is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued a practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. Research indicates that labor inspectors failed to conduct any worksite inspections for the third year in a row. Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. In addition, members of the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo detained and sometimes committed extra-judicial killing of boys due to their perceived support or affiliation with non-state armed groups. Children in the Democratic Republic of the Congo engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the forced mining of gold, tin ore (cassiterite), tantalum ore (coltan), and tungsten ore (wolframite), and are used in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of forcible recruitment or abduction by non-state armed groups. Other gaps remain, including a lack of trained enforcement personnel, limited financial resources, poor coordination of government efforts to combat child labor, and laws mandating free primary education which are not enforced.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the forced mining of gold, tin ore (cassiterite), tantalum ore (coltan), and tungsten ore (wolframite), and are used in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of forcible recruitment or abduction by non-state armed groups. (1-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in the DRC. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	35.8 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	77.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	37.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		70.0

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding and raising livestock such as chickens, goats, and pigs, including feeding, cleaning cages or stalls, and disposing of waste (11,12,15) Hunting (10,15)
Industry	Mining,† including carrying heavy loads,‡ digging, sifting, sorting, transporting, using explosives, washing, and working underground† in the production of diamonds, copper, cobalt ore (heterogenite), gold, tin ore (cassiterite), tantalum ore (coltan), and tungsten ore (wolframite) (1,4,5,10,13,14,16-19) Working as auto mechanics and in carpentry and craft workshops (10) Working on construction sites and building roads (10)
Services	Domestic work (10,13,14) Driving motorcycle taxis (14) Street work, including vending, garbage scavenging, and carrying heavy loads (10,11,14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced mining of gold, tantalum (coltan), tin (cassiterite), and tungsten (wolframite), each sometimes as a result of debt bondage (3-5) Forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4,10,18,20-23) Use in illicit activities, including for spying, carrying stolen goods, and smuggling minerals (3,20,24,25) Forced recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict, including as checkpoint monitors, combatants, concubines, domestic workers, field hands, human shields, looters, porters, spies, and tax collectors at mining sites (3,6,7)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

International organizations estimate that there are between 125 and 150 indigenous and foreign non-state armed groups operating within the DRC. (3,27) Some of these armed groups—including Forces Démocratiques de Libération du Rwanda (FDLR), Mayi Mayi Mazembe, Kamuina Nsapu Mayi Mayi groups, Nduma Défense du Congo (NDC/Renove), Nyatura, and Rayia Mutomboki—continued to abduct and recruit children for use in armed conflict. (6,7,26) UNICEF and other international organizations estimate that between 40 and 70 percent of the militias in central DRC include children, some as young as age 5. (25) Roughly half of all children separated from armed groups were under the age of 15. (26) Limited research indicates that some members of the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (FARDC) may have collaborated with non-state armed groups known for recruiting children, including coordinating operations or selling arms and munitions. (3,6,27-29) Although there is strong evidence of children engaged in armed conflict, commercial sexual exploitation, and forced labor in mining, there is a lack of information on the overall nature of child labor because a comprehensive, stand-alone, child labor survey has never been conducted in the DRC. (12)

The government has mandated free primary education, but these laws were not implemented throughout the country, and some families are required to pay for school uniforms, tuition, and additional fees, which may be prohibitive. (1,10,12,16,19,23,30-32) Children may sometimes join armed groups or engage in child labor in artisanal mines hoping to earn money for school-related expenses. (1,4,16,17,25,30-32) Schools throughout the DRC are overcrowded, understaffed, structurally damaged by conflicts, occupied by internally displaced persons, or require students to travel long distances. (1,2,23,25,33-35) Children and teachers also face difficulty in accessing education due to their large-scale internal displacement and fear of violence, being forcibly recruited, or sexually assaulted at or on their way to school. (23,25,33-37) Non-state armed groups attacked 89 schools between January and September 2018, and FARDC attacked 3 schools. (26) Furthermore, an Ebola outbreak in northeastern DRC impacted some students’ access to education as families fled the affected areas or others kept their children at home for fear of transmission at school. Additionally, frequent teacher strikes occurred as a result of irregular payment of teacher salaries. (14,38)

UNICEF estimates that only 14 percent of children under age 5 have birth certificates. (39) Low rates of birth registration leave many children vulnerable to child labor because it makes age verification difficult during the FARDC recruitment campaigns and hinders efforts to identify and separate children associated with armed groups. (4,11,35)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The DRC has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the DRC's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including its compulsory education age.

In March 2018, the President signed into law a new Mining Code which was adopted by the National Assembly and Senate in December 2017. This law explicitly punishes individuals for using child labor in mining or selling ore mined with child labor. (43)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in the DRC may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Labor, and Social Welfare (MOL)	Investigates cases related to child labor, including its worst forms. (33) Refers cases of child labor to the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights (MOJ) for prosecution. (14)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights (MOJ)	Enforces criminal laws related to child labor. (11,14) Oversees five juvenile courts in Kinshasa and assists the International Criminal Court to conduct investigations and prosecute individuals who use children in armed conflict. (14,27,35)
Ministry of the Interior	Investigates allegations of human trafficking rings, refers child labor cases to the MOJ for prosecution, and provides ongoing support to victims. (14,27) In the case of the Police Unit for Child Protection and Combating Sexual Violence, combats conflict-related sexual and gender-based violence against women and children, protects children and women who are victims of physical abuse, and ensures the demobilization of children. (14,52,53) In 2018, became the primary coordination body for the trafficking in persons working group. (27)
Office of the President's Personal Representative on Sexual Violence and Child Recruitment	Supports and coordinates the efforts of government officials and international bodies to combat sexual violence and the use of children in armed conflict. (33,54) Compiles data on prosecutions in military and civil courts involving sexual violence against girls and maintains a hotline for reporting cases. (27)
Ministry of Defense (MOD)	Investigates and prosecutes in military courts military officials suspected of recruiting and using child soldiers, and leads the implementation of the Action Plan to End the Recruitment and Use of Child Soldiers. Through its Department of Child Protection, coordinates actions with UNICEF. (14) Through its Children Associated with Armed Forces and Armed Groups Unit, coordinates demobilization, disarmament, and reintegration activities. (27,55)
Ministry of Gender and Family (MOGF)	Oversees and investigates cases related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (14)
Ministry of Social Affairs, Solidarity, and Humanitarian Action (MINASA)	Monitors humanitarian programs and coordinates with key actors to promote social services to vulnerable groups, including street children, human trafficking victims, and child soldiers. (14)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in the DRC may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of the DRC's workforce, which includes over 31 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, the DRC would employ about 784 labor inspectors. (56,57) In addition, the government did not allocate funds for enforcement agencies to conduct inspections or investigations, thereby limiting its ability to adequately enforce child labor law provisions. (14,26,33)

Implementing decrees for the Child Protection Code have not been adopted. In addition, penalties for criminal violations related to the worst forms of child labor—including the use of children in armed conflict—are 1 to 3 years of imprisonment with fines as high as $130, which are insufficient to serve as deterrents. (3,21,41,43,58)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in the DRC took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the allocation of financial resources.

‡ Data are from January 1, 2018 to September 20, 2018.

In 2018, the government made efforts to hold perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor accountable. The Ministry of the Interior identified two child victims of sex trafficking, who were repatriated to the Republic of the Congo by the Ministry of Gender and Family. (27) In South Kivu, a military tribunal sentenced Lieutenant Colonel Maro Ntumwa, former leader of a Mai Mai group known for using children in armed conflict, to 20 years in prison for crimes against humanity and war crimes, including the sexual slavery of girls. (61) In North Kivu, a military tribunal convicted Dominique Buyenge of war crimes for his role in the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict and sentenced him to life imprisonment; and hearings began in the trial of Ntabo Ntaberi Sheka, a militia leader known for the forced recruitment of boys. (7,64) Furthermore, testimony continued at the

Congo, Democratic Republic of the

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT - EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

International Criminal Court against Bosco Ntaganda, former leader of the Forces Patriotiques pour la Libération du Congo (FPLC). He is accused of crimes against humanity, including the forced recruitment of children in armed conflict and sexual slavery of girls. (65,66)

During the reporting period, an international organization verified two cases of children used—but not recruited—in support roles by the FARDC, one for sexual slavery and domestic work and the other for forced labor. Although the commander allegedly responsible for these offenses was redeployed to a different regiment, he was not otherwise held accountable. (3) However, impunity remained a concern as the government did not consistently hold perpetrators accountable, and some officials may be complicit in helping perpetrators avoid prosecution. (3)

A lack of coordination among ministries in conducting investigations, collecting data, and providing services to victims hinders the government's ability to adequately combat the worst forms of child labor. (3,27) Research indicates that the justice system lacks the independence, knowledge, capacity, and resources to investigate and prosecute child labor violations. (4,21,33)

Members of both the national police and government-backed non-state armed groups carried out extrajudicial killings of civilians in central DRC, including children, due to their perceived support or affiliation with non-state armed groups. (6,23,26,28,33,67,68) The government detained 125 children, including 6 girls for their alleged association with armed groups for periods between 3 to 48 days, despite a 2012 directive that requires that all children detained for their association with armed groups be immediately transferred to the UN. (26,33) Police in Kinshasa also killed, beat, or forcibly disappeared teenage boys known to support opposition groups or those who had refused to disrupt opposition-led protests through violent means in exchange for pay from state security agents. (69)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (NCCL)	Oversees the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor and monitors its implementation. (68,70) Led by the MOL and includes representatives from 12 other ministries, local NGOs, and civil society. (14,68,70) Although it did not formally meet in 2018 due to a lack of funding, the NCCL created plans for a national road map to combat child labor and a nationwide conference in 2020. (27)
Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission (UEPN-DDR)	Coordinates the identification, verification, and release of children associated with armed groups, and refers them to social services providers for family reunification and reinsertion by collaborating with the MOGF, the UN Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO), UNICEF, and NGOs. (14,27,55) Led by the MOD's Children Associated with Armed Forces and Armed Groups unit. (27,55) Between 2015 and 2018, secured the release of 17,141 children, who received social services through UNICEF and NGOs. (14,71)
Joint Technical Working Group (JTWG)	Coordinates the implementation of the Child Soldiers Action Plan and activities at the provincial level in North Kivu, South Kivu, and Orientale provinces. Led by the MOGF and includes representatives from four other ministries and the UN. (3,5,72) In 2018, met monthly and developed a 2018 road map for ending recruitment of children, held 7 workshops on conducting age verification procedures, which resulted in the removal of 146 children from the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (FARDC) prior to training. Established a new JTWG in Kasai Province, revitalized the JTWG in Kasai Central, and negotiated the release of children from detention centers. (3,26,27)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Working Group on Trafficking in Persons	Analyzes human trafficking trends and discusses strategies to develop comprehensive human trafficking legislation and an inter-ministerial coordinating body. Led by the International Organization for Migration (IOM) and the U.S. Embassy; includes representatives from relevant ministries, civil society organizations, law enforcement officials, and other Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) officials. (14) In 2018, the Ministry of the Interior drafted a bill to formalize the working group and encourage passage of a draft human trafficking bill, but both were pending at year's end. (27)
Inter-ministerial Commission (IMC) Responsible for Addressing the Issue of Child Labor in Mines and on Mine Sites in DRC	Coordinates efforts to eradicate child labor in the DRC's mining sector and serves as an advisor to other ministries combating child labor in mining. (5) In conjunction with the IOM and international donors, also validated 93 additional mines as conflict and child labor free during the reporting period, bringing the total number of validated tin, tungsten, and tantalum sites to 401 and gold sites validated to 56. (27) A meeting of donors to solicit funding for the establishment of a Zero Tolerance of Children in Mining Special Fund did not occur in 2018 as scheduled. (14,73)

Overlapping objectives and duplication of efforts, combined with a lack of resources and trained personnel, have impeded the government's ability to coordinate actions to combat the worst forms of child labor. (23,27) In addition, the Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission is meant to take the lead on child soldier issues; however, research indicates that, in practice, this did not always happen. (27)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including whether relevant policies were active.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2012–2020)	Developed by the NCCL in consultation with UNICEF to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the DRC by 2020. (10,74) Promotes the enforcement of laws prohibiting the worst forms of child labor; universal primary education; monitoring and evaluation efforts; and improved coordination of stakeholders. Raises awareness, empowers communities to stop child labor practices, and provides prevention and reintegration services. (10,74) No activities were implemented in 2018 due to a lack of funding. (14)
Action Plan to End the Recruitment and Use of Child Soldiers (Child Soldiers Action Plan)	UN-backed plan that aims to prevent and end the use of children in armed forces, provide support and reintegration services, pursue accountability for perpetrators, and create a partnership framework for the UN and the government. (75,76) Includes standard operating procedures for age verification to help the FARDC avoid underage recruitment. (2,3,5) In 2018, provided training to members of the FARDC and police officers. (26) MONUSCO and the government worked with leaders of non-state armed groups to sign action plans to end the recruitment of children and establish an implementing mechanism; as of March 2019, 14 additional non-state armed groups had signed similar pledges. (7,27)
UEPN-DDR's National Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Plan (PNDDR) DDR III	Aims to provide rehabilitation and reintegration services to demobilized combatants, including children. (3,77-79) Implemented with support from the UN and international partners and within the 2013 Framework Agreement for Peace, Security, and Cooperation for the DRC and the Great Lakes Region. (78,80,81) Requires children separated from armed groups to be immediately transferred to UNICEF. (27) In 2018, UNICEF, through its partners, provided social services to 2,253 children formerly associated with armed groups. (26)
National Sectoral Strategy to Combat Child Labor in Artisanal Mines and Artisanal Mining Sites (2017–2025)	Ministry of Mines policy that aims to eradicate child labor in artisanal mines by 2025 by strengthening laws, improving data collection on the prevalence of child labor in the mining sector, promoting responsible sourcing regulations, improving child protection, and building stakeholder capacity to address these issues. (82) In 2018, launched a traceability and monitoring system to track minerals mined in artisanal sites, and the governor of Lualaba Province in the Katanga region made a public announcement prohibiting children from working in mines. (33,83)
Inter-Ministerial Commission's Triennial Action Plan (2017–2020)	Seeks to eradicate child labor in mining by 2020, particularly in the tin, tantalum, tungsten, cobalt, and copper sectors by monitoring existing policies and strengthening measures to remove children from mining sites. (84) Funding is being solicited for implementation of this policy. (73)

Policy	Description
National Action Plan Against Sexual Violence in Conflict	MOGF policy in support of UN Resolution 1325 on women, peace, and security that aims to combat sexual violence against girls associated with armed groups and ensure prosecution of perpetrators. (85) In 2018, validated the National Action Plan of Resolution 1325 and an associated coordinating committee to oversee implementation. Aims to prevent the recruitment of children, particularly girls, into armed groups, and provide social services upon their release. (86)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (20,21,87,88)

Although limited activities have been carried out under the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor, it has not been formally adopted by the government. As a result, its implementation has been severely constrained by a lack of dedicated funding and poor coordination. (19,23,27)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem and in all relevant sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-funded Projects	Includes Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP 16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor, a $20 million project implemented by the ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, and strengthen policies and government capacity to combat child labor and forced labor. In 2018, MAP16 completed work on a three-country study of forced child labor in conflict zones. (89) Also includes Combatting Child Labor in the Democratic Republic of the Congo's Cobalt Industry (2018–2021),* a $2.5 million project implemented by the ILO to reduce child labor in the mining sector and improve working conditions. (90,91) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
World Bank-funded Projects	Projects in support of re-establishing peace and stability. Includes Reinsertion and Reintegration Project (2015–2019), a $21 million project that aims to assist with social reintegration for the child combatants identified as part of DDR III; Human Development Systems Strengthening (2014–2020), a $46.8 million project that aims to increase birth registration and improve school infrastructure; and Education Quality Improvement Project (EQUIP) (2017–2021), a $100 million project that aims to improve the quality of primary school education. (81,92-96) In 2018, the Human Development Systems Strengthening project trained 1,245 education and health workers on data collection. EQUIP identified all 1,350 schools that will participate in the pilot and integrated 1,488 previously unpaid primary school teachers into the civil service. (97,98) The Reinsertion and Reintegration Project has also demobilized a total of 4,700 combatants since it began implementation in 2016. (99)
Programs to Support Vulnerable Children†	Government and donor-supported projects that aim to improve child protection. Includes a $4 million Government of Japan-funded program that aims to provide education, vocational training, reintegration kits, and school feeding programs to 13,000 children and construct a training center for youth in North Kivu Province; a $97 million Government of Canada-funded program that aims to assist 95,000 at-risk youth living near mining sites; and a MINASA and NGO program to reintegrate children removed from the street into communities and reunify children formerly associated with armed groups with their families. (3,14,27,100) At least 4,977 children received temporary care from social services providers during the reporting period. (27)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (101,102)

The scope of existing child disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration programs is insufficient; the entire process is slow, funding is inadequate, and collaboration between partners is weak. (3,21,30,35,103) Children separated from armed groups remain vulnerable to re-recruitment and stigmatization, and girls, who make up an estimated 30 to 40 percent of children associated with armed groups, need to be specifically targeted in the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process. (5,30,35,103-105) Research also indicates that the government needs to strengthen its efforts to assist street children and implement programs specifically designed to assist children engaged in forced labor in agriculture, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (4,21,22,35)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the DRC (Table II).

Table II. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish by law a compulsory education age that extends to the minimum age for employment.	2013 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo does not support non-state armed groups that perpetuate the worst forms of child labor, including child soldiering.	2017 – 2018
	Issue appropriate decrees to ensure that enacted laws are implemented, including those that provide for free education throughout the country and require demobilized children to be handed over to child protection actors for social services and reintegration assistance.	2009 – 2018
	Publish data related to enforcement efforts, including the number of violations found, investigations conducted, penalties imposed, and penalties collected.	2009 – 2018
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice and ensure that inspectors receive adequate training and funding to carry out their duties.	2011 – 2018
	Ensure that inspectors have adequate resources and transportation to conduct inspections throughout the country.	2015 – 2018
	Increase penalties for the worst forms of child labor so they are sufficiently stringent to serve as a deterrent.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that judges, prosecutors, and investigators receive adequate training and resources to investigate and prosecute child labor crimes.	2011 – 2018
	Improve coordination among relevant criminal enforcement agencies in conducting investigations, collecting data, and providing services to victims.	2017 – 2018
	Cease the practice of subjecting children to physical violence and detention for their alleged association with armed groups, and ensure that enforcement officials do not carry out extrajudicial killings.	2015 – 2018
Coordination	Improve coordination among relevant ministries to avoid duplication of efforts and ensure that they receive adequate resources and trained personnel to combat the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission is able to coordinate the government's DDR III program as intended.	2015 – 2018
Government Policies	Ensure the implementation of relevant policies.	2011 – 2018
Social Programs	Conduct a stand-alone child labor survey.	2013 – 2018
	Improve access to education for all children by regulating classroom size, training additional teachers, building additional schools, and ensuring that schools are safe and students are not subjected to sexual abuse or forcible recruitment while at or on their way to school. Make additional efforts to prevent schools from being attacked and occupied by armed groups.	2012 – 2018
	Ensure that all children are registered at birth or have identification documents.	2012 – 2018
	Expand efforts to address the needs of demobilized children and incorporate stigmatization, gender, and re-recruitment concerns into programs to reintegrate such children.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that existing social programs are implemented as intended and establish or expand efforts to address exploitative forced child labor in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2018

In 2018, the Republic of the Congo made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, enforcement agencies disrupted multiple sex trafficking networks involving children, including identifying at least seven child sex trafficking victims and one child victim of forced criminality. The government engaged with the Government of Benin to implement a bilateral agreement to combat human trafficking. However, children in the Republic of the Congo are involved in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The government has yet to accede to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons and there is no mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor at the national level, including the worst forms of child labor. The government did not formally extend the National Action Plan to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons, which expired in 2017. The government did not fund any social services programs during the reporting period to address the worst forms of child labor present in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, information on children's work is extremely limited because there has never been a national child labor survey or similar research conducted in the Republic of the Congo.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Republic of the Congo (ROC) engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in ROC. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	27.9 (286,137)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	90.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	29.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		70.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Deuxième Enquête Démographique et de Santé du Congo (EDSC-II), 2011–2012. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity

	Forced labor in farming, including in the production of cocoa, and in domestic work, working in stone quarries, fishing, and market vending, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,3,7,12)
	Forced labor of indigenous Baka children in farming, including in the production of manioc, and in fishing, hunting, and domestic work (3,7,13)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2018, there were reports of children who belong to minority indigenous populations forced to perform work in agriculture, where they worked long hours in hot weather and experienced dehydration. (4) Within ROC, internal child trafficking brings children from rural areas to urban centers for forced labor in domestic work and market vending. The majority of foreign children subject to forced domestic work or commercial sexual exploitation in ROC originate from Benin and the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and other West African nations. (2,4,13-15) A 2015 report funded by the UNODC found that most victims of commercial sexual exploitation as a result of child trafficking were between the ages of 9 and 11. (13) However, information on children’s work is limited because there has never been a national child labor survey or similar research conducted in ROC. (3)

The Constitution stipulates that education is free until age 16; however, some parents are required to pay for books, uniforms, and school fees, which may limit access to education for some children. (3,16,17) Over-enrollment, the absence of sanitation facilities, a lack of teachers, and sexual abuse in schools also pose barriers to education for some children, particularly in refugee or IDP camps and non-urban areas. (3,4,16,18,19) Indigenous children throughout the country may experience discrimination, linguistic barriers, prohibitive school fees, and long distances to schools. (4,17,20,21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

ROC has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in ROC’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for voluntary recruitment into state armed forces.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

A draft revision to the Hazardous Work List of 1953 has been pending since 2012. In early 2019, the Parliamentary Committee reviewed the draft of an anti-trafficking law that includes more severe penalties for offenders, and which has been awaiting adoption since 2014. The law will be adopted in late 2019. (3,13,29-32) In addition, the Labor Code does not apply to children who are under age 18 and perform hazardous work, but who do not have an employment contract. (9) National laws do not set a minimum age for voluntary recruitment into the armed forces. (21,23) Article 60 of the Child Protection Code does not meet international standards because it requires either the particular listed means or movement of the child for child trafficking to have occurred.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws. (17) Conducts initial inspections before referring cases to the MOJ for prosecution. (3)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Affairs, Humanitarian Action and Solidarity (MSA)	Promotes the rights of vulnerable groups and contributes to anti-trafficking efforts by providing social welfare assistance to victims. (3,17) May conduct initial inspections before referring cases to the MOJ for prosecution. (3) Through its Director General of Social Affairs, oversees government strategy to combat human trafficking. (13) Through its Task Force, leads efforts to combat human trafficking in Pointe-Noire, designates foster families to receive victims, and assists in repatriating or reintegrating victims. (3)
Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation	Coordinates with MSA in repatriating victims of child trafficking and monitors bilateral and multilateral agreements with neighboring countries to combat human trafficking. (33)

The Ministry of Justice and Human Rights (MOJ) and the National Police lead law enforcement efforts, while the MOL and the Ministry of Social Affairs, Humanitarian Action and Solidarity (MSA) conduct initial investigations and provide support to victims after they are rescued. (4) Although there is a line item in the MSA's budget for activities to combat human trafficking, funds are disbursed irregularly or not at all. (13)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in ROC took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a functional complaint mechanism.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of the ROC's workforce, which includes more than 2 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, the ROC would employ roughly 137 labor inspectors. (34,35) Training opportunities for labor inspectors are very limited due to a lack of resources, particularly for lower level staff. (13) In addition, the government lacks a formal process for referring children found in situations of child labor to appropriate social services providers. (4)

Due to a lack of staff, labor inspections were not conducted in some parts of the country, especially in rural areas. (3,4,36) In addition, inspectors do not have access to government vehicles and rely on the employers whose businesses are being inspected to provide transportation. (36) Furthermore, existing penalties for the worst forms of child labor may not be severe enough to serve as deterrents because they are not commensurate with penalties for other serious crimes. (9,23)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in ROC took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, the government identified eight child trafficking victims. (4,30) In one case of child sex trafficking, the government reported that it provided at least seven victims with vocational retraining, medical assistance, and psycho-social services, including family and psychological counseling in Brazzaville. In another case, the government temporarily detained one child from the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC); it later identified the child as a victim of forced criminality and facilitated the child's repatriation to his parents, but the government did not report providing care. (30,31) In both cases, the alleged ringleaders were deported, and in one case, the police detained a man who continues to remain in custody. (4) In general, the MSA and the MOJ experienced difficulties in prosecuting offenders due to a weak judicial system, poor record keeping, a large backlog of cases in the high court, courts that convene infrequently and irregularly, and criminal law enforcement officials' and judges' unequal knowledge of anti-trafficking legislation and the Child Protection Code. (2,13) Rather than prosecuting child trafficking cases, the MSA Task Force may summon the accused, which often results in restitution for the victims, but fails to deter the perpetrators from human trafficking. (21)

The MSA, MOL, MOJ, and the National Police work together to enforce criminal laws against child trafficking; however, their efforts were limited to Brazzaville and Pointe-Noire. In addition, the National Police sometimes require payment to assist in operations to rescue victims of child trafficking. (3, 13) In 2018, the media reported that police allegedly arrested 30 females from the DRC and 41 female ROC citizens, potentially including children, for prostitution. (30,31,40) In addition, a senior government official within the MSA, tasked with combating child trafficking, was accused of complicity in a child trafficking ring that allegedly sold infants to adults outside of the ROC. The government conducted an investigation into the official and cleared her of wrongdoing in late 2018. (13,30)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of adequate resources and staffing.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Anti-Trafficking Coordinating Committee for Pointe-Noire (MSA Task Force)	With UNICEF's support, coordinates all efforts to combat West African child trafficking in Pointe-Noire. Comprising government representatives and civil society organizations. (2,3,33) Prevents and prosecutes cases of human trafficking and provides support to victims through placement with foster families. (41) During the reporting period, the committee provided funding for foster homes for child trafficking victims. (31) In December 2018, trained foreign diplomats on trafficking in persons topics. In addition, during the reporting period, organized trafficking in persons awareness events. (42)

Congo, Republic of the

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, the government provided funding to three shelters for vulnerable populations, including victims of child trafficking. (31) Due to an absence of funding, the MSA Task Force's activities have been limited since 2016; the Task Force owes a total of approximately $805 to foster families for victim care provided in prior years. In addition, a local NGO that initiates investigations has started referring cases to the Beninese consulate rather than the MSA Task Force because the majority of victims are Beninese and the MSA Task Force is unable to provide the NGO with financial support for its work. (2,13) Furthermore, the MSA Task Force has three vacant seats on the committee, and there is no coordinating body to oversee efforts to combat child trafficking or child labor at the national level. (3,23,41)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including developing and implementing a new national child labor action plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (2014–2017)	Aims to establish a National Commission to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons, develop systems for monitoring and evaluation, strengthen the legal framework, and provide social services to victims of human trafficking. (43) Included public awareness campaigns, training for law enforcement officials, and improvement of enforcement activities related to child trafficking. (3) Research indicates that the government continued to use this plan in 2018 without formally extending or updating it. (30)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (13,15)

During the reporting period, the government took steps to implement a bilateral agreement with the DRC that prevents minors from entering ROC without the accompaniment of their parents. In addition, the government engaged with the Government of Benin to implement the September 2011 Cooperation Agreement between the two countries to combat human trafficking. (4,42) The government failed to allocate resources to the National Action Plan, thus the Plan was not implemented during the reporting period. (13) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Policy (2015–2025), and research found no evidence of a general policy on child labor. (44)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Safety Net Program (LISUNGI) and Additional Financing (2014–2019)	$27 million World Bank-funded project that grants improved access to health and education services to poor families in Brazzaville, Cuvette, and Pointe-Noire. (45) Includes a cash transfer program for 127 households conditioned upon regular health visits and that all children maintain an 80 percent school attendance rate each month. (4,45) In 2018, the government provided logistical support for implementation, including providing conference rooms and support staff. During the reporting period, organized three public awareness campaigns. (4)
McGovern-Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program (2017–2022)*	$30 million USDA-funded, 5-year project implemented by the WFP in Bouenza, Cuvette, Lekoumou, Likouala, Plateaux, Sangha, and Pool. Aims to improve literacy of school-aged children, increase healthy dietary practices, build capacity of government institutions, improve policy and regulatory framework, and increase government support and engagement of local organizations and community groups. (46) The project provides nutritional benefits to nearly 100,000 school children and operates in 470 primary schools, including in indigenous population preparatory schools in Sangha and Likouala regions. In 2018, trained 300 government staff. (30,46)

Program	Description
Observe, Reflect, Act Schools†	Ministry of Education program supported by UNICEF, the EU, and WFP to improve access to education for indigenous children through a 2- or 3-year preparatory program. (20,47,48) Identifies children who should be added to the civil register; provides school supplies to students, and raises awareness among indigenous families about the importance of education. (47,49) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Observe, Reflect, Act School program during the reporting period.

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of the Republic of the Congo.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (16)

Existing government programs are not sufficient to address the scope of child labor in all relevant sectors, such as domestic work or commercial sexual exploitation, in ROC. (3)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in ROC (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that law prohibits all trafficking of children regardless of the means used or whether the trafficking involved movement of the child.	2018
	Ensure that the Labor Code applies to all children regardless of the existence of an employment contract.	2018
	Ensure that the minimum age for voluntary military service is no lower than age 16.	2015 – 2018
Enforcement	Publish information related to labor and law enforcement statistics, including the funding level for the labor inspectorate, the number and type of labor inspections conducted, violations found, penalties imposed and collected for child labor violations, number of criminal investigations conducted, criminal violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions secured.	2014 – 2018
	Institutionalize training for labor inspectors, investigators, and law enforcement, including at the beginning of their employment and through periodic refresher courses.	2014 – 2018
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by ensuring that inspectors have adequate resources to conduct routine inspections throughout the country; ensure that penalties for the worst forms of child labor are commensurate with penalties for other serious crimes; and ensure that penalties are applied in accordance with the law.	2015 – 2018
	Establish a complaint mechanism and reciprocal referral mechanism between both criminal and labor authorities and social services.	2017 – 2018
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice and ensure that they receive adequate resources to adequately enforce labor laws throughout the country.	2010 – 2018
	Remove barriers to enforcement and prosecution by strengthening the judicial system, training prosecutors on existing laws, ensuring that police participation in rescue operations do not require additional payment, and allocating resources to enforcement agencies and the judges responsible for child protection cases.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that children are not detained for their involvement in child labor, including prostitution.	2018
	Establish a formal referral mechanism between enforcement agencies and social services providers to address the needs of children found in situations of child labor.	2018
	Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies receive adequate resources and staffing to function as intended.
Establish a coordinating mechanism to combat child labor at the national level, including all its worst forms.		2009 – 2018
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing policies.	2009 – 2018
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor, such as domestic work, and the worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation.	2013 – 2018
Social Programs	Conduct a national child labor survey or similar research to determine the activities carried out by working children to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that social programs are implemented as intended.	2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Improve access to education for all children including in non-urban areas, regardless of refugee status or ethnicity, by eliminating all school-related fees, regulating classroom size, removing linguistic barriers, providing sanitation facilities, building additional schools, training additional teachers, and ensuring that students are not subject to sexual abuse.	2009 – 2018
	Allocate funding to social programs that address child labor, including its worst forms.	2012 – 2018
	Institute programs to address all relevant sectors of child labor, including forced labor in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2018

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Cook Islands, the government made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in 2018. The government ratified ILO Convention C. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor and made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period. However, the government has not established adequate legal protections to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The law does not criminally prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, or pornographic performances, or the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Cook Islands.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Cook Islands is self-governing in free association with New Zealand, and it follows a combination of its own laws and some of the laws of New Zealand and the United Kingdom that were enacted prior to self-government in 1965. (1,2)

Since 1988, no treaty signed, ratified, accepted, approved, or acceded to by New Zealand extends to the Cook Islands, unless New Zealand acted expressly on behalf of the Cook Islands. (2) The Cook Islands has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). In 2018, the Cook Islands ratified ILO Convention 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (3) However, gaps exist in the Cook Islands' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 30 of the Employment Relations Act (4)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 73(2) of the Employment Relations Act (4)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 73 of the Employment Relations Act; Articles 52–53 of the Industrial and Labor Ordinance (4,5)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 3 of the Prohibition of Forced or Compulsory Labor Ordinance; Article 1091 of the Crimes Amendment Act (6,7)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 1091 of the Crimes Amendment Act (7)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Articles 36–37 of the Government of New Zealand's Defence Act (8)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 23.1 of the Education Act (9)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 22.2 of the Education Act (9)

* No conscription (8)

† No standing military (10)

The Employment Relations Act prohibits children younger than age 13 from being employed. (4) The Act also prohibits a school-aged person, defined as ages 13 to 16, from working during normal school hours, working for more than 10 hours a week outside of school hours, or doing work that is not considered light work. (4) However, the legal framework does not determine the activities in which light work is permitted. (4) The Cook Islands does not criminalize the use of children in illicit activities, particularly the production and trafficking of drugs. The law does not criminally prohibit non-state armed groups from recruiting children under age 18. (8) There are no armed forces in the Cook Islands. New Zealand is responsible for the defense of the territory at its request and consultation. (10)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Internal Affairs (INTAFF)	Enforces labor laws through the Labor Division and provides child services. Lead agency for implementing the UN CRC. (2, 11)
Cook Islands Police Service	Enforces child labor laws. (2, 11)

Labor law enforcement on the Cook Islands lies with the Ministry of Internal Affairs' (INTAFF) Labor Division's four labor inspectors. The Labor Division is responsible for monitoring work place entitlements and work safety standards. (2)

Labor Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for labor law enforcement actions to address child labor.

Criminal Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for criminal law enforcement actions to address child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, the Government of the Cook Islands has established policies related to child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Cook Islands National Youth Policy (2015–2020)	Identifies priority areas for youth, including education and work opportunities, health, and youth risk and resilience. (12) This policy was active in 2018. (13)
National Policy Framework for Children (2017–2021)	Provides a framework to protect the rights of children with outcomes focused on their health, education, safety, economic opportunities, and international connectivity. Aims to protect the rights of children by strengthening data collection on children to improve the government's understanding of child abuse and children's experience in the legal system; and to improve collaboration between the government, parents, and the community. (14) This policy was active in 2018. (13)
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)†	A multinational strategic framework program consisting of 14 South Pacific nations to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (15)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The Cook Islands' National Statistics Office has planned and budgeted its first national ILO-supported Labor Force Survey, to occur in 2019. (2)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in the Cook Islands (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the Crimes Act addresses and criminalizes commercial child sexual exploitation, including using, procuring, and offering a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, and pornographic performances.	2012 – 2018
	Ensure that the law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018

In 2018, Costa Rica made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched new cooperative efforts with nongovernmental organizations to develop projects to prevent child labor as part of its Roadmap against Child Labor and the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Costa Rica also amended its Penal Code to strengthen the provisions related to child trafficking, and the Ministry of Labor and Social Security collaborated with the International Labor Organization to develop a statistical tool that will identify child labor risks. Furthermore, the National Child Welfare Agency issued and trained relevant agencies on a protocol for the care of child victims, and the President signed an Executive Order authorizing the countrywide expansion of childcare centers for children of migrant farm workers. However, children in Costa Rica engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. Existing social programs are insufficient to reach all child laborers, and resources for the government’s child labor law enforcement agencies remain inadequate.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Costa Rica engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. (1-9) Costa Rica’s National Institute of Statistics, which carries out annual, national-level surveys, last included a child labor module in its annual survey in 2016. (3,10,11) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Costa Rica.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The Ministry of Labor’s Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (OATIA) noted that working children in Costa Rica are employed in agriculture, fishing, construction, and the informal sector. Children in Costa Rica, including migrant children, are also subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, particularly in tourist destinations and border areas. (5-7,27) In 2018, the National Child Welfare Agency identified 43 minors in situations of commercial sexual exploitation, and an additional 4 minors were identified as victims of human trafficking and labor exploitation. (1) Migrant children, typically from Nicaragua, are subjected to forced labor in agriculture, domestic servitude, and commercial sexual exploitation. (27)

Although preschool and general basic education are free and compulsory, children in rural areas, girls, LGBTI youth and children from indigenous and Afro-descendant communities face challenges, such as discrimination and gender stereotypes, in accessing and completing their education. (1,5,28-30)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Costa Rica has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3)

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Costa Rica’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of non-state military recruitment of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 78 and 92 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (31)

† No standing military (38)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (22,31,38)

In 2018, Costa Rica passed laws revising Articles 5 and 6 of the Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Law and Articles 172 and 189 bis of the Penal Code to strengthen the provisions related to child trafficking and to align with standards set forth in the Palermo Protocol. In particular, the amendments clarify that neither force, fraud, coercion, nor proof of movement are required to establish human trafficking for child victims of trafficking. (1,27,36,41)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority and operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MTSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MTSS)	Investigates reports of child labor, including hazardous and forced child labor. (20) Protects adolescent labor rights by conducting school and workplace visits, providing referrals to government services, and writing socio-labor studies and technical reports to inform policies and programs. (21,31)
Attorney General's Office	Enforces criminal laws protecting children, including laws prohibiting forced child labor, human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the use of children in illicit activities. Coordinates with the Judicial Investigative Police, Immigration Police, Uniformed Police, and municipal police forces, as well as administers the following investigative and prosecutorial units: Specialized Prosecutorial Unit against Trafficking in Persons, Organized Crime Unit, Specialized Prosecutorial Unit for Gender Issues, and Juvenile Justice Unit. Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Costa Rica took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority and operations of the MTSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including sufficient allocation of financial resources and penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, the MTSS worked with the ILO to develop the “Risk Module for Identifying Child Labor,” a statistical tool that will identify child labor risks and assist in prioritizing preventative efforts in vulnerable areas. The tool will be deployed in 2019, with Costa Rica being one of the first countries to employ it. (1)

During the reporting period, the MTSS identified 42 cases of child labor law violations and referred 8 of these cases to the judiciary for employer non-compliance. Three minors were also removed from child labor situations and referred to social services by the MTSS’ OATIA. (1) In addition, the government collected approximately $3,500 in penalties for child labor violations found in previous years, carried out 6,259 routine inspections, and continued to carry out targeted labor inspections in sectors or geographical areas known to be vulnerable to labor violations. (1) Moreover, OATIA conducted workshops for labor inspectors on child labor, hazardous work, and the worst forms of child labor in the Huetar Norte, Central, and Huetar Cariba regions, with plans to cover the remaining regions of the country in 2019. New inspectors from three inspection regions also received training on child labor issues in collaboration with OATIA. (1)

Enforcement of child labor laws, particularly in rural areas, remained challenging due to insufficient funds for travel, facilities, and per diem costs incurred during inspections. (1, 18) Government monitoring and enforcement of child labor laws is also limited in the informal sector, in which most child labor occurs, especially hazardous adolescent work. (2, 10, 26, 43, 44) Informal work is more common in agriculture than in other sectors in Costa Rica. (2)

Costa Rica significantly increased its number of labor inspectors from 2017 to 2018, improving the ratio of inspectors to number of inspections conducted; however, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Costa Rica’s workforce, which includes more than 2 million workers. According to the ILO’s technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Costa Rica would employ about 148 inspectors. (45-47)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Costa Rica took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	N/A (18)	No (1)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (18)	Yes (1)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (18)	Yes (1)
Number of Investigations	342 (18)	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	23 (18)	13 (1)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	3 (42)	2 (1)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (42)	Unknown

In 2018, Costa Rica’s Supreme Court approved the Judicial Branch Action Plan, which outlines actions the judiciary will take over 2 years to improve how human trafficking offenses are addressed, including strengthening the capacity of prosecutors and investigators, training judicial authorities, and developing strategies to raise public awareness of human trafficking cases. (27)

In 2018, prosecutors received training on the worst forms of child labor, including on the commercial sexual exploitation of children and on trafficking in persons and alien smuggling. (1) However, the Prosecutorial Training Unit found the training insufficient, because not all prosecutors in all parts of the country were trained, and the Unit is planning a new course for 2019 to train more prosecutors on the worst forms of child labor. (1)

Although seven individuals were convicted in 2018 for crimes involving the worst forms of child labor, which including two cases of human trafficking for the commercial sexual exploitation of children and one case of human trafficking of a child for labor exploitation research could not identify the complete number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions related to violations of the worst forms of child labor (42) The Prosecutorial Trafficking and Smuggling Unit also reported 11 child trafficking investigations, 13 child trafficking violations, and 2 prosecutions and convictions for alleged child labor crimes in 2018. (1) Costa Rica increased its number of investigations into cases involving sexual relations with minors and remunerated sex with a minor, and provided more complete data on both of these crimes. In 2018, 22 individuals were sentenced for each of these crimes, but it was not clear how many of these cases involved child commercial sexual exploitation. (27)

Reports indicate that the judiciary, prosecutors, and the police require additional staff, training, and resources to identify victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, refer victims to appropriate social services, and investigate, prosecute, and convict perpetrators. (6,27,48) Costa Rica also lacks a database to track human trafficking cases, making it difficult to target enforcement and prevention efforts. (27)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including sufficient resources to ensure coordination among relevant agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MTSS Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (OATIA)	Coordinates government policies and programs to combat child labor. (2,4,22) Oversees the Inter-Institutional Coordinating Protocol for the Protection of Working Minors. (22,49) In 2018, OATIA provided social services to three minors removed from child labor and provided trainings to government officials in various parts of the country. (1)
National Committee for the Elimination of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Work	Develops and promotes policy and program initiatives focused on eliminating child labor and regulating adolescent work. Overseen by OATIA and includes a technical secretariat that comprises representatives from various sectors. (4,22)
National Child Welfare Agency (PANI)	Ensures that child labor victims receive social services, including temporary shelter, legal advice, counseling, and reintegration into the educational system. (31) In 2018, PANI established the “Protocol for the Care of Minor Victims and Survivors of Trafficking in Persons” and trained staff on the protocol. PANI also conducted child labor awareness campaigns for minors in at-risk communities and created the Institutional Technical Committee to generate and implement an institutional action plan focusing on prevention, assistance, and training on human trafficking. (1)
National Coalition against Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons (CONATT)	Leads government efforts to combat human trafficking and coordinates with OATIA and the National Commission Against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents (CONACOES). (6,18) In 2018, CONATT implemented a training program in schools to inform teachers and students of the risks of human trafficking and child labor. (27)
CONACOES	Prevents the commercial sexual exploitation of children and provides assistance and protection to victims. (18) Led by the National Council of Childhood and Adolescence; coordinates with OATIA and CONATT to address the worst forms of child labor. (18,20,50) Research was unable to determine whether CONACOES was active during the reporting period.

In 2018, the MTSS led a series of trainings for labor and health agencies throughout the country on the implementation of the “Interagency Manual of Attention of Minors in Sexual, Trafficking, Child Labor and Dangerous Work,” which instructs public institutions on how to provide coordinated assistance to victims of human trafficking. More than 650 public employees were trained on detecting and responding to cases involving child sexual exploitation, child labor, and other forms of human trafficking. (27)

Reports indicate that coordination is lacking between institutions responsible for investigating the worst forms of child labor and providing social services to victims. (4,6) OATIA reported that its office needs additional staff to better assist children engaged in child labor and their families. In addition, OATIA noted that its office shares one vehicle with two other MTSS units, which limits its ability to provide oversight of child labor programs. (42)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap against Child Labor and the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2010–2020)	Aims to eradicate all forms of child labor in Costa Rica by 2020 by strengthening anti-poverty, health, and educational programs and policies, and by raising awareness of child labor. (51-53) On June 12, 2018, the government issued an executive order declaring the 2010–2020 Roadmap against Child Labor and the Worst Forms of Child Labor to be of public interest and calling on all public institutions to contribute to efforts to eradicate child labor. As part of the Roadmap, the government signed a cooperation agreement with the nongovernmental PANIAMOR Foundation to develop projects to prevent child labor, protect adolescent workers, and create programs for youth from disadvantaged backgrounds. (1,54) The government also signed a cooperative agreement with the Confederation of Workers Rerum Novarum and the Costa Rican Education Workers Union to collaborate on the prevention and eradication of child labor. (54)

Policy	Description
Inter-Institutional Coordinating Protocol for the Protection of Working Minors	Outlines service provision for child laborers through collaboration between MTSS, PANI, the Ministry of Public Education, and the Joint Institute of Social Assistance (IMAS), as well as their regional and local agencies and the private sector. (2,4,55) As part of implementing the Protocol, MTSS led a series of trainings in 2018 for labor and health agencies throughout the country on the implementation of the “Interagency Manual of Attention of Minors in Sexual, Trafficking, Child Labor and Dangerous Work.” (27)
National Plan against the Sexual Commercial Exploitation (2017–2018)	Designated responsible agencies and established actions and timelines to address commercial sexual exploitation, including of children. (18,56) Research was unable to identify activities undertaken during the reporting period to implement the National Plan, and there were no indications that this plan was renewed beyond 2018.
National Plan for Development (2015–2018)	Incorporated efforts to decrease child labor into national education and poverty reduction strategies. (23,57) Costa Rica released its updated National Plan for Development for 2019–2022, but the new plan does not incorporate strategies to address child labor. (48)
Bridge to Development (2015–2018)	Aimed to reduce poverty and eliminate vulnerability, including child labor, by providing social services to families in poor communities. (4,26,53,58) In 2018, the Ministry of Human Development and Social Inclusion announced that the Bridge to Development program would be renewed after 2018 and expanded. The government reported that by 2018, the program had surpassed its goal for the number of families to whom it provided services. (59)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

The government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-funded Projects to Support Youth Apprenticeship	USDOL-funded, $3 million Youth Pathways to Leadership, Learning, and Livelihoods in Costa Rica (2016–2020) and $2.9 million Promoting Apprenticeship as a Path for Youth Employment in Argentina, Costa Rica, and Kenya through Global Apprenticeship Network (GAN) National Networks (2016–2019). (60,61) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Face of Justice Shelter†	NGO-run shelter for child victims of human trafficking that provides PANI-funded monthly subsidies to victims and care from full-time staff, including a trauma psychologist and health practitioner. (25,27) In 2018, provided ongoing shelter to two minor female human trafficking victims. (27)
Houses of Joy (Casas de la Alegría)†	Public-private alliance that provides culturally sensitive daycare and meals to Ngábe Buglé , indigenous children whose parents work on coffee farms in Coto Brus. Aims to promote social inclusion and developmental opportunities for indigenous children and provide an alternative to child labor during the coffee harvest. (3,15,18,26,63–66) IMAS funds meals, caregiver salaries, and training; farm owners provide the land and classrooms, with financial contributions from UNICEF for building and teaching materials. Began as a pilot in 2014 with 6 centers serving 175 children; in 2018, served 600 children in 15 centers. (1,15,18,26,50,55,65) The program requires approval from the Ministry of Health to expand to other coffee-growing regions in the country. (66) In 2018, through Executive Decree No. 41381, the President approved the establishment of Houses of Joy outside the Coto Brus region, allowing producers across the country and a variety of agricultural products to implement the program model. The decree also established formal operating standards for all Houses of Joy. (1,67)
Let’s Get Ahead Program (Avancemos)†	IMAS program that provides monthly conditional cash transfers to low-income families to keep children in school and out of exploitative work. (2,20,30,68) In 2018, Costa Rica’s Legislative Assembly approved a proposal to include a budget for the program in the yearly national budget. (69)
I Sign Up for Education (Yo Me Apunto con la Educación)	Ministry of Public Education program that helps at-risk high school students from vulnerable areas remain in school or return to school. (18,29) In 2018, the Ministry of Public Education published high school dropout rates from 2016 to 2017, which showed that schools participating in the program experienced an almost 3 percent decrease in dropouts. (70)
Age Classroom (Aula Edad)†	Ministry of Public Education program that targets children and adolescents who have never been to school or who dropped out, adolescent mothers and workers, and foreign migrant adolescents to help them complete primary school. (26) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement Aula Edad during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Costa Rica

Costa Rica

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Research indicates that Ngäbe Buglé indigenous children in Costa Rica who migrate with their families to work seasonally on coffee farms face additional challenges in accessing social services due to long distances to service providers, language barriers, and complications in obtaining required documents from government institutions. (3,15,16)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Costa Rica (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that new prosecutors receive introductory training on child labor laws and policies.	2018
	Ensure that regular training is provided to all criminal investigators throughout the country.	2018
	Publish information on the number of child labor violations for which penalties were collected.	2017 – 2018
	Allocate sufficient resources to ensure regular labor inspections in rural areas and the informal sector, including child labor inspections, particularly in agriculture.	2015 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the judiciary, prosecutors, and the police have sufficient staff, training, and resources to investigate, prosecute, and convict perpetrators of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children, as well as identify victims of child trafficking and refer them to appropriate social services.	2017 – 2018
Coordination	Strengthen coordination and information-sharing between institutions responsible for investigating child labor and providing social services to victims.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the National Commission Against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents is actively implementing its mandate and reporting its yearly efforts.	2018
	Increase transportation and human resources for the Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker so that the office can improve program oversight.	2015 – 2018
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the new National Plan for Development.	2018
	Publish efforts undertaken as part of the National Action Plan against Sexual Commercial Exploitation and renew the plan beyond 2018.	2018
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including adolescent mothers and children from rural, indigenous, and Afro-descendant communities, by expanding existing social programs to strengthen school retention and completion for children and adolescents, particularly at the secondary level.	2015 – 2018
	Improve access to social services, particularly for indigenous children in coffee-growing areas.	2015 – 2017
	Implement Aula Edad objectives and report on its yearly activities.	2018

In 2018, Côte d'Ivoire made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government developed a new 2018–2020 National Action Plan of the Fight Against Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor, and drafted a National Labor Inspection Strategy. The First Lady of Côte d'Ivoire signed a memorandum of understanding for carrying out applied research on child labor in cocoa-growing areas, and opened a child protection center that houses and provides education, medical care, counseling, and vocational training to victims of child labor. The government also took enforcement actions against violations of the worst forms of child labor, including sentencing a child trafficker to 3 years in prison. However, children in Côte d'Ivoire engage in the worst forms of child labor in the harvesting of cocoa and coffee, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Gaps remain in resources, personnel, and training for law enforcement, which hindered child labor law enforcement efforts. Furthermore, the labor inspectorate is not authorized to assess penalties.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Côte d'Ivoire engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the harvesting of cocoa and coffee, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) According to a Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey conducted in 2016, 21.5 percent of children ages 5–17 are engaged in hazardous work. (4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Côte d'Ivoire. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	31.5 (1,682,754)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	63.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	21.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		73.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Enquête Démographique et de Santé (EDSCI-III) Survey, 2011–2012. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cocoa, including burning† and clearing fields;† cutting down trees† to expand cocoa plantations; spraying pesticides;† harvesting, drying, and fermenting cocoa beans; using sharp tools to break pods;† and transporting heavy loads† of cocoa pods and water (1,2,7-13)
	Production of cereals, pineapple, bananas, and coffee, including applying chemical fertilizers,† spraying pesticides,† cutting down trees,† and burning† and clearing fields† (1,14,15)
	Production of palm oil, cashews, honey, and rubber (2,7,16)

	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,16,23)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (15)
	Forced begging as talibés by Koranic teachers, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (15,19,21,26)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children from Côte d'Ivoire are subjected to human trafficking for forced labor in domestic work within the country and North Africa. Children are also brought from neighboring West African countries to Côte d'Ivoire for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, including in begging, cocoa production, and artisanal mining. (1,3,10,15,16,22) In 2018, there were reports of child trafficking from Nigeria to mining regions, especially in northern Côte d'Ivoire, for commercial sexual exploitation. (21) IOM indicates that some Ivorian parents send their boys to Tunisia so they can play soccer, but upon arrival, the boys' identity documents are confiscated and they are subject to forced labor until they can repay the cost of their plane ticket. (27)

School is mandatory for children ages 6 to 16 in Côte d'Ivoire. Although the Law on Education provides for free education, students are often required to pay for textbooks, school fees, or uniforms, which may be prohibitive to some families. (7,15,27-29) In addition, identity documents are required for students to take exams to enter secondary school, and the lack of these documents hindered some students' ability to access secondary education. (7) Approximately 23 percent of primary school-aged children and 41 percent of secondary-school aged children in Côte d'Ivoire are not enrolled in school, with the highest rates of non-enrollment found in the North, Northwest, and West regions. (4,29) A shortage of teachers, poor school infrastructure, lack of transportation systems in rural areas, and inadequate sanitation facilities have negatively impacted children's ability to attend school. (7) Research also suggests that some students are physically and sexually abused at school, which may deter some students from attending school. (29,30)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Côte d'Ivoire has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2017, the government ratified the UN Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, and in June 2018, the Ministry of Interior and Security passed a law on the illegal trafficking of migrants. (31,32-34)

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 23.2 of the Labor Code; Article 16 of the Constitution (35,36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Employment and Social Protection (MEPS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Social Protection (MEPS)	Develops, proposes, and enforces all labor laws, including those related to child labor. (30,46) Collaborates with the Anti-Trafficking Unit (ATU) and Ministry of Women, Family, and Children to provide support to victims of child trafficking and other forms of child labor. (15,22) Implements the child labor monitoring system, Système d'Observation et de Suivi du Travail des Enfants en Côte d'Ivoire (SOSTECI), which enables communities to collect and analyze statistical data on the worst forms of child labor. (12,14)
Ministry of Interior and Security	Through its ATU, leads efforts to enforce criminal laws against child trafficking. Through its Mondaine Brigades, combats commercial sexual exploitation, including exploitation of children. (3,32) Through its Unit for Combating Transnational Organized Crime, supports UNODC's West Africa Coast Initiative, which aims to improve cross-border cooperation to combat crimes, including human trafficking. (32,47)

Côte d'Ivoire

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Defense	Through its National Gendarmes Force, investigates child labor violations in rural areas where there is no police presence. (15)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Investigates and prosecutes crimes related to child labor, including its worst forms. Through its Directorate of Judicial Protection of Childhood and Youth, assists with investigations and implements the ministry's child protection policy. (15)
Ministry of Women, Family, and Children (MFFE)	Leads the government's efforts to combat human trafficking and implements a National Policy on Child Protection. (7,48) Maintains the 116 Allo hotline for child labor issues, and responds to complaints. (15,49) Provides support to child labor victims in coordination with MEPS. (15,50)
National Commission of Human Rights	Maintains a hotline for reporting human rights abuses. (51)

In 2018, the Directorate of Child Protection of the Ministry of Women, Family, and Children identified 16 girls from Niger between ages of 15 and 17 who were being used as prostitutes. The girls were rescued and repatriated to Niger. (7) The General Labor Directorate in Abidjan coordinates the regional offices and their efforts to combat child labor. (15,52)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Côte d'Ivoire took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MEPS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation and authority to assess penalties for violations.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

During the reporting period, the government hired and provided training to 33 new labor inspectors. (7) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Côte d'Ivoire's workforce, which includes more than 8.5 million workers. (54) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Côte d'Ivoire would employ about 567 labor inspectors. (54,55) Labor inspectors are also tasked with dispute conciliation, which may detract from their primary duties of inspection. (36,56) The government did not provide information on the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites for inclusion in this report.

The labor inspectorate suffers from a lack of resources, including insufficient staff, office facilities, and transportation. (15,17,30,56,57) As a result, inspectors primarily receive and resolve complaints, focusing on the formal sector. (56) In 2018, inspections took place in the informal sector, although no cases of child labor were identified. (53)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Côte d'Ivoire took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators and financial resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (15)	Yes (7)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (58)	Yes (7)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Yes (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (15,50)	Yes (7)

During the reporting period, police identified 7 infractions of child labor laws relating to trafficking and rescued 79 children. The MOJ is examining three individuals associated with these infractions, which are being heard as cases of economic and sexual exploitation of children. (7,21) All 79 children were received by or referred to the child and youth judiciary protection unit of the court. (7)

In June 2018, the First Lady of Côte d'Ivoire, on behalf of the National Monitoring Committee on Actions to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor (CNS), opened a child protection center in Soubré, which houses and provides education, medical care, counseling, and vocational training to victims of child labor. (7,59) In December 2018, nine Burkinabe boys ages 14 to 18 who had been subjected to child trafficking as part of a gold mining operation were rescued and referred to the Soubré shelter before being repatriated to Burkina Faso. The trafficker was sentenced to 3 years in prison. (21)

In 2018, 3 new police officers received training on identifying victims of child trafficking. (21) However, the Anti-Trafficking Unit lacks the resources and personnel to adequately enforce criminal child labor laws throughout the country, and research indicates that criminal law enforcement officials may benefit from additional training on existing laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (3,10,51,60)

In October 2018, a 14-year old female trafficking victim was allegedly abducted at gunpoint by five gendarmes and two military firefighters, including the victim's trafficker, from an NGO-run shelter where she was receiving care. The UNODC and the First Lady's Office intervened and located the girl, who was determined to be safe. (21,61) Investigations and judicial proceedings against the alleged abductors were ongoing at the end of the reporting period. (61)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Monitoring Committee on Actions to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor (CNS)	Supervises, monitors, and evaluates all government activities related to child labor and child trafficking, including making policy recommendations and harmonizing laws with international conventions. (62,63) Chaired by the First Lady of Côte d'Ivoire and comprises 16 international and domestic partners. (22,62,64) In July 2018, CNS hosted the eighth annual Child Labor Cocoa Coordinating Group (CLCCG) Principals Meeting which was held for the first time in Abidjan. (65)
Interministerial Committee on the Fight Against Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor (CIM)	Designs, coordinates, and implements all government actions to combat the worst forms of child labor, and monitors relevant programs implemented by partner organizations. (49,62,64,66) Chaired by MEPS, includes representatives from 12 other ministries. (22,62,64,66) In March 2018, representatives of CIM participated in a workshop on the implementation of SOSTECL. (67)
National Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking (CNLTP)	Formed in support of the 2016 Anti-Trafficking Law and chaired by the Prime Minister, aims to fight human trafficking throughout Côte d'Ivoire. Oversees the implementation of the National Action Plan and Strategy Against Human Trafficking, validates programs, coordinates government efforts, and monitors implementation of all projects related to human trafficking. (68) Includes representation at the local level through dedicated units charged with implementing the National Action Plan and Strategy Against Human Trafficking. (68,69) MFFE serves as the executive secretariat and the committee comprises 13 ministries. This committee replaces a previous committee by the same name, which was defunct. (15) As of February 2018, this committee had not convened since its establishment in April 2017, although it has worked together informally to resolve some cases of human trafficking. (32)

In May 2018, as part of a bilateral agreement between Côte d'Ivoire and Mali to combat cross-border child trafficking, the Office of the First Lady coordinated meetings with Malian counterparts to discuss best practices and assess the implementation of anti-trafficking efforts. (70) In 2018, the CLCCG organized awareness campaigns in Abidjan on the worst forms of child labor that reached more than 800 people and trained 126 members of Child Protection Committees in San Pedro and M'batto on the implementation of the Système d'Observation et de Suivi du Travail des Enfants en Côte d'Ivoire (SOSTECL). (70) Government ministries coordinated effectively during the reporting period, and platforms bring together government offices and civil society members at the departmental and regional level to address issues of child labor. However, coordination on data collection among ministries and between different regions remains a challenge. (15)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding and mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Fight Against Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor (2019–2021)†	Coordinated by CNS and CIM, approximately $243 million project aimed to significantly reduce the number of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor by building on best practices and improving upon lessons learned from earlier National Action Plan implementation. Priorities include increasing efforts to mobilize resources at the national level, reinforcing regional cooperation and public-private partnerships, incorporating worst forms of child labor considerations into national and sector-specific programming, and reinforcing the monitoring and evaluation of the national strategy for the fight against trafficking and the worst forms of child labor. (53,71)
National Action Plan and Strategy Against Human Trafficking (2016–2020)	With the support of UNODC and coordinated by CNLTP, $14.8 million project that aims to prevent human trafficking, expand social services for victims by improving physical infrastructure, provide training for law enforcement personnel and other stakeholders, promote coordination, and collect data on human trafficking. (72,73) This plan will begin implementation after the CNLTP becomes functional. (32)
2010 Declaration of Joint Action to Support the Implementation of the Harkin-Engel Protocol (2010 Declaration) and Its Accompanying Framework of Action	Joint declaration by the Governments of Ghana, Côte d'Ivoire, and the United States, and the International Cocoa and Chocolate Industry. (49,74,75) Provides resources and coordinates with key stakeholders on efforts to reduce the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-producing areas. Ensures that all project efforts implemented under the Declaration and Framework align with Côte d'Ivoire's national action plans to promote coherence and sustainability. (49,74,75) USDOL-funded projects and some industry-funded projects carried out activities that support the spirit of this policy during the reporting period. (49)

Policy	Description
Partnership Agreement	Forms an agreement between the International Cocoa Initiative (ICI) and CNS in support of the National Action Plan for the Fight Against Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor. Aims to reinforce and expand SOSTECI and improve school infrastructure. (76,77) In 2018, ICI conducted a mapping of schools built in cocoa-growing areas, and presented the research at the CLCCG meeting held in July 2018. Also during the reporting period, ICI supported the harmonization of SOSTECI data tools. (31)
Joint Declarations Against Cross-Border Trafficking	Bilateral declarations or cooperative agreements with Ghana and Burkina Faso to combat child trafficking and the worst forms of child labor. (78-81) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Joint Declarations Against Cross-Border Trafficking during the reporting period.
Child Protection Policies	Includes the National Policy on Child Protection (2014–2018), led by MFFE, which seeks to reduce the incidence of violence, abuse, and exploitation of children; and the National Policy of Judicial Protection of Childhood and Youth (2016–2020), led by MOJ, which aims to provide judicial protection to child victims of forced labor and has yet to be officially adopted by the Council of Ministers. (82,83) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Child Protection Policies during the reporting period.
National Development Plan (2016–2020)	Aims to improve governance and accelerate human capital development, including by combatting child labor. Allocates almost $6.1 million over 5 years to conduct diagnostic studies on child labor and child trafficking; creates a unit in regional labor inspectorate offices to combat the worst forms of child labor; expands SOSTECI into 10 new departments; constructs 3 child protection centers; and develops a national action plan to combat human trafficking, particularly of girls. (84) During the reporting period, construction began on the Bouake and Ferkessédougou children's protection centers. Also during the reporting period, the government evaluated the efficacy of the SOSTECI model to determine best practices for 2019 expansion efforts. (31)
Compulsory Education Policy	In support of the Law on Education, aims to achieve 100 percent enrollment in primary school by 2020 and 100 percent enrollment in junior high by 2025. (27,85) Allocates $1.34 billion to modernize the education system, including by building new classrooms, providing free textbooks to low-income families, and providing additional pedagogical training to teachers. (27) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Compulsory Education Policy during the reporting period.
Decent Work Country Program (2017–2020)	In collaboration with ILO, aims to improve working conditions, strengthen SOSTECI, and combat the worst forms of child labor. (58,86) Pending adoption by the Council of Ministers. (32) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Decent Work Country Program during the reporting period.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (28,29)

In February 2018, the First Lady of Cote d'Ivoire, on behalf of the CNS, signed a memorandum of understanding with the National Opinion Research Center at the University of Chicago (NORC) establishing a formal framework for carrying out applied research on child labor in cocoa-growing areas of Cote d'Ivoire. In February and September 2018, the government participated in workshops on the methodology of the 2018–2019 survey being conducted by NORC on the prevalence of child labor in cocoa-growing areas of Cote d'Ivoire. (7,59) In March 2018, MEPS organized an implementation workshop on SOSTECI that was attended by 70 participants. (67) An international conference on the implementation of SOSTECI was held in December 2018. (7) Also during the reporting period, the government developed a draft Labor Inspection Strategy through MEPS, with assistance from the ILO, which is expected to be enacted in 2019. The strategy aims to enable the government to ensure the application of legal provisions for the improvement of working conditions and the removal of children from work through the inspection of worksites, counseling, and monitoring. (7,31,53)

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the World Bank's Country Partnership Framework. (87)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects in cocoa-growing areas of Côte d'Ivoire and Ghana that aim to eliminate child labor through research, improved monitoring and enforcement, and implementation and expansion of SOSTECI. These projects include: Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (CLEAR) (2013–2019), $7.95 million project implemented in at least 10 countries by ILO; Building a Generation of Safe and Healthy Workers: SafeYouth@Work (2014–2019), $11,443,156 global project implemented by ILO with Côte d'Ivoire as one of 8 countries; Assessing Progress in Reducing Child Labor in Cocoa-Growing Areas of Côte d'Ivoire and Ghana (2015–2019), $3 million project implemented by the National Opinion Research Center at the University of Chicago; and Eliminating Child Labor in Cocoa (2015–2019), $4.5 million project implemented by ICI. (88-90) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Industry-Funded Projects	Industry-funded projects to increase sustainability in the cocoa sector; improve farmer livelihoods and access to education, and combat the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-growing areas. Some projects support World Cocoa Foundation's CocoaAction (2014–2020) strategy and the spirit of the 2010 Declaration. (49,91) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement industry-funded projects during the reporting period.
Centers for Vulnerable Children†	The government operates approximately 90 MFFE- and MEPS-funded social centers and 36 special education centers throughout the country that receive women and children who are victims of crime or violence, including children who are victims of the worst forms of child labor. (32) International NGOs also operate additional centers that provide meals and basic education. (73) In June 2018, the government began constructing centers in Bouake and Ferkessédougou. Between August and November 2018, the Soubré center spent $32,838 to provide care to 42 children ages 6 to 16 who were victims of trafficking and exploitation. (70)
Programs to Promote Education†	These programs aim to raise school attendance rates in rural areas, particularly among girls, by providing school meals, facilitating birth registration, and constructing community schools (écoles de proximité). Programs include: the Integrated Program for Sustainable School Feeding, $42.5 million WFP-funded program; the Ministry of National Education School Feeding Program; and the McGovern-Dole School Feeding Program, $35.6 million joint initiative between WFP and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, in coordination with the Ministry of National Education that benefits 129,000 school children. (16,72,92-94) In 2018, these program facilitated the construction of 23 schools with 69 classrooms, 84 teacher housing units, 13 canteens, and 112 latrines in primary schools. (7,70)
World Bank-Funded Projects	Programs aim to improve access to education and provide poverty relief. Include: Second Fiscal Management, Education, Energy and Cocoa Reforms Development Policy Operation (2017–2020), $125 million project to increase the number of primary school teachers; and Productive Social Safety Net (2015–2020), $50 million cash transfer project to poor households in the Central, Northern, and Western regions of Côte d'Ivoire. (95,96) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement World Bank-funded projects during the reporting period.
Community Animation Program for Child Protection (2015–2020)†	$228,168 MFFE program as part of the National Policy on Child Protection, implemented with technical assistance from UNICEF, provides a service package for behavior change and improving communication at the community level that can be tailored to meet local needs. (97-99) During the reporting period, conducted sensitizations in Abidjan and Yopougon on topics related to combating the worst forms of child labor. (70)
National Solidarity Fund†	$2.5 million fund that provides assistance to poor households, including victims of human trafficking. (51,100) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Solidarity Fund during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Côte d'Ivoire.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (101-103)

In March 2018, the government held an evaluation workshop on the implementation of the 2015-2017 National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation and Child Labor (NAP). This workshop was used to inform the development of the new 2018–2020 National Action Plan. (70) The government dedicated funding to SOSTECI for its expansion and disbursed funds to the NAP, but the scope of existing programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, and not all relevant sectors are addressed. (15) In addition, the government primarily relies on NGOs to provide social services to victims of child labor and child trafficking, and government services are under-resourced. (3,16,104) In 2018, due to a lack of financial transparency, UNICEF suspended a program implemented in 2017 in conjunction with MOJ that aimed to provide birth registration to 600,000 children who are currently enrolled in primary school. (7)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Côte d'Ivoire (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by authorizing the Inspectorate to assess penalties.	2014 – 2018
	Publish information about whether inspections are conducted at worksites.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectorates and criminal law enforcement agencies receive a sufficient amount of funding to conduct inspections and investigations throughout the country, including in the informal sector.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies receive the resources, personnel, and training needed to adequately enforce child labor laws.	2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies function as intended and are able to carry out their mandates.	2017 – 2018
	Improve coordination on data collection among ministries and between different regions	2012-2018
Government Policies	Ensure that existing policies are implemented as intended.	2018
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into all relevant policies.	2013 – 2018
Social Programs	Improve access to education by eliminating all school-related fees; improving the accessibility of schools; ensuring that schools are free of physical and sexual abuse; and increasing the number of teachers, sanitation facilities, and schools, particularly in rural areas.	2011 – 2018
	Ensure that social programs to address child labor are implemented in accordance with their mandates.	2018
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem in Côte d'Ivoire and institute programs to address child labor in all relevant sectors.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that victims of the worst forms of child labor are able to access social services throughout the country.	2015 – 2018

In 2018, Djibouti made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the year, the Djibouti National Police created a sub-unit to investigate child begging and forced child begging. In addition, the Anti-Trafficking Working Group improved coordination among government agencies, which resulted in more holistic protective services and investigations of potential human trafficking cases, including of children. However, children in Djibouti engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. Law enforcement efforts are inadequate to prevent and combat child labor, in part because the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of the labor force and they lack the authority to assess penalties. The government did not make adequate efforts to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor due to lack of financial and human resource allocation and reporting mechanisms. In addition, overall coordination is lacking in efforts to address all forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Djibouti engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (1,3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Djibouti. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	12.3 (23,693)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	67.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	10.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		60.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by the UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2006. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Caring for livestock, mostly goats (6,7)
Services	Domestic work† (3)
	Street work, such as shining shoes, washing and guarding cars, cleaning storefronts, sorting merchandise, collecting garbage, begging, and selling items, including khat (1,3,6)
	Working in restaurants, small shops, and family businesses (3,6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3,8)
	Forced domestic work and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3)
	Use in illicit activities, including the selling of marijuana and recreational drugs (7)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Limited reports from prior reporting periods suggested that children, including undocumented migrant girls, have historically been vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation in Djibouti City and the Ethiopia-Djibouti trucking corridor. (8,9) Prior reporting also found that poverty among Djiboutian households made girls vulnerable to

Djibouti

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

commercial sexual exploitation. (6) Although primary and middle schools are tuition-free, other school-related expenses may prevent children from attending school. (10-12) Enrollment rates are lower for girls and for all children living in rural or impoverished areas, making these children more vulnerable to child labor. (12,13)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Djibouti has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Djibouti's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 5 of the Labor Code (14)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 108 and 110 of the Labor Code (14)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 110 of the Labor Code (14)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2 and 290 of the Labor Code; Article 23 of the Law Regarding Terrorism and Other Serious Crimes (14,15)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 1 of the Law on the Fight Against the Trafficking of Persons and the Illegal Smuggling of Migrants; Article 23 of the Law Regarding Terrorism and Other Serious Crimes (15,16)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 462–463 of the Penal Code; Articles 1 and 8 of the Law on the Fight Against the Trafficking of Persons and the Illegal Smuggling of Migrants (16,17)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 355–356 and 461 of the Penal Code (17)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 1 of the National Army Amendment Decree (18)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 149–151 and 461 of the Penal Code (17)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 4 of the Law on the Orientation of the Education System (19)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Law on the Orientation of the Education System (19)

* No conscription (20)

The Labor Code's minimum age provisions do not apply to children working outside of a formal employment contract. (17,21,22) The Labor Code applies only to children who perform work under a formal employment agreement, which does not conform to international standards requiring that all children be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. In addition, although the Labor Code prohibits the employment of children between the ages of 16 and 18 in domestic work, hotels, and bars, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not include street work, an area in which there is evidence of work in an unhealthy environment. (17,22,23)

The law does not specifically criminalize the offering of a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, pornographic performances, or the use of a child for prostitution. (16,17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces all labor laws, including child labor laws and regulations. (3) Through its Inspectorate of Labor and Social Laws, regulates youth employment. (21)
Djibouti National Police (DNP), including the Vice Squad	Enforce criminal laws and investigate crimes related to child labor. (3)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes child labor cases referred by the MOL. (3)
National Commission on Human Rights	Receives complaints and investigates cases of human rights violations, including child labor. (3,24) Assists victims in obtaining legal aid to prosecute violators. (24)

In February 2018, Djibouti's National Police Chief created a sub-unit to investigate child begging and forced child begging. (2) Research has not determined the extent of the sub-unit's operations since its creation.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Djibouti took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Djibouti

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The government does not publish information on its training of labor inspectors, the number of labor inspections conducted, or the number of child labor violations. (3,26)

Labor inspections are not routinely scheduled; they are carried out in reaction to repeated or serious complaints, and only in the formal business sector. The government's policy inhibits the identification of child labor cases in the informal business sector. (3) Documented child labor violations, such as cleaning shoes, begging, washing cars, domestic work, working in small shops, selling items on the street, transporting loads, and working in family-owned businesses, occurred primarily in the informal sector. Although a mechanism for filing and responding to labor complaints exists, reports reflect a lack of efficiency and transparency. (3) Enforcement of child labor laws remains challenging due to insufficient funding and size of labor inspectorate. (3)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Djibouti's workforce, which includes more than 294,000 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Djibouti would employ roughly 7 labor inspectors. (27-29)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Djibouti took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (9)	Unknown (3)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (10)	Yes (3,26)

The government does not publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts. (3)

The Djibouti National Police (DNP) depends on the IOM to refer cases for prosecution. (22) Although the DNP can legally refer cases of child labor violations for prosecution, it lacks sufficient resources to do so, and therefore relies on international organizations, such as the IOM, to fulfill this role. (7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor outside the scope of human trafficking.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Anti-Trafficking Working Group	Coordinates efforts to combat human trafficking through the development of a collaboration and outreach strategy focusing on the operationalization of the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2014–2020). The inter-agency working group is led by the Ministry of Justice, and includes representatives from the MOL and the Ministry of the Interior. (1,30) In 2018, under the newly appointed National Coordinator for anti-trafficking and anti-smuggling efforts, the group met monthly, resulting in improved coordination among government agencies. (1)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Council for Children	Promotes children's rights. Led by the Prime Minister and includes eight other agencies, representatives from NGOs, the private sector, and elected officials. (31) Advocates for (1) newborn refugees and migrants to receive birth certificates; (2) education under governmental programs for refugees and asylum seekers; and (3) family reunification for unaccompanied migrant minors. (7) In 2018, the National Council for Children introduced a program targeting children vulnerable to Anti-Human Trafficking and child labor, resulting in a temporary shelter for street children. (32)

Since the government established the Anti-Trafficking Working Group, regular meetings have improved coordination among government agencies, resulted in more holistic protective services for victims, and increased the number of investigations and prosecutions of potential human trafficking cases. (1) Although the government has established an Anti-Trafficking Working Group, research found no evidence that the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address other forms of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2014–2020)	Aims to strengthen the legislative framework to combat human trafficking, protect and assist human trafficking victims, and establish a national referral mechanism between law enforcement officials and social services providers. (33) Although the anti-trafficking working group met monthly during the year, the plan is not yet fully operational. (1)
UNDAF (2018–2022)	Focuses primarily on programs that build capacity for victim recognition and protection, and assists the government in the development of its "Vision 2035" plan. It was extended in 2018 and is in its early implementation phase and has not yet produced substantive results. (26)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In 2018, and for the third consecutive year, the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons is not yet fully operational, although the working group has improved coordination during this reporting period. (1) Research was unable to determine whether the government strengthened the legislative framework, nor are there details available regarding the new Reciprocal Referral Mechanism. This year, the Government of Djibouti provided training on judiciary apparatuses and law enforcement, specifically as it pertains to victim protection. (1,26)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Strengthening the National Criminal Justice System's Response to Trafficking in Persons in partnership with the Government of Djibouti	$500,000 USDOS-funded program implemented by UNODC, in partnership with the government, that establishes a national referral mechanism for victims of human trafficking and a mechanism for data collection; raises awareness of human trafficking; and conducts law enforcement trainings. (3) In early 2018, the program concluded after it designed and implemented a process to broaden communication among the government, civil society, NGOs, and UN organizations. (7)
National Family Solidarity Program†	Government-funded program implemented by the State Secretariat for National Solidarity that establishes cash transfers to support Djiboutian households in extreme poverty. (34) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Family Solidarity Program during the reporting period.

Program	Description
UNICEF-funded Projects	In collaboration with the Government of Djibouti through the National Office for Assistance to Refugees and Affected Populations, the Humanitarian Action for Children Project, and the UNICEF Country Program, promote access to quality education for children, especially from rural and poor urban areas; increase birth registration; and provide support for orphans and vulnerable children. (3,35,36) In 2018, UNICEF provided child protection services to more than 3,000 vulnerable children, including children living on the streets. (12) UNICEF also enrolled an estimated 4,500 refugee and migrant children in the Read, Write and Count Education Program; assisted 4,600 children with access to pre-primary, primary, and secondary education; and coordinated the Refugee Response Plan. (12)
World Bank-funded Programs	Enhancing Income Opportunities in DJ (2015–2019) project aims to provide at least 3,000 youth with basic life skills training, coaching in business plan development, and access to finance. The Access to Quality Education Project (2014–2018), a Global Partnership for Education-funded program, sought to improve the learning environment, construct classrooms, rehabilitate and extend schools in rural areas, train teachers, and procure student learning materials. (13,37,38)
WFP's-Transitional Interim Country Strategic Plan (2018-2019)	WFP's Transitional Interim Country Strategic Plan for Djibouti maintains humanitarian assistance while focusing on strategies for programming social protection, human capital development, and resilience. (39,40) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Strategic Plan during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Djibouti.

‡ The government had other programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (20,25,41)

On World Day Against Trafficking in Persons, the Ministry of Justice and the German Corporation for International Cooperation organized a 3-day seminar to raise awareness of human trafficking among rural populations. The training portion of the seminar focused on detection and follow up care of victims, and culminated in a series of recommendations to the Ministry of Justice to improve anti-trafficking coordination. (2)

Although the Government of Djibouti has implemented programs that target migrant children, research found no evidence of programs to assist children involved in domestic work, street work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (22) There are no official government-run shelters to assist child victims. The government has authorized NGOs to host migrant street children and orphans overnight, but does not provide support or services to assist in these efforts. (2,7)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Djibouti (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that all children are afforded minimum age for work protections under the law, including children working outside formal employment relationships.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use and offering of a child for commercial sexual exploitation, production of pornography, and pornographic performances.	2012 – 2018
Enforcement	Publish data related to labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts related to child labor.	2010 – 2018
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by allowing the assessment of penalties.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate targets and conducts routine labor inspections in all relevant sectors, including informal businesses.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the funding of the labor inspectorate and number of labor inspectors is sufficient to enforce child labor laws.	2018
	Ensure that the complaint mechanism is efficient and transparent.	2018
	Provide the necessary resources for the Djibouti National Police to make referrals for the prosecution of child labor-related violations.	2017 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet ILO's technical advice.	2018
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor.	2009 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Implement the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons by taking concrete steps to combat child trafficking.	2017 – 2018
	Undertake activities to implement the UNDAF.	2016 – 2018
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children in rural areas, including girls, by removing school-related expenses.	2015 – 2018
	Implement the National Family Solidarity Program.	2018
	Ensure that the World Food Program Transitional Interim Country Strategic Plan implementation is supported by government collaboration.	2018
	Implement programs to specifically address children involved in domestic work, street work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2018
	Establish official government-run shelters to assist child victims.	2018

In 2018, Dominica made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government made public its number of labor inspectors, demonstrating that the country meets the ILO’s benchmark for the ratio of labor inspectors to the size of its workforce. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Dominica engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Dominica’s legal framework does not protect children from exploitative work outside of the school year, and the government has not determined the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. The country also lacks prohibitions against the use of children in prostitution, pornography, or pornographic performances, and the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Dominica engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. (1) Table I provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Dominica. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table I. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		117.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (2) Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization’s analysis, 2019. (3)

No current survey data on the child labor situation in Dominica is available. (1) However, limited evidence suggests that girls under age 16 are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in exchange for clothing, phones, or other items. The Dominica Council of NGOs reported that instances of commercial sexual exploitation of children have been on the rise as a result of trauma and physical displacement since Hurricane Maria devastated the island in September 2017. (1)

The Dominica Council of NGOs also reported rising physical and sexual violence in schools which may affect access to education. (1) Some children experienced long interruptions to their education due to destruction from the hurricane and the lack of government funds to rebuild schools. Many children left Dominica to attend school in other Eastern Caribbean states. (3-5) Children from the Kalinago community face barriers to secondary education that could make them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Because there is no secondary school in the Kalinago territory, students encounter transportation and social integration challenges as they travel outside of the territory to attend school. (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Dominica has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 2).

Dominica

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in Dominica's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 3. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 2 and 46 of the Education Act 1997 (6)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 4 of the Constitution; Sections 2, 8, 10, and 13 of the Transnational Organized Crime (Prevention and Control) Act (7,8)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 2, 8, 10, and 13 of the Transnational Organized Crime (Prevention and Control) Act (8)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 2, 10, and 13 of the Transnational Organized Crime (Prevention and Control) Act; Article 18 of the Sexual Offenses Act (8,9)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 2 of the Education Act 1997 (6)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 15 of the Education Act 1997 (6)

† No standing military

Article 46 of the Education Act prohibits the employment of children ages 5 to 16 during the school year but allows students ages 14 and older to work during school vacations or in school-sponsored employment training programs without defining the conditions, specific activities, or number of hours permissible for light work. (6) Section 7(1) of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act prohibits children under age 18 from working at night, unless they are working with family members. The law does not otherwise prohibit the employment of children in work that is likely to jeopardize their health, safety, or morals. (10) Dominica does not have national laws or regulations that define the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (11) The government has not enacted laws or regulations explicitly prohibiting the use of children in prostitution, pornography, pornographic performances, or illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. (12)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Justice, Immigration and National Security that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Division, Ministry of Justice, Immigration and National Security	Conducts inspections and enforces laws related to child labor. Authorized to conduct unannounced inspections at any location with employees and to take legal action against employers violating child labor laws. (12,13) Reports cases in which children are found in exploitative labor situations to police and social services. (12,13)
Ministry of Health and Social Services	Conducts inspections and enforces laws related to child labor. Reports cases in which children are found in exploitative labor situations to police. (13) Provides social services, including education, housing, counseling, and financial aid, in child labor cases. (12,13)
Police Force	Enforces criminal laws, including those related to child labor. (1)
Ministry for Ecclesiastical Affairs, Family, and Gender Affairs	Responsible for social welfare for vulnerable groups such as abused and neglected children. Implements the “Chances” emergency shelter program for children and young adults, and the Basic Needs Trust Fund, which seeks to improve access to basic public services, enhance employability, and reduce social vulnerability in poor communities. (1)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Dominica took actions to combat child labor (Table 5). Gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Justice, Immigration and National Security that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 5. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown	Unknown (1)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Unknown	Yes (1)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (14)	Yes (1,15)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (14)	Yes (1)

Although the government has child labor law enforcement mechanisms in place, the lack of statistical data on child employment and inspections results makes it difficult to assess whether agencies are complying with international child labor conventions. (11) Limited research suggests the government may lack an overall strategy for carrying out labor inspections. Local NGOs indicate that authorities do not adequately target areas known for child commercial sexual exploitation, such as in the Silver Lake community outside of the capital city of Roseau. (1)

Dominica

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In addition to the labor inspectors under the Ministry of Justice, Immigration, and National Security, the Ministry of Health and Social Services employs health and safety inspectors and fire inspectors who also inspect for labor violations. (16) Government officials report that although the number of labor inspectors is sufficient to inspect labor violations, too few technical officers are available to enforce labor laws. (16)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Dominica took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resources.

Table 6. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown	No (1)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	No (1)
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown	No (1)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	0 (1)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	0 (1)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	0 (1)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	0 (1)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	No (1)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (1)	No (1)

The Dominica Police Commissioner reported that there were no trainings on child labor in 2018. In addition, research indicates that the Police Force budget in general is insufficient, and police lack the transportation and equipment needed to enforce criminal laws. (1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

Research revealed no evidence that the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Research revealed no evidence that the government has established policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing or eliminating child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 7. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Basic Needs Trust Fund	Caribbean Development Bank (CDB)-implemented program supervised by the Ministry for Ecclesiastical Affairs, Family, and Gender Affairs that aims to reduce poverty through livelihood services, improved infrastructure, capacity-building projects, and technical services. (17-19) In 2018, the CDB agreed to keep resources available to Dominica and extend project timelines through 2020 in recognition of the difficulties the country faced implementing projects due to Tropical Storm Erika in 2015 and Hurricane Maria in 2017. (20)
Education Trust Fund†	Government-funded program implemented by the Ministry of Education and Human Resource Development (MOE) that provides financial assistance for textbooks, transportation, and registration and exam fees to students in secondary school who would otherwise be unable to complete their education. (21,22) In 2018, the Chairman of the Board of Directors indicated the Fund would not seek contributions from the private sector given the impact from Hurricane Maria but instead would solicit an increase in government assistance for the fund. (23)

Program	Description
School Textbook Provision Scheme†	Government-funded program implemented by MOE that subsidizes the cost of textbooks for primary and secondary school students. (24) Research did not identify any implementing activities undertaken during the reporting period.
School Feeding Program†	Government-funded program implemented by MOE that provides lunch to primary school students in targeted areas. (25) Research did not identify any implementing activities undertaken during the reporting period.
CHANCES†	Government-funded program implemented by the Ministry for Ecclesiastical Affairs, Family, and Gender Affairs that supports an emergency residential shelter to provide short-term services to abused and neglected children. The shelter can accept victims of the worst forms of child labor. (1,26,13,27-29) Research did not identify any implementing activities undertaken during the reporting period.
Break the Silence Awareness Program†	Government-funded program implemented by the Ministry of Health and Social Services program that raises awareness and encourages reporting of child abuse cases. (26) Managed by the Child Abuse Prevention Unit in the Social Welfare Division. (28) Research did not identify any implementing activities undertaken during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Dominica.

In May 2018, the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States (OECS) and UNICEF published a “National Child Protection Action Plan” to guide implementation of recommendations for Dominica’s child justice framework. Dominica has neither completed the recommendations nor adopted the action plan. (1)

While the government continued to fund social programs in 2018 that could address child labor, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the programs during the reporting period. (1) Research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children subjected to commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Dominica (Table 8).

Table 8. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Define the conditions, activities, and number of hours permissible for light work.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that the minimum age for hazardous work is 18 for all children.	2015 – 2018
	Determine and codify the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers’ and workers’ organizations.	2018
	Enact legislation to expressly prohibit child prostitution and the using, procuring, or offering of a child for the production of pornography or pornographic performances.	2011 – 2018
	Prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2016 – 2018
	Make labor and criminal law enforcement data publicly available, including data on child labor inspections, criminal investigations, and number of violations.	2014 – 2018
	Develop a national strategy for carrying out labor inspections, including a plan for targeted inspections in areas where child commercial sexual exploitation is known to occur.	2018
	Employ enough technical officers to provide sufficient labor law enforcement.	2015 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive training on the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the police have sufficient funding to enforce criminal laws.	2016 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, including a reciprocal referral mechanism between criminal authorities and social services.	2016 – 2018
Government Policies	Adopt policies to address the worst forms of child labor, including for children involved in commercial sexual exploitation.	2016 – 2018
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including members of the Kalinago community, by ensuring access to secondary education within the Kalinago territory.	2018
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2014 – 2018
	Develop and implement existing social programs to address the full score of child labor issues in Dominica, including commercial child sexual exploitation, and implement the recommended actions from the National Child Protection Action Plan.	2017 – 2018
	Rebuild schools, address barriers to education such as school physical and sexual violence, and ensure that disaster relief efforts include measures to prevent children from engaging in child labor and the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2018

In 2018, the Dominican Republic made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government significantly increased the Labor Inspectorate’s budget from $3.3 million in 2017 to $4.8 million in 2018. The government also approved the 2017 - 2020 National Action Plan against Human Trafficking and Illicit Smuggling of Migrants and continued to fund and participate in multiple programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including expanding the Extended School Day program to cover 1.3 million students. However, children in the Dominican Republic engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Other gaps remain, including limited human and financial resources for the enforcement of child labor laws, and inadequate assistance for children engaged in harmful agricultural work and commercial sexual exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Dominican Republic engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-4) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (5-8) Table I provides key indicators on children’s work and education in the Dominican Republic.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in the Dominican Republic engage in commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in coastal, tourist locations. The porous border between Haiti and the Dominican Republic has allowed some Haitian children to be trafficked into the Dominican Republic, where they have been engaged in commercial sexual exploitation and forced to work in agriculture, domestic work, street vending, or begging. (1-3,14,24,31,32) Some children, including Haitian children and Dominican-born children of Haitian descent, work in agricultural production, including sugarcane, often alongside their parents, and live in communities that frequently lack basic services, including schools. (11-14,23,33-35)

Many Dominican-born persons of Haitian descent, including children, continue to remain in undocumented status as a result of the 2013 Constitutional Tribunal Judgement, which retroactively revised the Dominican Republic’s citizenship transmission laws, and were not able to obtain legal residency documents under Law 169-14 or the National Regularization Plan during the reporting year. (23,35,40-46) Children of undocumented migrant parents, many of Haitian descent, are particularly vulnerable to labor exploitation because they may lack birth or residency documents. This increases the likelihood that undocumented children may be denied access to education or may be engaged in child labor, including its worst forms, as labor inspectors may not be able to verify their ages. (1,2,28,33,36-39) In addition, Haitian children who remain in the Dominican Republic after their parents have been repatriated to Haiti due to their undocumented status are more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (33,47,48)

In 2018, the government established a working group with the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights on the implementation of human rights policies in the Dominican Republic, including monitoring recommendations and commitments related to the acquisition of nationality, migration, and policies to combat all forms of discrimination. (49-53) The General Migration Directorate also extended the period for processing documentation and delivered more than 90,000 identity documents to undocumented individuals approved under the National Regularization Plan (PNRE). By the end of the reporting period, nearly 200,000 of the 260,000 approved PNRE participants had renewed their temporary migration status. (49-51) However, as of December 2017, the last date for which information is available, of an estimated 135,000 Dominican-born individuals of Haitian descent affected by the 2013 Constitutional Tribunal Judgement only 21,000 individuals had received birth registration documentation. (35,40,41)

National law guarantees free public education, requires that all children attend school until age 18, and prohibits the exclusion of children from the educational system based on a lack of identity documents. (47,54-57) Parents are also instructed to obtain birth registration documents for their children and the Ministry of Education provides free legal services to help parents obtain identity documents. In addition, national policy allows undocumented children to enroll in school. (58) The Ministry of Education’s Office of Community Participation is the point of contact to handle school denial cases for children without identity documents and has re-issued a directive to public schools noting all children must be allowed to attend school, regardless of their documentation. Parents may also appeal to the district government or the Ministry of Education’s regional office if their child is denied educational access. (21,40,45,58,59) In addition, the Ministry of Education conducted public awareness-raising campaigns during the reporting period about school registration and the right to education for all children. Research did not identify cases of children without identity documents being denied access to education during the reporting period. (21,45,58,59) However, the Ministry of Education’s current Operations Manual of Public Education Centers incorrectly requires school administrators to request children to present identity documents to enroll in school. (62,63) Moreover, the Ministry of Education requires that students have a birth certificate on file to issue a high school diploma. As a result, children without identity documents are unable to prove that they have completed high school. (64,65)

Teacher shortages and a lack of school infrastructure create barriers to accessing education in the Dominican Republic. In addition, a high percentage of students drop out at the primary and secondary levels. (3,23,66-68) These issues particularly affect children living in rural areas and in communities predominantly of Haitian descent. Sources also indicate that some children of Haitian descent face discrimination by teachers and peers, travel long distances to schools, and are unable to afford school fees and supplies. (3,23,66-68)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Dominican Republic has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification

	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the Dominican Republic’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of military recruitment by non-state groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor (MT) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MT)	Leads efforts to eliminate child labor, conducts labor inspections, and oversees the Child Labor Directorate (DTI). Refers children found in exploitative conditions to social services, mainly the National Council for Children and Adolescents (CONANI). (23,24,75-77)
Office of the Attorney General (AG)	Prosecutes crimes involving children, including criminal violations related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children and other worst forms of child labor. Oversees the Special Prosecutor for Migrant Smuggling and Human Trafficking (PETT), which receives notifications of alleged violations related to the worst forms of child labor through a hotline. (1,14,78,79) In 2018, PETT secured 9 convictions related to human trafficking, and was investigating 33 human trafficking cases and prosecuting 23 cases. PETT also identified 44 human trafficking victims who were referred to the appropriate social services, but did not provide details on the ages and gender of the victims. (80)
National Police's Trafficking in Persons Unit and the Directorate of Migration	Enforce criminal laws, including those prohibiting the worst forms of child labor, and coordinate with the AG in the prosecution of perpetrators. Under the Ministry of the Interior. (1,14,18,79)
Specialized Corps for Tourist Safety (CESTUR)	Prevents child sex abuse and commercial sexual exploitation in tourist areas, rescues child victims, and arrests and brings to justice child sex offenders. Overseen by the Ministry of Defense. (14,81)
Local Vigilance Committees*	Prevent child labor at the local level by alerting law enforcement of activities linked to child labor, directing victims of child labor to social services, and working closely with the National Steering Committee to Eliminate Child Labor (CDN) to raise awareness of child labor. (20,82) In 2018, an additional 14 Vigilance Committees were created in municipalities with a high presence of child labor for a total of 33 Vigilance Committees. (83,84)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in the Dominican Republic took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MT that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

† Data are from January 1, 2017 to October 31, 2017. (8)

‡ Data are from January 1, 2018 to November 30, 2018. (21)

In 2018, the labor inspectorate was allocated a budget of $4.8 million, an increase of $1.5 million from 2017. During the year, the MT employed 148 full-time labor inspectors, and plans to hire and train an additional 50 inspectors in 2019. (21,86) Even so, that number of labor inspectors is insufficient for the size of the Dominican Republic's workforce, which includes over 4.7 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, the Dominican Republic would employ about 315 labor inspectors. (87-89)

The MT's process for labor inspections includes a preliminary visit, during which inspectors inform employers of violations and establish periods for remediation but do not issue fines. Upon expiration of the remediation periods, inspectors conduct re-inspections to determine whether the violations have been remedied. (69,90) If re-inspections find that the identified violations persist, the MT files infraction reports with its local office, which then transfers the infraction reports to the relevant local court for adjudication. (69,90) Re-inspections occur less frequently and are more difficult and less consistent in remote rural areas. In addition, evidence suggests that some inspection reports do not set a timeframe for the remediation of the violations identified. (91) The MT is not authorized to assess penalties, and penalties for violating child labor laws are insufficient to deter violations. (21,69,86)

Dominican Republic

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although the 2008 General Inspection Protocol and the 2011 Inspection Protocol for Agriculture instruct inspectors to assess child labor violations by reviewing workers' identity documents and employers' records, making observations, and conducting interviews, the widespread lack of identity documents impedes both inspectors and employers from verifying the ages of workers and guaranteeing children under age 18 are not participating in dangerous or unhealthy work. (90) The MT indicated improvements could be made with respect to how inspectors conduct interviews, ask follow-up questions, and use inspection data to strengthen the inspection system. Moreover, reports indicate in some cases, Spanish-speaking inspectors working without translation assistance have been responsible for interviewing Creole-speaking workers with limited or no Spanish-language abilities, which may have further hindered the efficacy of those inspections. (18)

From January through November 2018, the MT conducted 75,751 labor inspection visits, of which 61,345 were routine inspection visits. In addition, the MT conducted 6,230 targeted child labor inspections in high-risk sectors, such as agriculture, construction, mining, and services in both rural and urban areas. (21,85,86) However, the MT only reported finding 31 child labor violations. (21) Some NGOs and labor unions have reported inspections are not always conducted in a timely manner after requests are made. In addition, evidence suggests that inspection reports often contain errors and contradictions that undermine the credibility of these reports, including by limiting the sample size of worksites for inspection in large rural facilities. (27,91,92) Reports also indicate substandard labor inspections, incomplete labor inspection reports, and the limited number of labor-focused prosecutors have hindered the ability of the Office of the Attorney General (AG) to pursue prosecutions on criminal matters involving child labor issues. (92)

A formal referral mechanism allows the MT to refer child labor victims found during labor inspections to the National Council for Children and Adolescents (CONANI) for social services. During the reporting period, the MT reported it removed 363 victims of child labor from work sites, and transferred their cases to CONANI, where the children received social and reintegration services. (20-22)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in the Dominican Republic took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of publicly available enforcement information, coordination among agencies, and human and financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown	Yes (21)

In 2018, law enforcement officials identified and assisted 25 child victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (94) The government also reported that it secured 22 convictions for human trafficking, and 9 cases of human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, the government reported 70 percent of the convictions in 2018 related to human trafficking involved underage victims. (94) Despite this information, the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions related to the worst forms of child labor is unknown. (21,94)

During the reporting period, the National Institute of Migration launched a certificate program for employees of the Ministry of the Interior and National Police on providing assistance to victims of human trafficking, and the National Police received training from an international NGO on combating human trafficking. (21,95,96) Despite these efforts, reports indicate the capacity of enforcement agencies to identify, investigate, and prosecute criminal cases related to the worst forms of child labor are limited due to a lack of human and financial resources. (1,18,59) In 2018, the leadership of the Attorney General’s Specialized Anti-Trafficking Unit (PETT) changed twice, and for most of the reporting period the office had half the number of prosecutors compared to previous years. (21,80) In addition, reports indicate coordination between the MT and the AG has been limited due mainly to a lack of appropriate case tracking systems and not all criminal violations identified by the MT have been referred to, and subsequently investigated and prosecuted adequately by the AG. (8,60,92)

During the reporting period, the Government of the Dominican Republic collaborated with the International Justice Mission to rescue 96 victims of commercial sexual exploitation, including 25 girls under age 18, and referred all of them to CONANI for services. Despite these efforts, reports indicate that CONANI does not have the resources, facilities, and institutional capacity to meet the demand for services nationwide. (2,3,6,93,95)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including insufficient funding for key coordinating bodies to carry out their mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee to Eliminate Child Labor (CDN)	Develops policies, approves programs, and coordinates, monitors, and evaluates efforts to combat child labor in the Dominican Republic. Overseen by the MT and comprising ministerial representatives, labor unions, private sector representatives, and NGOs. (23,24,75,77,97) In 2018, met several times to implement activities under national action plans, including implementing awareness-raising campaigns in agricultural zones and training government and non-governmental stakeholders on child labor laws. In addition, coordinated the creation of 14 additional Local Vigilance Committees to combat child labor in high-risk municipalities. (21,83,84,86)
Inter-Institutional Commission Against Child Abuse and Commercial Sexual Exploitation	Coordinates actions to combat commercial sexual exploitation and child abuse. Led by CONANI and the MT, and includes representatives from the Ministries of Tourism, Education, and CESTUR, local and international organizations, and the Hotel and Restaurant Association. (1,3,79,81) In 2018, met several times with the CDN and supported the creation of two Local Vigilance Committees in municipalities with a high prevalence of child commercial sexual exploitation. (84,86)
Inter-Agency Commission Against Trafficking in Persons (CITIM)	Coordinates efforts to combat human trafficking and responsible for developing and implementing national plans. Led by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and comprises 14 government agencies, including the MT and law enforcement agencies. (1,86,98) In 2018, unveiled the new 2017–2020 National Action Plan Against the Trafficking of Persons and Illicit Smuggling of Migrants. (21,86,95) Also collaborated with the Attorney General’s Office, UNICEF, and the Dominican Airports (AERODOM) to conduct an awareness-raising campaign in airports to educate the public about the penalties for crimes involving the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (99)
Social Policies Coordination Cabinet (GCPS)	Coordinates all social policies and conditional cash transfer programs, such as the Progressing with Solidarity Program (PROSOLI). Led by the Vice President. (18,75) In 2018, continued to expand the coverage of PROSOLI, trained PROSOLI participants on preventing child labor, and collaborated with UNICEF to improve PROSOLI’s system to track program participants. (83,84,100)

Evidence suggests that the Local and Municipal Committees of the CDN face limitations in their coordination efforts due to a lack of financial resources to adequately carry out their mandates. (21)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including insufficient funding for implementation.

Dominican Republic

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategic Plan to Eradicate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (PEN) (2006–2020)	Identifies the roles and responsibilities of government agencies and municipal representatives in eradicating the worst forms of child labor. Prioritizes prevention, protection, assistance, and the progressive eradication of the worst forms of child labor. (18,76,101) In 2018, the MT collaborated with the Autonomous University of Santo Domingo to develop a certificate program to train public officials on child labor laws and how to implement policies for the prevention and eradication of child labor. (83,84)
Roadmap Towards the Elimination of Child Labor in the Dominican Republic (2016–2020)	Aims to eliminate child labor by 2020 and sets targets and indicators for poverty reduction, health, education, institutional coordination, awareness raising, and information sharing. (3,22,75,77,102) In 2018, distributed information about child labor on radio and television programs for World Day Against Child Labor. (84)
National Action Plan against Human Trafficking and Illicit Smuggling of Migrants (2017–2020)†	Identifies the roles and responsibilities of government agencies in preventing and combating trafficking in persons and assisting trafficking victims. Approved in 2018 and implemented by the CITIM. (21,95,98,103)
Education Pact (2014–2030)	Includes strategies to combat child labor and seeks to improve the quality of, and access to, primary and secondary education by increasing attendance and graduation rates and enrolling more students in the Extended School Day Program. (75,104,105) Implemented by the Ministry of Education and supported by World Bank. In 2018, received an additional $50 million in support for the 2018–2022 period and was extended for an additional 2 years until September of 2022. (105,106)
National Development Strategy 2030 (END)	Aims to reduce poverty and inequality and includes programs that aim to combat child labor, provide universal education to all children, and expand access to secondary school, including for students without identity documents. Implemented by the Ministry of Economy. (22,66,75,107) During the reporting period, the Ministry continued to dedicate 4 percent of GDP to education as indicated by the National Development Strategy. (21,108)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Insufficient allocation of resources has slowed efforts to fully implement key policies related to child labor, including conducting planned activities in a timely manner. (2,109,110)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Project to Reduce Child Labor and Improve Working Conditions in Agriculture in the Dominican Republic (2017–2021)	$5 million USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO to support the efforts of the Government of the Dominican Republic to address child labor and strengthen labor law enforcement in agriculture. (111) In 2018, project implementers continued consultations with the MT to finalize implementation activities. (112) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
From Protocol to Practice: A Bridge to Global Action on Forced Labor (2015–2019)	USDOL-funded global project implemented by the ILO to support global and national efforts to combat forced labor of adults and children under the 2014 ILO Protocol and supporting Recommendation to C. 29 on Forced Labor. In the Dominican Republic, aims to build the capacity of the MT to enforce laws and regulations related to forced labor and improve data management systems. (113) In 2018, finalized a draft labor inspection needs assessment report; in addition, MT officials, including the Vice Minister and the Child Labor Director, implemented a workshop for 36 local representatives and labor inspectors. (114) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Progressing with Solidarity (PROSOLI)†	Government program that provides conditional cash transfers to low-income families to increase children's school attendance and reduce child labor. (3,67,75,115,116) The Vice President's Office reported PROSOLI's School Attendance and School Subsidy Incentives in 2018 supported 238,714 households with school-age children, reducing school dropout rates among project participants by 1.8 percent and children's vulnerability to child labor. In addition, PROSOLI launched the creation of community reports to improve monitoring and evaluation of program's impact. (117,118) Although previous reports indicated PROSOLI required program participants to present identity documentation to access program benefits, PROSOLI provides legal assistance to participants to obtain identity documentation. (21)

Program	Description
Extended School Day Program (Jornada Escolar Extendida)†	Ministry of Education program to extend school hours to a full day (8 a.m. to 4 p.m.) to improve educational achievement and reduce child labor. (2,119,120) As of December 2018, the program covers nearly 68 percent of the nation's school children and is aiming to provide coverage nationwide by the end of 2020. (8,21,60)
Regional Initiatives for the Elimination of Child Labor in Latin America and the Caribbean (2014–2018)	$2.2 million Government of Spain-funded, 4 year project implemented by the ILO that aims to strengthen public policies and government capacity to combat child labor in 19 countries in Latin America and the Caribbean, including the Dominican Republic. Seeks to develop information systems on the worst forms of child labor and increase youth employment in the Dominican Republic. (121) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Regional Initiatives for the Elimination of Child Labor Program during the reporting period.
Empowering and Supporting the Human Rights of Children and Youth (2012–2018)	$1.2 million Government of Canada-funded, 6 year project that aims to build the capacity of government agencies and civil society organizations responsible for protecting children, especially those of Haitian descent, from sexual and labor exploitation. In 2018, was extended for an additional 3 month period and was allocated an additional $110,000. (122,123)
Line 700 Hotline‡	Office of the First Lady's free hotline to enable citizens to report cases of the worst forms of child labor. Active in 2018. (81,124,125)
UNICEF Country Program (2018–2022)*	$15.4 million UNICEF-funded program that supports the government's efforts to improve education, health, social inclusion, and protection for children in the Dominican Republic. Includes projects to increase birth registration rates and build the capacity of relevant government agencies to protect children, especially those without identity documents, from violence, sexual exploitation, and trafficking in persons. (3,67,126)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of the Dominican Republic.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (16,127-130)

In 2018, in an effort to improve the national education system, the government allocated 4 percent of the national GDP in its budget for primary and secondary education for the sixth consecutive year. (2,3,8,22) Although the Dominican Republic has programs that target the worst forms of child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly to address commercial sexual exploitation of children and harmful work in agricultural areas. (2,3,31)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Dominican Republic (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Raise the minimum age for work from 14 years to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2015 – 2018
	Publish information on the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected, and the number of criminal law enforcement investigations, prosecutions, and convictions secured.	2009 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors in accordance with the ILO's technical advice to provide adequate coverage of the workforce, especially in remote rural areas.	2009 – 2018
	Increase the human and financial resources in order to ensure adequate criminal law enforcement related to child labor.	2009 – 2018
	Increase penalties and improve case tracking so that labor inspectors are able to promptly follow up on violation remediation to improve enforcement of laws prohibiting child labor and discourage the use of child labor by employers.	2012 – 2018
	Establish a system to verify the age of young workers to better protect children without birth certificates or other legal documentation from exploitation.	2012 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Improve training of inspectors to increase the quality of interviews with employers and workers, gather consistent documentation, conduct timely re-inspection to ensure compliance, and use inspection data to enable prosecution.	2012 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors are able to communicate with Creole-speaking workers, including those who may be underage, in order to adequately conduct inspections for child labor violations.	2012 – 2018
	Ensure that the National Council for Children and Adolescents has sufficient resources and facilities to provide the necessary care for victims of child labor.	2015 – 2018
	Improve coordination and case tracking systems between the Ministry of Labor and the Office of the Attorney General to ensure violations are adequately investigated and prosecuted.	2013 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that the National Steering Committee to Eliminate Child Labor's Local and Municipal Committees have sufficient resources to effectively coordinate efforts to address child labor.	2013 – 2018
Government Policies	Ensure that appropriate funding exists to effectively implement and coordinate policies related to child labor.	2009 – 2018
	Revise the Ministry of Education's Operations Manual of Public Education Centers to reflect Dominican law and policies that allow children without birth certificates or other identity documents to enroll in primary and secondary education and complete schooling.	2017 – 2018
Social Programs	Increase efforts to issue identity documents to all children to reduce their vulnerability to labor exploitation.	2011 – 2018
	Increase school infrastructure and teacher availability, especially in rural areas, remove supply and school-related fees, and expand efforts to reduce discrimination in schools.	2011 – 2018
	Address the specific educational needs of vulnerable populations, including unaccompanied migrant children, children of parents who have been deported, and undocumented children.	2011 – 2018
	Expand social protection programs, particularly for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and harmful agricultural work.	2010 – 2018

In 2018, Ecuador made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The National Assembly's Workers' Rights Committee presented legislation to reform Ecuador's Labor Code to strengthen provisions related to the eradication of child labor. The National Assembly also passed the Law to Prevent and Eradicate Violence against Women, which includes protections for girls and women who become victims of sexual exploitation. In addition, the Ministry of Economic and Social Inclusion signed agreements to strengthen child labor prevention efforts with local governments. The Ministry of the Interior also began drafting a new National Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons and the Ministry of Labor began drafting a 2018–2021 update to the current National Plan to Eradicate Child Labor. However, children in Ecuador engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The labor inspectorate continues to lack sufficient resources.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ecuador engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1,2) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ecuador.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.9 (168,530)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.3

Although the government conducted two surveys in 2017 that included some information on child labor, the government has not conducted a nationwide child labor survey since 2012. Both government and civil society agree that a lack of updated statistics hampers efforts in eradicating child labor. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Use in the production of pornography (2,12)
	Forced labor in banana and palm plantations, floriculture, fishing, mining; and in domestic work, street vending, and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,12)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)-(c) of ILO C. 182

Civil society and government sources reported incidences of Peruvian adolescents being recruited into forced labor under false promises of employment in illegal mines in Ecuador. (2,14,15) Migrant and refugee girls from Colombia, Peru, and Venezuela are particularly vulnerable to labor trafficking in domestic servitude and forced begging. (2,8,12) Indigenous children between the ages of 6 and 10 from the highlands are trafficked for forced begging in Guayaquil, Quito, and Rumiñahui. (7,16) Children of Venezuelan and Colombian migrants and refugees are also vulnerable to exploitative labor practices in some parts of the fishing sector in the coastal region and artisanal mining in southern Ecuador and in the northern province of Imbabura. (2,10)

Migrant and refugee children from other Latin American countries, girls from poor families, and indigenous and Afro-Ecuadorian girls are used in commercial sexual exploitation. (2,12) Commercial sexual exploitation in Ecuador also occurs near illegal mining sites. (2,16,17) Venezuelan, Colombian, and Peruvian girls are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation in Ecuador. (10,12) Sex trafficking networks also recruit children from schools, and, increasingly, through social media platforms which encourage children to recruit their friends and classmates. (12,14) On Ecuador’s northern border, children are forcibly recruited to engage in drug trafficking and robbery. (12)

Despite education being free in Ecuador, children face barriers to accessing education, including having to pay for uniforms and books, lack of space and teachers, and lack of transportation for children who must attend schools far from their homes. (2,18) The lack of schools in some areas specifically affects indigenous and refugee children, who must travel long distances to attend school. (2) Many indigenous children abandon school early, both in rural and urban areas. (6,11) Specifically, almost half of all indigenous children in rural areas, and 37 to 40 percent of those in urban areas, do not attend secondary school, which can make them more vulnerable to child labor. (19) International humanitarian organizations and local government officials reported that, in practice, schools sometimes denied children of refugees and migrants access to education because they did not have refugee status and lacked identity and academic documents. (2) International organization representatives said these cases were likely due to Ministry of Education administrative staff error about required documentation and differences between the Venezuelan and Ecuadorian academic calendars. (2,20) According to the Ministry of Education, of the approximately 240,000 Venezuelans residing in Ecuador as of November 2018, 37,000 are below the age of 17, but only 12,514 Venezuelan children and adolescents had registered for school. (2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ecuador has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

In May 2018, the National Assembly's Workers' Rights Committee presented legislation to reform Ecuador's labor code to strengthen provisions on the eradication of child labor; labor protections of adolescents ages 15 to 18, and the fight against the worst forms of child labor, including sex and labor trafficking. (2,12) The reform proposes to make it easier for labor inspectors to conduct inspections for the purposes of identifying child labor; establishes a registry of employers who hire working adolescents; and supports an initiative to strengthen local governments' awareness and prevention of child labor. (2,12) In January 2018, the National Assembly passed the Law to Prevent and Eradicate Violence against Women, which includes the protection of girls and women against human trafficking for sexual exploitation. (2,28) The law is intended to coordinate the efforts of local governments, the Attorney General's Office, and other government entities to develop action plans, programs, and policies. (2,28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Industrial Relations (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Industrial Relations (MOL)	Monitors child labor; conducts labor inspections at worksites, and enforces child labor laws in the formal sector; administering sanctions and collecting fines from companies found using child labor. Also provides technical assistance to local governments on child labor. (2) Using the Unified System of Registration of Child Labor (SURT), collects information on child laborers and refers children to appropriate government services. (2)
Ministry of Economic and Social Inclusion (MIES), Office of Special Protection to Vulnerable Population	Provides remediation services to child laborers and their families. Assists victims of child labor found in the informal sector. (2) Through its Office of Special Protection, maintains a national anti-child-labor program involving coordination with civil society organizations and local governments. (2)
Attorney General's Office (AGO)	Enforces criminal laws against child labor, hazardous child labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and human trafficking. (2,29,30) The AGO's Specialized Victim Witness Protection Program (SPAVT) provides immediate support and shelter to victims and witnesses willing to press charges and testify against their abusers and coordinates referrals for further assistance with other government agencies. (2) During the reporting period, SPAVT provided services to 18 human trafficking victims. (12)
Ministry of Interior (MOI)	Oversees and evaluates all police actions, including the National Police Unit for Crimes against Children and Adolescents (DINAPEN). (2,15) DINAPEN investigates all crimes against children, including abuse, sexual exploitation, sex tourism, smuggling, kidnapping, exploitative child labor, and forced labor. (2) DINAPEN's Anti-Trafficking Unit also investigates child trafficking cases. (2)
Office of the Prosecutor	Tries cases related to the worst forms of child labor. (2)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Ecuador took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018

In 2018, the Ombudsman's Office called on the MOL to conduct labor inspections in banana-producing areas, particularly in the coastal provinces of Los Rios, El Oro, and Guayas, to monitor the safety of affected families. (2) During the reporting period, the labor inspectorate's funding was drastically reduced. The MOL did not provide a specific explanation for the difference, but in general, the Ecuadorian government suffered from budgetary constraints in 2018 due to economic pressures. (2,20) The MOL reported that the labor inspectorate was understaffed and lacked the necessary resources, such as transportation and equipment, to fulfill its mandate. (2) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Ecuador's workforce, which includes over 8 million workers. According to the ILO's recommendation of 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Ecuador would employ about 534 labor inspectors. (2,31,32) MOL and ILO officials reported that inspectors' coverage of the agricultural sector is insufficient, even though most children work in this area. (2) According to the MOL, Ecuador's labor inspectors focus only on formal sector employment, despite large numbers of Ecuadorians and migrants working in the informal sector. (12) Although Ecuadorian laws and regulations governing child labor are comprehensive, those regarding hazardous work are not enforced equally in rural areas and family-run businesses. (2,33)

The absence of appropriate sanctions against employers may also hinder efficient labor law enforcement. (14) Inspectors do not have sufficient knowledge of child labor laws and lack training on identifying trafficking in persons (TIP) victims. (2,12,14)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ecuador took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the National Police Unit for Crimes against Children and Adolescents (DINAPEN) that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including its referral mechanism.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (33)	Yes (2)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (14)	Yes (2)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (34)	Yes (2)
Number of Investigations	80 (14)	5 (2)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	2 (2)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	8 (14)	5 (2)
Number of Convictions	1 (14)	2 (2)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (14)	Yes (2)

During the reporting period, criminal investigators received training on cases linked to cybercrime, cryptocurrency, child pornography, and the use of Facebook for commercial sexual exploitation of children. (2) In 2018, the Anti-Trafficking Unit conducted 13 anti-trafficking police operations, arresting 18 traffickers, and rescuing 55 victims. Of these operations, six resulted in investigations of sexual exploitation, one for labor trafficking, one for the purpose of forced prostitution, and three for the purposes of child pornography. (12) The Government of Ecuador reported two convictions for trafficking in persons of children and both defendants were sentenced to 16 years in prison. (20) Civil society reports that the Anti-Trafficking Unit and DINAPEN lack resources to adequately investigate trafficking in persons cases. (12)

In November, the Specialized Victim Witness Protection Program (SPAVT) inaugurated a new shelter for female adolescent TIP victims in Quito, which, once opened to victims, will have 21 spots and provide psychological services, education, and other social services. (2) The MOL, Ministry of Interior (MOI), Ministry of Economic and Social Inclusion (MIES), and the Ministry of Tourism all supported trainings for public officials, which addressed trafficking in persons and promoted anti-TIP public awareness campaigns. (12) However, shelters serve only

Ecuador

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

girls who have been victims of sex trafficking. There are no shelters for boys or girls who have been victims of trafficking unrelated to sex. (12,13,34) Although the MIES will generally assign child victims to shelters depending on space availability, the anti-TIP unit and MIES officials cite a lack of shelters in many provinces as a primary constraint in victim assistance. (2,12,20) Although the introduction in 2016 of the Unified System of Registration of Child Labor (SURTl) has improved the referral mechanisms for victims removed from the worst forms of child labor, the process is ad hoc and some government officials find it difficult to use, sometimes keeping their own records of child labor cases instead of using the system. Of the information collected, the government does not publish it. (2,14) MOL technical staff is exploring ways to improve the system. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the provision of social services for victims of the worst forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-institutional Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor	Coordinates government efforts to combat child labor. (2) Includes participation from MOL, DINAPEN, AGO, and MIES. (2,15)
Inter-Agency Committee against Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates government efforts to combat human trafficking, including child trafficking. Established as part of the National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking, Sexual and Labor Exploitation, and Other Forms of Exploitation. (30) MOI continued to chair this committee as the main coordinating body of the Government of Ecuador's anti-trafficking efforts in 2018. (12)
Technical Secretariat for the Lifetime Plan	Convenes government ministries to discuss issues, including child labor. (35) Remained the Government of Ecuador's signature social program in 2018. (2)
National Council for Intergenerational Equity (CNII)	Coordinates inter-agency efforts to protect vulnerable populations, including children. (35) The Council was active during the reporting period and is requesting MOL allow the Council to lead the Inter-Agency Committee to Eradicate Child Labor. (36)
Local Autonomous Governments	Participate in coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor and implement the guidelines provided by CNII. (35) Responsible for ensuring the correct application of norms related to child labor. (35)
Inter-Agency Table for the Eradication of Child Labor (Mesa Interinstitucional de Erradicación del Trabajo Infantil)	Coordinates regional efforts to address child labor. (37) Participants include MIES; regional councils of Childhood and Adolescence; Ministries of Education, Labor, and Interior; DINAPEN; and AGO. (20,37) Although the national roundtable was not active in 2018, provincial tables continued to coordinate work and reported to central government agencies when joint coordination was necessary in efforts to eradicate child labor. (36)

Weak coordination between ministries providing social services has caused difficulties in ensuring that children rescued from working in the informal sector receive adequate social assistance. (38)

In June 2018, in recognition of World Day against Child Labor, MIES signed agreements to strengthen child labor prevention efforts with local governments, including with multiple cities in Chimborazo, Napo, and Tungurahua provinces. (2) In Manta, MIES signed an agreement with local government and chamber of commerce officials to launch a seal certifying that goods made in Manta were not produced with child labor. MIES reported that their efforts reached 10,000 children and adolescents in 2018. (2) MOI drafted the Inter-Institutional Protocol for the Comprehensive Care and Protection of TIP victims (Protocolo Interinstitucional para la Atención y Protección Integral a Víctimas de Trata de Personas), which aims to strengthen inter-agency coordination of efforts related to TIP victims. (2) In order to improve and better coordinate government response to the Venezuelan migration crisis, the government established a Human Mobility Board of government ministries, local governments, international organizations, and civil society organizations and a TIP sub-group to organize anti-TIP efforts concerning Venezuelans. (12) In September 2018, the governments of Ecuador and Colombia held a binational workshop for government officials focused on TIP victim identification, differentiating between TIP and other crimes, and methods for taking victim statements. (12)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan to Eradicate Child Labor	Establishes strategy to eradicate child labor in Ecuador by 2021. (2) During the reporting period, MOL updated the Plan, which is currently going through government approval. (2) As part of the plan, the government conducted trainings, workshops, public awareness campaigns, and partnerships with the private sector in 2018. (2)
Lifetime Plan (Plan Toda Una Vida) (2017–2021)	Aims to support vulnerable populations from birth to advanced age through a series of social welfare programs. Aims to reduce child labor of children ages 5 to 14 to 2.7 percent by 2021. (14,39) Launched on November 28, 2017. (14) Led by the Technical Secretariat for the Lifetime Plan. (40) In 2018, and in accordance with the plan, the Government of Ecuador conducted social welfare activities including combating child malnutrition, expanding early childhood education programs, sponsoring conditional cash transfer programs, and increasing job training and higher education opportunities for at-risk youth. (20)
National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking, Sexual and Labor Exploitation, and Other Forms of Exploitation	Establishes processes to prevent, investigate, and impose legal sanctions against human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and other forms of abuse. Enacted by decree in 2006 to protect and restore the rights of victims. (41-43) In 2018, the government held activities to combat and prevent trafficking in persons including inter-agency coordination, such as trainings, workshops, public awareness campaigns, and partnerships with the private sector. (2) In addition, the government began drafting a new plan which is supported by an IOM technical assistance grant. (2,20)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address all worst forms of child labor.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Project to Eradicate Child Labor (PETI)†	MOL project under the National Plan for Good Living to prevent hazardous child labor in agriculture, manufacturing, construction, and mining. (6,44) In 2018, the project was under revision for the 2018–2021 period. (45) Between January and June of 2018, PETI conducted anti-child labor training to 166 people, assisted 184 local government officials with the development and implementation of public policies on eradicating child labor; and conducted 90 consultations on child labor with the private sector. (2,46)
Business Network for a Child Labor Free Ecuador	UN initiative that seeks to gain commitment from participating industries to promote the prevention and elimination of child labor in their supply chains, trains businesses on child labor prevention, and creates employment opportunities for the parents of children engaged in child labor. (47,48) Through the network, MOL provided trainings on anti-child labor practices to companies nationwide during the reporting period. (2)
National Program to Combat Child Begging†	Seeks to raise awareness about child begging; aims to facilitate social services for children begging in the streets. MIES continued to raise awareness in 2018 through its national campaign on child begging Give Dignity (Da Dignidad). (2)
USDOL-Funded Initiatives	Reducing Child Labor and Forced Labor in Palm Oil Supply Chains (2018–2022),* $6 million project to improve the implementation of social compliance systems that promote acceptable conditions of work and reduction of child labor and forced labor in palm oil supply chains; Building Effective Policies Against Child Labor in Ecuador and Panama (2012–2018), $4.3 million project implemented by ILO in collaboration with Casa Esperanza, Comunidades y Desarrollo en Ecuador (COMUNIDEC) , and Fundación Esquel . (49,50) EducaFuturo Project (2012–2018), $8.1 million project implemented by Partners of the Americas, in collaboration with Expoflores, COMUNIDEC , and Fundación de las Americas . Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

Program	Description
Prevention of Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents	Ministry of Tourism program that seeks to prevent commercial sexual exploitation by creating regulations and awareness campaigns in the tourism sector. In 2018, the Ministry continued to provide online training to hotel owners and employees on identifying, responding to, and reporting suspected cases of child sex tourism and trafficking in persons. (2) It also conducted public awareness workshops and participated in the XI Meeting of the Regional Action Group of the Americas, which seeks to address and share strategies in prevention. (2)
Young Workers' Symphonic Orchestra (Orquesta Sinfónica de los Trabajadores Jóvenes Eloy Alfaro)†	Orchestra that performs to raise awareness of child labor. (38) Established by MOL in 2016, comprises more than 200 former child laborers from Quito and Cuenca who take daily music lessons funded by MOL.
Grants for Human Development	Conditional cash transfer program run by MIES that supplements household income for vulnerable families. (2) In October 2018, President Moreno announced that the administration assigned $730 million to the grant. The Moreno Administration planned to expand coverage to one million cash transfers by the end of 2018. (20)
Mission Tenderness (Misión Ternura)†	Seeks to promote the development of children under age 5 by combating malnutrition, increasing the number of children participating in early childhood education programs, and increasing participation of children from poor and vulnerable families in public childhood development programs. (2)
Less Poverty, More Development (Menos Pobreza, Más Desarrollo)†	Aims to reduce extreme poverty from 8 percent to 3.5 percent by 2021, in part, through a conditional cash transfer for families living below the poverty line. (2,51)
Youth Impulse (Impulso Joven)†	Seeks to increase job training and higher education opportunities for at-risk youth, support youth entrepreneurship through preferential loans, and connect employers with at-risk youth. (2)

† Program is funded by the Government of Ecuador.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2,38,52,53)

*Program was launched during reporting period.

Although civil society stakeholders commended the government's social programs, they reiterated that these programs only make limited interventions in sectors in which child labor is most prevalent, specifically the informal and agricultural sectors. (2)

VII. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ecuador (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that laws and regulations governing child labor, especially hazardous labor, are enforced consistently throughout the country, including in rural areas and family-run businesses.	2016 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate is properly funded so that inspectors receive sufficient resources, including transportation, to adequately carry out their duties. Ensure that inspections sufficiently cover sectors in which child labor has been reported, including the agricultural sector and the informal sector.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors have sufficient knowledge of existing laws, penalties, and processes, and training in victim identification to conduct inspections and refer victims to social services.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that police investigators receive sufficient resources, including shelters for victims, to investigate cases of the worst forms of child labor and refer victims.	2016 – 2018
	Strengthen the provision of specialized services for victims under the age of 18.	2018
	Continue to improve the Unified System of Registration of Child Labor (SURT), ensure that labor inspectors use it to track cases of the worst forms of child labor, and publish this information.	2018
Coordination	Strengthen coordinating mechanisms among ministries providing social services to victims of child labor, especially in the informal sector.	2015 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Conduct a new child labor survey so that there is sufficient data to inform government actions to eliminate child labor.	2018
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education, particularly secondary education, accessible for all children, including indigenous and refugee children and children from rural areas, by removing school-related fees, increasing classroom space, and providing adequate transportation.	2014 – 2018
	Enhance efforts to address exploitative labor practices and labor trafficking of migrant and refugee children.	2018
	Ensure that children of refugees and migrants have full access to education, regardless of their ability to provide documentation.	2018
	Ensure that social programs make interventions in sectors where child labor is most prevalent, specifically in the informal and agricultural sectors.	2018

In 2018, Egypt made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Social Solidarity provided supplemental financial support to over 1.6 million individuals to support children's school attendance. The government also supported the enrollment of 44,000 refugee children in schools and formally adopted the National Plan of Action Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Supporting Family and the National Strategy on Childhood and Motherhood, which also has a section on child labor. However, children in Egypt engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in quarrying limestone. The government did not publish data on the enforcement of child labor laws. In addition, programs to combat child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Egypt engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in quarrying limestone. (1-5) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Egypt.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	2.9 (246,179)
Attending School (%)	10 to 14	93.8
Combining Work and School (%)	10 to 14	1.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		95

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of cotton (4,8-11)
	Caring for livestock (4,11,12)
	Fishing, activities unknown (4,13)
Industry	Quarrying† limestone (1-4)
	Making bricks (4,14-18)
	Working in carpentry workshops (4,19,20)
	Working in marble workshops (21,22)
	Construction, activities unknown (4,11,18,23)
	Working in aluminum factories (4,24)
Services	Domestic work (4,12,18)
	Driving tuktuks (4,25,26)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Repairing automobiles (4,27)
	Street work, including selling goods, collecting garbage, and sweeping (4,8,19,23,28)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Domestic work as a result of human trafficking (13,29)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,5,30)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,5,31)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Some girls are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation under the pretext of temporary marriage to wealthy foreign men, mostly from Persian Gulf countries. (4,13,30) In the past 2 years, Egyptian children were trafficked to Italy, where they were used for bonded child labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and illicit activities. (11,29,32-37) Although the numbers decreased in 2017, and further in 2018, approximately 930 unaccompanied Egyptian children were registered in Italy in 2018 and another 300 had escaped from their shelters in Italy. Some Egyptian children continued to fall victim to labor exploitation in agriculture and food services, and some were sexually exploited. (38)

Many children drop out of school because of school-related costs, such as transportation, clothing, and food. (4,10,13) Girls face additional barriers to education, including long distances to school, harassment and violence at school and on the way to school, lack of sanitation facilities, and cultural barriers. (13,39) However, in academic year 2017–2018, the government helped enroll 44,000 refugee children in schools, not all of whom were registered with UNHCR. (40) Of these, approximately 40,000 Syrian refugee children received education grants from UN agencies to enroll in school. (41)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Egypt has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Egypt’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 64 of the Child Law (42)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 1 of Ministry of Manpower’s Decree 118 (43)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 1–2 of Ministry of Manpower's Decree 118 (43)

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 34 of the Law on Narcotics; Article 65 of the Child Law; Article 2.2 of Ministry of Manpower's Decree 118 (42,43,47)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	15	Ministry of Defense Guidelines on Youth Volunteers in the Armed Forces (48)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 1 of the Law on Military and National Service (49)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 7-bis(b) of the Child Law (42)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 59(1) of the Child Law; Articles 80 and 238 of the Constitution (42,44)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 54 of the Child Law (42)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (32,50)

Laws prohibiting the commercial sexual exploitation of children are not comprehensive because they do not criminally prohibit the use of a child in prostitution, although procuring of children for commercial sexual exploitation is covered under the Child Law. (42)

The law prohibits hazardous occupations and activities for children, including in quarrying, tanning, welding, spraying pesticides, and carrying heavy loads. (43) However, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover brick production, an area of work in which there is evidence of exposure to hazardous temperatures. (14,15,17,18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Manpower that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Manpower	Enforces child labor laws and regulations, including receiving and investigating child labor complaints. Inspectors conduct routine labor inspections and report violations to the Ministry of the Interior, which then refers the case for prosecution. (13)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforces laws and regulations prohibiting human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (13)
Ministry of Justice, Prosecutor General's Office	Prosecutes violation of laws related to the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking. (13)
Ministry of Local Development	Provides administrative and logistical support for the enforcement of child labor laws. Administers the Child Protection Committees. (13)
Administrative Control Authority	Investigates government corruption and trafficking in persons, and reports violations to the Ministry of the Interior, which refers the case for prosecution. (51)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Egypt took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Manpower that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, the Ministry of Manpower continued its cooperation with the ILO on labor inspector training. From November 2013 to March 2018, the Ministry provided training on core labor standards to 911 labor inspectors. (18) During the reporting period, the government issued 6,663 formal warnings for labor violations, and filed 602 violation reports. (51) Additionally, from January 2017 to March 2018, the Ministry referred 74 institutions to the Prosecutor General's Office for child labor violations. During the same period, the Ministry protected approximately 19,000 children from child labor. (50) It is unclear if all of these children were engaged in child labor or were at risk. (50)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Egypt's workforce, which includes over 29.95 million workers. (53) According to the ILO's technical advice of 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Egypt would employ about 1,997 inspectors. (54,55) The government does not publish information about the funding of the inspectorate, initial training for new inspectors, the number of inspections, and penalties for violations. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Egypt took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including disaggregation of human trafficking enforcement data on children.

In 2018, government bodies, such as the National Coordination Committee on Preventing Illegal Migration and Combating Trafficking in Persons, provided training on human trafficking to 261 judges, 159 public prosecutors, 98 police officers, and other government officials, social workers and civil society representatives, and journalists. (57) The Ministry of the Interior investigated 78 cases of human trafficking, prosecuted 11 cases, and convicted 40 individuals. At the end of year, there were 32 pending prosecutions and 21 active investigations. (57) At least some cases involved child trafficking, but the exact disaggregate number is unavailable. (57)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including among government agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Council for Childhood and Motherhood (NCCM)	Coordinates enforcement of laws related to child labor, including its worst forms. Provides technical support and training about child labor for the Ministry of Manpower's inspectors. (7) Identifies and monitors at-risk children. Manages two 24-hour hotlines and receives reports of child labor and child trafficking. (13) In 2018, NCCM held consultative workshops with government partners and NGOs to implement the National Strategic Plan to Counter Violence against Children, which includes elements to counter sexual exploitation of children. (40) NCCM also provided human trafficking training of trainers, who subsequently held sessions with 720 children. An additional 700 children received awareness messaging through interactive skits. (57) Because of awareness-raising campaigns, NCCM reported an increase in the number of reports of irregular migrations and child trafficking that it received in 2018. NCCM also cooperated with other government agencies and signed a protocol to establish a shelter for survivors of human trafficking. (57)
National Coordinating Committee to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates the efforts of the Ministries of Manpower, Justice, Social Solidarity, and the Interior; the Council for Human Rights, Childhood, and Motherhood; and the Council for Women, for drafting a National Strategy to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (13) Research was unable to determine whether the National Coordinating Committee to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor was active during the reporting period.
National Coordination Committee on Preventing Illegal Migration and Combating Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates efforts to combat human trafficking. Led by an Ambassador appointed by the Prime Minister, comprises 18 government entities, including the Ministries of the Interior and Manpower. (13) In 2018, the Committee carried out a national campaign to raise awareness about human trafficking. Projects included a photo exhibit, a music video featuring several pop stars that was viewed 8 million times, a media campaign on the treatment of domestic workers, updated information on its Facebook page, publication of a book on children on the move, and a manual for NGOs on countering human trafficking. (57,58) Despite efforts, insufficient coordination prevents effective collaboration of government agencies and NGOs. (57)
Child Protection Committees	Coordinates child protection efforts at the local level. Led by the Ministry of Social Solidarity and chaired by local governors in each governorate, with subcommittees at each police station. (13) In January 2019, NCCM re-established Child Protection Committees that had previously been inactive. (57)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Supporting Family (2018–2025)†	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2025 and identify roles of government agencies responsible for assisting child laborers. (13) Developed in 2017 and formally adopted in 2018, the strategic objectives of the National Plan of Action include expansion of the child labor knowledge base; capacity building of agencies providing support; social protection, with links to existing programs; enhanced education, including vocational education for children; and advocacy and awareness raising. (18)
Third National Plan of Action Against Human Trafficking (2016–2021)	Aims to maintain referral mechanisms, train law enforcement officials, and combat trafficking of street children. (13) During the reporting period, the National Coordination Committee on Preventing Illegal Migration and Combating Trafficking in Persons began to work on improving the national referral mechanism. Several government agencies provided human trafficking training to officials. (52) In 2017 and 2018, the Ministry of Social Solidarity provided services to thousands of children who engage in street work. (52)
National Strategy for Childhood and Motherhood (2018–2030)†	The child labor chapter aims to promote dialogue on child labor legislation, including updating the hazardous work list; building the capacity of relevant government agencies, such the Ministry of Manpower and NCCM; developing programs to address child labor; and expanding education and vocational training opportunities. (4)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Enhancing Access of Children to Education and Fighting Child Labor (2014–2018)	$65 million, EU-funded, 4-year project implemented by the WFP to provide food security for up to 100,000 children at risk of child labor and financial assistance to 400,000 family members to compensate for wages that child labor would have otherwise generated, enabling children to attend school. (59) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Expanding Access to Education and Protection for At-Risk Children in Egypt (2016–2021)	$32 million, EU-funded project implemented by UNICEF in cooperation with the Ministry of Education and the NCCM to expand access to education for 36,000 children, including 6,000 children with disabilities, and to support 15 Child Protection Committees in 15 governorates. (60) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement Expanding Access to Education and Protection for at Risk Children in Egypt during the reporting period.
Solidarity and Dignity Program (Takaful and Karama)†	Funded by the Ministry of Social Solidarity, the program promotes schools attendance and health monitoring for children by providing income supplements to poor families. (4) In 2018, the program had over 1.6 million participants. (40)
Children without Shelter†	The Ministry of Social Solidarity operates shelters for victims of human trafficking, child victims of trafficking and forced labor, and other vulnerable individuals. Dar as-Salam, operated by the NCCM and an NGO, Face, provides social services, including psychological counseling and health services. (63) Mobile units in 10 governorates work to reintegrate children with their families or place them in foster care. (40) In 2018, the units provided legal, medical, social, and psychological services to over 14,600 children. (57)

† Program is funded by the Government of Egypt.

In 2018, the Ministry of Education began providing training sessions for educators and administrators on human trafficking, forced marriage, and child labor. (57)

Although Egypt has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to address fully the extent of the problem, particularly for commercial sexual exploitation and quarrying limestone.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Egypt (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of children for commercial sexual exploitation.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the types of work that children perform in Egypt that expose them to hazardous temperatures, such as brick production, are prohibited for children under age 18.	2017 – 2018
Enforcement	Publish information on labor inspection, including the funding, initial training for inspectors, number of labor inspections, and penalties imposed and collected.	2011 – 2018
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by authorizing inspectors to assess penalties.	2017 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2018
	Publish information on initial training for criminal investigators and the disaggregate number of violations, investigations, prosecutions, and convictions for criminal violations of child labor laws.	2011 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure the National Coordinating Committee to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor is able to carry out their intended mandates, and ensure effective collaboration between government agencies and other stakeholders.	2017 – 2018
Social Programs	Ensure universal access to free public education, especially for girls, by addressing the cost of school fees, supplies, and other barriers to education.	2010 – 2018
	Expand programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem, particularly in commercial sexual exploitation and in quarrying limestone.	2010 – 2018

In 2018, El Salvador made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government extended its National Action Plan for the Protection of Children and Adolescents into 2019 and modified its process for granting adolescents work permits, both with the goal of aligning laws and policies with international standards and national legislation. El Salvador also published its Annual Household Survey with data on child labor, as well as a guide highlighting efforts to combat child labor in the sugarcane industry. In addition, the government launched the local government component of its Sustainable Families Strategy in 16 municipalities and implemented an inter-agency protocol to improve coordination of services for human trafficking victims. However, children in El Salvador engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in illicit activities, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the harvesting of coffee. Law enforcement agencies continue to lack sufficient resources to fully enforce child labor laws.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in El Salvador engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in illicit activities, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the harvesting of coffee. (1-5) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in El Salvador.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	5.9 (68,431)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	6.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		90.8

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor [†]	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,11,13)
	Use by gangs to perform illicit activities, including committing homicides, extortion, and trafficking drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4,13)
	Forced begging, domestic work, and street work (3,4,11)

[†] Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

[‡] Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in El Salvador often lack economic and educational opportunities and are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. They are also recruited by gangs for illicit activities such as delivering threats, collecting extortion money, serving as surveillance, trafficking drugs, and committing homicides. (1,5,19,20) Children often emigrate to escape violence, extortion, and forced recruitment by gangs, in addition to seeking economic opportunities and family reunification. Once en route, they become vulnerable to human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (3,5,19,21) El Salvador’s Trafficking in Person’s Special Prosecutor indicated that girls between the ages of 10 and 17 were the most at risk of being trafficked. (5)

In 2018, El Salvador published the results of the 2017 El Salvador Annual Household Survey, which reflected a 1.3 percent reduction in child labor compared to 2016. (1) Child labor in El Salvador is predominantly male, with boys comprising approximately two-thirds of child laborers ages 5 to 17. (10,22-24) However, girls comprise the majority of children engaged in domestic work in third-party homes. (10,11,17)

Multiple reports, including by a third-party monitoring group, indicate that the use of child labor in sugarcane harvesting has decreased since 2010. (1,25-27) In 2018, the government cooperated with the ILO and FUNDAZUCAR, a corporate social responsibility entity of the Sugar Association of El Salvador, to publish a guide detailing efforts to combat child labor in the sugar industry. However, supporting data demonstrating the impact from these efforts have not been published. (1)

At schools, children are recruited, extorted, and harassed by gangs, which may cause them to stop attending school. Children who do not attend school are more vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms. (1,3,21,28-33) Poverty, particularly in rural areas, also presents a barrier to education in El Salvador because children leave school to contribute to family incomes. Furthermore, poor families may find it difficult to obtain the required birth certificates to enroll children in school. (1) Limited reporting also indicates that children from indigenous communities disproportionately lack access to education. (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

El Salvador has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 114 of the Labor Code; Article 38 of the Constitution; Article 59 of the Law for the Comprehensive Protection of Children and Adolescents (LEPINA) (34-36)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 105 of the Labor Code; Article 38 of the Constitution; Article 2 of Agreement 241 of 2011 (34,35,37)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 1 of Agreement 241 of 2011 (37)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 3 and 54–55 of the Special Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Article 13 of the Labor Code; Article 56 of LEPINA; Articles 4 and 9 of the Constitution (34-36,38)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 3 and 54–55 of the Special Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Article 56 of LEPINA (36,38)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 3 and 54–55 of the Special Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 169–173 of the Penal Code; Article 55 of LEPINA (36,38,39)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 3 and 54–55 of the Special Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 214 and 345 of the Penal Code; Article 56 of LEPINA (36,38,39)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 215 of the Constitution; Decree N. 298 (34,41)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 345 of the Penal Code; Article 1 of the Law Prohibiting Gangs and Criminal Organizations; Article 7 of the Constitution (34,39,42)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18‡	Articles 5, 18, 20, and 22 of the General Education Law; Article 82 of LEPINA; Article 56 of the Constitution (34,36,43)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 5, 18, 20, and 22 of the General Education Law; Article 82 of LEPINA; Article 56 of the Constitution (34,36,43)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (36,43)

In 2018, the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MTPS) modified its questionnaire for granting labor permits to adolescents to comply with its legislation on Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children. The MTPS also advised the Ministry of the Treasury on ILO rules on Sustainable Criteria to Prevent and Eliminate Child Labor from Public Acquisitions. (1)

In addition, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (34-36,43)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MTPS that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

(8,9,28,38) Refers exploited children to the Salvadoran Institute for the Comprehensive Development of Children and Adolescents (ISNA) for social services. (8)
National Civilian Police (PNC)	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Maintains PNC's Special Unit on Trafficking in Persons and Related Crimes that investigates cases of human trafficking, including child trafficking. (8,13,38) Maintains a hotline that receives complaints about human trafficking for sexual and labor exploitation. (45)
ISNA	Receives referrals from law enforcement agencies on cases of criminal exploitation of children, including for forced labor, human trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation. Provides child victims with services, including shelter, medical attention, psychological help, and legal advice. (46)

*Agency was created during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in El Salvador took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MTPS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, the MTPS published a comprehensive report detailing its activities targeting child labor from 2009 until 2018, including targeted inspection data on the worst forms of child labor in the fireworks, coffee, and sugar industries from 2017 through May 2018. (1) The Ministry indicated that in 2018, the labor inspectorate changed its work schedule to conduct inspections in the agricultural sector early in the morning to identify child labor. (1)

During the reporting period, 82 of El Salvador's 104 inspectors received training on International Law and National Legislation, the ILO and its Normative Systems, the Application of International Law and ILO Jurisprudence, Freedom of Association and Collective Bargaining, and Compliance with Equality Conventions. (1)

The MTPS indicated that its budget is insufficient to address workers' rights and expressed concern that the Ministry's proposed 2019 budget does not include funds to specifically combat child labor. (1) The labor inspectorate employed fewer inspectors in 2018 than in 2017, and inspectors focus primarily on the formal sector due to resource constraints, despite the size of El Salvador’s informal sector. In 2018, the Ministry did not report any inspection activities targeting the categorically worst forms of child labor, such as forced begging and forced domestic work, and instead limited inspections to known problem areas such as car washes, street vendors, and some farms. (1,48) Furthermore, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of El Salvador’s workforce, which includes more than 2.7 million workers. According to the ILO’s technical advice of a ratio approaching of 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, El Salvador would employ about 164 labor inspectors. (49)

The MTPS identified three child labor violations in 2018, but no penalties were issued because the cases were reportedly resolved upon re-inspection. (1)

Article 627 of the Labor Code specifies a default fine of no more than $60 per violation of all labor laws, including child labor laws. (1,35) Reports indicate that this amount is insufficient to deter labor violations. (5,28) In 2018, the MTPS imposed approximately $13,000 worth of labor fines, but information was not available to determine how much was collected overall and how much was collected for child labor violations. (1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Criminal law enforcement agencies in El Salvador took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018

In 2018, the Office of the Attorney General (AG) reported prosecuting 8 cases of sexual exploitation of minors involving 24 victims and 16 defendants, with 4 defendants receiving sentences of 10 to 12 years. (1) ISNA reported that police rescued 17 adolescent victims of human trafficking and placed them in the ISNA Regional Trafficking in Persons Shelter. (1)

Prosecutors in El Salvador received a range of refresher trainings on human trafficking issues, including 9 prosecutors trained in trafficking in persons and modalities of trafficking in persons, 37 prosecutors trained in cyber-crimes and trafficking, and 7 prosecutors trained in the history of gang evolution and trafficking. (1)

The AG reported that the Ministry of Justice and Public Security is underfunded and unable to field a sufficient number investigators to collect and analyze evidence to process case backlogs. (1) In addition, reports indicate that increased coordination between the National Civilian Police and the AG is needed to improve the investigation and prosecution of criminal child labor violations. (51)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including information sharing among agencies.

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor	Determines and implements government efforts to combat child labor, including the Roadmap to Make El Salvador a Country Free of Child Labor and its Worst Forms. Chaired by MTPS, includes 12 government agencies, along with representatives from labor unions, business associations, and NGOs. (10,11,13,52) Maintains a web-based monitoring system that allows government agencies to share and analyze information to coordinate the implementation of the Roadmap. (13,53,54) Research was unable to identify specific activities undertaken during the reporting period.
National Council Against Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates government efforts to combat human trafficking and implement the National Policy Against Trafficking in Persons. (13,55) Led by the Ministry of Justice and Public Security and composed of 11 government agencies. (13,38,56) In 2019, launched the Inter-Institutional Operation Protocol for the Immediate Attention to Trafficking Victims to establish an inter-agency coordination mechanism and expedite care to trafficking victims from multiple agencies. (5)
National Council for Children and Adolescents (CONNA)	Develops policies to protect the rights of children, including those regarding child labor, and implement LEPINA and the National Policy for the Protection of Children and Adolescents (PNPNA). (13,36,57,58) Composed of Departmental and Local Committees for Children's and Adolescents' Rights, ISNA, the Ministry of Public Security and Justice, the AG, the Human Rights Ombudsman, and other agencies. (13) In 2018, distributed guidelines for coordinating efforts in cases of sexual violence against children and adolescents. (5)
Departmental and Local Committees for Children's and Adolescents' Rights	Implement CONNA's policies, including PNPNA, at the departmental and municipal levels, as well as receive complaints of child rights violations at the departmental level. (13,36,59-61) Research was unable to identify specific activities undertaken during the reporting period.

Salvadoran police chiefs and prosecutors indicated that difficulties in collecting, sharing and gaining actionable insights from investigative information remain a challenge, especially because investigative bodies lack the capabilities to share information electronically. (5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant national policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
PNPNA (2013–2023)	Sets government policies aimed at guaranteeing children's rights and protecting children from violence and harm, including the worst forms of child labor. Other objectives include improving health services and access to quality education for children, including children with disabilities, and reducing poverty. (10,58) In 2018, the government launched the National Strategy for the Critical Development of Early Infancy as part of PNPNA. (63)
National Action Plan for the PNPNA (2014–2019)	Sets a framework for implementing the PNPNA from 2014 to 2017. Aims to address PNPNA objectives, including the prevention of violence, the promotion of access to quality education, and the elimination of child labor by focusing on children's and adolescents' rights, gender equality, and social inclusion. (10,64,65) During the reporting period, the action plan was extended into 2019 as part of an effort to bring El Salvador's laws and policies into compliance with international standards. (1)
National Policy Against Trafficking in Persons	Defines a comprehensive plan to combat human trafficking of adults and children for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Aims to improve prevention efforts, victim assistance, prosecution, interagency coordination, training, and anti-corruption efforts. (66,67) As part of the policy, El Salvador launched an interagency protocol to improve victim assistance, which resulted in trafficking victims receiving expedited medical and psychological care during the reporting period. (5) Also under the policy, the Anti-Trafficking Council continued to operate 19 offices that provided information and referrals for trafficking victims in 15 municipalities across the country. (48)
Educated El Salvador Plan	Outlines six priorities for improving El Salvador's national education system, including increasing security in schools and improving access to education for vulnerable groups, including children engaged in child labor. (13,33) The government indicated in a December 2018 progress report that fewer schools were in gang-controlled communities and that the overall high school dropout rate had decreased. (1)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (1,5,28,68-78)

In 2018, the Ministry of Labor highlighted ongoing social programs aimed at providing children access to education and the increase in the minimum wage as key actions taken during the reporting period that directly or indirectly impacted the prevalence of child labor in El Salvador. (79) The government has not incorporated child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Youth Policy (2010–2024). (80)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-funded Projects	Projects which aim to reduce the incidence of child labor, including: Youth Pathways—Central America (2015–2019), $16.5 million project implemented by Catholic Relief Services in El Salvador and Honduras; Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy (MAP) Development (2013–2018), $7 million project implemented by ILO in 10 countries; and Reducing Incidence of Child Labor and Harmful Conditions of Work in Economic Strengthening Initiatives (RICHES) (2017–2021), $1.5 million project implemented by the Grameen Foundation in El Salvador and the Philippines. (81–84) As part of the MAP project, USDOL is working with local stakeholders in El Salvador to ensure that the 2017 Annual Household Survey published in 2018 is accurate and consistent. (85) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Human Trafficking Public Awareness Campaigns†	Government public-awareness campaigns implemented by CONNA and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to raise awareness about the dangers of human trafficking. Includes CONNA’s “Don’t Risk Your Lives” campaign, supported by UNICEF and IOM, and the “Protection Starts at Home” and “Talk to Me” awareness programs, which promote respect towards the physical, psychological, and sexual integrity of children and adolescents. (13,50,51,81) In 2018, launched a public awareness campaign in cooperation with the UNODC Blue Heart Campaign that included outdoor billboards and broadcast media, as well as training for hotel operators and bus drivers. (5) Also launched a public awareness campaign to promote the Crime Stoppers tip line. (5)
Sustainable Families Programs†	Set of government programs focused on improving health, education, productivity, and security, and eliminating poverty through inclusive and sustainable economic growth and public services. Includes Health and Education Bonus Programs that assist families with cash transfers conditioned on children’s school attendance and health checkups. (66,89,90) In 2018, 16 municipalities were incorporated into the Financial and Productive Inclusion component of the strategy, which aims to engage local governments in pursuing the goals of the strategy. (91) The EU contributed $11 million in 2018 to support the strategy in 2019. (92)
School Prevention and Security Plan†	Programs implemented by MINED, the Ministry of Justice and Public Security, and the PNC in schools with high levels of violence. Includes activities such as provision of psychological help, online classes, skills workshops for youth, and increased police patrols. (94,95) In 2018, MINED opened 76 training centers and accelerated learning centers targeting secondary school students. (1)

† Program is funded by the Government of El Salvador.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (1,5,9,95-99)

Although the government implements several programs to reduce the worst forms of child labor by assisting poor families and school children, research found no evidence that the government has programs that assist child laborers who may not be living with their families and not attending school, such as children engaged in domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in El Salvador (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work from 14 years to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Enforcement	Publish or make publicly available the labor inspectorate’s level of funding.	2018
	Provide sufficient funding and resources to the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare and criminal law enforcement agencies to fully enforce child labor laws, including in the informal sector.	2010 – 2018
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate has the resources to adequately investigate all cases of child labor, including in the informal sector, and increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO’s technical advice.	2018
	Ensure that all inspectors receive regular refresher training and training on new laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that penalties are imposed, and publish information about fines collected for child labor violations.	2015 – 2018
	Establish monetary penalties for child labor violations that are proportionate to the nature and seriousness of the offense.	2009 – 2018
	Improve coordination between the National Civilian Police and the Attorney General in their investigation and prosecution of criminal cases related to the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2018
Coordination	Document and publish information regarding actions taken by the National Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor and the Departmental and Local Committees for Children's and Adolescents' Rights.	2018
	Develop information-sharing capabilities to improve coordination among criminal investigative agencies.	2018
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Youth Policy for 2010–2024.	2014 – 2018
Social Programs	Collect and publish government statistics evaluating the impact of collaborative projects targeting child labor in sugarcane production.	2016 – 2018
	Remove barriers to education, such as birth registration requirements, and ensure access for all children, including students of indigenous descent.	2011 – 2018
	Implement programs to address child labor for children not living with their parents, such as child labor in domestic work.	2017 – 2018

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2018, Eritrea is receiving an assessment of no advancement. Although Eritrea made some efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, government officials were complicit in the use of forced child labor in agriculture and military training. The government conducted 985 labor inspections during the year and provided education services to 8,575 out-of-school children in rural and remote areas. However, Eritrea is receiving this assessment because it continued to force students in grade 12, some of whom are under the age of 18, to participate in military training elements of the government's compulsory national service program, as well as forced agricultural labor. Evidence collected suggests that the national program called Maetot, in which children engage in compulsory labor in agricultural, environmental, and hygiene-related public works projects, did not take place during the reporting period due to financial constraints preventing implementation. However, Maetot remains an integral component of the government's national service framework. The government does not make law enforcement data publicly available and national laws and regulations do not identify hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children. In addition, the government does not have a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Eritrea engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced military training associated with national service and forced agricultural labor. Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Eritrea. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		45.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (1)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2019. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (3,4)
	Herding livestock (3-6)
Industry	Small-scale manufacturing (7)

Services	Domestic work, fetching water and firewood (4,7)
	Working in auto mechanic shops, bicycle repair shops, tea and coffee shops, metal workshops, grocery stores, the Asmara bowling alley, and open markets (3,5,7,9,10)
	Street work, including vending, cleaning cars, and begging (4,5,11)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The Ministry of Education operates a national mandatory Summer Work Program, known locally as Maetot, under which children from grades 9–12 who may be younger than age 18 are required to engage in compulsory labor in public works projects and on government farms, including tree planting, terracing, traffic safety campaigns, and water security activities, during their summer holidays. (9, 12, 14, 54) Some children may be required to work on roads, dams, canals, and irrigation projects. (14, 54) Children who do not participate in Maetot are charged fines. Students who do not pay fines are not permitted to enroll in the next academic year. (54) According to the government, the Maetot program did not take place in 2018 due to budgetary constraints, despite continuing to be a part of the education system in Eritrea. (9)

The Proclamation on National Service No. 82/1995 establishes compulsory military training and service, known as Active National Service, for all citizens ages 18 to 40. (15) To graduate from high school and meet the compulsory training component of National Service, students are required to complete their final year of schooling (grade 12) at the Warsai Yekalo Secondary School located at the Sawa military complex. Each year between 11,000 to 15,000 students enter grade 12 at Sawa, and while many of these students have typically reached age 18, some are reportedly as young as age 16. (12, 15–18, 54) Research suggests that at least half of the year spent at Sawa is devoted to mandatory military training, which includes military discipline and procedures, weapons training, a survival exercise, and a 2- to 4-week war simulation. (17, 19, 54) Some students are forced to conduct both agricultural activities on government-owned farms and construction on military housing, in addition to their military training. Girls are particularly vulnerable to exploitation and may be subject to forced domestic work, sexual violence, and concubinage in military training centers, including Sawa. (14, 54) In addition, conscientious objectors, including young Jehovah’s Witnesses, are not given an alternative to military service and are prevented from receiving a high school diploma, which leaves them vulnerable to becoming involved in child labor. (20)

The uncertain length of service, inability to earn higher wages in the private sector without completion of national service assignments, and notoriously harsh conditions at Sawa, and in some national service assignments provoked a significant number of youth, including unaccompanied minors, to flee Eritrea and may have also encouraged many to resort to the use of international smuggling or human trafficking networks. (3, 12, 16, 17, 21–24, 54) Adolescent children, some as young as age 14, who attempted to leave Eritrea were sometimes detained or forced to undergo military training, despite being younger than the minimum age of 18 for compulsory military recruitment. (3, 12, 17, 25, 54) In addition, the military periodically conducts roundups, known as giffas, to perform identity checks. There have been reports that giffas have resulted in the imprisonment of children alleged to be attempting to evade compulsory National Service, and the forced underage recruitment of children into the military. (13, 26, 54)

Children, particularly in some rural areas, face difficulty accessing education due to a shortage of schools and the inability to afford uniforms, supplies, and transportation. (4, 9, 19, 27–29) Many teachers in Eritrea are recruited through the National Service system. Teachers forced to teach as part of National Service are frequently absent or flee the country, negatively impacting student education. (54) In addition, there is a lack of sufficiently trained teachers, particularly in rural areas where nomadic groups live. However, the government does assign teachers to travel with nomadic groups to facilitate access to education for nomadic children. (9) In 2018, the government assisted 117 children with physical disabilities in accessing education by providing the children with saddled donkeys that they used to ride to school. (4) Somali refugees living in Eritrea face additional obstacles to accessing education due to language barriers between government-trained teachers and a lack of qualified Somali-speaking teachers. Middle and high school education is conducted in English, which creates an additional language barrier for Somali refugee children. (9)

The government did not collect or publish data on child work, child labor, or the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period. (9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Eritrea has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Eritrea's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 68 of the Labor Proclamation (30)

Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	No
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 7–8 of the Proclamation on National Service (15)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Articles 109(e) and 111(b) of the Penal Code (31)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14‡
Free Public Education	No		Article 21 of the Constitution (32)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (33-35)

In May 2015, the government announced that it was considering the establishment of a new Criminal Code that contains prohibitions on the commercial sexual exploitation of children. It is not clear whether the 2015

Eritrea

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Criminal Code is fully in effect or remains to be fully implemented. (19,36,37) Laws regarding the commercial sexual exploitation of children are insufficient because the use of a child for prostitution is not criminally prohibited. (38)

The law’s minimum age protections do not apply to children working outside formal employment relationships, such as those who are self-employed. (30,39) Article 69 of the Labor Proclamation authorizes the Minister of Labor to issue a list of activities prohibited to children under age 18; however, the government has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (30,40) Laws related to the use of children in illicit activities are not sufficient because offering and procuring a child for the production and trafficking of drugs are not criminally prohibited. (38) Minimum age for voluntary military service is not applicable to Eritrea because all citizens ages 18 to 40 have the compulsory duty of performing Active National Service under the Proclamation on National Service No. 82/1995. (15)

Although it does not appear that there are any laws that provide free basic education, several of the government’s policies call for the provision of free and compulsory basic education to all children including, the Education Sector Development Plan, the National Education Policy, and the Comprehensive National Child Policy. (48, 49, 50).

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Human Welfare that may hinder adequate enforcement, including the lack of financial resource allocation, complaint mechanisms, and referral mechanisms.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Human Welfare	Enforces labor laws and investigates labor abuses, including child labor. (18,36) According to the government, child labor inspectors operate in every administrative zone. (41)
Citizen Militia	Performs night patrols and refers cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children or other exploitative practices to the Eritrean police. (42)
Eritrean Police	Enforces laws and investigates referred cases of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (42)
National Security Administration	Works with the Eritrean police to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (43)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Eritrea took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the labor law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement.

Although research was unable to determine whether reciprocal referral mechanisms exist between labor authorities and social services, the government maintains that penalties for labor violations are assessed in coordination with labor inspectors, administrators, and the police. (9) Although the exact number of labor inspectors is unknown, research indicates that the existing number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Eritrea's workforce, which includes approximately 2.7 million workers. (45) According to the ILO's technical advice ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Eritrea would employ about 68 labor inspectors. (45-47) Inadequate resources, including transportation to remote areas, hinder government efforts to combat child labor. In 2018, the government trained 20 labor inspectors, including 8 newly hired inspectors. (9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Eritrea took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal enforcement, including human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The National Service Proclamation sets the minimum age for compulsory military training at age 18. Despite evidence that children younger than age 18 are forced to participate in military training, research did not identify measures taken by the government in 2018 to enforce minimum age provisions for compulsory military training. (54) There have been reports that senior military officers have allegedly been involved in the trafficking of children. (26) Research was unable to determine whether authorities have investigated these allegations.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor.

Eritrea

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government announced the formation of 5 national and 43 community-level committees focused on children's rights. Research has found that the mandate of the committees is focused on reducing female genital mutilation and child marriage and does not extend to efforts to address child labor. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 8). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including adoption and implementation.

Table 8. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Comprehensive National Child Policy	Aims to address causes of child labor through conducting studies and assessments on the nature and conditions of child labor; designing advocacy and public awareness campaigns to sensitize on the worst forms of child labor; and empowering communities and the public sector to monitor and prevent child labor from occurring. (48) The policy also calls for the provision of free and compulsory basic education to all children irrespective of gender, sex, ethnicity, religion and disability. (48) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Comprehensive National Child Policy during the reporting period.
Education Sector Development Plan (2018–2021)†	Establishes 8 years of free and compulsory education for all children. (49) The government began implementing the Education Sector Development Plan during the reporting period. (52)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (50)

The government's compulsory military training requirement as a part of national service for students in grade 12 may inhibit efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor for all those wishing to obtain high school diplomas. (20)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Complementary Elementary Education†	Government program created as the result of the Education Sector Development Plan that addresses the educational needs of out-of-school children ages 9 to 14 in remote and rural areas. Condenses 5 years of elementary education into a 3-year program to allow students to either mainstream into formal education at the secondary level or access vocational education. (4,19,49) In the 2017–2018 school year, the program served 8,575 children. (4)
Enhancing Equitable Access to Quality Basic Education (2014–2018)	$25.3 million UNICEF-funded grant that aims to support the Ministry of Education to increase access to basic education for at least 39,026 out-of-school children. (28) During the reporting period, 18,880 out-of-school-children from nomadic and semi-nomadic communities were provided education through temporary learning spaces. In addition, 790 kindergarten teachers, directors, and child caregivers were provided in-service training on the national Early Learning and Development Standards, and the revised Early Childhood Care and Education curriculum. (29)
UNICEF Country Program (2017–2021)	$31 million UNICEF-funded program, in collaboration with the government, which expands access to quality basic education for all children, and protects children from violence, exploitation, and abuse. (51,52) During the reporting period, disbursed $3.9 million to expedite construction of classrooms in the Anseba and Northern Red Sea regions. (29)

† Program is funded by the Government of Eritrea.

Research found no evidence of programs that target children working in agriculture, domestic work, and street work, or that specifically address the worst forms of child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Eritrea (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish a minimum age for hazardous work and determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that all children are protected by minimum age laws, including those who are self-employed.	2010 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the use of a child for prostitution.	2014 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit procuring and offering a child for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2018
Enforcement	Publish information on labor inspectorate funding and number of inspectors, number of violations in which penalties were imposed and collected, number of routine inspections targeted, and whether a complaint mechanism, and a reciprocal referral mechanism is in place, as well as whether initial criminal training for new employees is provided.	2009 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2018
	Establish mechanisms to ensure that children under age 18 are not forced to participate in compulsory military training.	2018
	Ensure that government officials are not complicit or involved in perpetuating the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking.	2018
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to directly address child labor.	2009 – 2018
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the Comprehensive National Child Policy.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that children under age 18 are not placed in military or hazardous labor assignments as part of national service.	2009 – 2018
	Cease requiring children to perform compulsory labor under the Maetot program during the school break.	2009 – 2018
Social Programs	Ensure that all children have access to education by building more schools and removing financial and religious barriers to attendance, as outlined in the 2018 Education Sector Development Plan.	2010 – 2018
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2009 – 2018
	Institute programs to address child labor, including in agriculture, domestic work, and street work, and the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2018

In 2018, Eswatini made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The King signed the Sexual Offenses and Domestic Violence Act, which provides new legal protections for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation. Additionally, the government drafted a revised Employment Act that will expand the authority of labor inspectors and criminalize the non-state recruitment of children. During the reporting period, investigators and officers received refresher training on handling cases of child labor, including the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Eswatini engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work and herding livestock. Significant gaps in the legal framework remain, including a lack of legislation regulating the labor conditions under Kuhlehla and other customary practices and a de facto compulsory education age that does not meet international standards. In addition, social programs do not adequately address child labor in the agriculture sector.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Eswatini engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work and herding livestock. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Eswatini. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	11.7 (35,368)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	13.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		85.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2010. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Growing corn and harvesting sugarcane (2,7)
	Herding livestock, including cattle, buffalo, goats, swine, horses, donkeys, and sheep (2,4,7,8)
Services	Domestic work (2,7,9-11)
	Street work, including as vendors, bus attendants, taxi conductors, porters, and car washers (1-3,9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in livestock herding, domestic work, farming, and market vending, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3,12,13)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3,7,11,13,14)
	Use in illicit activities, including growing, manufacturing, and selling drugs such as marijuana (4,11)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182

Beginning in 2012, there were reports that local chiefs forced residents, including children, to perform agricultural work and other essential tasks, such as household chores, through the customary practice of Kuhlehla, which forces residents to carry out communal work, including in chiefs' houses or fields. (13,15-18) However, in 2018, there were no reports that local chiefs forced residents or children to work. Although anecdotal reports

Eswatini

indicate that chiefs may have used coercion or intimidation in previous years to extract work from residents, including children, research indicates that this practice is rare or nonexistent, and not innate to the customary practice of Kuhehla. (13,15,16,19,20)

In 2018, the Government of Eswatini and the ILO published results from the 2014 Survey on Child Labor in Herding in Rural Areas in Eswatini. (8) The results show that an estimated 72,332 child laborers under the age of 15 raise bovines, and 20,680 raise sheep and goats primarily in the rural areas of Hhohho, Manzini, Shiselweni, and Lumbobo. (8) Children perform physically arduous tasks while herding in the grasslands and mountainous regions, and risk occupational injury and disease from exposure to dangerous tools, insecticides, and herbicides. Children’s injuries sustained during livestock herding include open wounds, fractures, dislocations and sprains, fever, extreme fatigue, and snake bites. (8)

Eswatini children, especially girls and orphans, are trafficked within and outside the country to neighboring countries, such as South Africa, for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in agriculture and domestic work. (3) Some Mozambican boys migrate to Eswatini, become victims of human trafficking, and subsequently are forced to engage in street work and herding livestock, including cattle. (3,13) Although Eswatini has a high HIV prevalence, social programs supported by civil society groups have assisted children orphaned or made vulnerable by family members’ illnesses or deaths and reduced their vulnerabilities to child labor. (13,21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Eswatini has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Eswatini’s legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including minimum age law protections.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 234 of the Children’s Protection and Welfare Act; Section 97 of the Employment Act (22,23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 236 of the Children’s Protection and Welfare Act; Article 29 of the Constitution (22,24)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 15,16, 233, 236, and 237 of the Children’s Protection and Welfare Act; Article 29 of the Constitution (22,24)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 75 of the Children’s Protection and Welfare Act; Article 13 of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act; Articles 17 and 29 of the Constitution (22,24,25)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 75 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Article 13 of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act (22,(25))
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 42–46 of the Crimes Act; Sections 13-15 of the Sexual Offences and Domestic Violence Act (26,27)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 16 and 49 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (22)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 17 of The Umutfo Swaziland Defence Force Order (28)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Section 17 of The Umutfo Swaziland Defence Force Order (28)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	12/13‡	Section 10 of the Free Primary Education Act (29)
Free Public Education	No		Section 3 of the Free Primary Education Act (29)

* No conscription (28)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (30)

Previous reports indicated that local chiefs required residents, including children, to participate in non-communal tasks such as seasonal weeding. This work was performed through the customary practice of Kuhlehla. (31,32) In 2018, there were no reports that local chiefs forced residents or children to work, and research indicates that the practice is rare or nonexistent, and not innate to the customary practice of Kuhlehla. (33) Still, the ILO has requested that the government issue legislation to regulate the nature and conditions of Kuhlehla, and ensure that the law explicitly states the voluntary nature of participation in such work. (31)

Both the Children's Protection and Welfare Act and Section 97 of the Employment Act apply minimum age protections to children working in industrial undertakings, but neither cover children working in domestic and agricultural work. (10,22,23) Children working in the agricultural sector often work long hours, carry heavy loads, work in remote areas, and risk exposure to harmful pesticides. (8) Although Section 10 of the Free Primary Education Act requires parents to send their children to school for the completion of primary education, this educational attainment is typically at ages 12 or 13. As a result, children who complete primary education at ages 12 to 14 are vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to be in school but also cannot legally work because they are under age 15, the minimum age for work. (10,29,30) In addition, the Free Primary Education Act provides for free schooling for 7 years, although basic education is a total of 9 years and includes lower secondary education. The failure to provide complete free basic education may increase the risk of children's involvement in the worst forms of child labor. (29,34)

Through consultations with the ILO, the government drafted a revised Employment Act, which is expected to come into force in 2019. The revised Employment Act would extend to all children, including those working in agriculture and domestic service; allow labor inspectors to enter private homes and farms to conduct inspections; and criminalize the non-state military recruitment of children. (10,19,35) In addition, on August 1, 2018, the Sexual Offences and Domestic Violence (SODV) Act entered into force. The SODV Act establishes new legal protections for victims of gender-based violence and exploitation, and criminalizes using, procuring, and offering a child for commercial sexual exploitation, with a penalty of up to 25 years' imprisonment. (11,19,27)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Enforces child labor laws and promotes relations between labor, government, and business through tripartite dialogue. (7,36)
Royal Eswatini Police Services (REPS)	Investigates cases involving the worst forms of child labor. Informs victims of sexual offenses, including commercial sexual exploitation, of available counseling and other support services, including Post Exposure Prophylactics. (7,19,27,36)
Department of Social Welfare	Offers rehabilitative services to victims of child labor, including orphans, and refers suspected cases of child labor to the REPS or MLSS. (7,36)
Director of Public Prosecutions	Prosecutes cases involving the worst forms of child labor, and refers child victims to social and legal support services. (13,27) Responsible for implementing victim identification guidelines and referral mechanisms for actual and potential victims of human trafficking. (30)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Eswatini took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (4)	$1,023,128 (37)

The MLSS and NGOs noted that labor inspectors lacked sufficient resources, such as vehicles, to conduct inspections. (2,11,19,30) In addition, the number of labor inspectors is insufficient for the size of Eswatini's workforce, which comprises approximately 427,900 workers. (38) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Eswatini would employ about 29 labor inspectors, and would require the hiring of 14 additional inspectors to meet this threshold. (39,40)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Eswatini took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Royal Eswatini Police Services (REPS) that may hinder adequate prosecution, particularly in gathering evidence for prosecution of trafficking cases involving children.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (4)	Yes (19)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (4)	Yes (19)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (4)	Yes (19)
Number of Investigations	2 (4)	5 (19)
Number of Violations Found	1 (4)	5 (19)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	1 (4)	1 (19)
Number of Convictions	0 (4)	0 (19)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (33)	No (33)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (19)

In 2018, 597 new investigators received initial training and 47 officers received refresher training on how to address child labor, forced child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the use of children in illicit activities. Additionally, in October and December 2018, 74 front line personnel and 40 senior officers of the REPS Domestic Violence, Child Protection, and Sexual Abuse Unit received training on duties mandated under the SODV Act. (19,41)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Children's Services Department	Evaluates and reviews all existing national legal instruments governing the treatment of children to ensure compliance with international child treatment standards, provisions, and practices. Monitors and evaluates all national policies, plans, and programs, and ensures that all stakeholders collaborate and contribute toward a national child development agenda. (19) The Department was established in late 2016, and spent 2018 hiring staff and conducting research on national policies, plans, and programs relating to child labor. (42)
Task Force for the Prevention of People Trafficking and People Smuggling	Coordinates the implementation of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act of 2009. Formulates policies and programs to prevent and suppress people trafficking or people smuggling, including programs for rendering assistance to trafficked or smuggled persons. (25) Formulates protective programs for trafficked or smuggled persons, and initiates education programs to increase public awareness of the causes and consequences of human trafficking and smuggling. (25) Exchanges information on cases of human trafficking between relevant stakeholders, including the police, immigration, social services, and prosecutors. Comprises a conglomerate of NGOs and government entities, including the REPS, Director of Public Prosecutions, Attorney General's Office, Department of Social Welfare, Department of Health, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and the MLSS. (7,43) The taskforce met regularly in 2018. (44)
Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Secretariat	Provides a support role to assist the Task Force for the Prevention of People Trafficking and People Smuggling. (25,33) In 2018, conducted public awareness and outreach programs through a bi-monthly newspaper column and a weekly call-in radio program covering human trafficking issues. In addition, the Secretariat expanded outreach initiatives to raise awareness of human trafficking by answering questions and distributing pamphlets to new audiences including church conventions, schools, traditional gatherings, rural community child care centers, and young women participating in the annual national reed dance ceremony. (11) However, reports indicate that the leadership issues within the Secretariat have hampered its ability to fulfill its statutory responsibilities. (11,13,33,44)

Although the government has coordinating mechanisms that address human trafficking, the government does not have a coordinating mechanism to address all child labor issues, including child labor in agriculture and domestic work. In addition, poor communication and coordination between the anti-human trafficking task force and the TIP Secretariat has resulted in confusion among some government officials and civil society groups about the mandates of these bodies and the function of a national referral mechanism. (11)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementing relevant child labor policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Children's Policy (2009–Present)	Represents the policy framework of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act and aims to promote the rights of children, protect children from all types of abuse and exploitation, including child labor, and improve the quality of education. (45) Research was unable to determine whether actions were taken to implement this policy in 2018.
National Strategic Framework and Action Plan to Combat People Trafficking (2013–2018; 2019–2023)	Assigns responsibilities to relevant government agencies on trafficking in persons. (46,47) Actions undertaken in 2018 focused on the prevention and protection of victims. During the reporting period, the government enacted the Sexual Offenses and Domestic Violence (SODV) Act which expands protections for child victims of exploitation, including sex trafficking. (33) The government also increased training for frontline responders on victim identification and referral and trained prosecutors and magistrates on the SODV Act. The government also conducted an increased number of awareness-raising activities throughout the country, including incorporating chiefdoms and traditional systems of governance for the first time. (33)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (48)

Since 2014, the government has been developing an Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor (APEC), and in 2018, the ILO provided guidance on the plan and updated the implementation dates to 2019–2025. However, APEC is currently awaiting approval by the tripartite body, the Labor Advisory Board, and the Social Dialogue Committee before being forwarded to the Cabinet for review and adoption. (2,19,30,32) Moreover, child labor elimination and prevention strategies are not included in the Eswatini Education and Training Sector Policy. (49)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including with regard to the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Technical Assistance for Development of a Social Protection System in Swaziland (2016–2019)	$46.8 million EU-funded, 3-year capacity building project to support the development of a social protection system through strengthening government coordination, regulatory, and oversight functions. A component of the project directly addresses needs of children, including education support services to vulnerable populations. (50) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Free Primary Education Program†	Provides funding to ensure free primary education to approximately 24,000 children starting from age 6 for a period of 7 years or up to grade seven. In June 2018, the government took over the funding of this program from the European Union. (2,19,30,52)

† Program is funded by the Government of Eswatini.

Although the government in collaboration with NGOs provided child trafficking victims with necessities such as food, clothing, toiletries, counseling, and medical care, programs are not sufficient to address the problem consistently. (32,33,53) The government has yet to partner with an institution with the appropriate conditions to serve as a shelter for victims of human trafficking, and additionally law enforcement personnel need training on victims' rights. Furthermore, the government does not have any shelter policies or guidelines in place to ensure that a minimum quality of standard care is provided to victims. (11,13,30) As a result, during the reporting period child victims of human trafficking were often placed in makeshift shelters where they had limited freedom of movement. (11) Moreover, research found no evidence of social programs to address child labor in herding and domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Eswatini (Table II).

Table II. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that minimum age provisions extend to all children, including those working in agriculture and domestic service.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and cover agricultural undertakings and domestic work.	2012 – 2018
	Adopt legislation that prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Establish by law free basic public education through grade nine.	2018
	Establish a compulsory education age that is consistent with the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2018
	Adopt legislation that regulates the work performed through traditional practices.	2017 – 2018
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2016 – 2018
	Provide labor inspectors with refresher courses on the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2016 – 2018
	Provide adequate resources, including vehicles, to conduct labor inspections.	2013 – 2018
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms that address all child labor issues, such as children working in agriculture and domestic work.	2015 – 2018
	Provide sufficient resources for effective coordination within the Trafficking in Persons Task Force to address child labor.	2017 – 2018
Government Policies	Implement child labor-related policies, such as the National Children's Policy and the National Strategic Framework and Action Plan to Combat People Trafficking.	2017 – 2018
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Eswatini Education and Training Sector Policy.	2010 – 2018
Social Programs	Ensure that children are able to access free basic education, including by paying or eliminating school fees for lower secondary education.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that social programs to address child labor are implemented in accordance with their mandates.	2018
	Develop social protection programs to assist children engaged in child labor in domestic service and herding.	2014 – 2018
	Identify an appropriate partner to provide shelter for victims of human trafficking, and ensure all government and partner staff members receive sufficient training to address victims of human trafficking.	2017 – 2018

In 2018, Ethiopia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The National Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Migrants Task Force worked with the ILO to map service providers working on migration issues in order to improve coordination and collaboration. The government also nearly quadrupled the labor inspectorate's budget from its 2017 allocation, and in collaboration with the World Bank and UNICEF, it distributed 117 million textbooks and constructed 260 primary school classrooms. However, children in Ethiopia continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The law in Ethiopia does not include free basic education or a compulsory age for education, leaving children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Social programs to combat child labor have also not sufficiently targeted sectors with high incidences of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ethiopia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1-4) According to the results of a 2015 national child labor survey published in 2018, almost 16 million children from the ages of 5 to 17 engaged in child labor. The majority of these children were found in Oromia, Amhara, and the Southern Nations, Nationalities, and Peoples' regions. (5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ethiopia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	7 to 14	41.5 (10,202,669)
Attending School (%)	7 to 14	73.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	30.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		54.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2015, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Socio Economic Survey, 2015–2016. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Planting and harvesting apples, bananas, coffee, cotton, and khat (2,5,8,9)
	Herding livestock, including cattle (10)
	Fishing (2,5)
Industry	Mining† gold and quarrying† (5,8,11)
	Construction, † including carrying heavy loads and digging (2,5,8,10)
	Repairing motor vehicles and motorcycles (5)
	Producing handicrafts, including pottery and traditional handwoven textiles (2,5,8,12)
Services	Domestic work (4,5,9)
	Unpaid household services, including carrying heavy loads of water and firewood (5,8)
	Street work, including shoe shining, assisting taxi drivers, vending, portering, and begging (5,8,10,13)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4,10,14,15)
	Forced labor in domestic work, herding, street vending, and traditional weaving of handwoven textiles, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,14,16)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (4)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are trafficked from rural areas to Addis Ababa and to other regions of the country for forced labor in the weaving industry and in domestic work. (8,14,16) Children also reportedly harvest and sell khat, a stimulant to which they may become addicted due to bodily contact with the plants’ excretions during harvest. (4) Families continue to play a role in financing and coercing their children to go abroad or to urban areas to look for work. (14-17) Children who begin as voluntary migrants may be forced into prostitution or become victims of forced labor. (14,15)

Many children face barriers to education, including the distance rural children must travel to reach school; a lack of sanitation, which especially affects adolescent girls; sexual harassment; the requirement to pay for uniforms and supplies; and a lack of teachers. These factors increase children’s risk of entering the workforce at a young age. (4,9,18,19) The Somali and Afar regions had the lowest rates of school attendance, with only 38.6 percent of school-age children enrolled in the Somali region and 50.2 percent enrolled in the Afar region. (5) In 2018, the number of internally displaced persons (IDPs) nearly doubled, from 1.6 million to 2.95 million, many of them children who may encounter difficulty accessing education in host communities or IDP camps. (4,20,21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ethiopia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Ethiopia’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and the age for compulsory education.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Articles 89.2 and 185.1 of the Labour Proclamation (22)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	18‡	Article 36.1(d) of the Constitution; Articles 89.1, 89.3, and 185.1 of the Labour Proclamation (22,23)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 89.4 and 185.1 of the Labour Proclamation; Directive on Prohibited Occupations for Young Workers (22,24)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 18.3 of the Constitution; Article 596 of the Criminal Code; Articles 2.4 and 3–4 of the Proclamation to Provide for the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants (23,25,26)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 18.2 of the Constitution; Articles 597, 635, and 637 of the Criminal Code; Article 3.2 of the Proclamation to Provide for the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants (23,25,26)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 634–636 of the Criminal Code; Articles 2.4 and 3–4 of the Proclamation to Provide for the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants (25,26)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 525 of the Criminal Code (25)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18‡	Article 270 of the Criminal Code (25)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 2.3 of the Proclamation to Provide for the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants (26)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

* No conscription (25)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (22)

Not all Ethiopian laws related to child labor are in compliance with international standards. The Labour Proclamation applies only to children in a contractual employment relationship, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (22,27) The types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover traditional weaving, an area of work in which there is evidence of using dangerous machinery, equipment, and tools, or work that involves the manual handling or transporting of heavy loads other than in the transportation industry. (22,24) Lastly, Article 89.5 of the Labour Proclamation allows children ages 14 to 16 to engage in certain forms of hazardous work following the completion of a government-approved and inspected vocational training course. (22,28) This contradicts ILO C. 138, which prohibits hazardous work for all children under age 16. However, the Government of Ethiopia notes that, in practice, children may begin apprenticeships only after the completion of 10 years of schooling, or at age 17. (28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA)	Conducts labor inspections of formal worksites at the regional level through its regional Bureaus of Labor and Social Affairs. (4) Through its National Referral Mechanism, coordinates victim referral to social services providers. (17)
Ethiopian Federal Police Commission	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (4) Through its Special Child Protection Units in Addis Ababa and other major cities, combats child trafficking and assists vulnerable children. (4,14,29)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Ethiopia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of MOLSA that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties.

Number Conducted at Worksite	28,275 (31)	38,000 (4)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	70 (32)	Unknown (4)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (31)	Unknown (4)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (31)	Unknown (4)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (31)	Yes (4)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (31)	Yes (4)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (22)	Yes (22)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Unknown	Yes (4)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (31)	Yes (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (31)	Yes (4)

In 2018, the labor inspections focused on the construction and agricultural sectors, in which child labor is known to occur. However, the government did not publish the number of child labor violations identified as a result of these inspections. (4) Penalties for violating child labor laws range from $11 to $44 and are too low to deter violations. (22)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Ethiopia's workforce, which includes 52.8 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Ethiopia should employ roughly 1,321 inspectors. (33,34) In addition, although the labor inspectorate's funding nearly quadrupled from 2017, MOLSA and other stakeholders report that a lack of resources and poor coordination among agencies hampered their ability to enforce child labor laws throughout the country. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ethiopia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including collecting and publishing enforcement statistics.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	N/A (4)	N/A
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (31)	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown (31)	Yes (17)
Number of Investigations	1,400 (31)	Unknown (4)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (31)	Unknown (4)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (31)	Unknown (4)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (31)	Unknown (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (31)	Unknown (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (31)	Yes (4)

Although the Federal Police Commission and the Office of the Attorney General track all investigations, they lack a mechanism to disaggregate data by age and type of crime. (4) The government also continues to focus on transnational human trafficking for the purpose of forced labor, to the detriment of internal human trafficking, including child trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation, which is a known problem in Ethiopia. (14)

Ethiopian immigration and border patrol authorities refer trafficking victims to NGO-run shelters, in which they are given first aid and assistance to return home. Although the centers do not disaggregate data for children, NGOs reported that many of those receiving services were younger than age 18, some of whom may have been returning from the Gulf States. (17)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates activities on the worst forms of child labor. Members include MOLSA, the Ministry of Women and Children's Affairs, and the Ministry of Education. (4, 15)
MOLSA National Forum to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Combats the worst forms of child labor at the national level. Biannual meetings convene participants from the Ethiopian Employers' Federation and the Confederation of Ethiopian Trade Unions. (4)
National Steering Committee Against Sexual Exploitation of Women and Children	Develops action plans and coordinates activities to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (15,30)
National Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling Council	Addresses international exploitation, including the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister, with representatives from five government ministries and regional presidents who meet twice a year. (17,26,35,36)
National Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Migrants Task Force	Operational arm of the National Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling Council. (17) Meets quarterly and coordinates activities against trafficking in persons and migrant smuggling. Led by the Office of the Attorney General and includes representatives from 31 government stakeholders and international organizations such as the IOM, the ILO, and the UNODC. (17,26,36) In 2018, the Secretariat worked with the ILO to map stakeholders working in the area of migration in order to improve coordination and collaboration. (37)
National and Regional Task Forces on Orphans and Vulnerable Children	Promote children's rights; chaired by members of the federal government and state ministers. (30) Coordinated and implemented by the Ministry of Women and Children's Affairs in all nine regional capitals and two city administrations. (38)

Research was unable to determine whether most of the coordinating bodies were active during the reporting period. Limited committee budgets, overlapping mandates, and poor coordination may affect their ability to operate and coordinate efforts to address child labor at a national or regional level. (15,17)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2016–2020)	Includes guidelines on child labor identification, withdrawal, reintegration, and educational policies. Overseen by the National Steering Committee on the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (4)
National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2015–2020)	Examines legal and institutional frameworks and responses related to the human trafficking situation in Ethiopia. Aims to provide guiding principles based on international best practices for anti-human trafficking action and the institutional structures and inputs needed to combat human trafficking. (39)
National Children’s Policy	Aims to promote children’s rights and combat child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and child labor. Promotes access to quality primary and secondary education, and education in rural areas or for out-of-school youth. (40) In 2018, the Ministry of Woman and Children’s Affairs developed an implementation plan and shared it with lower level structures for feedback. (38)
Education Policies	Aims to improve access to quality education. Includes Education Sector Development Programme V (2015–2020); Ethiopian Education Development Roadmap (2018–2030),† which aims to implement compulsory education; Education and Training Policy, which prioritizes government support for education through grade 10; Pastoralist Area Education Strategy, which provides for alternative education in pastoralist communities; and National Technical & Vocational Education & Training Strategy, which aims to improve access to vocational education for girls and out-of-school children. (19,41–44)
UNDAF (2016–2020)	Promotes improved access to education and livelihood services for vulnerable children. Seeks to protect children from abuse, violence, and exploitation, and to rehabilitate them. (45)
National Human Rights Action Plan II (2016–2020)	Aims to promote human rights in line with Ethiopia’s second Growth and Transformation Plan. Includes creating detailed manuals on crime investigation, improving the ability of civil society organizations to secure local funding, and combating both domestic and international trafficking in persons. (46,47)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (21,30,48–52)

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Development Program, the National Technical & Vocational Education & Training Strategy, or the National Youth Policy. (43,44) In addition, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement these policies during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Engaged, Educated, Empowered, Ethiopian Youth Project (2014–2018)	$10 million USDOL-funded project implemented by World Vision, Inc. (53) By the end of the project in 2018, placed 12,670 youth ages 14 to 17 in educational or employment activities, trained 3,119 teachers on inclusive education, and trained 1,374 government officials on enforcing child labor laws. (54) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
World Bank-funded Projects	Includes ET Productive Safety Nets Project 4 (PSNP 4) (2014–2020),† a $600 million project that aims to improve access to social safety nets, including cash and in-kind transfers to orphans and vulnerable children; Ethiopia General Education Quality Improvement Project II (GEQIP-2) (2014–2019), a $130 million project that aims to improve learning conditions in Ethiopia through curriculum development, textbook assessment, teacher training, and school construction; and Ethiopia General Education Quality Improvement Program for Equity (GEQIP-E) (2017–2022), a $300 million program that works with the Ministry of Education to improve education quality and access. (55–58) In 2018, the government took steps to modernize PSNP 4 by developing a registry and monitoring system for beneficiaries, and continued to provide on-time cash transfers to 2.5 million households. (59) As part of GEQIP-2, distributed 117 million textbooks and teaching aids. GEQIP-E worked with the Ministry of Education to create budget lines for school grants and textbooks. (60,61)

Program	Description
UNICEF-funded Programs	Programs to improve social safety nets and improve access to education. Includes Child-to-Child and Accelerated School Readiness programs, which extend educational opportunities to internally displaced children, and Integrated Basic Social Services with Social Cash Transfer (2015–2018),† UNICEF, Irish Aid, and MOLSA-funded project in support of PSNP 4 that aims to improve educational outcomes in the Oromia and Southern Nations, Nationalities, and Peoples' regions by providing cash transfers. (20,62) In 2018, constructed 260 primary school classrooms, provided training to 309 refugee teachers, educated almost 18,000 children, and provided transfers to almost 1.3 million beneficiaries. (20)

† Program is funded by the Government of Ethiopia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (63,64)

Although the government participates in and implements several programs to combat child labor, these programs do not sufficiently target sectors with high incidences of child labor, such as agriculture and domestic work. (4) There is also a lack of appropriate rehabilitation and reintegration centers throughout the country for victims of child trafficking or commercial sexual exploitation. (3,15)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ethiopia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children are protected by child labor laws, including children working in non-contractual employment.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive, including hazardous tasks in traditional weaving.	2016 – 2018
	Establish, by law, free basic education and an age up to which education is compulsory that is consistent with the minimum age of employment.	2012 – 2018
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by permitting labor inspectors to assess penalties.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors have sufficient training and resources to conduct inspections in all sectors, and are able to coordinate adequately with other agencies.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that penalties are severe enough to deter violations and that both domestic and transnational child trafficking cases are investigated.	2013 – 2018
	Gather, disaggregate, and publish information on the number of child labor violations found and penalties applied and collected, as well as the number of investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, and convictions obtained.	2009 – 2018
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2015 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that established coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor have adequate funding to fulfill their mandates and are able to effectively coordinate between committees.	2015 – 2018
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Development Program, the National Technical & Vocational Education & Training Strategy, and the National Youth Policy.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure existing policies are implemented as intended.	2018
Social Programs	Increase access to education for all children by decreasing the distance to schools in rural areas, hiring additional teachers, constructing sanitation facilities, eliminating school-related costs, and addressing the sexual abuse and harassment of girls.	2010 – 2018
	Develop or expand social protection programs to prevent or withdraw children from all relevant sectors of child labor, including agriculture and domestic work, and ensure that social services, such as rehabilitation and reintegration centers, are available throughout the country.	2009 – 2018

Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Falkland Islands, the government made a minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Safeguarding Children's Board convened multiple times to discuss issues related to the safety and wellbeing of children. However, the minimum ages for work and hazardous work do not meet international standards, and the law does not prohibit the involvement of children in illicit activities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Falkland Islands. (1,2,3,4,5,6) Data on key indicators on children's work and education in the Falkland Islands are not available from the sources used in this report.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (BOTs) recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but are not constitutionally part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (3) The Falkland Islands generally incorporate English Law Ordinances to the extent permitted by local circumstances and subject to modification by local laws. (1) Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that territory. (1,3) The following Conventions have been extended to the Falkland Islands (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of the Falkland Islands has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in the Falkland Islands' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Section 3 of the Employment of Children Ordinance (7)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	16	Section 3 of the Employment of Children Ordinance; Sections 3 and 4A of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (7,8)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Section 3 of the Employment of Children Ordinance; Section 3 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (7,8)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Chapter 1, Section 4 of the Constitution Order (9)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Part 1, Sections 57–60 of the Sexual Offences Act (10)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Part 1 of the Sexual Offences Act (11)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Education Amendment Ordinance; Chapter 1, Section 12 of the Constitution Order (9,11)
Free Public Education	Yes		Education Amendment Ordinance; Chapter 1, Section 12 of the Constitution Order (9,11)

* No conscription (12)

The minimum age of 14 for work is not in compliance with international standards. (7) The minimum age of 16 for hazardous work is not in compliance with international standards. (7,8)

The law does not prohibit adults from using, procuring, and offering a child in the production and trafficking of drugs in the Falkland Islands. Although child trafficking has not been identified as a problem, the law does not criminalize trafficking children for labor exploitation. (9,10,13) Also, the law does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor. However, in the Falkland Islands, the UK has established an institutional mechanism for the enforcement of labor laws (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Royal Falkland Islands Police	Enforce laws protecting children against abuses, including sexual abuses. (14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor. However, the Government of the Falkland Islands has established a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Falkland Islands Safeguarding Children's Board	Ensures children's welfare, including protection from sexual abuses. Chaired by the Director of Health and Social Services, members include the Education Department, the Attorney General's Chambers, Social Services, Royal Falkland Islands Police, healthcare professionals, members of the Legislative Assembly, and a representative from the military community. (15) Held meetings in 2018 to discuss internet safety for children, the transport of children in vehicles by unrelated adults, and the Domestic Abuse Campaign, among other topics. (16, 17)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor in the Falkland Islands (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to at least 15 and up to the age to which education is compulsory in all sectors.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the minimum age for hazardous work is age 18.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the law protects all children under age 18 from being trafficked for any purpose, including labor exploitation.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2012 – 2018

In 2018, Fiji made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government is extending its Free Education Grant to 52 additional schools over the next 2 years. The government also made child labor a strategic priority of its labor inspectorate and allocated additional resources and conducted additional inspections as part of the effort. However, children in Fiji engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The government has not approved the draft National Action Plan on the Eradication of Child Labor, the 5-Year Strategic Plan for Combating Child Labor, the National Plan of Action to Eradicate Trafficking in Persons and Child Trafficking, or the National Action Plan on the Eradication of Child Labor. In addition, the Inter-Agency Trafficking Task Force has not been active since 2012.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Fiji engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Fiji. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2019. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3,7,11-14)
	Forced labor in agriculture, begging, and domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,15,16)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

During the reporting period, the NGO Pacific Dialogue and ILO claimed to have received reports of children engaging in organized prostitution, including being advertised online.(7) Commercial sexual exploitation of children continued to occur in Fiji, particularly by family members, taxi drivers, foreign tourists, businessmen, and crew on foreign fishing vessels. (1,3,11-13,17) Parents sometimes send their children to live with families in cities or near schools to facilitate their continuing education and to perform light household work. Research found that some of these children are vulnerable to involuntary domestic work or are forced to engage in sexual activity in exchange for food, clothing, or shelter.(3,17-19)

The Ministry of Employment, Productivity, and Industrial Relations (MEPIR) maintains a database on child labor, which standardizes current and past data in all seven districts in Fiji, but MEPIR did not publish data on child labor during the reporting period. (7)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Fiji has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Fiji’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including light work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 92 of the Employment Relations Promulgation (20)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 40 of the Employment Relations (Administration) Regulations; Hazardous Occupations Prohibited to Children Under 18 Years of Age Order (21,22)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Occupations Prohibited to Children Under 18 Years of Age Order (22)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 6 and 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Articles 20–21 of the Immigration Act; Articles 102–103 and 111–121 of the Crimes Decree (20,23,24)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Article 20 of the Immigration Act; Articles 111–121 of the Crimes Decree (20,23,24)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Articles 225–227 of the Crimes Decree; Article 62A of the Juveniles (Amendment) Act (20,23,24)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Article 58 of the Juveniles Act (20,26)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 7 of the Royal Fiji Military Forces Act (27)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Article 7 of the Royal Fiji Military Forces Act (27)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Compulsory Education Order; Compulsory Education Regulations (28)
Free Public Education	No

* No conscription (27)

The Employment Relations Promulgation specifies the conditions under which children ages 13 to 15 may engage in light work, but does not include a list of activities that are permissible. (20,29) In addition, Fijian law does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups. (2) Although it does not appear that there are any laws that provide free basic education, the government has a policy that provides for free basic education. (30,31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of MEPIR that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Productivity, and Industrial Relations (MEPIR)	Lead agency responsible for enforcing laws related to child labor. Investigates places of employment and child labor law violations. (7) Monitors compliance with the minimum age for employment requirements and the Employment Relations Promulgation. (2,7,8) Oversees 14 Divisional Labor Offices responsible for investigating cases of child labor and making appropriate referrals. (8) Coordinates activities at the national, divisional, and district levels through the regional Inter-agency Committees on Child Abuse, including conducting trainings on child labor. Maintains a 24-hour phone line to accept reports of child labor and refers children to social services when appropriate. (2,7,29) With the establishment of a Labor Inspection System on Child Labor, 200 child labor cases have been investigated since 2011. (32,33)
Ministry of Women, Children, and Poverty Alleviation	Responsible for women and gender issues, including violence against women and children. (34) In 2018, the ministry provided: $90,000 to Homes of Hope NGO to help victims of sexual abuse and human trafficking. The Poverty Benefit Scheme, which assisted 25,000 people with cash benefits and food vouchers, received $18.5 million, a 15 percent increase from 2017. (7) Additionally, during the reporting period, the budget for the Child Protection Allowance, which helped 1,030 recipients, including single mothers, widows, and children, was increased by $1.1 million. In addition, the Child Protection Program received $550,000 to enact recommendations from the Committee on the Convention on the Rights of the Child. (7)
Employment Relations Tribunal	Adjudicates alleged violations of child labor provisions in the Employment Relations Promulgation. (2,7)
Fiji Police Force	Investigates criminal violations regarding child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation. (7) Enforces laws on child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and illicit activities. Maintains a Human Trafficking Unit (HTU) and provides training to other police units focused on combating human trafficking. (8,17) Collaborates with the Australian Federal Police to combat potential child sex tourism by Australian nationals, who comprise the largest tourist group visiting Fiji. (18) In 2019, will employ seven officers responsible for enforcing criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (7,29)

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Immigration	Responsible for immigration services, refugee services, and efforts to combat human trafficking. Administers and enforces Immigration, Passport, and Citizenship Acts.(7) Coordinates with the Fiji Police Force to investigate cases involving underage victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking, which are then tried in the criminal court system. (7)
