Although the Ministry of Education established a policy that provides free basic education for 12 years, of which the first 9 are compulsory, in practice, the costs of uniforms, school supplies, and unofficial school fees may preclude some families from sending their children to school. (18-20) On January 9, 2019, the Ministry of Education issued a statement expressing concern that schools were levying high school fees on families and prohibited schools from increasing fees during the first term of the 2019/2020 school year. (3) In 2016, the government authorized sanctions against parents who do not send their children to school or individuals whose employment of children prevents them from going to school, but there were no reports of such sanctions being applied. (20-22) During the 2017/2018 school year, there was a slight decrease in the number of children transitioning from primary to secondary school over the previous year—from 74.5 percent to 71.6 percent. (23)

II. Legal Framework for Child Labor

Rwanda has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government’s laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 5 of the Labor Law; Article 9 of the Ministerial Instruction Relating to Prevention and Fight Against Child Labor (24,25)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 6 of the Labor Law (24)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 6 of the Labor Law; Articles 4–6 of Ministerial Order Determining the List of Worst Forms of Child Labor; Kigali City Guidelines 2012–02; Articles 7–9 of the Ministerial Instruction Relating to the Prevention and Fight against Child Labor (24-27)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 3, 20, and 7 of the Labor Law; Article 178 of the Penal Code; Article 51 of the Law Relating to the Rights and Protection of the Child; Article 9 of the Ministerial Instruction Relating to Prevention and Fight against Child Labor (24,25,28,29)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 18–20 and 22–24 of the Law on Prevention, Suppression, and Punishment of Trafficking in Persons; Article 28 of the Law on Prevention and Punishment of Gender-Based Violence; Articles 225, 251, and 259–261 of the Penal Code; Article 51 of the Law Relating to the Rights and Protection of the Child; Article 31 of the Law Relating to the Protection of the Child; Article 9 of the Ministerial Instruction Relating to Prevention and Fight against Child Labor (25,28-32)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 24 of the Law on Prevention, Suppression, and Punishment of Trafficking in Persons; Articles 190, 211, and 260 of the Penal Code; Article 51 of the Law Relating to the Rights and Protection of the Child; Articles 34 and 35 of the Law Relating to the Protection of the Child; Article 9 of the Ministerial Instruction Relating to Prevention and Fight against Child Labor (25,28,29,31,32)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 23 of the Law on Prevention, Suppression, and Punishment of Trafficking in Persons; Article 220 of the Penal Code; Article 51 of the Law Relating to the Rights and Protection of the Child; Article 9 of the Ministerial Instruction Relating to Prevention and Fight against Child Labor; Article 263 of the Law Determining Offenses and Penalties in General (25,28,29,31,33)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 5 of Presidential Order 72/01 Establishing Army General Statutes; Article 7 of Presidential Order 32/01 Establishing Rwanda Defense Forces Special Statute; Article 50 of the Law Relating to the Rights and Protection of the Child (28,34,35)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 5 of Presidential Order 72/01 Establishing Army General Statutes; Articles 99(8) and 100(2) of the Law Determining Offenses and Penalties in General (33, 34)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 221 of the Penal Code (29)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 47 of the Law Relating to the Rights and Protection of the Child; Articles 34, 36, and 38 of the Law Governing the Organization and Functioning of Nursery, Primary and Secondary Education (28,36)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 47 of the Law Relating to the Rights and Protection of the Child (28)

* No conscription (28,34,35)

In 2018, the government adopted a number of new laws. A revised Labor Law grants labor inspectors broader authority and raised the minimum period of imprisonment from 6 months to 2 years for subjecting children to prohibited forms of work; new legislation preventing trafficking in persons more closely aligns Rwanda's legal framework with the Palermo Protocol; a new law determining offenses and penalties includes heightened penalties for the use of children in armed conflict and illicit activities; and a Child Protection Law supplements the 2012 Law on the Rights and Protection of the Child. (24,31-33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service and Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Rwanda

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service and Labor (MIFOTRA)	Enforces labor laws, including laws on child labor. (20) In partnership with the Ministry of Education, reintegrates children withdrawn from child labor with their families and enrolls them in school. Mobilizes other ministries and agencies providing social services (including the Ministry of Gender and Family, the National Commission for Children, the Ministry of Justice, and the Ministry of Local Government) to take an active role in child labor law enforcement. (3)
Rwandan National Police (RNP)	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor and operates a free hotline to report incidents of gender-based violence or child abuse, including child labor. Through its Child Protection Unit and Anti-Trafficking Unit, enforces laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (3,17,20) It is unknown how many calls to the hotline were related to child labor.
Rwanda Investigation Bureau*	Conducts investigations into criminal matters, including child labor, and operates a free hotline to report incidents of gender-based violence and child abuse, including child labor. In the case of the Directorate for Anti-Gender-Based Violence, assists victims of the worst forms of child labor through anti-gender-based violence officers at each of the country's 78 police stations. (3)
National Public Prosecution Authority (NPPA)	Prosecutes violations of labor laws, including laws on child labor. (3) Through its anti-Gender Based Violence unit, 12 prosecutors work with an additional 60 prosecutors trained in handling relevant cases at the district level. (37)
Directorate General of Immigration and Emigration	Receives referrals for human trafficking cases and employs an anti-trafficking specialist. Trains border and immigration officials to identify potential human trafficking victims and verify that children transported across the border are traveling with the permission of their parents or guardians. (3)

*Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

In April 2018, the Rwanda Investigation Bureau assumed some functions of the Rwandan National Police (RNP), including the investigation of the worst forms of child labor. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Rwanda took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service and Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$183,000 (13)	$155,287 (3)
Number of Labor Inspectors	35 (13)	35 (3)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	Yes (13)	Yes (3)
Initial Training for New Labor Inspectors	Yes (13)	Yes (3)
Training on New Laws Related to Child Labor	Yes (13)	Yes (3)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (13)	Yes (3)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	1,269 (13)	912 (3)
Number Conducted at Worksite	1,269 (13)	912 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	234 (13)	51 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	234 (13)	Unknown (3)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	234 (13)	Unknown (3)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (13)	Yes (3)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (13)	Yes (3)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (13)	Yes (3)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (13)	Yes (3)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (13)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (13)	Yes (3)

In addition to district-level funding, the Ministry of Public Service and Labor also provided a supplementary budget to support specific investigations and the Ministry of Gender and Family Promotion had a budget of $1.4 million for activities related to child protection. Although the National Public Prosecution Authority brought

1,866 cases of child defilement to court in 2018, it did not track how many of the 1,168 convictions were related to child labor. (3)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Rwanda's workforce, which includes more than 6 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developing economies, Rwanda would employ about 156 labor inspectors. (38,39) Reports indicate that officials at the local level had difficulty identifying characteristics of child trafficking and child labor. (37)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Rwanda took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the RNP that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including investigation planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (13)	Yes (37)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (13)	Yes (37)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (13)	Yes (37)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (13)	Unknown (37)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (13)	7 (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	4 (13)	2 (3)
Number of Convictions	0 (13)	1 (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (13)	Yes (22)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (13)	Yes (3)

The National Public Prosecution Authority reported receiving 86 cases of human trafficking, of which 53 were brought to court. Although it is not known how many of these cases related to children, courts convicted one person of transnational child trafficking for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. The perpetrator was sentenced to 3 years in prison, which was upheld upon appeal. (22,37) Reports cited by the UN Committee against Torture indicate that the RNP systematically detained children working on the street, and that some children were held with adults and beaten while in custody. (20,40)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Ministerial Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates government efforts related to the worst forms of child labor; review child labor laws, advocates the inclusion of child labor policies in national development plans, oversees the implementation of child labor interventions, and conducts field visits to assess the prevalence of child labor and to raise awareness of child labor. (3) MIFOTRA coordinates and provides monitoring and evaluation, including the publication of annual updates on program and policy implementation related to child labor. (22)
Interagency Working Group on Human Trafficking	Enables national-level discussion and coordination of efforts to address human trafficking, including child labor. Includes representatives of the Ministry of Gender and Family Promotion (MIGEPROF), the Ministry of Justice, the RNP and the NPPA. (3)
MIGEPROF's National Commission for Children	Monitors, promotes, and advocates children's rights; develops action plans to protect children from abuse and exploitation. Overseen by MIGEPROF and supported by a board of directors and an advisory council of 14 institutions. (3)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Local Committees	Monitor incidents of child labor nationwide and implement policies developed by the Inter-Ministerial Steering Committee on Child Labor in 30 districts by coordinating with district-level officials in enforcing labor laws and providing social services to child labor victims. (3) In the case of Gender-Based Violence Committees, operate at the district level to raise awareness about gender-based violence and coordinate social services to assist gender-based violence victims. In the case of Child Protection Committees, identify and report cases of child rights violations at the district, sector, and cell levels. (3,12)
Kigali City Council Task Force	Coordinates activities to combat child labor in the districts of Gasabo, Kicukiro, and Nyarugenge. The Task Force met twice during the year, once to discuss strategies to combat child labor and a second time to implement child labor elimination committees at the village level. (3)

All committees were active during the reporting period, but reports indicate that poor coordination and resource constraints hindered efforts to combat human trafficking and that efforts focused on transnational rather than domestic human trafficking. (3,17,37)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issue into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy for the Elimination of Child Labor (2013) and 5-Year Action Plan to Combat Child Labor	Aims to prevent at-risk children from entering exploitative child labor; withdraws children engaged in exploitative labor through the provision of education; rehabilitate former child laborers through counseling, life skills training, and medical care; raises community awareness about child labor; and establish monitoring and evaluation mechanisms on child labor. The government committed more than $4.2 million to implement the activities listed in the National Policy and the Action Plan. (41,42) In 2018, carried out awareness-raising activities in five districts and provided refresher training on child labor to national and local officials. (22)
It Takes Every Rwandan to End Child Exploitation†	5-year advocacy campaign against child labor and sexual abuse of children supported by MIGEPROF, the National Commission for Children, and World Vision Rwanda. (3)
7 Years Government Programme: National Strategy for Transformation (2017–2024)†	Aims to smooth the transition between Vision 2020 and Vision 2050 and improve standards of living for Rwandans, including access to quality education. (43)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (19,44-46)

In 2018, the government actively partnered with USAID and the IOM to conduct a research study on human trafficking trends in Rwanda. The results will be used to update the expired National Action Plan on Combating Human Trafficking. (22)

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in Vision 2020, the National Social Protection Strategy, and the National Technical and Vocational Education and Training Policy. (47-49)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Programs to Combat Child Labor and Raise Awareness†	Includes MIGEPROF's campaign to teach parents and community leaders to recognize risk factors for human trafficking and to identify victims; and the Friends of the Family Program (Incuti Z'Umuryango), which trains volunteers to prevent and respond to child protection issues and establishes monitoring committees at various levels to combat child labor. (3) In 2018, the government held several awareness-raising campaigns regarding child labor. (3)
Victim Assistance Programs†	Musanze Child Rehabilitation Center in Northern Province assists children separated from armed groups. (20) Gitagata Center provides education, vocational training, and psychosocial support, and reunites former street children in the Bugesera District with their families. "One-stop" centers located in 44 hospitals and district capitals assist victims of gender-based violence and human trafficking. (3,17) Between January and October 2018, the Musanze Center assisted 19 children separated from armed groups and one-stop centers provided medical care, counseling, legal aid, short-term shelter, and access to police services. (3)
McGovern-Dole School Feeding Program	$25 million WFP and U.S. Department of Agriculture pilot program that works with the Government of Rwanda to provide school meals to 415,000 children. This program was active in 2018. (48,49)
Strengthening Social Protection Project (2017–2021)*	$80 million World Bank-funded project in support of the Vision 2020 Umurenge Program which aims to deliver cash transfers and improve social safety nets. (50) Formally launched in May 2018 and completed preparatory activities. (51)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Rwanda.

Although Rwanda has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to address the extent of the child labor problem in the agriculture sector and domestic work. Research also indicates there is an absence of long-term care facilities for victims of human trafficking, and some one-stop centers lacked sufficient resources. (17,37)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Rwanda (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Disaggregate the number of complaints received by the Rwandan National Police's hotline and the National Public Prosecution Authority's investigations that relate to child labor.	2013 – 2018
	Publish information about the number of penalties imposed and collected for child labor violations, and the number of criminal investigations conducted.	2015 – 2018
	Increase the number of inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive sufficient training to identify cases of child labor, including its worst forms.	2017 – 2018
	Cease the practice of systematically detaining and beating children who work on the street and ensure that children in detention are not subjected to beatings or poor detention conditions.	2018
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies receive adequate resources and are able to combat both domestic and transnational human trafficking.	2018
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into Vision 2020, the National Social Protection Strategy, and the National Technical and Vocational Education and Training Policy.	2011 – 2018
Social Programs	Ensure that school costs, such as uniforms, school supplies, and unofficial school fees, do not diminish the impact of the 12-year free education policy.	2010 – 2018
	Expand existing social programs to address all relevant sectors of child labor, including agriculture and domestic work, and ensure adequate resources to implement all programs, including long-term care facilities.	2017 – 2018

Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha (formerly Saint Helena), the government made a moderate advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor in 2018. The government passed a bill to restrict child labor and improved services for vulnerable children. However, the government has yet to define by law or regulation the types of work prohibited to children, other than work on vessels engaged in maritime navigation. Gaps also remain in legislation related to forced child labor and the trafficking of children for labor exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha (STATC). (1-7) Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (BOTs) recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they are not constitutionally part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (8) Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha generally incorporate English Law Ordinances to the extent permitted by local circumstances and subject to modification by local laws. (2) Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that territory. (2,8) The following Conventions have been extended to Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓

The Government of Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including prohibition of child trafficking and using children in illicit activities.

* No conscription (14)

† No standing military (14)

STATC have not determined by national law or regulation the types of work prohibited to children, other than work on vessels engaged in maritime navigation. (9) The laws prohibiting forced labor in STATC are not sufficient as debt bondage and slavery are prohibited constitutionally, but not criminally. (10) While the UK Sexual Offences Act, which is applicable to this territory, prohibits trafficking for sexual exploitation, there are no laws prohibiting the trafficking of children for labor exploitation. (15) The law also does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

In 2018, the Government of STATC passed a bill which restricts child labor and extends child welfare protection. (5,16)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

During the reporting period, the Government of STATC improved social services for vulnerable children, specifically child protection. (17)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristán da Cunha (Table 3).

In 2018, Saint Lucia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government amended the Computer Misuse Act to criminalize the possession of child pornography. It also established a new agency to oversee adoption, child care, and protection of children and published the National Child Protection Action Plan Report. A rapid assessment conducted by the ILO in 2016 revealed limited evidence that children in Saint Lucia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and the sale and transportation of drugs. Saint Lucia's law does not fully protect children from hazardous work and illicit activities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Saint Lucia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and the sale and distribution of drugs. (1-8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Saint Lucia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (9)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5, 2014. (10)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,3,6-8,13,14) Sale and distribution of drugs (2-4,12)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Saint Lucia lacks detailed data on the extent of child labor in the country. A rapid assessment conducted by the ILO in 2016 revealed limited evidence that children engage in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes in exchange for rides, clothing, or cell phones, or with the knowledge or encouragement of parents in situations of financial need. (2-4,7,15) Limited evidence also suggests that children are used to transport and sell drugs. (2-4) Local and foreign children are also subjected to sex trafficking, including by parents and caregivers. (3,5-8,16)

All children in Saint Lucia can attend school. However, violence in schools, some gang-related, may hinder some children from attending. (7) Children who do not attend school are vulnerable to engaging in child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Saint Lucia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Saint Lucia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children and the use of children in illicit activities.

In 2018, the Government of Saint Lucia amended the Computer Misuse Act to criminalize the possession of indecent films and photographs of children. (7,24) In addition, the government passed the Child Justice Act, which allows for children in conflict with the law to avoid the formal court system to protect the rights of the child. The Act also defines a child as a person under the age of eighteen years. (7,25) The Child Care Protection and Adoption Act, also passed in 2018, considers the overall safety, welfare, and well-being of the child and increased oversight over adoption procedures. (7,26)

Saint Lucia has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (3,17) In addition, although the Criminal Code prohibits the use of children in some illicit activities, such as street work, and using, procuring, or offering children for the production and trafficking of drugs is not criminally prohibited. (21,27) Laws related to forced labor are insufficient because forced labor is not criminally prohibited, except when it results from human trafficking. The law does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation because using or offering children for commercial sexual exploitation is not criminally prohibited. (20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Education, Human Resource Development, and Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role

Through its Vulnerable Persons Unit, in collaboration with the Division of Human Services, investigates cases of child labor, abuse, and neglect. (11) Uses a specific manual to investigate crimes related to children. (28)
Ministry of Home Affairs, National Security, and Justice	Coordinates and leads anti-human trafficking issues with various ministries. (3,6)

*Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Saint Lucia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Education, Human Resource Development, and Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Although inspectors look for child labor and forced labor violations during announced and unannounced inspections, insufficient funding may hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws in all relevant sectors, especially in communities in which children are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation. (7,30,31) Inspectors can make recommendations to the Labor Commissioner but cannot assess penalties, and existing penalties are insufficient to deter employers from committing child labor violations. (2,30,32)

The government does not publicly release information on its labor law enforcement efforts.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Saint Lucia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (3)	Unknown (7)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (3)	Unknown (7)

Number of Convictions	0 (3)	Unknown (7)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (7)

Although the local police can enforce laws against the worst forms of child labor, this effort is led by the Vulnerable Persons Unit. (2) During the reporting period, police officers were trained on victim identification, referral, and assistance skills. (6,14) However, sufficient training for police is needed to adequately identify and work with child victims of human trafficking. (3,14,30) In addition, insufficient resources, including funding, transportation, and equipment, hamper police capacity to enforce child labor laws. (2,3) The judicial system within the Ministry of Home Affairs, National Security, and Justice also has a backlog of cases and lacks personnel and resources. (6,14,30)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Health, Wellness, Human Services, and Gender Relations	Refers potential child labor cases to the Royal Saint Lucia Police Force. (28)
Trafficking in Persons Task Force	Coordinates the identification and referral of human trafficking cases among law enforcement, social services, and immigration officials, under the Counter-Trafficking Act. Includes public servants, representatives from the Department of Labor, police, and victim-service NGOs. (12,20,28) Active in 2018 and implemented its national anti-trafficking action plan. (7)
Office of Gender Relations	Provides referrals to human trafficking victims for health, advocacy, crisis, and legal services. (13)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2016–2019)	Identifies the strategic goals and objectives for combating human trafficking, and the means to achieve them. Establishes the coordination of counter-trafficking measures and the adequate cooperation between all actors through the National Framework for Combating Trafficking in Persons. (2,7,16,33) Active in 2018. (7)
National Social Protection Policy (2014–2024)	Establishes a social protection policy in Phase I (2014 – 2019) by consolidating the Social Safety Net programs. In Phase II (2019 – 2024), will implement wider reforms for creating a coherent social protection policy. (2) Child protection policies are incorporated into poverty reduction concepts and promote access to education. (11,34) Worked with UNICEF to conduct a report on adolescent wellness in 2018. (14)

In 2018, the government published the National Child Protection Action Plan Report and conducted workshops to familiarize stakeholders with the action plan. (7) Although the government did not formally adopt the Action Plan, it undertook suggested actions from the Plan, including reviewing and revising the Child Protection Reporting Protocol. (7,35,36)

During the reporting period, the National Social Protection Policy provided assistance to serve entire families instead of only targeted individuals. (3,14) This has helped a core group of the lowest-income families. (14) Case management within the inter-agency mechanism, consisting of coordination between police, social workers, and labor inspectors, remains an issue due to not being electronic. (14) In addition, child labor elimination and prevention strategies are not integrated into the National Social Protection Policy. (12) Research did not reveal policies addressing commercial sexual exploitation of children. (6)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding and adequacy to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Educational Programs†	The Saint Lucia Social Development Fund and Public Assistance Program fosters school attendance; the Community Empowerment's After School Program aims to improve academic performance and maintains school attendance of children ages 8 to 16; the Upton Garden Girls Center provides education, training, and self-development opportunities to teenage girls; the Center for Adolescent Renewal and Education provides second-chance education, training, and self-development services to adolescents; the Boys Training Center supports boys ages 10 to 18 who have come in contact with the law or require care and protection; and the Koudmen Sent Lisi program funds textbook rentals, a book bursary that reimburses students for textbooks, a school feeding program, and a transportation subsidy program at most secondary schools. (1-3,11) In 2018, held a seminar with UNICEF on child protection and children's rights. (14,37)
Strengthening Capacity to Accelerate Eradication of Child Labor in Latin America and the Caribbean	Government of Spain-funded $603,070, 2-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC that aims to strengthen public policies and government capacity to combat child labor in more than 20 countries in Latin America and the Caribbean, including Saint Lucia. (38)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (7,39)

Research found no evidence of any programs with the specific goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. In addition, overall funding for social programs remains a concern because it does not meet the needs of all children in the country, especially trafficked children and those engaged in illicit activities, and it is highly dependent on foreign assistance. (3,6,14)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Saint Lucia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the forced labor of children.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit using or offering a child for commercial sexual exploitation.	2016 – 2018

	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Authorize labor inspectors to assess penalties for labor law violations.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure existing penalties are sufficient to deter employers from committing child labor violations.	2018
	Ensure that new labor inspectors and criminal law enforcement investigators receive training on child labor law enforcement and that refresher courses are provided for all labor inspectors.	2015 – 2018
	Publish information on labor and criminal law enforcement, including funding for the labor inspectorate, the number of labor inspections conducted, number of child labor violations found, number of prosecutions initiated, and number of convictions related to child labor.	2018
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data on risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate receives sufficient funding for conducting labor inspections.	2015 – 2018
	Increase the resources allocated to criminal investigators, including training, transportation, and equipment.	2017 – 2018
	Manage judicial cases adequately by ensuring that there is no backlog and by increasing resources, including personnel.	2017 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that case management within the inter-agency mechanism functions properly.	2018
Government Policies	Ensure that child labor elimination and prevention strategies are integrated into the National Social Protection Policy.	2015 – 2018
	Adopt a policy that addresses all worst forms of child labor, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2010 – 2018
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2018
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children by ensuring that violence does not occur at schools.	2018
	Design and implement social programs that specifically target and assist children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities such as the sale and transportation of drugs.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that funding for social programs is sufficient so that it can meet the needs of all vulnerable children in the country and does not rely on foreign funding.	2017 – 2018

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government increased the budget for the labor inspectorate and the number of labor inspectors. The government also trained criminal law enforcement personnel on child labor and human trafficking. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Limited research also suggests that children perform dangerous tasks in begging. Gaps remain in the legal framework, as the minimum age for hazardous work falls below international standards and there is no law to prohibit the use of children in the production of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. (1-3) Limited research also suggests that children perform dangerous tasks in begging. (4-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		90.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (7) Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2019. (8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Activities unknown (1,2,9)
Services	Domestic work and begging (10-12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor [‡]	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,13-15)

[‡] Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Limited research and information received from various sources suggest that some children in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, including by their relatives, in exchange for money or goods. (3,9,16,17) Limited research also suggests that children engage in illicit activities in the cultivation of cannabis. (1,2)

All children in the country are able to access education. (2,18) However, inadequate public transportation for children in rural villages causes them to walk long distances to attend school, which may make attending school difficult. (2) Children out of school are vulnerable to engage in child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 8 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (19)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No		Schedule, Part I, Articles 1–2 and 5 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (19)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Part I, Sections 3–4, and Articles 1–2 and 5 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act; Section VI(37) of the Saint Vincent and the Grenadines Occupational Safety and Health Act of 2017 (19,20)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Chapter XII, Part 207 of the Criminal Code (21)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Part II, Articles 5–8 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act(22)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Part II, Article 7 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (22)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A*
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Part I, Article 2 of the Education Act (18)
Free Public Education	Yes		Part III, Articles 14–16 of the Education Act (18)

* No conscription (23)

† No standing military (24)

The government has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited to children. In addition, the law does not prohibit use of children for prostitution, pornography, or pornographic performances. Furthermore, the use of children in the production and trafficking of drugs is not criminally prohibited. (22) The law also does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.

Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforces child labor laws through its Department of Labor, and refers victims to appropriate social services. (5,9)
Royal Police Force	Makes criminal arrests, including those involving the worst forms of child labor. Addresses human trafficking through the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit (ATIPU), refers victims to appropriate social services, and funds financial requests made by the ATIPU. (5,25)
Ministry of Social Development	Maintains the Child Protection Unit, which includes Child Protection Officers who report cases of child abuse. (11)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including allocating resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$453,200 (26)	$612,991 (2)
Number of Labor Inspectors	4 (9)	6 (2,27)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (9)	Yes (2)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (9)	Yes (2)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (2)

The Ministry of Labor can inspect all sectors and is responsible for investigating labor violations. If the Ministry finds a criminal violation, it forwards the case to the Royal Police Force. (9)

During the reporting period, the Department of Labor reported that the number of inspectors and funding was sufficient. (2) However, a lack of appropriate resources, such as computers and training, hampered the labor inspectorate's enforcement of child labor laws. (2,6,25,27,29) According to sources, the number of inspections conducted was also insufficient because few businesses were inspected. (9,27,29)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating resources.

Number of Investigations	0 (9)	0 (2)
Number of Violations Found	0 (9)	0 (2)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (9)	0 (2)
Number of Convictions	0 (9)	0 (2)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (2)

In 2018, 41 new police recruits were trained on human trafficking and according to the police department, the police received sufficient training. (2,27) However, insufficient resources hampered the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit's capacity to combat human trafficking, especially in remote, mountainous areas and on both islands. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons	Develops a national plan to address human trafficking, coordinates the collection of data among government agencies, establishes policies to enable government agencies to work with NGOs to prevent human trafficking and assist victims, and provides training to all relevant government officials and authority figures. Chaired by the Prime Minister. (5,22) Comprises representatives from police, immigration, public prosecutions, social services, gender affairs, and the Department of Labor. (16) Active in 2018. (3,27)

Sources have reported that efforts to counter child begging, a sector in which child labor is known to occur, could benefit from a coordinating mechanism. (27,29)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Protection Policy Framework (2015–2020)	Strengthens national child protection strategies and programs. (30) Charged with adopting policies, goals, and reporting standards for child protection. Active in 2018. (27)
National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons (2016–2020)	Establishes procedures to eradicate human trafficking. Administered by the National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons, which is chaired by the Prime Minister as head of the Ministry of National Security. (12,28,31,32) Active in 2018. (27)
Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) on Countering Human Trafficking in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines	Outlines the responsibilities of each signatory agency in combating human trafficking and the worst forms of child labor. (9,33) Assigns tasks and responsibilities among nine government stakeholders regarding trafficking in persons. (17,33) Includes the Department of Labor, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Trade and Commerce, ATIPU, and others. (26) During 2018, the government continued to support the MOU between signatory agencies combatting human trafficking, including the worst forms of child labor. (2)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Government-funded educational programs†	Provide free meals to students and low-income families through the Supplementary Feeding Program. (9,34,35) Continued to fund other programs such as the Book Loan Program; the Street Children Rehabilitation Program; and the Foster Care Program. (9-11,34,36) Active in 2018. (2)
Zero Hunger Trust Fund‡	Provides meals, materials, and uniforms to children in need. (6) Active in 2018. (2)

† Program is funded by the Government of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (3)

Although the government has implemented programs to address educational and food needs, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically to assist children in commercial sexual exploitation and begging, both of which are industries reported to employ children. (27,29)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited to children, in consultation with workers' and employers' organizations, and ensure that the minimum age for hazardous work is 18.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that the laws for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation are sufficient and do not only apply to human trafficking.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that laws prohibit using, procuring, or offering a child for the production of illicit drugs.	2011 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for labor law violations.	2016 – 2018
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by providing sufficient resources to conduct labor inspections.	2015 – 2018
	Increase the amount of resources, including personnel and vehicles, for the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure labor inspectors are provided refresher courses related to child labor.	2018
Coordination	Create a coordinating mechanism to combat child begging.	2018
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2018
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including children in rural communities, by providing public transportation.	2018
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation and begging.	2017 – 2018

In 2018, Samoa made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government issued a public notice clarifying the list of hazardous work prohibited for children. In addition, the government established the Government Grant to Mission and Public Schools to provide financial assistance to low-income students as a continuation of the current School Fee Grant Scheme. However, children in Samoa engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street vending. Research found no evidence of laws that ban using, procuring, or offering children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. The government also lacks a mechanism to coordinate interagency efforts to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Samoa engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1) Children also perform dangerous tasks in street vending. (2,3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Samoa. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		104.6

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (4)

Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2019. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Use in the production and trafficking of drugs (1)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Samoa engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street vending, including working late at night, and they are exposed to exhaust fumes and have an increased risk of being hit by passing traffic. (1,2,9) The Samoa School Fee Grant Scheme and Government Grant to Mission and Public Schools both provide financial assistance to families to help alleviate the burden of school fees, such as registration, uniforms, and transportation fees. II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Samoa has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Samoa's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 51 of the Labour and Employment Relations Act (15)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 51 of the Labour and Employment Relations Act (15)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 51 of the Labour and Employment Relations Act; Article 21 of the Labour and Employment Relations Regulations; Government of Samoa Public Notice on Hazardous Work for Children (15-17)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 8 of the Constitution; Article 18 of the Labour and Employment Relations Act; Sections 155–157 of the Crimes Act (15, 18, 19)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 155–157 of the Crimes Act (19)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 73–74, 82, and 157 of the Crimes Act (19)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No

Compulsory Education Age	No	14‡	Article 4 (Part II) of the Education Act (21)
Free Public Education	No

‡ Age calculated based on available information

In 2018, the Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Labor (MCIL) drafted a Child Care and Protection Bill prohibiting children under age 14 to engage in street vending. Although the draft bill does not meet the international standard of age 15 as for the minimum age for work, it does prohibit children younger than the compulsory education age from engaging in street vending after 7 p.m. (22,23) In August 2017, the Government of Samoa issued a Public Notice clarifying the hazardous work occupations prohibited for children under age 18, including working long hours and with dangerous chemicals and heavy machinery. (17) The current law permits children between ages 12 and 14 to engage in light work for a limited number of hours; however, it does not specify the conditions under which light work may be undertaken, nor does it define the activities that are permitted. (16) Research also found no evidence of laws that ban using, procuring, or offering children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. Samoa does not meet the international standard for prohibiting non-state military recruitment because its International Criminal Court Act does not apply to children between ages 15 to 18. (20) Samoa also does not meet the international standard for the prohibition of child commercial sexual exploitation because the Government of Samoa's Crimes Act does not protect children between ages 16 to 18. (19)

The government created the Government Grant to Mission and Public Schools as a continuation of the School Fee Grant Scheme, which was supported by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand. (14) The Education Act requires that children attend school from ages 5 to 14 or until they have completed year eight of school. (21) This leaves children who have completed their education requirement but are not yet legally permitted to work vulnerable to involvement in the worst forms of child labor. (24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MCIL that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Labor (MCIL)	Investigates complaints of child labor law violations. Refers cases to the Ministry of Police and the Office of the Attorney General for enforcement. (6)
Ministry of Police	Enforces criminal laws related to child labor. (6)
Office of the Attorney General	Prosecutes criminal cases of the worst forms of child labor. (6)
Ministry for Women, Community, and Social Development	Assists in MCIL investigations as needed. Mandated to protect children, including those working on the street. (6,25)
Ministry of Education, Sports, and Culture	Assists in MCIL investigations as needed. (6,26)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Samoa took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MCIL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Samoa took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

The Government of Samoa did not respond to requests for information related to criminal law enforcement efforts related to child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Transnational Crime Unit	A multi-agency unit that comprises the Ministry of Police, the Ministry for Revenue–Customs, and the Ministry of the Prime Minister’s Immigration Unit to investigate and enforce laws against human trafficking, including possible commercial child exploitation. (32,33) In 2018, the Transnational Crime Unit was active and reported regular policing activity. (31)

Research was unable to determine whether Samoa implemented any coordinating mechanism to eliminate child labor, including the worst forms of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including integrating elimination and prevention strategies into policies relevant to child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)†	A multinational strategic framework program consisting of 14 South Pacific nations to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (36)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The government has not integrated child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Strategy for the Development of Samoa or the Education Sector Plan. (37,38)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Samoa Decent Work Country Program (2017–2020)†	ILO and government program that promotes decent work in Samoa. Supports legal reform and improved implementation of laws related to child labor, and promotes access to information and employment services for youth. (39,40) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Samoa Decent Work Country Program during the reporting period.
Government Grant to Mission and Public Schools†	A government-sponsored program that provides financial support to families to assist with ancillary school fees, supplies, and equipment that their child may need during the school year. In 2018, the Government of Samoa allocated $5.4 million to this grant. (14)
One Government Grant†	Provides direct financial support to Samoan primary and secondary public schools, mission and private schools, and primary schools for students with disabilities and special needs to offset fees normally charged to students. (31) In 2018, the Government of Samoa provided $5.6 million in funding to the grant program. (41)

† Program is funded by the Government of Samoa.

Although the government has implemented educational support programs, research also found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation or street vending.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Samoa (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the draft Child Care and Protection Bill amendment meets the international standard for the Minimum Age for Work.	2018
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor, including street vending.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits commercial sexual exploitation of children between ages 16 to 18.	2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits using, procuring, or offering a child for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the law establishes a compulsory education age that is at least equal to the minimum age for employment.	2014 – 2018
Enforcement	Institutionalize training for labor inspectors, including training new labor inspectors.	2015 – 2018
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2015 – 2018
	Establish a referral mechanism between labor enforcement authorities and social services providers.	2014 – 2018
	Publish information on the number criminal law enforcement efforts undertaken, including the number of child labor investigations initiated, the number of child labor penalties imposed, and the number of criminal law enforcement convictions secured.	2013 – 2018
Coordination	Establish and fully fund coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor, including the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2018
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into relevant policies.	2012 – 2018

In 2018, São Tomé and Príncipe made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government adopted a new Labor Law, which includes a list of hazardous work prohibited for children. In addition, the new Basic Education System Law was adopted, increasing the compulsory education age to 15 years. The government also continued to contribute resources to support centers that aim to prevent child labor by keeping children in school. However, children in São Tomé and Príncipe engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Limited financial resources hamper law enforcement agencies' capacity to enforce child labor laws. The National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor was not implemented due to lack of funding, and programs targeting children engaged in agriculture are lacking.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in São Tomé and Príncipe engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. (1) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in São Tomé and Príncipe.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

São Tomé and Príncipe has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in São Tomé and Príncipe’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

† Age calculated based on available information (13)

In 2018, the government approved a new Labor Law, which includes a list of hazardous work prohibited for children. (1,8) In addition, the new Basic Education System Law was adopted, increasing the compulsory education age to age 15. (13)

The new Labor Code permits children younger than age 14 to work under certain circumstances that are not consistent with international labor standards. The Labor Code also permits children age 14, who have completed their compulsory education, to perform light work that is not deemed harmful to their health or development, and indicates that a special legislation will be adopted that specifies the activities and conditions in which light work may be undertaken.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs	Enforces labor laws, including child labor. (1)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor. (1)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in São Tomé and Príncipe took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Although there was a considerable increase in the number of labor inspections conducted over the previous reporting period, enforcement of child labor laws remained challenging due to a lack of resources for inspections. (14)

Children found working during inspections by labor inspectors are referred to the Department of Social Protection and Solidarity in the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs. (1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in São Tomé and Príncipe took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding and implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor	Guides the government's efforts to combat child labor. (19,20) In 2018, the government continued to support the Action Plan; however, limited financial resources hindered its implementation. (1)

VI. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2013–2018)†	Government program in collaboration with ILO that aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor through legislative action and strategic programs. (1,21) Active in 2018. (1)
Support Centers†	Three government-funded centers, run by NGOs, operating in areas with high concentrations of poor families, orphans, and street children. Provide household stipends to keep children in school and teach income-generating skills. (15,19,22) Active in 2018. (1)
Disadvantaged Mothers Program (Mães Carenciadas)†	Government program that provides in-kind support, including food, school materials, and uniforms on an as-needed basis. The support is distributed by social workers. (23) In 2018, at the beginning of the school year, the program distributed food, clothing, and school supplies to mothers with school-aged children. (1)

† Program is funded by the Government of São Tomé and Príncipe.

Research found no evidence of programs designed to specifically address children engaged in agriculture.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in São Tomé and Príncipe (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure the minimum age for work of 15 applies to all children.	2018
	Adopt legislation defining activities, conditions and number of hours permissible for light work.	2018
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2017 – 2018
	Provide inspectors and investigators with appropriate training; equip labor inspectors with the necessary resources to conduct inspections.	2009 – 2018
	Publish information on labor inspectorate funding and number of inspections conducted at worksites.	2018
Coordination	Ensure that the Anti-Child Labor Committee is active.	2018
Government Policies	Ensure that the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor has sufficient resources for implementation.	2018
Social Programs	Implement programs that specifically target children engaged in agriculture.	2010 – 2018

In 2018, Senegal made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched a second phase of Retrait de la Rue, a program to remove children engaged in forced begging in the Dakar area, with some success. The government also revised a 2005 anti-trafficking in persons law with an aim to widen its use by prosecutors. The government published additional information related to labor law enforcement. However, children in Senegal engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. Criminal and labor law enforcement agencies lack adequate resources to carry out their work, and an overlap of mandated activities among the coordinating bodies creates confusion and obstructs adequate collaboration and enforcement. Furthermore, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not include domestic work and street work, areas where there is evidence of child involvement.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Senegal engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. (1-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Senegal. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.3 (4,255,365)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	53.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	13.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		60.2

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2015. (8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding cattle (2,9)
	Fishing, activities unknown (2,9)
	Farming, including the production of cotton, rice, peanuts, and mangoes (2-4)
Industry	Washing ore, crushing rocks, using mercury, and carrying heavy loads† while mining gold, iron, and salt, and quarrying rock (2,4-7,10-12)
	Welding and auto repair (2,4,13)
Services	Domestic work (2-6,13,14)
	Street work, including vending (2,15,16)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced domestic work, gold mining, fishing, and farming, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,17-20)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7,20,27,29,30)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,4,6,17-28)
	Forced labor in garbage collection (29)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Senegal

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children in Senegal are exploited in domestic servitude and forced labor in gold mines, and are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation, particularly within the country. (18-20) Forced begging remains a significant problem in Senegal. It is a traditional practice to send boys to Koranic schools called daaras, at which students known as talibés receive a Koranic education from teachers known as marabouts; however, some daaras have corrupted the traditional practices, forcing many students to beg. (19,30-34) Corrupt marabouts take the talibés' earnings and beat those who fail to meet the daily quota. (22,24,30,32,33) According to a recent report by UNODC, this practice enriches marabouts, bringing in over $10 million annually in Dakar alone. (35,36) Talibés at such institutions often live in overcrowded, unsanitary conditions, receive inadequate food and medical care, and are vulnerable to physical and sexual abuse. (22,23,29,30,33,37) Children from rural areas in Senegal and neighboring countries are particularly vulnerable to this practice, and are sometimes victims of human trafficking. (22,30,31,33,34,38) In 2018, a study by the NGO Global Solidarity Initiative determined that of the roughly 189,000 talibé children in the Dakar region, approximately 28,000 are involved in forced begging activities. (28,34)

A variety of barriers to education exists that force some students to quit school, including school-related fees, a lack of birth registration documents, and a lack of both teachers and rural schools. Some girls reportedly quit school due to sexual harassment, including by teachers. (13,17,39,40)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Senegal has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Senegal's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of military recruitment by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 2 of the Ministerial Order No. 3749 Determining and Prohibiting the Worst Forms of Child Labor (45)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 19 of Law No. 2008-28 (48)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 3 of Law No. 2004-37(49)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3 of Law No. 2004-37; Articles 21 and 22 of the Constitution (49,50)

* No conscription (2)

During the reporting period, the government finalized and made public a draft of the revamped Child Code as part of the draft law comment period. (51,52) The government also drafted a revised law on human trafficking, aiming to widen the law's use by prosecutors because it has seldom been applied in the past. (51,53) Related to this revision project, the government also announced plans to draft a separate migrant smuggling law in a similar sense to encourage use of these laws by prosecutors. (51)

While the 2005 anti-trafficking law criminalized forced begging, provisions in the penal code that allowed seeking of alms under certain conditions may have hampered law enforcement officials' ability to distinguish between traditional alms seeking and exploitation through forced begging. (5,34,45,54-56) Government officials, UNODC, UNICEF, and local NGOs have stated that penalties for child labor violations may not be severe enough to deter employers from exploiting children, particularly because the penalties are rarely enforced. (57) Furthermore, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not include domestic work or street work, areas in which there is evidence of potential harm to child workers. (2,43-45) The light work provisions are also not specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor because they do not limit the number of hours per week for light work, determine the activities in which light work may be permitted, or specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken. (41,42) Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (34,41,42,49)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Social Dialogue, Professional Organizations, and Institutional Relations (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Senegal

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Social Dialogue, Professional Organizations, and Institutional Relations (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws through the Directorate General of Labor and Social Security and by using social security inspectors. (40,57)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Enforces all laws through judicial role, including those on child trafficking, forced child begging, and forced labor, and prosecutes violations. (4) Trains police and judiciary on laws related to human trafficking and forced begging. (22) Through its Department of Correctional Education and Social Protection, helps develop draft texts in the field of social protection and juvenile delinquency; strengthens the capacity of stakeholders to care for children; and shares responsibility with the Ministry of Women, Family, and Children (MWFC) to provide services to vulnerable children. (25,58-60)
Ministry of the Interior and Public Security	Oversees all law enforcement agencies, including the local and national police officials who investigate cases of human trafficking and forced child begging, and arrests perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor. (4, 18,61,62) Houses the Children's Unit, located in Dakar, which employs three officers who specialize in child protection, victim identification, and reinsertion. (18,25,61) Through its Children's Unit, receives assistance from the Vice Squad in child protection cases. (63) Through its Air and Border Police (Police de l'air et des frontieres), focuses on migrant smuggling and transnational crimes. (64)
Ministry of Women, Family, and Children (MWFC)	Contributes to the creation and implementation of child protection policies, and provides services to victims of exploitative child labor. (65) Operates the Ginddi Center for vulnerable children and a toll-free child protection hotline through which the public can report child labor abuses. (20,25,29,34)

In 2018, the government created a new police division—Air and Border Police (Police de l'air et des frontieres)—to focus on migrant smuggling and transnational crimes. (64)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Senegal took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of a formal and reciprocal referral mechanism between labor law enforcement, criminal law enforcement agencies, and social services.

The second phase of the Retrait campaign removed begging children from the streets in Dakar and referred them for care to the government-run shelter known as the Ginddi Center. As of early 2018, USAID and UNODC are working in tandem with the four Dakar Municipalities of Gueule Tapée-Fass-Colobane, Diamaguene, Medina, Pikine Nord, and Sicap Mbao to support local daaras. (34,64-67) The number of labor inspectors is insufficient for the size of Senegal's workforce, which includes over 6 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Senegal would employ about 174 labor inspectors. (68,69) The MOL acknowledged that the current number of labor inspectors is insufficient; it also noted that a high turnover rate and limited funding level have further hindered the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws. (2,4)

Anecdotal reports indicates there is a lack of child labor law enforcement in the informal sector, in which most children are employed. This is especially true in the artisanal gold mining sector because most activities take place in the far southeast of the country in the Kédougou region, far from the capital. (20,34,51) Article L. 241 of the Labor Code grants inspectors the authority to assess penalties for all offenses; however, they typically do so only for minor offenses and refer the more serious infractions to the courts for determination of penalties. (4,41,55) Courts may require violations to be resolved through conciliation at the labor inspectorate or refer cases to a tribunal for judgment. (4) The Ginddi Center's child protection hotline was operational during the reporting period and received 921 total calls from April 1, 2018 to March 31, 2019. It is not clear how many cases of child labor were identified because of these calls. (20,34)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Senegal took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the authority and operations of the criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of knowledge by law enforcement officials and judges on the application of the Law Concerning the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018

The courts have had limited success in prosecuting cases related to forced begging due to a lack of coordination and resource constraints, and partly due to a perceived lack of political support, cultural norms, and pressure from influential Koranic teachers who support this practice, particularly in rural areas. (18,20,51,54,55,70-73) Although police stations in Senegal are expected to report cases involving children to the Ministry of the Interior and Public Security's Children's Unit, research found no evidence that this occurs regularly. (63,74)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including clarity of institutional mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee Against Child Labor	Coordinates initiatives, policies, and partnerships with civil society organizations to address child labor. Chaired by the MOL and includes representatives from three ministries, the police, and elected officials. (18,51,75)
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons (CNLTP)	Reports on human trafficking in Senegal, with a focus on women and children; coordinates the implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings and other efforts to prevent human trafficking; prosecutes perpetrators; and protects victims. (20,51,58,61) Chaired by the MOJ and employs five staff members. (18,51,58)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Office of the President's Childhood Protection Unit	Coordinates government efforts related to child protection, including through the implementation of the National Strategy on Child Protection. (51,63,64,66,76) Contributes to the creation and implementation of child protection policies, and develops a national system for collecting and disseminating data on vulnerable children. Advocates on behalf of all entities working on issues related to child begging, violence against children, and child labor. (77)

The National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons remains underfunded and research was unable to determine whether any coordinating bodies were active during the reporting period. Overlap among the activities of the coordinating bodies due to their institutional mandates also creates confusion and obstructs effective collaboration and implementation of efforts. (18-20,51,61,62,75)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of a national policy to address child labor, including its worst forms.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings† (2018–2020)	Implemented by CNLTP and a continuation of the previously ended action plan, along four axes: prevention, protection and prosecution, capacity building, and research and evaluation. (20,51)
National Strategy on Child Protection	Aims to establish an integrated national social protection system and specifically identifies the issue of child begging through an action plan with a recommended budget of $18 million. (9,29) Implemented through Child Protection Committees (CDPEs), currently established in 24 prefectures, which refer victims to social services and assist law enforcement with reintegrating child trafficking victims. (9,18,25) In 2018, the government established the 39th CDPE in Bambey. The national strategy plan calls for a total of 46. (51)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (18)

In 2018, research was unable to determine whether any actions were undertaken to renew the National Action Plan on the Prevention and Abolition of Child Labor in Senegal, which expired in 2016.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Removal of Street Children (Retrait des enfants de la Rue)*	Government program to remove begging children from the streets of Dakar and place them in government-run shelters. (34,64-67) During the reporting period, the government recruited additional social workers to support the return of child beggars to families, strengthening the capacity of the Ginddi Center; and produced a handbook of management procedures for centers that receive and care for vulnerable children. In 2018, more than 1,000 children were provided services, including repatriation to neighboring countries of origin. (51)
Daara Modernization Program†	$18.5 million government-funded voluntary program implemented by Tostan and La Rencontre Africaine pour la Défense des Droits d'Homme (RADDHO) that aims to regulate, inspect, and fund daaras and eliminate forced begging. (5,73,78) Research was unable to determine activities conducted during reporting period.
Ginddi Center‡	Shelter that serves abused and vulnerable children, including runaway talibés , street children, and child trafficking victims. (25,29,40,51,73) Provides food, education, vocational training, family mediation, medical and psychological care. (18,51,59,62,79) In 2018, the Ginddi Center provided services to 1,559 children, including coordinating repatriation to neighboring countries for some children. (51)
Centers to address child trafficking†	MOJ-run transit houses in Dakar, Pikine, and Saint-Louis that provide monitoring, education, and rehabilitation and reintegration services for victims of child trafficking. (18) Research was unable to determine activities conducted during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2,80-82)

Although the Government of Senegal has implemented programs to address child trafficking and forced begging, research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs to assist children in domestic work, agriculture, or mining. (4,17,29,62)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Senegal (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that penalties for child labor violations, including the worst forms, are stringent enough to serve as a deterrent.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Clarify ambiguity in forced begging provisions in the Penal Code and the Law Concerning the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons to explicitly guarantee that no exceptions can enable a child to be forced to beg.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor.	2017 – 2018
	Establish by law a compulsory education age equal to or higher than the minimum age for work.	2018
Enforcement	Publish information on number of labor inspections conducted, including those at worksites.	2013 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice, and ensure adequate labor inspectorate funding.	2010 – 2018
	Ensure that labor law enforcement and inspections are carried out in the informal sector.	2014 – 2018
	Establish a mechanism to receive child labor complaints, and track cases of child labor for referral to law enforcement or social services providers.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that criminal law investigators receive refresher training on laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2018
	Establish a formal and reciprocal referral mechanism between labor law enforcement and criminal law enforcement agencies and social services.	2016 – 2018
	Publish information on the criminal enforcement of child labor laws, including the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions, and imposed penalties for violations.	2016 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating mechanisms on child labor are active and able to carry out their intended mandates by providing adequate resources, support, and distinct scopes of responsibility.	2010 – 2018
Government Policies	Adopt a national policy to address child labor.	2016 – 2018
Social Programs	Ensure that all children have access to education by eliminating school-related fees, building schools in rural areas, training additional teachers, ensuring that all children have access to birth registration, and ensuring that schools are free from sexual abuse.	2011 – 2018
	Institute programs to address child labor in domestic work, agriculture, and mining, and ensure that adequate funding is available to support existing programs targeting the worst forms of child labor, including forced begging.	2010 – 2018
	Undertake activities to support the Daara Modernization Program, and the Centers to address child trafficking.	2017 – 2018

In 2018, Serbia made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government drafted the Law on the Rights of the Child and Protection of Child Rights and launched a Roadmap for Eliminating Abuse of Child Labor in Serbia. The Council for Children's Rights drafted a Strategy for Protection of Children from Violence and the Ministry of Interior developed Standard Operating Procedures for Human Trafficking Victims Protections. In addition, the government provided cash transfers to 380,000 vulnerable families with children, and applied penalties in 25 criminal cases related to child labor. However, children in Serbia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. Serbia's laws do not treat child beggars as victims and Serbia's social welfare centers are overburdened, which limits efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Serbia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (4,5,6,7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Serbia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	15.1 (725,227)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	17.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		99

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Domestic work as a result of human trafficking (3,5,6,15)
	Use in illicit activities, including in petty crime (5-7,13-15)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Serbia

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Children from Serbia, particularly those from Roma communities, are trafficked internally to engage in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. (5-7,14) Child trafficking victims, especially girls, Roma children, and children from low-income families in rural communities, are most vulnerable to child labor. (1,16)

In 2018, 42 percent of the 1,140 migrant children in Serbia were unaccompanied. (17) Unaccompanied children and those of migrant and asylum-seeking families from Iraq (Kurds and Yazidis) and Afghanistan are vulnerable to trafficking for labor and sexual exploitation, particularly if they are not enrolled in school. (1,4-7,12,13,18-21) Asylum seekers and grantees are allowed to access free primary and secondary education in Serbia. (1,22) In addition, Serbia has social programs to assist migrant children with access to education. (22-25)

In order to increase the registration of children of unregistered parents, a technical working group streamlined the registration procedures for undocumented minorities. (5,26) In November 2018, UNHCR held a conference in Serbia praising the country's overall efforts to eradicate statelessness, noting that the country may do so in the next few years. (27) In 2018, approximately 2,100 people were at risk of statelessness. (28) Some Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian children experience challenges in attaining birth registration, which may make school enrollment difficult and increases their vulnerability to engage in child labor. (5,21,26-29,30) Although the government has a program to increase the attendance of Roma children in preschool, and the law allows children to enroll in school without identity documents, economic hardship, ethnic discrimination, language barriers, disabilities, and placement in non-mainstream schools sometimes discourage Romani children from attending school, especially girls. (5,21,26-33,30) In addition, Roma children are more likely to begin school at a later age and drop out of school more frequently than their non-Roma peers do. (5)

Constitutional and legal protections prohibit discrimination in education against individuals with disabilities. (21,34-36) However, some individuals with disabilities, especially Roma children, face difficulties in accessing education due to social prejudices. (21,29,37,38,30)

Children from Serbia are being recruited to participate in military training camps. (39,40) The military training includes teaching them how to use weapons and other basic paramilitary skills. (39-42)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Serbia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 24 of the Labor Law; Article 66 of the Constitution (35,43)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 25 of the Labor Law; Article 66 of the Constitution (35,43)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 25, 84, and 87–88 of the Labor Law; Regulation on Hazardous Labor of Children (43,44)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 390 of the Criminal Code; Article 26 of the Constitution (35,45)

Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 4 of the Law on the Ratification of the Optional Protocol Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict (48)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 71 of the Constitution; Articles 94 and 98 of the Law on the Foundations of the Education System (35,49)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 71 of the Constitution; Article 91 of the Law on the Foundations of the Education System (35,49)

* No conscription (47)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (35,48)

In 2018, Parliament adopted the Law on Simplified Hiring of Seasonal Labor in Certain Economic Areas. (5,50) The Law regulates seasonal work, including in agriculture, and specifies that a work contract be required to employ minors. (50) The government also adopted the Law on Foreigners and the Law on Asylum and Temporary Protection, which require an assessment of a minor's protection and safety, and state that victims of human trafficking, including children, should receive special assistance. (6,51,52) In addition, the government passed the Protocol on Additional Educational, Health, and Social Support to Children, Students, and Adults during the reporting period. This Protocol aims to create education that is more inclusive, including the advancement of students in non-segregated environments, and the establishment of local commissions to oversee efforts. (5,53) Moreover, the draft Law on the Rights of the Child and Protection of Child Rights would create an Ombudsman for Children's rights, establish a new agency to oversee the protection of children's rights in government agencies, and would heighten other protections for children. (5,54)

Although the Criminal Code provides heightened penalties for the use of children in illicit activities, Serbia's law does not treat child beggars as victims, but rather as perpetrators and offenders. (5,12,22,45,55,56)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, Veteran, and Social Affairs (MOLEVSA) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Employment, Veteran, and Social Affairs (MOLEVSA)	Through the labor inspectorate, inspects businesses, including unregistered businesses, receives and investigates child labor complaints, and informs centers for social work of child labor violations. (5,57) Through the Center for Human Trafficking Victims' Protection (CPTV), identifies and rescues victims of child trafficking and those at-risk, conducts needs assessments, and refers victims to social services. Maintains records and contributes to trafficking research projects. (15) CPTV is divided into two parts: the Agency for Coordination of Protection of Trafficking Victims and the new Urgent Reception Center, which opened in early 2019. (1,6,14,21) MOLEVSA has internal teams for the protection of children with disabilities and children working on the street. These teams provide children with homes, food programs, and relocation from harmful family situations. (58)
Ministry of the Interior (MOI)	Oversees the General Police Directorate and enforces laws prohibiting commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking through the Criminal Police Department. (14,15,59,60) In 2018, increased the number of local police directorates with dedicated anti-trafficking units to 27. (6) Refers child labor violations to Centers for Social Work. (5)
Social Work Centers (SWCs)	Tracks the number of street children and receives child labor violations from MOLEVSA and MOI. (5) In 2018, there were 115 SWCs. (1)
Republic Public Prosecutor's Office	Leads investigations on human trafficking cases and exchanges information through a network of 27 local prosecutors and NGOs. (59) Provides financial support to CPTV. In 2018, the Organized Crime Prosecutor's Office formed the Human Trafficking Task Force, which is a prosecution-led multi-agency team that investigates and prosecutes human trafficking offenses. (6)
Parliamentary Committee on Children	Reviews draft legislation and monitors the implementation of laws pertinent to children's rights. (61)
Deputy Ombudsman for Children's Rights, Office of the Protector of Citizens	Monitors and conducts research on the situation of children's rights in Serbia. Produces reports on child begging, promotes inclusive education and legal prohibition of corporal punishment, and manages draft laws on children's rights for parliamentary approval. (61)

In 2018, the Ministry of Interior (MOI) transferred jurisdiction of human trafficking law enforcement from the Border Police Department to the Criminal Police Department. (5) The move was done to improve human trafficking investigation techniques. (6,21)

Throughout the reporting period, the Center for Human Trafficking Victims' Protection (CPTV) worked with state institutions, international organizations, and NGOs on human trafficking prevention and protection efforts and activities. (21)

According to the MOLEVSA, the Social Welfare Centers (SWCs) are significantly overburdened. (5,26)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Serbia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MOLEVSA that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including labor inspector training.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† Data are from January 2017 to October 2017.

‡ Data are from January 2018 to December 2018.

Labor inspectors are responsible for inspecting registered and unregistered businesses, including businesses within the agricultural sector. (5) The labor inspectorate has a work plan for inspections that is drafted at the beginning of each year, and targets high-risk sectors in which child labor is known to occur, such as in agriculture and construction. (5,64) In addition, the Special Protocol of Labor Inspection for Protection Children Against Child Labor requires labor inspectors to use a checklist to identify child labor during inspections and mandates that police and labor inspectors inform Social Welfare Centers (SWCs) on cases of child labor. (4,5,65)

During the year, labor inspectors received training on new laws and regulations. The Council of Europe provided training to 66 inspectors, including new labor inspectors, on human trafficking. In addition, the National Administration Academy organized a training on the newly adopted Law on General Administration Procedure. (21,63) However, the newly hired labor inspectors did not receive training on child labor, despite the labor inspectorate's report of sufficient funding. (4,5,58)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Serbia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Human trafficking training is provided as a part of the general police curriculum given to law enforcement officials who process immigration cases. (63) Continuous training on human trafficking is also provided to 1 public prosecutor in each of the 25 Higher Public Prosecutor's Offices. (5) In 2018, 25 police officers received training on suppressing human trafficking. In addition, 4 prosecutors and 16 police officers attended a train-the-trainer workshop, and additional training was provided to 45 participants on human trafficking within the migrant population. (6) However, sources indicated that agencies responsible for trafficking in persons investigations lack funding. (4,5)

During the reporting period, there were criminal sentences imposed in 25 criminal cases, which included human trafficking, neglecting and abusing a minor, and mediation in prostitution. (5) One case was finalized in a conviction. (5)

Serbia

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

The SWCs, the primary provider of social services to human trafficking victims, assist with child trafficking cases. (15) However, NGOs reported that CPTVs lacked specialized care and procedures for child victims. (2,6,15,23) Although criminal law enforcement personnel report that there are far fewer migrants in Serbia than during the peak of the migration crisis, those who remain in the country are at a significantly higher risk for human trafficking, labor, or sexual exploitation, as they continue to linger in a migrant status, often with few resources or options. (63)

In 2018, the government, NGOs, and national shelters implemented the Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs) for immigrant and migrant children. (26,63,66) The SOPs provide guidance on how to identify children at risk of being trafficked, while keeping the child's best interests in mind. (63,66,67)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Council for Children's Rights	Coordinates government efforts to address child labor by monitoring and evaluating government activities and includes representatives from international organizations and government ministries, such as MOLEVSA. (68) In 2018, met several times and published three draft documents on child protection, including a Strategy for the Prevention and Protection of Children against Violence for the period of 2018 to 2020. (5,69-71)
National Council for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings	Sets government policies on trafficking in persons, chaired by MOI. The National Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons acts as the Secretary of the Council and manages the work of the implementation team. (15) In 2018, the National Coordinator oversaw the re-design of the police directorate. (6)
Refugee Protection Working Group (RPWG)	Serves as the main mechanism for coordinating non-food related services to refugees, including children. Co-chaired by UNHCR and MOLEVSA with the participation of NGOs, local governments, and international organizations. (24) In 2018, RPWG met monthly and had three sub-working groups, including a group on child protection. (21,24)

The position of National Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons continues to experience constraints on time, financial resources, and coordination. (21) The Cabinet of the MOI must provide approval before the National Coordinator can work or meet with non-Serbian government officials or organizations, which may limit the coordination efficiency on child labor. (6,14,21)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant Roma policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap for Eliminating Abuse of Child Labor in Serbia (2018–2022)†	Creates a roadmap for eliminating the worst forms of child labor. Activities focus on the prevention and elimination of child abuse, support for children working on the streets and vulnerable families, the creation of a system to monitor and record risks of child labor within SWCs, and continuous development for professional workers. (72)
Action Plan for Protection of Children from Violence (2018–2022)†	Provides improved prevention, protection, and support for children against violence. (69,73) Part of the Roadmap for Eliminating Abuse of Child Labor in Serbia. Includes enhanced interventions for the protection of children from violence, including organizational mechanisms. (69)
Strategy for Preventing and Suppressing Human Trafficking and Action Plan (2017–2022)	Creates a legislative framework, budget, benchmarks, and strategic areas in need of improvement to combat trafficking in persons. (4,74) The government has allocated $76,000 for 2017–2019. (68) Actions to implement the policy in 2018 included completing a draft of the Standard Operating Procedure for Human Trafficking Victims Protection, updating the Action Plan for Preventing and Suppressing Human Trafficking for 2019–2020, and transferring jurisdiction of human trafficking cases from the Border Police to Criminal Police. (5,6)

Policy	Description
Strategy for the Fight Against High-Tech Crime (2019–2023)†	Promotes cooperation between the private and public sectors and civil society to prevent the sexual exploitation of children on the Internet. (75) Accompanying the Strategy is an Action Plan for the Implementation of the Strategy for Combating High-Tech Crime for the Period of 2019–2020. The Plan outlines the specific activities and their implementation timeframes. (76) Since the adoption of the Strategy, a mobile application was developed and launched to help children and parents with safer Internet practices. Since 2017, a “Fundamentals of Child Safety” program has been in place for grades 4 to 6. (63)
Protocol on Rules and Procedures for the Institutions and Organizations Working with Children Involved in Life and Work on the Streets of Belgrade	Aims to enhance institutional cooperation among MOI, the Criminal Police Directorate, the Communal Police, city SWCs, the City Secretariat for Education, the City Secretariat for Health, and civil society organizations. (77) Defines street children, worst forms of child labor, child work, and child trafficking. (1,77) Stipulates lead institutions, rules, and procedures for interacting with street children. Save the Children is funding the first round of training on the Protocol. (1) In 2018, the city of Belgrade prepared a shelter to house children engaged in street work, which opened in February 2019. (63)
National Strategy for Roma Inclusion (2016–2025)	Seeks to include representatives from Roma communities in policy implementation and aims to improve access to education for Roma population in Serbia, including access to preschool. (78) In addition, the government adopted the Action Plan for the Strategy for Social Inclusion of Roma Men and Women for 2017–2018†, which mandates the inclusion of Roma in education and employment. (22) In 2018, increased primary school enrollment for Roma children. (5)
Anti-Discrimination Strategy and Action Plan (2013–2018)	Prevented discrimination and improved the situation of children and ethnic minorities, including Roma, refugees, internally displaced children, and victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, including those used in the production of pornography. (79) In 2018, increased awareness and prosecution in cases of violence against children. (5)
Decree on Dedicated Transfers	Aims to allocate funds to local governments for the development of social services for people with disabilities, including children. (80) In 2018, $6.7 million was transferred to smaller municipalities to support social services. (5)
Development Partnership Framework (2016–2020)	Government of Serbia and the UN’s strategic planning document for the achievement of the UN’s sustainable development goals, including inclusive education, especially for the most vulnerable, and strengthening social welfare for families. (81) Active in 2018. (4)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated in to the National Strategy for Roma Inclusion (2016–2025). (12)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Programs	Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (CLEAR) is a capacity-building project implemented by ILO in 11 countries to build local and national capacity of governments to address child labor. (82) The Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (MAP) is a 2 year project implemented by ILO that aims to increase the knowledge base on child labor in Serbia. (82,83) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Child Allowance Program†	Government cash benefits program for poor families, conditional on school enrollment for children ages 7 and older. (5,61) In 2018, assisted 380,000 families. (5)
Assistance to Roma Children in Education†	Ministry of Education, Science, and Technological Development policy that seeks to improve the school attendance rate of Roma children. (61) Active in 2018 and school attendance rates have improved. (63) Includes the Law on the Foundations of the Education System, which encompasses affirmative action measures to improve participation and performance of Roma children in the education system. (26,63)
Inclusive Early Childhood Education and Care†	A World Bank, Ministry of Finance, and Ministry of Education, Science, and Technological Development project that aims to improve access to early childhood education for socially disadvantaged children. (84) Active in 2018. (63)

Program	Description
Strengthening the Identification and Protection of Victims of Trafficking†	An IOM, CPTV, and MOI project that contributes to the implementation of the National Anti-Trafficking Strategy by improving mechanisms for the prevention and identification of victims of human trafficking. (26) In 2018, MOI, MOLEVSA, and the Public Prosecution Office signed a Memorandum on Cooperation in the Field of Suppression of Human Trafficking and the Rights Protection of Human Trafficking Victims. (5,85) The Memorandum defines mutual rights in the identification of human trafficking, assistance and protection of victims, and statistical reporting. (6,85)
Hotline*‡	Government-implemented hotline to receive reports of labor violations under the slogan “Say no to black market work.” In 2018, MOLEVSA received 8,998 calls and 249 emails through the hotline, including calls and emails on child labor. (21)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Serbia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (5,6,86)

Although the Government of Serbia has implemented programs on child labor and inclusive education, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children living and working on the streets, including those involved in child begging.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Serbia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law does not treat child beggars as criminals.	2017 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that staff members at the CPTVs and SWCs have sufficient resources, such as personnel and funding, to address the specific needs of child trafficking victims.	2015 – 2018
	Train new labor inspectors on child labor, and make information regarding child labor law enforcement publicly available, including the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators have the necessary training, tools, and equipment to conduct thorough investigations and increase funding for agencies combating trafficking in persons.	2010 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that the National Coordinator for Combatting Trafficking in Persons has sufficient resources to coordinate with the police on investigations, prosecutions, and the protection of trafficking victims.	2015 – 2018
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Strategy for Roma Inclusion.	2017 – 2018
Social Programs	Address barriers to education, including access to birth registration documentation; increase access to education for children with disabilities; and increase access for minority populations, particularly migrant and Roma children.	2013 – 2018
	Carry out programs that specifically assist children living and working on the streets, including child beggars.	2018

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED POLICY THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, Sierra Leone made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. President Bio and Vice President Jalloh together with officials from ministries, departments, and agencies, donated 3 months of their salaries to eliminate school fees for more than 2 million students in primary and secondary education. International donors provided the bulk of funding support to implement the government’s free quality education program. Despite this initiative, Sierra Leone is receiving this assessment because it continued to implement a policy that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. The government continued to prohibit girls who were pregnant from attending regular public schools or taking secondary and post-secondary school entrance exams during the reporting period, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Children in Sierra Leone engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the mining sector and in commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and quarrying. The country has not implemented its national action plan on child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Sierra Leone engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the mining sector and in commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Sierra Leone. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	51.3 (897,142)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	67.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	43.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		68.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017 published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from the Demographic and Health Survey, 2013. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cassava, coffee, cocoa, palm oil, peanuts, and rice (8-11)
	Fishing, including deep-sea fishing,† mending nets, and working on boats in the open sea† (1,5,12)
Industry	Mining† for alluvial diamonds, sand, and gold, including loading gravel in sacks or basins, carrying sacks on their heads, washing, and sieving (1,5,10,13,14)
	Quarrying† and crushing stone, including granite, and transporting gravel (1,5,12,15)
	Construction, activities unknown (1,2,10,14)
	Manufacturing† (2,16)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3,20,21)
	Forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,20,22)
	Forced stealing (1)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3-5,10,14)
	Forced labor at granite and alluvial diamond mines, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,20,21)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Sierra Leone is a source, transit, and destination country for children trafficked for forced labor in domestic work, granite and diamond mining, and begging; trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation also occurs. There are reports that children, mostly boys ages 5–17, are forced to mine for diamonds for long hours in hazardous conditions, sometimes without pay. (3,5,10,12,21,23)

Research indicated that the government continued to implement a policy that prohibits pregnant girls from attending regular public schools and taking secondary and post-secondary school entrance exams, which makes them vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (1,3,5,10,14,23-30) Furthermore, despite the new government initiative to make education free through secondary school, substantial barriers remain, including a lack of schools and teachers, lack of transportation to schools, and sexual abuse by teachers. (1,10,26-29) In addition, despite legal protections, children with disabilities are less likely to attend school due in part to discrimination and school facilities that are not adequately accessible. (26,27,30) Despite previous reports of denied access to school, children with HIV status are able to attend schools as noted by the National HIV/AIDS Secretariat. (23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Sierra Leone has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Section 125 of the Child Right Act; Section 52 of Chapter 212, Employers and Employed Act (31,32)

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Part II, Section 2, and Part IV, Sections 14–15 and 21 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act; Section 19 of the Constitution of Sierra Leone (34,35)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Part II, Section 2, and Part IV, Sections 14–15 and 21 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act; Section 60 of the Child Right Act (31,34)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 19–34 of the Sexual Offenses Act; Part II, Section 2, of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act (34,36)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 7 and 13 of the National Drugs Control Act (37)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 28 of the Child Right Act (31)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Section 3 of the Education Act; Section 125 of the Child Right Act (31,38)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 3 of the Education Act; Section 9 of the Constitution of Sierra Leone; Section 11(c) of the Child Right Act (31,35,38)

* No conscription (37)

Although Sierra Leone's Child Right Act identifies areas of hazardous work prohibited for children such as portage of heavy loads, going to sea, and work in places in which machines are used, the types of hazardous work identified do not include, among others, street work. There is evidence that street work is conducted in unhealthy environments that may expose children to hazardous substances, agents, or processes; to temperatures; and to noise or vibrations damaging to their health. (1,23,26,31,32,39) Other sectors in which children may be exposed to hazardous conditions in Sierra Leone include agriculture, domestic work, transportation, and dumpsites. (1,23,26,31,32,39)

The Child Right Act sets the minimum age for light work at age 13; however, it is not specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor because it does not limit the number of hours per week for light work, determine the activities in which light work may be permitted, or specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken. (39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Child Welfare Committees that may hinder adequate child labor enforcement.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Formulates, implements, and monitors compliance with child labor regulations through its Child Labor Unit. (5,10,40) MLSS District Labor Officers enforce labor laws in the formal sector. (20) Operates regional offices in Bo, Kenema, Makeni, and an office in the diamond-producing district of Kono. (10)
Ministry of Mines and Mineral Resources	Enforces regulations against the use of child labor in mining. Authorized to suspend licenses of mining operators engaged in child labor. (5,26,32)

Sierra Leone

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Welfare, Gender and Children's Affairs (MSWGCA)	Serves as the umbrella agency to oversee child protection issues, including child labor. Heads the National Trafficking in Persons Secretariat. (1,5,20)
Sierra Leone Police	Leads the investigation and prosecution of sexual abuse, domestic violence, and child abuse through Family Support Units, which are mandated to minimize and eradicate the incidence of sexual abuse, domestic violence, and child abuse. (5,20,41)
Transnational Organized Crime Unit	Enforces human trafficking laws and provides statistical data and general information on particular cases of human trafficking. (5,42)
Ministry of Local Government and Rural Development	Enforces child labor laws in the informal sector through its district councils. (1,5)
Child Welfare Committees	Promote awareness of children's rights and report child welfare concerns to officials responsible for children's issues. Provide recommendations on the support of village children and address complaints and concerns by village inhabitants. (5,39,41)

The Child Right Act requires the establishment of a Child Welfare Committee in every village, chiefdom, and district; however, research indicates that these committees have been established only in a few parts of the country due to budgetary constraints. (20,24,37,39)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Sierra Leone took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including with labor inspector training.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In the past, the labor inspectorate did not have a dedicated budget; however, research indicates that a provisional budget of $11,800 is approved for 2019. (5) Sierra Leone employs 8 Occupational Health and Safety Officers, 14 Labor Officers, and 5 Labor Inspectors, all of whom handle labor inspections. (23) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Sierra Leone's workforce, which includes over 2.9 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in least developed economies, Sierra Leone would employ about 74 inspectors. (43,44) In addition to the insufficient number of inspectors, enforcement of child labor laws remains challenging due to insufficient training and the lack of resources for inspections. (5,14,20) The government has a complaint line for issues related to child protection; however, research was unable to determine its level of operation in 2018. (5) Although, the Ministry of Mines and Mineral Resources can conduct inspections of mines and revoke licenses from license holders who are found to be using child labor, reports indicated that the government did not adequately enforce these laws in the diamond-mining sector because of the limited number of labor inspectors and a lack of funding. (5,14,26,32)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Sierra Leone took actions to combat the worst forms of child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (14)	Yes (5)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (14)	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	No (14)	No (5)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (39)	0 (5)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (39)	Unknown (5)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (39)	Unknown (5)
Number of Convictions	0 (14)	Unknown (5)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (23)	Unknown (23)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (14)	Yes (5)

Reports indicate that criminal law enforcement in Sierra Leone, particularly efforts to address human trafficking, is hampered by a lack of coordination, limited funding, and a lack of training of law enforcement personnel and the judiciary. (10,14,45) The government does not publicly release information on the number of violations found, prosecutions initiated, or convictions. The government did not provide information on the number of penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor. (5,23)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of named members to the National Commission for Children.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Technical Steering Committee on Child Labor (NTCCL)	Develops and coordinates the National Action Plan against the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (13,40,46) Led by MLSS and MSWGCA, and includes representatives from 10 other government agencies, representatives from international organizations, and NGOs. (47) In 2018, the NTCCL coordinated quarterly meetings with stakeholders, such as MSWGCA, the Sierra Leone Congress, the Sierra Leone Employers, the Federation of Education, and the National Commission for Children, on issues related to child labor. (23)
National Trafficking in Persons Task Force	Coordinates the needs and requirements of agencies that provide shelter and services for human trafficking victims, gathers data on reported human trafficking cases, and meets regularly to develop policy and address the issue of child trafficking. (23) In 2018, efforts were hampered due to limited funding for the task force, with an annual budget of $14,800 to fund anti-trafficking activities. In December 2018, the Task Force trained 25 social workers, who helped to identify 481 potential human trafficking victims, many of whom were returning migrants from Algeria, Libya, Mali, and Niger. (23)
National Commission for Children (NCC)	Coordinates and exchanges information in accordance with the Child Right Act. As part of the NTCCL, advises the government on ways to improve conditions for and the welfare of children. Led by the MLSS and the MSWGCA. (39) In 2018, the NCC undertook awareness-raising activities and developed a handbook on child rights and responsibilities. (23)

As of 2018, and as required by the Child Right Act, all members of the National Commission for Children have been appointed. (23,37)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The Government of Sierra Leone has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of funding for the National Action Plan against the Worst Forms of Child Labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Human Trafficking (2015–2020)	Includes strategies to address human trafficking through prevention efforts, victim identification, protection and referral of victims to services, training of personnel, and government coordination and monitoring. (3) In 2018, in support of the National Action Plan, the National Trafficking in Persons Task Force convened monthly meetings with government institutions, international organizations, and NGOs. It reviewed the Anti-Human Trafficking Act and continued the process of drafting legislation to combat trafficking in persons, trained government agencies on the victims' referral mechanism, worked with the MLSS to develop and implement the country's Labor Migration Policy, and coordinated with the Vice President's office to implement a nationwide trafficking in persons public awareness program. (23)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (5,14,28,47,48)

Research could not find evidence that the National Action Plan against the Worst Forms of Child Labor is in force, despite its initial drafting in 2014. (5,14)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including insufficient shelters and safe houses for children who have been withdrawn from street work or forced labor.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Trafficking Shelters†	Government-funded program that refers child trafficking victims to privately run shelters that house child victims of forced labor and human trafficking. (22) In 2018, shelters suffered funding issues that affected their functionality, and assistance to victims was provided primarily with the support of NGOs. (3,4)
UNICEF Country Program (2015–2018)	Three-year program that aims to combat the worst forms of child labor, increase access to basic education, and address children's basic educational needs. (27)

† Program is funded by the Government of Sierra Leone.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (49,50)

With an initial donation of three months salary of President Bio and Vice President Jalloh and various officials from ministries, departments, and agencies, the government started a program to eliminate school fees, in an effort to support free public primary and secondary education for more than two million students. (4,5,28,29,51) Sierra Leone has insufficient and under-funded shelters and safe houses for children who have been withdrawn from working on the streets or in forced labor. (3,16,33,52)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Sierra Leone (Table 11).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED POLICY THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children are protected from hazardous work in sectors that have dangerous conditions and in which child labor is known to occur, including in agriculture, domestic work, transportation, street work, and dumpsites.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children's involvement in child labor.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that Village Child Welfare Committees are established and operational in all areas.	2014 – 2018
	Publish information on Ministry of Labor and Social Security funding, criminal violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions achieved, and penalties imposed. Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2011 – 2018
	Enforce laws prohibiting child labor in mining, particularly in the diamond mining sector.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure refresher training for civil and criminal law enforcement officials on child labor and criminal law enforcement, and establish a complaint and reciprocal referral mechanisms for labor law enforcement.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the child protection complaint line is operational and accessible in order to identify child labor issues.	2013 – 2018
	Improve coordination between criminal law enforcement agencies to ensure that violations are adequately investigated and prosecuted. Ensure that judicial system personnel have sufficient training and resources to handle child labor and human trafficking cases.	2014 – 2018
	Provide labor law and criminal law enforcement officials with sufficient resources to adequately enforce labor laws throughout the country.	2012 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure the National Trafficking in Persons Task Force is active and has appropriate funding to carry out its mandate.	2018
Government Policies	Permit pregnant girls to take school entrance exams and attend regular public schools.	2015 – 2018
	Adopt a National Action Plan against the Worst Forms of Child Labor.	2014 – 2018
Social Programs	Increase access to education for children by providing transportation, increasing the number of schools, eliminating abuse by teachers, and improving the accessibility of facilities to children with disabilities.	2013 – 2018
	Increase the availability and funding of shelters and safe houses for victims of forced labor and for children removed from street work.	2009 – 2018

In 2018, the Solomon Islands made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Anti-Human Trafficking Advisory Committee became an authorized organization to lobby and influence the government on trafficking-related issues, including child trafficking. However, children in the Solomon Islands engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The minimum age for employment does not meet international standards, and the government has not comprehensively identified the hazardous occupations prohibited for children. In addition, education is not compulsory, which increases children’s vulnerability to child labor exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Solomon Islands engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-6) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in the Solomon Islands. Data on some of these key indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		87.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (7)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization’s analysis, 2019. (8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working on plantations, including harvesting palm oil fruits (6,9,11)
	Harvesting sea cucumbers, including diving in deep water (4,6,9,11)
Industry	Alluvial mining† (6,9,11)
	Furniture construction (6,11)
	Construction on roads and buildings, including making bricks (6,9,11)
Services	Domestic work, including working as cooks (4,6,9,11)
	Scavenging for cans and metal in garbage dumpsites, streets, and streams (3,6,9)
	Working in nightclubs, casinos, and motels (4,6,9,11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-6,11-14)
	Use in illicit activities, including in the cultivation and trafficking of drugs (1,3,6,9,11)
	Forced domestic work and forced work as cooks (4,6,11,13,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In the Solomon Islands, the commercial sexual exploitation of both boys and girls is prevalent near logging camps; near or aboard fishing vessels; and at hotels, casinos, and entertainment establishments. (2,5,6,11-13) Children are exposed to toxic pesticides on palm oil plantations while tending to, harvesting, and collecting palm oil fruits. In addition, children—mainly boys—are exposed to extreme water depths and temperatures while diving for sea cucumbers. (4, 11) There are no nationally representative data available on the prevalence and nature of child labor in the Solomon Islands. Although the government's Fee Free Basic Education Policy provides free education, additional school fees, uniform and book costs, and transportation limitations make it challenging for some children, particularly girls, to access education. (6, 11, 16, 17)

Solomon Islands

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

II. Legal Framework for Child Labor

The Solomon Islands has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the Solomon Islands' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and the minimum age for hazardous work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	12	Article 46 of the Labor Act (18)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Articles 47–49 of the Labor Act (18)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 6 of the Constitution; Articles 251 and 256 of the Penal Code; Part 7 of the Immigration Act (19-21)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Part 7 of the Immigration Act; Article 145 of the Penal Code (20,21)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 141, 143, and 144 of the Penal Code (21)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

† No standing military (22)

While the Labor Code prohibits all children under age 18 from working at night and regulates work in mines and on ships, the Labor Code does not clearly establish a minimum age for hazardous work or delineate the type of work considered hazardous for all children. In addition, the legal framework does not prohibit dangerous work in scavenging and agricultural activities in which there is evidence of children being exposed to injuries, extreme temperatures, and chemicals. (11,12,18) The minimum age for work is not in compliance with international standards because the Labor Act permits children as young as 12 to work. (18)

The Penal Code includes heightened penalties if an offense is committed against a child, but has insufficient prohibitions against child trafficking because threats, the use of force, or other forms of coercion are required to be established for the crime of child trafficking. Furthermore, the laws on child commercial sexual exploitation are insufficient as they do not include prohibiting pornographic performances. (21) Although there are no laws that provide free basic education, there is a policy that sufficiently provides for free basic education. (16)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Commerce, Industry, Labor and Immigration that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Commerce, Industry, Labor and Immigration	Enforces child labor laws. (23) Through the Immigration Division, leads efforts to combat human trafficking, including the trafficking of children. (24,25)
Royal Solomon Islands Police	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor. (15,26) Leads investigations of internal human trafficking cases. (27)
Joint Monitoring and Investigation Team	Monitors and investigates cases of transnational human trafficking, specifically in the logging industry. Comprising representatives from the Immigration Division, the Royal Solomon Islands Police, Customs, and the Forestry Division. (24,28)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in the Solomon Islands took actions to combat child labor (Table 6).

The Government of the Solomon Islands did not respond to requests for information related to its labor law enforcement efforts. Inefficient resources continue to hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws, including a lack of budget transparency and enforcement efforts. (6,11,15,26)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in the Solomon Islands took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

The Government of the Solomon Islands did not respond to requests for information on its criminal law enforcement efforts related to child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Anti-Human Trafficking Advisory Committee (AHTAC)	Coordinates efforts across the government to address human trafficking. (24) Includes the Immigration Division, which acts as secretariat, and representatives from law enforcement agencies and NGOs. An Executive Officer from the Royal Solomon Islands Police Force acts as the Committee Chair. (12,14,27)
National Advisory and Action Committee on Children (NAACC)	Coordinates government and NGOs to address child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (6) The committee consists of several ministries, including the Ministry of Women, Youth, Children and Family Affairs; Ministry of Commerce, Industry, Labor and Immigration; and Ministry of Home Affairs. Several NGOs participate, including Save the Children, UNICEF, and the WHO. (12)

In 2018, the Anti-Trafficking Advisory Committee (AHTAC) was in the process of becoming an authorized organization with the ability to lobby and influence the government on human trafficking-related issues—including child trafficking—and the government also began processes to allocate to the AHTAC for the first time a budget of $2,976, which will provide funding for law enforcement training and public awareness campaigns. The AHTAC also established a working group to accede to and ratify the UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, which is expected in 2019. (14) Although the National Advisory and Action Committee on Children was established in 2012, research was unable to determine whether activities took place during the reporting period to address child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (12,30)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Human Trafficking and People Smuggling (2015–2020)	Establishes a framework for national anti-human trafficking efforts. (31) Raises awareness about commercial sexual exploitation of children and the services available for vulnerable children. The National Action Plan is funded by NGOs and the Government of the Solomon Islands. (12,14,31) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan on Human Trafficking and People Smuggling during the reporting period.
Fee Free Basic Education Policy	Subsidizes school fees for grades one through nine to increase access to education. (11,12,16,32) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Fee Free Basic Education Policy during the reporting period.
National Education Action Plan (NEAP)	Establishes a timeline within the National Development Strategy 2016–2035 to provide free primary and secondary education to boys and girls by 2020. (33) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Education Action Plan during the reporting period.
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)†	A multinational strategic framework, comprising 14 South Pacific nations, created to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (34)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (35)

Research did not find evidence that the National Action Plan on Human Trafficking and People Smuggling contains policies to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. However, in 2018, partner organizations trained local communities on child protection and preventing commercial sexual exploitation. (14) Child labor prevention and elimination strategies do not appear to be integrated into the Fee Free Basic Education Policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government funded or participated in social programs that include the goal of preventing or eliminating child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Solomon Islands (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2014 – 2018
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2014 – 2018
	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2014 – 2018
	Raise the minimum age for employment to comply with international standards.	2009 – 2018
	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work.	2009 – 2018
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, including the types of work for which there is evidence of hazards, such as in scavenging and agriculture.	2009 – 2018
	Establish by law an age up to which education is compulsory that extends to the minimum age for employment.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits child trafficking, regardless of whether threats, the use of force, or other forms of coercion can be established.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits using, procuring, and offering a child for pornographic performances.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits using, procuring, and offering a child for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2011 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICES THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, Somalia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the year, the government drafted a National Employment Policy and an updated Labor Code that identify hazardous occupations or activities prohibited by children. Additionally, government forces rescued 32 children who had been kidnapped by al-Shabaab. However, despite these initiatives, Somalia is receiving this assessment because it continued to implement practices that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. The Somali National Army recruited and used children in armed conflict in violation of its national law during the reporting period. Somalia is also receiving this assessment because it lacks a labor inspectorate and conducted no worksite labor inspections. Children in Somalia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict. Children in Somalia also perform dangerous tasks in street work. In addition, laws do not criminally prohibit child trafficking for labor, commercial sexual exploitation, or the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Somalia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict.(1) Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Somalia. Data on these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict and supporting roles, including as cooks, porters, and informants, or to man checkpoints (1,6,7,11)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, herding livestock, breaking rocks, selling or transporting khat , begging, and construction work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,6,9)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,12)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

As of November 2018, there were an estimated 2.6 million IDPs in Somalia. (13) IDPs, including children, are vulnerable to human trafficking for sexual and labor exploitation. Trucks transporting goods to Somalia return to Kenya with girls who are victims of child trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation in brothels in Kenya and destinations outside Kenya. (1) Some Somali children seeking refuge in Kenya to avoid recruitment by the terrorist organization al-Shabaab subsequently become victims of trafficking for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Research also found that children in Somalia are trafficked to Saudi Arabia and forced to beg on the streets. (1) In addition, children from minority clan populations in Somalia are particularly vulnerable to being engaged in hazardous work, including work that exposes them to furnaces or ovens, or through which they directly engage with armed groups. Children from minority clan households may also be at elevated risk of forced recruitment by military groups at school. (14)

In the first 9 months of 2018, more than 1,800 children were recruited by state and non-state military forces, an increase from 1,500 children during the same period in 2017. (6,15) During the reporting period, a total of approximately 2,300 children were recruited and used in armed conflict in Somalia. (17) Al-Shabaab increased its campaign of forcibly recruiting children as young as age 8 for use in armed conflict, and in 2018 recruited at least 1,865 children. During the reporting period, the group continued the practice of forcing communities to “volunteer” children to join the group in Galgaduud and Middle Shabelle regions. (1,11,16,17) These children planted explosive devices, acted as human shields, conducted assassinations and suicide attacks, gathered intelligence, and provided domestic services. Some girls were also forced into sexual servitude. (1) Research found that the Ahlu Sunnah Wal Jama’a militia, which to date has not yet integrated into the Somali National Army (SNA), recruited at least 14 children during the reporting period. Somalia’s numerous clan militias also used child soldiers. (6,17) During the reporting period, the SNA recruited more than 150 children for use in armed conflict, even though General Order No. 1 prohibits military personnel from recruiting and employing child soldiers. (1,17,18) In January 2018, 36 children were rescued from al-Shabaab captivity in Middle Shabelle and transferred to a UNICEF-supported rehabilitation center in Mogadishu. (6)

The protracted violence in Somalia has reduced access to all basic services, including public education. (19,20) Across Somalia, only 3 out of 10 children have access to school. (6) In 2018, al-Shabaab attacked over 60 schools and abducted teachers who refused to implement the group’s teachings in class lessons. (17,19) Attacks on schools by al-Shabaab, SNA, and other armed groups have resulted in the forced recruitment of children, state and non-state military occupancy of schools, and damaged educational facilities. (20,21) In 2018, the Somali government made efforts to increase access to free public education by taking back 24 government schools that had been operated by private entities, which often charge prohibitively expensive school fees. (6)

Al-Shabaab occupied rural areas in south-central Somalia. The Federal Government of Somalia (FGS) had limited control outside its capital city, Mogadishu. In other parts of the country, essential governance functions were provided by regional administrations, including the self-declared independent region of Somaliland in the northwest and the federal member state of Puntland in the northeast. (1,22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Somalia has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICES THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

Although Somalia has ratified ILO Convention 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, the government has never fulfilled the reporting requirements mandated under this convention. (7)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Somalia's legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor, including the lack of a prohibition of recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 93 of the Labor Code; Article 38(1) of the Private Sector Employees Law (23,24)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		General Order No. I (18)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	14‡	Articles 13 and 15 of the General Education Law (27)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 14 of the General Education Law (27)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (27)

In 2018, the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs began drafting a National Labor Code. (28,29) The government also drafted the Child Rights Bill, which will domesticate into law the Convention on the Rights of the Child. (17) The gap between the end of compulsory education and the minimum age for work leaves children age 14 vulnerable to child labor because they are not in school, but they also may not legally work. (8,27) In September 2017, Somaliland drafted a human trafficking law that is currently under review. (30) In November 2017, Puntland State passed new penal and criminal procedure codes that criminalize human trafficking. According to international stakeholders, the legislation meets international standards. (30) In addition, in April 2018, Somaliland passed a bill that criminalizes trafficking for sexual slavery. (31)

Somalia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICES THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

It is unclear whether laws issued prior to 1991 are still in effect in Somalia. However, in 2014, Parliament issued a public statement citing some pre-1991 laws, which suggests that the FGS continued to recognize relevant historic laws. (32) The Provisional Constitution does not provide a minimum age for employment. However, the pre-1991 Labor Code establishes age 15 as the minimum age for work. (23) Although the Labor Code establishes age 12 as the minimum age for light work and describes the conditions under which light work may be undertaken, it neither determines the activities in which light work may be permitted nor prescribes the number of hours per week for light work. The Labor Code allows the government to prescribe the types of work that are prohibited to children under age 18; however, legislation that comprehensively prohibits hazardous occupations and activities for children does not appear to exist. (23)

Laws related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children are not sufficient, because using, procuring, and offering a child for prostitution, pornography, and pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. (26) The Penal Code requires extensive updating. Many fines in the Code equal less than $1, which does not serve as an effective deterrent. (26,33) Furthermore, it appears that under Article 405, children involved in prostitution would not be protected from criminal charges. (26)

The Juvenile Justice Law of Puntland defines a child as anyone age 14 and under; consequently, the government detained and issued prison sentences, including life imprisonment, to children over age 14 for their association with armed groups. (11,34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government does not have a labor inspectorate for the enforcement of laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Somali National Police	Investigates and enforces laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (35) The Counter-Trafficking and Organized Crime Unit has six officers. (28)
Ministry of Defense	Screens Somali National Army (SNA) units for child soldiers through the Child Protection Union. (6)
Puntland Security Forces	Investigate and enforce human trafficking laws. (36)
Puntland Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes human trafficking cases. (36)
Somaliland Police	Investigates human trafficking. (37)
Somaliland's Attorney General's Office	Prosecutes human trafficking cases. (37)

During the reporting period, the UN Assistance Mission in Somalia (UNSOM) conducted 3 training sessions on child rights and protections to approximately 125 soldiers and 40 officers of the SNA, including child protection focal points from various regions of the country. (6) In April 2018, the Child Protection Union (CPU) partnered with UNSOM and UNICEF to conduct community outreach, awareness training, and “youth-in-service” screening missions in all five SNA sectors. (6) Throughout the year, the CPU developed and disseminated radio and print media content regarding the prevention of child recruitment and conscription in armed conflict. (6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, the lack of a labor inspectorate in Somalia may impede the enforcement of child labor laws. (8)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Somalia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including human and financial resources.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICES THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In January 2018, government security forces rescued more than 30 children as young as age 9 from a school in the Middle Shabelle region who had been kidnapped by al-Shabaab and were being trained as soldiers. The children were transferred to a UNICEF-sponsored rehabilitation center. (6,17,39) In August 2018, the President of Puntland signed a decree pardoning 34 children who had been imprisoned since 2016 for their association with al-Shabaab. In November 2018, the children were transferred to a rehabilitation center in Mogadishu to await reunion with their families. (17,40)

Between August and September 2018, UNODC conducted two human trafficking training courses, one in Garowe and one in Mogadishu, that trained 50 people. In October 2018, UNODC conducted human trafficking awareness trainings for 42 members of the Maritime Policing Unit. (41) However, the Somali National Police remained understaffed and undertrained, and lacked the capacity to investigate or enforce laws on the worst forms of child labor. (6) In addition, there were reports that in 2018 the Somali National Police recruited and used at least 93 children in police activities. (17)

The SNA issued a general staff order in 2016 stating that children under age 18 may not enlist; however, despite reports of continued recruitment and use of children, research found no information that the FGS investigated or prosecuted SNA officials who recruited or used child soldiers during the reporting period. (21) During the reporting period, at least 375 children were detained, at times in the company of adults, by the SNA or police for alleged association with non-state armed groups. (10,11,17) Children who are detained under suspected affiliation with non-state armed groups were sometimes interrogated without legal representation and coerced into signing or recording confessions. Moreover, these children were at times threatened or physically harmed in ways that amount to torture. (11) In addition, although the Provisional Constitution defines a child as anyone under age 18, more than 30 children were given sentences ranging from 8 years to life imprisonment for association with al-Shabaab. (11,25) Research found that the existing referral mechanisms for victims of child labor address children in armed conflict only. (34)

IV. Coordination of Government Efforts on Child Labor

The FGS has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist that hinder the adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including in efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 7. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Protection Unit	Raises awareness of child soldier issues and works with UNICEF to implement standard operating procedures on protecting children associated with armed conflict. (5,42,43) In January and February 2018, in conjunction with the UN, supported the biometric registration of 2,037 elements of the Puntland forces under control of SNA and identified 17 children in the process. All children were withdrawn from the Puntland forces and either reunited with their families or placed in temporary residential care. (17)

(42,43) Comprises the Child Protection Unit, Ministry of Defense officials, representatives from the Ministry of Women and Human Rights Development and other ministries, and UN representatives. (10,42) No coordination activities were conducted during the reporting period. (37)
Human Trafficking Task Forces	The Human Trafficking and Smuggling Task Force, led by the Ministry of Interior and Federal Affairs, leads FGS anti-trafficking efforts. (44) Puntland's Counter Trafficking Board leads the region's anti-trafficking efforts. Somaliland's Counter Human Trafficking Agency coordinates the development of legislation and collection of data. (44) No coordination activities were conducted during the reporting period. (37)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 8). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including limited scope of existing policies.

Table 8. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Child Soldier Action Plan	Establishes a strategy for the reception and stabilization of children found in SNA, and for the prevention of child soldiers through education of soldiers and monitoring of military camps. (42) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Child Soldier Action Plan during the reporting period.
National Development Plan (2017–2019)	Aims to end all forms of violence against children, including child labor, and develop and implement a National Child Labor Policy. (45) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Development Plan during the reporting period.
United Nations Strategic Framework (2017–2020)	Establishes a broad framework for preventing, eliminating, and rehabilitating children associated with armed conflict. (46) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the UN Strategic Framework during the reporting period.

‡ The government has other policies which may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (47)

In 2018, the FGS released the Education Sector Strategic Plan 2018–2020, which aims to increase school enrollment and address safety in schools through training and community engagement. (48) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor, in consultation with the ILO, conducted a macroeconomic analysis of the labor market in Somalia and used the data gathered to draft a National Employment Policy. The draft policy is currently under cabinet review before being moved forward to Parliament for approval. (6,28,29) Although the government has some policies that address child soldiers, research found no evidence of any policies to address child labor in agriculture, industry, street work, or domestic work.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the FGS participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Program for Treatment and Handling of Disengaged Combatants	FGS program in coordination with UNICEF that rehabilitates former combatants, emphasizing the specific needs of child combatants, and of female combatants and their dependents. (48) Centers, located in Baidoa, Belet Weyne, Kismayo, and Mogadishu, provide accommodation, psychological counseling, education, and vocational training to former combatants. (49) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Program for Treatment and Handling of Disengaged Combatants during the reporting period.
Joint Program on Youth Employment Somalia (YES)	Joint program by the Food and Agriculture Organization, ILO, UNDP, UN-Habitat, and UN Industrial Development Organization that seeks to improve sustainable employment opportunities for youth and develop their skills to respond to needs in the labor market. (50) In 2018, organized an inter-ministerial steering committee chaired by the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs to lead the process of developing a National Employment Strategy that will be released in 2019. In addition, the program also supported coordination efforts between the Ministry of Labor and the Ministry of Planning to conduct a Labor Force Survey. (28,29,51)

Program	Description
UNICEF Country Program (2018–2020)	$267 million donor-funded program in coordination with the FGS that aims to ensure safe, equitable, and quality education for children and support an enabling environment to strengthen child protection frameworks. (52) In 2018, assisted 1,179 children formerly associated with armed groups through reintegration programs that included reunification with families and access to formal education as well as vocational training opportunities. (17)
Efforts to Combat Human Trafficking (2014–2017)	Strengthening the National Criminal Justice Response to Trafficking in Persons is a $750,000 USDOS-funded, 3-year project implemented by UNODC to enhance the criminal justice response to trafficking in persons in FGS and Somaliland. Aims to strengthen legal frameworks to meet international standards, and develop and provide training on identifying victims, conducting investigations, and prosecuting cases. (53,54) In March 2018, the project organized a 3-day training workshop in Mogadishu for 5 judicial officers and 10 prosecutors with the goal of building the capacity of prosecutors to adequately prosecute trafficking in persons cases. The project ended in September 2018. (54)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (55)

In Somaliland, the government operates the Hargeisa Orphanage Center, which provides basic services to child victims of trafficking before they are reunited with their families. (41) During the reporting period, in Somaliland, vulnerable children, including trafficking victims, received social services at the Hargeisa Orphanage Center before being reunited with their families. Additionally, in 2018 Puntland authorities worked with IOM and local NGOs to provide social services and reintegration assistance to victims of human trafficking. (41) Although the FGS implemented programs to address child soldiers and child trafficking, existing programs fail to address the scope of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Somalia (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict; the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography; and the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2018
	Clarify whether the pre-1991 Labor Code is still in effect under the Federal Government of Somalia.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that a legal framework on child labor is in place that includes a minimum age for work and hazardous work; determines the activities in which light work may be permitted and prescribes the number of hours per week for light work; and, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations, determines the types of hazardous work prohibited for children.
	Criminally prohibit child trafficking for labor and sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2018
	Fulfill reporting requirements as required under ILO C. 182.	2018
	Criminally prohibit using, procuring, and offering a child for prostitution, pornography, and pornographic performances.	2015 – 2018
	Update the Penal Code to ensure that penalties for the commercial sexual exploitation of children are sufficiently stringent to deter violations.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that the law protects children involved in commercial sexual exploitation from criminal charges.	2011 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities.	2009 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
Raise the compulsory education to be commensurate with the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2018
Ensure that Puntland's regional laws define a child as anyone under age 18, in accordance with international standards.	2016 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Establish a labor inspectorate to investigate, monitor, and enforce laws related to child labor, and include adequate funding, human resources, and training for personnel.	2009 – 2018
	Publish information on the training of investigators, as well as the number of investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions achieved in all regions of Somalia.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement officials receive sufficient training and resources to investigate, prosecute, and convict violators of the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2018
	Cease the recruitment and use of child soldiers by the Somali National Army and its allied militia. Investigate, prosecute, and punish, as appropriate, Somali National Army commanders who recruit and use children.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that children associated with armed groups are not detained with adults and refer these children to social service providers. Cease the practice of sentencing children to life imprisonment for associating with armed groups.	2015 – 2018
	Establish a referral mechanism between the Somali National Police and social welfare services for children engaged in forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation.	2014 – 2018
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all forms of child labor.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that coordination mechanisms to address the worst forms of child labor, such as child soldiering, are active, and conduct activities to address the child labor problem.	2017 – 2018
	Adopt policies to address child labor in agriculture, industry, street work, and domestic work.	2018
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible and safe for all children by removing all armed groups and forces from schools and other educational facilities.	2013 – 2018
	Develop programs to address child labor, such as in street work and forced labor in agriculture. Expand existing programs to address the scope of children in armed conflict.	2009 – 2018

In 2018, South Africa made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The President endorsed and disseminated the amended Children’s Act to prohibit persons convicted of child trafficking from working with children. The government also approved the National Policy Framework on Trafficking, which includes provisions on trafficking of minors. However, children in South Africa engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging, sometimes the result of human trafficking. Labor inspectors are not authorized to assess penalties, and social programs are not sufficient to address the scope of child labor. In addition, barriers to education remain, especially among children without proper identification documents and children with disabilities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in South Africa engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging, sometimes the result of human trafficking. (1,2) Data on key indicators on children’s work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	7 to 15	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		81.67

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (3)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization’s analysis, 2019. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including harvesting corn (5-7)
Services	Domestic work (5,8)
	Garbage scavenging for food items and recyclable items† (9)
	Food service, activities unknown (2)
	Street work, including transportation services, vending, and begging (2,5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including gang-related activity (10-12)
	Use in the production of pornography (13-17)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,17-25)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, food service, street vending, illicit activities, and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,26)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

South Africa is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking. Children are trafficked from poor rural areas or peripheral townships to urban centers, such as Cape Town, Durban, and Johannesburg. (2,27) Girls are mainly victimized for commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work, and boys are forced to work in street vending, food service, and begging. (2,18,28-30) Refugees, orphans, and children with disabilities are often vulnerable to child labor, such as forced begging. (10,31)

South Africa

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In South Africa, parents at a given school may vote to pass a resolution authorizing the collection of school fees during a given year. (32) The government waives tuition for the poorest 60 percent of students, but in practice, some families must still pay for uniforms and other school-related expenses, which may affect children's access to education. (33,34) In addition, South Africa's policy of requiring that students present identification to take final exams effectively denies education to children, particularly refugees, who lack a birth certificate with information about both parents, lack adequate identification documents, or are unable to provide proof of immunization. (34-36)

An estimated half a million children with disabilities do not have access to education in South Africa. (37,38) Many mainstream schools are not equipped to educate children with disabilities, and as a result, schools have referred children to specialized schools, required families to pay for a class assistant, or denied enrollment. (38,39)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

South Africa has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 43 of the Basic Conditions of Employment Act (BCEA) (32)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Chapter 2, Articles 1–5 of the South African Schools Act (46)
Free Public Education	No		Chapter 2, Article 5 and Chapter 4, Article 39 of the South African Schools Act (46)

* No conscription (45)

In 2018, the President endorsed and published the amended Children’s Act to determine that persons convicted of egregious criminal offenses, such as child trafficking and child pornography, must be “deemed unsuitable to work with children.” (47-49)

Article 39 of the Education Act permits any public school to charge fees to ensure a sufficient operating budget if a majority of parents at that school vote to do so at the beginning of the year. (46)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the South African Department of Labor (SADOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
South African Department of Labor (SADOL)	Enforces child labor laws by conducting inspections of worksites and operates 127 labor centers throughout the country where complaints may be lodged. (7,50) Refers victims to social workers and reports violations to the South African Police Service (SAPS) for further investigation and to the South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development for prosecution. (7,51,52) Convenes the Child Labor Intersectoral Committee and coordinates child labor programs. (7)
South African Police Services (SAPS)	Enforces legislative mandate under the Children’s Act to investigate cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (53) Through its Human Trafficking Desk, monitors and evaluates police efforts to investigate human trafficking crimes, train investigators, and refer human trafficking cases to provincial SAPS units. (8) Operates victim-friendly rooms in 1,049 police stations nationally. (54)
South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development	Enforces criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor. (1) Through its Children’s Court, focuses on litigation involving children accused of or victimized by crimes, and cases involving child abuse, abandonment, and neglect. (55)
National Prosecution Authority (NPA)	Prosecutes criminal cases, including human trafficking and other worst forms of child labor cases. (8,56)
Department of Social Development (DSD)	Provides child protection and social services to vulnerable children, including victims of human trafficking. (1) Manages 57 shelters for children living and working on the streets. (57)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in South Africa took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the SADOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of South Africa's workforce, which includes more than 22 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, South Africa would employ about 1,479 inspectors. (58,59)

Sources indicate that the inspectorate has limited resources to carry out its mandates. Although the inspectorate spent approximately $356,000 on inspection and enforcement training in 2018, SADOL acknowledges that this is insufficient to allow its inspectors to specialize in sectors or occupations. (7) Some labor inspectors encounter difficulties in accessing farms due to concerns for their safety or fear of entering private property. (1) The government did not provide information on the number of child labor inspections conducted at worksites, violations found, or penalties imposed and collected for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in South Africa took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including prosecution planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (1)	Yes (7)

NGOs reported that the South African Police Service had difficulties properly identifying victims of human trafficking during law enforcement activities, despite assistance from the NGO community. Due to improper screening, police sometimes arrested child trafficking victims instead of referring them to social services for assistance. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among national and provincial task teams.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Implementation Committee on Child Labor	Monitors and supports advocacy and awareness raising, mainstreaming of child labor into government policies, and the implementation of child labor programs, legislation, and enforcement. (1) Chaired by SADOL, members include representatives from commercial agriculture, trade unions, and government agencies, including SAPS. (8) Includes provincial-level child labor coordinating structures. (1) This group met on an irregular basis in 2018. (60)
Provincial Child Labor Intersectoral Support Groups	Facilitate the collection of data and prevention of all types of child labor at the provincial level. Established by SADOL and managed by child labor coordinators in each province; members include the SADOL Head Office, SADOL Provincial Child Labor Coordinators, the Department of Justice (DOJ), the National Prosecuting Authority, the Department of Home Affairs (DHA), DSD, the Department of Education, NGOs, and labor federations. (8,61) The national and provincial task teams lack training on human trafficking, resulting in unlawful arrests and detentions of human trafficking victims. Moreover, some teams failed to meet and communicate during the year. (62)
National Trafficking in Persons Task Team	Coordinates the government's anti-human trafficking efforts, including overseeing strategy and policy decisions made at the provincial level in Gauteng, Mpumalanga, KwaZulu-Natal, Western Cape, Limpopo, and Eastern Cape. Led by NPA's Sexual Offenses and Community Affairs Unit and DOJ's Victim Support Directorate, members include SADOL, DSD, and DHA, as well as other representatives of national law enforcement. (8,10) Research was unable to determine whether actions were taken by the committee during the reporting period.

Reports indicate that the National Trafficking in Persons Task Team lacks a budget, has no funding for permanent staff, and provides no training to enforcement agencies to ensure adequate enforcement of trafficking in persons laws. (1)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Programme of Action for South Africa, Phase IV (2017–2021)	Serves as the primary policy instrument to prevent and eliminate child labor in South Africa. (1) Promotes government activities by outlining the mandate of each agency to combat child labor. (8,63) Provides a reciprocal referral mechanism through which SAPS informs SADOL of suspected child labor cases. (7) Lead agencies identified in the program include: Departments of Labor, Basic Education, Justice and Constitutional Development, Social Development, and Water and Sanitation; SAPS; the National Prosecuting Authority; and Statistics SA. (1,63) In 2018, the government provided food packages to child-headed households and poverty-stricken families, and antiretroviral medicine to those living with HIV/AIDS. (7) The program does not include a timeframe to meet identifiable benchmarks or to assess the progress and adequacy of implementation efforts.
Prevention and Combating of Trafficking in Persons National Policy Framework†	Outlines the development of new procedures and training programs for police and labor inspectors on trafficking for labor exploitation, including child labor. Enhances social assistance programs to address the needs of child victims of trafficking, including psychological and social support, food and shelter, school and community reintegration, and placement and protection in child and youth care centers. (64)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the South African Education Action Plan or the National Development Plan. (65,66)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

South Africa

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Support Grant†	Led by DSD and the South African Social Security Agency, provides monthly direct cash transfers to primary caregivers who have vulnerable children. Helps alleviate economic pressures and lower the cost of raising a child. (1,8) In 2018, the government expanded funding for the Child Support Grant. To date, 12.2 million children have benefited from the program. (7)
Foster Care Grants†	Encourages children in the foster care system to remain in school, as a preventive technique to combat child labor. (8) The government continued the program in 2018. To date, about 407,000 children have benefited from the Foster Care Grant. (7)
National School Nutrition Program†	Provides school meals to vulnerable primary and secondary school children from poor families. (1,67,68) The government continued the program in 2018. To date, approximately 88 percent of vulnerable children have benefited from this program. (7)
Food Relief Program†	DSD and the South African Social Security Agency program that provides food assistance to vulnerable and orphaned children, as well as child-headed households with insufficient income. (69,70) The government continued the program in 2018. To date, the program has financially supported 140 community nutrition development centers and provided food to half a million people. (71)
Shelters and Care Centers†	DSD program that funds 14 shelters and oversees 17 NGO-operated temporary safe care centers for victims of abuse and human trafficking, including children. (10,72) In 2018, 55 Thuthuzela Care Centers provided assistance to rape and sexual violence victims, including minors, but no data is available on the number of victims who were minors. (27)
Awareness-raising Campaigns†	Conduct training on anti-human trafficking initiatives and regulations governing social services providers. (10) During the reporting period, NPA, the Department of Justice and Constitutional Development, SAPS, and the Department of Basic Education conducted awareness-raising activities for students throughout the country. DSD hosted an awareness-raising talk on best practices in responding to child trafficking, which was attended by 200 delegates from across the country. (27,73)

† Program is funded by the Government of South Africa.

Although South Africa has programs that target child labor, and data collected and reported by the Government of South Africa state that child labor is decreasing, the scope and reach of social programs are insufficient to address the child labor problem, particularly in agriculture and domestic work. (74)

Sources indicate that around 1.8 million children who are most in need of the Child Support Grant have reported difficulties in accessing required application documents. (7)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in South Africa (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2018
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2015 – 2018
	Publish information on the number of child labor inspections conducted at worksites, violations found, and penalties imposed and collected.	2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that sufficient resources and training are provided to the labor inspectorate to conduct inspections, including in sectors in which child labor is known to occur.	2018
	Ensure that law enforcement properly identify victims of the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure all coordination bodies are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2017 – 2018
Government Policies	Include a timeframe and benchmarks in the Child Labor Program of Action for South Africa to properly monitor and assess the progress of efforts to combat child labor.	2017 – 2018
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the South African Education Action Plan and the National Development Plan.	2013 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Ensure that refugees and children with disabilities have equal access to education.	2016 – 2018
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2018
	Ensure that children are not denied access to education, including the ability to take final exams due to the lack of adequate identification or proof of immunization.	2018
	Ensure access to education for all children by eliminating school-related fees.	2009 – 2018
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor in agriculture and domestic work.	2010 – 2018

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2018, South Sudan is receiving an assessment of no advancement. Although South Sudan made some efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, government officials were complicit in the forcible recruitment of children to fight opposition groups. The government acceded to the UN CRC Optional Protocols on Armed Conflict and Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, and signed the Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan. The South Sudan Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission also secured the release of 934 children from armed groups and launched several new policies, which may have an impact on child labor. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, South Sudan is receiving an assessment of no advancement because its national army—the South Sudan People’s Defense Forces—recruited children, sometimes forcibly, to fight opposition groups. Children in South Sudan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict and cattle herding. The labor inspectorate also does not have sufficient resources to conduct labor inspections and did not hold accountable perpetrators of child labor. In addition, the government has yet to ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons and police continued to indiscriminately arrest and imprison children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation rather than treating them as victims.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in South Sudan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict and cattle herding. (I-9) Table I provides key indicators on children’s work and education in South Sudan.

Table I. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	45.6 (463,624)
Attending School (%)	6 to 14	31.5
Combining Work and School (%)	10 to 14	10.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		25.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (10)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Fifth Housing and Population Census, 2008. (11)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming activities, including planting and harvesting crops (9,12)
	Cattle herding† (9)
	Gathering firewood (9)
Industry	Construction,† including building and transporting materials (13,14)
	Rock breaking† (13,14)
	Making bricks (1,9)
	Gold mining,† including carrying soil, and panning (2,9)

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic work (15)
	Street work, including vending, polishing shoes, preparing tea, selling black market gasoline, and ticket-taking for group transport companies (9)
	Cooking and cleaning in restaurants or food stands (9)
	Scrap metal and empty bottle collection (14,16)
	Work in slaughterhouses, including transporting livestock and meat (14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in brickmaking, cattle herding, gold mining, and market vending (13,17)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,9,13)
	Forced recruitment of children by state and non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (3,4,16,18,19)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Salva Kiir Mayardit, the President of South Sudan, Riek Machar, the leader of the Sudan People’s Liberation Movement/Army in Opposition (SPLA-IO), and other rebel factions and parties signed a peace deal in September 2018, but violent conflict continued throughout the year due to weak chains of command, mistrust, and fighting over natural resources. (4,5,20) Since the onset of conflict in 2013, over 4.3 million people have been internally displaced or have fled the country, and UNICEF has registered 11,731 unaccompanied minors, who are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (6-8,13,21) Detailed information about sectors in which child labor occurs is unavailable as there has not been a comprehensive child labor survey in South Sudan. (16)

In 2018, armed groups from all sides continued to recruit and use children as young as age 12, with the highest levels of recruitment, use, and re-recruitment of children documented in Unity, Greater Equatoria area, Upper Nile, and Jonglei. (3,5,7-9,13,21,22) The national army of South Sudan—the South Sudan People’s Defense Forces (SSPDF), previously known as Sudan People’s Liberation Army (SPLA)—and opposition groups, including the pro-Machar SPLA-IO, pro-Taban Deng SPLA-IO, and the South Sudan National Liberation Movement (SSNLM), forcibly abducted children from their homes, schools, and communities. (4,5,8,9,15,23) UNICEF suspects the use of children in armed conflict increased in 2018, as commanders were incentivized to enlarge their ranks ahead of the implementation of the peace agreement in order to receive reintegration bonuses. (9,23) An even greater number of children fight as part of local community defense forces, during which they are used by their communities to perpetuate inter- and intra-communal violence. (15) Although some children voluntarily joined armed groups, they were later unable to leave the groups at will. (7,9,19,22,24) Children affiliated with armed groups performed active combat roles, perpetuated violence against civilians, and recruited other children. They also collected firewood, manned checkpoints, and carried out other support roles, including as cooks, porters, spies, and bodyguards to senior officers. (4,7,8,13,24,25) Girls were frequently coerced into performing sex acts and becoming concubines for male combatants. (4,8,9,23,25)

Ongoing conflict continued to impair the government’s ability to deliver aid, provide education, and address the worst forms of child labor. (16,22) In 2018, the SSPDF and other armed groups carried out at least 18 attacks on schools across the country and the UN verified 26 new incidents of occupancy and use of schools for military purposes. (8,23,26) Despite some schools being vacated by armed groups during the year, many schools were still being used for military purposes at year’s end, affecting education for 32,500 children. (8,23,27)

As many as 2.4 million children—72 percent of the school-age population—are not attending school, and only an estimated 1 in 13 children will complete a full cycle of primary education if the current situation persists. (7,21,22) Although the Constitution and the Child Act provide for free primary education and the education budget significantly increased for the 2018/2019 school year, in practice, many families must contribute school fees to pay teacher salaries and other related costs, which may be prohibitive. (9,21,22,28) Other barriers to education include low levels of birth registration, chronic food insecurity, poor infrastructure, social reintegration for demilitarized youth, ongoing insecurity, fear of abduction or violence in route to schools, long distances to schools in rural areas, unpaid teacher salaries which leads to truancy by teaching staff, and a shortage of qualified teachers. (7-9,21,22,24,27,28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

South Sudan has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

In 2018, the Government of South Sudan acceded to the UN CRC's two optional protocols. (29,30)

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 12 of the Labour Act; Article 25(3) of the Child Act (31,32)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 12 and 13 of the Labour Act; Articles 22(3), 24(1), and 25(1) of the Child Act (31,32)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 25(2) of the Child Act (31)

Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 13(2) of the Labour Act; Article 22(3)(b) of the Child Act; Articles 276 and 278–282 of the Penal Code (31-33)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 13(2)(b) of the Labour Act; Articles 22(3)(c)–(d), 22(4), and 25(2)(m) of the Child Act; Articles 258 and 276 of the Penal Code (31-33)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 13(2)(c) of the Labour Act; Article 24(1) of the Child Act; Article 383(3)(d) of the Penal Code (31-33)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 31(1) of the Child Act; Section 22 of the Sudan People's Liberation Army Act (31,35)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 31(1) of the Child Act; Sections 20, 22(2) and (7) of the Sudan People's Liberation Army Act (31,35)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 31(1) of the Child Act (31)
Compulsory Education Age	No	13	Article 9.1(b) of the General Education Act; Article 14(1) of the Child Act (31,36)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 6(a) of the General Education Act; Article 13(4)(b) of the Labour Code; Article 14(1) of the Child Act; Article 29.2 of the Constitution (31,32,34,36)

South Sudan

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the Government of South Sudan passed the Civil Registry Act, which will improve access to birth registration and facilitate age verification needs. (6) The Labour Act appears to have two contradictory standards for prohibiting children from engaging in hazardous work: Article 13 prohibits hazardous work, which constitutes the worst forms of child labor, for children under the age of 18 in line with international standards, while Article 12(2) only prohibits children under the age of 14 from engaging in the worst forms of child labor, which is a violation of international standards. (32) In accordance with the Labour Act, the Ministry of Labor, Public Service, and Human Resource Development (MOL) must draft and issue regulations to implement key elements related to child labor, including the number of hours and conditions for light work, the exceptions under which 16-year-old children may perform hazardous work, and a complete hazardous work list. (9,32)

Children are required to attend school only until age 13. This standard makes children between ages 13 and 14 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are not required to be in school but are also not legally permitted to work. (9,31,36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the exceptionally low number of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in South Sudan may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Public Service, and Human Resource Development (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws, identifies child labor violations, and conducts workplace inspections. (9,31,32,37)
Ministry of Gender, Child, and Social Welfare	Coordinates activities on children's rights and acts as the focal ministry for child protection. (9)
South Sudan's People's Defense Forces (SSPDF) Directorate for Child Protection	Prevents the recruitment of children into the army, monitors barracks, identifies child soldiers and assists with their release, investigates allegations of child soldiering, and provides training on children's rights to child protection officers and members of the SSPDF. Headed by a Brigadier General, serves as liaison between the SSPDF and the international community. (9,26) In 2018, agreed to receive training for 1,200 SSPDF child protection focal points who will respond to victims of abuse or exploitation, including children used in armed conflict. (15)
Ministry of Interior's South Sudan National Police Services	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (9)
Ministry of Justice	Oversees all courts and prosecutes violations, including those related to child labor. (9)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, the exceptionally low number of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in South Sudan may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

Although the law requires child labor violations to be reported to the MOL, which is responsible for coordinating the appropriate response, this did not occur in 2018. (9,31) There was also high absenteeism among ministry staff and salaries for civil servants in nearly every ministry were not paid for several months, hindering the labor inspectorate’s ability to enforce child labor laws. (9) In addition, officials from the MOL reported that in 2018 they lacked sufficient resources, such as fuel and vehicles for transport, to conduct labor inspections. (9,37) Although statistics on the number of people in South Sudan’s labor force are unavailable, it is unlikely that nine labor inspectors are sufficient to address the scope of the country’s child labor problem. (9,39,40)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in South Sudan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, the South Sudanese government cooperated with UNODC to deliver the country’s first workshop on identifying and investigating cases of human trafficking. (15) Despite this effort, South Sudan’s justice system faces enormous challenges, such as low capacity, insufficient funding, interference by the government and the SSPDF, lack of training for law enforcement personnel, and a scarcity of judges, prosecutors, and defense attorneys. (9,13,26,27) Research indicates that prosecutors and law enforcement officials are not familiar with legal statutes regarding the worst forms of child labor. (9,13) As a result, police continued to indiscriminately arrest and imprison children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation rather than treating them as victims. (13)

The UN Mission in South Sudan conducted a number of investigations into reports of children in armed groups, but it is unknown how many total investigations were completed. (9) Although both the 2017 Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities and the August 2013 Punitive Order commit the SSPDF to hold its military officers accountable for the recruitment or use of children, the government has neither investigated nor prosecuted officers who allegedly committed such crimes. (13,15,26,44,45)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all relevant sectors.

South Sudan

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
South Sudan Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission (NDDRC)	Oversees and coordinates all DDR activities with the assistance of UN bodies by convening regular meetings with DDR stakeholders. (43) Responsible for the negotiation of the release, screening, and registration of child soldiers; reunification with family when possible; and educational placement or vocational training. (15) In 2018, facilitated 4 formal DDR ceremonies resulting in the release and reintegration of 934 children. (6,9)

Although South Sudan has the South Sudan Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission (NDDRC) to coordinate efforts to address children in armed conflict, it does not have coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor, as the National Steering Committee on Child Labor has not been active since it was first constituted in 2012. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding and implementation of relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan (R-ARCSS)†	Replaces all components of the Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan signed in 2015, including the Joint Action Plan with the UN to Combat the Use of Child Soldiers, and reaffirms commitments made under the 2017 Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities. (20,44) Establishes the structure of a Revitalized Transitional Government of National Unity and outlines actions to be taken by signatories, including prohibiting the recruitment and use of child soldiers by armed forces or militias, and stipulates that all civilian areas, including schools, shall be immediately demilitarized. (20) Although the release of some child soldiers occurred in 2018, evidence suggests that the signatories have continued to recruit or re-recruit children. (4,5,8,9)
General Education Strategic Plan (2017–2022)†	Aims to improve access and quality of education by providing capitation grants, teacher salaries, and cash transfers to girls in upper primary and secondary schools. In 2017 and 2018, the Ministry of General Education and Instruction (MOGEI) focused on disseminating and enforcing the General Education Act of 2012, advocating for the redeployment of teachers to underserved areas, and improving girls' enrollment and retention. (45) In 2018, the MOGEI reopened some schools previously closed due to conflict, especially in the Greater Upper Nile Region. (9)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In December 2018, the government announced plans to enact an immigration policy in consultation with IOM to counter child trafficking, which officials acknowledge is a significant problem. (15) The education sector of South Sudan is heavily dependent on donor funding, and sufficient funding was not allocated for the full 5-year period of the General Education Strategic Plan. (9,45)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UN Joint Program for Recovery and Resilience in Yambio*	Joint agreement between donors, UN agencies, Yambio leaders, and NGOs that aims to re-establish access to basic services including psycho-social support, education, and economic alternatives for children separated from armed groups. (4,46,47)
UNICEF Country Program (2016–2018)	$115.4 million UNICEF-funded program implemented by the government that sought to develop child protection systems, with an emphasis on birth registration; developed a child-sensitive justice system; provided basic social services to conflict-affected children and communities (including demobilized children); and provided return, reintegration, and resettlement services for children affected by armed conflict. (27) In 2018, conducted at least 4 formal release ceremonies in Jonglei and Western Equatoria State, provided psycho-social care to 198,775 children, and assisted the Government of South Sudan with passing into law the Civil Registry Act of 2018. (6)

Program	Description
Transition Center	Ministry of Women, Child, and Social Welfare-administered, UNICEF-funded interim care center in Yambio that provides interim care and support to children and mothers rescued from extremist organizations and situations of human trafficking. (9,13)
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP 16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, strengthen policies and government capacity, and promote partnerships to combat child labor and forced labor. For additional information, please see our website. (48) In 2018, completed work on a 3-country study of forced child labor in conflict zones. (49)
Donor-Funded Education Programs	Programs aimed to improve educational access in areas affected by conflict. Includes: Emergency Education Program (2014–2018), $3 million USAID-funded program that supported children at risk for being recruited into armed groups, which transitioned into the Integrated Essential Emergency Education Services program in July 2018; Back to Learning,* State Ministry of Education, Gender, and Social Welfare-administered, UNICEF-funded program in Yambio and Bentiu which aims to address educational needs in conflict-afflicted areas and insecure states; and Girls' Education South Sudan (GESS) (2013–2018), a State Ministry of Education, Gender, and Social Welfare-administered, UK Aid-funded program that provided $12 monthly cash transfers to girls in public schools. (6,22,28,50) In 2018, Back to Learning provided 514,803 children with access to education, rehabilitated or established 193 classrooms, and trained 5,440 teachers and parent-teacher association members to provide life skills and psychosocial support. (50) GESS increased the number of girls enrolled in school from 4,000 in 2014 to 290,000 by November 2018, and distributed cash transfers to 295,145 girls. (9,28)
Dallaire Initiative (2018–2021)*	$2.2 million project funded by Romeo Dallaire Child Soldiers Initiative. Aims to train 1,200 South Sudanese soldiers, police, and prison personnel on combating the use of children in armed conflict through behavior change. (51)
Alternative Education System†	Aims to improve literacy and provide out-of-school populations an alternative to formal education. Includes: the Accelerated Learning Program (ALP) targeting older teens; Community Girls' Schools (CGS) located in closer proximity to rural communities; and the Pastoralist Education Program (PEP) targeting children and adults in pastoral settings. In 2018, provided education to 111,000 students. (45)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of South Sudan.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (9,13)

In 2018, the Ministry of General Education and Instruction worked with UNICEF and education stakeholders to develop and submit a proposal for the Education Sector Plan Implementation Grant that aims to reduce the number of out-of-school children. The grant would operate from 2019–2021 and requires $35.7 million in funding. (50)

Although South Sudan has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the scope or extent of the problem, including in commercial sexual exploitation and child soldiering. In addition, the reintegration and rehabilitation services provided to child soldiers are insufficient to meet the existing needs. (9,21,46,52)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in South Sudan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that the compulsory education age is consistent with the minimum age for work.	2013 – 2018
	Amend Article 12(2) of the Labour Act to clarify that the worst forms of child labor are prohibited for all children under age 18.	2017 – 2018
	Draft and finalize implementing regulations for the Labour Act that provide a list of hazardous work for children, the number of hours and conditions for light work, and the exceptions under which children age 16 may perform hazardous work.	2017 – 2018

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that the Child Act's minimum age of 18 years for voluntary military recruitment is enforced by ending all recruitment and use of children under age 18 by the South Sudan Peoples' Defense Forces (SSPDF), the Sudan Peoples' Liberation Movement/Army in Opposition (SPLA-IO), or associated militias.	2012 – 2018
	Investigate, prosecute, and punish with penalties that constitute an adequate deterrent officers in all former warring parties responsible for the recruitment or use of children in armed conflict.	2013 – 2018
	Cease all military use of schools and school compounds.	2015 – 2018
	Institutionalize training for labor inspectors, criminal law enforcement personnel, and new employees.	2012 – 2018
	Provide sufficient human and financial resources to ensure labor inspectors carry out routine and unannounced inspections, including targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to high-risk sectors and patterns of serious incidents. Publish information on funding for the labor inspectorate.	2012 – 2018
	Prosecute perpetrators of child labor violations.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure the Ministry of Labor, Public Service, and Human Resource Development is able to actively receive and respond to child labor complaints.	2015 – 2018
	Establish referral mechanisms for labor inspectors, criminal law enforcers, and social services providers to facilitate adequate enforcement of labor and criminal laws and to implement social programs that address child labor issues.	2014 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that prosecutors and law enforcement officials are familiar with the prohibitions on the worst forms of child labor; are trained in implementing all laws related to child labor; and do not treat victims of commercial sexual exploitation as offenders.	2012 – 2018
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2018
Government Policies	Ensure that policies, such as the Joint Action Plan to Prevent the Use of Child Soldiers, Article 2.1.10 of the Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in South Sudan, and the General Education Strategic Plan, are adequately funded and fully implemented.	2012 – 2018
Social Programs	Conduct a national child labor survey, including research to determine the activities carried out by children, to inform policies and social programs.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that children complete their primary education by resuming payment of teachers' salaries and subsidizing other school-related costs.	2014 – 2018
	Improve access to education by addressing the lack of school infrastructure, lessening the impact of food insecurity, ensuring that schools are safe, and registering all children at birth.	2012 – 2018
	Increase the scope of social programs to reach more children at risk of child labor; including in commercial sexual exploitation and child soldiering.	2012 – 2018
	Cooperate with child protection agencies, pursuant to Article 2.1.10 of the Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in South Sudan, to disarm, immediately release children in armed groups, and transfer them to appropriate social services providers. Ensure that the rehabilitation services provided to child soldiers are sufficient.	2014 – 2018

In 2018, Sri Lanka made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government worked with the ILO to develop guidelines for establishing child labor free zones and trained government officials to implement this program. In addition, the National Child Protection Authority trained 2,770 criminal law enforcement officials on the prevention of the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Sri Lanka engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work. The hazardous work list is not comprehensive because it does not include domestic work. In addition, the labor inspectorate is not authorized to assess penalties.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Sri Lanka engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Sri Lanka.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	0.8 (28,515)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	98.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	0.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		101.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Child Activity Survey, 2016. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including raising livestock (4,7,8)
	Fishing, including deep sea fishing, processing fish, and selling fish (7-10)
Industry	Manufacturing, including textiles and garments, and food processing (3,7,11)
	Mining† and construction, activities unknown (7,11,12)
Services	Domestic work (4,7,13)
	Vending, in stores and on the streets, transportation, and begging (4,7,9)
	Work in hotels, restaurants, and offices (7,12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-4,14,15)
	Forced labor in domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,4)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (4)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Sri Lanka

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The 2016 Child Activity Survey’s definition of child labor does not align with international standards because children ages 5–11 working less than 15 hours per week and children ages 12–14 working less than 25 hours per week in agriculture are not counted as child laborers. These issues may have led to an underestimation of the population of children in child labor in the Child Activity Survey. (7)

There are reports of children being trafficked internally, including from tea estates, to perform domestic work in Colombo. In addition, child domestic workers are subject to sexual, physical, and psychological abuse, non-payment of wages, and restrictions on movement. (1,4) Children, predominantly boys, are also forced into commercial sexual exploitation in tourist areas as part of the sex tourism industry. (1,4,15)

Although the government provides free education to all school children, some children in rural areas face barriers to accessing education, including difficulties traveling to school in some regions and an inadequate number of teachers. (4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Sri Lanka has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Sections 7, 9, 13 and 34 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (16)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 20A of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (16)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Occupations Regulation No. 47 (16,17)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 358A, 360C, 360A(2), and 360A(4) of the Penal Code (18)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 360C, 360A(2), and 360A(4) of the Penal Code (18)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 286A, 360B, 360A(2), and 360A(4) of the Penal Code (18)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 288, 288A, 288B, and 360C of the Penal Code (18)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Sections 20A and 31 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act; Section 2(xviii) of the Hazardous Occupations Regulation No. 47 (16,17)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		358(1)(d) of the Penal Code; Sections 20A and 31 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act; Section 2(xviii) of the Hazardous Occupations Regulation No. 47 (16-18)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Section 43 of the Education Ordinance; Compulsory Attendance of Children at Schools Regulation (19,20)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 47 of the Education Ordinance (19)

* No conscription (21)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (16, 19,20) The hazardous work list is not comprehensive because it does not include domestic work, for which there is evidence that children are subject to abuse. (1) In 2018, the government adopted an amendment to the Hazardous Occupations Regulation to include domestic work and 24 additional activities prohibited for children. However, the revised list must be approved by the cabinet and adopted by parliament before becoming law. (4)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the Department of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor in the Ministry of Labor, Trade Union Relations, and Social Empowerment (MLTURSE)	Enforces child labor laws and receive public complaints of child labor filed in national and district-level offices. Refers cases involving the worst forms of child labor to the police and National Child Protection Authority (NCPA). (22) Conducts special investigations in relation to child labor through the Women and Children's Affairs Division. (4,23)
Children and Women's Bureau of the Sri Lankan Police (CWBSLP)	Enforces laws on child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the use of children in illicit activities. (4,22)
NCPA Special Police Investigation Unit	Investigates complaints involving children, including unlawful child labor. (4,23)
Department of Probation and Child Care Services	Coordinates services for child victims of forced labor, human trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation who have been referred by the police and the court. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Sri Lanka took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the Department of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the labor inspectorate's lack of authority to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$950,000 (4)	$1,154,000 (4)

In June 2018, the labor inspectorate conducted a series of child labor specific inspections across the country, covering 472 workplaces in the agriculture, services, and manufacturing sectors. (4)

However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Sri Lanka's workforce, which includes over 8.9 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Sri Lanka would employ about 596 labor inspectors. (25-27) While penalties were not imposed or collected for child labor violations during the reporting period, the Department of Labor did initiate legal actions and the cases are proceeding. (24)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Sri Lanka took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of information regarding violations found.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown	Unknown (4)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A (4)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (28)	Yes (4)

The Children and Women's Bureau of the Sri Lankan Police (CWBSLP) has branches in police stations throughout the country. (4) However, the CWBSLP faces a shortage of funds and resources that affects their ability to carry out their mandate. (24) The government does not publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts. (4,24)

The CWBSLP also supervises the National Child Protection Authority (NCPA) Special Police Investigating Unit, which has approximately 40 police officers who investigate complaints involving children, including child labor. (4,10) In addition, the NCPA has approximately 300 child protection officers based in the districts who are tasked with preventing child exploitation and with victim protection. (4,22) In 2018, the NCPA conducted trainings for 2,770 criminal investigators and police officers on the prevention of child labor. (4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates efforts to eliminate child labor, including the implementation of the National Policy on Elimination of Child Labor in Sri Lanka. Chaired by the Secretary of the MLTURSE, includes representatives from key government agencies, employer and workers' organizations, ILO, UNICEF, and NGOs. (4,29) During the reporting period, the steering committee met once and subcommittees met regularly and took actions to implement strategies to eliminate child labor. (4)
National Child Protection Authority (NCPA)	Coordinates and monitors activities related to the protection of children, including activities to combat child labor. Consults with the relevant government ministries, local governments, employers, and NGOs, and recommends policies and actions to prevent, and protect children from, abuse and exploitation. (29) Conducted trainings for criminal law enforcement officials during the reporting period. (4)
National Anti-Trafficking Task Force	Coordinates inter-agency efforts to address all human trafficking issues, including commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor. Led by the Ministry of Justice and includes representatives from a range of government agencies, including the Ministry of Social Services, Ministry of Women and Child Affairs, Labor Secretariat, NCPA, Department of Probation and Child Care, Police Criminal Division, and Bureau for the Prevention of Abuse to Women and Children. (30,31) During the reporting period, increased coordination efforts through more frequent meetings. (1)
Child Development Committees	Coordinate activities and exchange information between child protection officers, police, and labor, education, and health officials at the village, division, and district level. Function in 25 districts and 313 divisions. (4) In 2018, labor inspectors were formally included in the committees and over 8,500 government officials attached to the committees were trained on the elimination of child labor. (4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy on Elimination of Child Labor in Sri Lanka	Aims to mainstream child labor issues into national development policies, increase the minimum age for employment, promote the implementation of hazardous work regulations, strengthen capacity to enforce child labor laws, and maintain a complaint procedure. The MLTURSE is responsible for the implementation, monitoring, and reporting of the policy. (32) In 2018, MLTURSE and the Department of Labor drafted an Action Plan for the Implementation of the National Policy on Elimination of Child Labor (2018–2022) and plans to finalize and implement the action plan in 2019. (4,24)
Let's Protect Children	Presidential Secretariat program that seeks to monitor child protection policies implemented by the Ministries of Education, Health, and Labor. Aims to ensure child safety and physical and psycho-social development. (10) The policy was implemented during the reporting period. (4)
National Strategic Plan to Monitor and Combat Human Trafficking (2015–2019)	Seeks to combat human trafficking by raising stakeholder awareness, improving victim protection services, increasing prosecution of human trafficking cases, and conducting research and data collection. Seeks also to improve coordination among the Anti-Trafficking Task Force members. (31,33) Progress monitored during the reporting period. (34)
Decent Work Country Programme (2018–2022)†	Details the priorities and outcomes required to make progress toward the goal of decent work for all. Identifies key areas of work for the eradication of child labor by 2022, including: operationalize child labor free zone model in all districts; expand the inspection system to cover child labor in the informal sector; raise the minimum age for employment to 16 years; revise regulations on hazardous child labor; improve the complaints and referral mechanisms; and regularize data collection on child labor. (35)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (4,28,36,37)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which cover the main sectors where child labor has been identified in the country (Table 10).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Labor Free Zone Model†	Local government initiatives that seek to eliminate child labor through the identification of children engaged in child labor; a rehabilitation program, assistance to families of children at risk of engaging in child labor; and an awareness-raising campaign. Operated by the district secretariats, with assistance from the MLTURSE, and with technical and financial support from the ILO. (11) In 2018, the ILO and the government developed guidelines for establishing child labor free zones and conducted trainings for district government officials and senior labor officials. District secretariats in all 25 districts developed work plans based on the child labor free zone model. (4)
'1929' Childline Sri Lanka†	NCPA-funded and operated 24-hour toll-free emergency telephone service for vulnerable and abused children. Connects children in need of help to direct assistance and rehabilitation services. (38) The hotline was operational during the reporting period. (4)
Shelter for Victims of Human Trafficking	The Ministry of Women and Child Affairs shelter provides children and female victims of human trafficking with safe shelter and access to medical, psychological, and legal assistance. (28,30) The shelter was operational during the reporting period. (4)
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (CLEAR)	USDOL-funded capacity-building project implemented by the ILO in 11 countries to build local and national capacity of governments to address child labor. In 2018, the project conducted 36 workshops at the division and district level to provide training to 3,162 government officials on the Child Labor Free Zones. (39) Additional information is available at the USDOL website.

† Program is funded by the Government of Sri Lanka.

In 2018, the government made efforts to address barriers to education for children living in remote and rural areas. It recruited new teachers and constructed new buildings for plantation schools. (4) The World Bank and the Sri Lanka Ministry of Education also launched a 5-year, $100 million General Education Modernization Project that will promote access to education for children in difficult to reach geographies, including rural, plantation, and urban areas. (4,40)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Sri Lanka (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited to children are comprehensive, including domestic work.	2017 – 2018
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for labor law violations.	2015 – 2018
	Publish information on the number of inspections conducted at worksites.	2014 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2018
	Collect and publish information on criminal law enforcement actions, including on initial training for new investigators, and the number of investigations, violations, prosecutions, and convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2018
	Provide additional funding for the CWBSLP to adequately investigate forced labor, child trafficking, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2011 – 2018
Social Programs	Ensure that the definition of child labor used in national child labor surveys to calculate child labor statistics clearly aligns with international standards.	2017 – 2018
	Eliminate barriers to education, including difficulties with transportation to schools and an inadequate number of teachers.	2012 – 2018

In 2018, Suriname made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government ratified International Labor Organization Convention 138 concerning the minimum age for admission to employment, acceded to the Protocol to the Forced Labor Convention, and amended the Law on Labor for Children and Young People, raising the minimum age of work to 16 years. In addition, the Interdepartmental Working Group on Trafficking in Persons presented the 2019 National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons, the government published the results of the 2017 Child Labor Survey and created a referral mechanism between criminal law enforcement authorities and social services. However, children in Suriname engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, prohibitions related to the use of children for illicit activities do not meet international standards. In addition, the compulsory education age does not reach the minimum age for employment, leaving some children more vulnerable to labor exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Suriname engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Suriname. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	6.4 (6,671)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	6.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		89.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2010. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Harvesting crops, applying pesticides,† carrying heavy loads† (4) Fishing and forestry (7,8)
Industry	Mining, particularly gold mining (1,3,4,7,9) Construction,† including carrying heavy loads† (10)
Services	Street work, including vending (4) Domestic work (7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-4,7)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Suriname

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children in Suriname, mostly boys, work at carrying heavy loads in small-scale gold mines. These children risk exposure to mercury and cyanide, excessive noise, extreme heat, and collapsing sand walls. (1,4,9,10) Children, including children from Guyana, are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Suriname, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, including in informal mining camps in the country's remote interior. (2,4,7,10)

Although Suriname's net attendance ratio for primary school is 96 percent, it is only 53 percent for secondary school, and research indicates that secondary school attendance in the interior is as low as 21 percent. Children from low-income households, particularly in the interior, face difficulties accessing education due to long distances to schools, transportation costs, and school fees. (1,4,11,12) In 2018, school fees increased for both public and semi-private schools. (4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Suriname has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In January 2018, the government ratified ILO Convention 138 concerning the minimum age for employment. (13)

The Government of Suriname also signed accession to the Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention of 1930, (No.29). (4)

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 1 (j–l), 3 and 11 of the Children and Youth Persons Labor Act; Article 17 of the Labor Code (14,15)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 1 (k–l) and 11 of the Children and Youth Persons Labor Act; Article 1 of the Decree on Hazardous Labor for Youth (15,16)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2–3 of the Decree on Hazardous Labor for Youth; Article 11 of the Children and Youth Persons Labor Act (15,16)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 15 of the Constitution; Article 334 of the Penal Code (17,18)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 307 and 334 of the Penal Code (18)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 293, 303, and 306 of the Penal Code (18)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 9 of the Legal Status of Military Personnel Act (19)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	12	Article 39 of the Constitution; Article 20 of the Law on Basic Education (17,20)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 38–39 of the Constitution (17)

* No conscription (21)

In July 2018, in accordance with the Government of Suriname's ratification of ILO Convention 138, the Suriname National Assembly approved and signed a new Law on Labor for Children and Young Persons, which raises the minimum age for work for children to age 16. (4,15)

Article 20 of the Law on Basic Education requires children to attend school until they are at least age 12. (22) This leaves children between ages 12 and 16 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, because they are no longer required to attend school but are not yet legally permitted to work.

The Constitution guarantees free public education for all citizens, and the September 2014 amendment to the Citizenship and Residency Law granted citizenship to children born in Suriname of foreign-born parents. Sources indicate, however, that a small number of children born in Suriname to foreign parents before September 2014 remain ineligible to receive citizenship and free public education. (1,17,23)

The Penal Code establishes penalties for the production and trafficking of drugs, but it does not appear to specifically prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of a child in the production and trafficking of drugs. (18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforces laws related to child labor. (10)
Police	Enforce criminal laws related to child labor. (10) Include the Youth Affairs Police, which cover law enforcement involving children under age 18 and are jointly responsible for child labor-related crimes. In addition, include the Police Trafficking in Persons Unit, which investigates reports and allegations of human trafficking and forced sexual exploitation nationwide, including cases involving children. (24)
Prosecutor's Office	Investigates and prosecutes human trafficking cases. (25)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Suriname took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including targeted inspections in risk-prone sectors.

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (10)	No (4)

The government does not collect or publish data on child labor inspections and violations. Labor inspections are mainly conducted near coastal areas, and the Ministry of Labor noted that there is an insufficient number of labor inspectors to ensure the enforcement of labor laws, particularly in mining and agricultural areas, fisheries, and the country's interior. (1, 10, 21, 27, 28) There are no dedicated child labor inspectors; however, all labor inspectors are trained and authorized to enforce child labor laws. (4)

Although the Ministry of Labor does not provide funding information, it did report that its funding is insufficient to adequately cover all sectors in the country, including the formal and informal sectors. In addition, high-risk sectors are not specifically targeted because labor inspectors mainly conduct routine inspections in the formal sectors, which have lower incidences of child labor. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Suriname took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocation of financial and human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (10)	Yes (4)

Number of Convictions	2 (10)	7 (30)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (10)	Yes (4)

During the reporting period, authorities reported a sex trafficking case involving a minor found working in a massage salon; the case is still under investigation. (30) Furthermore, there were seven child trafficking convictions secured during 2018, with sentences ranging from 1 to 5 years. UNODC provided trafficking in persons training to 34 criminal law enforcement officials. (31) Additional human trafficking training was also given to all new police recruits, and Surinamese authorities also received training from the Brazilian Police Attaché. (30)

The Ministry of Justice and Police established a referral mechanism to assist human trafficking victims, including children, to the Bureau of Victim Services for shelter, medical services, and access to social workers, and to the Bureau for Legal Aid for legal assistance. (4)

The number of investigators is insufficient to respond to human trafficking cases and, according to the Prosecutor's Office, investigations are initiated only as a result of complaints filed and are limited by a lack of resources, especially for travel to the interior of the country. (10,27,32-34) When the Youth Affairs Police find children working on the street, these children are sometimes registered and sent home without referrals to any relevant services. (10,24,34)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission on Combatting Child Labor	Coordinates and monitors efforts to combat child labor. Serves as the leading body in drafting child labor policies, conducting research on child labor, and conducting research on the social economic circumstances of children involved in child labor. (4) In 2018, began drafting the National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor. (4)
Trafficking in Persons Working Group	Coordinates the government's anti-human trafficking efforts. Provides care to victims of human trafficking through government-supported NGOs. (24) Comprising nine government agencies. (10) Includes organizations that target the worst forms of child labor, such as the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (24) In 2018, drafted the National Action Plan for the Prevention and Response to Trafficking in Persons and launched a nationwide awareness campaign on human trafficking. (30)
Integrated Child Protection Network	Led by the Ministry of Social Affairs and includes the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Ministry of Justice and Police, Office of the First Lady, National Assembly, and NGO stakeholders, with support from UNICEF. (10) In 2018, the Network established a technical commission that meets monthly and is working to address child protection issues, including drafting a referral system between government and social services and a data collection system to record reported cases, in addition to providing training to service providers. (4)

Although the National Commission on Combatting Child Labor had been inactive since 2014, it was reestablished and active during the reporting year. (4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementing a national child labor action plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap to Combat Human Trafficking in Suriname (2014–2018)	Outlined a policy to combat human trafficking through 2018. (33)
National Action Plan for the Prevention and Response to Trafficking in Persons (2019)†	Aims to combat and prevent human trafficking, including through the prevention, protection, and reintegration of victims, and the prosecution of perpetrators of trafficking in persons. (35)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In November 2018, the government completed consultations on the draft of the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor, which is awaiting approval from the Council of Ministers. (4,36)

Although research found no evidence that the Roadmap to Combat Human Trafficking in Suriname was implemented in 2018, the Ministry of Justice and Police used the Roadmap as a base to draft the government's National Action Plan for the Prevention and Response to Trafficking in Persons. (4)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including services for child victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Country-Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor (2013–2019)	USDOL-funded capacity-building project implemented by ILO in 11 countries to build local and national capacity of governments to address child labor. In Suriname, aims to improve monitoring and enforcement of laws and policies related to child labor and implement a National Action Plan on the elimination of child labor. (37) In 2018, the project supported the finalization of the Suriname Child Labor Survey, which was published in January 2019. (4) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Regional Initiative School to Work Transition Program	Regional Initiative Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor program, with support from the Cooperation Agency of Brazil and ILO, to assist Caribbean countries, including Suriname, to improve youth transition from school to work. (10,38) Active in 2018. (4)
Child and Youth Hotline†	Government-run hotline that provides confidential advice to children in need, including victims of the worst forms of child labor. (33) Receives approximately 80 calls per day. (32) Active in 2018. (29)
Anti-Trafficking Hotline†	Government-sponsored hotline through which citizens can provide information to the police about human trafficking cases. (33) Although the Anti-Trafficking hotline was inactive during 2018, it was re-established in January 2019 with a simplified number; calls are directed to Trafficking in Persons Unit. (39)
Human Trafficking Awareness Program†	Government-funded anti-human trafficking awareness campaign for press, radio, television, internet, and social media. (22,24,25) In 2018, the Police's Trafficking in Persons Unit trained 100 government officials on awareness, identification, and management of human trafficking cases. (3,29)
Second Basic Education Improvement Program (2015–2040)	$20 million IDB-funded, 25-year loan implemented by the Ministry of Education to develop curriculums and textbooks, provide teacher training, renovate classrooms, build housing for teachers in the interior, and build a center for teacher training and professional development. Aims to benefit 90,000 students and 6,500 teachers. (25,40) Active in 2018. (4)

† Program is funded by the Government of Suriname.

The government continues to support initiatives to eradicate child labor, but existing social programs are inadequate to fully address the problem. In particular, Suriname lacks programs to assist child victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, as well as children who work in mining and agriculture. (10, 11)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Suriname (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use, procuring, and offering of a child for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Increase the compulsory education age to at least age 16, the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that all children, including children of foreign-born parents, have access to free public education.	2015 – 2018
Enforcement	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the labor inspectorate's funding, the number of inspections and investigations conducted, the number of inspections conducted at worksites, and whether routine inspections are targeted.	2012 – 2018
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on the analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents, such as in fisheries and the interior of the country, particularly in mining and agricultural areas in which child labor is likely to occur.	2015 – 2018
	Allocate sufficient funding to ensure that criminal law enforcement officers have the resources necessary to conduct investigations, particularly in the interior of the country and informal mining areas.	2014 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Create a formal mechanism to refer victims of child labor, identified by labor or criminal enforcement authorities to the appropriate social services, including children found working on the streets by the Youth Affairs Police.	2010 – 2018
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate is sufficiently funded to cover labor inspections in both the formal and informal sectors of the labor force.	2018
	Impose penalties for convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.	2018
Government Policies	Ensure the National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor is approved and adopted.	2015 – 2018
Social Programs	Develop social programs to prevent and eradicate child labor in agriculture and mining and to improve secondary school attendance, particularly in the interior.	2015 – 2018
	Strengthen social services to assist child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking.	2014 – 2018

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, The United Republic of Tanzania made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government made efforts by establishing a new National Child Labor Policy and continuing to support the Tanzania Social Action Fund Conditional Cash Transfer Program, planning Phase IV for launch in 2019. However, despite these initiatives to address child labor, Tanzania continued to implement a practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. The Mainland Government explicitly supports the routine expulsion of pregnant students from public schools, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Children in Tanzania engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining, quarrying, and domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Other gaps remain in the legal framework and enforcement of laws related to child labor, including protections for child engagement in illicit activities and domestic work; the lack of authorization for the labor inspectorate to assess penalties; and the likely insufficient number of labor inspectors for the size of Tanzania's labor force.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Tanzania engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in mining, quarrying, and domestic work. (1-4) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (2,3) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mainland Tanzania.

	Forced begging (27)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, mining, fishing, commercial trading, quarrying, shining shoes, pushing carts, and working in factories and bars, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,13,25-29)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The United Republic of Tanzania consists of Mainland Tanzania and the semi-autonomous Zanzibar Archipelago. Mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar have separate laws and regulations governing child labor and are presented separately in this report when information differs between them.

Tanzania is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Child trafficking is often facilitated by victims’ family members, friends, or intermediaries who promise assistance or employment. (4,13,26,30) Girls are often subject to child trafficking, including for domestic work or commercial sexual exploitation; this frequently occurs along the Kenyan border and in tourist, mining, and construction areas, including “megaproject” sites. (4,26,28,31) Although most children are victims of domestic human trafficking, children from Burundi and Rwanda are also subject to child trafficking into Tanzania for forced labor. (4,32) Impoverished rural children and those orphaned by HIV/AIDS are particularly vulnerable. (4,13,30,33)

Children working in mining are exposed to many hazards, such as mercury poisoning and being trapped when tunnels collapse, especially in smaller unlicensed operations. (19,20,34)

Families are often required to pay for books, uniforms, and school lunches, at costs that are prohibitive for some families. (3,35-37) These barriers can reduce children’s access to school and increase their vulnerability to child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tanzania has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Tanzania’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work, access to public education, the compulsory education age, and prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

* No conscription (46)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (35)

Mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar's non-union matters are governed by distinct territorial jurisdictional laws, leaving each territory to determine its own child labor laws. (1,42) The minimum age for work laws in Mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar do not meet international standards because they do not extend to all working children, including children engaged in domestic work. (38,40,41) Mainland Tanzania's hazardous work list for children does not specify weeding and processing as activities that are dangerous agricultural tasks in the production of tobacco, cloves, coffee, sisal, and tea. (8,34,38-41) In addition, Mainland Tanzania does not clearly provide penalties for using children for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. Zanzibar prohibits the use of children for illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. (40,41)

A practice that may contribute to children being left out of the formal education system stems from Mainland Tanzania's Education Act of 1978, which allows the Ministry of Education to conduct medical examinations on students. This law, in combination with the Mainland’s 2002 Education Regulations (Expulsion and Exclusion of Pupils from Schools), allows for the academic expulsion of students for moral offenses, enabling schools to force students to undergo pregnancy tests and expel them if they are pregnant, thereby increasing their vulnerability to child labor. (35,47-51) Although pregnant girls are more at risk of expulsion, boys who are found to be sexually active are also expelled from school. (32)

Tanzania

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist with the authority of the labor ministries of Mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Related Entity	Role
Minister of State in the Prime Minister’s Office for Policy, Parliamentary Affairs, Labor, Employment, Youth, and the Disabled	Mainland	Enforces child labor laws. Assigns area labor officers to each region to respond to reports of child labor violations, issues non-compliance orders, and reports incidents to police and the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare. (1) Through its Labor Administration and Inspection Section, provides legal guidance upon request, disseminates information to employers and employees on their rights and obligations, and helps area offices conduct labor inspections. (52)
Ministry of Health, Community Development, Gender, Elders, and Children	Mainland	Enforces child protection laws and regulations, and health and social welfare policies. Employs officers to monitor child labor at the district and village levels, and reports findings to the President’s Office of Regional Administration and to local governments. Promotes community development, gender equality, and children’s rights by formulating policies, strategies, and guidelines in collaboration with stakeholders. (52)
Ministry of Home Affairs	Mainland	Enforces anti-trafficking laws, including child trafficking, and laws prohibiting commercial sexual exploitation of children and the use of children in illicit activities. Chairs the Anti-Trafficking Committee. (52)
Ministry of Empowerment, Adults, Youth, Women and Children	Zanzibar	Ensures compliance with child protection and child labor laws, including inspections, through its Child Protection Unit. (52) Following a merger with the Ministry of Labor, Economic Empowerment and Cooperatives, investigates child labor cases reported by the police and refers cases to social welfare officers. (53)
Ministry of Health	Zanzibar	Enforces anti-trafficking laws, including cases of child trafficking. (52)
Tanzania Police Force	Mainland and Zanzibar	Investigates cases of child labor and other forms of child endangerment reported to police stations; in some cases, refers cases to labor officers or seeks assistance from social welfare officers and the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions to take legal action. Includes a Human Trafficking desk, and Gender and Children’s desks to handle cases pertaining to children. (28,52,54)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Tanzania took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist in the authority of the labor ministries and in the execution of their mandates that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties, and the lack of publicly available enforcement data.

† Data are from July 1, 2017 to December 31, 2017.

Despite regulations requiring that one or more labor officers be assigned to each region, research was unable to determine whether this was followed during the reporting period. (3,56) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Tanzania's workforce, which includes nearly 25 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in least developed economies, Tanzania would employ about 622 inspectors. (57,58)

The government did not provide information on its labor inspectorate funding, training, number of labor inspections conducted, or number of child labor violations found for inclusion in this report; however, in previous years, inspections in Mainland Tanzania were carried out in sectors such as agriculture, mining, domestic work, hotels, trade, industry and commerce, construction, and fishing. (7) Exact figures on labor inspectorate funding remain unavailable; nevertheless, research indicates that NGOs noted that labor enforcement efforts could benefit from additional funding and increased numbers of inspections. (52)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Tanzania took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the collection and availability of enforcement statistics.

In June, the UNODC trained 21 law enforcement officials, including immigration and prison officials, on data collection and other skills needed to address trafficking in persons cases. (26) The government did not provide information on the number of investigations undertaken, the number of prosecutions initiated, or the number of convictions for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inactive coordinating bodies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Related Entity	Role & Description
National Education Task Force on Child Labor	Mainland and Zanzibar	Reviews education sector policies and existing laws, regulations, and strategies related to children's issues, including the National Action Plan. Reviews existing curriculum and programs, identifies gaps, and suggests strategies to resolve barriers to accessing education. (9,59) Research was unable to determine whether the National Education Task Force on Child Labor was active during the reporting period.
Zanzibar Child Labor Steering Committee	Zanzibar	Coordinates various implementing agencies responsible for child labor and provides policy guidance on the Zanzibar National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. (52) Chaired by Zanzibar's Ministry of Empowerment, Adults, Youth, Women and Children. (56) Research was unable to determine whether the Child Labor Steering Committee was active during the reporting period.
National Protection Steering Committee	Mainland and Zanzibar	Provides overall policy guidance and coordination at the national and local levels of the National Plan of Action to End Violence Against Women and Children (NPA-VAWC) through the merger of the National Inter-Sectoral Coordination Committee and the Multi-Sector Task Force on Violence Against Children. (53,54) Operates the NPA-VAWC National Protection Technical Committee and Thematic Working Groups at the national level. Merge pre-existing committees at the regional and district levels, focusing on violence prevention and response, including the Child Labor Committees, Gender-Based Violence Committees, District Child Protection Teams, and Most Vulnerable Children Committees. (52,54) Research was unable to determine whether the National Protection Steering Committee was active during the reporting period.
National Anti-Trafficking Committee (ATC) and National Anti-Trafficking Secretariat (ATS)	Mainland and Zanzibar	Promotes, defines, and coordinates policy to prevent human trafficking through engagement with local NGOs. (28,30,43,53) Chaired by the Ministry of Home Affairs, includes representatives from the Prime Minister's Office for Policy, Parliamentary Affairs, Labor, Employment, Youth, and the Disabled. (56) In 2018, ATC and ATS reviewed and updated the National Action Plan, operated with a budget of $45,000, and, with the help of UNODC, held a 3-day workshop for judges and magistrates on the prosecution of human trafficking cases. (26)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of effort related to ongoing policy implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Related Entity	Description
National Strategy for Child Labor (2018–2023) [†]	Mainland and Zanzibar	Coordinates policy on child labor at the national level, and was provided with a $4.8 million budget for the duration of project. Drafted with support from ILO. (3) In 2018, the government adopted this policy, but did not begin implementation. (60)
National Plan of Action to End Violence Against Women and Children in Tanzania (NPA-VAWC) (2017–2022)	Mainland and Zanzibar	Prevents and responds to all forms of violence against women and children through comprehensive multi-sectoral collaboration at all levels and combining eight national action plans. (54) The renewed plan details responsible agencies to address multiple challenges, including education and poverty reduction. (52) The government allocated $5.72 million for fiscal year 2017–2018, but did not provide details on how the allocation was spent. In 2018, research has been unable to confirm that the plan has been implemented. (3,9,52,55)
Zanzibar Education Policy of 2006	Zanzibar	Recommends formal education through the approximate age of 15. In 2018, research indicated that there were issues with implementation of this policy due to issues of quality, equity, and access. (31,61,62)

[†] Policy was approved during the reporting period.

[‡] The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (52,53,63)

Tanzania does not have a law requiring free public education, but it does have an education policy that allows children to attend primary school and lower secondary school without paying tuition fees. Furthermore, the government regulates access to secondary education through the Primary School Leaving Examination. In Mainland Tanzania, students who do not pass the exam do not have an opportunity to re-take the exam and must drop out of public school. (53) Despite the government's intention to phase out the exam by 2021, there is no evidence of government efforts or preparations to do so. (47,53,55) The compulsory education age for children in Mainland Tanzania is approximately 14 as determined by law. In 2006, Zanzibar adopted and began implementing the Zanzibar Education Policy, which establishes compulsory education through Form 4, which is approximately age 15. (62,64) However, reporting suggests that implementation of this policy has been slow due to limited resources for schools and the economic burdens on families to financially contribute to post-primary education. More than half of children in Zanzibar leave the formal education system below the minimum age for work, leaving them at increased risk for child labor. (31,60,61)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the scope and implementation of programs in all relevant sectors, including the construction, service and informal sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development	USDOL-funded research project implemented by ILO in 10 countries to increase the knowledge base related to child labor by collecting new data, analyzing existing data, and building the capacity of the government to conduct research in this area. Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Promoting Sustainable Practices to Eradicate Child Labor in Tobacco (PROSPER) Umoja (Unity) (2018–2020)*	$900,000 extension project of PROSPER Plus funded by the Eliminating Child Labor in Tobacco-Growing Foundation and implemented by Winrock International, Tanzania Association of Women Leaders in Agriculture and the Environment, and Tabora Development Foundation Trust. Aims to bring together public and private sectors to reduce child labor on a nationwide scale, focusing in Kaliua, Sikonge, Tabora, and Urambo. (3,52,65) In November 2018, the program expanded to Mbeya and Songwe regions, providing 500 scholarships to children ages 5 to 14. (60)

Program	Description
Eradicating the Worst Forms of Labor in the Eight Mining Wards of the Geita District, Phase 2 (2015–2019)	$2 million EU-funded, 3-year project implemented by Plan International Tanzania to enhance social protection mechanisms to prevent and improve awareness of child labor among children, parents, and mining employers near Chato, Geita, and Nywangwale. (3,48) Cumulative figures report that by 2018, 6,550 community members and about 5,500 small-scale unregistered miners received awareness-raising messages on child protection and the effects of child labor. (3)
Tanzania Social Action Fund Conditional Cash Transfer Program, Phase III (2012–2018)†	Government-funded conditional cash transfer program to provide financial assistance to vulnerable populations, including children. USDOL-funded study conducted on the program reported increased school enrollment and reduced forced child migration and child labor. (48) In 2018, research reports that the program is moving to implement Phase IV, running from 2019 to 2023. The first transfer targets 300,000 poor households and is scheduled for July 1, 2020. (3,60)
Decent Work Country Program (DWCP)	ILO-supported program with four objectives: (a) create jobs, (b) guarantee rights at work, (c) extend social protection, and (d) promote social dialogue. Outcomes include an improved operational environment for the elimination of child labor and its worst forms. (48,52) During the reporting period, DWCP carried out five trainings for government labor inspectors to enhance the capacity to carry out inspections on farms and in industries, primarily tobacco. (60)
Achieving Reduction of Child Labor in Support of Education (ARISE)	Joint initiative of ILO, Japan Tobacco International, and Winrock International. Seeks to end child labor in tobacco through education. Operates in three districts in the Tabora Region: Kaliua, Urambo, and Uyui. (66,67) Research was unable to determine program activities during the reporting period.

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Tanzania.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (52)

The scope of government-funded social programs is inadequate in that it does not cover construction, domestic service, fishing, and informal sectors in which children engage in child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Tanzania (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Related Entity	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Mainland and Zanzibar	Ensure that minimum age protections apply to children engaged in domestic work.	2013 – 2018
	Mainland	Criminalize the use of children in illicit activities, particularly in producing and trafficking drugs.	2012 – 2018
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Criminalize the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Mainland	Continue to expand the list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children to ensure that the list includes weeding and processing in the production of tobacco, cloves, coffee, sisal, and tea.	2016 – 2018
	Zanzibar	Pass and publish legislation that establishes a compulsory age for education.	2018
	Zanzibar	Ensure that there is no gap between the age for compulsory education and the minimum age for work, which leaves children vulnerable to child labor.	2017 - 2018
	Zanzibar	Ensure that the law does not prohibit access to education for pregnant girls and sexually active boys.	2017 - 2018
Enforcement	Mainland and Zanzibar	Establish by law free basic public education.	2016 – 2018
		Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet ILO's technical advice.	2013 – 2018
		Ensure that a dedicated labor officer is appointed to each region, and publish this information.	2013 – 2018
		Authorize the Mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar labor inspectorates to assess penalties.	2017 - 2018
		Publish information for Mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar on child labor law enforcement actions, such as funding, trainings provided, routine and unannounced inspections conducted, child labor violations found, and penalties imposed and collected.	2011 – 2018

In 2018, Thailand made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government increased its Labor Inspectorate budget by 47 percent and allocated more resources to inspect high-risk workplaces. The rate of access to education and enrollment for migrant children has improved. The government also supported a training for 7,255 labor volunteers on the worst forms of child labor. The government hired 394 additional labor inspectors, including Department of Labor Protection and Welfare civil servants and other government employees, and 22 additional interpreters at Department of Labor Protection and Welfare offices and fishing port inspection centers. The government continued the information-sharing agreement with the U.S. National Center for Missing and Exploited Children to combat online child commercial sexual exploitation. Finally, the government continued to work directly with NGOs to open two additional Child Advocacy Centers, bringing the total to five in Thailand. However, children in Thailand engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in Muay Thai fighting competitions without protective equipment. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, it does not meet the international standard for the minimum age of work. Enforcement of child labor laws remains a challenge due to an insufficient number of inspectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Thailand engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in Muay Thai fighting competitions without protective equipment. (1-6) As of the end of the reporting period, the government worked with the ILO to design survey questionnaires and collect data on working children. However, the government has yet to release the results of a national survey on the prevalence of children's work, which are needed to implement the National Policy and Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor Phase II (2015–2020). (7-8) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Thailand.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	13.0 (1,302,267)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	96.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	14.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		93.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (9)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2005–06. (10)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Processing shrimp and seafood† (7,11-13)
	Fishing, including work performed on sea vessels† (7,11,14)
	Planting and harvesting sugarcane (15)
	Production of rubber and pineapples (7)
Industry	Manufacturing, including garment production (7,16)
	Work in poultry factories and pig farms (17,18)
	Construction, including transporting cement and bricks (7,3,19-21)
Services	Domestic work (7,22,23)
	Work in restaurants, motorcycle repair shops, and gas stations (7)
	Street work, including begging and vending (7,23,24-27)
	Muay Thai fighting (3-6,8,28-33)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2-3,34-37)
	Forced labor in vending, begging, and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7,16,22)
	Forced labor in the production of garments, in agriculture, and in shrimp and seafood processing† (35,38)
	Fishing as a result of human trafficking (1,14,16,39,40)
	Use in the production and trafficking of drugs, including amphetamines, kratom, and marijuana (7,35)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Thai children, as well as children from Burma, Laos, and Cambodia, are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Thai massage parlors, bars, karaoke lounges, hotels, and private residences. In addition, children are lured, including through the internet and social media, and coerced to produce pornography and perform sexual acts for live internet broadcasts. (3,23,34,37,41-43)

Children, particularly migrants from the Greater Mekong Subregion, engage in hazardous work in shrimp and seafood processing. Although incidents of child labor in the shrimp and seafood processing industry have decreased in recent years, small numbers of children are still reported to work in the industry. (3,11,44,45) Children who work in shrimp and seafood processing work late hours cleaning and lifting heavy loads of seafood. Many of these children also experience health problems, including injuries and chronic diseases. (13,46) Children working in agriculture face health risks from exposure to pesticides, sun, and heat, often working long hours from very early in the morning until nighttime. In addition to lifting heavy loads, they face risks of injury from operating dangerous machinery and using sharp equipment, and other workplace hazards. (7) Thai and migrant children who accompany their parents working in the construction sector are exposed to child labor at and around construction sites, including performing construction and domestic work, or working at nearby restaurants. (3,8,20,21) Children also participate in dangerous Muay Thai competitions without using forms of protective equipment that are generally required by international Muay Thai leagues and associations, including mandatory usage of gum shields, groin protectors, head, shin, and elbow guards, and body protectors. Children who participate in Muay Thai competitions sustain serious head injuries, including brain hemorrhages and deteriorated nerve fibers around the brainstem. (30)

Although Order No. 28/2559 of the National Council for Peace and Order ensures 15 years of free education for all children in Thailand, some children, particularly migrants and ethnic minorities, struggle to access basic education due to a lack of awareness of migrant children’s right to public education, language barriers, and insufficient transportation to schools. (11,35,47-49) Although children without identity documents or registered addresses cannot be denied enrollment, public school applications are available in the Thai language only, which can create a barrier to children’s access to education, particularly for migrants and ethnic minorities. (3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Thailand has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Chapter 4, Section 44 of the Labor Protection Act; Section 148/1 of the Labor Protection Act (No. 5) (50,51)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Chapter 4, Sections 49–50 of the Labor Protection Act; Section 148/2 of the Labor Protection Act (No. 5); Chapter 2, Article 26(6) of the Child Protection Act; Chapter 4, Section 20 of the Homebased Worker Protection Act (50,51,52,53)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Chapter 4, Sections 49–50 of the Labor Protection Act; Clause 4 of the Ministerial Regulation concerning Labor Protection in Sea Fishery Work; Clause 2 of the Ministerial Regulation Identifying Tasks that may be Hazardous to the Health and Safety of Pregnant Women or Children Under the Age of Fifteen Years (50,54,55)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 312, and 312 bis of the Penal Code; Sections 4 and 6 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (No. 3) (56-58)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 282–283 of the Penal Code; Section 6 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (No. 3) (56,58)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 8 of the Prevention and Suppression of Prostitution Act; Section 6 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (No. 3); Sections 282 and 285–287 of the Penal Code; Article 26 of the Child Protection Act; Amendment to the Penal Code Act No. 24 (53,56,57,59,60)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 26 of the Child Protection Act; Section 93 of the Narcotics Act; Section 84 of the Penal Code; Section 22 of the Beggar Control Act (53,61-63)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 25 of the Military Service Act (64)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Section 25 of the Military Service Act (64)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Section 17 of the National Education Act (65)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 10 of the National Education Act (65)

The minimum age for work does not comply with international standards because the law does not grant protections to children working outside of employment relationships. In addition, because the minimum age for

Thailand

work is lower than the compulsory education age, some children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (8,4,50,51,65)

During the reporting period, domestic and international news outlets widely reported on a 13-year-old boy who died from injuries sustained during a Muay Thai competition at a school charity event. (3,29-6) This highly publicized death prompted the government to begin drafting a Thai Boxing Act amendment, which would ban children under age 12 from participating in Muay Thai competitions and mandate the use of protective equipment for children between the ages of 12 and 15. (4,33,6) As of the end of 2018, the draft law had not been submitted to the cabinet for consideration. Research was unable to confirm whether the draft law will permit the Labor Protection Act to categorize child participants in Muay Thai as formal employees. (66) In addition, research was also unable to determine whether the government enforced the Child Protection Act, which forbids a person to force, threaten, use, induce, instigate, encourage, or allow a child to play sports for the purpose of commercial benefit in a manner that hinders the child's growth and development. (8,53)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) and criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor Protection and Welfare (DLPW) of the Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws through workplace inspections. (7) Operates Hotline 1546 and staffs 86 labor protection and welfare offices in every province to answer questions about working conditions and receive complaints from the public about child labor. In 2018, 770 child labor-related calls were made to the DLPW hotline; the majority of the calls were employers failing to notify DLPW of legal employment of children ages 15 to 18 in non-hazardous work, non-compliance with children's required rest periods, or employment of children under age 15. (3,67)
Anti-Human Trafficking Units	The Anti-Trafficking in Person Division of the Royal Thai Police (RTP) enforces laws related to forced labor, human trafficking, child pornography, and commercial sexual exploitation of children, and operates Hotline 1191 to receive complaints on human trafficking and violence against children. (68) The Department of Trafficking in Persons Litigation under the Office of the Attorney General (OAG) investigates human trafficking offenses, including cases of labor, sex, and child trafficking, and monitors cases to improve the quality of prosecutions. (7,8,69,70) The Anti-Human Trafficking Division under the Criminal Court of Justice prosecutes human trafficking cases, focusing specifically on high-profile human and sex trafficking, forced labor, slavery, and the illegal trade of human organs. (8,69) The Thailand Anti-Trafficking in Persons Taskforce (TATIP)* investigates and enforces laws against human trafficking in the sex trade and mainstream industries. TATIP teams comprise police officers, social workers, and selected NGO representatives. (3) The Department of Special Investigation's (DSI) Bureau of Human Trafficking Crime is tasked with enforcing and investigating human trafficking cases. (8) All Anti-Human Trafficking units were operational during the reporting period and carried out duties related to their mandate. (3,37,71)
Thailand Internet Crimes Against Children Taskforce (TICAC)	Investigates and enforces laws against child trafficking and the online sexual exploitation of children, including the distribution and production of child pornography. (7) Comprises police officers, DSI agents, social workers, and selected NGO representatives. (8,72) In 2018, TICAC investigated 19 cases of internet-facilitated child sex trafficking and 60 cases of child pornography possession. (71)
Ministry of Social Development and Human Security (MSDHS)	Enforces child protection laws through close collaboration with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, RTP, DSI, and DLPW; and operates 76 temporary shelters located in every province and 9 long-term shelters for human trafficking victims, including shelters dedicated solely for girls and boys. Operates Hotline 1300, which received 118 calls in 2018 related to human trafficking, including forced prostitution and forced labor. (3,37,53,71) In 2018, MSDHS organized a campaign to eliminate prostitution and sex trafficking for 3,234 children, women, and families. MSDHS also worked with OAG, TICAC, TATIP, and NGOs to provide anti-sex trafficking education to 3,000 students and youth. (37)
DSI in the Ministry of Justice	Investigates human trafficking crimes, including those related to government officials' complicity, and transnational or organized crime. (67) In 2018, DSI participated in criminal law enforcement investigations, including in crimes involving sexual exploitation of children, and organized anti-trafficking in persons best practices seminars for foreign government agencies and NGOs. (3,37)

*Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Even though the incidence of child labor law violations has decreased in the shrimp and seafood processing sectors, Thailand continues to closely monitor the industry for child labor through 32 Port In-Port Out (PIPO) Centers along the coasts. These Centers enforce laws related to fishing, forced labor, child labor, and human trafficking. (3,8,12,14,45)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Thailand took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, 905 Department of Labor Protection and Welfare (DLPW) and MOL civil servants carried out labor inspection duties. In addition, 221 contract employees employed by DLPW and 774 officials from other agencies, including the Royal Thai Police (RTP) and Department of Fisheries, supported labor law enforcement efforts. (3) The government also hired an additional 22 interpreters to assist the labor inspectors, bringing the total number of interpreters to 124. (3) Despite the increase in the number of labor inspectors from the previous reporting period, the number is still likely insufficient for the size of Thailand's workforce, which includes approximately 38.45 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Thailand would employ about 2,558 labor inspectors. (73,74) More than 94 percent of unannounced child labor inspections targeted high-risk worksites that employed children in the garment, shrimp and seafood processing, poultry and pig farming, services, auto repair, and construction sectors. (3) Inspectors who find a child labor violation must immediately assess a penalty on the employer and refer the case to the RTP. (48) Although the Command Center for Combating Illegal Fishing (CCCIF) and DLPW have made efforts to actively exchange information with NGOs, it is reported that the CCCIF and DLPW have not made efforts to reach out to migrant community NGOs or networks to exchange information on high-risk workplaces or provide training on child labor issues. (7,8)

In 2018, interpreters at DLPW provided translation assistance to Burmese and Cambodian migrant workers on Thai-owned fishing boats at PIPO Centers. (8) The DLPW also had mobile inspection teams that consisted of labor inspectors, a legal affairs officer, interpreters, and sometimes employees from the departments of Special Investigation, Employment, and Fisheries. These teams conducted targeted monthly child labor inspections using information shared by NGOs and child protection networks, and they are authorized to file criminal lawsuits when child labor violations are found. (7,48) During the reporting period, the mobile inspection teams conducted 49,394 labor inspections at worksites and on 78,789 fishing boats. Although no child labor cases were identified in the fishing sector, DLPW identified 99 cases involving 206 alleged child labor law violations in other industries. (3)

In addition, 695 labor inspectors, government employees, and law enforcement officials received training in inspection and law enforcement related to the worst forms of child labor. Lastly, the MOL conducted several trainings in 2018 for labor inspectors, including training 108 participants on rescuing and protecting children from the worst forms of child labor, and providing capacity building for labor inspectors to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in hard-to-reach workplaces. (3,37)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Thailand took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including fully reporting criminal enforcement data.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† Data are from October 1, 2016 to September 30, 2017.

‡ Data are from October 1, 2017 to September 30, 2018.

In 2018, the government identified 1 child victim of forced labor and 40 child victims of commercial sexual exploitation, and worked on 34 child pornography cases. The Department of Juvenile Observation and Protection reported 2,541 cases of children involved in the production and trafficking of narcotics. (3) The Thailand Internet Crimes Against Children Taskforce (TICAC) and the Thailand Anti-Trafficking in Persons Taskforce (TATIP) collaborated closely with international law enforcement agencies and NGOs, including the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, to identify and arrest suspects engaged in online child commercial sexual exploitation. (3,8) Throughout 2018, TICAC investigated 19 cases involving human trafficking, and TATIP investigated 29 human trafficking cases. Both TICAC and TATIP provided coaching, training, and case management support to investigators across the country to improve investigatory practices and the effectiveness of victim specialists. (8,37) The RTP's Anti-Trafficking in Persons Division received training in child labor policies and laws as well as training in techniques to investigate and prosecute the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking crimes. (3,37) In addition, the government collected and reported administrative data on the worst forms of child labor to the Cabinet. (67)

Reports indicate that there is a lack of understanding of human trafficking issues in some provincial governments and courts if the victims are boys engaged in commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, there are reports of underreporting human trafficking incidences for fear that reporting them would demonstrate law enforcement deficiencies. (3,37)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates the implementation of child labor policies, facilitates cooperation among relevant ministries, and reports annually to the Thai Cabinet on child labor issues. (65) Chaired by the MOL, with representation from other government agencies, employer and worker associations, and civil society groups. (75) Oversees a subcommittee responsible for monitoring the National Policy and Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (35,76) In 2018, the committee met three times to review Thailand's report on the worst forms of child labor and adjusted the working committee to oversee and monitor efforts to remove Thailand's products from USDOL's List of Goods Produced with Child Labor or Forced Labor . (8)
National and Provincial Committees on Child Protection	Coordinates with government agencies and private sector representatives to monitor and protect children's social welfare and safety, including monitoring public and private workplaces for child labor violations. (53) Led by MSDHS with participation from DLPW and the Ministries of Education and Public Health. (8) In 2018, the committee convened to discuss policies and develop a plan to prevent young children from engaging in Muay Thai and protect those children who do engage in Muay Thai . (8)
Fishing Regulatory Units	The National Policy Committee on Anti-Trafficking in Persons and Illegal, Unreported, and Unregulated Fishing coordinates anti-trafficking in persons policies and activities and oversees five subcommittees, including the Subcommittee on Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Migrant Workers. Chaired by the MOL. (35,77) In 2018, MOL conducted iris scan and biometric registration for 172,895 migrant fishing and seafood processing workers. (71) The Provincial Coordination Center for Sea Fishery Workers (operated jointly by DLPW, Marine Police, Provincial Administration, and Fishers' Association) compiles registration records and information on work permits for migrants working on fishing vessels, and works with vessel owners to ensure that undocumented migrant workers are registered. Also monitors and coordinates inspections of working conditions on fishing vessels, provides trainings on labor protection, receives human trafficking complaints, and coordinates with other agencies to provide assistance, remedy, and rehabilitation services for victims. (68) In 2018, the Provincial Coordination Center for Sea Fishery Workers was operational and continued to support the Royal Thai Government's (RTG) work on fishery workers' registrations and provide trainings on new regulations for fishery workers and vessel owners. (8) The Command Center for Combating Illegal Fishing (CCCIF) coordinates government efforts to resolve cases of human trafficking and illegal fishing and operates 32 Port In-Port Out (PIPO) Centers and 19 Forward Inspection Centers in every coastal province. (68) Carries out inspections in the fishing and seafood industry. Members include the Royal Thai Navy; the ministries of Agriculture and Cooperatives, Transport, Interior, and Labor; and RTP. (78) In 2018, the Royal Thai Navy, under CCCIF, organized 3 training program for 147 high-level officers, policy makers, and practitioners. One of the trainings taught a curriculum on the prevention and suppression of human trafficking, child labor, and forced labor in the fishing sector. (8) PIPO Centers enforce laws related to fishing and labor, including child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking, through boat inspections. PIPO Centers are staffed by officers from the Royal Thai Navy, Department of Fisheries, Marine Department, DLPW, Department of Employment, and interpreters. (3) In 2018, all 32 PIPO Centers were operational and conducted 78,623 fishing boat inspections, which identified 511 violations. (3,71)
Division of Anti-Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates anti-trafficking activities, including those involving forced child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation. Monitors 76 Provincial Operation Centers for the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking. (35,68,79) Operates under MSDHS. (35) In 2018, the Division developed manuals and videos in seven languages (Thai, English, Burmese, Laotian, Cambodian, Vietnamese, and Mandarin) on the rights of trafficked victims to provide information to victims prior to entering shelters. The Division also developed a handbook and vocabulary book for interpreters to assist victims of trafficking. (8)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy and Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor Phase II (2015–2020)	Seeks to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Thailand in accordance with international labor standards. Focuses on (a) preventing the worst forms of child labor, (b) rescuing and protecting children from the worst forms of child labor, (c) developing and enforcing relevant laws, (d) enhancing interagency cooperation, and (e) developing management and monitoring systems. (76) In 2018, this policy supported a training for labor volunteers on the worst forms of child labor; 7,255 volunteers participated in 76 courses. (8)

Thailand

Policy	Description
Cyber Tipline Remote Access Policy	Seeks to combat the online sexual exploitation of children in Thailand by partnering with the U.S. National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. Supports TICAC by permitting RTP to request warrants to search the residences and electronic equipment of individuals for child pornography and initiate criminal prosecution. (80-83) In 2018, TICAC actively used the Virtual Private Network associated with the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, which led to the investigations of 14 commercial child sexual exploitation cases, prosecution of 2 cases, and conviction of 1 case. (8)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (7,67,84,85)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address child labor in high-risk sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Government Shelters for Trafficking Victims†	MSDHS program that operates 76 temporary shelters that provide emergency assistance and protection to human trafficking victims, including children. (78) Operates nine long-term trafficking shelters that offer medical care, psychosocial services, education, and life skills education. (78,88) In 2018, Save the Children personnel trained shelter staff on specialized child services, including conducting risk assessments, victim referrals, and providing child witness support. (37)
Combatting Unacceptable Forms of Work in the Thai Fishing and Seafood Industry (2016–2019)	3.5 year, EU- and ILO-funded Ship to Shore Rights project implemented by ILO, the government of Thailand, and other stakeholders to prevent and reduce forced labor and child labor in the Thai fishing and seafood processing sectors, including by withdrawing children engaged in the worst forms of child labor and enhancing their access to support services. (89,90) In 2018, this program supported an ILO-MOL joint training for 60 participants to prevent and reduce forced labor, child labor, and indecent forms of work in the seafood industry. (8)
Migrant Learning Centers‡	NGO and government-operated centers that provide basic education, life skill training, and vocational training to children in migrant communities along Thailand's borders. In 2018, RTG continued to provide subsidies and accreditation to some qualified Migrant Learning Centers. (3,68)
Welfare Cards for the Poor†	Government program that provides low-income parents or caretakers with a monthly stipend of approximately $51 (1,630 baht) for transportation, farming supplies, educational materials, and other essentials. In 2018, approximately 3 million Thai citizens received benefits. (7,3)
Equal Education Fund†	Provides scholarships to support disadvantaged children's access to education. Approximately 397,493 students received disbursements in 2018. (3)
Child Advocacy Centers (CAC)†	Provide social, legal, and repatriation services to children who are victims or vulnerable to human trafficking, including children trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation. (37,42) In 2018, two new CACs opened—for a total of five CACs around the country—and RTP committed to fully fund all of the CACs. During the reporting period, CACs also assisted 57 victims during criminal investigations, accompanied 36 victims to the courts, and helped repatriate 10 victims. (37,42)

† Program is funded by the Government of Thailand.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (42,76,91)

The lack of available research and data on the prevalence of child labor in high-risk sectors, such as agriculture, garment manufacturing, domestic work, and construction, make it difficult for the Thai Government to design appropriate programs to address these issues. (3,44) Although access to education for migrant children has increased, many Migrant Learning Centers rely on decreasing donor funding, and migrant students face difficulties acquiring a certification of education because many centers lack qualified teachers and accreditation. Lastly, migrant children are not eligible for Equal Education Fund distributions, which increases their vulnerability to labor exploitation. (8,67)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Thailand (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to children working outside of employment relationships.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
	Enact legal protections that prohibit children under age 18 from participating in Muay Thai without protective gear and forbid all types of contact with opponents' heads.	2018
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws related to child labor to meet the ILO's technical guidance.	2015 – 2018
	Collect and publish comprehensive data on the number of convictions for all crimes related to child labor.	2015 – 2018
	Provide trainings for provincial governments and courts to ensure that boy victims of commercial sexual exploitation are reported and afforded the same services as girls.	2018
	Increase collaboration with NGOs and migrant community networks to exchange information on high-risk workplaces, and provide training on child labor issues.	2018
Social Programs	Improve access to education, especially for ethnic minority and migrant children, including by raising awareness of migrant children's right to education, improving access to school transportation, and addressing language barriers for non-Thai speaking students, including on public school applications.	2012 – 2018
	Publish the results of the survey on working children in Thailand and use the results to refine the government's policy and actions.	2009 – 2018
	Conduct research and data prevalence surveys to ensure that there are sufficient social programs to address child labor in agriculture, garment manufacturing, domestic work, and construction.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that there are sufficient social programs to assist children from vulnerable groups, such as migrant children, who are at high risk of the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2018
	Support migrant learning centers to improve the quality of education and provide accreditation for migrant children; develop systems to refer migrant students to schools in their countries of origin.	2018

In 2018, Timor-Leste made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Prime Minister's Office convened different agencies to develop an implementation plan for the National Action Plan Against Human Trafficking via the Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group. However, children in Timor-Leste engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Timor-Leste does not meet international standards related to the minimum age for work. In addition, Timor-Leste's Penal Code and Labor Code only protect children under the age of 17, leaving children age 17 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Also, during most of the reporting year, the Government of Timor-Leste did not have an operating budget, which inhibited its ability to fund programs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Timor-Leste engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1,2) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Timor-Leste.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	19.9 (26,268)
Attending School (%)	7 to 14	69.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	12.6

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including cultivating and processing coffee† (1,5) and growing vegetables and other crops (2,6)
	Fishing,† including work on boats and repairing nets (1,2,7,8)
Industry	Construction,† (1) including brickmaking(5)
	Operating weaving and knitting machines (6,9)
Services	Domestic work† (1,2,10)
	Street work, including vending, begging, and scavenging (1,11)
	Shopkeeping and selling goods in markets (6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,12,13)
	Domestic and agricultural work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,13)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In Timor-Leste, some children are trafficked from rural areas to the capital city, Dili, and subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, or forced labor in the fishing industry. (2,14) Other children are trafficked transnationally, including to Indonesia. (2,15) Preliminary data from the child labor survey conducted in 2016

Timor-Leste

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

indicate that more than 26,000 children are engaged in other service activities, such as domestic work; the survey also identified 588 children engaged in street work. (8,10,16) Although data are limited, it is anecdotally reported that children are sometimes directed to work on family farms against their wishes to supplement family incomes. (17) The government requires nine years of compulsory education; however, there are no provisions to ensure that children are not subjected to paying additional fees to attend school. Commonly required fees include school uniforms and supplies, which can hinder children's access to education. (8,18) Due to national elections in spring of 2018, political impasses, and the lack of a budget until September 2018, the Government of Timor-Leste was unable to implement or continue many programs focused on eliminating child labor. (8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Timor-Leste has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 68 of the Labour Code (19)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	17	Article 67 of the Labour Code (19)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		List of Hazardous and Prohibited Activities to Children Under the Age of 18 (20)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 155, 162–163, and 166 of the Penal Code; Articles 8 and 67 of the Labour Code (19,21)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 81 of the Immigration and Asylum Act; Articles 162–164 and 166 of the Penal Code; Article 67 of the Labour Code; Article 18 of the Law on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking (19,21-23)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 155 and 174–176 of the Penal Code; Article 67 of the Labour Code (19,21)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 155 of the Penal Code; Article 67 of the Labour Code (19,21)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 17 of the Law on Military Service (24)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 14 of the Law on Military Service (24)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 125 of the Penal Code (21)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 11 of the Education System Framework Law (25)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 59 of the Constitution of the Democratic Republic of Timor-Leste; Article 11 of the Education System Framework Law (25,26)

Timor-Leste does not meet the international standard for the minimum age for work, because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, and children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. Technical advice from the ILO’s Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations indicates that Timor-Leste’s Penal Code and Labor Code are not sufficient because they provide protections for children under age 17 only, which leaves children age 17 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities. (18,19,21,27) The minimum age of 17 for hazardous work is not in compliance with international standards—which stipulate the age to be 18 and above—because children do not receive adequate training to protect their health, safety, and morals. (19,21) Although Timor-Leste has adopted the List of Hazardous and Prohibited Activities to Children Under the Age of 18, it is uncertain how it will be harmonized with the Labor Code and Penal Code. (2,20,28) Lastly, although the Labor Code specifies the conditions and number of hours permitted for light work for children ages 13 to 15, it does not specify which activities qualify as light work. (19)

Since the government enacted the Law to Prevent and Fight Against Human Trafficking—which expanded legal provisions on protection and prevention measures for the crime of human trafficking, including child trafficking—in 2017, all government ministries now must follow the law’s trafficking in persons guidelines. (2,10,23,29)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Social Solidarity and the Secretariat of State for Professional Training and Employment Policy (SEPFPOE) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Secretariat of State for Professional Training and Employment Policy (SEPFPOE)	Receives child labor complaints, and passes complaints to the Timor-Leste National Police (PNTL) for further investigation. (8) Enforces laws related to child labor. Administers the General Labor Inspectorate Directorate, which is responsible for investigating incidents of forced labor. (5,8)
Timor-Leste National Police (PNTL)	Enforces criminal laws against forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and human trafficking. Includes the Vulnerable Persons Unit (VPU), the immigration police, and the border police. (5,8)
Ministry of Social Solidarity	Receives referrals from agencies, including SEPFPOE, that are responsible for conducting child labor investigations and providing child victims with appropriate support services. (5) Maintains at least 1 technical officer in each of the country’s 13 districts and 2 child protection officers in each of the 65 subdistricts, all trained to follow the government’s standard operating procedures for referrals to service providers. (30-32) Due to budget shortfalls and political impasses, the Ministry was unable to implement child labor awareness programs and did not take additional specific actions during the reporting period. (33)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Timor-Leste took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the SEPFPOE that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including labor inspector training.

In 2018, SEPFOPE labor inspectors did not receive specialized training on child labor enforcement. Even though labor inspectors conducted 1,600 inspections during 2018, the government did not pass a 2018 state budget until September, and therefore the SEPFOPE operated mostly month-to-month and only had enough funding to cover salaries and emergency expenditures. (8) The SEPFOPE also reported that the number of labor inspections conducted in 2018 was insufficient and is targeting 1,800 inspections for 2019. (8,33,34) Although Timor-Leste does meet the ILO’s technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 labor inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, the SEPFOPE reported that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient to conduct the required labor inspections, noting that none of the inspectors are solely dedicated to child labor issues. (8)

Research found that there are insufficient child labor enforcement protections for children working on family farms or in domestic work, likely because the SEPFOPE is limited to inspecting only formal worksites. (2) The SEPFOPE also had limited capacity to conduct inspections in Timor-Leste’s rural areas, where child labor in the agriculture sector is prevalent, due to a lack of available transportation, including funds to pay for fuel for government vehicles. (8,10,35)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Timor-Leste took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018

In 2018, the Vulnerable Persons Unit of the Timor-Leste National Police (PNTL) had a staff of 97 investigators charged with the enforcement of criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. PNTL officers continued to receive human trafficking and victim identification training; however, this training was not specific to child trafficking issues. (8,10,32) The IOM also provided training to victim protection unit officers in the PNTL until September 2018 when the contract ended. (8) In 2018, the PNTL rescued a female victim from commercial sexual exploitation. (10)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including insufficient funding.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission Against Child Labor (CNTI)	Facilitates information sharing on child labor issues among government agencies and serves as the coordinating mechanism for filing and responding to child labor complaints. (35) Develops child labor policies, raises awareness, and contributes to efforts to ratify and implement international conventions related to child protection. (5) Chaired by SEPFOPE, serving a 3-year term as the Technical Secretariat. (35,36)
Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group	Coordinates the government's efforts to combat human trafficking, develops and implements the National Action Plan on Combating Human Trafficking, and promotes the development of comprehensive anti-trafficking legislation. Chaired by the Ministry of Justice, and includes the participation of the Prime Minister's office. (10)

In 2018, the Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group met on an ad hoc basis. (33) The Government of Timor-Leste began drafting implementation plans to replace the Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group with an Anti-Human Trafficking Commission. However, the political impasse and lack of a budget for most of 2018 prevented the Anti-Human Trafficking Commission (which will have oversight on the Law to Prevent and Fight Against Human Trafficking) from being launched during the reporting year. (10,33) The government has not yet established the new Anti-Human Trafficking Commission, which will have oversight on the Law to Prevent and Fight Against Human Trafficking. (10) Minimal outreach efforts were undertaken by the National Commission Against Child Labor (CNTI) to coordinate child labor policies, including sharing information on an ad hoc basis with employers and the public. (33)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Timor-Leste Project for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Aims to strengthen implementation of ILO C. 182 by establishing the Child Labor Commission Working Group, developing a hazardous work list, and creating a national action plan against child labor. Launched in 2009 in partnership with ILO and the government of Brazil. (35) Due to a lack of budget, this policy was not active in 2018.
Timor-Leste Strategic Development Plan (2011–2030)	Provides short- and long-term plans for the nation's development, including the eradication of the worst forms of child labor; poverty alleviation, and implementation of social transfer programs. (5,37) Specifies commitments to improve the educational system over the next 20 years. (37) Due to a lack of budget, this policy was not active in 2018.
National Action Plan Against Human Trafficking in Timor-Leste (2016–2018)	Guides the government's efforts to combat human trafficking in Timor-Leste through prevention, protection, prosecution, and partnerships. The Ministry of Justice coordinates activities and responsibilities and the Prime Minister's Office as the Co-Chair. (10,38,39) Due to a lack of budget, this policy was not active in 2018.

The CNTI finalized the National Action Plan Against Child Labor in 2016, which aims to eliminate child labor in Timor-Leste in its worst forms by 2025 and in all its forms by 2030. (2,8,16,33,36,40) Even though the Council of Ministers has not yet approved the plan, key stakeholders—including community-based organizations, NGOs and donor nations—have begun to implement it. (8,16,33) Even though no programs were implemented in 2018, the

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Prime Minister's Office did convene different agencies to develop an implementation plan for the National Action Plan on Against Human Trafficking through the Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group. (10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Labor Education and Outreach Program†	SEPFPOPE and CNTI education and awareness-raising program, located in five primary schools in Dili that target children who are at risk for involvement in child labor. (35) Research was unable to determine whether the Child Labor Education and Outreach Program was active or whether activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.
Services for Street Children†	Government-funded safe house and support services for street children provided by the Youth Communication Forum. (43) Research was unable to determine whether the Services for Street Children program was active or whether activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.
Mother's Purse (Bolsa Mãe)†	Ministry of Social Solidarity program that provides an annual cash subsidy of $60 to $180 to poor families with a female head of household. Aims to improve the well-being of children by conditioning the subsidy on children's school attendance and regular medical visits. (35,44) Assisted 60,900 families in 2018. (17)
Casa Vida†	Joint program between the Timor-Leste Ministry of Social Solidarity and the Australian Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade's Nabilian Program and Shelter Initiative. Provides shelter, health assistance, and psychological counseling to minor victims, including victims of child labor and its worst forms. (10) Receives referrals from civil society organizations as well as PNTL/VPU. In 2018, received funding from the Ministry of Social Solidarity during the political impasse and continued offering services. (45)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. (5,31,46,41,47-50)

Although the government has implemented programs to address child labor, research found no evidence that it has developed programs to assist children working in agriculture and on family farms, or children involved in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Timor-Leste (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
	Ensure that children receive adequate training and that the health, safety, and morals of the child are protected in accordance with international minimum age standards for hazardous work.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the law protects children between the ages of 17 and 18 from engaging in all worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation and involvement in illicit activities.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children from becoming involved in child labor.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the List of Hazardous Occupations and Activities Prohibited for Children and the Law to Prevent and Fight Against Human Trafficking are harmonized with the Labor Code and Penal Code.	2017 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors receive refresher courses on laws related to child labor.	2018
	Publish labor law enforcement information, including the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites.	2015 – 2018
	Provide the resources and training needed to enforce laws related to child labor, including adequate transportation for labor inspectors to conduct inspections in rural areas of Timor-Leste.	2016 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that the Secretariat of State for Professional Training and Employment Policy is staffed with the appropriate number of labor inspectors to conduct the targeted number of labor inspections.	2018
	Build enforcement capacity to address child labor protections for children who work in the informal sector, including on family farms and in domestic work.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the Timor-Leste National Police receives training on child trafficking.	2018
Coordination	Ensure that the Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group, or its replacement, meets on a regular basis.	2018
	Ensure that there is a sufficient budget to seamlessly transition the Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group into the new Anti-Trafficking Commission.	2018
Government Policies	Approve the National Action Plan Against Child Labor.	2016 – 2018
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing policies, including the National Education Strategic Plan and the Child and Family Welfare System Policy.	2014 – 2018
	Take steps to fully implement the National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking.	2017 – 2018
	Take steps to fully implement the Timor-Leste Project for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor.	2017 – 2018
	Take steps to fully implement the Timor-Leste Strategic Development Plan.	2017 – 2018
Social Programs	Create social programs targeting working children, particularly in agriculture and working on family farms, and children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation.	2017 – 2018
	Create social programs that sufficiently cover education fees, including school uniforms and supplies.	2018
	Ensure that the Child Labor Education and Outreach Program is active and fully funded, and publish activities undertaken during the year.	2018
	Ensure that the Services for Street Children program is active and fully funded, and publish activities undertaken during the year.	2018

In 2018, Togo made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government added a toll-free texting platform to its Allo 1011 hotline and made data available in real time through an online platform that is disaggregated by type. In addition, it signed a bilateral agreement with the Government of Gabon to increase cooperation in combating trafficking in persons and, with the support of the World Bank, provided 5.7 million school meals and constructed 80 new primary schools. However, children in Togo engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in domestic work. The government has not devoted sufficient resources to combat child labor, and labor inspectors are not authorized to assess penalties for child labor violations. In addition, the government does not collect and publish data related to its efforts to enforce child labor laws.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Togo engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in domestic work. (I-10) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Togo.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	29.6 (unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	86.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	29.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		90.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (11)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey, 2013–2014. (12)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working in agriculture, including spraying pesticides (3,7,10,13)
	Production of charcoal† (10)
Industry	Working in quarries and sand mines, including excavating, crushing rocks, sifting gravel, and carrying heavy loads† (2,8,13-15)
	Working in tailoring (16)
	Construction (3,8,10)
Services	Domestic work† (1-4,6,7,13,15)
	Carrying heavy loads,† and small-scale vending in markets (10,12,17)
	Work as motorcycle repairmen (8,10,18,19)
	Garbage scavenging (8,10,18)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging (17,18)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,8,9,13,15,20)
	Forced labor in agriculture, including coffee, cocoa, and cotton; domestic work; quarries; and markets, including carrying heavy loads; each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,17,20)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Togo is a source and transit country for victims of human trafficking to neighboring countries, primarily for domestic work, work in agriculture, and commercial sexual exploitation. (3,4,6,20-22) Parents may be complicit in child trafficking as a result of confiage, which involves sending a child to a relative or friend to attend school in a larger town or city, a practice that may place children at risk of exploitation as a result of internal human trafficking. (3-5,9,22,23)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although education is free and compulsory by law, parents are responsible for paying associated fees and buying uniforms and school supplies, which makes education prohibitive for many families. (24-27) Research found that long distances to schools, as well as physical and sexual abuse in schools, also posed barriers to education for some children. (9,24,26-30)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Togo has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 150 of the Labor Code; Article 262 of the Children's Code; Article 881.1a of the Penal Code (31-33)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 151 of the Labor Code; Articles 6–12 of Ministerial Order No. 1464 Determining the Work Prohibited to Children (31,34)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 6–12 of Ministerial Order No. 1464 Determining the Work Prohibited to Children; Articles 263–264 of the Children's Code; Articles 319.9 and 882 of the Penal Code; Article 151 of the Labor Code (31-34)

Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 426 of the Children's Code; Article 42 of Law No. 2007-010 Regarding the General Statute of the Togolese Armed Forces (32,36)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Article 426 of the Children's Code; Articles 146.14, 147.11, and 342 of the Penal Code (32,33)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 426 of the Children's Code; Articles 146.14, 147.11, and 342 of the Penal Code (32,33)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 35 of the Constitution; Article 255 of the Children's Code (32,37)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 35 of the Constitution (37)

* No conscription (36)

In 2018, trade unions continued to work with the government to harmonize domestic statutes with ILO C. 189 on Domestic Work. (38)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Civil Service, Labor, and Administrative Reform (MOL) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Civil Service, Labor, and Administrative Reform (MOL)	Enforces all labor laws, including child labor laws. (3,27) Through its Unit to Combat Child Labor (CELTE), withdraws children from child labor situations, raises awareness, and collects data. (10) Focal points in the inspectorate are located in each of the five regions to monitor child labor issues and raise awareness at the local level. (39)
Ministry of Justice and Government Relations	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, and prosecutes violators. (10)
Ministry of Social Action, Promotion of Women and Literacy (MASPFA), Director General for the Protection of Children	Raises awareness of child labor issues, enforces laws against the worst forms of child labor, provides technical assistance, and leads government efforts to combat human trafficking. (3,19,40) Supports a network of 42 foster families in 4 regional capitals. (13) Operates the Allo 1011 hotline for reporting child abuse, including child trafficking. (3,13,20,41) In 2018, added a toll-free texting platform and made data available in real time through an online platform that disaggregates these data by type. (13,42) Between its launch in March and the end of 2018, identified at least six verified cases related to child trafficking through calls to the hotline, which were referred, as appropriate. (13,42) In 2018, received a $300,000 budget allocation to conduct awareness-raising activities, reaching approximately 20,000 citizens in central Togo, which is the origin or destination for many victims of trafficking. (23)
Ministry of Security's Division of Drugs, Morals, and Pimping	Investigates crimes involving child victims, including child trafficking. In all five regions of Togo, operates as part of the National Police. (43)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Togo took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including conducting inspections in all relevant sectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (44)	Yes (13)

In addition to the 131 labor inspectors, MOL also employs 60 tax and health inspectors who may report labor infractions. (10) MOL lacks sufficient resources for transportation, which may hinder its ability to conduct investigations, and reported a limited number of inspections at informal work sites, in which child labor primarily occurs. (10,27) In addition, the Labor Code makes labor inspectors responsible for reconciliation and arbitration in collective disputes, which may detract from their primary duties of conducting inspections and enforcing the Labor Code. (31,45)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Togo took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators and prosecution planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (44)	Yes (13)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	No (44)	Yes (23)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (44)	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	3 (44)	118 (23)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (44)	Unknown
Number of Convictions	Unknown (44)	Unknown
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (44)	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (44)	Yes (13)

Investigators lacked financial and physical resources to adequately enforce the law. Research also indicates that poor record keeping, a shortage of physical copies of existing child labor laws throughout the country, and high turnover result in gaps in knowledge and enforcement capacity. (44,46) Cases involving child trafficking may be settled outside of court due to difficulties gathering evidence, and judges may be reluctant to impose fines or prison sentences for parents due to a fear of perpetuating the poverty that originally led them to violate child trafficking laws. (17,20)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that may hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including funding constraints.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee for the Prohibition and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (CDN)	Coordinates and oversees all government efforts to combat child labor, including the approval of all action plans for the abolition of child labor. (3,13) Comprises representatives from 17 ministries and NGOs; MOL's CELTE serves as the permanent secretariat. (13)
MASPFA's Anti-Trafficking in Persons Cell	Coordinates government efforts to combat human trafficking. (3,20,22) Compiles statistics on human trafficking and serves as the point of contact for repatriated child victims. (20) Comprises representatives from NGOs and six ministries, including MOL and MASPFA. (13) Responded to tips from the Allo 1011 hotline with police on an ad hoc basis and met regularly during the reporting period. (20) The government allocated approximately $20,000 for cash assistance to victims in 2018. (23)
Local Vigilance Committees	Overseen by CDN and composed of local government officials and community members. (13) Raise awareness at the community level, identify child victims or children at risk, track returnees, and share information on human trafficking trends and prevention efforts with MASPFA's Anti-Trafficking in Persons Cell. (3,20,23) Some local vigilance committees were active during the reporting period. (10)

All coordinating bodies were active during the reporting period, although the Government of Togo does not reliably disburse the allocated budget for the National Steering Committee for the Prohibition and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor, limiting its ability to combat child labor and support data collection efforts. (13)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that may hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy of Social Protection	MASPFA policy that aims to improve social safety nets, strengthen mechanisms to combat the exploitation of children, and promote systematic birth registration. (47)
Multilateral Agreements to Combat Child Trafficking	Quadripartite agreement among the governments of Benin, Ghana, Nigeria, and Togo that works to prevent child trafficking along the countries' shared borders. Multilateral accords for West and Central Africa promote cooperation among regional states to combat child trafficking. (3,20,26) In 2018, signed a bilateral agreement with the Government of Gabon to increase cooperation in combating trafficking in persons, returning victims to Togo, and prosecuting offenders. (48)
National Development Plan (2018–2022)†	Aims to improve economic growth, structurally transform the Togolese economy, and strengthen social protection and inclusion measures, including the implementation of a national biometric identification system. (23,49) In support of this, the government created a technical committee to reorganize the registry office to ensure that all births are recorded. (23)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (29,50)

Research was unable to determine whether all policies were active during the reporting period. A National Plan of Action Against Child Labor is undergoing technical validation, but has yet to be adopted. (16,26) The Ministry of Social Action, Promotion of Women and Literacy's Anti-Trafficking in Persons Cell is working on a draft national action plan to combat human trafficking, and the Council of Ministers is reviewing a draft decree to create a coordinating body that would oversee its implementation. (23) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Plan (2010–2020). (51)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
World Bank-Funded Programs	Projects that combat child labor by improving social safety nets for vulnerable families and increasing access to education. Include Education and Institutional Strengthening Project 2 (2015–2019), a $27.8 million project that aims to revise course textbooks for grades one through three, provide teacher training, identify recipients of school grants, and select 80 sites for promoting girls' education; and the Safety Nets and Basic Services Project (2017–2020), a $29 million project implemented by MASPFA and the Ministry of Grassroots Development that aims to provide social safety nets to poor communities. (19,52-56) In 2018, provided 5.7 million school meals to nearly 50,000 students at 161 schools; transferred school grants to 1,650 primary schools, constructed 80 new primary schools, and distributed uniforms to 54,636 girls. (56,57)
National Fund for Inclusive Finance†	Government program administered by the State Secretariat to the Presidency of the Republic that provides loans of up to $60 to women in rural areas of Northern Togo, aiming to reduce the demand for income provided by engaging in child labor. (10,13,58) In 2018, provided support to 9,000 rural families. (10)
Shelters for Vulnerable Children‡	MASPFA-funded or government-supported centers that provide temporary shelter and services for victims, including those referred by the Allo 1011 hotline. (13,16,20,40,59) Victims may be transferred to independent NGO-run shelters for longer-term support. (19,20,59)
School Feeding Program†	Provides school lunches in rural areas to promote school enrollment, particularly for girls. (19,26,30,55) This program was active during the reporting period. (16)
Forum of Traditional and Religious Chiefs of Togo on the Harmful Social and Cultural Practices that Affect Children‡	MASPFA-funded program that aims to eliminate traditional practices that may contribute to child trafficking by educating local leaders on child labor issues and the importance of education. (10) This program was active during the reporting period. (23)

† Program is funded by the Government of Togo

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (13,27,55)

Social programs focus on alleviating poverty and promoting education rather than targeting specific sectors of child labor, such as domestic work, and the government relies heavily on NGOs and international organizations for implementation. (10,46) A shortage of funds may hinder program implementation. (46) As a result, the scope of existing programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work. Many of these interventions may not be sustainable over the long term.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Togo (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information about the number of violations found, penalties imposed and collected, whether routine inspections targeted high-risk sectors, and data related to criminal law enforcement, including the number of investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, and convictions made.	2010 – 2018
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by authorizing the inspectorate to assess penalties.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive refresher courses.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors have the time and resources to carry out their primary duties of inspection and monitoring of labor laws throughout the country, including in the informal sector.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that criminal investigators have sufficient financial and physical resources to adequately enforce criminal laws against child labor.	2017 – 2018
	Enforce penalties for labor violations according to the law.	2014 – 2018
Coordination	Provide coordinating bodies with sufficient resources to implement their mandates to combat child labor.	2009 – 2016; 2018
Government Policies	Ensure that policies are implemented as intended and that child labor indicators are included in all relevant policies.	2016 – 2018
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Education Sector Plan.	2013 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Increase access to education by eliminating school-related fees; ensuring that schools are free from sexual and physical violence; and increasing the number of schools, especially in rural areas.	2010 – 2018
	Ensure that social protection programs to combat child labor receive adequate funding, are sufficient to address the scope of the problem in all relevant sectors, and promote the long-term sustainability of project initiatives.	2009 – 2018

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Tokelau, the government made a minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor in 2018. The government implemented the United Nations Pacific Strategy, which includes economic development strategies, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. However, the government has not established adequate legal protections to prevent the worst forms of child labor, as the law does not criminally prohibit forced labor and child trafficking. In addition, Tokelau has not established a minimum age for work and does not prohibit hazardous occupations and activities for children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Tokelau. Although education in Tokelau is free, some children struggle to access reliable transportation to attend school. (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tokelau is a territory of New Zealand; however, New Zealand statutory law does not apply to Tokelau unless it is expressly extended to Tokelau. (2) International treaties are applied only with the consent of the Government of Tokelau. New Zealand's ratification of conventions does not apply automatically to Tokelau. (1-3) None of the key international child labor conventions have been made applicable to Tokelau, including: ILO Convention 138, Minimum Age of Work; ILO Convention 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor; the UN Conventions on the Rights of the Child (CRC); the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict; the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography; and the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 1). However, gaps exist in Tokelau's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 1. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No

Tokelau

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Tokelau has not established a minimum age for work. There are no armed forces in Tokelau because New Zealand is responsible for the defense of the territory at its request and consultation. (4) Tokelau has not criminally prohibited forced labor, trafficking, or the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (5)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 2).

Table 2. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
New Zealand Ombudsmen	Addresses and, if necessary, investigates citizens' complaints against a government office, including complaints related to child labor, child health, safety, and education. (11)

Labor Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for labor law enforcement actions to address child labor.

Criminal Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for criminal law enforcement actions to address child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, the Government of Tokelau has established a policy related to child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022) [†]	A multinational strategic framework program consisting of 14 South Pacific nations to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (12)

[†] Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Tokelau (Table 4).

Table 4. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the age up to which education is compulsory is the same as the minimum age for work.	2016 – 2018
	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work and determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under age 18 in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that laws prohibit trafficking of children domestically and internationally for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, and do not require the use of force to be established for the crime of trafficking.	2016 – 2018
	Establish laws that criminally prohibit forced labor, including debt bondage, the sale and trafficking of children, and slavery.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit using, procuring, and offering a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, and pornographic performances.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
Social Programs	Establish a reliable transportation program to ensure that children are able to attend school.	2018

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, Tonga made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government established a labor law complaint mechanism, and it is currently in the process of ratifying the ILO Convention concerning Minimum Age for Admission to Employment (C. 138) and the ILO Convention concerning the Worst Forms of Child Labor (C. 182). However, despite new initiative to address child labor, Tonga is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. Research indicates the labor inspectorate failed to conduct any worksite inspections for the second year in a row. Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Additionally, the government has not ratified ILO C. 182. Children engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and fishing. Gaps in the legal framework also remain; the country has no laws specifying a minimum age for work or defining hazardous forms of work for children under age 18, leaving children unprotected from labor exploitation. In addition, the government has not established a policy or program to address child labor, including its worst forms.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Tonga engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and fishing. (1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tonga. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		111.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2013, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (2) Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2019. (3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Subsistence farming, fishing (4)
Services	Vending (4)

	Use in trafficking of drugs (4,7,8)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The Government of Tonga has not published data on child labor. The Ministry of Commerce, Consumer, Innovation, Trade, and Labor (MCCITL) study, which resulted in an internal "Report of a Spot Survey on the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Tonga," has yet to be published. (4)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, there was evidence indicating that the growing methamphetamine epidemic has resulted in drug dealers starting to recruit school-aged children to assist with drug deliveries, while also getting them addicted to the drug, thus ensuring that they have “a client for life.” (4,7,8)

Many school buildings remain inaccessible to students with physical disabilities, resulting in the attendance rates of children with disabilities, at all educational levels, to be lower than children without disabilities. (4,9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tonga has ratified one key international convention concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Tonga’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

During the reporting period, the Government of Tonga noted that it was in the process of ratifying C. 182 and C.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

138, with consultations scheduled to take place in January 2019. (4)

The Parliament has tabled the Employment Relations Bill for discussion at the next legislative session in 2019, which would establish a minimum age for non-hazardous and hazardous work and would prohibit the categorical worst forms of child labor. Furthermore, the Parliament has not determined the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (1,4,14-16) Once the bill is passed, the labor inspectorate will be given legal authority to conduct labor inspections. (16) The results from a child labor survey conducted by Tonga’s Women and Children’s Crisis Center were used to provide recommendations for the drafting of the Employment Relations Bill. (4)

The Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act is insufficient to meet the international standard for the prohibition of child trafficking because it does not specifically prohibit the domestic trafficking of children, nor does it criminally prohibit forced labor, debt bondage, and slavery, unless they involve transnational human trafficking. (5,10,17)

The Criminal Offences Act prohibits the procurement of women and girls under age 21 for commercial sexual exploitation, but does not criminalize the procurement of boys for the same. (18) In addition, the Act does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation, because the use of children under age 14 in the production of pornography is not criminally prohibited. The Act also does not specifically prohibit using children in illicit activities, particularly in the production and trafficking of drugs. (11,18,19) In addition, the Defence Services Act does not prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (12)

Although it does not appear that there are any laws that provide free basic education, there is a policy that sufficiently provides for free basic education to all children between the ages of 6 and 14. (4,20) Additionally, during the reporting period, a Ministry of Education and Training program to bring children with disabilities into primary schools continued.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of labor inspectors at the national level in Tonga may impede the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Commerce, Consumer, Innovation, Trade and Labor (MCCITL)	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor and the worst forms of child labor, through business license inspectors and a chief labor inspector. The position of Chief Labor Inspector is currently vacant. (1,4,16) This agency failed to conduct worksite inspections during the reporting period. (21)
Tonga Police, Transnational Crime Unit, and Domestic Violence Unit	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (1) With NGOs, handles and coordinates cases related to women and children. (4) This agency was active during the reporting period. (16)
Ministry of Internal Affairs, Immigration Department	Collaborates with Tonga Police and the MCCITL on the enforcement of criminal laws in cases in which foreign nationals are involved in the worst forms of child labor. (1,4) This agency was active during the reporting period. (16)

There is no single agency responsible for the enforcement of laws relating to child labor and hazardous child labor. (4) During the reporting period, the Tonga Police recruited an Asian Liaison Officer for language interpretation services for foreign Asian victims of human trafficking. (6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, the absence of worksite inspections at the national level in Tonga may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

The Tonga Police set up a drug taskforce in April 2018, resulting in 96 arrests, but more resources are needed to address the growing problem of Tongan children being targeted by drug syndicates. (7,8)

Inadequate resources, including a lack of funding to hire and train the labor inspectors needed to target sectors in which child labor is present, hamper the government’s capacity to enforce child labor laws in Tonga. (1,4,22) Child labor inspections are complaint driven, with police called in for suspected cases of child labor. While a complaint mechanism exists, it is still in need of improvement, and the government has yet to establish an adequate referral mechanism among the labor inspectorate, the police, and social welfare services. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Tonga took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

The Tonga Police coordinate with NGOs to handle labor abuse cases relating to women and children, but no formal referral mechanism exists. (4) The Tonga Police continued to train their new recruits on human trafficking crimes and identification techniques during their basic police training. Additionally, the government maintains and operates a 24-hour hotline for emergency assistance, which is available to victims of child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking. (6)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 8). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 8. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)†	A multinational strategic framework program consisting of 14 South Pacific nations to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (23)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The Tonga Strategic Development Plan Nine indirectly addresses the root causes of child labor, as it seeks to improve economic opportunities in the country, including those for youth. Additionally, the Tonga Education Policy Framework, supported by the Governments of Australia and New Zealand through 2019, focuses on improving school quality, achievement of universal basic education, and improving management within the Ministry of Education, thereby having a positive impact in the reduction of child labor through universal education. (4)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that included the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)*	Multi-country program in 14 Pacific Island countries. (24) Prioritizes children's rights including the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy 2018–2022. (24)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

Social programs are needed to assist children who are victims of the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and children performing dangerous tasks in agriculture and fishing.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Tonga (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify ILO C. 182 on Worst Forms of Child Labor; UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict; UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography; and the Palermo Protocol	2017 – 2018
	Establish labor regulations that include a minimum age of 14 for employment and a minimum age of 18 for hazardous work, in accordance with international standards.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that the government passes and enacts the Employment Relations Bill which would establish a minimum age for non-hazardous and hazardous work, and would prohibit the categorical worst forms of child labor.	2018
	Create and publish a list of hazardous occupations and activities that are prohibited for children.	2009 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits forced labor, including debt bondage and slavery.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that laws specifically prohibit domestic human trafficking of children and the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that laws prohibit all forms of commercial sexual exploitation for both girls and boys under the age of 18.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under the age of 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	Publish information on labor law and criminal law enforcement activities, efforts, and relevant data.	2014 – 2018
	Improve the adequateness of the current labor law complaint mechanism.	2018
	Provide labor inspectors and criminal investigators with the training and resources necessary to enforce laws prohibiting child labor, including its worst forms.	2013 – 2018
	Establish referral mechanisms among the labor inspectorate, the police, and social welfare services to protect and rehabilitate children involved in child labor, including its worst forms.	2014 – 2018
	Fill the position of Chief Labor Inspector.	2016 – 2018
	Hire labor inspectors to enforce child labor laws.	2016 – 2018
	Allocate more resources to the Tonga Police drug taskforce to address the issue of children participating in illicit activities.	2018
Coordination	Establish a coordinating mechanism to combat the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2018
Government Policies	Ensure that child labor issues are properly incorporated into relevant policies.	2017 – 2018
Social Programs	Update all school buildings to ensure accessibility for students with disabilities.	2018
	Implement social programs to address all forms of child labor, including its worst forms.	2010 – 2018
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor, including its worst forms, to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2018
	Publish and make available to the public the results of the Ministry of Commerce, Consumer, Innovation, Trade and Labor's child labor study.	2018

In 2018, Tunisia made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government developed an expanded hazardous work list that includes additional categories deemed hazardous for children, including street work. The Minister of Social Affairs has already approved this revision, which will take effect once published in the official register. As part of its Child Labor National Action Plan, the government also published full results of the 2017 National Child Labor Survey. Regarding enforcement, the government, in tandem with international organizations, conducted trainings for civil and criminal law enforcement officials on human trafficking legal statutes. It also promulgated a new National Strategy on Trafficking in Persons. Lastly, the government inaugurated the Amali Center outside of Tunis as the first facility for child victims of trafficking in persons. However, children in Tunisia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including scavenging for garbage and in forced labor in domestic work and begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. In addition, the law's minimum age protections do not apply to children who are engaged in work in the informal sector on inhabited premises, such as private homes, without permission of the property owner or a court order.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Tunisia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including scavenging for garbage and in forced labor in domestic work and begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tunisia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report. Raw data used in the government's 2017 National Child Labor Survey report were not available for analysis in time for inclusion in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.0 (50,364)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.2

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4,10,16-19)
	Use in illicit activities, including stealing, smuggling, and drug trafficking (3-5,8-17)
	Forced labor in domestic work and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,3,5,10,12,16,20,21)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child migrants from sub-Saharan countries and migrants fleeing unrest in neighboring countries, and young girls from Tunisia’s northwest and other interior regions, are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking.(4,5,16,17,21) In 2018, the government released a full report on the 2017 National Child Labor Survey. More generally, the survey also indicated that 7.9 percent of all children are engaged in child labor, with 63.2 percent of those then involved in hazardous work. The northwest region—consisting of the governorates of Béja, Jendouba, Kef, and Siliana—noted the highest incidence of child labor at 27.7 percent. (2) Figures from the report indicated that children work below the country’s minimum age of employment with 48.8 percent in agriculture and fishing, 20.2 percent in commerce, 10.9 percent in manufacturing, 6.4 percent in domestic labor, and 4.7 percent in construction. (2,3) The government has not yet made the full dataset from this survey publicly available, or allowed other government agencies to access it, leaving the nature and causes of children’s involvement in specific forms of child labor unknown.

Students face barriers to education, especially in rural areas, due to inadequate transportation, household poverty, and religious customs. (3,8,10,12,14,22) It is estimated that approximately 100,000 students, including a disproportionate number of girls, drop out each year, some as a result of physical violence in schools. (11,12,23,24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tunisia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 53 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Law on the Situation of Domestic Workers (25,26)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of the National Service Law (32)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 2(5) of the Law on the Prevention and the Fight Against the Trafficking of Persons; Articles 3 and 18 of the Child Protection Code (29,30)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Section 1 of the Law on Education (33)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 39 and 47 of the Constitution (34)

In April 2018, the Ministry of Social Affairs (MSA) and the National Action Plan Steering Committee revised and greatly expanded the list of hazardous work first adopted in 2000. The Minister of Social Affairs has approved this revision, which will finally include street work, and it will take effect once published in the official register. (3,35,36) However, at present, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover street work, an activity in which there is evidence of children working in an unhealthy environment. Further, the government acknowledges, as evident from the high rates of recidivism, that the fines and penalties for child labor law violations are not dissuasive. (37)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MSA that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Affairs (MSA)	Conducts labor inspections and assesses fines and penalties for infractions. (10,25,38) Employs social workers and medical inspectors to assist in addressing issues of child labor. (3) Collaborates with the Ministry of Education (MOE) and the Ministry of Health (MOH) to identify and provide support to children vulnerable to child labor. (10,12,18,39)
Ministry of Women, Family, and Childhood (MWFC)	Gathers evidence and conducts investigations on child welfare cases. Conducts needs assessments and intervention plans. Acts as judicial police in cases of imminent danger to children through its Delegates for the Protection of Children. (12,30,39)
Ministry of the Interior (MOI)	Investigates reports of child labor as a criminal violation, including complaints that are outside of the labor inspectorate's mandate and complaints in the informal sector. (15) Through its Child Protection Service in the National Police, addresses the commercial sexual exploitation of children and coordinates with the MSA and the MWFC regarding violations. (10,12,40) Through its Judicial Police, coordinates with the MSA to refer cases of at-risk youth. (10,37,39,41)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Coordinates anti-trafficking efforts and the criminal enforcement of child labor laws. (18)
Ministry of Education (MOE)	Alerts parents and authorities to truancy in an effort to ensure children attend required schooling. (3)

Tunisia

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Tunisia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MSA that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of ability to conduct inspections and enforce the minimum age protections for children on inhabited premises, such as private homes, without permission of the property owner or a court order to access the property.

‡ Data are from January to June 2018.

The government noted that the budget for staffing and logistics, such as fuel and transportation, was inadequate to carry out inspections, especially in remote areas of the country. (3,13,43) Labor law enforcement mechanisms do not exist to enforce the minimum age protections for children on inhabited premises, such as private homes, without permission of the property owner or a court order. (3,10,12,25) The government noted 92 child labor violations in 2018; 5 cases were referred to courts for prosecution. (36)

Over the course of 2018, 2 inspectors received trainer training under USDOL's PROTECTE program, 60 inspectors received refresher courses, and 25 inspectors received training on trafficking in persons legislation. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Tunisia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of publication of information the number of violations found, convictions, and imposed penalties for violations of criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor.

During 2018, UNODC trained 80 judicial police officers, 16 police instructors, and 8 border police officers from 19 governorates in a 2-day training focused on trafficking in persons—specifically on the identification of victims, investigation methods, and victim protection. (45) Also during the year, UNODC, in partnership with Tunisia’s Magistrate Training Institute and the National Committee Against Trafficking in Persons, trained 160 judges on the updated manual with respect to Tunisia’s 2016 Law on the Prevention and the Fight Against the Trafficking of Persons. (46)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee for the Implementation of the Child Labor National Action Plan (PAN-TN)	Coordinates efforts to combat child labor. Led by MSA, includes membership of five other ministries and two unions, with support from the ILO. (15,47-49) In 2018, the PAN-TN approved a draft by-law to create a Fight Against Child Labor Unit and accompanying Operational Strategic Plan within the MSA to coordinate actors on these issues, participate in studies, analyze information, publish and collect data, and prepare and implement work plans and national reports. (3)
National Authority on Trafficking in Persons (Instance Nationale de Lutte Contre la Traite des Personnes)	Coordinates anti-human trafficking efforts and raise awareness of human trafficking issues. Includes membership of 12 ministries, 2 members of civil society, a media representative, and a member of the National Commission of Human Rights.(18,39,50-52) In 2018, the National Authority launched a telephone hotline for the public to report cases of human trafficking and child labor; during the year the hotline received approximately 500 calls. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Child Labor National Action Plan (PAN-TN) (2015–2020)	Aims to raise awareness, builds the capacity of stakeholders, encourages action from NGOs and the public, improves policies, and promotes the implementation of existing laws and policies. (15,40,47) In 2018, 185 points of contact outside of the MSA were trained on issues of child labor to support government-wide efforts to combat child labor. (3,16)
National Strategy for the Combat of Trafficking in Persons (2018–2023)†	Aims to establish a global approach to address trafficking in persons by coordinating national and international actors and using data and statistics. (5,16)
UNICEF Country Program Document (2015–2019)	Aims to improve quality of education, decrease drop out rates, increase access to early education, teach life skills to adolescents, and improve access to information that protects children against violence and economic exploitation. (53) In 2018, efforts involved coordination with the MOE on curricula revision to ensure basic life skills are taught to students finishing formal education.(36)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Tunisia

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects in Tunisia aim to conduct research on child labor and strengthen Tunisia's ability to implement its Child Labor National Action Plan, a multi-stakeholder effort involving government, business, and civil society. These projects include PROTECTE (2016–2020), $3 million project implemented by the ILO; and Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (MAP), $7 million project implemented in at least 10 countries by the ILO. (10,15,54-56) During the reporting period, the MAP project supported the launch of Tunisia's first nationally representative survey examining child labor. (2,3) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Support Efforts to Combat Human Trafficking (2014–2022)	USDOS-funded project implemented by the IOM to carry out anti-human trafficking activities in collaboration with the MOJ, MOI, MSA, and MWFC. Includes three objectives: (a) build the capacity of relevant institutions and agencies to identify and assist victims of human trafficking based on their individual needs; (b) strengthen cross-sector cooperation and the sharing of information through the implementation of a national referral mechanism; and (c) conduct an awareness-raising campaign to keep children in school and discourage illegal migration that could lead to human trafficking. (40) In 2018, training activities continued for immigration and law enforcement officers on the investigation and prosecution of human trafficking crimes. USDOS has approved extension of funding through January 2022. (52)
American Bar Association Rule of Law Initiative*	USDOS-funded project to improve the Government of Tunisia's National Authority to Combat Trafficking in Persons and enhance capacity of legal actors to prosecute, investigate, and adjudicate human trafficking cases in a victim-centered manner. The project was established in 2018 and expects to end in mid-2019. (52)
Shelters and Services for Victims of Human Trafficking†	The Government of Tunisia operates shelters to serve victims of human trafficking, particularly children. Shelters provide services that include lodging, food, clothing, psychological services, legal aid through a network of pro bono lawyers, and free medical care in collaboration with the MOH. Unaccompanied children and adults are placed in dedicated centers to receive schooling. (4,41,57-60) In 2018, activities related to this project continued, and in April, the government inaugurated the Amali Center outside of Tunis as the first facility for child victims of human trafficking. In February 2019, the Amali Center provided shelter for 42 children removed from the Regueb Koranic School following allegations of economic and sexual exploitation. (5,52)
Centers to Provide Aid to Victims of Child Labor‡	The government maintains 23 youth centers and 67 child protection institutions that can serve up to 6,000 children engaged in child labor or vulnerable to child labor. (40,61) In 2018, research indicated that these centers continued to operate; however, specific activity details are unavailable. (52)
Programs to Reduce School Dropout Rates‡	MOE-funded School Dropout Prevention Program maintains about 2,300 social protection units in schools and mobile units in rural areas to monitor students and prevent school dropout. (42,61) In 2018, activities related to this project continued. (52)

* Program established during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Tunisia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (39,58)

Although Tunisia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in agriculture and fishing, commerce, manufacturing, domestic labor, and construction. (15)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Tunisia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	Provide adequate resources for the Labor Inspectorate to conduct additional inspections, particularly in remote areas.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that mechanisms exist to enforce the minimum age protections for children on inhabited premises, such as private homes, without permission of the property owner or a court order.	2014 – 2018
	Collect and publish information on the number of child labor penalties imposed and collected related to labor law enforcement of child labor laws, and information concerning violations found, convictions, and imposed penalties related to the criminal enforcement of child labor laws.	2013 – 2018
	Increase penalties for those who employ children in violation of child labor law protections.	2016 – 2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Address barriers to education, especially for girls in rural areas, such as unreliable transportation, insufficient teaching staff, household poverty, physical violence, and religious custom.	2015 – 2018
	Provide sufficient resources to expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem.	2015 – 2018
	Make the microdata of the 2017 National Child Labor Survey publicly available so that they can be used to inform programming and policies.	2017 – 2018

In 2018, Turkey made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government signed a Joint Declaration on the Elimination of Child Labor, declaring 2018 as the Year of Elimination of Child Labor. In addition, 355 labor inspectors, 81 provincial directors, and 320 teachers were trained on child labor. The Integrated Model for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Seasonal Agriculture in Hazelnut Harvesting prevented 1,022 children from working in hazelnut harvesting and was extended to 2020. However, children in Turkey engage in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and recruitment by non-state armed groups. Children also perform dangerous tasks in seasonal agriculture and in small and medium manufacturing enterprises. Uneven enforcement resulted in insufficient protection of children employed in child labor. In addition, prohibition of compulsory recruitment of children by non-state armed groups does not meet international standards.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Turkey engage in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and recruitment by non-state armed groups. Children also perform dangerous tasks in seasonal agriculture and in small and medium manufacturing enterprises. (1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Turkey.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	6 to 14	2.6 (320,254)
Attending School (%)	6 to 14	92.4
Combining Work and School (%)	6 to 14	1.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		92.5

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Child Labor Survey, 2006. (8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cotton, hazelnuts, citrus fruits, sugar beets, cumin, peanuts, pulses, apricots, melons, and cherries (1-6,9-13)
Industry	Production of furniture, bricks, shoes, leather goods, and textiles (2,6,13-23) Construction (1,24) Mining† (4,25)
Services	Working in restaurants and small shops (6,13,14) Street work, including vending small items, carrying bundles in market areas, cleaning car windshields, collecting recyclable materials, and begging (2,4,6,13-16,28-30) Auto repair† (2,6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (28-30) Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (6,29,30,32)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Turkey

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Due to the seasonal nature of agricultural work throughout the country, children living in rural areas often migrate with their families and engage in agricultural work for up to 7 months of the year. Significant numbers of these children have limited access to health care and education as a result of migration. (1,3,5,6,28,33) Syrian refugee families working in agriculture tended to receive lower pay and live in worse conditions than Turkish workers, increasing the vulnerability of children to potential exploitation to child labor. (1,3,5,13,34)

There were over 4 million refugees and asylum seekers living in Turkey at the end of 2018. (35) Of the school-aged children in this population, approximately 35 percent (366,667) remain out of school. (6,36) Poverty and a lack of meaningful employment opportunities for adults contributed to an increase in child labor among refugee children. (1,5,6,26,27) Syrian refugee children engaged in child labor in agriculture, street begging, the service sector, and small and medium manufacturing enterprises. (1,2,6,30,34) Children in the manufacturing sector often worked long hours for up to 6 days per week and earned wages as little as half of what an employer would pay an adult. (1,2,16,17,20-23,34) Monitoring and collecting data on child labor in refugee communities and in enterprises remained a challenge. (1,6)

In 2018, the government alleged that the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK), designated a terrorist organization by Turkey and the U.S., recruited and forcibly abducted children for conscription. (6,30,36)

Syrian refugee children faced financial barriers to receiving education, including the informal tuition or other fees charged, and the cost of transportation. (1,2,6,14,21,36) Syrian children living in Turkey experienced issues with their registration documents, such as registering in a province other than the one in which they resided. (6) School administrators can enroll children without proper registration documents, but their performance cannot be recorded and they cannot receive school completion certificates. (6) The language barrier, discrimination, and lack of access to programs in which they could learn Turkish as a second language challenged Syrian student integration. (6,36)

II. Legal Framework for Child Labor

Turkey has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 71 of the Labor Act (37)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 71–73 of the Labor Act; Annex 3 of the Regulation on the Principles and Procedures Governing the Employment of Children and Young Workers (37,38)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		The Regulation on the Principles and Procedures Governing the Employment of Children and Young Workers (38)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 80 and 117 of the Criminal Code (39)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 80 of the Criminal Code (39)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 77, 103, 226, and 227 of the Criminal Code (39)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 37, 38, and 188 of the Criminal Code (39)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A*
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of the Law on Military Service (40)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Article 3 of the Primary Education Law; Education Reform Law (41,42)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 2 of the Primary Education Law; Article 42 of the Constitution of the Republic of Turkey (42,43)

* No voluntary military service (44)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (41,42)

The National Program for the Elimination of Child Labor identifies both seasonal migratory agricultural work and work in small and medium industrial enterprises as worst forms of child labor. (6) However, the Regulation on the Principles and Procedures Governing the Employment of Children and Young Workers allows children to do fruit and vegetable picking as light work, and does not prohibit seasonal migratory agriculture. The Regulation also allows children ages 16 and older to participate in many manufacturing tasks, including manufacturing of clothing, despite work in industrial enterprises being categorized as a worst form of child labor. (38) This inconsistency between national law and policy on child labor creates confusion regarding the minimum age for hazardous work in the agriculture and manufacturing sectors, and the jobs within these sectors that are legally prohibited for children. (45,46)

In addition, while the Criminal Code criminalizes forming and commanding organized criminal groups, there is a lack of specific provisions related to the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (39) Also, the Law on Military Service only criminalizes illegal criminal entities rather than addressing the recruitment of children. (40)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Family, Labor, and Social Services (MOFLSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Family, Labor, and Social Services (MOFLSS)*	Enforces child labor laws. (6) Coordinates and provides services to children living or working on the street through the Directorate General of Child Services. Operates a hotline to receive complaints about child rights violations, including child labor. (4) The Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOLSS) and Ministry of Family and Social Policies (MOFSP) combined in 2018 to become the Ministry of Family, Labor, and Social Services (MOFLSS). Accommodates children who are victims of human trafficking in 102 different shelters. (30)

(1) Previously known as the Inspection Board of the former MOFSP and Labor Inspection Board MOFLSS. (6)
Social Security Board Guidance and Inspection Presidency within MOFLSS	Monitors compliance with laws related to social security of all workers, including child workers. (4,6) Part of the Social Security Board (SSB). (6) The Guidance and Inspection Boards are organized in each city and exceed 1,000 containers in total. (6,36)
Turkish National Police and Gendarmerie General Command (Jandarma)	Enforces the Criminal Code, including criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (4,47) Increases efforts to identify and prevent human trafficking of refugees through the Anti-Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking Bureau within the National Police. (32) The Gendarmerie General Command (Jandarma) enforces laws in rural areas that are outside of the jurisdiction of the National Police. (13,47)
Department for Protection of Victims of Human Trafficking within the Directorate General for Migration Management (DGMM)	Coordinates the identification of human trafficking victims, including victims of child trafficking, with MOFLSS, Ministry of Education, and Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry. (6) Works with law enforcement, judges, and partner ministries in the country's 81 provinces. (6) Manages a hotline providing 24-hour, toll-free support in multiple languages for human trafficking victims. (48) In 2018, increased interpretation staff to assist non-Turkish speaking callers. (30)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes cases of child labor and child exploitation. (4,30) Directly involved in providing case input into child labor cases. (6)

*Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

As part of the consolidation of ministries following the June 2018 general elections, the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOLSS) and Ministry of Family and Social Policies (MOFSP) merged to become the Ministry of Family, Labor, and Social Services (MOFLSS). (6) The Guidance and Inspection Presidency is now responsible for child labor inspections and child protection. In addition, the Social Security Board (SSB)'s Guidance and Inspection Presidency can now identify and refer cases of child labor to social services or MOFLSS. (34) The SSB's Guidance and Inspection Presidency may play a more significant role through its SSB Controllers in coordinating against child labor, particularly at the local levels. (6,34) However, this role is yet to be defined, which has added confusion to the Ministry's new structure. (6,30)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Turkey took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOFLSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

‡ Data are from January 2018 to November 2018.

Labor inspectors spend the first 3 years of their careers as assistant inspectors. They receive on-the-job training that includes modules to raise their awareness of child labor and of the legal provisions and enforcement mechanisms that exist to address it, and annual continuing education on new laws. (1,34,44) In 2018, the number of labor inspectors was likely insufficient for the size of Turkey's workforce, which includes more than 31 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Turkey would employ about 2,066 labor inspectors. (34, 49-51) The number of inspections reported by the government increased in 2018; however, limited government statistics and a change in the methodology by which the labor inspectorate counted discrete site visits rendered it difficult to assess trends regarding the overall number of worksites inspected in 2018 relative to 2017. (34)

The amounts of fines charged for child labor violations are adjusted annually and have undergone small increases in recent years, but remain insufficient to deter violations. (34)

Research found that children discovered to be working illegally during the course of inspections were generally referred for social services. (6,34) Reciprocal referral mechanisms remain underutilized and inspectors cannot monitor the referred cases once they pass them to social services. (36)

During the reporting period, the Guidance and Inspection Presidency and UNICEF trained 364 labor inspectors. (6) The training reviewed the legal and political framework for combatting child labor by outlining best practices and greater coordination and collaboration with relevant entities. (34) In addition, as part of the Children's Rights and Work Principles Training, the Confederation of Craftsmen and Tradesmen (TESK), MOFLSS, UNICEF, and the Ministry of National Education trained 355 labor inspectors, 81 provincial directors responsible for vocational training and apprenticeships, and 320 teachers on child labor. (6,30) The program advanced vocational training and apprenticeships for youth between the ages of 15 to 18. (6)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Turkey took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement, including prosecution planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

During the reporting period, UNICEF and the Union of Municipalities of Turkey developed municipal police training modules on child labor and provided trainings on how to respond to child labor to 100 municipal police from Ankara. (6) In addition, the Department for Protection of Victims of Human Trafficking within

Turkey

the Directorate General for Migration Management (DGMM) trained law enforcement on human trafficking identification, the national referral system, and interview techniques. (30) DGMM also conducted outreach with local community leaders, particularly in the southeast where there is a significant migrant and refugee population at risk of human trafficking. (30)

However, lack of experience and specialization among prosecutors and judges regarding human trafficking limited the ability and means to adequately prosecute complex human trafficking-related crimes. (30,34,36) The government does not publicly release information on its labor/criminal law enforcement efforts.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination efforts.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Labor Branch of the Employment Policies Directorate	Coordinates all child labor programs and efforts of the Ministry of National Education, the Child Services Directorate General in MOFLSS, the Ministry of the Interior, the Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Youth and Sports, the Ministry of Agriculture and Forest, and other institutions and organizations. (6) Under the Directorate General of Labor within MOFLSS. (6)
Monitoring and Evaluation Board for Child Labor	Plans and monitors implementation of the National Program to Combat Child Labor, including through biannual meetings. (6) Held the Second Monitoring and Evaluation Board Meeting in December 2018 and announced focal points for combating child labor in each province. (6,52)
Directorate General For Migration Management (DGMM)	Coordinates the implementation of migration law, including laws related to irregular migration, refugees, and human trafficking. (53,54) Active in 2018 and produced public reports on human trafficking. (30)
Anti-Trafficking Coordination Commission	Coordinates policy on human trafficking. Chaired by the Undersecretary of the Minister of Interior. (30) This commission was founded to replace the National Task Force on Combating Human Trafficking and met in March 2018. (30,32)

With the merging of the Ministry of Labor with the Ministry of Family and Social Police, there remain separate local level organizations that in some cases are redundant; at this time it is unclear if they will be merged or exist concurrently. (6,36) Coordination between central and provincial levels of government has varied significantly and sources have highlighted the need for greater coordination between governmental bodies charged with combating child labor on all levels. (6,30)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Program on the Elimination of Child Labor (2017–2023)	Identifies seasonal migratory agriculture, street work, and work in small and medium industrial enterprises as priority sectors for government efforts to combat child labor. Outlines a series of nationwide interventions aimed at eliminating child labor, including combating poverty, inclusive education, and increasing social awareness. (1,6,52) In 2018, the government continued its implementation. (6,30,55)
Joint Declaration of the Elimination of Child Labor†	In 2018, the government contributed to the National Program on the Elimination of Child Labor objectives by signing a Joint Declaration of the Elimination of Child Labor, declaring 2018 as the Year of Elimination of Child Labor. (6,30,55)
Second National Action Plan on Combating Human Trafficking	Outlines Turkey's strategy for the prevention of human trafficking. Identifies children as an exceptionally vulnerable group and calls for special security precautions for children at shelters for victims, and increased international cooperation on preventing child trafficking. (48,58)

Policy	Description
National Employment Strategy (2014–2023)	Aims to identify and solve labor market issues, with the goal of job creation and sustained economic growth. Includes the prevention of child labor, especially hazardous work in agriculture, as a focus of the plan. Advocates for increased access to education and strengthened social services as a means of preventing child labor. (59) Initiatives in the new action plans include requiring Provincial Employment and Occupational Education Boards to evaluate progress in combating child labor locally and organizing activities to raise awareness about child labor in connection with the World Day Against Child Labor. (1) The Monitoring and Evaluation Board met in 2018 to review actions taken against child labor. (6)
Tenth Development Plan (2014–2018)	Identifies Turkey's strategy and goals for economic development. Includes the priorities of alleviating child poverty and increasing equal opportunity in education. Includes provisions for the prevention of the worst forms of child labor. (44)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, the MOFLSS composed a report on the status of activities undertaken as part of the National Program on the Elimination of Child Labor. However, outcome indicators and outputs for each activity are not clear. (6,52)

Research was unable to determine which activities were undertaken to meet the child labor-related objectives of the Tenth Development Plan during the reporting period. (34,36)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the Government of Turkey funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including with regard to adequate funding of programs to address the full scope of the problem in seasonal agriculture and manufacturing.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Conditional Education and Health Care Assistance Program†	Government-funded program that aims to reduce poverty through cash transfers. Provides milk to all primary school children and distributes books free of charge. Active in 2018. (36)
Piloting the USDA Guidelines in the Hazelnut Supply Chain in Turkey	$4.87 million USDOL-funded, 31-month project implemented by the Fair Labor Association in partnership with Nestle and two of its main hazelnut suppliers, Olam-Progida and Balsu, in Turkey. Piloted a sustainable program to implement the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Guidelines for Eliminating Child and Forced Labor in Agricultural Supply Chains in 1,000 hazelnut gardens in Duzce, Ordu, and Sakarya, with additional interventions implemented in the environs of Sanliurfa and Mardin, the sources of most seasonal agricultural labor in Turkey. (62) Enhanced the transparency of the companies' hazelnut supply chain, enabled the collection of extensive information for risk identification, management, and mitigation, and implemented innovation remediation strategies in cooperation with non-governmental organizations and local authorities. Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Integrated Model for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Seasonal Agriculture in Hazelnut Harvesting (2012–2020)*	Association of Chocolate, Biscuit, and Confectionery Industries of Europe (CAOBISCO)-funded 8-year project implemented by the ILO and MOLSS. Project aims to take an integrated approach to preventing children from working by increasing access to education and improving living conditions of children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor in hazelnut harvesting, building capacity of local and national institutions to prevent child labor, and raising awareness among industry stakeholders and the public. (6) In 2018, the project was extended through 2020 with a budget of $879,000. During the reporting period, 1,022 children were prevented from working in hazelnut harvesting, and 668 families who work in seasonal hazelnut harvesting were provided with counseling. (6)
Programs for Syrian Refugee Children†	Government initiatives, in partnership with various international organizations and foreign governments, designed to fund schools for Syrian refugee children and provide Syrian refugee child laborers with additional educational and social services. (13) In 2018, under the program, UNICEF, MOFLSS, and the Turkish Red Crescent introduced conditional cash transfers for refugees. (6,30) During the year 410,740 children benefited from conditional cash transfers, and 4,452 children received referrals for specialized services. (6)
Programs focused on Human Trafficking*†	EU-funded projects, both co-managed by the DGMM, which aim to improve human trafficking victim identification and protection through training and capacity building. (63) The government also funds shelters for human trafficking victims that provide social services and legal help to victims. (6,30,32,48,63) In 2018, delivered trainings to government, NGOs, law enforcement, prosecutors, and migration experts. (6)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Turkey.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (6,30)

Turkey

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The MOFLSS partnered with the Ministry of Interior and Ministry of National Education to expand measures to prevent child labor in seasonal agriculture in the ongoing Seasonal Agricultural Workers Project (METIP). (6) Under METIP, the government developed and distributed introductory textbooks on child labor for public school teachers during the reporting period. (6) In addition, Turkey made a global pledge to improve children's well-being at the UN, which includes protecting children from conflict and commercial sexual exploitation. (64)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Turkey (Table II).

Table II. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure the law adequately prohibits work the government has identified as hazardous for children, such as work in small and medium manufacturing enterprises.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2015 – 2018
Enforcement	Clearly define the Social Security Board's Guidance and Inspection Presidency in the elimination of child labor, particularly at the local levels.	2018
	Publish information on the labor inspectorate's funding.	2015 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2014 – 2018
	Publish data relating to the criminal law enforcement of child labor laws including on the initial training for new employees, number of investigations, violations, prosecutions, convictions, and imposed penalties related to the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2018
	Train the judiciary so that human trafficking cases can be properly prosecuted and sentenced according to the law.	2018
	Ensure that laws prohibiting the trafficking of children are adequately enforced and that the reciprocal referral mechanisms are properly utilized.	2015 – 2018
Coordination	Increase coordination between the governmental bodies charged with combating child labor at all levels.	2018
Government Policies	Clearly define outcome indicators and outputs within the status report under the National Program on the Elimination of Child Labor.	2018
	Provide an assessment of the Tenth Development Plan.	2018
Social Programs	Monitor and collect data on child labor in refugee communities and in enterprises.	2018
	Continue to institute programs to increase access to education and health care for children working in migrant, seasonal agriculture.	2014 – 2018
	Continue to grant education opportunities for Syrian refugee children, including by enforcing national directives affording Syrian children access to the Turkish school system at the local level. Ensure that these children do not experience discrimination and have teachers in their native languages.	2014 – 2018

In 2018, Tuvalu made a minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The government made efforts by doubling the number of labor inspectors from the previous year from two to four. Additionally, the government passed the Labour and Employment Relations Act which prohibits the worst forms of child labor, and it has continued conducting consultations throughout the country on the proposed Child Protection and Welfare law. However, although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Tuvalu engage in child labor in fishing and domestic work. The government has not specified, by national law or regulation, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, leaving children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. In addition, Tuvalu lacks data to determine the prevalence and nature of child labor in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Tuvalu engage in child labor in fishing and domestic work. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tuvalu. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (4)

Source for all other data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2019. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Fishing, activities unknown (1,6)
Services	Domestic work (6)

Tuvalu lacks data to determine the prevalence and nature of child labor in the country. (3,6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tuvalu has ratified one key international convention concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Tuvalu's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the identification of hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 42 of the Labour and Employment Relations Act (6,7)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 44 of the Labour and Employment Relations Act (6,7)

Free Public Education	No		Free Education Policy (6)

† No standing military (12)

During the reporting period, the Department of Labor, along with the ILO, conducted consultations on ratifying international labor conventions and implementing its international commitments with the government and NGO stakeholders. (6) Additionally, the government continued its review of the draft 2017 Child Protection and Welfare Bill. (6,13) This will be the first law in Tuvalu to make comprehensive provisions for issues related to the rights, protection, and welfare of children. With support from UNICEF, the Government of Tuvalu has conducted consultations throughout the country on the proposed law. (6)

The Government of Tuvalu has not specified, by national law or regulation, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children; previous provisions only applied to a male person under the age of 18 in the industry, mining, and fishing sectors. (2,7,14)

Although child trafficking is prohibited in Tuvalu, the law prescribes a harsher punishment for individuals involved in the trafficking of adults than for those involved in the trafficking of children. (10) The laws also do not prohibit recruiting children under age 18 into non-state armed groups. (2)

Laws in Tuvalu do not ensure free basic education, but there is a policy that provides for free basic education. (2,6,15-17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Labor that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (18)
Tuvalu Police Force	Investigates and enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (6,18)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Tuvalu took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, the Government of Tuvalu doubled the number of labor inspectors from two to four. (6)

Despite adding new labor inspectors, insufficient financial resources hampered the labor inspectorate’s capacity to formally monitor and enforce child labor laws, leaving the government to rely on local communities to report potential offenses. (2,3,6,19)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Tuvalu took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

During the reporting period, the U.S. Embassy in Suva provided trafficking-in-persons training to the Tuvalu Police Force. (6)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Advisory Committee on the Convention on the Rights of the Child (NACCRC)	Coordinates child protection issues and implements the Convention on the Rights of the Child. Led by Ministry of Education and the Office of the Attorney General. (6,20) Maintains a Child Protection Desk to support and coordinate the implementation of the child protection work program, and ensures coherence of child protection intervention efforts of NACCRC. (6,20,21) During the reporting period, a review and public consultations of the Child Protection and Welfare Bill were held. (20)
Free Education Policy	Establishes free basic education for children ages 6 through 13. (6) This mechanism was active during the reporting period. (20)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)†	A multinational strategic framework program consisting of 14 South Pacific nations to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (23)
Tuvalu National Human Rights Action Plan (2016–2020)	Consolidates the government's human rights coordination and delivery of services, including implementation of the UN CRC. (22) This policy was active during the reporting period. (20)
Child Protection Work Plan	Includes the drafting of a Child Protection Bill and a Child Protection in Schools Policy, with implementation plans and cost estimates. Involves public relations activities, such as awareness raising and advocacy. (24) During the reporting period, the government engaged researchers to undertake child protection baseline research, as part of its 2017 Child Protection Work Plan. The research is expected to determine the prevalence and causes of child protection issues. (6)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (25)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including programs addressing child labor in the fishing sector.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)*	Multi-country program in 14 Pacific Island countries. (26) Prioritizes children’s rights, including the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy 2018–2022. (26) During the reporting period, consultants were hired to conduct child protection baseline research. (20)
Decent Work Country Program	ILO-implemented program that aims to strengthen Tuvalu’s labor laws, support the ratification of ILO C. 182, and improve data collection on child labor. (27,28) Seeking funding to continue to support labor laws and ratification of international conventions. (6) This program was active during the reporting period. (20)
Education for All Program	Australian Government-funded program to improve access to quality education in Tuvalu. Objectives include increasing capacities in education planning and administration, teacher training, and early grade literacy. (16) This program was active during the reporting period. (20)
Government Vocational Training Programs†	Government-funded programs that provide vocational training to children who have finished compulsory primary education. Includes the High School Vocational Training Program at Motufoua Secondary School, which provides vocational training to students starting at year 13. (16,21) This program was active during the reporting period. (20)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Tuvalu.

During the reporting period, the Office of the Attorney General and Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports, with support from UNICEF Pacific, began implementing various child protection interventions that align with the 2018–2022 UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program. (6) The Government of Tuvalu continued working with the ILO to extend the now expired Decent World Country Program. (29)

Research found no evidence of programs to specifically address child labor in the fishing sector.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Tuvalu (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify ILO C. 182, UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict, UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, and the Palermo Protocol.	2013 – 2018
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for all children in consultation with employers’ and workers’ organizations.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminalizes the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	Dedicate sufficient financial resources for child labor law enforcement.	2009 – 2018
	Institutionalize training for labor inspectors and for investigators.	2017 – 2018
	Publish labor law enforcement information, including labor inspectorate funding, ability to assess penalties, initial training for new labor inspectors, the number of labor inspections conducted, and the number of unannounced inspections conducted.	2016 – 2018
	Publish comprehensive information on criminal law enforcement efforts related to child labor, including training for investigators, and the number of investigations conducted.	2018
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2010 – 2018
	Institute programs to address child labor in the fishing sector.	2009 – 2018

In 2018, Uganda made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development, in partnership with the Kampala Capital City Authority, removed 283 children from the streets of Kampala and provided them with social services. The government initiated proceedings to harmonize legal provisions on minimum age to align with international standards. It also drafted a National Action Plan on Child Labor, which was approved in February 2019. However, children in Uganda engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. The lack of a centralized supervisory authority, as well as inadequate funding, training, and resources, hampered the capacity of law enforcement agencies to conduct child labor inspections and investigations. Gaps in the legal framework persist, including contradicting laws regulating the minimum age for employment. In addition, existing programs are inadequate to address child labor in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Uganda engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. (4-7) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Uganda.

	Use in the production of pornography and pornographic performances (36,17)
	Use in illicit activities, including smuggling, burglary, and car and house break-ins, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,11,17)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In June 2018, the Government of Uganda published results from the 2016/17 National Labour Force Survey. (37) The results show that an estimated 2,057,000 children are in child labor, which is a slight increase in the total number of children in child labor from the previous 2011/2012 survey. The government indicated that this figure is a lower-bound estimate because it does not include children involved in unconditional worst forms of child labor, including but not limited to child trafficking. (37)

Children from the Karamoja region are trafficked and at times willingly migrate to Kampala and other urban centers, where they engage in begging, street vending, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (2,3,30,31) In 2018, NGO and media reports indicated that children from Karamoja are sold in open-air markets or through intermediaries and forced into domestic work, begging, herding, and sexual exploitation. (38-40) Children from neighboring countries are exploited in forced agricultural labor and commercial sexual exploitation in Uganda. (3)

Although the law provides for free compulsory education, the cost of school supplies, uniforms, and other materials often prohibits children from attending school. (4,7,41-43) Research also found that children experience physical and sexual abuse at school by teachers and classmates. (36,42) Furthermore, a lack of teachers and adequate school infrastructure, as well as poor transportation in remote rural areas have, created barriers to children’s access to education. (17,44)

Although laws on free compulsory education apply equally to refugee children, a UNHCR report from 2018 notes that 149,806 refugee children are either not enrolled in or not attending school. Girls in refugee camps are at particular risk of being out of school and vulnerable to exploitation due to pressure to undertake domestic duties and gender-based violence and harassment. (45,46) In addition to the same obstacles faced by Ugandan children, refugee children may face discrimination from fellow pupils and teachers due to their refugee status, and they may also experience language barriers. (47) For a number of refugee settlements, such as Nakivale, schools are often located far from where refugees live and are inadequately equipped to meet the needs of the large student population. (48)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Uganda has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Uganda's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Section 7 of the Children (Amendment) Act (49)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	18	Section 7 of the Children (Amendment) Act; Section 32 of the Employment Act; and Regulation 5 of the Employment (Employment of Children) Regulations (49-51)

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 5(d) of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (52)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 52(2)(c) of the Defense Forces Act (55)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 5(b) of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (52)
Compulsory Education Age	No	13‡	Section 10(3)(a) of the Education Act (41)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 10(3)(a) of the Education Act (41)

* No conscription (55)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (41)

The law's minimum age protections do not apply to children working without a formal employment relationship. (50)

Although Uganda has a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children under age 18, Section 8 of the Employment of Children Regulations permits a commissioner to allow children age 12 and older enrolled in an educational training or apprenticeship program to engage in hazardous work, in violation of international standards. (51)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children in Uganda are required to attend school only up to age 13, although public education is free until age 18. This standard makes children ages 13 to 15 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. (41) In 2018, the government began a process to harmonize the country's legal provisions and bring the allowable minimum age for work in line with international standards. The process will require approval from the cabinet, parliament, and the president before enactment and is expected to conclude in 2019. (17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development (MGLSD) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development (MGLSD)	Sets labor inspection priorities and inspection guidelines. (44,56) The Industrial Court makes judgments on labor dispute cases, which are referred to the court by labor officers. (11) Operates the Uganda Child Helpline known as Sauti . (57)
Ministry of Internal Affairs	Enforces criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor. The Uganda Police Force's Child and Family Protection Unit (CFPU) investigates forced labor cases, the Special Investigations Division and the Anti-Human Trafficking Desk investigate cases related to human trafficking and the use of children in illicit activities, and the Sexual Offenses Desk investigates commercial sexual exploitation. (11) Liaison officers handle child labor complaints and overall child protection issues at police posts that do not have a CFPU officer. The Immigration Department assists in identifying potential human trafficking victims. (58)
Ministry of Local Government	Oversees district labor officers who refer cases to the Industrial Court. (11) Deploys community development officers at the district level when district labor officers are not available. (32)
Directorate of Public Prosecutions	Prosecutes criminal cases related to the worst forms of child labor that are referred by the Uganda Police Force. (59)

Research found that coordination among the various agencies responsible for child labor law enforcement remains a challenge because labor officers are under district government authority, rather than that of the MGLSD. (60,61) In addition, due to budgetary limitations at the district level, the majority of districts in Uganda do not have labor officers. (44) Despite the decentralization of labor law enforcement efforts, Uganda is signatory to ILO Convention 81 that requires labor inspection to be placed under the supervision and control of a central authority. (58,62,63) Although under the Employment Act labor officers are required to submit monthly reports, in practice the MGLSD does not receive labor reports from districts. Research also found that followup inspections rarely happen due to insufficient funding at the district level. (56) The government has initiated a process to amend legislation placing the inspection system under a central authority. (62) In 2018, the Industrial Court advocated the MGLSD to supervise district labor officers with the hope that it will increase the number of child labor case referrals. (11,64) Research found that the Industrial Court has not heard any child labor cases since its inception. (61)

In 2018, the MGLSD, in conjunction with the Kampala Capital City Authority, removed 283 street children (184 girls and 99 boys) from the streets of Kampala and placed them in a rehabilitation center before resettling them in Napak, Masaka, Mpigi, and Kampala districts. (17)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Uganda took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MGLSD that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown	Unknown (17)
Number of Labor Inspectors	47 (33)	73 (17)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	No (33)	No (17)
Initial Training for New Labor Inspectors	Yes (33)	Yes (17)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (33)	Yes (17)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (33)	Yes (17)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (33)	Yes (17)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Uganda's workforce, which includes more than 15 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed countries, Uganda would employ about 400 inspectors. (65-67) In addition, enforcement of child labor laws remains challenging due to the lack of resources for inspections. (33) As a result, local civil society organizations train labor inspectors and often assist them in conducting inspections. In 2018, the NGO Platform for Labor Action (PLA) conducted 10 child labor inspections in gold mining, tobacco farming, and road construction, 5 of which were in coordination with a government labor inspector. (17) In 2018, PLA also trained 73 full-time and 7 part-time labor inspectors, including both new recruits and previously hired labor inspectors. (68)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Uganda took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (33)	Yes (17)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (69)	No (17)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (70)	Yes (17)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	30 (71)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	155 (71)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown (17)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown (17)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (72)	Unknown (72)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (33)	Yes (17)

According to the government, there is not a sufficient number of criminal law enforcement officials responsible for investigating child labor. (11) Training is insufficient, in part due to regular staff turnover and transfers. Some criminal law enforcement officials were not aware of key human trafficking laws, and some police officers did not understand the evidence needed to prosecute child labor cases. (3,33) In August 2018, the government

Uganda

reported that between January and June 2018, 58 domestic trafficking cases involving children were registered with the police. (40) In September 2018, the Uganda Police Force arrested eight people for trafficking children from the Karamoja region to Kampala. (38) In addition, in 2018, the media reported that some high-level officials were associated with, or partially owned, labor recruitment companies suspected to be involved in trafficking in persons, including child trafficking. The association of these high-level officials with these entities may have impeded law enforcement efforts to investigate their operations. (72,73)

Research found that street children, including potential human trafficking victims, have faced conflict with local authorities and are sometimes detained by police. (1,3,40,68) In January 2018, the Uganda Police Force arrested 45 women and girls, some as young as age 15, at a bar in the Central region for allegedly participating in pornographic performances. The police plan to charge those arrested with being a public nuisance, and cases remained pending at the end of 2018. (17) According to the government, police officers identify and refer street children to probation officers and civil society organization actors to place children in homes and shelters and do not keep them in detention facilities; however, some children may have been housed in juvenile rehabilitation centers because shelters are frequently full. Police intermittently rounded up street children, housed them in children's homes and shelters for several days while social workers completed background checks and family tracing, and then returned them to their families. (64,74) Some children from the Karamoja region were enrolled in a youth training center in Karamoja, where they were provided with counseling and vocational training before they were returned to their families. (59,74)

During the reporting period, 30 police officers in Kampala were trained by the PLA regarding the law on domestic workers, which included a module specific to child labor in domestic work. (17)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on the Elimination of Child Labor	Coordinates child labor issues and implements the National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Led by MGLSD, includes members from several ministries, the Uganda Police Force's CFPU, trade unions, development organizations, civil society, and media agencies. (17) The committee met twice in 2018. (63)
Stop Child Labor Partners Forum	Coordinates, monitors, and evaluates child labor-related programs and policies in Uganda. Led by the National Council for Children, with representatives from several ministries, CFPU, and civil society groups. (75) Research was unable to determine whether the forum was active during the reporting period.
Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce	Coordinates government efforts on human trafficking. Led by the Ministry of Internal Affairs, includes 30 members from government agencies and civil society. (75,76) During the reporting period, and in collaboration with the Coordination Office for Prevention of Trafficking in Persons, the Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce developed referral guidelines for human trafficking victims. (71)
National Child Protection Working Group	Monitors the quality of services provided to orphans and vulnerable children. Led by MGLSD, includes members from five government agencies and civil society organizations. (11) Research was unable to determine whether the working group was active during the reporting period.
National Children's Authority	Works to ensure that member organizations integrate child labor concerns into their policies and budgets. Members include 10 government agencies. (11) Research was unable to determine whether the National Children's Authority was active during the reporting period.

In 2018, the Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce also reviewed a new national action plan for the prevention of trafficking in persons, which it plans to bring into force in 2019. (72)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor 2017/2018–2021/2022	Aims to reduce child labor in Uganda by 4 percent by 2022 through strengthening governmental frameworks on child labor; increasing coordination, expanding access to social services for children, enhancing research and advocacy, and improving the Monitoring and Evaluation System for the elimination of child labor. The government approved the plan in February 2019. (78,79)
National Social Protection Policy	Aims to reduce poverty and socioeconomic inequalities for inclusive development by targeting vulnerable people, including child laborers. (81) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Social Protection Policy during the reporting period.
National Strategy for Girls' Education in Uganda (2015–2019)	Promotes girls' education and identifies child labor, particularly domestic work, as a key barrier to girls' access to education. (77) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Strategy for Girls' Education in Uganda during the reporting period.
National Multi-Sectoral Coordination Framework for Adolescent Girls (2017/2018–2021/2022)	Coordinates government, civil society, and community efforts to provide services and programs that focus on issues affecting adolescent girls ages 10 to 19, including exploitation in domestic work and gender-based violence in schools. (17,82) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Multi-Sectoral Coordination Framework for Adolescent Girls during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (83,84)

In 2018, the National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor expired. The government has submitted a new 5-year plan for review to the ILO and other stakeholders, and received approval with slight modifications from the MGLSD in February 2019. (17,68,72,85) Cabinet approval is pending, and expected to take place in 2019. (72) However, due to the decentralized nature of labor inspection, some districts have developed their own labor action plans that do not always reflect MGLSD priorities. (63) The National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking also expired in 2018. The Ministry of Internal Affairs is in the process of developing a new plan, which it intends to launch in 2019. (17)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	Country-Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor Project (CLEAR) (2013–2018), implemented by ILO in 11 countries to build local and national capacity of the government to address child labor; and the African Youth Empowerment and Development Initiative (AYEDI) (2013–2018), $3.3 million project implemented by World Education, Inc. (86,87) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
Combating Child Labor in Tobacco Growing (2013–2021)	Eliminating Child Labor in Tobacco Growing Foundation-funded program implemented by ILO that improves the capacity of the government and social partners to develop and implement policies to combat child labor in agriculture. (78,88) During the reporting period, the project provided school meals to more than 7,000 children and supported the development of both the Uganda National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor and the Hoima District Action Plan. In 2018, the project was extended until 2021, seeking to support another 38,000 children in the western districts of Hoima and Kikube. (40,88)
Uganda Child Helpline	Funded primarily by UNICEF with in-kind contributions from MGLSD, comprises Distract Action Centers (DACs) and a physical call center located in Wakiso that screens all calls on reported cases of child abuse. Caseworkers at DACs follow up directly on cases of child abuse, including child labor and exploitation, assigned to them by the National Call Center and liaise with local authorities to address the reported incidents. (57) In 2018, six staff members received training on how to identify instances of child labor, screening calls, best practices for providing support to victims, and confidentiality. (57,89) In 2018, the helpline logged 64 calls related to child labor and commercial sexual exploitation, and 40 calls related to child trafficking. Uganda Child Helpline coordinated with the police and local authorities to investigate and resolve all reported cases. (18)

Program	Description
Realizing Livelihood Improvement Through Savings and Education	NGO-implemented program in partnership with the government that provides technical assistance and capacity building to MGLSD and the National Steering Committee on the Elimination of Child Labor. (36) The program was extended through 2018. (33)
Back Home Campaign for Karamoja Children†	Government program that rescues Karamoja street children working in Kampala and places them in newly completed rehabilitation centers in Wakiso and Moroto districts before reuniting them with their families. (17,90)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (91-93)

Although Uganda has programs that address child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Uganda (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that only minors age 16 and older who have received adequate, specific instruction or vocational training are permitted to perform hazardous work, and that their health, safety, and morals are fully protected.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that all children are protected by law, including children who do not work under a formal employment relationship.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the law requires free, compulsory education up to age 16 so that it is commensurate with the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure coordination between the Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development and the Ministry of Local Government so that labor dispute cases are referred to the Industrial Court, and ensure that the Industrial Court hears child labor cases.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that information on child labor collected at the district level is transmitted to the labor inspectorate.	2018
	Publish information on the labor inspectorate's funding, type of labor inspections conducted, number of child labor violations found, number of child labor penalties imposed, and number of penalties collected.	2013 – 2018
	Publish disaggregated data on the prosecutions initiated, convictions achieved, number of investigations, and number of violations for the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2018
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2017 – 2018
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure sufficient funding, training, and resources for law enforcement agencies so that child labor inspections and investigations can be properly conducted.	2013 – 2018
	Strengthen mechanisms for referring street children, including potential human trafficking victims, to social services providers, and prevent these children from being detained.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that allegations of involvement of government officials in cases of the worst forms of child labor are investigated.	2018
Coordination	Publish information on activities undertaken by coordinating bodies, such as the Stop Child Labor Partner Forum, the Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce, and the National Child Protection Working Group.	2018
	Ensure that existing policies addressing child labor are implemented as intended.	2018
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including refugees, regardless of their ability to purchase school materials.	2012 – 2018
	Ensure that students are protected from physical and sexual abuse by teachers and classmates.	2012 – 2018
	Ensure the availability of shelters for victims of child labor, including child trafficking victims.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that social programs to address child labor are implemented in accordance with their mandates.	2018
	Expand existing social programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, particularly in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2018

In 2018, Ukraine made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Ukraine officially ended the moratorium on labor inspections in February 2018. In addition, Ukraine doubled the number of labor inspectors, trained new inspectors, and established an Inter-Ministerial Counter-Trafficking Coordination Council. However, children in Ukraine engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in the production of pornography. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. National policies related to child labor continue to lack sufficient funding for adequate implementation.

Furthermore, Russian aggression in the east of the country continued, which negatively impacted the government's ability to address the worst forms of child labor by limiting the budget available for social services and other domestic policy priorities, and increased the vulnerability to exploitation of children living in Russian-controlled geographical areas.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ukraine engage in the worst forms of child labor in the production of pornography. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ukraine.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	9.7 (385,204)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	12.0

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (1-4,7)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown (3,8,9) Mining,† including loading, transporting, and sorting coal, and extracting amber (2,7,10,11)
Services	Street work, including distributing advertising leaflets, sales activities in kiosks, washing cars, and begging (1-4,9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,12,13) Use in the production of pornography (1,7) Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (14,15) Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7,8-18)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2018, the conflict with Russian-led forces in the east of the country continued. The government's continued policy focus on national security, as well as budget cuts associated with the conflict, negatively affected its ability to address the worst forms of child labor. (4,7) Russian aggression in eastern Ukraine has created more than 1.8 million IDPs, including more than 190,000 children. (19,20) The inability of many IDP families to access adequate shelter and available social benefits puts children at increased risk of exploitation in the worst forms of child labor. (21) In particular, the Ministry of Social Policy (MSP) noted an increased vulnerability to both domestic and international human trafficking among the IDP community. (12) There have been reports of kidnapping of girls from conflict-affected areas for commercial sexual exploitation and labor exploitation. (8,18,22) Displaced individuals from the Roma community, an estimated 10 percent of whom lack identity documentation, have experienced difficulty registering as IDPs. This prevents Roma IDPs from accessing assistance and puts Roma children at even greater risk of exploitation. (23-26) An estimated 10,000 Roma people have been displaced by the conflict. (27)

Children from Ukraine are trafficked both internationally and domestically for commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging. (16,18) Children with disabilities and homeless, orphaned, and poor children, especially those living in state-run institutions, are at high risk of being trafficked and targeted by recruiters for child pornography. (1,16,17,28,29) Ukraine is a destination and transit country for refugees from Afghanistan, Somalia, and Syria. Refugees lack access to state-run children's shelters, have no formal means of acquiring food and other assistance from the government, and experience heightened vulnerability to child trafficking. (29)

During the reporting period, children continued to take part in armed combat as part of the Russia-led forces in the areas of Donetsk and Luhansk. (4) Recruitment of children by militant groups took place primarily in Russian-controlled territory and areas where the government was unable to enforce national prohibitions against the use of children in armed conflict. (4,7)

Although Ukraine's Constitution and Law on General Secondary Education guarantee free universal education, due to discrimination by school administrators, Roma children have been denied access to education, placed in segregated schools exclusively for Roma children, or erroneously placed in special education schools. (26,30,31) A source reported that the municipal governments in Ukraine were ineffective in compelling school administrators to enroll Roma children who were unfairly denied access to school. (23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ukraine has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 188 of the Labor Code; Article 150 of the Criminal Code; and Article 21 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (32-34)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 190 of the Labor Code; Article 21 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (33,34)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Order of the Ministry of Health No. 46 on the approval of the list of heavy work and work with dangerous and harmful working conditions, in which the employment of minors is prohibited; Article 150-1 of the Criminal Code (32,35)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 43 of the Constitution of Ukraine; Article 1 of the Law on Employment; and Articles 149, 172, and 173 of the Criminal Code (32,36,37)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 149 of the Criminal Code; Article 32 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (32,34)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 301–303 of the Criminal Code; Articles 10 and 21 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood; the Law on Amendments to Certain Legislative Acts of Ukraine on Combating the Distribution of Child Pornography; and Articles 1, 6, and 7 of the Law on the Protection of Public Morality (32,34,38,39)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 304 and 307 of the Criminal Code; Articles 10 and 21 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (32,34)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Articles 15 and 20 of the Law on Military Duty and Military Service (40)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 15 of the Law on Military Duty and Military Service; Decree No. 447 on Measures to Improve the Defense Capabilities of the State (40,41)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 30 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (34)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Articles 12 and 20 of the Law on General Secondary Education (42)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 53 of the Constitution of Ukraine; Article 2 of the Law on General Secondary Education (36,42)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (42)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (32-34,42) Furthermore, the Order of the Ministry of Health Number 46 permits children to engage in hazardous work at age 14 as part of a vocational training program for four hours a day, with safety standards in place, which is not in compliance with international standards. (9,47)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the State Labor Service that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
State Labor Service (SLS) within the Ministry of Social Policy (MSP)	Enforces labor laws, including laws on child labor, by conducting inspections. (48)
Department on Adoption and Children's Rights Protection within the MSP	Identifies children involved in the worst forms of child labor, most of whom are in the informal sector. (9)
National Police	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. (48)
State Migration Service	Assists refugees and migrants in need in the country, including victims of human trafficking. (9)
State Border Guards Services	Protects the country's borders and identify cases of human trafficking. (49)

Coordinates the development of laws on child protection. (50) Informs the public of children's rights. (50)
National Referral Mechanism (NRM)	Identifies victims of human trafficking, including children, and refers victims to appropriate government agencies for assistance and services. Led by the MSP. (8)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Ukraine took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the State Labor Service (SLS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the collection of penalties imposed.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (4)

Under Decree of the Cabinet of Minister No. 1104, the moratorium on inspections that had been in place since 2014 was removed in February 2018 for the SLS, among several other bodies, enabling labor inspections to begin again inspecting for child labor violations. The moratorium, however, remained in place for criminal law enforcement agencies, except when credible information of trafficking in persons existed. (12,46)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ukraine took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for judges.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (17)	Yes (4)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Yes (4)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (17)	Yes (4)
Number of Investigations	116 (7)	Unknown (4)
Number of Violations Found	4 (17)	210 (4)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	3 (7)	276 (4)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (7)	Unknown (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (4)

Concerns have been raised that the existing curriculum for judicial training on human trafficking does not provide sufficient information about child trafficking victims who may have been forced to commit crimes while being trafficked. (9)

Children who were discovered to be in dangerous situations during the course of criminal investigations were referred to the MSP Shelters and Centers for Socio-Psychological Rehabilitation of Children. (17)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Ministerial Counter-Trafficking Coordination Council*	Serves as national coordinator on anti-human trafficking issues. Led by MSP, it met in 2018 and held discussions on countering trafficking for labor exploitation and human trafficking awareness raising within educational institutions. (12)
Interagency Council on Family, Gender Equality, Demographic Development, Prevention of Violence in the Family, and Counter-Trafficking Issues	Coordinates efforts to address the worst forms of child labor, including the trafficking of children. Chaired by MSP, comprises representatives from the Ministries of Justice, Education, Security, Health, and Foreign Affairs, and from international and local NGOs. (9,54) Based on available information, this Council was active during the reporting period. (26)
Interagency Working Group to Protect the Rights of Civilians, Including Women and Children, During the Anti-Terrorist Operation in the Eastern Regions of Ukraine	Protects IDPs and other civilians from the negative consequences of the ongoing military operations in Ukraine, including the increased rates of domestic and international human trafficking. Established by MSP, members include representatives from the Secretariat of the Verkhovna Rada Commissioner for Human Rights, the Authorized Representative of the President of Ukraine for Children's Rights, and other government agencies and NGOs. (21) Based on available information, this Working Group was active during the reporting period. (26)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In October 2018, the Resolution of the Cabinet of Ministers No. 800 entered into force, establishing a framework for stronger cooperation between the central government, local bodies, and institutions to provide social protection to children subjected to cruel treatment in any form of slavery, human trafficking, forced or compulsory labor, recruitment for use in armed conflicts, prostitution, movie production, and pornography and/or other activities of pornographic nature. (4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of the worst forms of child labor other than child trafficking.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan Countering Human Trafficking (2016–2020)	Guides the work of the National Coordinator on Countering Human Trafficking through specific actions and timetables for preventing, protecting and prosecuting human trafficking crimes. (12, 18) In 2018, MSP trained local social service departments on their responsibilities under this National Action Plan. Implementation focused on state child advocacy and labor officials as key actors to identify victims of trafficking. (12)
National Action Plan for Implementation of UN CRC (2017–2021)	Identifies priorities in the area of child protection, including improving measures to address the worst forms of child labor and increasing coordination between government agencies and NGOs. (2,4,55,56) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

Although the Government of Ukraine has adopted a National Action Plan Countering Human Trafficking and a National Action Plan for Implementation of UN CRC, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem, especially the worst forms of child labor.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Shelters and Centers for Socio-Psychological Rehabilitation of Children†	MSP-operated program to provide protection in 8 short-term shelters and 72 long-term rehabilitation centers for children in need, including street children. Short-term shelters provide accommodation for up to 90 days, and rehabilitation centers offer accommodation for up to 12 months. (8,18,9,21,28) Provide regular social, medical, psychological, and other types of services for non-residents. (8,18) The shelters continued to provide services in 2018. (12) Although MSP provides services for children in shelters and socio-psychological rehabilitation centers, the current availability of shelters and trained personnel is insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem. (13)
Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children†	Government-run program to provide services for victims of human trafficking and other populations in need. (18,9) These centers were active and provided services during the reporting period. (26)
Multiplication of the Anti-Trafficking National Referral Mechanism in Ukraine†	Joint program by MSP and OSCE to train officials in several regions of Ukraine to identify and provide services to human trafficking victims. Involves collaborative work among local agencies and non-governmental partners. (28) In 2018, the government in cooperation with IOM trained 26 Ukrainian diplomats to help ensure that diplomats are not engaged in or facilitating human trafficking. The diplomats were also trained on victim identification as well as transnational and national referral mechanisms with all related expenses fully covered through the state budget. (12)
Countering Trafficking in Persons Project (2004–2018)	USAID-funded project implemented by IOM; aims to reduce human trafficking by building the capacity of Ukrainian institutions to address the problem by strengthening the national referral mechanism and increasing government funding for counter-trafficking efforts. (58) In 2018, the project was extended through January 1, 2023, and created an online counter-trafficking course. (26,59,60)

† Program is funded by the Government of Ukraine.

Ukraine has a variety of service providers for victims of human trafficking; however, the MSP must confer the official status of “victim of trafficking” on child trafficking victims to allow them access to available government services. (8,18,28) Research found that delays in this practice often result from insufficient documentation of the crime to the MSP by local administrations. (8,18,28)

The Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children have historically experienced a large turnover of staff due to an excessive workload and low pay. (13) In addition, the centers remain understaffed after budget cuts enacted in 2014 resulted in the layoff of 12,000 social workers. (61) Likewise, high turnover in the regions where local agencies are responsible for identifying human trafficking victims under the National Referral Mechanism (NRM) has hampered service provision to victims. (28)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ukraine (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
	Prohibit all children under age 16 from working in hazardous occupations during vocational training.	2011 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that judges are sufficiently trained on human trafficking, particularly where child trafficking victims have been forced to commit crimes while being trafficked.	2013 – 2018
	Track and publish data on the number of investigation, convictions, and penalties imposed for criminal violations of child labor laws.	2014 – 2018
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as a National Action Plan on Child Labor.	2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Develop programs to facilitate access to education for Roma children and ensure that municipal governments hold schools accountable for discrimination against Roma children.	2010 – 2018
	Ensure that all children who are victims of human trafficking are able to access government services available for victims including by assisting victims in obtaining necessary identity documentation.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure there are sufficient resources for Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children for child victims of human trafficking.	2013 – 2018

In 2018, Uzbekistan made moderate efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government took active measures to prevent the use of forced child labor in the cotton harvest, including by issuing temporary regulations for labor conditions in organized cotton picking, reiterating the legal bans on using forced labor or child labor, raising the price paid to farmers for cotton and the wages paid to pickers, and sanctioning 169 officials for using forced labor. However, children in Uzbekistan still engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in scrap metal collection. Laws prohibiting the commercial sexual exploitation of children do not meet international standards. The government also did not disaggregate criminal law enforcement data for forced labor cases to clarify which cases, if any, involved the worst forms of child labor. In addition, there are gaps in labor law enforcement, such as the decision by the government-sponsored Coordination Council on Child Labor and Forced Labor not to conduct its own harvest monitoring and an insufficient number of labor inspectors to cover the workforce adequately.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Uzbekistan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in scrap metal collection. (1-4) ILO monitoring found only isolated cases of child labor in cotton production in 2018. (5) Uzbekistan has not carried out a national child labor survey to determine the prevalence of child labor in sectors other than cotton production. (6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Uzbekistan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.3 (244,095)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	84.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	5.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		97.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (7)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2006. (8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating silk cocoons (9,10)
Services	Street work, including vending, car washing, and begging (6,11,12) Collecting scrap metal (1,2,6,13,14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,15,16) Forced labor in collecting scrap metal (1-4,13,14,17) Forced labor in cultivating silk cocoons (9,10,17,18) Forced labor in construction, non-cotton agriculture, and cleaning parks, streets, and buildings (17-19)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Traffickers exploit Uzbek children in sex trafficking transnationally, and also internally in brothels, clubs, and private residences. Children in institutions are vulnerable to sex trafficking. (18) During the reporting period, the government identified 14 children who had been victimized in sex trafficking. (6)

Uzbekistan

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Cotton production in Uzbekistan is governed by a quota system, which holds regional and local government officials responsible for mobilizing sufficient labor to meet established production targets. (20) In 2018, the quota system continued to impose pressure on regional and local government officials to meet production targets, and observers reported that this system is a root cause of forced labor, which may have created an ongoing risk of child labor. (21-23)

While forced child labor in cotton production was not reported in 2018, the ILO Third-Party Monitoring (TPM) project found 20 isolated cases of children under age 18 who worked with family members hired for the cotton weeding season, and the TPM identified children present with their parents in the fields during both the weeding and harvesting seasons, although they were not necessarily working. (5,24,25) Harvest observers generally agreed that, for the most part, teachers were not mobilized, although independent monitors and news outlets reported cases that emerged after the first pass of the harvest (cotton is collected up to three times or “passes” during each season) and were linked to institutional quotas. (5,18,26) Independent monitors also received a report that parents of children at one school were required to bring cotton to school to help meet the school’s quota; it is unknown whether the children picked the cotton themselves. (27) Although such practices do not establish a systemic child labor problem, they indicate continuing risks of child labor. (5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Uzbekistan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 77 of the Labor Code; Article 20 of the Law on the Guarantees of the Rights of the Child; Article 49-1 of the Administrative Code (28-31)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 241 and 245 of the Labor Code (30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Decree on Adoption of the List of Occupations with Unfavorable Working Conditions to Which It Is Forbidden to Employ Persons Under Eighteen Years of Age; Decree on Approval of Provision on Requirements on Prohibition of Use of Minors’ Labor (32,33)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 37 of the Constitution; Article 7 of the Labor Code; Article 51 of the Administrative Code; Articles 135 and 138 of the Criminal Code (29-31,34,35)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 14 of the Law on Guarantees of the Rights of the Child; Article 135 of the Criminal Code (29,35)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Article 10 of the Law on Guarantees of the Rights of the Child; Articles 130 and 135 of the Criminal Code (29,35)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 10 of the Law on Guarantees of the Rights of the Child; Articles 127, 270, 273, and 276 of the Criminal Code (29,35)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 24 of the Law on Universal Military Service (36)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 4 and 46 of the Law on Universal Military Service (36)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18‡	Article 3 of the Law on Education (37)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 4 of the Law on Education; Article 41 of the Constitution (34,37)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (37)

Although the Law on Guarantees of the Rights of the Child requires that the State protect children from involvement in prostitution, no law criminally prohibits the use of children in prostitution. (29,31,35) In addition, because the minimum age for work is lower than the age up to which education is compulsory, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education in order to work. (28-31,37)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations (MOELR) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations (MOELR)	Conducts labor inspections, including inspections for compliance with child labor laws. (6,11)
Ministry of Interior Office for Combating Trafficking	Investigates crimes related to child trafficking, which may then be prosecuted by the Prosecutor General's Office. (6)
Prosecutor General's Office	Prosecutes criminal violations involving the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking, forced labor, and commercial sexual exploitation. (6)
Ministry of Public Education, Ministry of Higher and Secondary Special Education, and Center for Secondary and Vocational Education	Monitors elementary through secondary school students to prevent forced child labor, including in cotton production, and monitors employment of all graduates of all educational institutions for 2 years after graduation. (38,39)
Youth Union	Monitors school attendance to ensure that students do not miss class during the cotton harvest. (11)
Women's Committee of Uzbekistan	Monitors school attendance throughout the academic year, especially during the cotton harvest. (38)
Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations Human Trafficking Hotlines	Receive reports of incidents of human trafficking and refer reports to the relevant agencies. (40)
Feedback Mechanisms	Receive complaints on the violation of workers' rights and labor laws through two telephone hotlines: one MOELR hotline that refers cases to the labor inspectorate and the Prosecutor General's Office, and one Federation of Trade Unions hotline that focuses on mediation of individual worker's rights complaints. (11,41)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Uzbekistan took actions to combat child labor. (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MOELR that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including limits on labor inspectors' ability to initiate unannounced inspections.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, the number of labor inspectors at the MOELR increased from 168 to 200. (6) Despite this, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Uzbekistan's workforce, which includes more than 17.8 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transitioning economies, Uzbekistan would employ about 890 inspectors. (46-48) Both national and regional labor inspectors received training from the ILO on child and forced labor during the reporting period. (49)

In 2018, the government took several regulatory measures to prohibit the use of child and forced labor in cotton production and some other sectors. For instance, the government issued a formal interpretation of Article 95 of the Labor Code, which allows an employer to temporarily reassign a worker to other duties, clarifying that an employer may not invoke this article to send employees to the cotton harvest. (5) In May 2018 during the spring planting and weeding season, the Cabinet of Ministers also adopted Decree 349 prohibiting public workers and students from being recruited for compulsory labor in seasonal agriculture, scrap metal and waste paper collection, and street beautification projects. (6,78) In addition, the government established fines for illegally recruiting students and public sectors workers for unpaid work, including work in the agricultural sector. (6) Prior to the harvest, the Cabinet of Ministers approved temporary regulations for organized cotton picking, including recruitment, payments, contracts, awareness raising on the rights and responsibilities of cotton pickers, and reiterating the legal bans on using forced labor and the labor of persons under age 18. (5) Moreover, President Mirziyoyev issued a decree to reinforce previous prohibitions on child and forced labor in the cotton harvest. (6)

Since January 2017, a Presidential Decree prohibiting unscheduled inspections of the private sector has been in effect. Despite this, unannounced inspections continued in the cotton sector during the past 2 years. In August 2018, another decree was issued to allow unscheduled labor inspections throughout the private sector, although it does not permit the MOELR to initiate an unannounced inspection absent a complaint. (24,43-45) In 2018, the government investigated forced labor complaints, including those received from independent observers, and 165 individuals were assessed administrative penalties. (5)

In addition to the MOELR-led inspections, there were three other mechanisms to monitor the cotton harvest in 2018. First, independent human rights activists conducted their own independent monitoring of the cotton harvest and the Uzbek-German Forum for Human Rights (UGF), a Berlin-based NGO, coordinated the publication of the findings, while others self-published information. (6,50) Second, the International Finance Corporation (IFC) conducted a 3-step assurance review of 105 farms in 2 provinces that participate in the IFC's Sustainable Cotton Supply Chain Development project in Uzbekistan. The review included monitoring by UGF for compliance with Decent Work principles. (51) And third, the ILO conducted TPM of the cotton harvest, using field teams consisting of an ILO monitor, an interpreter, and a human rights activist to observe harvest activities and conduct interviews with participants. Workers were provided contact information for the hotlines and telegram bots operated by the MOELR and the Federation of Trade Unions (FTUU) to obtain information and register complaints. (52)

The ILO TPM mechanism identified no cases of government-mobilized child labor; however, it observed children present with their parents or relatives in 12 of the 252 fields visited during harvest monitoring and noted the risk that families will involve their dependent minors in the picking to earn more income. ATPM project telephone survey of 1,000 adult cotton workers found 20 cases in which the respondent reported that a household member under age 18 had participated in spring 2018 cotton weeding. (5,52) The IFC assurance methodology turned up no cases of child labor, and research found no reports of child labor in 2018 by independent human rights activists and private citizens. (5,25,51,53-56)

In addition to monitoring the cotton harvest, both the MOELR and the FTUU operated separate Feedback Mechanism hotlines during the 2018 harvest, which workers and human rights activists could use to register complaints about child labor, forced labor, and other labor law violations. (6) Between the two hotlines, more than 2,500 complaints were registered with the MOELR during the reporting period, resulting in disciplinary actions against 169 government officials. (5,6) The number of complaints dropped dramatically over 2017, in which 7,339 complaints were made to the MOELR hotline alone. (11) Research did not uncover the cause of this drop and there were no reports of retaliation against complainants. (5)

The government focused its labor law enforcement efforts on child labor in the cotton sector; however, it also identified cases of child labor in khashars, community projects for the improvement of school grounds and nearby areas, and issued penalties when investigation found labor violations. (24)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Uzbekistan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, only limited information on the activities of criminal law enforcement authorities was available.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, the government provided trainings to police officers, investigators, prosecutors, and judges on identifying human trafficking victims and investigating human trafficking cases. (6)

Uzbekistan

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, 14 minors were identified as victims of trafficking and referred to a rehabilitation center to receive social services. (6) The government also reported 2006 investigations, 114 prosecutions, and 45 criminal convictions for forced labor, but it did not provide the number of cases, if any, pertaining to children. (6,23)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Coordination Council on Child Labor and Forced Labor (Coordination Council)	Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister, coordinates efforts to address child labor issues, including monitoring the cotton harvest. (6,57-59) In 2018, shared responsibility with the Parliamentary Commission on Ensuring the Labor Rights of Citizens for carrying out an intensified public awareness campaign on state policies against forced labor and how to seek redress if labor rights are violated. (5)
Parliamentary Commission on Ensuring Guaranteed Labor Rights of Citizens	Monitors and regularly reports to the Senate on the activities of central and local-level government bodies involved in ensuring the labor rights of citizens, including the prevention of forced labor. Oversees implementation of the ILO Conventions on Decent Work, Child Labor, and Forced Labor. (6,11) In 2018, shared responsibility with the Coordination Council for carrying out an intensified public awareness campaign on state policies against forced labor. (5)
Interagency Working Group	Coordinates efforts to address labor rights issues, including child labor, and reports to ILO on the government's implementation of ratified conventions and its efforts to prevent forced labor and protect working minors. Headed by MOELR. (6) Research was unable to determine whether the working group was active during the reporting period.
National Interagency Commission to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Oversees efforts to combat human trafficking, including by improving interagency cooperation, raising public awareness, and drafting legislation. (6,58) Chaired by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. (22) Research was unable to determine whether the commission was active during the reporting period.

The government continued to formally engage human rights activists through consultative meetings, and for the first time, included activists in a meeting of the Coordination Council for Child Labor and Forced Labor. (5,23,60) For the most part, activists and independent monitors were permitted to observe the harvest without interference by the authorities. However, the UGF and Radio Ozodlik reported that there were several incidents in which local government and law enforcement officials detained, harassed, and brought charges against civil society monitors and reporters. (26,61)

In a departure from previous years, the government's Coordination Council did not conduct national monitoring of the cotton harvest, but rather relied on the ILO's assessments. (6,22,24)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Memorandum of Understanding Between the ILO and the Republic of Uzbekistan (2014–2020)	Establishes terms of agreement between ILO and the government on cooperation to implement the Decent Work Country Program in Uzbekistan. (62) Seeks to use ILO's assistance and work with ILO or other credible third parties to observe cotton harvests. (63,64) In 2018, the Government of Uzbekistan and ILO continued to work together under this agreement. (5,59)
Senate Resolution on Measures to Ensure Guaranteed Labor Rights to the Citizens of Uzbekistan	Establishes a plan to harmonize national legislation with the requirements of ILO conventions, including through developing relevant organizational structures and national programs, strengthening state and civil society capacity to guarantee the provision of labor rights, and carrying out an information campaign to inform citizens of their rights. (65) In 2018, the government carried out widespread information campaigns to inform the public of labor rights and warn them against forced labor. The government also almost doubled the payment for cotton pickers to encourage voluntary labor recruitment. (24)

Policy	Description
National Development Strategy (2017–2021)	Outlines measures for economic liberalization and modernization, including through a decrease in cotton production, an increased focus on the production of finished goods, and a reduction of the state regulation. Includes objectives for poverty reduction, development of education and social protection strategies, capacity building for civil society and the press, and increased efficacy in anti-corruption measures. (42) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
National Action Plan for the Application of ILO Conventions	Establishes a framework for implementing ILO Conventions 138 and 182 by coordinating the activities of ministries, departments, and local government authorities. (41,66) Includes activities for the annual monitoring of the cotton harvest; however, national monitoring did not take place during the reporting period. (6) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement other aspects of this policy during the reporting period.
Action Plan on Improving Working Conditions, Employment, and Social Protection of Workers in Agriculture (2016–2018)	Articulated the government's commitment to improving conditions for hiring of workers in agriculture, strengthening the Feedback Mechanism and national monitoring to prevent child and forced labor, providing additional information and guidance to advance decent work, increasing mechanization of agriculture, and improving social protection for workers in agriculture. (67-69) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Cabinet of Ministers Order 909F	Outlines steps to ensure decent working conditions by preventing child and forced labor. Lays out the government's intentions to improve monitoring and feedback mechanisms, and to continue working with ILO and the World Bank to develop information materials and conduct public awareness campaigns on child and forced labor. (41) In 2018, the government's awareness-raising campaign included advertisements on television and radio; print materials including roadside banners and brochures; and 3 million text messages. The Minister of Employment and Labor Relations hosted press conferences throughout the cotton harvest. (5)

In 2018, the government continued to implement policies aimed at attracting a greater volume of voluntary workers to assist with the cotton harvest. These included raising wages for cotton pickers, raising the price offered to farmers for cotton, and creating a legal and economic framework to spur the creation of private business partnerships called “clusters” along the cotton value chain (from farm to finished products). (5,6) A small number of pilot clusters began operating in the cotton supply chain in 2018; about half of these were financed by foreign direct investment, and were not subject to government quotas or management. (5,6,22) However, the government maintained production policies that mandate harvest quotas, offering strong incentives for local administrators to mobilize forced labor, which in turn creates an ongoing risk that children may be mobilized if local authorities do not adhere to national legislation, including bans on the use of child labor. (50,57) However, there was no evidence of mobilization of children during the 2018 cotton harvest. (5,18,24)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Support for the Implementation of the Decent Work Country Program in Uzbekistan (2014–2019)	$6 million USDOL-funded project awarded to ILO to enhance the capacity of the government and workers' and employers' representatives to prevent and reduce child and forced labor and promote decent work in Uzbekistan. (71,72) In 2018, the project launched local-level working groups of officials and citizens involved in the recruitment of temporary seasonal agricultural laborers in Jizzakh and Ferghana and provided training on fair recruitment practices. Also developed capacity-building action plans for the Ministries of Education and Health on the prevention and elimination of child labor and forced labor. (49) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

Program	Description
Efforts to Prevent Child Labor in the Cotton Harvest	Includes initiatives to provide extracurricular activities for students who might otherwise participate in the cotton harvest after school, and raise awareness about the prohibition of child labor in the harvest. (65) This program was active in 2018, holding 10 informational seminars for youth on child labor. (6,24) In addition, MOELR carried out 3,155 events, including seminars, roundtables, publications in newspapers, websites, and radio and television ads, reaching an estimated 83,000 individuals. These events highlighted issues of compliance with labor, employment and labor protection legislation, the procedure for conducting inspections, the eradication of forced labor, and the prevention of child labor. (24)
Global Partnership for Education	Multilateral initiative to coordinate the efforts of developing countries, donors, international organizations, teachers, NGOs, and the private sector to secure universal access to quality education in developing countries. During the reporting period, a new education sector plan for 2019–2023 was developed by the education ministries and stakeholders with the support of UNICEF. (73-75)
School Assistance†	Ministry of Public Education program to provide winter clothes and other educational resources for needy families to support school attendance. (16,41) The government continued to support this program in 2018. (6)
Family Support Assistance†	Government program that provides an allowance to low-income families on the condition that their children continue their education up to age 18. (6,41) In 2018, the government provided allowance to low-income families with 405,801 children. (24)
Child Protection Assistance†	UNICEF program with the government to develop a national child protection system to prevent child abuse, exploitation, and violence, and to respond to children who are victims or at risk. (6,76) The government continued to cooperate with UNICEF on this program in 2018. (6)
National Rehabilitation Center†	MOELR-operated shelter that provides human trafficking victims with emergency medical and social services and assists in social rehabilitation. (6,65) The government continued to support this program in 2018. (6)
Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations' Fund for Community Works†	Offers the unemployed opportunities for paid public works, including seasonal agricultural work. Matches job seekers with labor needs in the cotton harvest to reduce the risk of forced labor. (45,77) The government continued to operate this program in 2018 to attract workers to areas of Uzbekistan where there were insufficient local populations to meet cotton harvest quotas. (6,24)

† Program is funded by the Government of Uzbekistan.

Although there are programs to address child labor in the cotton sector, research did not find evidence of programs designed to address child labor in other sectors, such as scrap metal collection.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Uzbekistan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Criminally prohibit and penalize the use of a child for prostitution.	2015 – 2018
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
Enforcement	Publish information about the labor inspectorate's funding, number of unannounced inspections, number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, and number of penalties imposed that were collected.	2015 – 2018
	Continue to increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2015 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors are permitted to self-initiate unannounced inspections in all sectors, even if no complaint has been filed.	2018
	Publish data on criminal law enforcement efforts related to child labor.	2011 – 2018
	Reinstate national monitoring of the cotton harvest by the Coordination Council on Child Labor and Forced Labor, and extend monitoring to the spring weeding season, to continue building the capacity of local institutions to track and respond to cases of child labor in cotton production.	2018
Coordination	Publish information on the actions of the coordination bodies to fulfill their mandates.	2018

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Revise policies that mandate cotton harvest quotas to help prevent forced involvement of children under age 18 in the cotton harvest.	2012 – 2018
	Continue to allow independent observers unrestricted access to monitor labor conditions during the cotton harvest through unannounced site visits and sanction officials who harass or obstruct independent monitors.	2017 – 2018
	Publish information on actions taken to implement each of the specific policies and action plans established to address child labor.	2018
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2018
	Expand programs to address the worst forms of child labor in sectors other than cotton harvesting.	2009 – 2018

In 2018, Vanuatu made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government reactivated the National Child Protection Working Group, which had been inactive since 2014. The Ambae volcano erupted in July, which forced more than 10,000 residents to relocate to neighboring islands. Children experienced long interruptions to their education and may be more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor due to the eruption and subsequent evacuations. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Vanuatu engage in dangerous tasks in forestry. Vanuatu's minimum ages of 14 for work and 15 for hazardous work do not comply with international standards. In addition, the government did not respond to requests for information related to labor law enforcement or criminal law enforcement efforts related to eliminating child labor. Also, Vanuatu lacks a referral mechanism for criminal authorities to refer cases to social services for children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Vanuatu engage in dangerous tasks in forestry. (1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Vanuatu. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		93.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2013, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (2) Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2019. (3)

In July 2018, the Government of Vanuatu issued a mandatory evacuation order for the 10,000 residents on the Island of Ambae due to volcanic activity. Residents were relocated to nearby islands in temporary shelters. (4) The government closed all schools on Ambae, and students were accommodated on neighboring islands in temporary education facilities which lacked the proper infrastructure and resources. (5) Because of the volcanic eruption, children experienced long gaps in their education. While there were no reports of increased child labor after the volcanic eruption, children in Vanuatu may be more vulnerable to child labor and the worst forms of child labor following the disaster. (6,7) Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Forestry, including logging (1,7,8)
Services	Street vending (1,7,8)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Vanuatu lacks data to determine the nature and prevalence of child labor in the country. (1,7-9) Children living in remote areas face difficulties accessing education, increasing the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (10,11)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Vanuatu has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Vanuatu's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Section 38 of the Employment Act (12)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	15	Section 40 of the Employment Act (12)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Section 40 of the Employment Act (12)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Section 7 of the Employment Act; Section 102 of the Penal Code; Organized Crime Act (12-14)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 35 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act (14)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 101B–D and 147A–B of the Penal Code (13)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Section 35 of the Penal Code (13)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

† No standing military (15)

The minimum age for work does not meet international standards because the Employment Act permits children as young as age 14 to work. (12) The Employment Act permits children ages 12 and 13 to work in agricultural light work, but it does not specify the activities and hours per week that are allowed. (9,12) The government has yet to pass the Employment Relations Bill of 2012 that prohibits the engagement of children under the age of 18 in hazardous work, and it has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (10,16,17) The minimum age of 15 for hazardous work does not comply with international standards and does not protect children from work that could jeopardize their health and safety. (12)

Laws related to forced labor are not sufficient, as debt bondage is not criminally prohibited. (9,12,13) In addition, the Penal Code does not include heightened penalties for inciting children to engage in criminal activities, including drug production and drug trafficking. (13) Although it does not appear that there are any laws that provide free basic education, the Primary Education School Fee Grant Policy sufficiently provides free basic education in government-owned schools for children in grades one to six. (18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Labor and Ministry of Justice and Community Services that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor	Enforces provisions set forth in the Employment Act, including child labor laws. (9)
Ministry of Justice and Community Services (MJCS)	Supports agencies that review laws, draft new laws, and implement relevant UN Conventions. (19) The Child Desk strengthens national planning, integrates international goals (e.g., United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child), develops a system of protection for children, and supports community efforts to prevent child abuse. (19,20)
Vanuatu Police Force	Enforces all criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (9)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Vanuatu took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including not making labor law enforcement information publically available.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The Government of Vanuatu did not respond to requests for information on labor law enforcement efforts. Vanuatu lacks a referral mechanism to connect enforcement authorities and social services due to a lack of inter-agency protocol development between different services. (6-8)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Vanuatu took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (1)	Unknown (8)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (1)	Unknown (8)

Number of Convictions	Unknown (1)	Unknown (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (1)	Unknown (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (1)	No (8)

The Government of Vanuatu did not respond to requests for information on criminal law enforcement efforts related to child labor. (8) Based on the most recent data available from 2012, the Vanuatu Police Force employs 50 investigators, who are responsible for enforcing laws against the worst forms of child labor. Although the police have established standard operating procedures to attend to child victims, there is no formal referral mechanism between the police and social services. (6-8,21)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Child Protection Working Group	Serves as the primary forum for exchanging information on child protection and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Chaired by the Director General of the Ministry of Justice and Community Services and comprises representatives from the government, UN agencies, civil society organizations, and NGOs. (1,22-24) The coordinating body was reactivated during the reporting period, but research was unable to determine whether this coordinating body had regular meetings or implemented any programming. Reports indicate that the group lacks a national policy on eliminating commercial sexual exploitation of children and that government funding is insufficient. (6-8)
Kastom (custom)	Serves as the primary informal method to handle child protection issues in Vanuatu. Comprising informal service providers, including religious leaders, women's groups, and NGOs, children are referred through Kastom for services. (6-8,25)

Although the government has established a National Child Protection Working Group to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children, research found no evidence that there is a coordinating mechanism to address all forms of child labor. (1) Although Kastom is a common mechanism used locally to address child protection issues, research found there is a lack of established inter-agency protocols and procedures between Kastom and governmental offices—including the Vanuatu Police Force—to sufficiently coordinate and ensure that child protection services are provided. (6-8)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including in implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Vanuatu National Child Protection Policy (2016–2026)	Aims to create an environment that protects children from abuse, exploitation, human trafficking, neglect, and violence. Provides children with equitable access to services to support reintegration and recovery when needed. (23) However, this policy continues to leave children vulnerable to exploitation, as the responsible offices suffer from a lack of human resources and lack of funding to fully implement the National Child Protection Policy, which leaves children vulnerable to illicit activities. (7,8) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Vanuatu National Child Protection Policy during the reporting period.
Vanuatu Child Safeguarding Policy (2017–2020)	Provides guidelines for protecting children from abuse, including child labor, violence, sexual abuse, neglect, and exploitation. Provides a reporting mechanism for identifying and responding to child abuse. (1,26) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Vanuatu Child Safeguard Policy during the reporting period.
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)†	A multinational strategic framework, comprising 14 South Pacific nations, created to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (27)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (20)

The National Child Protection Policy aims to protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (1,23) There are no set standards or requirements that child protection providers, services, or agents must follow, and the National Child Protection Policy does not mandate registering child protection agents or maintaining a cohesive register of civil society organizations tasked with protecting children. (7,8,23) Vanuatu does not have a child protection law that directs the government's responsibility to regulate resources to safeguard children or provide resources and legal aid to children and their families. While the government acknowledges these gaps and is developing a Child Protection Bill, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to continue implementing the Vanuatu National Child Protection Policy or the Vanuatu Child Safeguarding Policy during the reporting period. (6,7)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including sufficient funding.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Education School Fee Grant†	Funded by the Government of Vanuatu's Ministry of Education; provides funding directly to primary schools to manage. Funds are disbursed to students in Years 1 through 6 to offset education costs. (18) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Education School Fee Grant program during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Vanuatu

Research was unable to determine whether the Vanuatu Education School Fee Grant program contained child labor elimination policies or efforts.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Vanuatu (Table 11).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2014 – 2018
	Establish a minimum age for work of at least 15 years.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure the engagement of children under the age of 18 in hazardous work is prohibited by passing the Employment Relations Bill of 2012.	2016 – 2018
	Determine by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children after consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that the law protects children ages 12 and 13 employed in light agricultural work by specifying the activities and hours per week that are allowed.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that debt bondage is criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the law specifically prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminalizes the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Establish a law providing free basic public education.	2016 – 2018
	Establish by law a compulsory education age that extends to the minimum age for employment.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	Finalize and implement the Child Protection Bill.	2018
	Publish information on child labor law enforcement efforts undertaken, including labor inspectorate funding, the number of child labor violations found, and the number of child labor penalties imposed.	2012 – 2018
	Publish information on the number of criminal law enforcement efforts undertaken, including the number of child labor investigations initiated, the number of child labor penalties imposed, and the number of criminal law enforcement convictions secured.	2012 – 2018
	Establish and sufficiently fund referral mechanisms among the Department of Labor, the Vanuatu Police Force, and social welfare services to protect and rehabilitate children involved in child labor, including its worst forms.	2014 – 2018
Coordination	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2016 – 2018
	Establish a coordinating mechanism to combat child labor, including its worst forms.	2012 – 2018
	Establish inter-agency protocols and a referral and coordination mechanism between Kastom and government child protection services.	2018
Government Policies	Ensure the National Child Protection Working Group convenes regularly-scheduled meetings. Ensure the working group is sufficiently funded by the government and drafts and implements a national policy on eliminating commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2018
	Ensure the National Child Protection Policy and the Child Safeguarding Policy address all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as the use of children in illicit activities.	2016 – 2018
Social Programs	Publish information about activities undertaken to implement the Vanuatu National Child Protection Policy and the Child Safeguarding Policy.	2017 – 2018
	Collect and publish data, such as a national child labor survey, to determine the prevalence and nature of child labor in Vanuatu.	2014 – 2018
	Increase access to education for children living in remote locations.	2012 – 2018
	Implement programs to address child labor, specifically in forestry and street vending.	2012 – 2018
	Continue to reopen schools, and ensure that disaster relief efforts include measures to provide education access to all affected children and prevent children from engaging in child labor and the worst forms of child labor.	2018
	Ensure the Education School Fee Grant program is sufficiently funded.	2018

For the 2018 reporting period, no assessment has been made regarding Wallis and Futuna's efforts to advance the elimination of the worst forms of child labor because there is no evidence of a child labor problem in Wallis and Futuna. In addition, the country has a good legal and enforcement framework on child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Wallis and Futuna. Wallis and Futuna has a population of 11,568 inhabitants, including 4,360 under the age of 20. (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Wallis and Futuna is considered a French Overseas Collectivity, and, as such, cannot ratify international conventions. However, France's ratification of such conventions applies to Wallis and Futuna. (1,2) France has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

French law applies in Wallis and Futuna. (1,2) The Government of France has established laws and regulations related to child labor, which are in line with relevant international standards (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 118 of the Labor Code of Wallis and Futuna (3)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 115 of the Labor Code of Wallis and Futuna (3)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles R234-6 of the Labor Code; Decree No. 2013-915, Relative to Work That is Prohibited and Regulated for Young People Less Than 18 Years (4,5)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 212-1, 224-1, 225-4-1, 225-14-1, 225-14-2, and 711-1 of the Penal Code; Article 2 of the Labor Code of Wallis and Futuna (3,6)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 225-4-1 to 225-4-9 and 711-1 of the Penal Code (6)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 225-5 to 12 and 711-1 of the Penal Code (6)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 222-35, 227-15 to 227-28-3, and 711-1 of the Penal Code (6)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 461-7 of the Penal Code (6)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles L131-1 and L161-1 of the Education Code of France (7)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

Even with no evidence of a problem, the Government of France has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Service of Labor and Social Laws Inspectorate (SITAS)	Enforces labor laws and report violations involving children to local social assistance personnel. (1,10,11-12) Under the joint authority of the Ministry of Labor and Ministry of Overseas Territories. Officers in SITAS work as social and education child counselors. (1)
Defender of Rights	Promotes children's rights, including through the prohibition of child labor. (13)
French National Police	Oversees the health and safety of children. (11)
Prime Minister's Office	Coordinates activities between the Ministries of Overseas Territories, Justice, National Education, and Labor in Wallis and Futuna. (1)

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, there are no actions needed to advance the continued prevention of child labor in Wallis and Futuna.

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, the Palestinian Authority made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the areas of the West Bank under its control. The Ministry of Education and Higher Education improved training for teachers and began building more classrooms and equipping them with digital facilities to improve learning at schools. The Palestinian Authority also cooperated with the United Nations Children’s Fund and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East to provide educational services to 280,000 students and emergency school supplies to more than 14,700 students. However, children in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in construction and illicit activities. Children also engage in child labor in street vending. The legal framework does not criminally prohibit all elements of child trafficking, and labor inspectors are not authorized to assess penalties. In addition, programs to prevent or eliminate child labor are insufficient.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in construction and illicit activities. Children also engage in child labor in street vending. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report. The Palestinian Authority (PA) declined to meet or provide information for inclusion in this report, in contrast to previous years.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Children are vulnerable to child labor in the agricultural sector, partly because the Palestinian Authority (PA) does not have jurisdiction or the resources to enforce laws in Area C’s agricultural fields and Israeli settlements in the West Bank. (3,8,9,20) West Bank Palestinian girls are vulnerable to sex and labor trafficking in Israel after family members force them into marriages with older men; these girls experience physical and sexual abuse, threats of violence, and restricted movement. (22)

In the Gaza Strip, many school structures that were damaged, destroyed, or repurposed during the war of 2014 have not been repaired or replaced. (3) Most schools in the Gaza Strip work on a double-shift schedule, limiting class time to only 4 hours each day. (24,25) In the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, violence perpetrated by Palestinians and Israeli settlers, military operations that have impacted schools in session, delays at checkpoints, and school closures hinder children’s access to schools. (26-32) Schools are overcrowded, poorly equipped, and, at times, unhygienic or susceptible to weather conditions. (33,34) Violence and discrimination by teachers against students who work, as well as the cost of transportation, contribute to a school dropout rate of 16 percent. (10,35,36) According to Save the Children, in 2018 there were at least 78 incidences of school-related violence in the West Bank, affecting more than 26,000 children, and 4 schools were demolished, further limiting access to education. (37)

II. Legal Framework for Child Labor

The PA has Non-Member Observer status at the UN. In April 2014, PA officials presented letters of accession to 15 UN treaties to UN officials, including the UN CRC and its Optional Protocol on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict. In December 2017, PA officials acceded to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons and the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	N/A
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The penal code applicable to the West Bank is Jordanian Law No. 16 of 1960 (Jordanian Penal Code for the West Bank). The penal code applicable to Gaza is Penal Code No. 74 of 1936, which was enacted during the British Mandate (Penal Code for Gaza). (38) The PA has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 93 of the Labor Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip; Article 14 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (39,40)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 95 of the Labor Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (40)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 1 of Minister of Labor’s Decree on Hazardous Work for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (41)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Article 1 of Minister of Labor's Decree on Hazardous Work for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (41)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Article 1 of Minister of Labor's Decree on Hazardous Work for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (41)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Article 36 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip; Articles 306 and 310 of the Jordanian Penal Code for the West Bank; Articles 165 and 167 of the Penal Code for the Gaza Strip (39,42,43)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 27 and 44 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip; Article 389 of the Jordanian Penal Code for the West Bank; Article 193 of the Penal Code for the Gaza Strip (39,42,43)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes†	18	Article 46 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (39)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 46 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (39)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 3, 15, and 18 of the Palestinian Education Act for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (44)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 37 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (39)

* No conscription in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (20)

† No standing military in the West Bank (20)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

Although human trafficking and forced labor are on the hazardous work list, the law does not criminally prohibit child trafficking or forced labor in accordance with international standards. (40,41) The law does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation, because the use of children in prostitution and the use, procurement, or offering of children for pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. (43) There are no criminal penalties for recruiting children into non-state armed groups. (39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The PA has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder effective enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL), Labor Inspection Office	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (45)
Ministry of Social Affairs (MOSA), Child Protection Department	Protects children's rights, including through the provision of services to children found involved in the worst forms of child labor. (46)
Police	Investigates violations of criminal laws, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (46)
Office of the Attorney General	Prosecutes cases of child exploitation, including child labor. (46)

In the West Bank, under the terms of the Oslo-era agreements between the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Israeli Government, the PA has civil law jurisdiction in the areas of the West Bank designated Area A and Area B, which represent approximately 39 percent of the West Bank's land area and contain approximately

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

94 percent of the Palestinian population. The Israeli Government has full administrative and security control over the city of Jerusalem and Area C; the latter represents 61 percent of the West Bank's land area and approximately 6 percent of the Palestinian population, as well as the vast majority of the West Bank's agricultural areas. (47-50) Although PA laws ostensibly apply to both the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, the PA had limited means to enforce compliance in Area C of the West Bank as well as in the Gaza Strip, where Hamas exercises de facto control and does not enforce PA laws and regulations. (48,50)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in the West Bank took actions to combat child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In previous years, the Ministry of Labor reported that it was unable to inspect as many businesses per year as required by the Labor Law, due to insufficient funding. (3,12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in the West Bank took actions to combat child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown	Unknown
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A

Number of Investigations	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to The Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (12)	Yes (12)

PA officials previously stated that insufficient resources hampered their capacity to enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The PA has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee on Child Labor	Intends to create national policy on child labor. Led by the MOL and includes representatives from four other ministries, as well as international organizations. (17) Research was unable to determine which activities were conducted by the National Committee on Child Labor during the reporting period.
MOSA Child Protection Networks	Coordinates at the district level among service providers, law enforcement, and the Attorney General to protect vulnerable children, including those involved in child labor. Composed of MOSA, other Palestinian Authority agencies, and international organizations. (46) The role of some agencies is to provide services to vulnerable children; others ensure that crimes against children are prosecuted in accordance with the law. (46) In 2018, Child Protection Networks cooperated with UNICEF to provide children with protection interventions, such as life skills trainings. (52)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the PA has established policies to address child labor.

The National Policy Agenda (2017–2022) aims to alleviate poverty through social programs for vulnerable groups and job creation programs for women and youth, improve primary and secondary school curricula, ensure equal access to education for marginalized areas, and ensure that technical and vocational training is aligned with labor market needs. (53) However, child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the PA funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
PA Vocational Centers†	PA program in the West Bank, consisting of 13 vocational centers operated by MOL, and 2 operated by MOSA for children over 15 who have dropped out of school. (46,54) Research was unable to determine what steps were taken in 2018 in the implementation of this program.
UN Education Programs	UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) programs that provide educational support for children and youth in refugee camps, as well as microfinance and other forms of support to families in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. (55) In 2018, UNICEF and its partners distributed emergency stationary and school bags to more than 14,700 students in Gaza and provided remedial education to more than 57,000 students at risk of dropping out, with the objective of helping them catch up with their peers. UNICEF also provided more than 5,900 students and 178 teachers with protective presence on their way to and from school in vulnerable areas. (56) In addition, UNICEF trained 688 teachers and school counselors and about 400 school principals on positive discipline, and trained 900 students on peer mediation to report and mitigate violence at schools. (57) UNRWA operated schools in Gaza, providing education to 280,000 children in 2018. (58)

† Program is funded by the PA.

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Education and Higher Education continued the seventh, eighth, and ninth grade vocational training classes that were launched in 2017. The Ministry also improved training and increased wages for teachers, and began building more classrooms and equipping them with digital facilities to improve learning at schools. (59)

Although there are programs in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in construction, street work, illicit activities, and agriculture.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the West Bank (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits all stages of child trafficking, including trafficking for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation, and both domestic and international trafficking, in accordance with international standards.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that slavery and practices similar to slavery, including forced labor, are criminally prohibited.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the use, procurement, and offering of children for all forms of commercial sexual exploitation are criminally prohibited.	2017 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that child labor laws are enforced in the Gaza Strip.	2010 – 2018
	Publish information on the labor and criminal enforcement of child labor laws, including the amount of funding, the number of labor inspectors, the number and type of inspections, the training provided to inspectors and investigators, the number of child labor violations, and penalties issued and collected, as well as the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions.	2010 – 2018
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties.	2016 – 2018
	Provide further resources and staff to the Ministry of Labor and the Ministry of Social Affairs to conduct labor inspections and criminal investigations.	2010 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2017 – 2018
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Policy Agenda and ensure that it is implemented.	2017 – 2018
Social Programs	Expand programs to improve access to education; for example, through ensuring that children are not subject to violence and that schools are weather-proof and provided with necessary equipment and hygienic facilities.	2011 – 2018
	Ensure that Ministry of Social Affairs social programs are implemented.	2017 – 2018
	Expand programs to further address child labor, specifically in construction, street work, illicit activities, and agriculture.	2010 – 2018

In 2018, Morocco made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Kingdom of Morocco claims the territory of Western Sahara and administers the area that it controls by the same constitution, laws, and structures as in internationally-recognized Morocco, including laws that deal with child labor. The government published information on criminal and labor law enforcement efforts, in addition to investigating and prosecuting criminal cases. Moreover, it continued to fund the Tayssir Conditional Cash Transfer Program, providing direct cash transfers to qualifying families whose children meet school attendance criteria, reaching more than 2 million students across both Morocco and Western Sahara in 2018. Limited research indicates that there is some evidence that children in Western Sahara engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, laws related to the minimum age for work and the use of children for illicit activities do not meet international standards. In addition, research could not determine whether penalties were imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor. The scope of government programs that target child labor is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Limited research indicates that there is some evidence that children in Western Sahara engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Commercial sexual exploitation of migrant girls occurs and is reportedly more prevalent in fishing villages and on fishing boats. (1) Children, particularly in rural areas, are vulnerable to child labor due to educational barriers similar to those faced in internationally-recognized Morocco, such as insufficient facilities, lack of reliable and safe transportation, and unqualified teachers. (1-4) In general, research has not been conducted to determine the extent of child labor in Western Sahara, nor has research explored levels of education as they relate to children engaged in child labor in Western Sahara. Data on key indicators of children’s work and education are not available from the sources used in this report. (5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Moroccan-controlled portion of the territory of Western Sahara is subject to the same laws as internationally-recognized Morocco. (4,6-9) The Popular Front for the Liberation of the Saguia el-Hamra and Río de Oro (Polisario Front), an organization that seeks the territory’s independence, controls the remaining territory; information on the laws applicable in the remaining portion of the territory is unavailable. (3,4,9-11) Morocco has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor, which the Government of Morocco extends to the areas in Western Sahara that it controls (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government of Morocco has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in Morocco’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including with the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 4 of Royal Decree of 9 June 1966 (16)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes	19	Article 4 of Law No. 44-18 (17)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 448.1 and 448.4 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings (14)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 1 of Law No. 04-00 (18)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 1 of Law No. 04-00 (18)

Following the passage of the Law on Setting Up Employment Conditions of Domestic Workers in 2016, the law entered into force on October 2, 2018; however, despite regulations to inform agencies on implementing the law, there remain enforcement issues, such as the inability of labor inspectors to inspect closed private residences, where many domestic workers are employed. (4,8) In 2018, the government drafted legislation to enhance enforcement abilities in the artisanal sector, specifically allowing labor inspectors to enter into private workshops employing any number of employees. (19,20) In addition, in 2018, the government instated military conscription for the national armed forces with an age of 19. (11,21)

However, the law does not provide explicit protections for self-employed children, those who work in the traditional artisan or handicraft sectors for businesses with fewer than five employees, or those who work on private farms and in residences. Despite assurances from the Government of Morocco that inspectors may inspect in the case of any established labor relationship, often verified through witnesses in the absence of contracts, there is an absence of explicit legal protections that conform to international standards requiring all children to be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (9,12,20,22-24) The types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not fully cover sectors in which child labor is known to occur or sectors in which work may occur under conditions that harm children's health, safety, and morals. (13) Moroccan law does not define using, procuring, and offering children for either the production and trafficking of drugs as a separate crime, nor does it provide for increased penalties in such cases. (8,25)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The Government of Morocco has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3). Information about labor law and criminal law enforcement in Western Sahara is unavailable.

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Vocational Integration (MOLVI)	Enforces child labor laws and oversees programs on child labor through its child labor task force. (19,22,25,26) Provides occupational health and safety services, administers social security, and organizes labor inspections and employment services through nationwide satellite offices. (26)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of the Interior	Enforces prohibitions on human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and other exploitative crimes involving minors, as established in the Penal Code, through the General Directorate of National Security (DGSN). (4,19,22)
General Prosecutor	Prosecutes criminal offenses against children and processes cases involving women and children within the court system through the Child Labor Units. (3,4,19)
Ministry of Solidarity, Women, Family, and Social Development (MSWFSD)	Ensures continuity of child protection and child labor elimination efforts and expands children's access to education. (27) Implements the Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children. (22,28) Supports 142 Child Reception Centers that provide services to child victims of violence. (25)
Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation	Coordinates efforts to reduce migrant vulnerability to child labor through its Delegate Ministry in Charge of Moroccans Living Abroad and Migration Affairs. Promotes migrant children's access to public education facilities in addition to other social services and assistance. (3,26,29)
Ministry of National Education, Vocational Training, Higher Education, and Scientific Research	Provides education and job training to former child workers, including former child domestic workers and migrant youth. (22,25)

In 2018, the Office of the General Prosecutor selected two prosecutors from the court of appeals in Laayoune as responsible for handling human trafficking cases. (11,19)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The Government of Morocco has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Technical Committee Under the Special Ministerial Commission for the Protection and Improvement of Childhood	Ensures inter-sectoral coordination and monitoring of the implementation of international conventions on children's issues through a committee of 25 government bodies, chaired by the Head of the Government of Morocco. Establishes strategies and mechanisms to implement national policies and plans in the area of child protection and in coordination efforts managed primarily at the local and regional levels. (25,30) In 2018, the committee met twice to coordinate inter-agency policies and programs, and to create an action plan for 2019. (4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
MSWFSD's Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children in Morocco (PPIPEM)	Promotes an interdisciplinary approach to respond to child exploitation, among other issues. (22,26,28,30) Stakeholders in the PPIEM confirmed that formal meetings for review and discussion of progress related to the policy were held during the reporting period. (20)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the Government of Morocco funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which extended to Western Sahara (Table 6). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors, particularly with children who are victims of commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 6. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Taysir Conditional Cash Transfer Program†	MSWFSD program that provides direct cash transfers to qualifying families whose children meet school attendance criteria, aiming to increase school enrollment and reduce dropout rates, particularly in rural areas, with 832,500 project participants in 2015–2016 and 509,475 in 2016–2017. (4,9,26,28,31-33) In 2018, the program provided assistance to 2,087,200 students from low-income families. (4)

† Program is funded by the Government of Morocco.

‡ The Government of Morocco had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (3,8,26,31,32,34)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, the Government of Morocco continued a regularization campaign to provide legal status and documentation to foreign migrants. (19) Although the government has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including with regard to children who are victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (3,8,26,35)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Western Sahara (Table 7).

Table 7. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws prohibit children from being used, procured, or offered in illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that all children are protected by law, including children who are self-employed, work for artisan and handicraft businesses with fewer than five employees, or work on private farms and in residences.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under 18 are comprehensive, including work that may be undertaken in conditions that harm children's health, safety, and morals.	2016 – 2018
Social Programs	Conduct a comprehensive study of children's work activities to determine whether they are engaged in or at risk of becoming involved in child labor, and determine the number of child laborers and education levels.	2013 – 2018
	Remove barriers to rural children's ability to access educational opportunities.	2015 – 2018
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, including child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.	2017 – 2018

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2018, Yemen made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Republic of Yemen Government participated in UNICEF programs that provided educational and social services. However, despite initiatives to address child labor, Yemen is receiving this assessment because it continued to implement practices that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. The government did not make efforts to combat chattel slavery by investigating and prosecuting cases, and it failed to make efforts to address discrimination in schools against children from the Muhamasheen community, leading to their increased vulnerability to child labor. Furthermore, there is evidence of recruitment and use of children in hostilities by state armed forces in contravention of Yemeni law. Children in Yemen engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and armed conflict. Children also engage in child labor in fishing. Due to the ongoing armed conflict, the internationally recognized Republic of Yemen Government worked to operationalize government ministries in its temporary capital, Aden, but was unable to provide sufficient demobilization and rehabilitation services to children who have been recruited and used by various groups engaged in armed conflict, or who have engaged in other worst forms of child labor. The rebel Houthi movement that controls a significant amount of territory in Yemen, including the occupation of Yemen's capital city, Sana'a, made no effort to address child labor concerns in areas under their control, and would not allow researchers access to survey the population on child labor indicators.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Yemen engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and armed conflict. (1-5) Children also engage in child labor in fishing. (6-8) According to the 2010 National Child Labor Survey, most working children were in the agricultural and domestic work sectors. (6) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Yemen.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Protracted civil war in Yemen continued in 2018, a situation that the UN called the worst humanitarian crisis in the world. (31) As of December 2018, over 22 million Yemenis were in need of humanitarian assistance, including 18 million who were food insecure, 2 million of whom were children. (31-33) An additional 1.8 million children are severely malnourished. (33) Approximately 2 million Yemenis were internally displaced, half of them children, and an additional 1 million were internally displaced persons (IDPs) who were returning to their homes even though it was not yet safe. (32,34,35) Yemen was also home to approximately 280,000 refugees and asylum seekers, mostly from Somalia and Ethiopia. Over 20 percent of these refugees were children. (36) Vulnerable populations, including IDPs and refugees, were at increased risk of child labor and human trafficking. (37,38)

Various armed groups, including the Houthis or Houthi-affiliated militias, terrorist groups, and pro-government forces, recruited and used child soldiers to serve as fighters or checkpoint guards. In addition, the Yemeni Armed Forces recruited and used children, typically ages 15 to 17, for these same purposes in contravention of Yemeni law. (3-5,21,22,27-29) An international organization reported armed groups used both boys and girls in combat and to guard checkpoints and military facilities during the reporting period. This is largely due to endemic customs and culture in which tribal leaders arm children to participate in local militias that may support the government, back the Houthi movement, act as an anti-Houthi force, or be part of an unaligned tribal, local, or regional group that protects the respective village from rival tribes or other outsiders. (39) Limited evidence also points to recruitment of Yemeni and Sudanese children into the Coalition forces as a result of human trafficking. (30) Some child soldiers are subjected to sexual violence. (3,22) Armed groups provide financial incentives and qat, a mild narcotic that is legal in Yemen, for child recruitment, exacerbating the problem. (3,40,41)

There is evidence of chattel slavery, as children are owned, sold, and inherited as property particularly in Al Hajjah, Al Hudaydah, and Al Mahwit governorates. (2,26,42,43) Yemeni children, mostly boys who migrate to Sana’a, Aden, and Saudi Arabia, are engaged in forced labor for domestic work, begging, or work in small shops. (2,26) Moreover, reports indicate that commercial sexual exploitation of children has increased over the past several years. Girls are subjected to human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation within Yemen in hotels and clubs located in Aden, Sana’a, Ta’iz, and other cities. (2,26)

There were 2,500 schools that were out of use, some partially or totally destroyed as a result of armed conflict, and some used as shelters. (44-46) According to UNICEF, more than 2 million children were unable to attend school. (44) Many families could not afford transportation costs to schools. (47) Approximately 75 percent of teachers in 11 governorates have not been paid since October 2016, disrupting the education of 3.7 million children. (34) The Republic of Yemen Government stated that Houthi forces have changed the school curricula in areas under their control to teach children about their ideology and have children attend militia events. (48)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Among the Muhamasheen (“marginalized”) minority group, generally of African origin, illiteracy rates are high, and child labor in the form of begging is prevalent. This community also suffers from general poverty and severe societal discrimination, including in distribution of humanitarian aid. (14,49-51) They also make up a large proportion of people living as IDPs. (46,51) Many Muhamasheen children do not have birth certificates, which are required for enrollment in schools. They face harassment, bullying, and violence at school, are dismissed from school, or are asked to clean the bathrooms, leading some to drop out. (50,51) Muhamasheen boys are vulnerable to sexual violence by armed actors, particularly while they engage in child labor, even if they are not directly involved in armed conflict. (50)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Yemen has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Yemen’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

While Article 248 of the Penal Code criminalizes buying, selling, and dealing in human beings, the legal framework does not appear to prohibit forced labor.

The legal framework does not adequately prohibit using, procuring, or offering a child in pornography and pornographic performances, or using a child in prostitution.

Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013 does not explicitly include all phases of child trafficking, such as harboring, transporting, and transferring children for exploitation. (52)

Research was unable to discover any law that criminally prohibits recruitment of children under 18 by non-state armed groups.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, research found no evidence that the Republic of Yemen Government's law enforcement agencies took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor's Child Labor Unit	Enforces child labor laws, conducts inspections, informs the Ministry of the Interior of any violations, and refers children found during inspections to appropriate social services. (8)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforces child labor laws. Police departments within the Ministry of the Interior handle human trafficking investigations. (8)
Ministry of Justice	Enforces child labor laws; prosecutes and adjudicates child labor cases. (8)
Ministry of Human Rights, Ministry of Legal Affairs, Parliament, and the Social Fund for Development	Maintains supporting roles in combating child trafficking. (8)

The Republic of Yemen Government had limited operational control over its ministries and remained unable to enforce regulations. (7)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Yemen took actions to combat child labor during the reporting period.

According to the latest available information on this topic, in 2016, the Republic of Yemen Government was unable to enforce child labor laws due to the civil war. (7) Likewise, in 2016, no funding or training were provided for labor inspection, and there was no mechanism to receive child labor complaints. (7)

The Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor does not have the authority to enforce child labor laws in casual employment, farming, and domestic work. (57)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Yemen took actions to combat child labor.

According to the latest available information on this topic, in 2017, the Republic of Yemen Government did not take any proactive steps to investigate or prosecute the practice of chattel slavery. (26)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 6. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor	Coordinates child labor issues in Yemen. Comprises representatives from the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor; other state agencies, ILO-IPEC, and local NGOs. (8) Research was unable to determine whether the National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor was active during the reporting period.
National Network for Child Protection	Implements training programs and media awareness campaigns, and advocates for progress on children's issues. (8) Research was unable to determine whether the National Network for Child Protection was active during the reporting period.
Joint Technical Committee to Prevent Recruitment of Children in the Yemeni Armed Forces	Implements and monitors the Action Plan to End and Prevent the Recruitment of Children by the Yemeni Armed Forces. In 2018, the Minister for Human Rights became the chairperson of the Joint Committee, which began developing a roadmap for implementing the Action Plan. (58)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 7). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 7. Key Policies Related to Child Labor‡

Policy	Description
Action Plan to End and Prevent the Recruitment of Children by the Yemeni Armed Forces	Ensures that national laws comply with international standards, prohibits the recruitment and use of children in armed forces, investigates allegations of violations, and facilitates UN access to monitor compliance. (59) The Republic of Yemen Government began developing a roadmap to implement this Action Plan. The government also began developing standard operating procedures on the release of children previously engaged in armed conflict. (58) The government took some action in criticizing or condemning the active and aggressive rebel recruitment of child soldiers, including public press statements, and expressed its commitment to properly address this crime; however, during the reporting period, militia forces—including some aligned with the legitimate government—continued to unlawfully recruit and use some child soldiers. Verified cases of the unlawful recruitment and use of child soldiers occurred with some familial knowledge or consent, and monetary and material support were utilized as incentives for joining the army, and to a lesser extent forced enrollment via abductions. (39)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (60,61)

Although the Republic of Yemen Government has adopted the Action Plan to End and Prevent the Recruitment of Children by the Yemeni Armed Forces, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of services to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 8. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Protection Activities	UNICEF-funded programs designed to provide psychosocial support, including access to sports and arts, in community-based and mobile centers. (62) In 2018, UNICEF provided 4,055 teachers and social workers with training on psychosocial support. (34)
Educational Activities	UNICEF-funded programs conducted in cooperation with the Republic of Yemen Government that provide educational support activities and services. (62) In 2018, UNICEF secured $70 million to provide cash incentives for 135,000 teachers who have not been paid in over 2 years. UNICEF and its partners also rehabilitated 18 schools and 218 school latrines, supporting access to education for over 204,000 children. (34) In areas in which schools were unavailable, UNICEF helped provide community based classes for over 7,700 children. Approximately 42,000 children received schools supplies and bags. (34)

In 2018, the Arab Coalition, particularly the government of Saudi Arabia, which backs the internationally recognized Republic of Yemen Government, operated four rehabilitation centers in areas under the control of the Republic of Yemen Government, including in the city of Marib, for children previously engaged in armed conflict. (27,41)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Although the Republic of Yemen Government participates in programs that address child labor and access to education, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in commercial sexual exploitation, child soldiering, and fishing.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Yemen (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2018
	Ensure that forced labor and all phases of child trafficking are criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the law is sufficiently comprehensive to prohibit using a child for prostitution and using, procuring, and offering a child for pornography and pornographic performances.	2015 – 2018
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that children under age 18 cannot join Yemeni Armed Forces and pro-government militias to engage in combat.	2018
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate has the capacity to enforce labor laws, including reestablishing a mechanism to receive child labor complaints.	2015 – 2018
	Proactively identify, investigate, and remedy cases of chattel slavery.	2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors have proper funding and training to conduct inspections.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that authorities enforce minimum age protections in all sectors in which the worst forms of child labor are prevalent, including in agriculture and domestic work.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies enforce child labor laws.	2015 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2017 – 2018
Government Policies	Implement the Action Plan to End and Prevent the Recruitment of Children by the Yemeni Armed Forces.	2009 – 2018
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking.	2009 – 2018
Social Programs	Expand programs to improve children's equal access to education, particularly for child survivors of chattel slavery and child Muhamasheen .	2013 – 2018
	Institute a rehabilitation and reintegration program for children engaged in armed conflict and children involved in other worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and fishing.	2011 – 2018

In 2018, Zambia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government developed national action plans on Child Labor and Anti-Human Trafficking in line with Zambia's 7th National Development Plan. It also increased the number of inspectors, significantly increased the number of labor inspections conducted, identified 511 child labor law violations, and achieved 5 convictions for the crime of child trafficking. In addition, the government published studies that provide insights into child labor and child commercial sexual exploitation and included child labor for the first time in its Labor Force Survey. However, children in Zambia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. The Education Act does not specify a compulsory education age, and human trafficking laws are discordant with international standards because they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking. In addition, labor inspectors lack sufficient resources to enforce child labor laws.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Zambia engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Zambia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	28.1 (992,722)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	65.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	27.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		78.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2013, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (3)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's Analysis of Statistics from the Labour Force Survey, 2008. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Work in the production of cotton,† tobacco,† and other cash crops, including applying fertilizers, grading or ridging fields, harvesting crops, spraying pesticides,† transplanting, watering, and weeding crops (1,5,6)
	Raising and herding† cattle (1,6,7)
	Fishing,† working on boats, and cutting and smoking fish (6,8)
	Production of charcoal† (6)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Industry	Mining gems, including amethysts and emeralds (9)
	Mining ore, including lead, zinc, iron ore, and copper (9)
	Work in quarries, including carrying heavy loads,† conducting rudimentary mine drilling,† crushing stones, and scavenging mine dump sites (6,7,10)
Services	Domestic work (6,11,12)
	Street work, including begging and vending (6,11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2)
	Forced labor in agriculture, construction, domestic work, mining, and textile production, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children trafficked within Zambia are primarily trafficked from rural to urban areas for domestic work and forced labor in agriculture. (2,9,13) Some children in Zambia are forced by Jerabo gangs, which are illegal mining syndicates in the Copperbelt province, to load trucks with stolen copper ore. Along Zambia’s borders, the commercial sexual exploitation of children is common. (2) In September 2018, immigration authorities intercepted a truck with 23 Congolese nationals aboard, including 9 children, who were suspected of being victims of human trafficking. (14) In 2018, the Government of Zambia and UNICEF published studies on child poverty and violence against children. The study on child poverty reports that adolescents ages 14 to 17 are three times more likely to be engaged in child labor than children ages 5 to 13. (15) The study on violence against children reports that girls ages 13 to 17 are engaged in commercial sexual exploitation. (16) Although the government has conducted regular Labor Force Surveys and published the results in 2011, 2014, and 2016, it had yet to collect and release child labor data. To address this, in 2018, the government included a specific child labor module in the Labor Force Survey; the data are being analyzed and are scheduled for release in 2019. (17-19)

Long distances to schools create a barrier to education, particularly in rural areas. (1,20,21) Families also face costs for basic education, including fees for school supplies, which prevent some children from attending school. (1,12) Inadequate educational infrastructure, a lack of materials, and a high student-to-teacher ratio further hinder students. (6,21) In addition, the inability to access birth certificates and the prevalence of the early marriage of girls increase the vulnerability of children to child labor. Children without birth certificates are not able to enroll in school, and once girls marry, they are removed from school and sometimes required to work outside the household. (14,15,22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Zambia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in

Zambia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including an undefined age range for compulsory education and lack of a list of activities considered to be light work, as required by Zambian law.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

* No conscription (31)

The Employment of Young Persons and Children Amendment Act No.10 of 2004 calls for the identification of light work activities for children ages 13 to 15; however, these activities are not yet determined. (32) Penalties for adults convicted of engaging children in prostitution in the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act are different from those in the Penal Code. Although the Penal Code treats child prostitution as a felony, with a minimum 20-year jail sentence, the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act treats it differently and imposes a fine of $35 to $165 and possible discretionary prison time. (27,29) In addition, human trafficking provisions remain discordant with international standards because they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking. (28)

In February 2019, the Parliament approved the Employment Code Act, 2019, which consolidates all labor laws and will take effect in May 2019. (33)

The Education Act requires the government to provide free education up to the seventh grade and stipulates that education is compulsory for children of “school-going age.” (9,31) The Act, however, does not set a specific age or define “school-going age,” which may allow children to leave school before they are legally able to work. (31) The lack of standards in this area may increase the risk of children’s involvement in the worst forms of child labor.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Implements, enforces, and regulates child labor laws. (9,18,34) Advises other government agencies on child labor issues and coordinates government efforts to combat child labor. (6,18)
Ministry of Home Affairs	Enforces criminal laws against human trafficking, child commercial exploitation, use of children as soldiers, and use of children in illegal activities. (14)
Industrial Relations Court	Imposes penalties for child labor law violations. (14) Research was unable to determine whether the Industrial Relations Court imposed any sanctions for child labor violations in 2018.
Zambia Police Service Child Protection Unit	Works with MLSS, the District Street Children Committees, and the Ministry of Youth, Sports, and Child Development to identify and remove vulnerable children from the streets. Places rescued street children with families, in foster care, or in children's homes. (17) Works with immigration officials to combat child trafficking, with local officials to combat crimes against children, and with schools to educate and sensitize children about abuse. Collaborates with the Ministry of Justice to investigate and prosecute child labor cases. (14)
Zambia Police Service Victim Support Unit	Handles the enforcement of laws against human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. (34,35)
Ministry of Community Development and Social Welfare	Provides social services to victims of human trafficking or sexual abuse. Operates one government shelter in Luapula province and oversees two NGO shelters. (2,14)
Ministry of Justice	Investigates and prosecutes child labor cases. (36)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Zambia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MLSS that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws, including human and financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2017	2018

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (14)

In 2018, the MLSS increased the size of the inspectorate to 155 labor inspectors. (14) However, the number of labor inspectors likely remains insufficient for the size of Zambia's workforce, which includes approximately 6.9 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Zambia would employ about 172 inspectors. (38,39) The MLSS has stated that an insufficient budget, insufficient office space, inadequate training, and a lack of transportation and fuel have prevented it from adequately conducting inspections countrywide. (6,40) The MLSS conducts labor inspections in registered private institutions only; it does not conduct investigations, allowed by law, in unregistered institutions where child labor is more likely to be found. (41) In 2018, the MLSS removed 2,787 children from child labor. A referral mechanism exists through District Child Labor Committees that allows labor officers to refer cases to NGOs. (14) The government did not provide information on its labor inspectorate funding, penalties imposed and collected for child labor violations, and whether it conducted target inspections for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Zambia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the allocation of financial and human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2017	2018
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	N/A (6)	Yes (42)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (42)

In 2018, the government trained more than 1,000 law enforcement officials, coordinated with the government of Botswana to repatriate two Zambian minors trafficked to that country, and assisted 14 child victims of human trafficking. In addition, the government partnered with the IOM to refurbish a protective shelter for vulnerable migrants, including victims of human trafficking. (42) Despite these actions, government agencies do not have sufficient financial and human resources to address human trafficking, nor do they have consistent procedures to screen and identify human trafficking victims. Research did not uncover official reports of child commercial sexual exploitation cases. (42) The government did not provide information regarding criminal enforcement training, the number of child labor violations found, and whether penalties were imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that may hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MLSS-Child Labor Unit	Coordinates with District Child Labor Committees (DCLCs) in Zambia's 114 districts to increase local awareness and mobilize communities against child labor, including its worst forms. (9,34) In 2018, educated communities on the dangers of child labor and identified and withdrew victims of child labor in the town of Kaoma, in Western Province. In addition, coordinated the commemoration of the June 12 World Day Against Child Labor at district and community levels. (14,43)
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Anti-Human Trafficking	Leads efforts to address human trafficking. (42) In 2018, updated the National Action Plan on Human Trafficking, Mixed and Irregular Migration to strengthen the implementation of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act and better respond to cases of human trafficking. (42)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
DCLC	Responds to child labor complaints at the local level, files complaints to MLSS, and serves as the main referral mechanism for social welfare services. Comprises the Zambia Police Service; MLSS; the Ministry of Community Development, Mother, and Child Health; and civil society stakeholders. (14) In 2018, 40 DCLCs were active, including in areas where child labor in tobacco production is prevalent. (44,45)
National Steering Committee on Child Labor (NSCL)	Advises and oversees child labor matters, including implementation of the Hazardous Work Statutory Instrument. Comprises government representatives, employers, trade unions, and civil society members. (14,46) In 2018, NSCL developed the National Action Plan for Child Labor (2018–2022) and conducted awareness-raising activities. (14,44,46)

In 2018, the government carried out awareness-raising campaigns to combat human trafficking; in partnership with IOM, the government completed and operationalized a place of safety in Sesheke district; continued to upgrade shelters for vulnerable migrants, including victims of human trafficking in Chipata and Kapiri Mposhi districts; and worked with the UNODC to review human trafficking laws. Other activities included the reintegration of eight child victims of human trafficking back into their communities. (42) However, overlapping responsibilities and communication lapses among government agencies may hinder their ability to implement their mandates. (6,47)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of implementation of policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Policy	Sets strategies to address child labor issues. Strategies include working with local communities to develop programs to assist children who are vulnerable to child labor. (9,48) In 2018, the government developed the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (2018–2022), which will be reviewed by key stakeholders across the country before it is officially approved. The National Plan is part of the implementation of the Child Labor National Policy and is a follow-up to pledges made at the 2017 Global Conference on the Sustained Eradication of Child Labor. (33,49) It also conducted awareness-raising activities to prevent child labor. (50)
7th National Development Plan (2017–2021)	Outlines Zambia’s strategy to promote inclusive economic growth and national development. Seeks to improve access to quality education and reduce poverty by 20 percent by 2021. In 2018, the government, in partnership with ILO, completed the review and final drafting of the Zambia Decent Work Country Program 2019–2022. In addition, ILO provided technical and financial support to MLSS to carry out consultative review workshops for the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor at district and national levels. (43,51)
Vision 2030	Sets Zambia’s long-term sustainable development goals. Aims to eliminate child labor and improve quality education by 2030. In 2018, the government provided training to DCLC members on the integrated approach to child labor elimination and sponsored scholarships and educational opportunities for at-risk children, as well as provided technical support to district and community-level efforts to address child labor. (43,52)
National Youth Policy	Outlines Zambia’s strategies to ensure that social programs benefit vulnerable youth, including victims of sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (53) In 2018, the Ministry of Youth, Sport, and Child Development distributed Information and Communication Technology equipment to youths in 60 districts as part of its goal to provide entrepreneurial training to at-risk youths. (54)
National Employment and Labor Market Policy	Outlines policy framework to promote decent work, including child labor elimination. (14) In 2018, the government drafted an updated National Employment and Labor Market Policy to be approved by the Zambian cabinet. (19)
UN’s Sustainable Development Partnership Framework (2016–2021)	$806 million framework that builds upon the previous UNDAF but with a stronger emphasis on partnership. (55) Aims to prevent the worst forms of child labor and protect children. In 2018, established mentorship and youth apprenticeship opportunities for at-risk children, and supported programs reintegrating victims of the worst forms of child labor into education. (43,56)

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Policy. (57)

In 2018, the government hosted an international conference on artisanal and small-scale mining and quarrying, which included discussions on child labor in mining. One of the outcomes of the conference was the development of the Mosi-oa-Tunya Declaration on Artisanal and Small-scale Mining, Quarrying and Development, which calls for the need to combat the worst forms of child labor. (58)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address child labor in all relevant sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
EMPOWER: Increasing Economic and Social Empowerment for Adolescent Girls and Vulnerable Women in Zambia (2016-2020)	$5 million, 4-year, USDOL-funded project implemented by Winrock International to address child labor. (50) To date, more than 1,000 girls have participated in training courses on rural entrepreneurship and leadership life skills. (33) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
DREAMS	U.S. President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief/USAID project that aims to reduce rates of HIV among adolescent girls and young women, including girls vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation, in Kenya, Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, South Africa, Swaziland, Tanzania, Uganda, Zambia, and Zimbabwe. (59,60) In 2018, this initiative in Zambia prioritized orphans and vulnerable children, including adolescent girls vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation, benefiting 653,600 individuals. (43,59)
Service Efficiency and Effectiveness for Vulnerable Children and Adolescents*	Joint initiative with USAID and UNICEF that improves child protection services for children and adolescents, including children vulnerable to child labor, in 15 districts. The program launched in 2018. (61)
Achieving Reduction of Child Labor in Support of Education	Joint initiative with Japan Tobacco International, Winrock International, and ILO that seeks to combat the worst forms of child labor in tobacco-growing communities in Brazil, Malawi, Tanzania, and Zambia. To date, more than 4,000 children have participated in this initiative in Zambia. (20,62)
Social Cash Transfer Program†	Provides funds to families and increases school enrollment. (14,63) In 2018, the government increased its support of this program to $56 million (721 million kwacha), targeting 700,000 households. (14,43)
Zambia National Service Skills Training Camps‡	Provides life skills training camps for at-risk youth, including for victims of the worst forms of child labor. The program currently has 18 centers across the country. (64) In 2018, the government allocated $1.3 million (16.8 million kwacha) toward youth skills training under the Zambia National Service. (43)
World Bank-funded Projects	Projects to improve access to education, particularly for girls. Includes: Education Enhancement Project (2017–2022), a $60 million project to improve math and science instruction in primary and secondary schools; and Girls' Education and Women's Empowerment and Livelihood Project (GEWEL) (2015–2020), a $64 million project to provide livelihood support to extremely poor households and increase secondary school enrollment for girls. (47,65) By the end of 2018, the GEWEL Project supported 16,239 girls in secondary school. (65)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Zambia

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (9,66)

Although Zambia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem in all relevant sectors, particularly regarding child labor in agriculture, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation.

In 2018, the President of Zambia ordered an audit of the conditional cash transfer program due to corruption allegations. In September 2018, donors such as the UK Department of International Development and the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency suspended funding for the program, and the President dismissed the Minister of Community Development and Social Welfare. (14,67) Seventy percent of the program is funded by the government, and international donors provide the remaining 30 percent. (14,67)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Zambia (Table 11).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2018
	Determine through statutory instrument the “school-going age” for compulsory education, consistent with international law.	2012 – 2018
	Determine list of light work activities for children ages 13 to 15.	2018
	Harmonize legislation to ensure that penalties for child commercial sexual exploitation are consistent.	2009 – 2018
	Ensure that laws prohibiting child trafficking do not require threats, the use of force, or coercion for an act to be considered child trafficking.	2017 – 2018
	Publish information on law enforcement efforts, including training, investigations, number of child labor violations found, and penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2018
Enforcement	Publish information regarding the labor inspectorate’s funding.	2018
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties, while ensuring that the Industrial Relations Court is able to carry out its intended mandates.	2017 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO’s technical advice.	2012 – 2018
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive adequate training and resources to enforce labor laws throughout the country and that inspections cover all areas in which children work, including registered and unregistered businesses.	2010 – 2018
	Develop and implement consistent procedures to screen and identify human trafficking victims.	2018
	Improve lines of communication and clarify responsibilities among agencies to improve effectiveness and referrals to social services.	2011 – 2018
Coordination	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Education Policy.	2013 – 2018
Government Policies	Publish child labor data, including results of the child labor module of the Labor Force Survey.	2011 – 2018
Social Programs	Provide free education to all children as required by law, improve school infrastructure, increase the number of qualified teachers, decrease the distance students must travel to access education, and increase birth certificate registration.	2012 – 2018
	Expand existing programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem in all relevant sectors, including agriculture, mining, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2011 – 2018
	Ensure that the conditional cash transfer program has control and accountability mechanisms in place to prevent corruption.	2018

In 2018, Zimbabwe made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government continued to implement the Trafficking in Persons Action Plan, developed a national referral mechanism to assist victims of human trafficking, and established guidelines to improve coordination of anti-trafficking efforts. In addition, it increased budget allocations for the Basic Education Assistance Module and Harmonized Social Cash Transfer programs with the aim of reaching 500,000 vulnerable children and 60,000 households, respectively. However, children continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, mining, and tobacco production. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. Law enforcement agencies lack resources to enforce child labor laws. In addition, gaps remain in the country's legal framework against child labor, such as the lack of free basic education, which increases children's vulnerability to child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Zimbabwe engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, mining, and tobacco production. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Zimbabwe. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		88.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2013, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2019. (6)
Data were unavailable from the International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics, 2019. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of tea, cotton, tobacco, corn, and sugarcane (1,8-15)
	Fishing, including casting nets, hauling fish loads, and sorting fish (8-10,12,15)
	Forestry, such as dragging logs from felling sites and loading logs for transport (8,11,12)
	Cattle herding (8,12)
Industry	Mining gold and chrome, using dangerous chemicals such as cyanide and mercury, and extracting material from underground passages and quarries† (8,9,16,17)
Services	Street work, including vending and begging (8,10,11,15,18-20)
	Domestic work (2,8,11,12,15,21,22)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking and gambling (9)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3-5,8,9,11,12,23-25)
	Working in agriculture, mining for the production of gold and chrome, and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking(2,9,23)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Zimbabwe

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

A 2018 report on child labor and working conditions in tobacco production in Zimbabwe found that children ages 12 to 17 work on tobacco farms. Some children work on their family farms while others are hired as paid laborers to perform activities such as planting, weeding, harvesting, and grading tobacco. (26) A survey in gold mining areas found that children are hired as transporters by gold miners to carry ore in sacks and pan for gold. (27) Zimbabwean children living in border towns are trafficked to Botswana, South Africa, Mozambique, and Zambia, where they become victims of commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in domestic work. Zimbabwean children, especially orphans, are sometimes lured by relatives with the promise of education or adoption, but instead are recruited to work within the country as domestic workers or forced to work in mining, drug smuggling, or other illegal activities. (2,28) In addition, the deterioration of Zimbabwe's economy, along with drought and cholera outbreaks, increase the vulnerability of children to labor exploitation. (29-31) An NGO conducted research that revealed that girls under age 18 engaged in commercial sex due to push factors, such as the breakdown of the family unit, poverty, and gender-based violence. (4,32)

Birth registration is derived from birth within the country, but many children, especially orphans and children living in rural areas, are not registered due to poverty and lack of awareness of the requirements. (9,24) Beginning in grade seven, children are unable to sit for exams without a birth registration, leading some to enter the workforce at a young age. (9,15) School fees are often prohibitively expensive and limit access to education. (10,33) According to the UN, children with disabilities, especially in rural areas, experience greater abuse, violence, stigma, and exclusion, and, therefore, have limited access to education. (24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Zimbabwe has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Section 3 of the Labor Relations Amendment Act (34)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 11(4) of the Labor Relations Amendment Act (34)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Section 11(4) of the Labor Relations Amendment Act; Section 10A of the Children's Protection and Adoption Act (34,35)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 54–55 of the Constitution; Section 4A of the Labor Relations Amendment Act (34,36)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 3 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (37)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 87 of the Criminal Law Act; Section 3 of the Sexual Offenses Act; Section 8(2) of the Children's Protection and Adoption Act; Section 3 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (35,37-39)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 156 of the Criminal Law Act; Section 10 of the Children's Protection and Adoption Act (9,35,39)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	16	Sections 5 and 10 of the National Service Act (40)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Section 9 of the National Service Act (40)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	12‡	Section 5 of the Education Act (41)
Free Public Education	No

‡ Age calculated based on available information (42)

Zimbabwean law does not mandate free basic education for children. (43) Lack of access to basic education may increase the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (9) In addition, children in Zimbabwe are required to attend school only up to age 12. This standard makes children ages 12 to 15 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school and not legally permitted to work. (42) To address this, in December 2018, the Cabinet approved an amendment to the Education Amendment Bill, which will guarantee free access to public education at the primary and secondary levels. The Bill was published in the Government Gazette in February 2019 and is under debate within Parliament. (44,45)

In May 2018, the Parliament approved an amendment to the Mines and Minerals Amendment Bill, which includes the revocation of a mining license if miners engage in the use of child labor. In September, the President rejected the amendment due to concerns raised by stakeholders. (46,47) As a result, the Parliament is conducting consultations to revise the proposed amendment. (47,48)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Welfare (MPSLSW) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Welfare (MPSLSW)	Enforces labor and anti-trafficking laws and investigates labor-related complaints, including complaints involving child labor. Has a Department for Child Welfare and Probation Services responsible for child protection services, including investigating, intervening in, and reporting on child abuse cases. (9,11,28)
Zimbabwe Republic Police (ZRP)	Enforces laws related to the worst forms of child labor in conjunction with the MPSLSW and the Ministry of Justice, Legal and Parliamentary Affairs. (9) Addresses issues related to child labor and human trafficking through victim-friendly units in every district. Conducts transnational human trafficking investigations through an anti-trafficking desk at Zimbabwe's INTERPOL office. (9,28)
Ministry of Justice, Legal and Parliamentary Affairs	Oversees all courts, including labor courts. Addresses human trafficking and child victim cases through victim-friendly courts. (9)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2018, labor law enforcement agencies in Zimbabwe took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MPSLSW that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including lack of authority to assess penalties.

The MPSLSW's inspectorate has assigned designated agents who conduct inspections in specific regions and labor inspectors who conduct inspections in all regions. (51) It is unclear whether designated agents conduct child labor investigations in the informal sector. Labor inspectors lack the authority to assess penalties, and inspectors also oversee arbitration and conciliation, which strains their capacity to conduct onsite investigations to combat child labor. (51)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Zimbabwe's workforce, which includes approximately 7.9 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Zimbabwe would employ about 527 labor inspectors. (52) Research indicates that the government continues to lack sufficient resources, mainly financial, to investigate child labor law violations. (8,53) The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2018, criminal law enforcement agencies in Zimbabwe took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MPSLSW that may hinder adequate criminal and labor law enforcement, including the publication of enforcement data.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2018, the government initiated two prosecutions related to human trafficking cases. Both cases included several children who were victims of human trafficking for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (28) The government also worked with IOM and other stakeholders to develop a national referral mechanism to identify and assist victims of human trafficking. (28) However, the government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement training.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the efficacy of coordination activities.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee to Address the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Addresses the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by the MPSLSW and includes the Ministries of Health and Child Care; Primary and Secondary Education; and Youth Development, Indigenization, and Empowerment. (55) Also includes international organizations and civil society groups, such as workers' and employers' organizations. (55) Research could not determine whether the committee met during the year. (49)
Ministry-Level Committee on Children's Issues	Coordinates government ministries' efforts related to children's issues, including child labor. Includes the MPSLSW and the Ministries of Education; Women's Affairs; and Youth Development, Indigenization, and Empowerment. (9, 11, 55) Research could not determine whether this body had activities in 2018.
Anti-Trafficking Inter-Ministerial Committee (ATIMC)	Coordinates actions to combat human trafficking, including the implementation of the Trafficking in Persons National Plan of Action. (8, 56) The ATIMC met quarterly in 2018. (49)
National Coordinating Forum*	Promotes collaboration between government and non-government actors. Established in 2018 under guidelines of the Trafficking in Persons National Plan of Action (NAPLAC). (50)
National Task Force on Street Children	Outlines strategies to combat child labor, including feeding street children at drop-in centers, reuniting children with their families, and offering counseling sessions. Chaired by the MPSLSW and includes NGOs that work on street children's issues. (9, 55) Also includes the Ministry of Home Affairs, represented by the ZRP. (33) The National Task Force on Street Children did not meet in 2018 due to a lack of resources. (49, 57)
Child Protection Committees	Operate at the village, ward, district, provincial, and national levels to discuss issues affecting children, including child labor. (33) Representatives include ministries, civil society, local volunteers, and teachers. Report to the ministry-level Committee on Children's Issues. (33) In 2018, Child Protection Committees met on an irregular basis. (57)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In 2018, the government, in partnership with the Zimbabwe National Council for the Welfare of Children, published a child labor handbook that provides information on child labor laws. (49) However, government information on the efforts by coordinating bodies to address child labor is limited. In addition, a lack of resources prevented the National Task Force on Street Children and the Child Protection Committees from fully carrying out their mandates. (57)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including insufficient mainstreaming of child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor	Strengthens understanding of child labor issues and creates an entity to coordinate responses to the findings. Consists of three focus areas: (1) education assistance; (2) poverty assistance through a cash transfer scheme; and (3) health assistance. (9) Research indicates the government took no actions during the period to operationalize this policy. (49)
National Social Protection Framework (NSPF)	Aims to improve social protection system, including promoting decent work. (31) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement NSPF during the reporting period.

Zimbabwe

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Policy	Description
Trafficking in Persons National Plan of Action (NAPLAC) (2016–2018)	Aimed to implement the UN Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons through the development of strategies to combat human trafficking, with emphasis on prevention, protection, prosecution, and partnership. (49,58) In 2018, the government conducted awareness-raising activities, carried out a self evaluation of the NAPLAC, and adopted guidelines to set up the National Coordinating Forum to promote collaboration between government and non-government actors. (50)
Zimbabwe UN Development Assistance Framework (2016–2020)	Integrates child labor prevention strategies in the Education for All campaign headed by the UN. Promotes gender equality, reduction of HIV/AIDs prevalence, and allocates social resources to address child labor. (59) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

In 2018, under a multi-nation migration project implemented by IOM with funding from the EU, one-time in-kind technical support was provided to the Government of Zimbabwe Trafficking in Persons Secretariat in the form of a public address system, office furniture, and stationary to help implement the Trafficking in Persons National Plan of Action (NAPLAC) and to begin establishing five Provincial Trafficking in Persons Task Forces in the provinces of Manicaland, Masvingo, Bulawayo, Mashonaland East, and Mashonaland Central. (60)

The National Social Protection Framework (NSPF) aims to provide strategies that address poverty and labor market interventions, among others, though the policy does not explicitly include child labor prevention and elimination measures. There is no indication that the government made efforts during 2018 to operationalize the NSFP. (31,33) Government information on policy efforts to address child labor has been limited.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2018, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to the prevention or elimination of child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Phase III of the National Action Plan for Orphans and Vulnerable Children (2016–2020)	UNICEF Child Protection Fund (CPF) program, supported by the United Kingdom Department of International Development (DFID), that focuses on equity and access to quality education for children and provides child protection services. Provides cash assistance for families to keep children in school. (31,61,62) In 2018, CPF provided services to more than 40,000 children and began to conduct a Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey to collect child protection data. (63)
Harmonized Social Cash Transfer (HSCT)†	An unconditional cash transfer program that targets vulnerable children and families. In 2018, the government allocated $11 million to the HSCT program, which is 10 percent more than in 2017. (31)
Stop Child Labor Program	Hivos (a Dutch NGO)-funded program that establishes child labor-free zones throughout the country. The program includes the MPSLSW, Coalition Against Child Labor in Zimbabwe, African Network for the Prevention and Protection Against Child Abuse and Neglect, Progressive Teachers Union of Zimbabwe, Zimbabwe Teachers' Association, and the General Agriculture and Plantation Workers Union. (12) Teachers, labor inspectors, police officers, and other stakeholders support this initiative by sending child laborers back to school. (64) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Stop Child Labor Program during the reporting period.
Basic Education Assistance Module (BEAM)†	Government program, with support by DFID, that provides basic financial assistance to families for education costs, such as tuition and examination fees. Aims to keep children in school and to enroll children who lack access to school as a result of economic hardship. (65) In 2018, the government allocated $20 million to the BEAM project, which is 50 percent more than in 2017. (31)
Donor-Funded Programs	DREAMS, a President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief/USAID project that aims to reduce rates of HIV among adolescent girls and young women, including girls vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation, in Kenya, Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, South Africa, Swaziland, Tanzania, Uganda, Zambia, and Zimbabwe. (66) In 2018, this initiative in Zimbabwe prioritized orphans and vulnerable children, including adolescent girls. (67) Zimbabwe Accountability and Artisanal Mining Program, a German state-owned, DFID bank-funded project that improves occupational safety and health standards in artisanal and small-scale gold mining and raises awareness of child labor among informal gold miners. (27) Zimbabwe Education Development Fund Phase II (2012–2019), a DFID bank-funded initiative implemented by UNICEF that promotes equitable and quality education. As of May 2018, this initiative has provided educational services to more than 2.5 million primary school children, most of them in the poorest areas, and 900,000 secondary school children; in addition, it has built 33 special schools for children with disabilities. (68)

† Program is funded by the Government of Zimbabwe.

In 2018, the Registrar General’s office continued to implement a mobile birth registration program across the country to ensure that citizens receive identity documents, including birth certificates. (69) Every district in the country has mobile teams to support this program. (28) Although Zimbabwe has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially child labor in agriculture, mining, and commercial sexual exploitation.

An evaluation of the Harmonized Social Cash Transfer (HSCT) program, published in 2018, found that this program mitigated poverty, improved child protection outcomes, and helped families improve their food security. However, the program has limited coverage and funding. (70) Furthermore, HSCT participants do not automatically qualify for other social programs funded by the government or civil society organizations due to a lack of coordination at the local level. (70)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Zimbabwe (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure that the age up to which education is compulsory is the same as the minimum age for work.	2016 – 2018
	Approve the Education Amendment Bill that establishes free basic education for children through age 16.	2009 – 2018
Enforcement	Ensure that inspectors have sufficient capacity, training, and resources to conduct core inspection duties including child labor inspections.	2017 – 2018
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for labor law violations.	2017 – 2018
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO’s technical advice.	2016 – 2018
	Ensure sufficient funding, human resources, and training for criminal law enforcement officials to enforce criminal labor laws.	2009 – 2018
	Publish information about the labor inspectorate’s funding, number of inspectors, training for new employees, refresher courses provided, labor inspections conducted, labor inspections conducted at worksites, violations found, penalties imposed and collected, and routine and unannounced inspections .	2016 – 2018
	Publish information on the government’s criminal law enforcement efforts relating to child labor, including the training system for criminal investigators conducted.	2015 – 2018
Coordination	Ensure that child labor committees are active and receive sufficient resources to address the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2018
Government Policies	Integrate child labor prevention and elimination measures in relevant policies, such as the National Social Protection Framework.	2017 – 2018
	Implement the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor.	2010 – 2018
Social Programs	Publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2018
	Ensure that children are registered at birth to facilitate their entrance into secondary school, including through expanding the work of the mobile registration teams.	2014 – 2018
	Ensure that children with disabilities have equal access to education.	2016 – 2018
	Expand the Harmonized Social Cash Transfer program and develop coordination mechanisms to improve implementation at the local level.	2018
	Expand existing social programs to address child labor, especially child labor in agriculture, commercial sexual exploitation, and mining.	2010 – 2018

WHAT CAN YOU

DO TO HELP ADDRESS CHILD LABOR AND FORCED LABOR?

ASK QUESTIONS.

Could some of the goods I buy be made by child labor or forced labor?

Do workers have a voice to speak out against labor abuses?

What are companies doing to end child labor and forced labor in global supply chains?

What are governments doing to combat child labor and forced labor?

TAKE ACTION.

Empower yourself with knowledge and download USDOL's Sweat & Toil and Comply Chain apps.

Make your voice heard by spreading the word among friends, family, and the companies you buy from and invest in.

Show your support for organizations that are working to end these abuses.

DEMAND CHANGE.

Advocate for a world in which:

Workers everywhere can raise their voices against child labor, forced labor, and other abuses.

Companies make serious commitments to ensure that global supply chains are free of products made by child labor and forced labor, especially those on USDOL's List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor.

Your investments have a positive social impact by promoting responsible labor practices.

Governments work vigorously to adopt the country-specific suggested actions in USDOL's Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor.
