How to Access Our Reports

We've got you covered! Access our reports in the way that works best for you.

On Your Computer

All three of the U.S. Department of Labor's (USDOL) flagship reports on international child labor and forced labor are available on our website in HTML and PDF formats at dol.gov/ChildLaborReports. These reports include Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, as required by the Trade and Development Act of 2000; List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor, as required by the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005; and List of Products Produced by Forced or Indentured Child Labor, as required by Executive Order 13126. On our website, you can navigate to individual country pages where you can find information on the prevalence and sectoral distribution of the worst forms of child labor; specific goods produced by child labor or forced labor; efforts each country has made to implement their commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the areas of laws and regulations, institutional mechanisms for enforcement and coordination, and government policies and social programs; and specific suggestions for government actions to address the issue. You can also access the Department's new Better Trade Tool on our website at dol.gov/BetterTradeTool. This tool's dynamic dashboards and custom queries allows users to view potential child labor and forced labor risks in global supply chains and conduct U.S. import trade data analysis.

On Your Phone

The Department's Sweat & Toil mobile application contains more than 1,000 pages of research from all three reports. Sweat & Toil helps you easily sort data by region, country, assessment level, good, and type of exploitation, all without the need for an internet connection. Additionally, the app has been updated to include information from USDOL's technical assistance and cooperation around the world. You can download the free app from Apple's App Store or the Google Play Store and access the data on our website at dol.gov/AppSweat&Toil.

The Department's Comply Chain: Business Tools for Labor Compliance in Global Supply Chains mobile application is a practical, step-by-step guide for companies on ways to develop strong social compliance systems to reduce child labor and forced labor in supply chains. Whether new to social compliance or wanting to improve existing systems, companies can explore modules including stakeholder engagement, code of conduct provisions, auditing, remediation, reporting, and engagement, among others. You can download the free app from Apple's App Store or the Google Play Store, or access it online at dol.gov/AppComplyChain.

On Paper

The Sweat & Toil magazine is published in hardcopy and includes the Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor report. The magazine provides an overall summary of the Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor report, regional findings related to meaningful efforts made and gaps for countries to address, and the assessment levels of each of the 131 countries. Send an e-mail to GlobalKids@dol.gov to request hard copies or download them from the Department's website at dol.gov/ChildLaborReports.

Foreword

The United Nations has designated 2021 as the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor. It could not come at a more pivotal time. This summer, the International Labor Organization and United Nations Children’s Fund released the latest global estimates on child labor. Despite years of progress, these new estimates contain a troubling truth. Global estimates of children in child labor rose from 152 million to 160 million, leaving 1 in 10 children trapped in child labor.

Even before the COVID-19 pandemic, a number of factors may have undermined our progress over the past two decades. A decline in access to education and fragmented social protection systems left millions of children vulnerable to child labor.

The harmful consequences of the COVID-19 pandemic are not distributed equally, and these challenges will loom large in the years ahead. COVID-19 made groups that were already vulnerable to workplace exploitation—including migrant and indigenous communities, as well as women and girls—even more vulnerable. And children are the most vulnerable of all.

Eradicating child labor involves not just withdrawing children from child labor but making their families less vulnerable and more resilient. That means strengthening the voice and bargaining power of their parents in the workplace so that they have sustainable alternatives to child labor.

Our Bureau of International Labor Affairs’ Office of Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Human Trafficking is at the vanguard of efforts to end child labor and forced labor globally—at a time when this work is more urgent than ever. As the world leader in technical assistance projects to eradicate child labor and forced labor, we have worked with our partners around the world to assist vulnerable workers and communities severely impacted by the pandemic. We also have used our world class research on these issues, including the only comprehensive global report on child labor—our flagship Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor—to raise awareness and provide concrete recommendations for action.

In our role as a knowledge generator, we put critical, actionable information about child labor and forced labor in front of governments, NGOs, workers, academics, and businesses. This includes the information in our two apps: Sweat & Toil, which puts more than 1,000 pages of research in the palm of your hand, and Comply Chain, which helps businesses root out child labor and forced labor from their supply chains.

A world free of child labor is an ambitious goal—and a worthy one. Children deserve a world where they are free to develop into successful adults.

I have fought for the rights of working people throughout my career, and I feel privileged to join a worldwide movement to eliminate some of the most egregious labor abuses, including child labor and forced labor.

In 2021 and beyond, let us build back better and move toward a brighter future for all our children.

Statement

Earlier this year, the U.S. Government made a pledge to recognize the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor. For its part, the U.S. Department of Labor committed $57 million in new funding to accelerate action to end child labor and forced labor. Included among the actions are expanding access to social protections for vulnerable children, workers, and families in the context of the COVID-19 pandemic; increasing companies' accountability for their supply chains with regard to workers' voice and labor rights; and creating an online platform to share with the public the tools, resources, research, and lessons learned that were developed through decades of U.S. Government-supported technical assistance programming aimed at eliminating child labor and forced labor around the world.

We make this pledge at a time when global child labor and forced labor remain grim realities, when urgent action is required to address the stalling of progress in 2020, and when the pandemic has created new and formidable challenges around the world. The most recent global estimates, released this year by the International Labor Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund, indicate that at least 160 million children are in child labor worldwide—an absolute increase of 8 million since the last estimates in 2017. Overall child labor rates stayed constant at ten percent. Forced labor figures—standing at 25 million globally—are due to be updated at the end of this year.

This is not the world we want, but it is the world we live in. Since 2016, we have seen children's access to education dwindle and social protections continue to fall short. Children and their families also faced other destabilizing factors, such as the pandemic, armed conflict, state fragility, mass displacement and migration, climate change, and gender inequities—factors that left them even more vulnerable. These realities are unacceptable. We must fight for a world where children and their families do not have to make impossible choices and where forced labor is not tolerated.

To get there, the global community must redouble its efforts, and the Bureau of International Labor Affairs is leading the way. The Biden Administration is championing both racial and gender equity and workers' rights as pillars of its domestic and foreign policy. As President Biden has said, “No responsible American president can remain silent when basic human rights are violated.”

ILAB takes a holistic approach to addressing child labor and forced labor. We look at addressing child labor on socioeconomic, cultural, and political fronts, including through ensuring that parents can exercise their fundamental rights at work. Children's rights should be central to our response, as should the needs of their families and communities.

Thea Mei Lee
Deputy Undersecretary for

This year's Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor offers concrete actions that governments can take to increase access to education; strengthen rule of law; advance human rights; and improve social programs to combat food insecurity, discrimination, and related challenges.

Our technical assistance and cooperation programming also takes a holistic approach. For example, many of the projects we fund promote children's access to quality schooling. Many also offer age-appropriate opportunities for children's participation in vocational training and apprenticeships. We fund projects to help address the root causes of child labor, including poverty and lack of access to social protections and projects that promote workers' rights and the occupational safety and health of children of legal working age, as well as adult workers.

ILAB, of course, is not in this fight alone. We actively support Alliance 8.7, which seeks to meet Target 8.7 of the Sustainable Development Goals to eradicate forced labor, end modern slavery and human trafficking, and secure the prohibition and elimination of the worst forms of child labor, including recruitment and use of child soldiers, and to end child labor in all its forms by 2025. We come together as a community of nations, international and regional organizations, workers' organizations, employer and business organizations, civil society organizations, academic institutions, and other stakeholders and networks wedded by a common purpose—ending child labor and forced labor through collective action.

We ask, particularly in light of the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor, where the catalysts are that can accelerate action on child labor and forced labor, so that we meet the ambitious goal of ending these human rights abuses by 2025. We are heartened by the ongoing activities of Alliance 8.7, the ILO, UNICEF, other governments, and countless NGOs that are making their own pledges in honor of the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor. We must keep going, together, in 2021 and beyond, for we are only as strong as our partnerships. Together, the global community must make a concerted effort to stand up for the rights of children everywhere. We must take the next five years to ensure children's access to education and strengthen social protections for children and their parents as we continue our work to eliminate these egregious labor abuses. Their futures are in our hands.

PURPOSE OF THIS REPORT

Research Focus of the Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor

The U.S. Department of Labor has prepared this 20th annual report, the 2020 Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, in accordance with the Trade and Development Act of 2000 (TDA). (1) The TDA set forth the requirement that a country implement its commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor for the President of the United States to consider in designating the country a beneficiary developing country under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) program. (2; 3) The TDA also mandated that the President submit to the United States Congress the Secretary of Labor’s findings with respect to each “beneficiary country’s implementation of its international commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.” (1) ILAB carries out this responsibility on behalf of the Secretary.

Country Coverage

This report covers 119 independent countries and 15 non-independent countries and territories designated as GSP beneficiaries. This includes former GSP recipients who have negotiated free trade agreements with the United States. (4) Because the population of children is extremely small (fewer than 50) or non-existent in the British Indian Ocean Territory, Heard Island and McDonald Islands, and the Pitcairn Islands, the report does not contain a discussion of these three non-independent countries and territories. This 2020 report presents information on child labor and the worst forms of child labor, and efforts to eliminate this exploitation in the remaining 119 countries and 12 non-independent countries and territories. The use of “countries” in this report includes territories, and because the report focuses on government efforts, non-independent countries and territories are classified by their associated regions.

Population Covered

In undertaking research on the “worst forms of child labor,” ILAB relied on the TDA definition of a child, which is the same definition contained in ILO Convention No. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor (ILO C. 182). The TDA and ILO C. 182 define “child” as a person under age 18.

Reporting Period

The reporting period for this year’s report is January 2020 through December 2020. In certain cases, significant events or government efforts that occurred in early 2021 were included, as appropriate.

Type of Work

This report focuses on child labor and the worst forms of child labor. Definitions related to these types of work are guided by ILO Convention No. 138 on Minimum Age (ILO C. 138) and ILO C. 182. Child labor includes work below the minimum age as established in national legislation (excluding permissible light work), the worst forms of child labor, and hazardous unpaid household services. The definition of the “worst forms of child labor” is found in the TDA and is the same as that included in ILO C. 182. It includes (a) all forms of slavery or practices similar to slavery, such as the sale or trafficking of children, debt bondage and serfdom, or forced or compulsory labor, including forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict; (b) the use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, for the production of pornography, or for pornographic performances; (c) the use, procuring, or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs; and (d) work which, by its nature or the circumstances under which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety, or morals of children. (1; 5) Similar to ILO C. 182, the TDA states that the work described in subparagraph (d) should be “determined by the laws, regulations, or competent authority of the country involved.”

Spotlight on a Vulnerable World

As we take stock of the world's efforts to prevent and eliminate the worst forms of child labor in 2020, the global COVID-19 pandemic continues to impact societies and livelihoods worldwide, threatening to reverse global progress against child labor. To tell the story of the world's global efforts to combat child labor in 2020 is to tell the story of COVID-19 and its impact on the world's children; however, the story begins much earlier. It is true that even before COVID-19 spread around the world, our global progress toward the elimination of child labor stalled. According to recent estimates by the International Labor Organization (ILO) and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the absolute number of children in child labor increased for the first time in two decades—from 152 million in 2016 to 160 million in 2020—while the percentage of children in child labor stayed the same at 9.6 percent. (6) Additionally, the number of children in hazardous work rose from 72.5 million in 2016 to 79 million in 2020. There are now nearly 87 million children in child labor in Sub-Saharan Africa—more than in the rest of the world combined. Meanwhile, absolute numbers and percentages of children in child labor have actually continued to decline in Asia and the Pacific, and Latin America and the Caribbean. In fact, consistent with that finding, each of the six countries that received the highest annual assessment of Significant Advancement in this year's report were in the Latin America and the Caribbean region. The latest global estimates also show that the majority of child labor is among boys, is rural and agricultural, takes place within families, and is deeply entwined with a lack of access to education.

As the world responds to the new challenges presented by COVID-19, the Bureau of International Labor Affairs (ILAB) sought to leverage its expertise as a knowledge generator to offer more insights into the reasons for the slowdown in progress to eliminate child labor over the last several years. Our research has found that gaps in access to education and a lack of access to social programs, coupled with key global trends that worsen child labor risks, have left children and their families even more vulnerable to labor and human rights abuses. In short, since 2016 and even before then, the world has responded with insufficient actions to address child labor. As a result, more children are victims of child labor, including its worst forms.

Access to quality education is key in the fight against child labor; nevertheless, within the past few years, there has been no progress in getting and keeping children in school. The latest global figures from 2018 point to the fact that the number of children, youth, and adolescents out of school has barely changed since 2015—nearly 260 million. (7) A large number of those out of school are in child labor. More than a quarter of children ages 5 to 11 and more than a third of children ages 12 to 14 who are in child labor are also out of school. (6) ILAB’s own research and analysis of international datasets shows that 49 countries and territories – or 37 percent of all the countries and territories in this year’s report – saw declines in primary school completion rates from 2012–2015 to 2016–2019. In addition, twenty-two countries and territories in this year’s report have witnessed declines of more than 3 percent in primary school completion rates in that time period.

All this has taken place amid broader declining financial investment in projects designed to combat child labor. Funding for ILO-implemented projects to address child labor has declined over the past decade. (8) Even ILAB’s obligated funding directed to address child labor declined by more than one-third in nominal terms from nearly $60 million in 2012 to $40 million in 2020. (9) Beyond funding, ILAB’s research has shown that gaps in social protection have increased over time. In the 2016 edition of this report, we noted 23 new gaps in social programs across all reported countries and territories, including barriers to access to education and birth documentation, lack of child labor statistics, limited social program coverage, and poor implementation of those social programs. In 2017, the number of new gaps highlighted in our reporting nearly doubled to 43 from the previous year. By 2018, that number reached 56, and grew again to 65 in 2019. Finally, in 2020, the number of gaps added for the first time related to social programs for all countries reached the astounding number of 90—nearly a 300 percent increase in the number of new gaps added since 2016. In total, of the nearly 2,200 suggested actions in this year’s report, almost a quarter are related to social programs, with nearly 40 percent of those social program suggested actions directed to countries and territories in Sub-Saharan Africa. See Figures 1–2 for more information on this year’s reported suggested actions.

Yet gaps in social protection and in projects designed to combat child labor are not the only reasons for stalled global progress. Children and their families also faced other destabilizing factors, such as the pandemic, armed conflict, state fragility, mass displacement and migration, climate change, and gender inequities. Additionally, a number of factors have impacted adult workers directly and limited their ability to secure decent work and even employment opportunities. Lacking stability themselves, adults are often left without the means to provide for their children and families. Some examples of these factors include structural inequalities in the labor market—embedded biases and marginalization of certain groups—as well as rising unemployment and lack of worker-centered protections that prioritize the worker’s input and voice, including on topics of occupational safety and health measures. The continued presence and outsized impacts of these factors on already vulnerable families may have increased the likelihood of children falling victim to child labor and its worst forms.

Most common suggested actions in ILAB's report

Analysis of broader trends from international reporting shows a lack of progress on matters of corruption, democratic freedoms, and efforts to address trafficking in persons, which can contribute to child labor.

Pervasive corruption often limits and diverts the flow of resources and support to the most vulnerable.

ILAB's analysis of countries and territories featured in our report and Transparency International's annual Corruption Perceptions Index, which ranks countries and territories by their perceived levels of public sector corruption, revealed that no tangible progress was made since 2012. (10) Similarly, declines in democratic freedoms diminish a government's ability to recognize and respond to human rights abuses that afflict its citizens. An analysis of countries and territories featured in our report and Freedom House's annual Freedom in the World, which measures democratic freedom, has allowed us to assess that the average score for countries included in this report actually declined by 4 percent from 2012 to 2020.

(11) Finally, by reviewing trends in efforts to combat human trafficking from the U.S. Department of State's Trafficking in Persons report from 2012 to 2020, ILAB discovered that global efforts on human trafficking have stagnated as well, as the average rankings have moved little since 2012.

A world that is more corrupt, less democratic, and in which trafficking in persons persists, leads to the tolerance and continuation of child labor. This history and context of the factors that led to the stalled progress against child labor are vital to inform our efforts. The data are a wake-up call. We cannot let our guard down in this fight.

The Pandemic's Global Impact

While these global trends have contributed to the halt in global progress towards the elimination of child labor, the spread of COVID-19 has led to substantial disruptions in daily life. Initially, supply chain disruptions caused many companies to suspend operations as key inputs failed to materialize and consumer demand evaporated amid new social distancing guidelines and lockdowns to slow the spread of the virus. Companies around the world furloughed and laid off millions or even shuttered operations. The resulting rise in unemployment diminished the ability of those without work to provide for their families and lowered standards of living, leading to a rise in poverty and reversals in progress in reducing child labor. Moreover, unscrupulous employers operating in the informal sector likely increased their economic activities to take advantage of this labor surplus, luring children and laid-off adults into unregulated jobs.

Adults, especially older adults and those with underlying conditions, are more vulnerable to COVID-19 than children; nevertheless, children must confront bleak futures in the tragic event of death or incapacitation of a parent or caregiver due to COVID-19. Children in this heartbreaking scenario are often driven to hazardous and exploitative work to help sustain their families' efforts to survive. The risks for children remain even after adults recover from the disease. Health care costs associated with treating ill family members can intensify financial stress on households. Additionally, the lack of appropriate personal protective equipment at worksites endangers workers' health and safety, as well as their families and communities.

The spread of the virus impacted children in ways far beyond direct exposure to the virus itself. In order to hinder the transmission of COVID-19, many governments closed schools. The inability to access schooling for any reason has long been a driver of child labor. With schools closed, families may encourage children to work, even in harmful conditions, to earn money for food and other necessities, especially as many children depend on schools for the meals they offer. School closures and reduced access to education could further increase opportunities to exploit and traffic children, particularly those whose parents or adult guardians struggle to bring in income on a daily basis. (12) Read more about the impact of the virus on children's education in "Box 1: Children and the Digital Divide."

Children and the Digital Divide

Much of the world has grown accustomed to virtual work meetings and digital learning. However, for many of the world's children, the closure of schools and the shift to online learning has not been successful. The pandemic, for example, is intensifying preexisting vulnerabilities among rural children broadly and children in more urban environments who face challenges accessing the internet. Prior to the pandemic, many children lacked ready access to digital tools that make online education possible. In some countries, a weak and shallow digital infrastructure took distance learning off the table from the start. In fact, 2.2 billion children—nearly two-thirds of all children—lack an internet connection at home, according to UNICEF. (13) This is most acute on the continent of Africa where less than a quarter of the population has any access to the internet. (14) With in-person access to school and child development services contracting globally, children in these communities may be left behind. Where there is digital access, children in many places face greater limitations on broadband access and/or a sufficient number of computers and mobile devices. Finally, schools are not just places of learning, but places for some children to secure a hot meal. As schools closed due to the pandemic, many children who relied on these meals and other social services provided by schools may have been pushed further into work and exploitation. In the end, despite the rapid proliferation of virtual meetings for many, a large number of children have been left on the other side of the digital divide.

Although forced to remain at home due to global stay-at-home guidance, sadly, for many, home is not a safe space. Since COVID-19, there have been increased reports of domestic abuse against children and partners. Domestic abuse is a key reason children run away from home. Many runaway children end up living in the streets, where they are vulnerable to exploitation, particularly in the commercial sex industry. Abused partners can face financial burdens and social pressures, increasing risks further.

As many government employees shelter at home worldwide, government labor inspectorates are performing fewer in-person worksite inspections. With inspectors unable to visit worksites, innumerable labor violations for both adults and children may go undetected and unaddressed.

Although COVID-19's effects on global child labor are still being analyzed, our reporting indicates a growing risk for the world's vulnerable children. The ILO and UNICEF forecast that by 2022 the increase in poverty associated with COVID-19 is likely to increase child labor by 8.9 million. Experts also have raised concerns that the pandemic and subsequent measures to roll back the public health emergency (e.g., restrictions on public activity and travel, closures of schools and other public spaces, curbs on certain economic activities) will ultimately reverse decades of progress against child labor. Moreover, economic downturns and increased unemployment could place greater pressure on children as potential income earners, especially if their adult family members lose jobs and can no longer rely on safe or legal income flows. In the end, pandemic responses have placed a growing toll on public services, social protections, and international aid and remittance flows, especially among lower income countries, and this will further deteriorate the crucial safety nets upon which already vulnerable families rely. (15; 16; 17; 18; 19) Furthermore, this vulnerability stemming from a lack of employment, food, and government stability can prompt or intensify conflict, and in the most serious of cases, even lead to or increase the use of children as soldiers in countries suffering from great insecurity.

Child labor is a risk for all children, yet for some children the risk is greater. Certain populations may be especially vulnerable to child labor and at particular risk because of COVID-19. It is likely that the pandemic and its socioeconomic consequences will intersect with long-standing risk factors related to gender, social and legal status, migration, and the rural-urban divide. Precise data and analysis of the potential impacts of COVID-19 on preexisting vulnerabilities, and how those preexisting vulnerabilities influenced COVID-19 infection and treatment, will be crucial to painting a fuller picture of child labor amid the pandemic. Read on to discover how the pandemic exacerbates key vulnerabilities to child labor.

Risk on the Rise for Vulnerable Groups

The painful impact of this global pandemic is not distributed equally and weighs heavily on those countries least prepared to handle the shock, and already disadvantaged and vulnerable groups. The pandemic has compounded these already commonplace risks. These vulnerabilities are more severe for individuals of systemically oppressed racial and ethnic minority groups that face institutional and societal discrimination. As Secretary of Labor Marty Walsh noted in the Foreword, children are the most vulnerable group of all. Unfortunately, this year's report highlights more than 100 gaps related to vulnerable groups, ranging from children with disabilities, refugees, girls, and Roma children to LGBTQI+ children and indigenous groups, among others.

Migrants are particularly vulnerable to labor abuses. Millions have left their homes for jobs elsewhere in their own countries or in other parts of the world. Even before the pandemic, migrant populations—adults and children—faced the risk of empty promises from labor brokers with respect to wages and employment, large debts incurred, and even confiscation of identity documents leading to forced labor. COVID-19's socioeconomic ramifications intensify labor abuse risks among migrants and displaced populations who, as a result, will likely face additional socioeconomic, political, and legal hardships. As governments maintain some restrictions on transnational movement and public activities, these restrictions will likely place even greater pressure on refugees, as well as on families and communities that depend on migration for jobs and income. Migrant children and their families have especially precarious access to resources such as schools, decent work, and social services—resources that governments have further restricted due to the pandemic. This will exacerbate their vulnerability to poverty and exploitation, including child labor. Read more about the dangers faced by migrant workers during the COVID-19 pandemic in Box 2.

Additionally, there are many risks to indigenous populations. Certain castes and religious minorities have long been vulnerable to labor abuses, facing centuries of historical discrimination. These populations often face discrimination and challenges in accessing educational opportunities to secure a solid foundation for decent work in adulthood. Many of the millions of indigenous peoples and castes and religious minorities have long worked in the informal economy, falling outside the scope of formal social protection schemes and lacking access to reliable financial and medical support in times of crisis. (20) These challenges have only grown more daunting in the age of COVID-19.

Most Vulnerable of All: Migrant Workers and Their Children

Vulnerability to child labor has skyrocketed during the pandemic, increasing due to trends like lack of access to education and social protections. Among those most vulnerable are migrant children and the children of migrant workers. (18) Evidence has already shown that the pandemic has disproportionately affected migrant workers and their children, in terms of both risk of infection and economic uncertainty. (21) Even as countries begin to reopen and rebuild, it is essential to focus on the challenges that migrant children and the children of migrant workers continue to face.

As lockdowns resulted in school closures globally, migrant children were least likely to benefit from efforts to ensure access to education, such as online or broadcast learning. Migrant children were more likely to lack the necessary equipment or resources, such as an internet connection or computers. (21) Without access to ongoing education and reversing the declines in pre-primary education and primary completion rates, migrant children may fall further behind than their peers and remain vulnerable to exploitative labor situations. In Thailand, for example, the government closed schools for Burmese migrant children because teachers lacked appropriate work credentials, which pushed children into dangerous and low-paying illegal jobs in the seafood industry. Additionally, even though some Burmese children could enroll in Thai public schools, the language barrier and the onset of COVID-related economic difficulties led them to drop out of school altogether and continue working. (22)

Out of school, and in some cases lacking food and income, children in some countries have taken to the streets to survive. (23) In these situations, they can fall prey to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and other abuses, with some families reportedly even taking the tragic step of selling their children into commercial sexual exploitation to obtain food and meet basic needs. (24) Furthermore, social distancing measures and travel restrictions intended to stop the spread of the virus also have led to an increase in sexual and domestic violence against girls, who may be unable to escape abusive environments due to these travel restrictions. The situation is even more dire for migrants, who may fear seeking assistance because of their immigration status. (25)

Although efforts to stop the spread of COVID-19 have impacted all sectors of society and allowed many workers to work remotely, migrants, in particular, tend to work in informal or low-wage industries where telework and social distancing are not an option, and in jobs that are more likely to have disappeared during the pandemic. In Turkey, hundreds of thousands of Syrian refugees and migrants who overwhelmingly work in the informal sector lost their jobs, and a lack of access to personal protective equipment made finding new work even more difficult. Furthermore, the lack of access to health care, particularly for household wage earners, made an already precarious economic situation more desperate, pushing other family members into exploitative work that they otherwise would not consider. (26) As migrant families bear the brunt of the pandemic-related economic downturn, the risk that their children will go to work to support the family increases. (18)

To address these challenges, programs designed to understand and meet the specific needs of migrants are critical. The U.S. Department of Labor's Mexico and Northern Triangle (El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras) technical assistance projects seek to address the root causes of migration in response to the impact of COVID-19 on child labor. As countries begin to ease restrictions and reopen schools and businesses, renewed global efforts to combat child labor will need to place specialized attention on migrant children's needs to ensure that the pandemic-related increase in child labor is not an enduring trend.

A Disproportionate Impact: The Risk to Girls

Growing up is challenging in the best of circumstances; however, the pandemic has put girls at particular risk in many regions and communities. In areas with widespread preexisting issues of commercial sexual exploitation, for instance, the pandemic has placed girls at even greater risk of being exploited, or being trafficked for either labor or sex. See “Box 3: Dangers Downloaded: New Technology and Its Terrible Link to the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children” to learn more. This is in addition to the risks that arise as a result of domestic violence, school closures, and loss of employment and income.

Even without the added pandemic effects, girls have long faced disadvantages in education. When a family with limited resources is faced with the difficult choice of choosing between an education for their sons or daughters, girls may often be the last enrolled and the first withdrawn from schools. Sadly, in some countries, traditional views hold firm that an investment in a girl’s education is an unnecessary cost when weighed against the immediate financial benefit to the family of sending her to work. It is not just finances: girls also face limits in accessing education when schools are far from home and getting there requires a risky journey, often with unsafe and unreliable transportation. Additionally, a number of schools offer inadequate water and sanitation facilities. Girls also face added demands as caretakers for ill family members and are sometimes burdened with increased domestic chores that further diminish their educational opportunities.

Dangers Downloaded: New Technology and Its Terrible Link to the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children

Technology has proven to be a double-edged sword during the pandemic. On the one hand, video calling and conferencing platforms have enabled communication among families, friends, and colleagues who are apart—and have made virtual schooling possible for students at all levels of education. On the other hand, children are more vulnerable than ever to online sexual exploitation due to the effects of national lockdowns, school closures, economic downturns, and heightened screen time.

Commercial sexual exploitation today still means that children or adolescents are being recruited, bought or sold, and used in prostitution, pornography, or pornographic performances, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. However, before the rise of the internet and the use of technology, criminals relied on in-person networks to perpetrate these crimes, restricting them to well-known tactics and methods. Rapidly developing technology and an increase in cheap, high-speed internet access have facilitated an uptick in commercial sexual exploitation of children online. Perpetrators have moved to virtual environments, enabling them to make contact with children, commit crimes, and hide their identities more easily than ever. Perpetrators commonly use social media sites, mobile messaging apps, and private chat rooms to lure children with false promises and “groom” them for sexual purposes. Livestreaming of pornographic performances by children also has become more prevalent in recent years. In the Philippines, for example, children are induced to perform sex acts on live internet broadcasts in windowless dungeon-like buildings commonly known as “cybersex dens.”

The situation has become much worse during the pandemic. With more children spending time online, the U.S. National Center for Missing & Exploited Children received 21.7 million reports of child sexual exploitation around the world through its CyberTipline in 2020, which is a 28 percent increase over the previous year. (27) Cambodian authorities also noted that 15 percent of children reported having been contacted by strangers on social media, and 2 percent reported that they have been asked to share intimate pictures or videos, or perform inappropriate acts in front of their webcams. Additionally, authorities in Mexico reported a 73 percent increase in online child pornography distribution during the pandemic, while SaferNet, a Brazilian NGO that combats internet crime through anonymous reporting, reported nearly 100,000 complaints of child pornography in 2020—more than double the amount received in 2019. (28)

In response, governments around the world had to adapt quickly and respond not only to COVID-19, but also to these increased vulnerabilities that resulted from it. For example, Thailand made its dedicated task force, Thailand Internet Crimes Against Children, into a permanent government agency. Mozambique revised its Penal Code to specifically address and prohibit trafficking for the purposes of child prostitution and pornography, recognizing the threat of online recruitment and children’s increased vulnerability due to virtual schooling. Likewise, Ukraine passed a law that criminalized viewing and storing child sexual abuse materials. (29) And in Georgia, the Prosecutor’s Office strengthened the capacity of its law enforcement by conducting training for prosecutors and investigators, covering online sexual exploitation of children and usage of cryptocurrency within the sphere of child pornography.

As technology continues to advance, this egregious abuse of children will evolve and emerge in new forms. The use of the internet by criminals allows online sexual exploitation to occur across multiple countries with perpetrators and victims scattered around the globe. To meet the pressing need of protecting children from exploitation online, stakeholders must adopt a collaborative approach to keep up with technological advancements, ensure that strong legal frameworks are enforced both nationally and internationally, and continue to adapt to the ever-evolving intersection of technology and crime.

Child Labor in the Gig Economy

Among families in informal work sectors, the pandemic also is worsening vulnerabilities related to labor protections and decent employment. As an alternative to dining in restaurants in 2020, much of the world turned to app-based meal delivery, yet little did diners know that child labor sometimes lay behind the convenience they enjoyed. In Brazil, for example, investigations uncovered children allegedly working for app-based food delivery companies. These children used accounts registered with relatives or friends to sign up as delivery workers as school closures drove them to seek work in gig jobs, which offered less in the way of employment benefits, protections, and oversight. (30) Brazilian labor law permits children to work, in some cases, from the age of 16, yet it does not permit children to work in hazardous conditions such as food delivery by bicycle in urban areas such as Rio de Janeiro and São Paulo. Despite the laws, social media sites were stocked with tips to overcome identity checks on the apps.

A Decision to Build Back Better

At ILAB, we believe that a holistic approach that places children's rights at the center has the best chance of success in eliminating child labor. Amid the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, we must be mindful of the broader development challenges to ending child labor, such as barriers to education and employment, limited decent work opportunities for adults, weak rule of law, discrimination, human rights violations, cultural norms that support child labor, food insecurity, community violence, and other obstacles.

Our reports, policies, and programs tackle child labor within this broader context. All data and research from our information-packed reports also are available in the mobile app Sweat & Toil, which allows users to access more than 1,000 pages of research from this and ILAB's other reports.

ILAB's reports provide critical and actionable information to inform U.S. trade policy, to allow Federal Government agencies to safeguard federal procurement and prevent the importation of goods made with prohibited labor, as well as to help foreign governments build their capacity to prevent and eliminate the worst forms of child labor. With the United Nations declaring 2021 as the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor, ILAB looks to play a role in building back better and creating a more hopeful future for the world's children.

Global Research in a World at a Standstill

At ILAB, we employ a systematic and rigorous process, supporting the collection of in-country data, traveling to conduct firsthand research in hard-to-reach places, and corroborating reports of labor abuses with credible international and local sources. This approach helps ensure the credibility and validity of our publications. Closed borders and global quarantines have limited some of our research efforts that would otherwise involve direct contact with government officials and civil society groups. The evacuation of staff from U.S. embassies and the rightful focus of foreign governments on addressing the existential threat of COVID-19 made timely data collection and research related to child labor and forced labor more challenging for this year's report. We applaud the efforts of our colleagues and partners, foreign and domestic, to persist in their important work since COVID-19 swept the world, notwithstanding the challenges. Despite these challenges, our work continues as we explore new ways to connect virtually with existing partners and even build new digital connections. We are proud to share this year's report as we work to reverse the setbacks over the past 4 years and continue the global fight against child labor, forced labor, human trafficking, and modern slavery. For more information about our efforts to support the private sector, see Box 4.

Comply Chain: Strengthening Systems to Combat Child Labor and Forced Labor

While our reports provide practical knowledge and raise awareness, ILAB has developed tools to help companies play a positive role in the global fight against child labor. Comply Chain is one of those tools and, given the profound risks during the ongoing pandemic, is even more relevant and useful with new examples and topics to reinforce corporate action. Comply Chain is an app designed to provide companies with a step-by-step guide to address child labor and forced labor in their global supply chains. For their part, business enterprises have the responsibility of respecting human rights, including by avoiding causing or contributing to adverse human rights impacts through their own activities; Comply Chain helps them achieve that. Corporate actors are responsible for providing victims with access to effective remedies and for seeking to prevent or mitigate such impacts that are directly linked to their operations, products, or services through their business relationships.

Private sector leadership, for example, can ensure that combating labor abuse in supply chains is a necessary and standard way of doing business. Labor is part of the solution to positive business transformation, and Comply Chain also is a tool for workers and civil society groups to advocate for positive change and help ensure that business works for workers. ILAB also is leveraging its technical assistance projects to get the app into more hands and improve it as a resource. The Cooperation On Fair, Free, Equitable Employment \(COFFEE\) Project, for example, partly centers on the creation of a global compliance system and toolkit with Comply Chain as a resource to enable industry actors to implement robust and sustainable social compliance systems. It also provides guidance materials and trainings for key stakeholders in the global coffee sector to reduce child labor, forced labor, and unacceptable working conditions in business operations and supply chains. The project is piloting a subset of these tools with private sector and industry association partners in three key coffee-producing countries—Brazil, Colombia, and Mexico. The pilots themselves will provide opportunities for expansion and replication. Lessons learned from these pilots will be used to refine the global compliance system and toolkit.

Comply Chain is now available for the first time in Malay – to complement the existing English, French, and Spanish versions. Malay is a common language across Southeast Asia, spoken by nearly 300 million people in Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia, and Singapore, as well as parts of Thailand. ILAB added this Malay translation to help drive government and private sector action to address child labor and forced labor and to allow for wider adoption of Comply Chain as we create new opportunities to support ILAB's mission.

Moreover, ILAB's own List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor has focused considerable attention on forced labor in Malay speaking countries in recent years. The list includes palm oil, produced by forced labor and child labor in Malaysia, in addition to electronics, garments, and rubber gloves produced with forced labor in Malaysia. Other goods on the List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor in Indonesia and Thailand are fish in both countries; rubber, footwear, tin, gold, and tobacco in Indonesia; and sugarcane, garments, pornography, and shrimp in Thailand.

The Technical Approach: ILAB's Projects at Work

ILAB does more than provide resources like our reports or our apps. ILAB also partners with numerous organizations that implement our international technical assistance projects. These implementing organizations (or grantees) are coping on a daily basis with the pandemic's impact on vulnerable workers, children, and families. A number of grantees have already proposed and implemented targeted efforts to raise awareness of the danger posed by the virus and how it may be increasing vulnerability to exploitative labor. The examples below provide a brief snapshot of how ILAB's technical assistance partnerships are directly targeting the resulting issues from the pandemic in the Latin America region.

In Mexico, the World Vision-implemented Campos de Esperanza (Fields of Hope) project used leaflets, posters, and radio broadcasts to get the word out about the risks of COVID-19 to children and families working on sugar and coffee farms in remote communities. In many cases, these people lack access to basic news and information. They also are collaborating with local authorities in Oaxaca and Veracruz to disseminate information about the impact of COVID-19 on children, families, and communities, and how to access medical services beyond the areas where the project works. Additionally, the project is working alongside communities to implement appropriate sanitation practices following recommendations from the World Health Organization (WHO) and the Government of Mexico.

In El Salvador and Honduras, as the pandemic and extreme weather events in 2020 presented unprecedented new challenges, the Youth Pathways Central America (YPCA) project shifted its focus to supporting opportunities for virtual schooling for vulnerable children and virtual training for youth. The YPCA provided digital learning and socio-emotional support to bolster the Ministry of Education's efforts to connect youth, teachers, and parents. The project also provided basic school supplies, such as school kits, that afforded children in poverty the necessary resources to study at home. Additionally, the YPCA distributed in-kind food and hygiene kits through the project's school coordinators in collaboration with school principals.

Through the Avanza and Palma Futuro projects in Colombia and the Okakuaa project in the Paraguayan Chaco region, Partners of the Americas used SMS texts and radio-based public service announcements to disseminate information on self-care, spotting COVID-19 symptoms, and what to do if workers experience these symptoms. Additionally, the Okakuaa project educated employers and workers in Paraguay about government assistance programs available to those impacted by the crisis.

Also in Colombia, the Escuela Nacional Sindical, through Labor Law Enforcement Centers (LECs), will launch a communications campaign aimed at workers in several sectors—cut flowers, mining, palm oil, ports, and sugar. The campaign will provide tips and responses to workers' frequently asked questions and complaints that stem from COVID-19 issues, such as contracts being suspended or collective bargaining rights being violated. The LECs also are tracking and publicizing the main labor violations reported in these sectors that are the result of employer actions during the pandemic. Additionally, the LECs are offering virtual legal assistance to workers with labor complaints and promoting legal protocols that worker organizations or labor NGOs can use to help better organize effective legal actions for workers.

ILAB also is gathering information from our grantees about the impact of COVID-19 on vulnerable workers and their families. For example, researchers at the University of California, Berkeley, are conducting an impact evaluation of awareness-raising campaigns targeting human trafficking and have modified their approach to use safe and socially responsible methods to collect additional information on the impact of COVID-19, in particular on the potential exploitation of migrant domestic workers in Hong Kong.

Finally, ILAB is working directly to address the urgent needs of workers, employers, national governments, and buying partners in the ready-made garment sector as a funder of the Better Work program, having allocated $23 million to the program since 2009. Through the Better Work program, the ILO and International Finance Corporation are disseminating workplace health and safety guidance in local languages in a simple and actionable form. (31) They also are providing technical advice to factories and brands facing unexpected compliance issues resulting from closures and coordinating information campaigns and training with WHO and national partners. Moreover, they are engaging international buyers, national and international constituents, and other institutions to explore opportunities to support and protect suppliers and their workers during the period of economic shutdown. For more information about how ILAB is working with its grantees and partners across the African continent, see “Box 5: New Solutions to Old Problems in Africa.”

New Solutions to Old Problems in Africa

As the COVID-19 pandemic spread to the African continent, many of the staff of ILAB-funded technical assistance projects on the continent confronted this new reality of the deadly virus—a reality that was a challenge as many project tools and work rely on in-person training and/or face-to-face engagement. Many of the projects took bold steps to adjust programming and operations in order to combat child labor in the midst of this global pandemic.

In light of the precautions taken to limit the spread of COVID-19, the Combating Forced Labor and Labor Trafficking of Adults and Children in Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire—or FLIP—project quickly pivoted from in-person larger scale trainings into a hybrid/virtual model and leveraged an interactive platform and curriculum to continue to carry out effective programming.

Like the FLIP project, the Reducing Incidence of Child Labor and Harmful Conditions of Work in Economic Strengthening Initiatives—or RICHES—project sought the safe implementation of activities. To address this challenge, the project digitized the RICHES curriculum and the Entrepreneur Assessment of Business Risks checklist. This helped to mitigate the risks of conducting fieldwork, address in-person training and tool distribution limitations, and increase the use and sustainability of these solutions. This was especially important given the additional pressures on women entrepreneurs to make ends meet during the pandemic, the increased risk of child labor, and the limits on in-person instruction due to COVID-19-related restrictions.

As part of the COVID-19 response plan for the Adwuma Pa project—Empowering Women and Girls in Supply Chains—personal protective equipment, such as hand sanitizer, face masks, and hygiene kits were distributed to all 80 project communities via the municipalities and districts to promote pandemic-free communities and increase prevention and safety protocols. The project also conducted a virtual training, jointly organized by the project and the Cocoa Sustainability Initiative, for 30 representatives of select state agencies in all project districts in July 2020 to emphasize the importance of including a gender and inclusion lens in risk communication and community engagement, and addressing stigma, discrimination, and gender-based violence.

At the end of 2020, ILAB had 49 active projects in 45 countries, many in Sub-Saharan Africa. ILAB is proud to fund all of its projects, each working to overcome the challenges of this global pandemic to deliver real results to the millions of children and adults who continue to suffer labor abuse. Like many of our partners, we look forward to the return to in-person and face-to-face interactions, and a more hopeful future free of child labor and forced labor.

Toward a More Hopeful Future

Although this pandemic has highlighted many harmful labor abuses, it also has demonstrated the need to focus our attention and efforts on realizing the promise of the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor. This pandemic also has confirmed that our challenge to eliminate child labor depends on addressing the fundamental drivers of vulnerability. To remedy the standstill in global progress on child labor, we must address the persistent lack of access to education and the additional lack of adequate social protections, as well as other destabilizing factors such as armed conflict, state fragility, mass displacement and migration, climate change, and gender inequities. As Secretary of Labor, Marty Walsh remarked at the release of the latest global estimates on child labor,

“We achieved progress thanks to decades of collective international action. But that progress could be reversed if we are not vigilant. We must be willing to make the investments and changes needed to put children and workers at the center of our efforts.” We at ILAB believe that we must view child labor through a holistic lens in order to end it and improve the well-being of all, especially those who are most vulnerable. Addressing labor exploitation in a community results in broader development gains, such as heightened economic growth, increased food security, and strengthened public health outcomes, as well as improvements in equity and decreased discrimination. Only by working together can we achieve this holistic mission. In partnership, each of us—government, civil society, workers, and businesses—can make an invaluable contribution and help turn the page on this devastating pandemic and build back better for all our children in the years to come.

ILAB's Projects Addressing COVID-19

ILAB funded 52 active projects & initiatives within 45 countries in 2020.

Campos de Esperanza, Mexico

Provided COVID-19 information to over 5,300 sugarcane cutters and trained more than 545 sugar mill employees on COVID-19 prevention strategies in the fields and mills.

Paraguay Okakuaa, Paraguay

Launched a communications campaign to disseminate information on self-care, identifying COVID-19 symptoms, and what to do if symptoms are identified among workers.

MAP 16, Morocco

Supported distance learning efforts to prevent the exploitation of children, especially girls in domestic labor, due to the challenging economic situation caused by COVID-19.

Adwuma Pa, Ghana

Distributed hand sanitizer, facemasks, and hygiene kits to 80 communities to increase COVID-19 prevention and safety protocols, and trained police and health officials to assess risks females may face due to COVID-19, including discrimination and violence.

Sakriya, Nepal

Provided over 3,000 vulnerable families with critical supplies during COVID-19, which included masks, soap, and food.

FAIR Fish, Thailand

Distributed personal protective equipment and occupational safety and health information to 2,400 migrant workers in the seafood processing supply chain.

Making an Impact

Demonstrating commitment and leadership in the worldwide movement to end child labor, which has contributed to a global reduction of 86 million child laborers since 2000

Providing education and vocational training opportunities to nearly 2 million children

Increasing the capacity of more than 85 countries to address child labor and forced labor

Improving livelihoods for nearly 200,000 vulnerable families

Training more than 65,000 labor inspectors and law enforcement officials

Providing more than 69,000 teachers with training to work with children affected by child labor

Supporting the collection of information on child labor and forced labor through more than 300 surveys, including more than 90 national child labor surveys

The Year in Review

More Than One Hundred Years of Engagement – From Children’s Year to the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor

Introduction

More than 100 years ago, the Children’s Bureau—which was part of the U.S. Department of Labor at the time—proclaimed the start of “Children’s Year” on April 6, 1918, during the final year of the First World War. At the time of this proclamation, the world faced another deadly pandemic that was spreading around the world—the Spanish Flu. Children’s Year was conceived as a wartime campaign to remind the country of the importance of protecting children “as a patriotic duty.” As part of the campaign, the Children’s Bureau and its partners mobilized 11 million volunteers across the nation to help reduce infant deaths. The campaign focused on weighing and measuring children, educating parents on child health, encouraging play, and keeping children in school and out of work.

Since Children’s Year in 1918, the United States and the world have made enormous strides in the protection of children’s rights and well-being. Yet over the past several years, those advances have stalled. Today, as part of the 20th anniversary edition of ILAB’s Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor report, we review the world’s stalled progress toward the eventual elimination of the worst forms of child labor amid another deadly pandemic in the form of COVID-19. The timely declaration by the UN of 2021 as the “International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor” is a moment to think once again about those who are most vulnerable. This is especially vital as the latest Global Estimates of Child Labor from the ILO and UNICEF show that the number of child laborers has risen from 152 million in 2016 to 160 million in 2020, with nearly half of them—79 million—in hazardous work.

Despite these new and troubling numbers, ILAB will continue to build on our earlier work in close coordination with the global community. The eventual eradication of child labor depends on global commitment to these joint efforts. In September 2015, all 193 UN member states adopted the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) – a roadmap for ending poverty; protecting the environment; and promoting peaceful, inclusive, and just societies by 2030. (32) Under SDG 8 on Decent Work and Economic Growth, Target 8.7 calls on governments to “take immediate and effective measures to eradicate forced labor, end modern slavery and human trafficking and secure the prohibition and elimination of the worst forms of child labor, including recruitment and use of child soldiers, and by 2025 end child labor in all its forms.” (33) Alliance 8.7 is a global partnership that provides strategic coordination of diverse stakeholders to achieve Target 8.7. (34) ILAB has actively contributed to the work of Alliance 8.7 since 2017. Even with the ambitious goal of Target 8.7 in our sights, this report’s cover story “Spotlight on a Vulnerable World” has highlighted that children and their families are more vulnerable to labor and human rights abuses due, in part, to gaps in access to education and a lack of access to social programs. The world has responded with insufficient actions to address these challenges since 2016 and even before as global trends worsened child labor risks. As a result, more children are victims of child labor, including its worst forms. (35) As we confront the current reality of stalled global progress toward the eventual elimination of the worst forms of child labor, it is vital that the international community redouble its efforts to ensure that every child is free from labor exploitation and has the opportunity to achieve their full potential. In reviewing the world’s efforts against child labor in 2020, we take stock of the progress made and of the gaps that remain to help focus our global efforts and inform the joint, global work that we must undertake. ## Overview of 2020 Assessments

This year, of the 131 countries and territories assessed, six countries—Argentina, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Mexico, and Peru—received the highest assessment of Significant Advancement (see Figure 4 for a global breakdown of country assessments). These countries made meaningful efforts during the reporting period in all relevant areas, covering legal frameworks, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which in some cases included taking suggested actions recommended in 2019. Each of the six countries met the baseline of minimally acceptable protections needed to receive ILAB’s highest assessment of Significant Advancement. In fact, this year warrants special praise for the Government of Mexico, as the nation achieved the highest rating of Significant Advancement in the first year in which it was assessed a rating. Despite assessments of Significant Advancement, it is important to note that child labor challenges remain in these countries. A Significant Advancement serves as a laudable indicator of a country’s efforts against child labor during the reporting period; it is not a sign that work is over.

It is noteworthy that 14 additional countries and territories would have received an assessment of Significant Advancement had they met the baseline level of protection. These include Brazil, Chile, Cook Islands, Côte d’Ivoire, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Georgia, Madagascar, Malawi, Nepal, Philippines, Rwanda, Sri Lanka, Thailand, and Uzbekistan. For more information about this baseline, see Figure 5.

In total, 73 countries received a Moderate Advancement assessment in 2020. These countries made meaningful efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period in some relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs. Meanwhile, 19 countries received an assessment of Minimal Advancement for making efforts in only a few relevant areas.

Other countries also made efforts to address their child labor situation during the year. Yet, because they simultaneously continued or established a detrimental law, policy, or practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor, the highest assessment level these countries could receive was a Minimal Advancement. Nineteen countries—Afghanistan, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Cambodia, Gabon, Iraq, Kyrgyz Republic, Mali, Mauritania, Moldova, Mongolia, Somalia, Tanzania, The Gambia, Timor-Leste, Tonga, Uganda, Ukraine, and Yemen—implemented or maintained a law, policy, or practice related to access to education, minimum age for work, labor inspection, impunity, criminal treatment of victims, or the recruitment and use of child soldiers that undermined advancement. This year, two new countries were added to this list: Afghanistan and The Gambia. Eight countries received an assessment of No Advancement because they made no effort to prevent the worst forms of child labor: Anguilla; British Virgin Islands; Dominica; Grenada; Montserrat; Niue; Saint Helena, Ascensión, and Tristán da Cunha; and Tokelau. Despite the lack of evidence of child labor, these countries lack legal frameworks that meet international standards, leaving children without an adequate preventative mechanism.

Additionally, some countries could not receive an assessment level beyond No Advancement because they had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents. Unfortunately, three countries—Burma, Eritrea, and South Sudan—were found to be complicit in the use of forced child labor during the reporting period, whether for commercial sexual exploitation, public works projects, or forced recruitment in armed conflict.

Dropping off the list of countries complicit in the use of forced child labor for this year are Afghanistan and the Democratic Republic of the Congo. Afghanistan achieved its first indictment of a government employee—a school headmaster from Logar Province—for bacha bazi crimes allegedly committed in September 2019. Bacha bazi is a form of commercial sexual exploitation of boys. This indictment, along with numerous other prosecutions, convictions, and stringent prison sentences achieved during the year by the Government of Afghanistan, are indicative of a shift away from a culture of impunity to one of accountability. The Democratic Republic of the Congo's Ministry of Defense issued a zero-tolerance policy for child recruitment, and the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo identified and began prosecuting an army officer responsible for operating a child trafficking ring.

Currently, only Christmas Island, Cocos (Keeling) Islands, and Wallis and Futuna fall into the category of No Assessment. This assessment is reserved for countries or territories in which the population of children is either non-existent or extremely small, there is no evidence of the worst forms of child labor and the country appears to have an adequate preventive legal and enforcement framework on child labor, or a country is included in the report for the first time or receives a suggested action for the first time.

SOCIAL PROGRAMS

Safeguarding Progress

- Directly funded a significant social program that includes the goal of eliminating child labor or addresses the root causes of the problem (e.g., lack of education opportunities, poverty, discrimination)

ENFORCEMENT

Putting Legislation to Action

- Made a good faith effort to collect and publish labor and criminal law enforcement data
- Took active measures to investigate, prosecute, convict, and sentence public officials who participate in or facilitate the worst forms of child labor
- Took active measures to ensure that children are not inappropriately incarcerated, penalized, or physically harmed solely for unlawful acts as a direct result of being a victim of the worst forms of child labor
- Imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor
- Designated a competent authority or institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor

LEGISLATION

Establishing a Framework to Prohibit Child Labor

- Established legal prohibitions against the use of children for illicit activities that meet international standards
- Established legal prohibitions against the commercial sexual exploitation of children that meet international standards
- Established legal prohibitions against child trafficking that meet international standards
- Established legal prohibitions against forced labor that meet international standards
- Established a minimum age for hazardous work that meets international standards
- Established a minimum age for work that meets international standards

Overview of Meaningful Efforts

Legal

For the first time in history, an ILO Convention has been ratified by all 187 member states. The ratification of ILO Convention 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor by the Pacific island nation of Tonga represents the culmination of global consensus since the Convention's unanimous adoption by the member countries of the ILO in 1999, along with its corresponding Recommendation No. 190. (36) As another example of global efforts toward the prevention and elimination of the worst forms of child labor, a number of other countries brought into force or ratified the Protocol of 2014 to the 1930 Forced Labor Convention No. 29, including Chile, Costa Rica, Kyrgyz Republic, and Malawi. To learn more about global efforts in this area, see Box 6: The “50 for Freedom” Campaign.

Other countries took similar steps related to ILO instruments as they sought to strengthen their legal frameworks. The Government of Nepal ratified the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons and both Mexico and Namibia ratified ILO Domestic Workers Convention No. 189. Although the country has not ratified this particular Convention, Ukraine introduced draft legislation to protect domestic workers at the national level. As part of a similar effort to protect domestic workers, Peru passed Law 31047, which sets the minimum age for domestic work at 18. Finally, Burma ratified ILO Minimum Age Convention No. 138.

Several countries also made efforts to strengthen the legal framework to protect children from hazardous work. Thailand enacted a new law, which sets the minimum age for workers employed as deep-sea divers, a notoriously hazardous occupation, at 18 years old. In October 2020, Chile amended its Labor Code by establishing that the government must publish a new list of hazardous activities and occupations for children and adolescents. In neighboring Argentina, the Buenos Aires Ministry of Labor issued a regulation to close a loophole that enabled companies to exploit underage workers through sub-contracting arrangements. North Macedonia also made an amendment to its Labor Relations Act, increasing fines issued to employers who fail to provide proper protections to workers under age 18, in addition to those who employ minors under age 15 who are considered to be in ill health. To codify legal definitions around hazardous work in Georgia, the Health Care Minister passed a decree that defines hazardous work, lists occupations prohibited for children under age 18. Finally, in Burundi, the government passed a new labor code that made important progress in bringing Burundi's legal framework in line with international standards, such as raising the minimum age for work to 16 and the minimum age for light work to 15. To learn more about hazardous work, see Figure 6. For a global snapshot on the minimum age for work and hazardous work, see Figure 7.

The inability of children to attend school remains a challenge in the fight against child labor; however, increasing access to education through legislation helps. Sri Lanka raised the minimum age for employment from 14 to 16 years old, matching the compulsory education age. Rwanda's Ministry of Education and Parliament also passed a new education law in early 2021 which stipulates that primary education is free and compulsory up to the first 6 years of schooling. In November 2020, the Maldives enacted a new Education Act that provides for free public education. Additionally, Comoros revised its education law to change the compulsory age of education to 16 years of age, compared to 12 years of age previously. Bolivia approved a resolution enabling Venezuelan minors to attend school without identification documents or expired documents to regularize their immigration status.

The “50 for Freedom” Campaign

The global fight against forced labor reached a major milestone on March 17, 2021, after Sudan became the 50th country to adopt the ILO’s Forced Labor Protocol. The Protocol is a legally binding pact that supplements Forced Labor Convention No. 29 of 1930. By ratifying the Forced Labor Protocol, governments pledge to do more than just criminalize and prosecute cases of forced labor. Governments commit to providing specific guidance on preventing forced labor, strengthening labor inspections, protecting victims, and ensuring that victims have access to justice and compensation.

There are an estimated 25 million men, women, and children trapped in forced labor—trafficked, held in bondage, or working under slavery-like conditions. Considered modern slavery, forced labor is defined as work performed involuntarily and under the menace of any penalty. One in four victims are children, and women and girls are disproportionately affected.

Matters have only gotten worse due to the COVID-19 pandemic. In 2020, governments closed schools and enforced lockdowns while global unemployment reached 33 million. (37) During the same time, reports from human rights organizations showed that forced labor rose in some locations where companies struggled to cope with the demand for medical supplies and equipment. (38) The pandemic not only exacerbated some of the main drivers of forced labor, it also created additional demand and opportunities for this form of modern slavery.

With Sudan’s adoption, the ILO achieved the goal it set out in the “50 for Freedom” campaign launched in 2014. The ILO developed the campaign, in collaboration with the International Organization of Employers and the International Trade Union Confederation, to encourage governments to ratify the Forced Labor Protocol and to raise awareness about modern slavery.

The “50 for Freedom” campaign is a significant step in strengthening the global fight against all forms of forced labor, but it is also just one step. With fewer than 10 years remaining to achieve SDG 8.7 to eradicate forced labor, end modern slavery and human trafficking, and secure the prohibition and elimination of the worst forms of child labor, countries must collectively increase efforts to end these abusive practices.

What is Hazardous Child Labor?

ILO Recommendation 190<sup>1</sup> calls on governments to consider the following when determining work that is prohibited for children.

Work which exposes children to physical, psychological, or sexual abuse

Work underground, under water, at dangerous heights, or in confined spaces

Work with dangerous machinery, equipment and tools, or which involves the manual handling or transport of heavy loads

Work in an unhealthy environment which may, for example, expose children to hazardous substances, agents or processes, or to temperatures, noise levels, or vibrations damaging to their health

Work under particularly difficult conditions such as work for long hours or during the night or work where the child is unreasonably confined to the premises of the employer

Enforcement

As the global pandemic moved many in-person activities online, Colombia used virtual capabilities during the pandemic to carry out 7,624 virtual labor inspections and conduct trainings for new and veteran inspectors, including training 107 new inspectors on “Fundamental Rights at Work.” In Honduras, the government began implementing the new Child Labor Inspection Protocol, which established guidelines and procedures for inspectors to follow to ensure that inspections appropriately identify and address child labor violations. It also assisted non-governmental partners in the creation of a virtual training platform designed to train inspectors on the Child Labor Inspection Protocol. Paraguay’s Ministry of Labor also launched virtual training curricula for inspectors and created a labor complaint hotline. See Figure 8 for an overview of global enforcement efforts.

Also during the pandemic, as online crimes against children rose, Thailand made its Internet Crimes Against Children task force into a permanent agency to solidify efforts to combat these crimes. Read more about the troubling link between technology and commercial sexual exploitation of children in “Dangers Downloaded” on page 15.

Many countries also increased the funding available for labor law enforcement and raised awareness about labor rights abuses. The Montenegro labor inspectorate’s budget increased from $584,447 to $887,498. Likewise, Georgia doubled the budget of its labor inspectorate. Beyond mere funding, in Mongolia, the government distributed 50,000 informational passport inserts at its borders with Russia and China to raise awareness on human trafficking issues and provide information regarding resources for potential victims, including 1,000 children traveling abroad. In Kazakhstan, the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection added forced labor indicators to labor inspection checklists, and updated labor inspectors’ job descriptions to include detection and referral of potential forced labor cases to law enforcement. Focusing on its essential cotton harvest, Uzbekistan provided special badges to civil society monitors that allowed them to monitor labor conditions in the cotton harvest despite COVID-19 restrictions.

Also in an effort to prioritize vital work in 2020, Jordan's Ministry of Labor conducted 850 targeted child labor inspections in the agricultural sector for the first time throughout the country. The Ministry of Labor also developed a new website and mobile phone application that, once operational, will allow the public to report cases of child labor and the Ministry of Labor to log those cases into the National Child Labor Database.

Very importantly, Somalia's Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs established a labor inspectorate after operating for several years without such an agency. Further south, Zambia doubled labor inspectorate funding to $281,520 from $140,000 the previous year. Uganda and the Central African Republic both doubled their number of labor inspectors. Nigeria also hired more than 400 new labor inspectors during the reporting period. And as a sign of concentrated efforts to increase enforcement efforts, Benin nearly tripled its number of labor inspections. Aware that more inspectors alone are not enough, the Democratic Republic of the Congo's government task force on the Africa Growth and Opportunity Act, in conjunction with its Ministry of Employment, Labor, and Social Welfare, published a manual to address child labor in the country's agricultural sector. In the Horn of Africa region, Djibouti's Ministry of Labor unveiled a national labor inspection strategy, and for the first time, the labor inspectorate targeted sectors and geographical areas where children are at risk of child labor, including its worst forms. Providing its inspectors with the tools for the job, Ethiopia also collaborated with the ILO to develop a digital inspection system, which was completed in 2020.

Coordination

With a great number of enforcement efforts, vibrant and robust coordination at the government level, in tandem with civil society, is essential. As just one example of intra-governmental cooperation, Chile established the Tacna-Arica Bi-Regional Roundtable to coordinate efforts between the governments of Chile and Peru to prevent and eradicate child labor in the border area. Peru's National Steering Committee for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor coordinated virtually, in part through messaging platforms, due to in-person meeting restrictions amid the COVID-19 pandemic. There also were online training sessions covering 22 of the 25 regional taskforces—representing each of Peru's 25 regions—to combat child labor. Further north in the Caribbean, the Government of Jamaica developed and released a National Referral Mechanism for child trafficking victims as an objective under the Child Protection Compact, in partnership with the United States.

As we look to the Indo-Pacific region, the Philippines established the Task Force Against the Trafficking of Overseas Filipino Workers to coordinate investigative and protective follow-up on trafficking cases referred by the Department of Foreign Affairs' overseas missions. Pakistan, for its part, formally constituted and appointed members to the National Commission on the Rights of the Child, which includes two representatives who are children.

In Jordan, the Ministry of Labor, with input from UNICEF, developed standard operating procedures defining the roles of the Ministry of Labor, the Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Social Development, and the Juvenile Police Department in combating child labor. In nearby Egypt, the National Coordination Committee on Preventing Illegal Migration and Combating Trafficking in Persons launched the second phase of its "Together Against Human Trafficking" awareness campaign in partnership with the International Organization for Migration. The campaign included a public service announcement featuring prominent Egyptian celebrities.

In Albania, the Ministry of Justice launched the Integrated System of Data on Justice for Children, which will allow law enforcement professionals to more easily cooperate with colleagues throughout the justice system, including courts. In Uzbekistan, the National Sub-Commission on Combating Forced Labor drafted an Action Plan based on international recommendations to combat child labor and strengthen worker protections.

In East Africa, Uganda's National Steering Committee on the Elimination of Child Labor was reconstituted during the reporting period. Zambia likewise reconstituted its National Steering Committee on Child Labor. In Côte d'Ivoire, the Ministry of Women, Family, and Children created a "street team" of social workers to identify victims of child labor. Next door, Ghana's Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations' Child Labor Unit developed the Inter-Sectoral Standard Operating Procedure for child protection and family welfare, with support from UNICEF. The Child Labor Unit also conducted field visits in the Oti Region, Volta Region, Central Region, and Eastern Region, helping to expand enforcement of labor laws across the country.

Policy

A number of countries established or implemented policies to help focus attention and resources to combat child labor. Argentina launched a new initiative as part of its Third National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Regulation of Adolescent Work to train agricultural extension agents in identifying and responding to cases of child labor. Further, the ILO implemented its Model of Child Labor Risk Identification (MIRTI) tool in several countries, which identified high-risk areas for child labor. For example, Guatemala's Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs and the Thematic Working Group for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor developed its model in anticipation of the effective end of the Roadmap to make Guatemala a Country Free of Child Labor and Its Worst Forms in 2020. With the help of the MIRTI tool, vulnerability maps for the 8 regions and 22 departments of the country were developed, as well as a map at the national level. Each of these maps includes a respective analysis on risk and protection factors associated with the probability of child labor in the 340 municipalities of the country in 2020. Costa

Rica published its first findings from its Child Labor Risk Identification Model, a statistical tool designed to identify localities with the greatest risk of child labor in order to develop targeted policies and strategies. Jamaica implemented the Child Labor Risk Identification Model as well. Other countries in the region also sought to move policies forward. For example, Haiti established the National Social Protection and Promotion Policy, and Honduras established the Inter-Institutional Strategy for Homeless Families and Children.

In India, the Government of Karnataka in southwest India released a comprehensive standard operating procedure (SOP) on human trafficking in collaboration with civil society organizations. The SOP covers sex trafficking, child beggary, child labor, and bonded labor. In Sri Lanka, the government launched the National Alternative Care Policy, which includes a section addressing child labor, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

In the Middle East and North Africa region, Morocco became a "pathfinder country," joining 21 other countries around the world as part of Alliance 8.7. In nearby Tunisia, the government established the Second Chance program to support dropouts in completing their education or receiving vocational training. And in September 2020, Tunisia's Ministry of Education inaugurated the country's first Second Chance School in the capital Tunis, and a team has been trained to evaluate, support, and supervise students wishing to return to school. The pilot program is scheduled to expand during 2021–2022 to additional regions across the country.

Serbia's Ministry of the Interior and Ministry of Education worked with local police forces to educate fourth, fifth, and sixth grade children about safety and security issues, including child labor. To reach an even wider audience and respond to barriers to in-person training due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the program was turned into an online video as well. Nearby, Kosovo developed a Strategy on the Rights of the Child, which calls for a comprehensive framework for the protection of children's rights, including the prevention, protection, and reintegration of children involved in hazardous child labor, such as street work and underground ore extraction.

The Government of the Kingdom of Eswatini published its first-ever uniform guidelines for providing shelter and caring for victims of trafficking and gender-based violence. Additionally, South Sudan's Comprehensive Action Plan to End & Prevent All Grave Violations Against Children, which applies to all state and non-state groups, came into force under the February 2020 transitional government.

Programs

In the Indo-Pacific region, Tonga published the results of its Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey, the first-ever nationwide survey on children and women in the country. The survey, conducted in 2019 with technical support from UNICEF, the United Nations Population Fund, and the Pacific Community, showed that 26 percent of children ages 5 to 17 were involved in economic activities and 28 percent of children were exposed to hazardous working conditions. Likewise, Nepal published its Report on Employment Relationship Survey in the Brick Industry in Nepal, providing information on the prevalence of child labor, forced labor, and bonded labor in the brick production sector. Sadly, there are an estimated 17,738 child laborers in the brick kilns of Nepal, with 15,400 of these children engaged in hazardous work. This information allows policymakers and programs to better target resources and efforts.

In the Middle East and North Africa region, Egypt declared $50 million in additional funding to support the Takaful and Karama programs. These programs are funded by the Ministry of Social Solidarity to promote school attendance and health monitoring for children by providing income supplements to poor families. Between March and October 2020, 309,748 new families were added to the Takaful and Karama programs. Financial support to vulnerable families is a lifeline that helps minimize child labor risks.

In the Europe and Eurasia region, Georgia's Ministry of Education, Science, Culture, and Sport created platforms for distance learning and the Public Broadcaster launched the "TV School" educational project to broadcast the national curriculum's standard lessons in Georgian, minority languages, and sign language. As an analysis of the most recent global estimates on child labor revealed, child labor is deeply entwined with a lack of access to education. Programs like Georgia's "TV School" allow children to continue schooling when they would otherwise not do so.

Similarly, recognizing the need to expand into alternative avenues for education during the COVID-19 pandemic, Rwanda launched audio lessons via national radio in response to the pandemic, and monitoring data showed that more than half of school-age children were listening to the broadcasts. Following pandemic-related school closures in March 2020, UNICEF and South Sudan's Ministry of General Education and Instructions developed and implemented distance-learning programs. As of December 2020, UNICEF's radio learning programs and television broadcasts allowed 1.5 million preschool, primary, and secondary students to continue their education. Yet not all interventions were digital. In Ethiopia's capital city of Addis Ababa, meals, books, and writing equipment were provided to more than 300,000 students. The provision of meals is important because, for many children, school is not just a place that nourishes the mind, but also a place that provides daily meals that allow children to learn without hunger.

In conclusion, these examples are just a snapshot of the more than 600 meaningful efforts undertaken by countries cataloged in this year's report.

Overview of Major Gaps

This year's report highlights a number of gaps that continue to blunt progress toward the eventual elimination of child labor. The vast majority—nearly 60 percent—of the suggested actions assigned to each country and territory in the report fall into the areas of legal framework and enforcement. Noteworthy gaps related to social programs remain as well—comprising the third largest share of suggested actions, followed by government policies, and then coordination. The suggested actions included for each of the 131 countries and territories provide a roadmap for policymakers to ensure that they uphold their commitments to prevent and eliminate child labor. Converting these commitments into action is the first step to reverse the stalled progress against child labor. To see which countries have the highest percentage of working children, reference Figure 9.

Top 10 Countries with the Highest Number of Working Children, Ages 5-14*

ILAB commends countries that collect and publish data on child labor. Gathering data through surveys, and providing them to the public demonstrates the commitment of governments to transparency in addressing child labor and acknowledgment that data collection is vital to the design and implementation of sound policies and programs.

Legal

A robust legal framework that protects children is a necessary foundation to ensure progress against child labor, including its worst forms. Unfortunately, this year’s report notes many remaining gaps in this area remaining gaps in this area (see Figure 10).

Twenty countries and territories in every region, including Bangladesh, Georgia, Guinea, Haiti, Lebanon, and Niger, among others, have labor laws that do not fully cover children working in the informal sector. An even greater number of countries have gaps related to hazardous work—a category representing 12 percent of all legal gaps. As one example, laws in Bangladesh that prohibit some types of hazardous work for children are not comprehensive and do not include key sectors in which child labor is present, such as garments.

Gaps in criminal laws persist for many countries as well. For example, laws prohibiting child trafficking in Bhutan, Brazil, Comoros, Nepal, Niue, Pakistan, and Uganda do not fully meet international standards because they require that the use of force, threats, violence, coercion, fraud, or abuse be documented for an incident of trafficking to be established as a crime. Countries from Afghanistan to Yemen also have gaps in forced labor prohibitions. For example, Armenia has not codified a definition of forced labor, and Mali does not criminally prohibit hereditary slavery, in addition to other forms of forced labor.

Many countries in all regions fail to fully criminalize the use, procuring, and offering of children for prostitution, the production of pornography, and pornographic performances. In Nigeria, not all state laws criminalize both domestic and international trafficking or trafficking for the purposes of forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Many countries, including Grenada and Western Sahara, also do not criminally prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of a child for prostitution.

Encompassing more than 13 percent of all legal gaps, gaps in prohibitions against non-state armed groups are the most common and persistent issue for many countries in the report. Read more about child soldiers and the need for additional actions to address the use of children in armed conflict in “Box 7: Stolen Childhoods: The Story of Child Soldiers.”

Beyond labor and criminal laws, 19 countries lack laws that ensure free, basic public education. The lack of these safeguards effectively limit children’s access to education and a better future.

13-year-old Jackson (name changed) stands during a ceremony to release children from the ranks of armed groups and start the process of reintegration. Yambio, South Sudan. April 17, 2018.

In a pre-dawn raid, a militia abducts a 14-year-old shepherd from a scrub-covered plain. Within months, he will learn to clean, strip, reassemble, and fire a Kalashnikov. Within the year, he will brandish this weapon on the battlefield in a war he does not understand.

Half a world away, a flamboyant cartel lieutenant known for flaunting diamond-encrusted bracelets on social media invites a group of out-of-school teenagers to a private party. He presents them with a choice: silver or lead? Join or die.

The use of children in armed combat does not belong to a single region or era. During the American Civil War, boys as young as 9 years old signaled battle formations using distinctive drumbeat patterns. Hundreds of thousands of children fought in both World Wars' European theaters.

Today, some 357 million girls and boys—or 1 in 6 children—live under the shadow of war or armed conflict. Children are direct participants in at least 18 current conflicts around the world. Additionally, our research shows that in 12 countries, children are victimized twice—first, by the armed groups who recruit them, and again by government forces who imprison children for their ties to these groups.

Over the past three decades, the number of children affected by armed conflict has grown considerably. More than 426 million children lived in an active conflict zone in 2019, compared to 200 million in 1990—an increase of more than 50 percent. (39) The incidence of child labor in countries affected by armed conflict is also 77 percent higher than the global average, while the incidence of hazardous work is 50 percent higher in countries affected by armed conflict than in the world as a whole. (40-42) Additionally, attacks against schools, students, and teachers continued, which ranged from the destruction of facilities to armed occupation of schools, and from physical and sexual violence to the recruitment of students. (42)

ILAB is working to end these practices. Our work takes on special significance this year as we observe the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor amid a once-in-a-century pandemic. As COVID-19 upended the global economy, more than 150 million children fell into poverty. Hundreds of millions did not attend school in 2020, and at least 24 million children may drop out permanently. (43) These shocks can push children into child labor, including armed combat.

The withdrawal of state and humanitarian actors is both obscuring and compounding the scale of the crisis. Border closures and distancing measures interrupted United Nations-led verification processes, including monitoring and reporting mechanisms that track the recruitment of children in armed conflict. These delays mean that the full impact of the pandemic on recruitment patterns may not be known for months or even years. Disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration programs also were curtailed or suspended while governments and NGOs dramatically scaled back age screening missions, child-friendly spaces, and family reunification services.

The pandemic underscored the vital role of legal, law enforcement, and social programs in protecting children from recruitment. Our data suggest that 65 countries currently fail to meet international standards for the prohibition of military recruitment by non-state armed groups. Similarly, our reports identified 77 countries and territories that need to take additional actions to address child soldiering—from amending laws to protecting survivors. School closures and economic shocks have compounded these vulnerabilities, with some children seeing few alternatives to joining armed groups.

The overwhelming evidence shows that so much more needs to be done for these children. Inaction is not an option.

Enforcement

Gaps related to enforcement make up the single largest area, comprising more than 36 percent of all suggested actions in this year's report.

A particularly tragic example is that of the Government of the Philippines, which did not adequately protect children allegedly engaged in drug trafficking from inappropriate incarceration or physical harm during detention, nor did it ensure that children released from custody were placed in accredited rehabilitation centers. Additionally, the government did not investigate or prosecute police officers accused of extrajudicial killings of children during anti-drug operations in 2020. As an additional example of the global nature of these gaps, in the Middle East and North Africa region, Iraqi and Kurdistan Regional Government authorities continued to inappropriately detain and prosecute, without legal representation, children allegedly affiliated with ISIS—some of whom were victims of forcible recruitment and use—and used abusive interrogation techniques and torture to gain children's confessions. Moreover, in Sub-Saharan Africa, the Somali National Army continued to recruit and use children in armed conflict, in violation of Somalia's national law.

This year, Cambodia is assessed as having made only Minimal Advancement because the government failed to take active measures to investigate, prosecute, convict, and sentence public officials who participate in or facilitate the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation of children and debt-based forced labor in brick kilns. Additionally, during the reporting period, judges were allegedly reported to have accepted bribes in return for the dismissal of charges, acquittal, and reduced sentencing for individuals committing such crimes, especially for those with alleged ties to the government, making children more vulnerable to child labor. The lack of prosecution of government officials was noted in several other countries, including Afghanistan, Burma, India, Mali, and Uganda. In fact, more than 25 percent of all the proposed enforcement actions relate to gaps in criminal law enforcement prosecution.

Even with dedicated public servants, who comprise the overwhelming majority of officials, many labor inspectorates lack proper funding and training to address child labor. Nearly 35 percent of all the suggested actions related to enforcement are linked to gaps in enforcement resources and training.

Even labor inspectorates that have resources sometimes lack mandates. Forty-three countries, from Afghanistan to Zimbabwe, lack the authority to assess penalties, which limits the labor inspectorate's ability to ensure that labor laws are enforced. Even with the authority to assess penalties, a referral mechanism to ensure that complaints are routed to enforcement agents is often missing. Fourteen countries, including Pakistan and Vanuatu lack such a mechanism.

Shockingly, a number of countries have additional restrictions on their labor inspectorates. In Tonga, there are no labor inspectors and no legal authority to conduct labor inspections. Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. In Armenia, while a new labor inspectorate was established in 2017 that replaced the former state health inspectorate, the law still does not permit unannounced inspections. Similarly, Mongolia is not permitted to conduct unannounced labor inspections. And in the case of Moldova, in August 2018, the government amended its laws such that unannounced inspections, even those based on a complaint or at the request of law enforcement or other state bodies, are permitted only on the basis of a risk assessment that indicates an immediate threat to the environment, life, health, or property.

The Kyrgyz Republic extended a 2019 moratorium on labor inspections until 2022. Although the government amended this moratorium in 2020 to permit labor inspections based on formal complaints, the Ministry of Economy must approve worksite visits associated with such inspections and, in practice, announces these visits in advance. As a result, unannounced inspections remain severely restricted. Azerbaijan extended a similar moratorium on labor inspections until January 1, 2022. While inspectors can conduct desk reviews in response to complaints, the lack of proactive or onsite inspection mechanisms may leave potential violations of child labor laws undetected in workplaces.

In Sub-Saharan Africa, Gabon failed to provide evidence that it conducted worksite inspections during the reporting period. Like counterparts elsewhere, the labor inspectorate in The Gambia suspended inspections in March 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic, and the government has not indicated when labor inspections will resume.

To help identify how labor inspectorates, trade policymakers, corporate compliance officers, procurement officials, and others can better target the enforcement of child labor in the production of keygoods and products, ILAB has developed the Better Trade Tool, which matches ILAB's essential reporting with trade data.

Coordination

Even with an appropriate mix of laws and enforcement, a lack of coordination can derail efforts to combat child labor effectively. Although comprising only 8 percent of all gaps noted in this year's report, gaps in coordination can prove to be fundamental as they cause a ripple effect of breakdowns in other areas. The vast majority—almost one-third—of these coordination gaps relate to the inability of existing coordinating mechanisms to carry out mandates. In Eswatini and

Ethiopia, for example, the individual mandates of various coordinating mechanisms in both countries lack clear definition.

A number of other coordination gaps relate to the lack of funding for coordinating mechanisms, effectively leaving these committees unable to take action and conduct work. This problem is particularly acute in Sub-Saharan African countries. In Burkina Faso, for example, there is poor coordination among ministries and a lack of resources, such as computers and electricity, which continues to hamper the government's ability to coordinate efforts to fully address child trafficking. In the Democratic Republic of the Congo, many committees had similar mandates, duplicated efforts, and lacked resources and trained personnel. In Gabon, all coordination committees were inactive in 2020, and as a result, some committee members resorted to using their personal funds to support human trafficking victims. Similarly, coordinating bodies in Guinea and Kenya faced constraints on activities due to a lack of sufficient funding.

Other coordination gaps relate to the lack of any functioning coordination mechanism dedicated to combating the worst forms of child labor. Eleven countries, including Central African Republic, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, and Vanuatu, among others, lack a coordinating body that is active and addresses all forms of child labor.

Policy

This year's report noted a number of countries that lacked policies to address child labor. Almost half of all policy gaps are with regard to the lack of any information related to policies and the lack of information related specifically to policy implementation. The archipelagic Indo-Pacific country of the Maldives lacks a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor, including forced labor in domestic work and drug trafficking. Mexico also lacks a policy that addresses all of the worst forms of child labor, such as child trafficking and the use of children in commercial sexual exploitation and in illicit activities. Likewise, Ukraine's policies do not address hazardous child labor in mining. Algeria's policies do not address all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation, forced begging, and street work. On a similar note, Sierra Leone lacks policies to address child labor in sectors in which child labor is present, such as mining and quarrying, as well as in commercial sexual exploitation. Gabon also lacks policies that address domestic work and work in transportation. Additionally, a smaller set of countries have relevant policies that fail to integrate child labor issues. For example, countries such as Bangladesh, Jamaica, Solomon Islands, and Zambia have not integrated child labor elimination and prevention strategies into various education and development policies. Persistent gaps in various interconnected policies limit the ability of governments to tackle child labor in a holistic manner.

Programs

Throughout the world, children remain vulnerable to child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking for a variety of social, political, and economic reasons. Families facing poverty may encourage young children to work, sometimes unknowingly exposing them to dangerous conditions; schools may close due to political instability or pandemic-related shutdowns; or societal norms may prioritize a culture of child labor over education. This report noted insufficient social programs in various countries in all regions. Most notable, approximately one-quarter of gaps in the social program area are related to access to education. Read more in "Box 8: Discrimination: Its Ugly Impact on Decreasing Access to Education and Increasing Child Labor Vulnerabilities."

Discrimination: Its Ugly Impact on Decreasing Access to Education and Increasing Child Labor Vulnerabilities

It is consistently clear that when children cannot access education, they become more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. It is also clear that a common barrier to education is discrimination.

Discrimination based on race or ethnicity, gender, language, migration status, sexual orientation, or disability status can limit children's access to education. Our research has shown that discrimination knows no geographic limits, and in each region covered in our reporting, discrimination has played a role in the exploitation of children.

This year's report highlights that migration and refugee status, or simply being an ethnic minority, left many children vulnerable. In Bangladesh, over 400,000 Rohingya children are living in refugee camps following the Burmese military's ethnic cleansing operations in 2017. Historically, the government has permitted international organizations, such as UNICEF, UNESCO, and UNHCR, to provide some basic education services to primary school-aged Rohingya children, however, the government has further reduced access to humanitarian assistance. In Moldova, widespread discrimination against Roma has caused high dropout rates, leaving this population subject to child labor and forced begging more often than ethnically Moldovan children. In Yemen, the government failed to make efforts to address discrimination in schools against children from the Muhamasheen community, leading to their increased vulnerability to child labor. The situation in Mauritania is particularly troubling as the government has required proof of marriage and biological parents' citizenship for children to obtain a birth certificate since 2011. As a result, children born out of wedlock and many Haratine and Sub-Saharan ethnic minority children, including those of slave descent, have been prevented from being registered at birth. Because birth certificates are required for enrollment in secondary school in Mauritania, children as young as age 12 cannot access education, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

Gender discrimination also contributes to barriers to education that increase girls' vulnerability to exploitation in the worst forms of child labor. The ILO's previous global estimates on child labor had noted that gender dynamics play into distinct child risks and outcomes for boys and girls. Boys have made up a higher percentage of child labor, particularly hazardous child labor, worldwide in the past decade. At the same time, girls have made up a greater presence in household and domestic labor.

In Timor-Leste, some school principals force girls to leave school when they become pregnant. Likewise, the Mainland Government of Tanzania explicitly supports the routine expulsion of pregnant students from public schools, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. In Nepal, more than 32 percent of schools lack separate toilet facilities for girls, resulting in increased dropout rates around the time of puberty. The absence of sanitation facilities is not uncommon and also was found in Cambodia. In other countries, such as Papua New Guinea and Sierra Leone, girls face gender-based violence from teachers and other students, which may discourage their attendance or cause them to drop out. Finally, in countries such as Burma and South Sudan, young girls are forced into marriage, which not only subjects them to sexual violence but also denies them the right to education, continuing the cycle of exploitation and poverty.

Language remains a significant barrier to education. In Paraguay, a 2019 study estimated that half of all children in indigenous communities do not attend school. Children in these communities often speak the indigenous language Guaraní exclusively, whereas schools provide Spanish language education. The San ethnic community in Botswana also faces linguistic barriers in school settings, as do children in Cambodia, Belize, Mexico, and Thailand. All of these communities experienced higher rates of child labor.

An additional basis for discrimination may be a child's sexual orientation. In Thailand, for example, children identifying as LGBTQI+ experienced higher rates of harassment and bullying in school settings, which may lead to greater dropout rates and incidences of child labor. Children with disabilities also face structural barriers around the globe. In Azerbaijan, in particular, a general social stigma against individuals with disabilities discourages their inclusion in education, despite government efforts to expand inclusive services. In Mongolia, children with disabilities also face issues with accessing education.

The continued discrimination against children in school settings remains a key factor in the pervasiveness of child labor. When children are denied a safe, nurturing educational atmosphere, they are much more likely to be exploited for labor, sexual practices, or violent acts. That is why it is increasingly important for governments to ensure that discrimination is not tolerated, and the cyclical nature of child labor and poverty are addressed by ensuring equal access to education.

A number of countries, particularly in Sub-Saharan Africa, lack programs that reach children working in agriculture and domestic work, or those vulnerable to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, forced begging, and hazardous street work. This is the case in Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea-Bissau, Lesotho, and The Gambia, among others. As most children in child labor are not in an employment relationship with a third-party employer but instead work on family farms and in family enterprises, it is critical to understand and address family reliance on children's labor in the absence of strong social protections and income support. There are not enough programs that address the most vulnerable groups, for example, indigenous and migrant populations, as well as those facing gender-specific child labor risks. Gender-specific child labor risks and outcomes are likely to persist with regard to migration, armed conflict, and climate change. Read more about gender-based discrimination in "Box 9: Vulnerability and LGBTQI+." The development of robust social programs that reach all children to provide support against the worst forms of child labor is key to making broader progress toward ending child labor. (45)

An additional challenge is the lack of reliable data on child labor. In a large number of countries, including Oman, South Africa, and Uzbekistan, among others, statistics on child labor are simply neither collected nor published. For a more in-depth regional analysis of government efforts and challenges in 2020, see Figures 11-12.

Vulnerability and LGBTQI+

Children thrive in safe and supportive environments, yet LGBTQI+ children are often excluded from these environments and at greater risk to child labor. Many LGBTQI+ children experience bullying and discrimination at school and may refuse to return. Deprived of access to vital learning, children may find themselves cut off from decent work as adults and unable to secure their futures. LGBTQI+ children also face challenges at home. If parental figures and guardians reject or abuse a child based on the child's sexual orientation or gender identity, that child may be forced into homelessness or risk exposure to further violence. Without education and social support, they are at risk of abuse, neglect, poor health, and violence. These risks contribute to a greater likelihood that a child may end up in child labor and may experience life-long challenges.

On February 4, 2021, Secretary of Labor Marty Walsh reaffirmed the presidential action to promote and protect the human rights of LGBTQI+ persons around the world, including by pursuing an end to violence and discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, or sex characteristics. (46) The world must prioritize addressing vulnerabilities that LGBTQI+ children face to ensure that all persons can enjoy decent work and fulfill their full potential. This year's report highlights positive steps various countries have taken to address child labor issues in the LGBTQI+ population. For example, the Government of Thailand piloted a program designating its first shelter out of 85 to specifically provide services to LGBTQI+ human trafficking victims, including children. Rather than being met with the threat of violence, these children can connect with services specifically targeted to their needs.

Yet, many countries can do more. The protection of the rights of LGBTQI+ individuals requires not just awareness and support, but also collaborative efforts to actively address vulnerabilities. Governments alongside other stakeholders must pinpoint the risks that LGBTQI+ children face to ensure that the labor rights of people of all orientations and identities are safeguarded.

Call to Action

Eradicating child labor requires a holistic, accelerated approach. It is time to recognize that concerted and consistent action is necessary to achieve demonstrable change. ILO remains committed to protecting the dignity of workers everywhere. This report demonstrates that, in many countries, dignity remains under threat as global progress against child labor has stalled. While the path to a world free of child labor is fraught with challenges, we must continue toward this ambitious goal. We must all work in tandem to create meaningful change to eradicate child labor on a global scale. Our greatest hope for a better tomorrow depends upon our ability to build a world where children are free to learn and play and not toil and labor.

The U.S. Experience

“As workers return to the workplace, the U.S. Department of Labor is committed to ensuring their well-being and safety. This includes combating labor abuses such as child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking, both in the U.S. and abroad.”

— Marty Walsh, Secretary of Labor

The COVID-19 pandemic, and the resulting social distancing measures and partial economic shutdown of businesses, schools, and activities, have had a profound impact on the U.S. labor market as a whole and on individuals’ jobs and livelihoods. As of summer 2021, nearly 10 million Americans remained unemployed, 14 million renters had fallen behind on rent payments, and 29 million adults—as well as at least 8 million children—were struggling with food insecurity. Women, communities of color, and underserved families have suffered disproportionately from the economic fallout of the pandemic.

While the U.S. labor market continues to improve, significant labor and employment challenges remain. These include restoring employment numbers to pre-pandemic levels, strengthening occupational safety and health at work, and eliminating labor force participation barriers for disadvantaged populations, including women, people with disabilities, people of color, youth, and veterans.

The pandemic has underscored the need for greater protections for children and vulnerable workers in times of crisis. The U.S. Department of Labor is ready to tackle these challenges and is committed to building back better, especially for our young workers.

Our domestic initiatives have helped to yield safe and dynamic job opportunities for America’s workers. The Wage and Hour Division (WHD) enforces regulations on the legal working age, permissible hours of work, earned wages, and hazardous occupations prohibited for minor employees. Keeping work environments safe for all employees, regardless of age, is the mission of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. The Office of Disability Employment Policy helps youth and young adults with disabilities find success in employment and adulthood, while the Employment and Training Administration (ETA) helps them enter the workforce and be productive. Additionally, the Bureau of Labor Statistics gathers data on a variety of subjects, including child labor.

Together, these agencies work to expand employment opportunities, protect workers' paths to meaningful and rewarding work, and pave the way to a fairer and stronger economy for everyone.

The Federal Minimum Ages for Work

Since 1938, the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) has set crucial standards for the safety, well-being, and development of children engaged in work. Child labor provisions under the FLSA are designed to protect children's involvement in educational opportunities and prohibit children's employment in jobs that are detrimental to their health and safety. The FLSA includes restrictions on maximum working hours and types of permissible occupational fields for children under age 16.

The FLSA and its implementing regulations have established the following standards:

- A minimum age of 14 for most employment in non-hazardous, non-agricultural industries, and limits on the times of day, number of hours, and tasks that can be performed by 14- and 15-year-olds.
- A minimum age of 18 for employment in hazardous occupations as deemed by the Department's issuance of 17 non-agricultural Hazardous Occupations Orders.
- Exceptions for agricultural and non-agricultural employment. For example, the FLSA does not restrict the work that 16- and 17-year-olds may perform in agricultural employment, and it permits youth under the age of 14 to work in non-hazardous agricultural employment outside school hours with parental approval.

States also play a critical role alongside the Federal Government in ensuring that children are protected from labor exploitation, both in enforcing child labor standards and in providing care and preventative services (see Box 10 to read about an effort in California). All states have child labor standards and mandatory school attendance laws. When state and federal child labor standards differ, the rule that provides the most protection is the one that must be followed. For example, Washington state and Wisconsin have stricter regulations on child labor in agriculture than the FLSA. In these states, the minimum age for employment in agriculture is 18 during school hours. California, Hawaii, and New Hampshire also set their minimum age for employment in agriculture at 18 during school hours and 16 for individuals who are not in school.

California Bill Aims to Protect Foster Children from Child Labor Trafficking

As the saying goes, "Knowledge is power." When caring for child labor trafficking victims, knowledge also is key to preventing re-victimization and trauma. That is why, in May 2021, the California State Senate unanimously passed Senate Bill 584, which requires foster parents who receive child labor and trafficking victims to complete family resource training on how to provide care and supervision to this vulnerable population. California Senator Brian Jones (R-Santee) noted that "foster kids, in particular, are vulnerable to being targeted by criminals for child labor trafficking" and the bill would provide "critical information to protect children who have been victims" or could become targets. The bill aims to close a gap in California's foster parent legislation, which already included a requirement that foster parents complete training on providing care to child victims of commercial sexual exploitation. The bill is now awaiting review and approval in Assembly committees. (47)

Wage and Hour Division

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that the U.S. workforce included 4.7 million teens between the ages of 16 and 19 in 2020. And this is why the WHD looks for employer compliance with the FLSA's child labor provisions in every investigation it conducts. In fiscal year 2020, the WHD recorded child labor violations in more than 850 investigations.

In those cases where child labor was identified, the WHD found that 3,395 minors were working in violation of the FLSA. Additionally, in 266 of these cases, violations of Hazardous Occupations Orders (HOs) were found with a total of 633 minors employed in violation of HOs. In fiscal year 2020, the WHD assessed $3,579,570.80 in child labor civil money penalties. The most common violations often involve the failure to comply with the hour standards for 14- and 15-year-olds in non-agricultural industries, and the failure to comply with HOs in non-agricultural industries for 16- and 17-year-olds (see Figure 13 for an overview of WHD's 2020 enforcement data).

For example, in 2020, the WHD investigations against Sunscape LLC in Florida (48), Greenfield Market in Michigan (49), and Trinidad Resort & Club LLC, also in Michigan, all resulted in penalties applied under the FLSA's child labor provisions. The WHD found that these companies were employing underage children to work either excessive or unlawful hours, including working more than 8 hours a day and before 7 a.m. or after 7 p.m. As a result of these investigations, the WHD collected more than $33,000 in fines. In another case, the WHD filed a lawsuit against Pennsylvania Youth Club Inc. and assessed a $103,051 civil penalty after uncovering that children 12 to 13 years of age worked as late as 10 p.m. for the organization as door-to-door salespersons, in violation of FLSA regulations. (50)

In May 2021, the WHD announced the findings of its investigation against Stover & Sons Contractors, Inc. involving the fatal fall of a 16-year-old boy from on top of a hotel worksite. The WHD found that a construction contractor from Madison, Wisconsin, violated two Hazardous Occupations Orders of the FLSA child labor provisions. The orders ban minors from carrying out roofing activities or operating and riding on a power-driven hoisting apparatus. Further investigation determined that the employer also violated child labor laws when it allowed the boy to work more than 8 hours per day and more than 40 hours per week when he was 15 years of age. The WHD assessed Stover & Sons a $122,364 civil penalty under the Child Labor Enhanced Penalty Program. The program permits the WHD to assess penalties of up to $59,413 for each child labor violation related to the death or serious injury of a worker under age 18 for violations that occurred on or before January 15, 2021. An investigation by the Tennessee Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration, which has jurisdiction over the case's workplace safety portion, also led the agency to issue citations to the employer. Stover & Sons is currently contesting the penalties. (51)

The WHD has long maintained that enforcement alone will never be sufficient to achieve its mission of protecting our nation's workers. Through its long-standing YouthRules! initiative and accompanying resource website, the WHD continues to conduct educational outreach events to reach working youth, their parents, their educators, and their employers. These efforts aim to raise awareness of child labor protections and promote voluntary compliance.

The WHD also is making a concerted effort to protect some of the most vulnerable essential workers during this pandemic. In March 2021, the WHD launched a nationwide education, outreach, and enforcement initiative targeting farmworkers, who have had to remain working on the frontlines for low wages despite the COVID risks. The campaign aims to inform farmworkers and advocates of their labor rights while also reiterating to agricultural employers their responsibilities. (52)

In April 2021, the WHD co-hosted a national online dialogue with teens, parents, educators, employers, and other interested stakeholders to gather ideas on how USDOL can connect better with teens. The WHD will use these valuable insights to enhance efforts to inform teens about avoiding workplace hazards; the types of work they are allowed to do; age restrictions for work hours; employer wage requirements; employment training, including apprenticeships; and workplace discrimination. This event was co-hosted by the Department's Office of Disability Employment Policy, Occupational Safety and Health Administration, Wage and Hour Division, Office of Compliance Initiatives, and Employment and Training Administration. The dialogue is part of the Office of Disability Employment Policy's ePolicyWorks initiative.

In May 2021, the WHD also hosted a webinar for teens, parents, employers, and educators to review how federal and state laws protect teen workers. WHD also launched the "Essential Workers – Essential Protections" initiative to offer training to workers and employers on critical workplace protections. As the nation's recovery continues, we are committed to educating workers of all ages about labor standards, particularly for those employed in essential, public-facing occupations

Employment and Training Administration

Through its various workforce training and development programs, The ETA works to remove barriers to meaningful work and open economic mobility to more Americans. The ETA offers such programs as the Registered Apprenticeship Program, YouthBuild, Job Corps, and Reentry Employment Opportunities. These programs especially equip and empower populations that face unique employment barriers, including youth who are out of school or involved in the justice system, by providing them with work-readiness skills and industry accreditation pathways.

"Child labor laws exist to strike a balance between providing meaningful work experience for young people and keeping them safe on the job. We urge employers to review their practices to ensure that minors are not exposed to hazardous occupations and that they are in compliance with child labor laws." (53)

The ETA will play a key role in America's economic recovery as it continues the expansion of registered apprenticeship programs to generate skilled, well-paying jobs for American workers and includes measures to create more job opportunities through youth apprenticeships. For example, ETA awarded over $42 million in Youth Apprenticeship Readiness Grants in June 2020 and in 2021 is awarding approximately $87 million in State Apprenticeship

Expansion, Equity, and Innovation (SAEEI) Grants to increase registered apprenticeship program participation by youth and other under-represented populations. (54; 55) In addition, through $89 million in YouthBuild grants, the ETA will support state efforts to employ non-studying and unemployed youth between the ages of 16 and 24 in construction, health care, information technology, and other in-demand industries. The ETA has, to date, awarded 68 grants that fund organizations providing workplace skills training, classroom instruction, and job placement. (56)

“Protecting our youngest workers continues to be a top priority for the Wage and Hour Division. Child labor laws ensure that when young people work, the work does not jeopardize their health, well-being or educational opportunities. Employers of minors have a responsibility to understand their obligations under the law, and to comply with those requirements.”

About the Iqbal Masih Award

for the Elimination of Child Labor

The United States Congress established the Iqbal Masih Award for the Elimination of Child Labor in 2008 to recognize exceptional efforts by an individual, company, organization, or national government to end the worst forms of child labor. The award reflects the spirit of Iqbal Masih, a Pakistani child sold into bonded labor as a carpet weaver at age 4. He escaped his servitude at age 10 and became an outspoken advocate of children's rights, drawing international attention to his fight against child labor. Iqbal was killed in Pakistan at age 12 in 1995.

In 2021, the U.S. Secretary of Labor selected Norma Flores López, advocate for farmworker children, and the International Labor Organization, a United Nations tripartite agency, to receive the Iqbal Masih Award. The recipients received the award in recognition of their extraordinary efforts to combat child labor.

Further information about the Iqbal Masih Award and USDOL's efforts to combat child labor is available on the USDOL website at dol.gov/iqbal.

Norma Flores López

Ms. Flores López grew up in a family of farmworkers and began working in fields around the United States when she was 12 years old. At the age of 17, she became a spokesperson for the “Children in the Fields” campaign—a campaign dedicated to ensuring that farmworker children are protected and given an opportunity to succeed in life. For the past 10 years, Ms. López has led the Child Labor Coalition’s (CLC) Domestic Issues Committee, working to improve protections for child farmworkers and other vulnerable children. Through her leadership on the Domestic Issues Committee, Ms. Flores López has leveraged the resources of more than a dozen organizations and helped them engage in the fight against child labor. She also has led the CLC to participate in the successful fight to improve pesticide protections for child farmworkers under the Worker Protection Standard and has fought to preserve protective buffers around child and adult workers in the fields to help prevent pesticide exposure. Since 2017, she has served on the board of the Global March Against Child Labor—the premier anti-child labor advocacy group founded by Nobel Laureate Kailash Satyarthi.

International Labor Organization

Since its formation more than a century ago, the International Labor Organization (ILO) has been a leader in the fight to end all forms of child labor, including the worst forms of child labor, bringing international attention to the issue and inspiring action by individuals and organizations around the world. As the United Nations' only tripartite agency, the ILO brings together governments, employers, and workers' representatives from 187 member states to establish international labor standards, develop policies and devise programs promoting fundamental principles and rights at work, and combat abusive labor practices such as child labor. In 2020, ILO Convention No. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor achieved universal ratification for the first time in the ILO's history. The ILO has played a central role in the development of a worldwide movement against child labor, including through the organization and implementation of landmark global child labor conferences, including the upcoming Fifth Global Conference, which will take place in South Africa in 2022. Additionally, the ILO has produced global estimates on child labor since the beginning in 2000, which have raised awareness of the scope and nature of the problem, tracked progress over time, and identified key challenges still to be overcome. As the Secretariat of Alliance 8.7, an SDG multi-stakeholder partnership to put an end to child labor and forced labor, the ILO has played a key role in mobilizing a coordinated response through a network of more than 250 organizations to address the emerging challenges of COVID-19 in affected communities and to mitigate the risks of a resurgence of child labor and forced labor.

Definitions Related to Child Labor and Forced Labor

Definitions related to child labor are guided by ILO C. 138 on Minimum Age and ILO C. 182 on Worst Forms of Child Labor. The ILO's Resolution Concerning Statistics of Child Labor, developed during the 18th International Conference of Labour Statisticians (ICLS), and amendments made during the 20th ICLS, provide the international framework for measuring children's work. See Appendix 3 for additional definitions.

Working Children

Per the Resolution Concerning Statistics of Child Labor developed during the 18th ICLS, working children are those engaged in any productive activity for at least 1 hour during the reference period. Productive activity includes market production and certain types of non-market production, principally the production of goods and services for their families' use. The 20th ICLS introduced changes to the definition of working children to align that definition with internationally accepted definitions of work for adults. The new definition classifies working children as those engaged in any activity to produce goods or to provide services for use by others or for own use. In summary, the new definition includes the production of additional types of services for family use, unpaid trainee work by children, volunteer work by children, and other work activities by children. Since most countries are in the process of adapting survey instruments to reflect this new definition, the definition of working children from the 18th ICLS Resolution has been used in this report. The work that children perform may be within the formal or informal economy, inside or outside of family settings, whether paid or unpaid. This includes children working in domestic service outside the child's own household for an employer, paid or unpaid. (45; 57)

Child Labor

Child labor is a subset of working children and is work below the minimum age for work, as established in national legislation that conforms to international standards. The definition includes the worst forms of child labor. Child labor is a subset of working children because child labor excludes children who work only a few hours a week in permitted light work and those who are above the minimum age who engage in work not classified as a worst form of child labor. (45; 58)

Worst Forms of Child Labor

The term worst forms of child labor refers to activities described and as understood in ILO C. 182. (5) Under Article 3 of the Convention, the worst forms of child labor comprise the following activities:

- All forms of slavery or practices similar to slavery, such as the sale and trafficking of children, debt bondage and serfdom, and forced or compulsory labor, including forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict;
- The use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, for the production of pornography, or for pornographic purposes;
- The use, procuring, or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs as defined in the relevant international treaties; and
- Work which, by its nature or the circumstances under which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety, or morals of children.

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor

For this report, the term categorical worst forms of child labor refers to child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182. This category does not include the worst forms of child labor identified under Article 3(d) as “hazardous work.” (5)

Hazardous Work

The term hazardous work refers to the worst form of child labor identified in ILO C. 182, Article 3(d), “work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety, or morals of children.” ILO C. 182, Article 4, directs countries to consult with employers and workers to identify the types of hazardous work that should be prohibited by law or regulation. Hazardous work lists may describe specific activities, occupations, industries, or conditions. (5)

Forced Labor

Forced labor, under international standards, is defined as all work or service that is exacted from any person under the menace of any penalty and for which the worker does not offer him or herself voluntarily.

(59) Forced labor is work obtained by force, fraud, or coercion, including (1) by threat of serious harm to, or physical restraint against, any person; (2) by means of any scheme, plan, or pattern intended to cause the person to believe that if the person did not perform such labor or services, the person or another person would suffer serious harm or physical restraint; or (3) by means of the abuse or threatened abuse of law or the legal process. (60) Circumstances that may give rise to involuntary work, when undertaken under deception or uninformed, include, inter alia, unfree recruitment at birth or through transaction such as slavery or bonded labor; situations in which the worker must perform a job of a different nature from that specified during recruitment without his or her consent; abusive requirements for overtime or on-call work that were not previously agreed to with the employer; work in hazardous conditions to which the worker has not consented, with or without compensation or protective equipment; work with very low or no wages; degrading living conditions imposed by the employer; work for other employers than agreed to; work for a longer period of time than agreed to; and work with no or limited freedom to terminate the work contract. (61)

Forced Child Labor

Forced child labor is a categorical worst form of child labor under ILO C. 182. (5) Children are in forced child labor if subjected to work under the threat or menace of penalty. Children older than the minimum age for work are in forced child labor if work is involuntary and they are under the menace of penalty. For children younger than the minimum age, involuntariness does not need to be established because children under the minimum age cannot legally consent to work. Forced child labor also includes work performed with or for the child’s parents for a third party under the threat or menace of any penalty directly applied to the child or parents. All children who are made to work as a result of parental forced labor are engaged in forced child labor. (62)

Appendix 3

ILO Conventions Related to Child Labor and Forced Labor

The ILO brings together government, employer, and worker representatives of member states to establish and supervise the implementation of international labor standards and develop policies and implement programs to advance decent work. (48) International labor standards are legal instruments drawn up by these ILO constituents that set out basic principles and rights at work. They can take the form of either conventions, protocols, or recommendations. Conventions and protocols are international treaties that are legally binding on ratifying member states. Ratifying countries commit themselves to implementing the convention or protocol in national law and practice, and reporting on its application at regular intervals. Recommendations are non-binding and provide guidelines for action, either as a complement to a convention or as a stand-alone instrument. The following paragraphs describe key ILO instruments related to child labor and the minimum ages set by countries related to these instruments.

ILO Convention No. 138: Minimum Age for Admission to Employment, 1973

ILO C. 138 establishes that the minimum age for admission to employment or work in any occupation “shall not be less than the age of completion of compulsory schooling, and, in any case, shall not be less than fifteen” (Article 2(3)). Countries whose economy and educational facilities are insufficiently developed may initially specify a minimum legal working age of 14 when ratifying the convention. Additionally, Article 7(1) says that national laws or regulations may permit the employment or work of children ages 13 to 15 in light work. Countries that have specified a minimum legal working age of 14 may permit light work for children ages 12 to 14. (63)

ILO Convention No. 182: Worst Forms of Child Labor, 1999

ILO C. 182 defines the worst forms of child labor and requires ratifying countries to take immediate action to secure the prohibition and elimination of the worst forms of child labor for persons under age 18.

Among other actions, ILO C. 182 requires ratifying countries to take effective and timebound measures to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor; help remove children from the worst forms of child labor and provide for their rehabilitation and social integration; ensure that children removed from the worst forms of child labor have access to free basic education and, wherever possible and appropriate, vocational training; identify and reach out to children at special risk; take into account the special situation of girls; consult with employer and worker organizations to create appropriate mechanisms to monitor implementation of the convention; and assist one another in implementing the convention. (5)

Worst Forms of Child Labor Recommendation No. 190, 1999

Recommendation No. 190 supplements ILO C. 182 and provides non-binding practical guidance in applying the Convention. Among other provisions, it includes a list of working conditions and types of work that should be considered when determining what comprises hazardous work.

ILO Convention No. 29: Forced Labor, 1930

ILO C. 29 prohibits all forms of forced or compulsory labor, which is defined as “all work or service which is exacted from any person under the menace of any penalty and for which the person has not offered himself voluntarily.” (59)

ILO Convention No. 105: Abolition of Forced Labor Convention, 1957

ILO C. 105 prohibits forced or compulsory labor as a means of political coercion or education, or as a punishment for holding or expressing political views or views ideologically opposed to the established political, social, or economic system; as a method of mobilizing and using labor for economic development; as a means of labor discipline; as a punishment for having participated in strikes; and as a means of racial, social, national, or religious discrimination. (64)

Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention, 1930

The Forced Labor Protocol reaffirms the forced labor definition in ILO C. 29. It requires ratifying countries to take effective measures to prevent and eliminate forced and compulsory labor, sanction perpetrators, and provide victims with protection and access to appropriate remedies, such as compensation. It also requires ratifying countries to develop a national policy and plan of action to address forced or compulsory labor in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations. (65) The Protocol supplements ILO C. 29 and, as such, only ILO member states that have ratified the convention can ratify the Protocol.

Forced Labor (Supplementary Measures) Recommendation No. 203, 2014

Recommendation No. 203 provides non-binding practical guidance in the areas of prevention, protection of victims and ensuring their access to justice and remedies, enforcement, and international cooperation. It supplements both the Protocol and the Convention. (66)

How to Read a TDA Country Profile

- Country Overview: Each country profile begins with an overview for 2020 in a single paragraph, starting with a statement identifying the assessment level assigned to the country for 2020. Following the statement of assessment, the paragraph offers a summary of key findings in the country profile. The narrative includes any meaningful efforts taken by a government, defined as efforts in key areas where the government advanced its commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The narrative also notes the most common or egregious forms of child labor found in the country and highlights areas in which key gaps in government efforts remain.

- Section I: Prevalence and Sectoral Distribution of Child Labor The first section of each country profile attempts to provide, to the extent that information is available, a comprehensive picture of the worst forms of child labor in the country.

- Table 1, Statistics on Children's Work and Education, contains at least four variables: percentage of working children, school attendance rate, percentage of children combining work and school, and primary completion rate. The majority of the country profiles have data for at least one of these variables. A smaller set of profiles contain data on children's work by sector. The age and methodologies of the original surveys that provide the underlying data vary, and in some cases, the surveys may not reflect the true magnitude of the child labor problem in the country.

- Table 2, Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity, groups types of children's work by sector, using categories established by the ILO and Understanding Children's Work for national child labor surveys (Agriculture, Industry, and Services), as well as a category intended to capture work understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182, referred to by the report as "Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor." Sectors and specific activities performed by children are sorted into these categories according to internationally accepted industry and occupational codes.

- The first table note identifies sectors or activities determined to be hazardous by national law or regulation as understood under Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182, and the second table note provides the definition of Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor.

- The table is followed by a narrative highlighting additional sector-specific information and social, economic, or political issues that affect the prevalence of child labor, such as barriers to accessing education, or major socioeconomic shocks to the country that may inhibit the government's ability to address child labor, such as a natural disaster or armed conflict.

Mexico

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

- In 2020, Mexico made significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the government published the 2019 National Child Labor Survey, the results of which will be used to develop policies and programs to combat child labor. In addition, it ratified International Labor Organization Convention 189 on Domestic Workers, and revised the Migration Law and Refugee Assistance and Asylum Law to prioritize the rights of migrant and refugee children, including prohibiting the detention of children in migrant centers and ensuring migrant and refugee children have educational access. Moreover, state governments investigated and prosecuted at least 199 child trafficking cases. The government also approved the creation of a national network of Local Committees to Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor and Protect Adolescent Workers of the Permitted Age to improve coordination efforts to address the worst forms of child labor at the municipal and local levels. Further, it published the National Program on Human Rights 2020–2024 and the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare's National Program for 2020–2024. However, children in Mexico are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities, such as the production and trafficking of drugs. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the production of chile peppers, coffee, sugarcane, and tomatoes. The COVID-19 pandemic severely impacted the Mexican economy, resulting in a significant increase in the number of children engaging in child labor. Although

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mexico are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities, such as the production and trafficking of drugs. (1-5) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the production of chile peppers, coffee, sugarcane, and tomatoes. (6-10) Data from the National Child Labor Survey (ENTI 2019), which was funded by USDOL, show that 3.1 million children between the ages of 5 and 17 engage in child labor, including hazardous household chores. It also shows that 52 percent of child laborers engage in hazardous work and

- In 2020, the COVID-19 pandemic severely impacted the Mexican economy, resulting in a significant increase in the number of children engaging in child labor. Experts estimate that as a result of the pandemic, the number of people living in poverty in Mexico will increase by 7.9 percent and the number of children engaging in child labor will increase by 5.5 percent. (5,24,42) Despite a government program to transmit public education classes via Internet, television, and radio during the pandemic, reports suggest that at least 2.5 million children did not continue their basic education. This includes 800,000 students who did not transition from lower

Section II: Legal Framework for Child Labor The second section indicates whether a country has ratified key international instruments related to child labor and assesses whether a country's legal framework meets international standards. This section begins with a statement about the extent to which the government has ratified key international conventions concerning child labor.

Table 3, Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor, lists the relevant UN conventions concerning child labor. A checkmark indicates the country's ratification, acceptance, accession, or succession to the instrument, considering that these actions have the same practical legal effect regarding the substantive obligations of the instrument as ratification. If other relevant international instruments were ratified during the reporting period, beyond those listed in the table, this may be recognized in a short narrative following the table.

A statement above Table 4, Laws and Regulations on Child Labor, indicates whether the government's laws and regulations related to child labor meet the standards in ILO C. 138 and C. 182, or whether gaps exist in the legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor.

Table 4 lists each of the relevant legal standards and notes which laws meet and do not meet international standards. Notes under Table 4 identify whether a government does not use conscription for military service, whether a government does not have a standing military, and whether an age is calculated based on available information.

The table is followed by a narrative describing any relevant laws that the government enacted or advanced to a significant step in the legislative process during the reporting period. If the government failed to take action on an existing draft bill that would fill a gap in the legal framework related to child labor, this also may be noted. The narrative also discusses why existing laws do not meet international standards.

Section III: Enforcement of Laws on Child Labor The third section describes the roles of government agencies in enforcing laws related to child labor and reports on efforts made during the reporting period. It begins with a statement about whether the government has established institutional mechanisms to enforce laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5), notes whether gaps exist within the authority or operations of the ministries responsible for law enforcement, or whether enforcement data are missing.

Table 5, Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement, lists the agencies charged with enforcing such laws and identifies each agency's role. A table note identifies whether an agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period. A subsequent narrative describes gaps in agency responsibilities or new information during the reporting period.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mexico has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 123 of the Constitution; Article 22 bis of the Labor Code; Article 47 of the Law on the Rights of Children and Adolescents; Article 6 of the General Law on Education (18,86-88)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 175 of the Labor Code (18)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 175–176 of the Labor Code (18)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 1 and 5 of the Constitution; Articles 11, 12, and 22 of the Trafficking in Persons Law; Article 47 of the Law on the Rights of Children and Adolescents (86,87,89)

The United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement (USMCA) entered into force on July 1, 2020. The agreement contains a labor chapter with fully enforceable labor obligations, including on internationally recognized labor

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (STPS)	Leads efforts to enforce child labor laws, conduct labor inspections, and refer cases for investigation. The Federal Prosecutor for the Defense of Work, an independent entity under STPS, prosecutes cases in which workers' rights are violated, including cases with workers under age 18. (18,99-104) The STPS inspectorate is responsible for labor law enforcement in 22 industrial sectors under federal jurisdiction, including the sugar and tobacco industries, three types of enterprises, and labor matters affecting two or more states. The state-level labor inspectorates are responsible for labor law enforcement in all other situations. (18,86,105) During the reporting period, STPS collaborated with USDOL on two projects to strengthen its capacity to enforce labor laws and train Mexican workers and unions on labor standards and identifying labor violations. (106-110)
Attorney General of the Republic (FGR)	Prosecutes crimes involving human trafficking, including criminal violations related to child trafficking and other worst forms of child labor. The Attorney General of the Republic's Specialized Unit for Crimes against Women and Trafficking in Persons (FEVIMTRA) and the Specialized Unit on Trafficking in Minors, People, and Organs (UEITMPO) are responsible for investigating and prosecuting human trafficking cases at the federal level. (4,104,111-114) In addition, all 32 states have specialized Trafficking in Persons (TIP) prosecutors or units, which are responsible for investigating and prosecuting cases of human trafficking at the state level. Some state TIP units or prosecutors also prosecute cases of gender-based violence. (50,59,115,116) In addition, federal and state TIP units receive some cases of child trafficking from the National Institute of Migration and the Mexican Commission for Refugee Assistance. (76,78,117-120)
National Commission on Human Rights (CNDH)	Independent ombudsman body. Receives complaints and conducts investigations on human rights violations, including cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (121)
Conciliation and Arbitration Boards and Labor Tribunals and Conciliation Centers	Tripartite boards which mediate and adjudicate labor disputes according to federal and state labor laws, including processing cases in which children between the ages of 15 and 18 request permission to work. Beginning in 2020, these boards are being replaced by federal- and state-level Conciliation Centers and Labor Tribunals, which will oversee conciliation and adjudication of labor disputes, respectively. (18,41,86,122-125) In 2020, STPS and state governments also began establishing systems and institutions to address 2019 labor reform obligations to strengthen freedom of association and collective bargaining rights. This included dedicating $69 million to establish Conciliation Centers and independent Labor Tribunals in eight states, begin file digitization, and carry out trainings on labor reform implementation. (108,126-131)
Secretariat of Health's National System for Integral Family Development (SNDIF)	Provides social assistance to child victims, including shelter and legal services. Employs representatives at the national, state, and municipal levels. (87,104,132) At the federal and state levels, also employs special prosecutors to carry out legal action against crimes related to children and adolescent rights, including violations related to the worst forms of child labor. (87,104,132) During school holidays, some state-level SNDIF ministries conduct operations to monitor for child labor in the informal sector. (133-145)

Table 6 and Table 7 provide data on labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts, respectively, in 2019 and 2020.

Table 6, Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor. provides information on labor law enforcement data, including information about the labor inspectorate's financial and human resources; authority to conduct inspections and assess penalties; and actions and mechanisms to enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor.

Table 7, Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor. provides information on criminal law enforcement data, including information about actions and mechanisms to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor.

Notes under each table identify whether the data included in the tables fall outside of the calendar year. A narrative follows each of these tables with more specific information on government mechanisms and efforts, and includes findings in which ILAB has concluded that government efforts fall short.

Section IV: Coordination of Government Efforts on Child Labor The fourth section provides information on institutions charged with coordinating efforts related to child labor. It begins with a statement indicating whether the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, and whether any gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor.

Table 8, Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor. lists the country's key coordinating bodies; their composition, if known; and their respective mandates, as well as their efforts during the reporting period. A table note states whether a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period. A subsequent narrative may include findings on gaps in their efforts.

Section V: Government Policies on Child Labor The fifth section describes a country's policies and plans to combat child labor and the development of policies that explicitly incorporate the issue of child labor. It begins with a statement indicating whether the government has established policies related to child labor, and whether policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Mexico took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (STPS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human and financial resource allocation.

In 2020, state-level prosecutors reported investigating and prosecuting at least 199 cases involving child trafficking victims. (180) In addition, the National Trafficking in Persons Hotline, managed by the Citizens' Council for Safety and Justice of Mexico City, received 2,117 reports of human trafficking and referred cases to the Attorney General of the Republic's Specialized Unit for Crimes against Women and Trafficking in Persons (FEVIMTRA), the Specialized Unit on Trafficking in Minors, People, and Organs (UEITMPO), and state-level

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including funding.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Institutional Commission for Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers of the Permitted Age in Mexico (CITI)	Coordinates Mexico's activities to develop policies, approve programs, and coordinate, monitor, and evaluate efforts to combat child labor, especially its worst forms. Chaired by STPS and includes representatives from the secretariats of the Interior, Economy, Foreign Affairs, Wellbeing, Agriculture, Transportation, Education, Health, Tourism, Social Security, SNDIF, and FGR. (156) Meets on a quarterly basis and includes NGO networks, international technical and financial partners, such as UNODC and IOM, and bilateral partners, including the United States. (156,160) Met regularly during the reporting period and approved the creation of a national network of Local Committees to Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor and Protect Adolescent Workers of the Permitted Age* to improve coordination efforts to address the worst forms of child labor at the municipal and local levels. In addition, implemented a temporary working group to develop policies to prevent child labor during the pandemic. (156)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including policy implementation and coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

● Table 9, Key Policies Related to Child Labor, lists the country's key policies and provides a description of each policy's objectives and any developments in implementation, to the extent known, that occurred during the reporting period. Table notes identify policies that were approved during the reporting period and whether there are any small-scale policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor.

● The narrative following the table notes includes findings related to whether existing policies sufficiently address child labor issues in the country.

● Section VI: Social Programs to Address Child Labor The sixth section describes social programs launched or implemented during the reporting period that focus on child labor, and programs that address poverty, education, and other related matters that could have a beneficial effect on child labor. It begins with a statement as to whether the government funded or participated in social programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, and whether gaps exist in these social programs.

● Table 10, Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor, lists the country's key social programs and descriptions, including its activities and accomplishments, to the extent known, during the reporting period. Where possible, programs are hyperlinked to project websites for additional information. Table notes identify social programs that are funded by the government or were launched during the reporting period, and whether the government had small-scale social programs with the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor.

● The narrative following the tables also may include an analysis of the extent to which social programs were sufficient to address the scope of the problem or covered the key sectors in which children are known to work in the country.

● Section VII: Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor The last section of each country profile (Table 11) is a set of suggested actions for the country to consider taking in order to advance the elimination of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Program for the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (2020–2024)†	Aims to strengthen the fundamental rights of work and to increase labor force participation in the formal sector. The plan prioritizes combating child labor as part of STPS' social inclusion strategy. (197)
National Human Rights Program (2020–2024)†	Aims to increase the national well-being of the general population and to ensure equality and equity. Includes actions to ensure children's rights and combat child labor. (156,198)
National Strategy for Inclusive Education (2019–2024)	Supports inclusive education for vulnerable children, including migrant and indigenous children. (199,200) During the reporting period, supported the implementation of the Aprende en Casa program to provide educational services for 25 million students, from pre-school through upper secondary school, including a radio component to reach indigenous children, during the pandemic. (43)
Integral Development Plan for El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras y México	Aims to support strategic economic development in Mexico and the Northern Triangle countries to address the root causes of migration and increase employment in the region. In 2020, supported the implementation of the Jovenes Construyendo el Futuro program in Honduras and El Salvador, and continued to fund and operate the Centros Integradores para el Migrante shelters in the states of Baja California and one in Chihuahua. These shelters operate as "integration centers," assisting foreign migrants in obtaining employment and providing social services, including educational access, for migrants and their children. (201–207)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (208)

Mexico became a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7 in 2019. This involves accelerating commitments toward achieving Sustainable Development Goal Target 8.7, which calls for the eradication of forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030, and the eradication of child labor by 2025. (209,210) As a Pathfinder country, the government developed and implemented the Alliance 8.7 Roadmap to Eradicate Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Trafficking in Persons, which includes the goals of improving information generation on child and forced labor, strengthening coordination between the CITI and the Inter-Institutional Commission for the Prevention and Punishment of Human Trafficking Crimes, and establishing preventative actions to combat child and forced labor in supply chains. In 2020, the government also developed and published a diagnostic document on gaps and priority actions to eradicate child labor and reported on initiatives to combat child labor and forced labor. (209,211)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

The government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors and in all states.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Secretariat of Public Education Programs for Indigenous and Migrant Children*	Nationwide Secretariat of Public Education-funded programs to support public education for children in indigenous and migrant communities. These programs include the Indigenous People's Education Diversity Program, a $3.5 million program created to support the diverse education of indigenous people using a multi-language and multi-cultural approach, and the Educational Program for Migrant School Population, a $3.5 million program created to support centers of migrant education and improve migrant teaching practices using multi-language and multi-cultural techniques. (41)
Benito Juárez Wellbeing National Scholarship Program†	Secretariat of Public Education cash transfer program that offers two types of scholarships for families living in poverty and students at risk of school desertion. The Wellbeing Basic Education Family Scholarship provides bi-monthly payments of $80 per household for all children under age 15 enrolled in school, while the Benito Juárez Scholarship provides bi-monthly payments of $80 to each child enrolled in high school. (213–215) Although the program reaches a high number of students, it has been criticized for providing insufficient cash transfers, lacking monitoring and evaluation, and having implementation issues. (216–221) In 2020, the program assisted scholarship participants age 15 years and older to establish personal bank accounts to facilitate the scholarship cash transfer. The program also carried out surveys at 50,000 schools in marginalized and rural areas to increase outreach and enroll more students of indigenous descent. (222,223)
Support for Indigenous Education Program†	Implemented by the National Institute of Indigenous Peoples to support educational access of children from indigenous and Afro-descendant communities through scholarships, boarding houses, and nutritional support. (224) In 2020, the program assisted 73,912 children through the program's Casas y Comedores de la Niñez Indígena and Casas y Comedores Comunitarios del Estudiante Indígena . (225)
Assistance for At-Risk Minors and Adolescents Program†	Implemented by SNDIF at the state and municipal levels to assist youth at risk for child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and in illicit activities, by providing shelters, psychosocial assistance, and training. Research found the program was active during the reporting period in a few states and municipalities, but it is not implemented across all states and municipalities where the program is needed. (41,156)

† Program is funded by the Government of Mexico.
‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (41,156,232–238)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mexico (Table 11).

Appendix 5

TDA Country Assessment Criteria

Each country in this report receives an assessment to indicate USDOL's findings on the country's level of advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period. There are five possible assessment levels: Significant Advancement, Moderate Advancement, Minimal Advancement, No Advancement, or No Assessment. (41)

Significant Advancement

For a country to be assessed as having significantly advanced efforts in 2020, the country must have (1) instituted the minimum requirements related to laws and regulations, mechanisms, and programs to address and prevent the worst forms of child labor (see Exhibit 1); and (2) during the reporting period, made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking the suggested actions recommended in the 2019 report.

Exhibit 1

Minimum Requirements Needed To Be Considered for a Significant Advancement Assessment

- In order for a country to be eligible to receive an assessment of Significant Advancement, a country must have:
    - Established a minimum age for work that meets international standards;
    - Established a minimum age for hazardous work that meets international standards;
    - Established legal prohibitions against forced labor that meet international standards;
    - Established legal prohibitions against child trafficking that meet international standards;
    - Established legal prohibitions against the commercial sexual exploitation of children that meet international standards;
    - Established legal prohibitions against the use of children for illicit activities that meet international standards;
    - Designated a competent authority or implemented institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor;
    - Imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor;
    - Took active measures to ensure that children are not inappropriately incarcerated, penalized, or physically harmed for unlawful acts as a direct result of being a victim of the worst forms of child labor;
    - Took active measures to investigate, prosecute, convict, and sentence public officials who participate in or facilitate the worst forms of child labor;
    - Made a good faith effort to collect and publish labor and criminal law enforcement data; and
    - Directly funded a significant social program that includes the goal of eliminating child labor or addressing the root causes of the problem, such as lack of educational opportunities, poverty, or discrimination.

Moderate Advancement

A country moderately advanced its efforts in eliminating the worst forms of child labor in 2020 if it made meaningful efforts during the reporting period in some relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking the suggested actions recommended in 2019.

Minimal Advancement

Three types of countries made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in 2020. The first is a country that made meaningful efforts during the reporting period in a few relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking the suggested actions recommended in 2019.

The other two types of countries are those that, regardless of meaningful efforts made in relevant areas, minimally advanced as a result of establishing or failing to remedy regressive or significantly detrimental laws, policies, or practices that delayed advancement in the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Examples of regressive or significantly detrimental laws, policies, or practices include prohibiting unannounced labor inspections; abolishing the country's labor inspectorate; placing a moratorium on labor inspections; recruiting or using children in armed conflict; prohibiting girls who are pregnant from attending regular public schools or taking secondary and postsecondary school entrance exams; and a pattern of detaining, arresting, charging, or prosecuting worst forms of child labor victims for any offense that is the direct result of their victimization. The following points make distinctions between regression and continued law, policy, or practice:

- Regression in Law, Policy, or Practice that Delayed Advancement. This type of country made meaningful efforts in a few or more relevant areas but established a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice during the reporting period that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor.
- Continued Law, Policy, or Practice that Delayed Advancement. This type of country made meaningful efforts in a few or more relevant areas but failed to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice established in previous years, which delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor.

No Advancement

Three types of countries made no advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in 2020. The first is a country that made no meaningful efforts to advance the elimination of the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period.

The other two types of countries are those that, regardless of whether meaningful efforts in relevant areas were made, had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents, which is considered an egregious form of exploitation. Complicity can occur when a government is involved in forced child labor at any level of government, including at the local, regional, or national level. Such incidents involve direct or proactive government action to compel children under age 18 to work. The following points make distinctions between a country making no efforts and being complicit and a country making efforts but being complicit:

- No Efforts and Complicit in Forced Child Labor. This type of country made no meaningful efforts, took no suggested actions reported in 2019, and had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents in 2020.
- Efforts Made but Complicit in Forced Child Labor. This type of country made meaningful efforts, which may have included taking the suggested actions reported in 2019, but had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents in 2020.

No Assessment

This assessment is reserved for countries in which the population of children is either non-existent or extremely small (fewer than 50), there is no evidence of the worst forms of child labor and the country appears to have an adequate preventive legal and enforcement framework on child labor, or when a country is included in the report for the first time or receives a suggested action for the first time. This year, no assessment has been made regarding Christmas Island, Cocos (Keeling) Islands, and Wallis and Futuna.

Appendix 7

Reference Materials – Key Concepts and Definitions

Children's Work and Education Statistics: Sources and Definitions

In this report, 99 country profiles include a statistical table (Table 1, Statistics on Children's Work and Education) with data on the percentage of working children, school attendance rate, percentage of children who combine school and work, and/or primary completion rate. For a smaller set of profiles, a chart lists the percentages of children who work by sector.

This appendix provides definitions and descriptions of the sources for these data and some of the strengths and weakness inherent within them. In a few cases, more current sources of data may be available than the ones used in this report; however, the most reliable, standardized sources available to date are used to allow for cross-country comparisons. Because reliable child labor surveys are not available for many countries, in some cases, USDOL uses statistics from child labor surveys that are more than 10 years old (data from 2010). If data did not exist from the sources described below, if no other reliable and publicly available source of data exists for a country, or if data exist but have not been analyzed to allow for cross-country comparisons, this report concludes that the statistics are “unavailable.”

Working Children

Many of the statistical tables in the country profiles in this report present data on the percentage and number of working children. Data presented in the current report may differ from data that were presented in previous reports because updated data have become available.

Definition

The term working children describes children engaged in any productive activity for at least 1 hour during the reference period. Productive activity includes market production and certain types of non-market production, principally the production of goods and services for own use. The work that children perform may be in the formal or informal economy, inside or outside family settings, or for pay or profit. This includes children working in domestic service outside the child's own household for an employer, paid or unpaid. This definition is in accordance with the Resolution to Amend the 18th ICLS Resolution Concerning Statistics of Child Labour, adopted by the 20th International Conference of Labour Statisticians in 2018, and the report ILO and UNICEF Child Labour: Global Estimates 2020, Trends and the Road Forward (45; 58). The 20th ICLS definition classifies working children as those engaged in any activity to produce goods or to provide services for use by others or for own use. The definition also includes the production of additional types of services for family use, unpaid trainee work by children, volunteer work by children, and other work activities by children. Since most countries are in the process of adapting survey instruments to reflect this new definition, the definition of working children from the 18th ICLS Resolution has been used in this report.

Working Children Versus Children Engaged in Child Labor

This report presents statistics on “working children” rather than on “children involved in child labor.” These terms are defined precisely in the section “Definitions Related to Child Labor.” The definition of working children does not vary among countries and, therefore, statistics on working children are comparable across the country profiles. In contrast, the definition of children involved in child labor is based on national legislation, including, for example, the minimum age for work, which varies from country to country. As a result, child labor data are not comparable across countries. Furthermore, these country-level statistics may not disaggregate child labor from the broader category of child work, thereby including children who work only a few hours a week in permitted light work. For the purposes of this report, ILAB is unable to clearly articulate the proportion of working children who are involved in child labor.

Data Sources and Limitations

Data are from the ILO's analysis of primarily four survey types: (1) the ILO's Statistical Information and Monitoring Program on Child Labor (SIMPOC) surveys; (2) national Labor Force Surveys (LFS); (3) UNICEF's Multiple Indicator Cluster Surveys (MICS); and (4) other national and regional household surveys, including Demographic and Health Surveys (DHS). (67)

According to the ILO researchers, typical surveys on children's work do not collect sufficiently detailed information on children's activities to accurately measure economic activity. (68) This observation was repeated in December 2008 at the 18th ICLS. A resolution adopted at the conference provides guidelines for governments on collecting child labor data. Specifically, the guidance indicates that countries can choose to use a broad framework to measure children's work and child labor that encompasses unpaid household services or countries can use a narrower definition of children's work that excludes such services, as long as the definition used is clearly specified. (69) This resolution is contributing to the collection of more comparable data on children's involvement in non-market activities.

In analyzing the data from the above-mentioned surveys, the ILO attempted to apply a standard definition of children's work, although UNICEF's

MICS and ILO's SIMPOC reports, for example, each use a different definition of work. As of the writing of this report, MICS reports include household chores in their definition of work, while some SIMPOC reports do not, depending on each country's basis for reporting. To the extent possible, the ILO applied a common definition of work to the micro-data described. To date, this has resulted in the individual analysis of more than 229 datasets. While every attempt was made to present a standardized child work statistic, differences across the surveys have the potential to affect the comparability of statistics across countries and across years. Some of these differences are explained in greater detail here; however, in general, they include differing age groups, questionnaire content and wording, purpose of the survey, sample design, non-sampling errors, and the year of data collection.

In general, data are presented for children ages 5 to 14; however, some of the profiles present a work statistic for children ages 6 to 14, 7 to 14, or 10 to 14, depending on the age categories used in the original survey. The wording of work-related questions also may affect the results. For example, the question on work in these surveys usually refers to work during the past 7 days; however, some surveys may refer to work activities during the past 12 months, and thus they are likely to capture a higher proportion of working children than surveys with 7-day timeframes. The purpose of the survey—whether specifically to measure children's work and child labor (SIMPOC surveys) or measure the labor force participation of adults—may affect estimates of children's work. (70) Additionally, sample design may affect the survey results. For example, children's work is often clustered geographically; SIMPOC surveys are designed to capture children's work in such geographic areas. As a result, estimates of working children vary across surveys that do not use the same sample design. (71) The ILO and UNICEF continue to investigate the effects of these survey differences on estimates of children's work.

As noted, some country profiles also include the sector in which children reportedly work. For some surveys, the sector of work was not reported by the entire sample of working children. Therefore, the distribution of children working by sector—agriculture, industry, and services—represents children with non-missing data for the sector of work. Additional information on the sectors of work reported in the chart appear in Table 1.

Percentage of Children Attending School

The percentage of children attending school is the share of all children within a specified age group that reported attending school. The ILO data described above in the section “Working Children” are used to develop country-specific school attendance statistics.

To be consistent with estimates of working children, the age group for which attendance statistics are calculated for children is generally ages 5 to 14. In some cases, however, different age categories are used, usually ages 6 to 14, 7 to 14, or 10 to 14.

Percentage of Children Combining Work and School

The percentage of children who combine work and school is the share of all children within a specified age group reporting both working and attending school. The ILO data described earlier under “Working Children” are used to develop country-specific statistics on children combining work and school. The age group for which these statistics are calculated is usually for children ages 7 to 14 or 10 to 14.

Primary Completion Rate

This report uses the “gross intake ratio to the last grade of primary education” as a proxy measure for primary completion. This ratio is the total number of new entrants in the last grade of primary education, regardless of age, expressed as a percentage of the population at the theoretical entrance age to the last grade of primary education. A high ratio indicates a high degree of current primary education completion. The calculation includes all new entrants to the last grade, regardless of age. Therefore, the ratio can exceed 100 percent, due to over- and underage children who enter primary school late or early, or repeat grades.

Data Sources and Limitations

Unlike the other statistics presented in the country profile data tables, which are all based on the ILO analysis described earlier, primary completion rate data are from the UNESCO Institute for Statistics. The data were downloaded on March 3, 2021, and are available at <http://data.uis.unesco.org/>. Further information on this statistic is available from the UNESCO Institute for Statistics Glossary at <http://uis.unesco.org/en/glossary>.

UNESCO uses population estimates from the United Nations Development Program (UNDP) to calculate some of the rates it publishes, including the gross intake ratio to the last grade of primary education. These population estimates change over time. The last revision that affected the statistics used in this report was in February 2021. All population-based indicators, including the gross intake ratio to the last grade of primary education, are re-calculated every year using these latest estimates. For some countries and years, when the new UNDP population estimates are found to be inconsistent with education data, related indicators are removed. All updates made to UNESCO data on the gross intake ratio to the last grade of primary education are reflected in the primary completion rate statistic included in this report.

Labor Law Enforcement: Sources and Definitions

Labor Force Calculation

This report uses data from the CIA World Factbook, which lists the most recent estimates for countries’ total labor force. This number is used to calculate a “sufficient number” of labor inspectors based on the country’s level of development, as determined by the UN. (72)

Country Classification

For analyses, the Development Policy and Analysis Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat (UN DESA) classifies all countries of the world into one of four broad categories: (1) developed economies, (2) economies in transition, (3) developing economies, and (4) least developed countries. The composition of these groupings is intended to reflect basic economic country conditions. Several countries, in particular the economies in transition, have characteristics that could place them in more than one category; however, for analyses, the groupings have been made mutually exclusive. This is decided upon by the UN Economic and Social Council and, ultimately, by the General Assembly deciding on the list of least developed countries based on recommendations made by the Committee for Development Policy. The basic criteria for inclusion require that certain thresholds be met for per capita gross national income, a human assets index, and an economic vulnerability index. For the Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor report, “developed economies” equate to the ILO’s classification of “industrial market economies,” “economies in transition” to “transition economies,” “developing economies” to “industrializing economies,” and “the least developed countries” equate to “less developed countries.” Countries that appear on both “developing countries” and “least developed countries” lists are considered “least developed countries” for calculating a “sufficient number” of labor inspectors. (73)

Number of Labor Inspectors

Article 10 of ILO C. 81 calls for a “sufficient number” of inspectors to do the work required. Because each country assigns different priorities of enforcement to its inspectors, there is no official definition for a sufficient number of inspectors. The factors that need to be considered include the number and size of establishments, and the total size of the workforce. No single measure is sufficient; however, in many countries, the available data sources are weak. The ratio of inspectors per workforce is currently the only internationally comparable indicator available. In its policy and technical advisory services, the ILO has taken as reasonable benchmarks that the number of labor inspectors in relation to workers should approach 1:10,000 in industrial market economies, 1:15,000 in industrializing economies, 1:20,000 in transition economies, and 1:40,000 in less developed countries. (74)

ILO Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations

The ILO CEACR examines and makes two types of comments on the application of international labor standards by states that are party to the relevant conventions. Direct requests contain the Committee’s technical comments or questions about the state’s application of a particular convention, and these requests are sent directly to governments. Observations, which are published in the Committee’s annual report, contain comments on fundamental questions raised by a state’s application of a particular convention and recommendations for the state. (75)

Glossary of Other Terms

Basic Education

Article 7(c) of ILO C. 182 requires countries to “ensure access to free basic education.” According to the International Standard Classification of Education, “basic education” corresponds to the first 9 years of formal schooling and comprises primary and lower secondary education. Primary education is considered to be the first stage of basic education and covers 6 years of full-time schooling, with the legal age of entrance normally being no younger than 5 years or older than 7 years. Primary education is designed to give pupils a sound basis in reading, writing, and mathematics, along with an elementary understanding of other subjects, such as history, geography, natural science, social science, religion, art, and music. Lower secondary education is more subject-focused and requires specialized teachers. It corresponds to about 3 years of schooling. Basic education also can include various non-formal and informal public and private educational activities offered to meet the defined basic learning needs of groups of people of all ages.

Article 13 of the 1966 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights indicates that primary education should be compulsory and free to all. Secondary education, including technical and vocational education, should be available and accessible to all, and free education should be progressively introduced. Article 28 of the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child affirms the right of the child to an education and the state’s duty to ensure that primary education is free and compulsory. (5; 76-79)

Bonded Labor, Debt Bondage

Bonded labor or debt bondage is “the status or condition arising from a pledge by a debtor of his personal services or those of a person under his control as security for a debt if the value of those services as reasonably assessed is not applied towards the liquidation of the debt or the length and nature of those services are not respectively limited and defined,” as defined in the UN Supplementary Convention on the Abolition of Slavery, the Slave Trade, and Institutions and Practices Similar to Slavery (1956). (80)

Bonded labor typically occurs when a person who needs a loan and has no security to offer pledges his or her labor, or that of someone under his or her control, as security for a loan. In some cases, the interest on the loan may be so high that it cannot be paid. In others, it may be deemed that the bonded individual's work repays the interest on the loan but not the principal. Thus, the loan is inherited and perpetuated, and becomes an inter-generational debt. (4; 81)

Bonded labor is prohibited as one of the worst forms of child labor in ILO C. 182. (5)

Child Domestic Worker

A "child domestic worker" works in third-party private households under an employment relationship and engages in various tasks that include cleaning, cooking, gardening, collecting water, and caring for children and the elderly. Child domestic workers sometimes have live-in arrangements, whereby they live in their employer's household and work in exchange for room, board, and sometimes education. Child domestic workers are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including sexual, physical, and verbal abuse, in large part because they often depend on their employers for basic needs and work in locations hidden from public view. (82; 83)

Child Labor Elimination Projects

Since 1995, USDOL has funded 345 projects in 99 countries. USDOL currently oversees more than $256 million in active programming to combat exploitative child labor. To date, USDOL-funded projects have provided nearly 2 million children with education and vocational training opportunities as a strategy for preventing and reducing child labor and increasing access to education in disadvantaged communities. (84)

Child Trafficking

The Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children (Palermo Protocol) provides a definition of human trafficking for children that states "the recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring or receipt of a child for the purpose of exploitation shall be considered 'trafficking in persons' even if this does not involve any of the means set forth in subparagraph

(a) of this Article." As such, there does not need to be abuse of power, control, coercion, or fraud present to constitute child trafficking, as the definition for adults requires. The Palermo Protocol provides a commonly accepted definition of human trafficking in Article 3(a) that trafficking in persons means "the recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring or receipt of persons, by means of the threat or use of force or other forms of coercion, of abduction, of fraud, of deception, of the abuse of power or of a position of vulnerability, or of the giving or receiving of payments or benefits to achieve the consent of a person having control over another person, for the purpose of exploitation. Exploitation shall include, at a minimum, the exploitation of the prostitution of others or other forms of sexual exploitation, forced labor or services, slavery or practices similar to slavery, servitude or the removal of organs." (85)

The trafficking of children is prohibited as a worst form of child labor in ILO C. 182, Article 3(a). (5)

Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children

Based on the 1996 Declaration and Agenda for Action of the First World Congress Against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children, commercial sexual exploitation of children (CSEC) is defined as "sexual abuse by the adult and remuneration in cash or kind to the child or third person or persons." (86; 87; 88) The remuneration dynamic distinguishes CSEC from the sexual abuse of a child, which does not include commercial gain; however, sexual exploitation also includes abuse. The definition of CSEC includes these activities:

- Prostitution in the streets or indoors, and in such places as brothels, discotheques, massage parlors, bars, hotels, and restaurants;
  - ◆ Child sex tourism;
  - ◆ The production of pornography involving children; and
  - ◆ The use of children in sex shows (public or private).

ILO C. 182, Article 3(b), prohibits using, procuring, or offering a child for prostitution or for the production of pornography or for pornographic performances. (5)

Compulsory Education Age

The age up to which children and youth are legally required to attend school. (76)

Convention on the Rights of the Child

The Convention on the Rights of the Child spells out the basic rights of children, such as the right to survival; to develop to the fullest; to be protected from harmful influences, abuse, and exploitation; and to participate fully in family, cultural, and social life. The Convention protects children's rights by setting standards in health care; education; and legal, civil, and social services. According to Article 32 of the Convention, children have the right "to be protected from economic exploitation and from performing any work that is likely to be hazardous or to interfere with the child's education, or to be harmful to the child's health or physical, mental, spiritual, moral, or social development." (89)

Hazardous Work

Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182 sets forth the following as a worst form of child labor: "work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety or morals of children." This is colloquially referred to as "hazardous work." Countries must determine which types of work are considered to be hazardous work by law or regulation. ILO R. 190 includes options for consideration in determining which types of work are hazardous.

ILO Recommendation No. 190: Worst Forms of Child Labor

ILO R. 190 supplements the provisions of ILO C. 182 and provides guidance to ratifying countries regarding its implementation. It provides guidelines to assist countries in determining what types of work should be considered hazardous and thus what type of work countries should prohibit for all children as a worst form of child labor, in accordance with Article 4 of ILO C. 182. ILO R. 190 describes populations in need of specific attention regarding the worst forms of child labor, such as girls and children involved in hidden forms of work. It also provides guidance regarding specific steps that countries which have ratified ILO C. 182 should take to combat the worst forms of child labor, such as the collection and exchange of data on both the problem and best practices to address it; passage and enforcement of laws that penalize violations with criminal penalties; awareness raising about the problem; establishment of policies against the worst forms of child labor; and international cooperation through technical, legal, and other forms of assistance. (90)

Illicit Activities

ILO C. 182, Article 3(c), prohibits "the use, procuring or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs." Illicit activities in this context can include crimes; however, the activity need not be illegal to be considered illicit. (16) According to ILO R. 190 and the General Survey on the Fundamental Conventions Concerning Rights at Work, illicit activities can include "activities which involve the unlawful carrying or use of firearms or other weapons," and "the use of children by criminal organizations for transporting weapons and carrying out arson attacks or destroying public or private property, illicit activities such as housebreaking and petty theft, and ... children being engaged by adults in car breaking, housebreaking, selling drugs and selling stolen goods, use of children for forced or organized begging, gambling, the unlawful carrying or use of firearms or other weapons, or for the commission of an offence or a crime using violence or the threat of violence." (90; 91)

Informal Sector

While the concept of the informal sector was introduced into international usage in the 1970s, it was only in 1993 at the 15th ICLS that an internationally recognized definition was established for data collection to delineate the “informal sector” as unincorporated, small, or unregistered enterprises, and the employees of those enterprises. An enterprise is unincorporated if no complete set of accounts are available that would permit a financial separation of the activities of the enterprise from that of its owners, and it produces marketable goods or services. The registration and size criteria are determined according to national circumstances and legislation, which provide a degree of flexibility in identifying the informal sector from country to country. However, all interpretations of this sector share the notion of enterprises whose activities are not covered or are insufficiently covered by law, or whose activities are not covered by law in practice, meaning that the relevant law is not applied or enforced. Workers in such enterprises often lack the benefits of regular, stable, and protected employment. Because employers in the informal sector are generally either not covered by labor laws or are not held accountable for complying with labor protections, including occupational safety measures, children who work in “hazardous” informal settings likely face increased risk of exploitation, including injury. Additionally, because businesses in the informal sector are not usually included in official statistics, children working in informal sector enterprises may not be counted in labor force activity rates. (92; 93)

Light Work

This report uses the definition of light work as established in ILO C. 138, Minimum Age for Admission to Employment. Under Article 7(1) of the Convention, “National laws or regulations may permit the employment or work of persons 13 to 15 years of age on light work which is—(a) not likely to be harmful to their health or development; and (b) not such as to prejudice their attendance at school, their participation in vocational orientation or training programmes approved by the competent authority or their capacity to benefit from the instruction received.” Countries that have specified a minimum legal working age of 14 may permit the employment or work of persons ages 12 to 14 in light work as defined in Article

7(1). Countries may also permit the employment of children who are at least 15 but have not yet completed compulsory schooling in light work under Article 7(2). Countries permitting light work under Article 7 must specify limitations on their hours of work, as well as activities and conditions in which light work may be undertaken. (63)

Minimum Age for Work

The minimum age for work is the age at which a child can enter into work. ILO C. 138 states that the minimum age for admission to employment should not be less than the age of completion of compulsory schooling and should not be less than age 15, or age 14 for developing countries that specified a minimum legal age of 14 upon ratification of ILO C. 138. (81)

Non-Formal Education

Non-formal education is any organized educational activity outside of the established formal school system—whether operating separately or as an important feature of some broader activity—that is intended to serve identifiable learning objectives. Non-formal or transitional education programs can enable former child workers to catch up or be mainstreamed with their peers who began their schooling at the appropriate age. (81)

Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict

This optional UN protocol, adopted in 2000, addresses and commits ratifying countries to take action against the involvement of children in armed conflict, which is a worst form of child labor per ILO C. 182, Article 3(a). (94)

Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography

This optional UN protocol, adopted in 2000, addresses and commits ratifying countries to take action against the commercial sexual exploitation of children, which is a worst form of child labor as defined in ILO C. 182, Article 3(b). (95)

Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper

This document is written by the government of a developing country with the participation of civil society to serve as the basis for concessional lending from the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, as well as debt relief under the World Bank's Highly Indebted Poor Countries Initiative. A poverty reduction strategy paper (PRSP) should be used to measure poverty in the country, identify goals for reducing poverty, and create a spending and policy program for reaching those goals. A PRSP also should ensure that a country's macroeconomic, structural, and social policies are consistent with the objectives of poverty reduction and social development. A new PRSP must be written every 3 years to continue receiving assistance from international financial institutions such as the World Bank. (96)

Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention Against Transnational Organized Crime (Palermo Protocol)

The Palermo Protocol supplements the United Nations Convention Against Transnational Organized Crime and covers the trafficking of children, also delineated as a worst form of child labor under ILO C. 182, Article 3(a). (85) See "Child Trafficking" above.

Ratification

Ratification is a serious undertaking whereby a state formally accepts the terms of an international agreement, thus becoming legally bound to apply it. Other ways of becoming bound to an international agreement include acceptance, approval, accession, signature, or through an exchange of notes.

To ratify an agreement, a country must formally deposit the instruments of ratification with the appropriate depositary. In the case of ILO conventions, ratifications must be registered with the Director-General of the ILO. (97)

For certain international agreements that require ratification, signing an agreement or enacting an agreement into domestic law by congress, or a similar state organ, does not mean that the international agreement has been ratified. Signing an international agreement serves as a preliminary endorsement, albeit a formality, because signatories are not bound by the terms of the international agreement or in any way committed to proceed to the final step of ratification. However, a signatory is obliged to refrain from acts that would defeat the objective and purpose of the international agreement, unless it makes clear its intention not to become a party to the international agreement. Appropriate state entities may signal approval of an international agreement; however, that is only one of the requisite steps on the path toward official ratification. The final step requires that the instruments of ratification be submitted to the ILO's depositary. (98)

In the case of ILO conventions, ILO procedures provide the option of ratifying or not ratifying a convention, but they do not include the option of signing a convention as a preliminary endorsement. Generally, an ILO convention comes into force in a ratifying country 12 months after the government has deposited the requisite instrument of ratification. This grace period provides ILO members time to enact or modify legislation to comply with the convention before it comes into force. (5; 63; 97)

Unpaid Household Services

For this report, the term unpaid household services by children refers to the domestic and personal services a child performs within the child's own household, under the following conditions: (1) for long hours; (2) in an unhealthy environment, including equipment or heavy loads; or (3) in dangerous locations. (58)

Research Framework and Organization of TDA Country Profiles

Research Methods

This section describes the research methods used for data collection, as well as the sources, analysis of information, and the limitations of these methods in this report.

Data Collection and Sources

Information was gathered for this report through desk research, U.S. embassy reporting, and limited fieldwork. Information also was received from some foreign governments. Desk research consisted of an extensive review of mostly online materials, which included both primary and secondary sources. The sources included academic and independent researchers, media outlets, NGOs, international organizations, foreign governments, and U.S. Government agencies. Information also was collected from U.S. Government-funded technical assistance and field research projects. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, labor force surveys varied significantly, often reflecting the changing employment numbers in a country. Therefore, labor force data from the 2019 reporting year were used for the 2020 report.

Examples of the sources used in this report are the most recent available editions of country laws relevant to child labor; national-level child labor surveys; NGO reports on the nature of child labor in various countries; and UN reports, including direct requests and observations by the ILO Committee of Experts. (75)

The U.S. Department of State and U.S. embassies and consulates abroad provided important information by gathering data from contacts, conducting site visits, and reviewing local media sources. A request for information from the public was published in the Federal Register, and a copy of the request was mailed to the Washington, DC-based foreign embassies of the countries included in this report. (99) Data also were gathered through key informant interviews.

Analysis of Information

The existence of child labor, particularly in its worst forms, often involves violations of laws and regulations, including serious criminal violations in some egregious cases. Information on child labor may be intentionally suppressed. Victims of the worst forms of child labor often are unable to claim their rights or even communicate the abuse they are suffering because they are traumatized, unaware of their rights under the law, or politically underrepresented or marginalized. These factors make information on the worst forms of child labor difficult to obtain. Therefore, to compile a credible and comprehensive report, ILAB used the following criteria to assess information:

Nature of the information

Whether the information about child labor and government efforts to combat it gathered from research, public submissions, or other sources was relevant and probative, and covered the “worst forms of child labor” and “government efforts” as used in this report. Specific evidence of government efforts was preferred when it was available.

Date of the information

Whether the source information about child labor was no more than 5 years old. More current information was given priority, and to the extent possible, ILAB used sources published during the reporting period. Information from sources older than 5 years was generally not considered.

In the case of child labor statistics, however, certain factors contribute to less frequent generation of new data. Because government and other efforts to address exploitative child labor take time to have an impact on national-level rates of child labor, children's involvement in such activities does not change dramatically from year to year. Child labor surveys are carried out infrequently, in part, because the child labor picture does not change frequently, although the number of surveys have increased recently. To present an overall picture of children's work in as many countries as possible, ILAB used statistics that are, in some cases, more than 10 years old (from 2010) as of the writing of this report. For more information on the statistics used in this report, see "Children's Work and Education Statistics: Sources and Definitions" in Appendix 7.

Additionally, in cases in which previous editions of this report have asserted that the worst forms of child labor exist in the production of goods, and in the absence of evidence that the problem has been effectively eliminated, sources more than 5 years old may be used. This practice makes the report's information on such forms of child labor consistent with USDOL's List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor, as mandated by the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005 (TVPRA). Statements that the worst forms of child labor exist in the production of goods will be removed when there is evidence that the problem has been effectively eliminated.

Source of the information

Whether the information, either from primary or secondary sources, was from a source in which methodology, prior publications, degree of familiarity and experience with international labor standards, or reputation for accuracy and objectivity warranted a determination that it was relevant and probative.

Extent of the corroboration

Whether the information about the use of child labor was corroborated by other sources.

Limitations

While data on the worst forms of child labor and information about government efforts to provide remediation are improving, data are still insufficient to provide a complete understanding of the problem. A lack of information may create the impression that a country has less serious problems with the worst forms of child labor than it actually has. At the same time, a dearth of information may create the impression that a government is doing less than it should when, in fact, efforts to combat child labor exist, but are simply unreported or unpublicized. Although countries with open and available information may sometimes appear to have greater problems relative to other countries, this may not be the case. In fact, countries that collect information on child labor are in a better position to eliminate the problem than countries in which such information is suppressed, because with better information, they can target their policies and programs toward identified problem areas to achieve maximum impact.

Due to an inability to travel to each country covered in the report, especially during the COVID-19 pandemic, ILAB relied on U.S. embassies, internet research, and submissions received in response to the Federal Register notice to gather primary and secondary sources of information. For countries where internet access and technology are limited, there may be less information available online. Countries with more closed government processes and less civil society participation also may have less information readily available. When ILAB was unable to find information about report topics, including the content of important laws or enforcement efforts, this was noted in the report.

Most of ILAB's online research was conducted in English; however, we also gathered and read source materials written in Spanish, French, and, to a limited extent, Portuguese, Russian, and Arabic. Materials written in other languages were generally not reviewed.

Despite ILAB's best efforts to cover relevant topics as comprehensively as possible, this report cannot address every salient issue that may affect children's involvement in child labor. For example, there are many factors that affect whether a household sends a child to school, to work, or both. A lack of available information, however, limits the discussion of these issues for some countries. In these cases, we note that the profile's information is incomplete. Furthermore, ILAB chose to limit its reporting of education to the issue of access, and generally does not cover the quality of education because research on the relationship between the quality of education and child labor is lacking.

Organization and Content of Country Profiles

ILAB organized country profiles to track the types of efforts outlined in the TDA Conference Committee report. In this report, the Conference Committee indicated that the President should consider certain criteria when determining whether a country has met its obligation under the Generalized System of Preferences program to implement its international commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. (i) Each country profile contains an introductory paragraph that provides an assessment of government actions to advance efforts in eliminating the worst forms of child labor, six sections that describe the problem and different aspects of government efforts to address it, and a set of suggested actions. The following section describes the content in the country profiles.

Content of Country Profiles

Each country profile begins with an overview of 2020 in a single paragraph, beginning with a statement identifying the assessment level assigned to the country for 2020. Following the statement of assessment, the summary includes meaningful efforts taken by a government to implement its commitment to eliminating child labor. The summary also notes where children are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, or if no worst forms of child labor exist, where they are engaged in tasks for which there is evidence that such tasks fall into the categories suggested by ILO R. 190 for hazardous work—referred to as “dangerous tasks” in this report. Depending on the situation in the country, the summary also may discuss child labor that does not rise to the level of hazardous work. Finally, the paragraph highlights areas in which key gaps in government efforts remain.

Section I: Prevalence and Sectoral Distribution of Child Labor

The first section of each country profile attempts to provide, to the extent that information is available, a comprehensive picture of child labor in the country. This section begins with a review of available data on working children and school attendance, followed by a presentation of the most common sectors and activities in which children are engaged. The narrative also provides information about the nature and conditions of the work, specific populations that are particularly vulnerable to child labor, government complicity in the use of forced child labor as relevant, circumstances that make accessing education difficult, and events during the year that destabilized the country.

Section II: Legal Framework for Child Labor

The second section of each country profile provides information on whether the country has adequate laws and regulations proscribing the worst forms of child labor. This section describes a country's legal framework with regard to child labor and assesses the adequacy of that legal framework by comparing it, in general, to the standards set forth in ILO C. 182 and ILO C. 138, and to other international instruments, including the Palermo Protocol and the Convention on the Rights of the Child and its Optional Protocols. ILAB considered whether the laws criminally prohibited the categorical worst forms of child labor in ILO C. 182, Articles 3(a)–(c), as suggested by ILO R. 190. In line with the ILO Committee of Experts, ILAB considered any law that could be used to prohibit child labor, including its worst forms. ILAB also considered whether the country had ratified key international instruments related to child labor.

It is important to note that ILAB analyzes a country's legal framework regarding compliance with international standards, regardless of whether a problem exists in a country. This is to ensure that legal frameworks also serve as preventive mechanisms. For example, even in the case of a country that does not have a problem with the use of children in illicit activities, if there are no laws to prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, the report points out a gap when comparing laws on this issue against international standards.

The corresponding table indicates where the legal framework meets international standards and where it does not. For example, the table indicates whether the country's minimum age for work complies with the international standard.

ILAB assessed whether a country has created a hazardous work list and whether the types of hazardous work prohibited are comprehensive, based on whether there is evidence that children engage in work where, according to ILO R. 190, the work may be hazardous. Because the standards on the minimum age for work in ILO C. 138 provide a foundation for protections against the worst forms of child labor, ILAB used the standards embodied in that convention to assess each country's minimum age for admission to work and the age up to which education is compulsory. (75) ILO C. 138 establishes that countries should set a minimum age of 15 for work, or age 14 for countries with less-developed economies where the country has specified an age of 14 upon ratification of the convention. For countries that permit children to engage in light work, the profile also indicates whether the country has set a minimum age of 13 for light work, or age 12 for less-developed economies, and whether legislation related to light work determines permitted activities, and the number of hours per week and the conditions under which light work may be conducted.

ILAB assessed whether a country's laws prohibit forced labor, human trafficking, and debt bondage. For child trafficking specifically, ILAB reviewed the adequacy of existing legal protections related to international and domestic trafficking for both commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor against the Palermo Protocol's standard for child trafficking, including whether the legal protections prohibit the five elements of the human trafficking process—recruiting, harboring, transporting, transferring, and receiving persons.

For the issue of commercial sexual exploitation of children, ILAB assessed whether a country's laws criminally prohibit the using, procuring, and offering of children for prostitution; the production of child pornography; and the use of children in pornographic performances. For illicit activities, ILAB assessed whether laws criminally prohibit the using, procuring, and offering of a child in the production and trafficking of drugs.

In all cases in which countries maintain a military force, ILAB assessed whether the country prohibited the compulsory military recruitment of children and whether the minimum age for voluntary military recruitment is at least 16, with certain safeguards to ensure voluntariness. For all countries, ILAB assessed whether the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups is prohibited, even if non-state armed groups are not present in the country.

ILAB assessed whether the age for compulsory education aligns with the minimum age for work, in accordance with ILO C. 138, which states that the minimum age for work should not be less than the age up to which education is compulsory, and that it should be at least age 15, or age 14 for developing countries. However, the opposite situation—in which the minimum age for work is higher than the upper cut-off age for compulsory education—also should be avoided because when children are not required to be in school or permitted to work, they are susceptible to falling into the worst forms of child labor. This section points out when a country's age up to which education is compulsory is below or above the minimum age for employment and suggests that the government rectify this gap. It also notes whether a country has free public education through at least the basic level.

Section III: Enforcement of Laws on Child Labor

The third section of the country profiles addresses the second and third criteria included in the TDA Conference Committee report, concerning whether the country has “adequate laws and regulations for the implementation and enforcement of such measures,” and has “established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor.” (i) This section describes the role of government agencies in enforcing laws relevant to child labor, including its worst forms, and reports on labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts during the reporting period.

In this section, ILAB analyzes whether and to what degree the country defines enforcement agency roles and investigates and addresses complaints related to allegations of child labor. Because ILO C. 182 only discusses enforcement to a limited extent, other international standards and practices also are considered as general evaluation guidelines, including from ILO C. 81 and ILO C. 129 on Labor Inspection and Labor Inspection in Agriculture, respectively. To the extent possible, ILAB assesses whether the country has taken these actions:

- Established labor inspection systems, including a functioning labor inspectorate.
- Provided sufficient funding and resources to enforce child labor laws and regulations.
- Employed a sufficient number of inspectors, according to the ILO's technical advice, to enforce the country's child labor laws and regulations.
- Provided sufficient training for inspectors, including initial training for new employees, training on new laws related to child labor, and refresher courses.

- Developed and implemented an adequate labor inspection strategy that allows for different types of onsite inspections of worksites—such as routine, targeted, complaint-driven, and unannounced—and conducted inspections with sufficient frequency and in all relevant sectors.
- Provided sufficient authority to the labor inspectorate to penalize child labor violations and follow through with sanctions, where appropriate.
- Published information on specific inspection results and fines or sanctions imposed for violation of child labor laws and regulations, including the worst forms of child labor.
- Established a complaint mechanism for labor violations.
- Set up a reciprocal referral mechanism between labor authorities and social services.

Although ILAB researched and requested law enforcement information on the topics for this year's report, the information was not available in all cases. For example, in many cases, ILAB did not have enough information to determine whether the number of inspectors was sufficient in the country. Only in certain situations, where a country's government acknowledged that it did not have a sufficient number of labor inspectors or ILAB obtained information indicating that the number of labor inspectors was insufficient relative to the size of the country's workforce, did ILAB issue findings of insufficiency. In the latter situation, and in determining whether a finding should be included, ILAB considered that the ILO's technical advice of a ratio of labor inspectors in relation to workers should approach 1:10,000 in industrial market economies, 1:15,000 in industrializing economies, 1:20,000 in transition economies, and 1:40,000 in less developed countries. (74)

Additionally, ILO R. 190 states that countries should criminally prohibit the categorical worst forms of child labor as set forth in ILO C. 182, Articles 3(a)–(c). Therefore, the report also assesses whether criminal law enforcement in the country has taken these actions:

- Established criminal investigation systems.
- Provided sufficient funding and resources to enforce the worst forms of child labor laws and regulations.
- Provided sufficient training for investigators, including initial training for new employees, training on new laws related to the worst forms of child labor, and refresher courses.
- Conducted a sufficient number of investigations related to the worst forms of child labor.
- Published information on specific investigation results and violations, prosecutions, and convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.
- Imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.
- Established a reciprocal referral mechanism between criminal authorities and social services.

Section IV: Coordination of Government Efforts on Child Labor

The fourth section of the country profiles also addresses the third criterion included in the TDA Conference Committee report—whether the country has established “formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor.” (1) This section provides information on key institutions in the country charged with coordinating overall efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms. Although the TDA Conference Committee report speaks only to whether such mechanisms are in place with regard to investigation and complaints of the worst forms of child labor, ILO C. 182, Article 5, states that “[e]ach Member shall, after consultation with employers’ and workers’ organizations, establish or designate appropriate mechanisms to monitor the implementation of the provisions giving effect to this Convention.” ILAB applied this concept of monitoring to all provisions of the Convention, not just those directly related to the enforcement of child labor laws. However, because the term monitor is often associated exclusively with enforcement activities, ILAB uses the term coordinate to describe this function.

Section V: Government Policies on Child Labor

The fifth section of the country profiles provides information on the fourth criterion in the TDA Conference Committee report—whether the country has “a comprehensive policy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.” (1) This section describes a country’s key policies and plans to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

ILAB used the framework provided in ILO R. 190, Article 15(f), which illustrates measures that countries might take to combat the worst forms of child labor, such as “encouraging the development of policies by undertakings to promote the aims of the Convention.” (90) In ILO C. 182 and in comments from the ILO Committee of Experts, the terms programs and plans of action are often used interchangeably. Indeed, in some cases, it is difficult to distinguish among a policy, a plan, or a program. (5) For the TDA Conference Committee report, a policy on child labor is defined as a framework that lays out general principles that are intended to guide a government’s actions on child labor. Although policies may call for the passage of new laws and the establishment of new programs, the actual adoption of laws and program implementation are reported in the “Legal Framework for the Worst Forms of Child Labor” or the “Social Programs to Address Child Labor” sections of the profiles.

Specifically, ILAB assessed whether governments have achieved the following activities:

- Established specific child labor policies, any related development policies that explicitly incorporate the issue of child labor, or any related development policies that do not explicitly target child labor but that could have an impact on the problem. (ILAB determined that because so few governments distinguish between the worst forms of child labor and child labor, any policy on child labor, whether targeted toward the worst forms of child labor or not, would be reported.)

- Ensured that these policies include specific action plans, assign responsibilities, establish goals, and set timetables.
- Implemented established policies and plans.

Section VI: Social Programs to Address Child Labor

The sixth section of each country profile provides information on the fifth criterion in the TDA Conference Committee report—whether social programs exist in the country “to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor and assist in the removal of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.” (1) This section of the country profiles reports on key programs focused on child labor and the worst forms of child labor because countries often do not distinguish between the two when creating child labor programs. This section of the profiles also reports on programs that focus on child labor specifically, and programs that address poverty, education, and other related matters that could have a beneficial impact on child labor. Only programs launched or implemented during the reporting period are included in this section.

ILAB generally considers the implementation of projects through international organizations to be government efforts because the projects can be carried out only with the consent of the government, and such efforts are sometimes considered part of a country’s national budget.

ILAB applied the standards embodied in Articles 6 and 7 of ILO C. 182 to assess country programs to combat child labor. ILO R. 190 also is considered to determine the types of efforts that governments might make, such as giving special attention to girls, providing training to employers and workers, and raising awareness. With this in mind, ILAB assesses whether governments have taken the following actions:

- Participated in any social programs to combat child labor, including programs aimed at directly preventing and withdrawing children from participation in child labor.
- Implemented social programs with sufficient resources to combat the scope and magnitude of the child labor problem at issue.
- Targeted at-risk populations.
- Implemented social programs successfully and sustainably.

Section VII: Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

The last section of the country profiles is a set of suggested actions. These suggested actions serve as a roadmap of efforts that individual countries can follow to more fully address the worst forms of child labor. The year in which a suggested action was first provided is listed in the table, followed by every year in which the action was included in the report and not addressed.

Framework for Country Assessments

Objective for Country Assessments

ILAB is using an assessment tool to clearly indicate and highlight the status of efforts by each country that benefits from U.S. trade preferences to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

Research Question Guiding Country Assessments

The research question that ILAB is asking in its assessment of an individual beneficiary country is “To what extent did the beneficiary country advance efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period?”

Scope of Country Assessment

As discussed, the TDA Conference Committee report outlines the following six criteria that the President is asked to consider in determining whether a country is implementing its international commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor:

- Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations proscribing the worst forms of child labor;
- Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations for the implementation and enforcement of such measures;
- Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints related to allegations of the worst forms of child labor;
- Whether the country has a comprehensive policy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor;
- Whether social programs exist in the country to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor, and assist in the removal of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor; and
- Whether the country is making continual progress toward eliminating the worst forms of child labor.

The country assessment tool is intended to inform the sixth criterion—whether the country is “making continual progress toward eliminating the worst forms of child labor.” In preparing the assessments, ILAB evaluated the first five criteria, grouping them into the same five areas addressed in the individual country profiles: laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs. The assessment is based on an analysis of the status of each country’s efforts in these five areas considered as a whole, and which may be compared to the country’s prior efforts. The assessments do not take into account the impact of government actions on the problem, or whether they have a documented effect on eliminating child labor. This type of analysis would require rigorous impact evaluations and assessments based on data from solid research designs, which is beyond the scope of this report. It is important to note that the assessment is not intended to reflect a determination of “whether a country has implemented its commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.” That determination is reserved for the President.

Method for Determining a Country Assessment

Each country profile in this report identifies a set of suggested actions for governments to take to advance its efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The implementation—or lack of implementation—of these suggested actions establishes a baseline or point of reference from which to assess a country’s advancement. These actions, in combination with other efforts undertaken by a country, were considered when assessing the level of a country’s advancement during the current reporting period in comparison with the previous reporting period.

After identifying and assessing a country’s efforts, ILAB considered the significance of the efforts undertaken during the reporting period—actions that could have an impact on eliminating the worst forms of child labor, and the extent to which these efforts addressed the first five TDA criteria, outlined above, in a limited or meaningful manner during the reporting period. Additionally, ILAB reviewed whether the government established or failed to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice that delayed advancement in eliminating child labor. Finally, ILAB also examined whether countries had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in forced child labor in more than isolated incidents at the national, regional, or local level.

To promote consistency and transparency, and to operationalize these first five TDA criteria, each country’s efforts were analyzed according to a uniform set of guidance questions related to the five general areas of laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs. Detailed information is given in “TDA Guidance Questions.”

Appendix 9

TDA Guidance Questions

Assessment Level

TDA Conference Report Criterion:

- Whether the country is making continual progress toward eliminating the worst forms of child labor

Guidance Questions

- What efforts did the country make to address child labor during the year?
- Has the government instituted minimally acceptable laws and regulations, mechanisms, and programs to address and prevent child labor?
- Did the government of the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice that delayed advancement in the elimination of child labor?*
- Was the government of the country complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents?*

Prevalence and Sectoral Distribution of Child Labor

Guidance Questions

- Were government officials complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents?*
- What are the prevalent types of child labor in each country?
- Has the government conducted research on the prevalence and nature of the worst forms of child labor and made the results publicly available?
- Are specific populations vulnerable to child labor due to gender, race, ethnicity, origin, disability, language, or socioeconomic status?
- Were there events during the year that destabilized the country, such as armed conflict; health epidemics and natural disasters; or other social, economic, and political crises?

* Note: A “yes” response likely means that the country will automatically receive an assessment of Minimal Advancement or No Advancement.

Legal Framework for the Worst Forms of Child Labor

TDA Conference Report Criterion:

- Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations proscribing the worst forms of child labor

Guidance Questions

- Did the laws meet international standards?
- Is the minimum age for admission to employment in line with ILO C. 138?
- Is the minimum age for admission to hazardous work in line with ILO C. 138 and C. 182?
- Are criminal prohibitions on forced child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and use of children in illicit activities in line with ILO C. 182?
- Is the prohibition against recruitment of children under age 18 for state compulsory military service in line with ILO C. 182 and the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict?
- Is the minimum age for recruitment into state voluntary military service in line with the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict?
- Is the prohibition against recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups in line with ILO C. 182?
- Does the age up to which education is compulsory align with the minimum age for work and meet the standards in ILO C. 138?
- Is the provision of free public basic education in line with ILO C. 182?

- If the law permits light work, is the minimum age in line with ILO C. 138 and are there appropriate safeguards as outlined in ILO C. 138?
- Has the country ratified ILO C. 182 and C. 138, as well as other relevant conventions and protocols?
- If the country's constitution and laws are not compliant with international standards embodied in ILO C. 138 and C. 182, has there been any change in the constitution or laws that brings the country closer to being fully compliant?
- Are laws related to child labor available to the public?
- Did the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law that delayed its advancement in the elimination of child labor?*

* Note: A "yes" response likely means that the country will automatically receive an assessment of Minimal Advancement or No Advancement.

Enforcement of Laws on the Worst Forms of Child Labor

TDA Conference Report Criteria:

- Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations for the implementation and enforcement of such measures
- Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor
- In this section of the country profiles, ILAB analyzes whether, or to what degree, a country has defined enforcement agency roles, conducted routine and unannounced inspections, and investigated and addressed complaints related to allegations of the worst forms of child labor. The analysis is based on the following guidance questions.

Guidance Questions

- Does the country have a labor inspectorate?
- Does the country have labor inspectors? Are its labor inspectors public servants as opposed to contractors?
- What was the amount of funding for the labor inspectorate? Was there an increase or decrease in the funding and resources to enforce child labor laws and regulations, and were these resources adequate given the incidence of child labor in the country?
- Was there an increase or reduction in the number of labor inspectors to enforce child labor laws and regulations, and was the number of labor inspectors adequate given the size of the country's workforce?
- Did the country offer initial training to new labor inspectors and investigators, including specialized training on child labor; training on new laws related to child labor, including its worst forms; and refresher courses?
- Did the labor inspectorate fail to conduct labor inspections during the reporting period?*
- Does the labor inspectorate lack legal authorization to conduct unannounced inspections?*
- Did the inspectorate conduct unannounced inspections?
- Did the government develop and implement a labor inspection strategy that allowed for different types of onsite inspections of worksites, such as routine, targeted, complaint-driven, or unannounced?
- Were inspections conducted with sufficient frequency and in all relevant sectors?
- Did the government provide the labor inspectorate with sufficient authority to sanction child labor violations?
- Did the country make available information on labor law enforcement efforts related to child labor, including the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites and by desk review, the number of child labor violations found, and the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected?

- Does the government have a mechanism for filing and resolving complaints expeditiously regarding child labor?
- Does a reciprocal referral mechanism exist between labor and criminal authorities and social services?
- Did the government investigate, prosecute, convict, and sentence cases of violations of criminal child labor statutes, including public officials who participate in or facilitate the worst forms of child labor?
- Did the government impose penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor?
- Did the country make available information on criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, including the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions obtained, and penalties imposed?
- Did the government establish or improve a process for information sharing among enforcement authorities?
- Did the government ensure that all children engaged in the worst forms of child labor were protected from inappropriate incarceration, penalties, or physical harm?
- Did the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law enforcement practice that delayed its advancement in the elimination of child labor?*

* Note: A “yes” response likely means that the country will automatically receive an assessment of Minimal Advancement or No Advancement.

Coordination of Government Efforts on the Worst Forms of Child Labor

TDA Conference Report Criterion:

- Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor.
- In this section, ILAB analyzes whether, or to what degree, the country has institutions charged with coordinating overall efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms. The analysis is based on the following guidance questions.

Guidance Questions

- Does the government have an agency or committee created to coordinate government efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor? Did it create such an agency or committee during the reporting period?
- Does the agency or committee address all sectors of child labor that are prevalent in the country, or does it address only certain sectors?
- Did such an agency or committee meet regularly and take actions, or did it not meet regularly and take few or no actions?

Government Policies on the Worst Forms of Child Labor

TDA Conference Report Criterion:

- Whether the country has a comprehensive policy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.

Guidance Questions

- Did the government establish any new policies or plans that specifically address the worst forms of child labor or any one of the worst forms of child labor?
- Did the government incorporate the worst forms of child labor specifically as an issue to be addressed in poverty reduction, development, educational, or other social policies, such as poverty reduction strategy papers?

- Did the government establish poverty reduction, development, educational, or other social policies, such as poverty reduction strategy papers, that did not explicitly address the worst forms of child labor or any one of the worst forms of child labor, but that might have had an impact on it or them?
- If the country established any of the above policies or plans, do they designate responsibilities, establish goals, and set timelines?
- Did the government effectively implement existing policies and plans?
- Did the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental policy that delayed its advancement in the elimination of child labor?*

* Note: A “yes” response likely means that the country will automatically receive an assessment of Minimal Advancement or No Advancement.

Social Programs to Address Child Labor

TDA Conference Report Criterion:

- Whether social programs exist in the country to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor, and assist in the removal of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.

Guidance Questions

- Did the government fund or participate in any new or ongoing programs that aim to eliminate or prevent the worst forms of child labor?
- Did the government fund or participate in any social protection programs that could reasonably be expected to have an impact on child labor? Were any of the country’s programs shown, through research, to have had an impact on child labor?

- Did the government make efforts to reduce children’s vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor by addressing factors such as:
  - ◆ Country- and region-specific practices that make children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor; and
  - ◆ Barriers to education, such as a lack of teachers; lack of schools or inadequate facilities; lack of infrastructure to access schools; lack of transportation; violence, including physical and sexual abuse; birth registration requirements; and the charging of school fees?
- Are the country’s programs sufficient to combat particular forms of child labor, considering the scope and magnitude of those problems?
- Do the programs provide services directly to children?
- Do the programs adequately target at-risk populations?
- Were the programs fully funded?
- Are the programs meeting their goals?
- Are the program efforts sustainable?
- Did existing government programs improve or worsen in quality or effectiveness compared with the previous year?
- Did the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental social program or other practice that delayed its advancement in the elimination of child labor?*

* Note: A “yes” response likely means that the country will automatically receive an assessment of Minimal Advancement or No Advancement.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2020, Afghanistan made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The National Security Council approved a National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Action Plan, which mandates steps to eliminate the criminal practice of bacha bazi—a form of commercial sexual exploitation of boys—by those in positions of power. In addition, it achieved its first indictment of a government employee, a school headmaster, for bacha bazi crimes uncovered in investigations of the Logar province school system in 2019 and 2020. This indictment, along with numerous other prosecutions, convictions, and stringent prison sentences achieved during the year, are indicative of a nascent shift away from a culture of impunity toward one of greater accountability for these crimes. Furthermore, the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs established 10 new Child Protection Action Network units, and Child Protection Units within the Afghan National Police recruitment centers operated in all provinces. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Afghanistan is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. In 2020, the government arrested, detained, and prosecuted children for terrorism-related crimes, including some younger than age 12, who had been forcibly recruited by non-state armed groups. Furthermore, authorities considered some child trafficking victims, especially those engaged in bacha bazi or armed conflict, as criminals, housing them in juvenile detention centers and subjecting them to torture and other forms of ill treatment rather than referring them to victim support services. Children in Afghanistan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, armed conflict, and forced labor in the production of bricks and carpets, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Afghanistan's labor inspectorate is not authorized to impose penalties for child labor violations, and the government lacks sufficient programs to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In addition, Afghan law does not sufficiently criminalize forced labor, debt bondage, or the commercial sexual exploitation of girls.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Afghanistan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, armed conflict, and forced labor in the production of bricks and carpets, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Afghanistan.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Boys across the country are subject to commercial sexual exploitation through the practice of bacha bazi, which typically entails keeping a male or transgendered child for the purpose of sexual gratification. Although bacha bazi is prohibited by the Trafficking in Persons Law, the Penal Code, and the Ministry of Defense Protection of Children in Armed Conflict Policy, a significant challenge remains in ensuring accountability. (51) Perpetrators of this crime include police commanders, military members, tribal leaders, warlords, members of organized crime groups, clergy, and other men, typically with some authority or financial influence, who conspire to make boys available for sex. (52,53) In some cases, these boys may also be forced to serve tea or dance at parties. (54,55) The practice is pervasive in the country, and orphans, runaways, school dropouts, and other marginalized youth are particularly at risk. (33,56,57) Some boys are sold into the practice by their families, and others are abducted from the street, including by police officers. (40,41,59) Members of the Afghan National Police (ANP), the Afghan Local Police (ALP), the Afghan National Army, the Afghan Border Police, and checkpoint commanders exploit boys for bacha bazi. Some victims serve tea and conduct errands for government officials, but these everyday tasks take place within the anthropological and underlying criminal context of bacha bazi, namely the regular sexual assault of minors—a categorical worst form of child labor that is insidiously and particularly prevalent in corridors of power and authority. (32,33,40,41,51,52,56,60-61)

In 2020, the use of boys for bacha bazi remained prevalent. (62,63) For example, at least 10 boys between the ages of 14 and 19 were alleged to have been sexually exploited while working as bodyguards or drivers for an Afghan National Defense and Security Force (ANDSF) commander in the central Highlands region. (64) In Kandahar, a 13-year-old boy was reportedly sexually assaulted as a bacha bazi crime by seven members of the ANP, resulting in the death of the child, and these officers were convicted of and sentenced for these crimes. (62,65) In Helmand province, a human rights organization received reports of the continued practice of bacha bazi by the members of the ANP. (62) During the reporting period, there was also a meaningful increase in the number of other allegations of the recruitment of children by ANDSF, ANP, and ALP (which was disbanded in September 2020) for not only use in armed conflict (as bodyguards, checkpoint guards, and drivers), but also for the purposes of bacha bazi. (64)

According to media and NGO reports, many of these cases went unreported or were referred to traditional mediation, which often allowed perpetrators to re-offend. Cases were further under-reported because the stigma associated with these crimes prevented the vast majority of child victims from bringing cases forward to law enforcement or seeking care, especially when the alleged perpetrators were members of the police force. (63)

In 2020, armed groups and Afghan Government-affiliated military entities recruited children for engagement in combat and security operations, including 172 by the Taliban, 5 by the ANP, 4 by the Afghan National-Army Territorial Force, and 8 jointly by the ALP and pro-government armed groups. (46,66) Low rates of birth registration and the falsification of identity documents contributed to the problem by making it difficult to determine a recruit's age. (62,67,68) Observers reported that some officials accepted bribes to produce false identity documents that indicated that the recipient boys were older than age 18. (33,62) Even newly introduced biometrics efforts have not enabled Child Protection Units to entirely restrict children from enlisting in the police force. (62) Nevertheless, the Child Protection Units at ANP recruitment centers prevented the recruitment of at least 187 children. (3,69,70) Moreover, the Ministry of Defense prevented the recruitment of more than 5,000 children into the ANDSF throughout the country during the reporting period. (71)

Afghan children are victims of human trafficking both domestically and internationally. There were widespread reports of child laborers being subjected to sexual violence within Afghanistan. (10,11,14,26) In Afghanistan, children are also subjected to human trafficking to settle their family's debt, sometimes as a result of their parents' drug addiction, by being forced to produce bricks or illicit drugs. (33,43,48) Some children migrate unaccompanied to engage in child labor. (67,72) Boys, especially those traveling unaccompanied, were particularly vulnerable to human trafficking, including for work in agriculture and construction. (60,67,73) Traffickers in Iran exploit Afghan children in forced labor as beggars and street vendors and in forced criminality, including drug trafficking and smuggling of fuel and tobacco. (33)

Some Afghan nationals living overseas subject Afghan boys to bacha bazi, for example, in Germany, Hungary, North Macedonia, and Serbia. (74) In addition, some Afghan boys were subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Greece after paying high fees as they were trafficked into the country. (60,73,75) Although in these particular circumstances, bacha bazi takes place outside of Afghanistan, this sexual exploitation of children causes psychological harm to the Afghan migrant victims, making their re-entry back into Afghanistan upon deportation ever the more fraught with issues pertaining to the use of drugs as a coping mechanism, the stigma and ostracization in Afghan society, and ensuing discrimination. (76) Afghan girls are used for commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work in destination countries, primarily Iran and Pakistan. (24)

UNICEF estimated that 3.7 million school-age children were out of school in the country, 60 percent of whom are girls, according to the latest available figures in 2019. (78) Barriers to education for children included displacement of populations due to conflict, the use of schools as military bases, attacks on schools, living long distances from schools, school-related fees, lack of security, lack of female teachers in girls' schools, and lack of identity documentation. (3,15,79-81) To mitigate the spread of COVID-19, the government closed schools from March to October 2020. (82) Research indicates that an increase occurred in the recruitment of children for use in armed conflict and child labor, especially in provinces where the level of child protection services were not necessarily adequate in addressing the full extent of the issue. (3,81)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Afghanistan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Afghanistan’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including debt bondage and commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 13 of the Labor Law (83)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 13 and 120 of the Labor Law; Article 613 of the Penal Code; Article 63 of the Law on Protection of Child Rights (83-85)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		List of Prohibited Jobs for Child Laborers; Article 613 of the Penal Code (84,86)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Article 4 of the Labor Law; Article 37 of the Law on the Elimination of Violence Against Women (83,87)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 510–512 of the Penal Code (84)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Article 18.2 of the Law on Elimination of Violence Against Women; Articles 510–512, 650, and 652–667 of the Penal Code (84,87)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		List of Prohibited Jobs for Child Laborers; Articles 1, 7, and 23 of the Counter Narcotics Law (86,88)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 605–608 of the Penal Code (84)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 510–512 of the Penal Code (84)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 17 of the Education Law; Article 609 of the Penal Code (84,89)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 17 of the Education Law (89)

* No conscription (90)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (91)

The Afghan Labor Law’s minimum age provision prohibits those under age 18 from being “recruited as a worker.” (83) However, the law defines “worker” as a person who is “recruited based on a definite contract,” meaning that the minimum age provision does not apply to those in informal employment. Afghan law does not sufficiently criminalize forced labor or debt bondage. (83)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The Penal Code explicitly prohibits and sets penalties for the use of male or transgender children for bacha bazi and prohibits the use of girls for prostitution and pornographic performances. However, the legal framework does not adequately criminalize the use of children for the production of pornography. (85,87)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Child Protection Action Network (CPAN)	Operates as a coalition of government agencies, NGOs, and community and religious leaders. Receives complaints of child labor, investigates such cases, and refers them to NGO and government shelters that provide social services, and coordinate and provide case management. (3,92) Not all provinces have a CPAN chapter. The capacity of CPAN chapters is not uniform or based on need, and the type of intervention depends on members of a particular CPAN chapter and resources available. (32)
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MoLSA)	Responds to complaints of child labor, child trafficking, and child sexual exploitation; refers cases to the Attorney General's Office (AGO) and NGO shelters; and operates a shelter for trafficking victims in Kabul. (32)
Ministry of Interior	Enforces laws related to child trafficking, the use of children in illicit activities, and child sexual exploitation. (32)
National Directorate of Security	Identifies human trafficking victims and refers these cases to the Ministry of Interior. (32)
AGO	Investigates and prosecutes human trafficking, abduction, and sexual exploitation cases. (32)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MoLSA) established 10 new Child Protection Action Network (CPAN) units, totaling 212 active units. (3) With this increase, CPAN operates in 171 out of 325 districts. CPAN units held monthly meetings and worked on 3,500 cases. This caseload in 2020 represents an increase from 2019, when 2,700 cases were processed. (3) These units can respond to complaints of child labor, investigate cases, and issue warnings or refer criminal cases to the Attorney General's Office. However, a person wishing to file a complaint must specify the precise legal statute for the labor violations in writing, making it cumbersome for some citizens to do so. (92,93) Research also indicates that limited training and resources hinder prompt government actions to complaints about child labor. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Afghanistan took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of MoLSA that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

In 2020, the government did not report the number of labor inspectors; however, as of December 2018, MoLSA had 27 inspector positions, 21 of which were filled. (2,3,32) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Afghanistan’s workforce, which includes more than 7.9 million workers. (95) According to the ILO’s technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Afghanistan would employ about 200 labor inspectors. (96-98) Government officials, NGOs, and UNICEF acknowledge that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient. (96) Moreover, sources indicate that labor inspections take place only in the capital, Kabul. (3)

There is no de jure prevention of inspections and unannounced inspections of private enterprises in Afghanistan. (94) However, in practice, reporting suggests that MoLSA has been more inclined to inspect public organizations. This leaves a gap of uninspected worksites in the private sector, as well as in the informal economy. (3,24,32,92,96) Many forms of child labor in Afghanistan occur in the informal sector. (10) In addition, government officials and other stakeholders stated that the government lacked resources, including training, for the enforcement of child labor laws. (32)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Afghanistan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In response to the widespread sexual exploitation of children at schools in Logar province in 2019, 20 suspects were arrested and 9 individuals were convicted and sentenced in 2020, as announced by courts in Logar and Kabul. The sentences ranged between 5 and 22 years of imprisonment. (3) Among the indicted individuals, one was a headmaster at a school in Logar province. This indictment of a school headmaster represents the first time the government is holding a civilian government employee legally responsible for alleged crimes in the Logar incident. (71) These arrests and convictions are a departure from prior years of impunity for government officials involved in the criminal practice of bacha bazi. (62,71,101)

In addition, the Afghan judicial process has for the first time included anti-corruption measures in the indictment and prosecution of suspected perpetrators of bacha bazi. For example, Kandahar’s governor sent seven members of the ANP—including an influential commander—to trial in Kabul, which purportedly has a less corrupt judicial process than Kandahar. (62,65) The seven members were suspected of sexually abusing a 13 year old boy in Kandahar; one of the seven was given the death penalty, and others were sentenced to lengthy prison terms on charges including rape, as well as bacha bazi (two of them receiving sentences of 30 years of imprisonment and the other four were sentenced to 24 years of imprisonment). (62,65,71)

Moreover, in Badakhshan and Kunduz, members of the Afghan National Army were prosecuted and convicted of bacha bazi, for which they received sentences of 18 months' imprisonment. (71) In the northern province of Takhar, four members of the Afghan Security Forces were arrested and jailed in July 2020 after being accused of raping two boys—a 13-year-old and a 14-year-old—in a battalion headquarters base. (101) This move to hold police commanders and Afghan Security Forces personnel accountable represents a shift in political attitude towards less tolerance of bacha bazi by those in authority. (101)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Interior sought to bring perpetrators of bacha bazi within their own ranks to justice. These internal investigations resulted in 13 employees being charged with committing bacha bazi. (71)

To build capacity and increase awareness of bacha bazi, the National Directorate of Security carried out 89 seminars in 2020 on child protection, prevention of trafficking in persons, and bacha bazi. Trainings were also provided by the Ministry of Justice to about 300 prosecutors, judges, and attorneys pertaining to the penal code's coverage of bacha bazi cases. (71)

The Government of Afghanistan publicly established a protection mechanism in cooperation with 32 human rights organizations in Afghanistan to prevent harassment of human rights defenders at the start of the reporting period. This action was in response to the aftermath of the Logar incident, in which the whistleblowers—who were responsible for exposing the widespread sexual exploitation of children—were unjustly detained. (102)

Despite unprecedented meaningful progress in holding government officials responsible for bacha bazi crimes, victims of human trafficking were routinely prosecuted and convicted of crimes during the reporting period. (33,103,104) Male victims of child trafficking, especially those engaged in bacha bazi or armed conflict, were sometimes referred to juvenile detention or rehabilitation facilities on criminal charges, instead of appropriate victim support services. (3,33,47,106) The government arrested, detained, and prosecuted for terrorism-related crimes children younger than age 12 who had been forcibly recruited by non-state armed groups. Furthermore, authorities housed some child trafficking victims in juvenile detention centers, sometimes for several years. (81) Such children are considered criminals even after being transferred to rehabilitation centers. (33,59) The UN reported that some of these children were subjected to torture and ill treatment. (106,107)

Although information was unavailable for 2020, government officials had previously stated that they lacked equipment and transportation to carry out investigations. (108) In addition, security agencies and the Ministry of Justice did not have a reciprocal referral mechanism to ensure that child victims of human trafficking and other worst forms of child labor receive social services. (3,32)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission on Protection of Child Rights	Monitors and protects children's rights established under the Law on Protection of Child Rights and strengthens national coordination on child protection. Participants include representatives from the AGO, the Ministry of Education, and other bodies. (109,110) Includes an inter-ministerial technical committee, chaired by the MoLSA Minister, to ensure that the Child Act is operational at the provincial and district levels.(109) In 2020, it ratified the national policy on child protection.
High Commission for Combating Crimes of Abduction and Human Trafficking	Addresses human trafficking in general, including child trafficking. Led by the Ministry of Justice; comprises nine ministries, such as MoLSA, and five other entities. (24,111) Focuses on bacha bazi . (48) Met twice during the reporting period. (3) The Commission stated that ministries did not provide detailed enforcement information, making it difficult for the Commission to issue reports. (112)
Inter-Ministerial Steering Committee on Children and Armed Conflict	Coordinates efforts to eliminate the recruitment and use of child soldiers. Led by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and monitored by the UN and NGOs. (24) Research was unable to determine whether this committee was active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that may hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Labor Policy	Includes objectives to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, such as those involving hazardous activities, pass legislation prohibiting child labor, and effectively enforce child labor laws. (113) In 2020, MoLSA's Child Protection department directed national organizations and NGOs involved in child protection to report on their efforts in line with the National Labor Policy. However, no significant actions were indicated. (114)
National Child Labor Strategy and Action Plan	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2025 and all child labor by 2030. Makes recommendations to improve social protections and oversight. (2) In 2020, MoLSA's Child Protection department directed national organizations and NGOs involved in child protection to report on their efforts in line with the National Child Labor Strategy and Action Plan. However, no significant actions were indicated. (114)
National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Action Plan†	Organizes the government response to human trafficking, including bacha bazi , with a three-pronged approach: it mandates the National Child Protection Committee to find and respond to bacha bazi cases among Afghan civil servants; it encourages the implementation of laws, the prevention of child recruitment, and the reporting of corruption by the Ministry of Defense, the Ministry of Interior, and the National Directorate of Security; and it oversees the production of annual or semiannual interagency progress reports on addressing trafficking in persons. (101,115,116) Created and approved by Afghanistan's National Security Council during the reporting period. Operations, such as finding and responding to bacha bazi cases among civil servants, began under this plan in 2020. (101,115,116)
National Strategy for Children at Risk	Creates a framework to provide social services to at-risk children and their families, and guides donors in contributing toward a comprehensive child protection system. Focuses specifically on working children, victims of child trafficking, child soldiers, and other children affected by conflict. (117) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Policy for Protection of Children in Armed Conflict	Protects children from recruitment and sexual exploitation in the armed forces, and provides services to children rescued from engagement in armed conflict. Assigns the Ministry of Defense and the Afghan National Police with monitoring that children's rights are safeguarded and coordinating with CPAN chapters other organizations. (118) As of September 2020, 82 children were prevented from joining the Afghan National Police during the reporting period. (69,70) The Ministry of Defense reportedly prevented the recruitment of more than 5,000 children into the Afghan National Defense and Security Forces throughout the country during the reporting period. (71)

During the reporting period, the Government of Afghanistan took meaningful action to address the practice of bacha bazi by individuals beyond members of the national security forces, including government officials and employees affiliated with government agencies, through its National Action Plan. This led to the first ever indictment of a governmentally affiliated employee, a school headmaster, in Logar, as well as the indictment of employees working within the Ministry of Interior, all for bacha bazi crimes. (101)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Protection Units (CPUs) of the Afghan National Police†	Units located within Afghan National Police recruitment centers to ensure that children are not recruited to join armed conflict. Operate in all provinces. (3) CPUs inspected e-tazkeera (ID cards) and compared them against the physical appearance of applicants, but the government did not have sufficient CPU reporting channels to identify children, prevent them from joining the security forces, or provide shelter, services, and family reintegration. (114,119,120) Despite insufficient reporting channels between CPUs and the government, CPUs prevented the recruitment of 277 children. (3)
Juvenile Rehabilitation Center†	Provides educational, social, and psychological support, and vocational training in Kabul to children who were previously engaged in armed conflict. (121,122) Nearly 800 children are project participants of the services provided by the Juvenile Rehabilitation Center; according to the Ministry of Justice. (114)
Asia Regional Child Labor Program (2019–2023)	Program is funded by and implemented by human rights organizations. Works with the government to ensure that policies on child labor align with international conventions while strengthening local and national Plans of Action. Contains a special focus on internally displaced persons and returnee migrants, along with other groups vulnerable to child labor and human trafficking. (123)

During the reporting period, the government provided cash assistance to 1,500 families whose children were found to be working in brick kilns. Although these families were provided with approximately $55 (4,200 Afghan Afghani), it was not reported whether the children were removed from the situation of child labor. (3)

There is no evidence of programs designed specifically to prevent and eliminate child labor in all relevant sectors, such as in commercial sexual exploitation or the production of bricks.

Moreover, the government acknowledged the dearth of shelters and government resources for victims of human trafficking. At times, the government placed child trafficking victims in orphanages, and some orphanages subjected children to human trafficking. (33,81)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Afghanistan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to all children, including those engaged in informal employment.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of female children for prostitution and pornographic performances and the use of all children for the production of pornography.	2017 – 2020
	Ensure that forced labor and debt bondage are criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2020
Enforcement	Establish Child Protection Action Networks in all of Afghanistan's 34 provinces and ensure that they can provide all services needed by victimized children.	2016 – 2020
	Track and publish information on labor inspections, including labor inspectorate funding, number of labor inspectors, number and type of child labor inspections, number of violations found, and number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed.	2015 – 2020
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for violations of Afghan law.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive training on child labor.	2011 – 2020
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice and ensure that inspections are conducted throughout the country and in all sectors.	2011 – 2020
	Simplify the child labor complaint mechanism to allow oral complaints, and eliminate or waive the requirement that the individual filing a complaint must specify the legal grounds for the violation.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate conducts inspections in private businesses and the informal sector.	2014 – 2020

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor (Cont.)

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators are available and receive resources, including equipment and transportation, to enforce criminal child labor laws.	2012 – 2020
	Establish a referral mechanism between criminal authorities and social services.	2020
	Ensure that child victims of human trafficking and other worst forms of child labor are correctly identified as victims, and referred to appropriate social services, not arrested, detained, or subjected to mistreatment or torture.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that children are not recruited into armed groups or government-affiliated military entities, including by ending the falsification of identity documents.	2020
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are able to carry out their intended mandates, including by ensuring that detailed enforcement data are reported to appropriate coordination bodies and that meetings are held at the mandated intervals.	2017 – 2020
Government Policies	Implement the National Labor Policy and the National Strategy for Children at Risk.	2016 – 2020
Social Programs	Institute a birth registration campaign so that age is documented and children can register for school.	2015 – 2020
	Institute programs to increase access to education and improve security in schools (especially for girls).	2014 – 2020
	Institute programs to address child labor in all relevant sectors, such as agriculture and bonded child labor in brick kilns.	2009 – 2020
	Provide financial support to open shelters for victims of human trafficking and to ensure that sufficient shelter services are available for male child trafficking victims.	2010 – 2020
	Build capacity for the government to have sufficient Child Protection Unit (CPU) reporting channels to identify children, prevent them from joining the security forces, and provide shelter, services, and family reintegration.	2020

REFERENCES ON FILE

In 2020, Albania made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Ministry of Justice launched the Integrated System of Data on Justice for Children, which will allow parties throughout the national justice system to coordinate on cases related to children in conflict with the law, including child labor. The government also adopted a new National Cybersecurity Plan to address the online exploitation of children, and the State Agency for the Protections and Rights of Children engaged extensively with private sector stakeholders to raise awareness of child labor and promote coordination with local government authorities. However, children in Albania are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, criminal activity, and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children in Albania are also subjected to mining, including of chromium. The law does not explicitly prohibit using, procuring, or offering children for illicit activities. In addition, the labor inspectorate lacks resources to conduct inspections in all sectors in which child labor is known to occur.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Albania are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, criminal activity, and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children in Albania are also subjected to mining, including of chromium. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Albania.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including burglary, drug trafficking, and harvesting and processing cannabis (3,4,6,14,22)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,8,12,14,17,20,21,25)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,8,14,17,20,21,23-25)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Some Roma and Balkan Egyptian children engaged in street begging or the collection of recyclables to contribute to family income. (2,26) Children are also subjected to trafficking, both domestic and abroad to EU countries, for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor. (2) In addition, some children informally scavenge chromium around hazardous mines where debris from mine tunnels is found, and they sometimes carry these heavy rocks for miles. (2,10,11) Internal child trafficking and forced begging have continued in recent years, particularly during the tourist season. (27) Albania lacks recent, comprehensive data on child labor, including in the agriculture and construction sectors.

Although Albania allows children without a birth certificate to enroll in public schools, some children from Roma and Balkan Egyptian families and refugees may face obstacles in obtaining birth certificates, which may affect their access to social services and education. (2,4) Roma and Balkan Egyptian children also experienced discrimination in schools and were placed in separate classrooms and faced other hurdles to accessing education, such as a lack of access to reliable transportation. (2,6,28,29) In addition, some migrant and refugee children from Syria, Algeria, and Libya faced difficulties accessing education due to language barriers. (2) Children with disabilities also continue to experience discrimination and other hurdles to accessing inclusive education. (2,30) Children not in school are more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Albania has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Albania’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of prohibitions for using children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 98 of the Code of Labor; Article 24 of the Law for the Protection of the Rights of the Child (28,29)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 9 of the Law on Military Service (34)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 28 of the Law for the Protection of the Rights of the Child (29)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 22 of the Law on Pre-University Education System (35)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 57 of the Constitution of the Republic of Albania; Article 5 of the Law on Pre-University Education System (35,36)

In June 2020, Decision of the Council of Ministers no. 479 (DCM no. 479) was passed, which provided labor inspectors with a more comprehensive guide to identify and address child labor violations. More specifically, DCM no. 479 updated language throughout the Labor Code and its 2017 addendum to reflect the roles of the Ministry of Health and Social Protection, which subsumed the former Ministry of Social Welfare and Youth and continues to jointly regulate the protection of youth at work in conjunction with labor and criminal law enforcement agencies. (4,32,37)

The law in Albania does not explicitly prohibit using, procuring, or offering children under age 18 for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. Article 129 of the Criminal Code only prohibits inducing or encouraging children under age 14 to participate in criminality. (33) The law also does not criminally prohibit the use of children for prostitution. (33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Finance, Economy, and Labor	Enforces laws related to child labor and hazardous work and monitors the quality of social services provided by the State Inspectorate for Labor and Social Services. Receives, documents, and responds to child labor complaints through the State Social Services Agency. (2) Child Protection Units (CPUs) are the responsible agencies at the local level and identify at-risk children, conduct initial evaluations of each case at the municipal level, and refer children to appropriate social services. (2,38) The number of CPUs increased from 237 in 2019 to 240 in 2020. (2,4)
Ministry of Interior	Enforces all laws, including laws related to the worst forms of child labor through protection officers. (8,16) Coordinates operations of the Border Police as well as each of the Illicit Human Trafficking sections in the country's 12 Regional Police Directorates through the General Directorate of State Police. (2,6) Establishes the government's policy on combating human trafficking through the State Committee Against Trafficking in Persons, chaired by the Interior Minister. (39)
Office of the Prosecutor General	Investigates and prosecutes child trafficking cases through the Serious Crimes Prosecution Office. (2) In 2020, the Prosecutor General's Office received a budget of $21 million, primarily for operational expenditures. (4) The Development Center of Criminal Justice for Minors produced three documents during the reporting period, providing guidance on the rights of children in conflict with the law, the rights of children who were victims of crimes (including trafficking in persons), and standard operating procedures for judicial police and prosecutors when dealing with cases involving minors. (40)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Health and Social Protection issued Ministerial Instruction no. 253 in April 2020, ensuring that protective services for at-risk children were continued for the duration of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Albania took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Finance, Economy, and Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2019	2020

During the reporting period, 12 local branches of the State Inspectorate for Labor and Social Services (SILSS) completed inspections in multiple sectors, including mining and manufacturing, both identified as sectors in which children work. During the summer, inspections increased in tourist areas to account for the high number of children working in the hospitality industry. (4) Concerns from the general public regarding suspected child labor abuses may be registered with SILSS on paper, through e-mail, and by telephone. (4) The SILSS can inspect all registered private entities but cannot inspect private homes, private farms, or unregistered businesses. (2,4,6)

In 2020, all inspectors received training on the identification and referral of economically exploited children, including children living and working on the streets. (2,41) The SILSS noted that its 2020 budget was inadequate to cover the cost of vehicles for labor inspections. (4,15,41) In addition, according to the SILSS, the number of labor inspectors was insufficient, given that only 6 percent of workplaces were inspected in 2020. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Albania took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (2)	Yes (4)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (2)	Yes (4)

Number of Convictions	9 (2)	7 (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (2)	Yes (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (2)	Yes (4)

During the reporting period, police officers from the Illicit Trafficking Police, State Police, and Border Police received trainings from the Office of the National Coordinator for the Fight Against Trafficking in Human Beings (ONAC) on properly identifying potential victims of human trafficking. ONAC also conducted five sessions in cooperation with OSCE to facilitate discussions between local police authorities and child protection officials in Korçë, Elbasan, Shkoder, Bulqize, and Vlore. (4) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Justice launched the Integrated System of Data on Justice for Children, which will allow law enforcement professionals to more easily cooperate with colleagues throughout the justice system, including courts, the Probation Service, the General Directorate of Prisons, and the State Police. (4)

If a child is subjected to trafficking for labor exploitation, the agency identifying the child refers the child to the police and state social services and then to an anti-trafficking shelter. (2) The case may also be referred to local Child Protection Units, which can then connect the child to social services. (6,38,42)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
State Agency for Rights and Protection of Children	Oversees implementation of the government's child rights protection policies, including monitoring the National Action Plan for the Identification and Protection of Children in Street Situations. (16,17) Manages cases of at-risk children and refers them to appropriate social services. Sanctions those who fail to protect children from violence and exploitation. (38) Coordinates local and central structures on health, security, and education of children. (6) During the reporting period, the State Agency for the Protections and Rights of Children provided trainings on protecting children from economic exploitation for child protection workers, community mediators, social service staff, and members of the cross-sectorial technical groups. The Agency also engaged with private sector stakeholders, including representatives from the mining industry, to raise awareness of child labor and promote proper communication with local government entities. (4)
Office of the National Coordinator for the Fight Against Trafficking in Human Beings (ONAC)	Collaborates with regional counterparts to adopt standard protocols to guide anti-trafficking efforts. Oversees 12 regional anti-human trafficking committees that carry out local action plans in cooperation with civil society partners. (17) Chairs the National Referral Mechanism, which coordinates the identification, protection, referral, and rehabilitation of trafficking victims between government and civil society organizations. Leads data collection and report writing for the National Database for Human Trafficking Victims/Potential Victims. (4,17) Runs the Closed Case Task Force with the Serious Crimes Prosecution Office and Albanian State Police. (23) In 2020, the State Police and NGOs identified 43 children as victims of trafficking or potential victims of trafficking. (4) In addition, ONAC organized multiple trainings for 120 employees across 6 regions of Albania on child labor and forced labor concepts, complaint filing, and victim referral. (4)
Ad-Hoc Cross-Sectorial Technical Groups (CTGs)	Address child protection cases in municipalities with more than 3,000 children. CTGs include representatives from multiple sectors including the police, social services, education, health, justice, and NGOs. (6) Decision of the Council of Ministers no. 353 defines the roles and responsibilities of CTGs in terms of promoting coordination among local-level actors. (6,43) In 2020, CTGs participated in multiple trainings organized by the State Agency for the Rights and Protections of Children. (4)

Coordination among the SILSS and the Albanian State Police has traditionally been sporadic. (4,12,45)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on the Protection of Children from Economic Exploitation (2019–2021)	Approved by the National Council for Child Protection in October 2019 and overseen by the State Agency for the Protection and the Rights of Children. (2,4) Guarantees the rights and protection of economically exploited children, including children in street situations. Aims to prevent the use of children for profit and enhances services and enforcement of legislation. (2,6) Defines the responsibilities of institutions involved in child protection, including children working in mining, in street situations, and in other situations that violate the law. (2) During the reporting period, the State Agency for the Protection and the Rights of Children drafted maps identifying geographic areas where children are at the greatest risk of economic exploitation. (4)
National Action Plan for Combating Trafficking in Persons (2018–2020)	Ensured the identification of and referral for the protection of child victims and potential victims of human trafficking in accordance with standard operating procedures. (6,46) Increased the use of CPUs, police, and border control personnel to identify victims, including children involved in street work. Raised public awareness of all forms of human trafficking, including for forced labor. (6,46,47) In 2020, the government continued to implement actions to promote the return and reintegration of juvenile and adult victims while also reducing the risk of being re-victimized. (4)
The Albanian National Agenda for Children's Rights (2017–2020)	Aimed to protect and promote children's rights by supporting physical and psychosocial development, and the social inclusion of children. Objectives included improving children's access to services and enhancing legal and institutional mechanisms for child protection. (8,48) Goals included promoting, respecting, and protecting children's rights through governance; eliminating all forms of violence against children; and creating child-friendly systems and services in education, justice, health, and social protection. (8,23) In September 2020, the Minister of Health and Social Protection signed Order No. 519 to establish the interagency working group for drafting the National Agenda for Children's Rights 2021–2025. (4)

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Social-Economic Reintegration of Women and Girl Victims of Trafficking (2018–2020)	Aimed to increase resources available to female victims of human trafficking and attempted to reintegrate them and prevent future re-victimization by providing education and social services. (49) Part of the Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Persons Action Plan. (17) During the reporting period, efforts primarily focused on protection of shelter residents from the pandemic, in part through the provision of personal protective equipment and other resources to shelters. (50)
National Action Plan for Roma and Balkan Egyptian Community Reintegration (2016–2020)	Aimed to provide Roma and Balkan Egyptian children with full access to education, reduce discrimination, enhance social inclusion, and promote intercultural dialogue between different actors in the community. (41,51,52) During the reporting period, the municipalities of Pogradec, Vlorë, Elbasan, and Korçë drafted Action Plans for the Integration of Roma and Egyptian Minorities. Services provided during the reporting period included civil registration, medical reimbursements, employment and vocational training, transportation, and provision of educational and daycare services. (50)
National Cybersecurity Strategy (2020–2025)†	Approved in December 2020, this multi-year strategy seeks to address the protection of children from online abuse and exploitation. Includes the establishment of a Technical Advisory Committee for Child Safety Online, within the National Council for Child Rights and Protection. (4,53,54)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (6,47,55)

In 2020, Albania maintained its status as a Pathfinder Country under Alliance 8.7. This involves accelerating commitments toward achieving SDG Target 8.7, which calls for the eradication of forced labor, modern slavery, human trafficking, and child labor by 2025. (56)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program of Cooperation for Sustainable Development (2017–2021)	UN program that aims to increase access to education for vulnerable children and improve protections for child victims of human trafficking. (57) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Education, Sports, and Youth collaborated with UNICEF to procure services from online educational platform Akademi.al to support all pre-university system students during the pandemic. (50)
Human Trafficking Shelters	The National Shelter Coalition† comprises one state-run and three NGO-run shelters for potential victims of trafficking. (2,4,27) During the reporting period, 131 children were referred to the shelters. (4)
National Emergency Transition Center†	Government-run center that aims to provide vulnerable families with housing, health care, psychosocial and educational services, legal assistance, and employment placement aid. (6) During the reporting period, the National Emergency Transition Center provided services to 37 families. (50)
Child Allowance Program (Ndhima Ekonomike)†	$46 million government-funded cash transfer program that provides an allowance for families receiving economic aid through the Law on Social Assistance and Services. (6) During the reporting period, the 63,510 eligible families under this program (including those with children at high risk for labor exploitation) received double their usual monthly benefit amount for 6 months after WHO's pandemic declaration in March 2020. (58)
Government-Run Hotlines†	Include the Hotline for Potential Victims of Trafficking (operated by the State Police Directorate's Command Center) and the Albanian National Child Helpline and Helpline for Missing Children, established to assist children through phone counseling and case referrals to institutions providing services to children. (4,27) During the reporting period, 5,363 children were beneficiaries of online and phone counseling and referral services provided by the Helplines. (50)
World Vision Albania Centers (Children's City Program)†	The municipalities of Durrës, Maliq, and Korçë collaborated with World Vision Albania to construct centers for children in high-risk situations, including violence, abuse, and various forms of exploitation. During the reporting period, the Children's City project assisted 5,144 children by providing intellectual, physical, and social development, and enhanced protection services. (4,59)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
UNICEF Albania Projects†	During the reporting period, UNICEF piloted a humanitarian cash transfer program to support 1,700 families in the municipalities of Shkodra, Korçë, and Durrës. UNICEF also collaborated with the Ministry of Education, Sports, and Youth to provide internet- and television-based lessons to children around the country, benefitting 25,000 students who were impacted by school closures related to the COVID-19 pandemic. (4,60) UNICEF and the OSCE presence in Albania also led the project "Transforming National Response to Human Trafficking In and From Albania," funded by the Government of the United Kingdom, which runs through 2021 and focuses on research and strategic communications, continued capacity-building of law enforcement and criminal justice professionals, and reintegration of victims and potential victims of trafficking through employment assistance and other engagement with the formal labor market. (4,61,62)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (47,63)

During the reporting period, police occasionally referred street children or unaccompanied minors to human trafficking shelters and contacted their parents. (4) Research indicates that there is a lack of shelters for street children who are not victims of human trafficking, although some state- and NGO-run services were available for children who were forced to beg. (4) Research also found no evidence that programs were carried out to assist children scavenging chromium, but efforts were made during the reporting period to engage with private sector stakeholders to raise awareness of issues around child labor in the mining industry. (2,4,64) A lack of financial and human resources and issues of decentralization of social funds from the central government to municipalities were also cited as gaps in the efficient implementation of social programs. (6,41,47,64)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Albania (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that using, procuring, and offering children under age 18 for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs, is criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that the use of children in prostitution is criminally prohibited.	2019 – 2020
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors can inspect the informal sector in which child labor is known to occur, including private homes, private farms, or unregistered businesses.	2010 – 2020
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate has sufficient resources, including vehicles, to enforce child labor laws.	2019 – 2020
Coordination	Ensure proper coordination between the State Inspectorate for Labor and Social Services and the Albanian State Police.	2019 – 2020
Government Policies	Ensure that the government implements national policies related to child labor, including its worst forms.	2019 – 2020
Social Programs	Conduct research to further identify children's activities in agriculture and construction to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2020
	Provide adequate transportation for Roma and Balkan Egyptian children who live in communities far from schools.	2011 – 2020
	Ensure that barriers to education, including discrimination against both children with disabilities and Roma and Balkan Egyptian children without formal birth registration paperwork, are removed.	2013 – 2020
	Provide language translation for migrant and refugee children to facilitate school access.	2018 – 2020
	Increase the number of shelters for victims of the worst forms of child labor, and in particular, for children living and working on the streets.	2017 – 2020
	Institute programs to assist children who are victims of human trafficking and those who are used in scavenging chromium.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that funding and human resources are increased for social programs for child labor and that decentralized social funds to municipalities are appropriately allocated to adequately carry out programs.	2018 – 2020

In 2020, Algeria made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government increased its number of labor inspectors from 645 in 2019 to 885 in 2020 and implemented a new strategy to address forced child begging by conducting periodic visits to transportation hubs and storage facilities. In an effort to address the challenge of enforcing labor laws in the informal economy, the government also led an initiative with an Algerian think tank to explore ways to reach children involved in informal work. However, children in Algeria are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street vending. The government has not sufficiently prohibited the use of children in illicit activities or determined by national law or regulation the types of work that are hazardous for children to perform.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Algeria are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street vending. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Algeria.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	6.7 (413,729)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	7.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		105.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2020. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4 (MICS 4), 2012–2013. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including harvesting olives (6-8)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown (1,7,9)
Services	Street work, including vending, collecting plastics, and begging (1,2,8,10,11)
	Domestic work (1,9)
	Working in small workshops and businesses, including mechanics’ shops (6,8,9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,10)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (7)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (9,10)
	Forced domestic work, including drawing water from wells, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (10)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Evidence suggests that children, primarily unaccompanied Sub-Saharan migrants, are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic work. (1,8,12,13) Evidence also suggests that children’s work is often part-time and informal in nature, with some migrant children working in small-scale family-run businesses such as restaurants or small stores. Children also work in informal street markets in street vending and begging, exposing them to dangerous and hazardous conditions. (8,9,14-17) Research could not find a current and comprehensive study on the activities and scope of the child labor situation in Algeria, particularly in light of the COVID-19 pandemic. The pandemic also had an impact on the increasing number of children and migrants working in the agricultural sector and family-run stores in rural settings; however, in urban environments, the economic downturn associated with the onset of the pandemic decreased employment, including child labor. (17)

Child begging also continued during the reporting period, prompting governmental efforts to dismantle begging networks in the country. More than 6,000 children have allegedly been forced to join begging networks. (17) Evidence suggests that the majority of begging networks use migrant children from Africa. (17)

Research also found that girls were trafficked from West Africa for sexual exploitation. However, the government did not provide data that disaggregated figures pertaining to sexual abuse and those related to commercial sexual exploitation of children, which is considered one of the worst forms of child labor. (17)

According to the Directorate General for National Security (DGSN), there were 485 cases of children being used in illegal activities. (17)

The Algerian public education system is free and open to all children between the ages of 6 and 16, regardless of ethnicity and nationality. However, despite access to universal education, attendance problems persist at schools in the southern regions of Algeria, with children as young as 13 or 14 dropping out of school. (17)

Non-Algerian children must provide documentation of grade level or sit for testing to determine their level. (8,9,17,18) There are no laws or regulations that prevent access to school, although there are reports of isolated cases of migrant children without valid documentation being denied enrollment by school administrators and reported to authorities. (8,17) In addition, the language of instruction (Arabic) is not necessarily understood by migrants, whose native languages are likely to be different, making effective schooling a challenging prospect. (17) Some migrant families may also not be familiar with Algerian law granting free education to all children. (17)

Many children with disabilities do not have access to mainstream education because of social stigma, the relatively low number of teachers with specialized training, the lack of a transportation system for children with disabilities, and the limited accessibility of school buildings. Barriers to education, including those placed on migrant children and children with disabilities, result in absence from school and increased vulnerability to child labor. (8,13,15,18)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Algeria has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Algeria's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a comprehensive hazardous work list for children and prohibitions related to the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 15 of the Labor Code; Article 7 of Executive Decree No. 96–98 on the List and Content of Special Books and Registers Mandatory for Employers (19,20)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 15 of the Labor Code; Article 7 of Executive Decree No. 96–98 on the List and Content of Special Books and Registers Mandatory for Employers (19,20)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 303 bis 4 of the Penal Code (21)

The Labor Code prohibits anyone under the age of 19 from working at night and anyone under the age of 18 from performing work that is harmful to their health, safety, or morals. (19) Algeria has not determined by national law or regulation the types of work that are hazardous for children, and research did not determine whether the government commission tasked with proposing a list of hazardous professions continued to work on this issue in 2020. (16) Furthermore, research uncovered no additional information on efforts to revise the Labor Code during the reporting period. (1,2,8,19,25) Algerian law does not provide increased penalties for, or categorize as a separate crime, the involvement of children in either the production or trafficking of drugs. (21)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MTESS)	Enforces labor laws, including laws related to child labor, through its General Labor Inspectorate; issues citations noting violations of labor laws; and refers violations to the Ministry of Justice. (2, 18) Supervises the application of laws and regulations related to labor relations, working conditions, and worker safety. (7) Shares child labor reports with the Ministry of National Solidarity, Family, and the Condition of Women to ensure follow up with social services. (7)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes child exploitation cases, including those related to non-compliance with labor laws, through its Office of Criminal Affairs and Amnesty Procedures, which is the lead enforcement agency for human trafficking issues. (17,26)
The National Council for Human Rights (CNDH)	Housed under the authority of the President. Investigates human rights violations, including those pertaining to labor. (17) These investigations may result in the initiation of legal proceedings. (17)
Ministry of National Solidarity, Family, and the Condition of Women	Provides social services to children and families. Also conducts investigations, as directed by the Ministry of Justice, into issues related to children and families. (16)
Ministry of the Interior and Local Assemblies	The Ministry of the Interior and local assemblies enforce criminal laws related to child trafficking through the DGSN in urban areas, which comprises 8 active brigades of 77 specialized police officers focused on illegal immigration and human trafficking, and 50 Brigades for the Protection of Minors, including 300 police officers specializing in the protection of children. The Ministry of the Interior maintains a hotline to report child abuse and missing children, and may conduct investigations on child labor violations, as directed by the Ministry of Justice. (7,10,14-16,27)
Ministry of National Defense	Enforces criminal laws pertaining to child labor, including child trafficking, in rural and border regions through the National Gendarmerie. As directed by the Ministry of Justice, may conduct investigations on child labor violations. (15) Works with DGSN and the NGO Algerian Network for the Defense of Children's Rights to administer hotlines for the reporting of child abuse; also receives training on child labor. (15) Maintains a website where individuals can file complaints. (15)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Algeria took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of The Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MTESS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of authority to inspect informal workplaces for child labor.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$15,300,000 (15)	Unknown (26)
Number of Labor Inspectors	645 (15)	885 (26)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	Yes (15)	Yes (26)
Initial Training for New Labor Inspectors	Yes (15)	No (26)
Training on New Laws Related to Child Labor	N/A (15)	N/A (26)

Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	124,698 (15)	116,701 (26)
Number Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (15)	109,113 (26)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (15)	14 (26)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (15)	Unknown (26)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (15)	Unknown (26)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (15)	Yes (26)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (15)	Yes (26)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (15)	Yes (26)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (15)	Yes (26)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (15)	Yes (17)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (15)	Yes (17)

The government did not provide information on labor inspectorate funding for inclusion in this report. While the labor inspectorate is authorized to conduct inspections in all workplaces, inspectors do not investigate unmarked workplaces, such as houses or informal construction sites. (17,28) However, it is suspected that child labor exists within the construction sector, agriculture sector, cafe businesses, and informal street markets. (17) Due to the pandemic, the Minister of Labor announced during the reporting period that the Labor Department did not have the sufficient resources to carry out its regularly scheduled duties. (17)

The Government of Algeria does recognize the need to address issues in the informal economy, and has begun to monitor the informal economy more closely. As part of these efforts, the government has worked with the Algerian think tank, Center for Research in Applied Economics for Development, to learn more about the informal economy. (17) The government has also requested the ILO's assistance in transitioning informal businesses to become more transparent within a legal framework. (17) Additionally, on October 3, the Minister of the Interior announced a new strategy to track begging networks at checkpoints with periodic visits to transportation hubs and storage facilities. (17)

The labor inspectorate is empowered to conduct unannounced inspections and issue penalties. If child labor law violations are found, the children are removed from their worksites and placed in the schooling system. (17)

The number of labor inspectors is seemingly sufficient for the size of Algeria's workforce, which includes more than 10.85 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, it would be recommended that Algeria employ 723 inspectors, and there are currently 885 inspectors in the country. (29)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Algeria took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (15)	No (26)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (15)	N/A (26)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (15)	Yes (26)
Number of Investigations	23 (15)	Unknown (26)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (15)	5,669 (26)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	32‡ (15)	Unknown (26)
Number of Convictions	27‡ (15)	Unknown (26)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (15)	Unknown (26)

Although the government reported conducting investigations and achieving convictions in cases related to human trafficking, it did not provide information on whether these cases involved child victims. In addition, the government did not provide for inclusion in this report specific information on its criminal law enforcement efforts in regards to other worst forms of child labor, including the number of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, and penalties imposed. (26)

Despite these limitations, the government took meaningful steps in terms of trainings. For example, 27 judges who specialize in juvenile cases received training in March from the National Authority for the Protection and Promotion of Children (ONPPE) and International Organization for Penal Reform. (26) ONPPE carried out a training on at-risk children that same month at the Judicial Police Academy of the National Gendarmerie. ONPPE also organized a seminar on international and national mechanisms against child labor at the Graduate School of the National Gendarmerie in November of the reporting period. (26)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Authority for the Protection and Promotion of Children (ONPPE)	Protects and promotes children’s rights and advocates for children in danger of economic exploitation. Acts as a liaison between the Ministry of Justice and members of the public alleging violations of children’s rights, and oversees efforts of the National Commission for the Prevention of and Fight Against Child Labor. (1,7,8,27,30,31) Runs a national hotline and website to field questions and complaints about the mistreatment of children. (17) In 2020, the Authority continued to run the hotline and website, and held trainings for government officials and members of the Algerian media on the protection and promotion of children’s rights. (17)
National Committee for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons	Monitors implementation of the National Action Plan for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons. Comprises representatives from the President’s Office; the Prime Minister’s Office; 12 ministries, including MTESS; and other government entities. (7,30,32,33) During the reporting period, the Committee worked to raise awareness on human trafficking as it relates to children. (17) Committee members also participated in an online seminar on the pandemic’s impact on human trafficking, which was organized by the UNODC and the League of Arab States. (34) In July 2020, under the auspices of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the UNODC, the Committee organized a workshop titled “No to the Exploitation of Persons.” (17)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a policy specifically dedicated to addressing the worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons	Aims to prevent and reduce human trafficking by raising awareness, strengthening legislation, prosecuting human trafficking crimes, improving the provision of protective services to victims, and increasing collaboration with national and international NGOs. (17,35) Research could not determine specific activities carried out under this policy during the reporting period.

The Algerian government does not have a national action plan to address the worst forms of child labor. However, the government’s 2019–2021 National Action Plan for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons dedicates specialized attention to child victims of trafficking, which could include those trafficked for labor. (17)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Labor Awareness Campaign†	Campaign carried out through the ONPPE and other government agencies that makes various efforts to raise awareness about child labor throughout the year. The Ministry of Solidarity also has a communication plan for each of the country’s 48 wilayas (governates) on child-related messaging. (17)
Children Assistance Facilities‡	Facilities operated by the government to provide support for children, namely orphans and children in dangerous situations who are taken into custody by the state. In 2020, these centers continued to operate. (17)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. (9,15,30)

Although Algeria has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, forced begging, and street work. The government did not provide information on the activities of existing social programs in 2020 for inclusion in this report. (36)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Algeria (Table II).

Table II. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws increase penalties for, or categorize as a separate crime, the involvement of children in all illicit activities, including using, procuring, and offering children for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2020
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under age 18, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
Enforcement	Publish information on the labor law enforcement of child labor laws, including labor inspectorate funding, number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, and penalties collected.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that new labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive initial training.	2020
	Publish information on the criminal enforcement of child labor laws including the number of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, and penalties imposed for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor.	2020
Government Policies	Adopt a national policy that includes all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation, forced begging, and street work.	2015 – 2020
	Publish activities undertaken to implement the National Action Plan for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons during the reporting period.	2020
Social Programs	Research and publish detailed information on children involved in child labor, or at risk of being involved; specify these activities, including those carried out in construction work, and publish information to inform policies.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that social programs address the increasing number of migrant children involved in rural family-run businesses and agricultural work, as well as subjected to forced begging.	2020
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, street work, and forced begging.	2016 – 2020
	Publish disaggregated figures on the commercial sexual exploitation of children in order to fully assess its scope and tailor social programs accordingly.	2020
	Ensure that isolated cases of school administrators denying enrollment to migrant children are stopped in accordance with laws allowing for free public education for all children.	2018 – 2020
	Take measures to remove barriers to education for migrant children and children with disabilities, including: language barriers, lack of specialized training, transportation and accessibility of school buildings.	2015 – 2020
	Expand social programs to address school dropout rates in the southern region of the country.	2020
	Publish information on the activities of existing social programs as they relate to the worst forms of child labor.	2020

In 2020, Angola made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved a consolidation of existing legislation related to child labor, including hazardous labor and child trafficking, which was incorporated into the Penal Code. In addition, the government increased the number of labor inspectors in the country by over 140 inspectors and conducted an intensive campaign to increase birth registration and the issuance of identification cards, resulting in the registration of 1,098,694 Angolans. However, children in Angola are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in construction. Prohibitions against the commercial sexual exploitation of children do not meet international standards because they do not prohibit the procuring or offering of a child for the production of pornography or the use, procuring, or offering of a child for pornographic performances. Moreover, a coordinating mechanism dedicated solely to addressing issues related to the worst forms of child labor does not exist outside the scope of human trafficking, and social programs do not target all sectors in which children work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Angola are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-5) Children also perform dangerous tasks in construction. (1,2,5) The 2015–2016 Survey on Multiple Health Indicators found that 23 percent of children, ages 5 to 17, engage in child labor. The percentage of children engaged in child labor is higher in rural areas compared to urban areas; Cuanza Sul and Cuando Cubango provinces have the highest percentage of child laborers. (6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Angola.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	15.1 (1,246,354)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	69.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	13.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		46.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (7)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2015–2016. (8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including plowing, harvesting, and picking fruits and vegetables, and the production of rice (1,9-11)
	Fishing, including artisanal fishing, and cleaning fish for deep freezing or sun drying (1,12,13)
	Cattle herding (1,2)
	Production of charcoal (14)
Industry	Artisanal diamond mining (2,15)
	Mining coal (1)
	Construction, including making and transporting bricks† (1,9)
	Animal slaughterhouses,† including cattle, goats, and pigs (16)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work, including vending, car washing, shoe shining, and transporting heavy loads† (1,9-11)
	Domestic work (1,2)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-5)
	Forced labor, including in agriculture, construction, artisanal diamond mining, and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,10)
	Use in illicit activities, including for the transport of illicit goods across the border of Angola and Namibia (2)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2020, reports indicate that the number of children under age 12 found begging in the streets, or being forced into criminal activity in major cities increased, presumably due the COVID-19 pandemic, which exacerbated the unemployment rate and increased food insecurity throughout the country. (17)

Undocumented Congolese migrant children enter Angola for work in diamond-mining districts, and some are subjected to forced labor or commercial sexual exploitation in mining camps. (2) Girls as young as age 12 are subjected to human trafficking from Kasai Occidental in the Democratic Republic of the Congo to Angola for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Angolan boys are taken to Namibia and forced to herd cattle or work as couriers to transport illicit goods. (2) Reports also indicate that some adults force children younger than age 12 to commit crimes because children cannot be criminally prosecuted. (18)

Education is free up to the ninth grade; however, families often face difficulty in paying informal school fees, such as for textbooks or bribes required by some education officials for new admissions or passing grades. (1,19) Additional barriers to education for children include lack of classrooms and teachers, and poor infrastructure. (20-22) Furthermore, refugee children face difficulties in continuing their education beyond age 11 since their status is directly connected to their parents' refugee card, which is not accepted by secondary schools. Currently, a mechanism to apply for identity documentation does not exist; however, reports indicate that the government is making efforts to address the issue and ensure that refugee children are not hindered from continuing their education. (1)

Although children are only permitted to attend school up to the sixth grade without a birth certificate, the government has conducted programs throughout all 18 provinces and over a million citizens were able to obtain their birth certificates for the first time during the reporting period. (23,24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Angola has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Angola's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 254 of the Labor Law (25)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 3(21) and 256 of the Labor Law (25)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 256 of the Labor Law; Hazardous Work List (25,26)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 18, 19, and 23 of the Money Laundering Law (27)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 19 and 23 of the Money Laundering Law (27)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 19, 22, and 23 of the Money Laundering Law; Articles 195–198 of the Penal Code (27,28)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 4 and 7 of the Drug Trafficking Law (29)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 11 of the Military Service Law (30)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of the Military Service Law (30)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	Articles 12, 27, and 31 of the Basic Law of the Education System (31)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 11 of the Basic Law of the Education System (31)

In November 2020, the government approved a consolidation of existing legislation related to child labor, including hazardous labor, child trafficking, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children, within the Penal Code to significantly raise awareness of these laws to prosecutors, enforcement agencies, and government entities who may not have been previously aware of their existence. (1,28,32)

Although the Penal Code criminalizes the use of children for the production of pornography, it does not meet international standards because it does not prohibit the procuring or offering of a child for the production of pornography, or the use, procuring, or offering of a child for pornographic performances. (28) Although the list of hazardous activities and occupations identifies 57 activities prohibited for children, the legislation does not include diamond mining, a sector in which there is evidence of work conducted underground. (2,15,26)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Administration, Labor, and Social Security	Enforces laws against child labor. Fines employers or sends cases to the Ministry of Interior, through the Criminal Investigations Services, for further investigation, and to the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights for prosecution. (15) Employs labor inspectors in all 18 provinces to carry out inspections and joint operations with social services providers. (33)
National Children's Institute (INAC)	Receives complaints about cases of child exploitation, including child labor. Conducts inspections and responds to reports of child labor. (34)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Interior's National Police	Enforces criminal laws, and conducts operations and investigations related to the worst forms of child labor. (15) Through its Criminal Investigation Services, collaborates with the Juvenile Court on child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and illicit recruitment investigations. (35)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Investigates and prosecutes cases of the worst forms of child labor. (15)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Angola took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Administration, Labor, and Social Security (MAPTESS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the allocation of financial and human resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$210,000 (15)	Unknown

Although the number of labor inspectors increased significantly by over 140 inspectors during the reporting period, the reported number remains likely insufficient for the size of Angola's workforce, which includes approximately 12.51 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Angola would employ about 313 labor inspectors. (1,37,38) Moreover, MAPTESS indicated that the budget allocated for labor inspection activities was insufficient to conduct inspections in sectors in which child labor is known to occur. (1)

The government did not provide comprehensive data on labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

Inspectors from MAPTESS work with the National Children's Institute (INAC) and the Ministry of Social Action, Family, and the Advancement of Women (MASFAMU) to ensure that child labor victims receive the appropriate social services. (15)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Angola took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (15)	Yes (1)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (15)	Unknown
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (15)	Yes (1)
Number of Investigations	10 (18)	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown

In 2020, the government conducted 9 human trafficking trainings, in collaboration with NGO partners, attended by 661 participants. Several other human trafficking trainings were also conducted during the reporting period, including for front-line police officers and NGO trainers. (17) The government also conducted a workshop on the National Reference Mechanism for the Protection and Assistance of Victims of Human Trafficking. (17)

During the reporting period, five officers from the National Police and the Protection Unit of Protocol Individualities, a specialized police unit, were tried and convicted on charges of child trafficking. The case addresses crimes committed as far back as 2015, including at least six minors trafficked to France and Italy, via Lisbon and Dubai. (17) Moreover, testimony heard during the trial prompted further investigations into the potential involvement of employees from civil registration offices and from the Migration and Foreigners Service, who allegedly issued fraudulent birth certificates and passports listing falsified parent information to facilitate these crimes. The Ministry of Justice reported that criminal investigations and arrest warrants are in process against these additional officials. (17) In Cabinda Province, a human trafficking case on trial resulted in a sentence of 8 years and 7 months to 3 defendants from the Democratic Republic of the Congo. The case included eight female victims from the Democratic Republic of the Congo, two of whom were minors, ages 14 and 16. (39)

Although the government did not publicly release comprehensive data on its criminal law enforcement efforts during the reporting period, reports indicate one new investigation related to sex trafficking, though it is unknown whether any children were involved. In addition, one suspected case of trafficking for forced labor involving children in Zaire Province is in trial, while two others continue under investigation. (17)

Angola's provinces have standard operating procedures that are used to inform INAC and MASFAMU officials whenever victims of the worst forms of child labor are identified. In 2020, the government implemented these operating procedures and distributed manuals, adapted for law enforcement personnel and civil society groups, addressing topics such as procedures on interviewing potential victims, how to screen vulnerable groups, assess risk, refer victims to protection services, and best practices for care of victims. (17)

INAC and MASFAMU use a network of 114 counseling and housing shelters to support victims and provide them with social services. (18) Child trafficking victims are also referred to the Ministry of Assistance and Social Reintegration shelters before a determination is made regarding their reintegration with their families or guardians. (1)

Although training for criminal investigators is an ongoing process for new and established employees, reports indicate that the training is insufficient, particularly for investigators located outside the capital and in remote areas across the country. (15)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Commission to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates enforcement efforts on human trafficking, including child trafficking for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Led by the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights. (15) Met five times during the reporting period and gave a lecture to 74 participants at a government-established educational youth center, Casa da Juventude . (17) The Commission also delivered lectures to 78 participants, in collaboration with an NGO, on the topic of combating human trafficking and asylum law. (17)
National Council for Social Action	Promotes and defends children’s rights through social consultation and monitoring of public policies. Led by the Ministry of Social Action, Family, and the Advancement of Women (MASFAMU). (40,41) Research was unable to determine whether the National Council for Social Action was active during the reporting period.
MASFAMU	Ensures coordination among various government agencies related to social welfare and victim protection. Oversees a national network of support centers established for the protection of children, offering health care, psychological care, legal and social assistance, meals, basic education, and family reunification for victims of crime, including victims of human trafficking. (15) In 2020, conducted several lectures on human trafficking given to 75 participants from the Registry and Notary Services Division, and 44 social workers and health care workers. (17)
INAC	Coordinates child protective services. Works with MASFAMU to provide shelter and helps with family reintegration for children found in child labor situations. (15) In 2020, conducted several public awareness trainings and distributed thousands of brochures to schools, children’s shelters, and bus stations. (17)

Reports indicate that coordinating mechanisms planned several activities to be implemented during the reporting period, however, restrictions related to the pandemic considerably reduced capacity for these measures to be carried out. (1)

Despite the existence of the Commission to Combat Trafficking in Persons, the government faces challenges aggregating and synthesizing data on human trafficking cases. (42) In addition, research shows that there is no specific coordinating mechanism dedicated solely to addressing issues related to the worst forms of child labor that are outside the scope of human trafficking.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Eradicate Child Labor (2018–2022)	Aims to eliminate child labor by strengthening the rights of children, increasing access to education, and mapping areas and types of child labor found across the country to better inform relevant policies to combat child labor. (43) The plan to integrate several ministries into one team to deliver a holistic response, as well as several other planned activities, were postponed due to the pandemic. (1)
National Action Plan on Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Persons (2020–2025)	Outlines Angola’s strategy to address human trafficking, including domestic human trafficking. The 5 year plan, with the option of extension, commits to specific activities designed to improve the prevention, protection and assistance, and prosecution components involved in combating human trafficking. (44) In 2020, although many government offices operated on a reduced schedule with reduced staff, the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights reported they were able to accomplish an estimated 70 percent of the planned events scheduled in relation to the National Action Plan on Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Persons. (17)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (22)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Protection Programs†	National network of child support centers implemented by the government in coordination with NGOs, offering meals, shelter, basic education, and family reunification services to victims of crime, including child trafficking victims. MASFAMU and the Organization of Angolan Women operate 52 children's shelters that assist victims of child trafficking. (15) Active in 2020. (1)
Birth Registration and Justice for Children†	Government-run program making birth registration free for all Angolan citizens. (45) In 2020, the government conducted an intensive campaign on birth registration and identification cards, which resulted in 1,098,694 Angolans obtaining these documents for the first time. (24)
Mobile Schools and Free Meals for Children†	Ministry of Education program that provides education in mobile schools to migrant children who work with their parents in cattle herding. Specifically targets children at the highest risk of involvement in child labor in southern Angola. (15) Supports some mobile schools with kitchens, facilitating the free school meals program. (15) In 2020, due to the pandemic, meals were served to a limited number of schools; however, the Minister of Education announced the continuation of the program in 2021 with a focus on locally sourced products. (39)
Strengthening Capacity of the Government of Angola*	USDOS-funded, $580,000, 2 year project implemented by IOM to strengthen Angola's response to address human trafficking, including the formalization of victim identification, referrals using standardized screening, risk assessment, and assistance tools to be used across all provinces. The project will also fund the upgrade of four shelters for victims and an awareness raising campaign regarding the risks of irregular migration. (17)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

In July 2020, INAC and the Integrated Center for Public Safety launched the "15015 SOS Child" hotline service to receive complaints of violence against children, including child trafficking and child labor. During the first 4 months of operation, the hotline received over 75,804 complaints compared to the 1,427 complaints registered with INAC between the months of January–May 2020. (17)

Although Angola has implemented programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. Furthermore, research did not identify programs that seek to reach children subjected to certain worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Angola (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the legal framework prohibits the procuring and offering of children for the production of pornography, and the use, procuring, and offering of a child for pornographic performances.	2018 – 2020
	Ensure that the law prohibits hazardous occupations or activities for children in all relevant sectors in Angola, including diamond mining.	2011 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
Enforcement	Publish information regarding labor inspectorate funding, the number of labor inspections conducted, the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, the number of child labor violations found, and the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2011 – 2020
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that the Ministry of Public Administration, Labor, and Social Security receives adequate resources to conduct inspections in sectors in which child labor is known to occur.	2019 – 2020
	Increase training for criminal investigators, including training of investigators outside the capital and in remote areas across Angola.	2019 – 2020
	Publish information regarding the number of investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions achieved, and penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor. In addition, ensure inspectors receive training on new laws related to child labor, such as the Penal Code, and receive refresher courses.	2019 – 2020

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all worst forms of child labor, including those that occur outside the context of human trafficking.	2016 – 2020
	Increase the capacity to aggregate and synthesize data on human trafficking cases.	2018 – 2020
	Ensure that activities postponed due to the COVID-19 pandemic are re-established when it is safe to do so.	2020
Government Policies	Ensure that the National Action Plan to Eradicate Child Labor is implemented.	2018 – 2020
Social Programs	Institute programs that target children subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, and expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem.	2010 – 2020
	Develop and expand existing social programs to ensure that all children have access to education and are not restricted by informal fees, lack of birth certificates, lack of teachers, or poor school infrastructure.	2013 – 2020
	Ensure that refugee children are not hindered from continuing their education beyond age 11 by providing a working mechanism whereby identification documents can be obtained.	2020

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Anguilla, in 2020 the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The law does not prohibit the involvement of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, the minimum ages for work and hazardous work do not meet international standards, and Anguilla lacks a list of prohibited hazardous occupations and activities for children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Anguilla. (1) Table I provides one key indicator on children's education in Anguilla. Data on key indicators on children's work are not available from the sources used in this report. (2)

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Primary Completion Rate (%)		95.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (2)

All other data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2021. (3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (BOTs) recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they are not constitutionally part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (4) Domestic UK law does not generally apply unless explicitly extended to Anguilla. Under Article 35 (4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. (4) If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that territory. The following Conventions have been extended to and accepted by Anguilla (Table 2). (4)

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of Anguilla has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in Anguilla's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

* No conscription (10)

† No standing military (10)

The minimum age of 12 for work does not meet international standards. The minimum age of 14 for hazardous work also does not meet international standards as it applies only to industrial undertakings, transportation of passengers or goods by roads or rail, and work on ships. (5,6) Anguilla lacks a list of prohibited hazardous occupations and activities for children. However, there is a prohibition of night work for children under age 16 in manufacturing of raw sugar, and a prohibition of night work in other industrial undertakings for children under age 18. (5) In addition, Anguilla does not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. (7, 11, 12) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (6,9)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, Anguilla has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor of the Ministry of Finance, Economic Development, Investments, and Tourism	Enforces child labor laws through the Labor Commissioner, pursuant to the Employment of Children (Restriction) Act. (6)
Department of Social Development of the Ministry of Social Development	Safeguards the well-being of children and investigates reports of child abuse. (13)
Royal Anguilla Police Force	Investigates child protection cases. (13,14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor. However, the Government of Anguilla has established a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Social Development	Implements child protection efforts and ensures that Anguilla complies with the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. (13)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, the Government of Anguilla has established the Child Safeguarding National Action Plan, Safeguarding and Child Protection Protocols and Procedures, and an Inter-Agency Child Protection Protocol. (13,15,16) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement Anguilla's key policies related to child labor during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor. However, the Government of Anguilla has established the Safeguarding Children in Anguilla Project, which may contribute to the prevention of child labor. (13,17) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement Anguilla's social programs related to child labor during the reporting period.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Anguilla (Table 6).

Table 6. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify international conventions on child labor.	2020
	Ensure that the law establishes age 15 as the minimum age for work in all sectors.	2016 – 2020
	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for all hazardous work.	2011 – 2020
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2017 – 2020
	Ensure that the law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in drug trafficking and production.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2020
Government Policies	Publish activities undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor to address child labor during the reporting period.	2020
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2020

In 2020, Argentina made significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Buenos Aires Ministry of Labor issued a regulation to close a loophole that enabled companies to exploit underage workers through sub-contracting arrangements. Whereas the government previously did not actively investigate the use of children in illicit activities, during the reporting period gang members were convicted and sentenced for using children to sell drugs. The Coordinating Body for the Prevention of Child Labor and Regulation of Adolescent Work was also elevated to directorate level within the Ministry of Labor, granting it more resources and responsibilities. In addition, Argentina renewed key policies aimed at addressing the worst forms of child labor, including its biannual plan against human trafficking. Finally, the government provided additional assistance to vulnerable families during the COVID-19 pandemic through its largest social program benefiting children at risk of child labor. However, children in Argentina are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities, such as the transport, sale, and distribution of drugs. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in agriculture. Moreover, the government does not publish complete information about its labor law enforcement efforts and the labor inspectorate remains understaffed to adequately address child labor issues in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Argentina are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities, such as the transport, sale, and distribution of drugs. (1-4) Children also engage in dangerous tasks in agriculture. (3) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Argentina. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	5.3 (371,771)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	98.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	6.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		98.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Encuesta de actividades de niñas, niños y adolescentes (EANNA), 2016–2017. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Harvesting† blueberries, carrots, cotton, garlic, grapes, olives, onions, potatoes, strawberries, and tomatoes (3,7-13)
	Harvesting† yerba mate (stimulant plant) and tobacco (7,13-19)
Industry	Production of garments (1,20)
	Production of bricks and wooden crates (1,3,7,21-25)
	Construction,† activities unknown (7,23)
Services	Street begging† and performing,† windshield washing,† handing out flyers or promotional materials, and guarding parked cars (7,13,26)
	Refuse collection, recycling, and garbage scavenging† (3,7,10,27,28)
	Caregiving,† including caring for other children, the elderly, or infirmed people (7)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Working and cooking in food service (7)
	Domestic work, including cleaning, doing laundry, and ironing (7,27)
	Yard work, including cutting lawns and pruning trees (7)
	Selling produce in grocery stores (13)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,7)
	Forced labor in the production of garments, charcoal, and bricks (4,13,29)
	Use in illicit activities, including transporting, selling and distributing drugs (2,7,30,31)
	Forced labor in domestic work (1,4,7)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Although the extent of the problem is unknown, reports indicate that girls from Argentina’s northern provinces are victims of human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation. (1,3,32) Reports also indicate that Paraguayan children are victims of human trafficking for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation in Argentina. (1,33,34) Limited reporting also indicates that sex traffickers exploit minors participating in domestic youth sports clubs. (4,29) Children from primarily the northern provinces and from Bolivia, Paraguay, Peru, and other countries are used in forced labor in numerous sectors, including garment production, agriculture, street vending, charcoal and brick production, domestic work, and in small businesses. (3,4,25,29,35)

Misiones—producer of 90 percent of Argentina’s and 60 percent of the world’s yerba mate—is one of the provinces most affected by child labor. Children as young as age 5 help their parents harvest yerba mate, sometimes carrying heavy loads. (19) In Salta and Jujuy, children harvest tobacco. (17,36)

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the transition to virtual instruction limited access to education for socio-economically disadvantaged children who did not have Internet connectivity, possibly increasing vulnerability to child labor. (13)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Argentina has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Argentina’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a gap between the minimum age for work and the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 2, 7, and 17 of the Prohibition of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Work Law; Article 9 of the Special Code on Contracting Domestic Workers; Article 25 of the Child and Adolescent Rights Protection Law; Articles 54–55 of the Law on Agrarian Work; Article 189 of the Employment Contract Law (37-41)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 10 of the Prohibition of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Work Law; Articles 176 and 191 of the Law on Labor Contracts; Article 62 of the Law on Agrarian Work (39-41)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 1 of Executive Decree 1117/2016 on Dangerous Work (42)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 15 of the Constitution; Articles 1 and 24–26 of the Modifications to the Prevention of and Sanction Against Trafficking in Persons and Assistance to Victims Law; Article 9 of the Child and Adolescent Rights Protection Law (37,43,44)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 1 and 25–26 of the Modifications to the Prevention of and Sanction Against Trafficking in Persons and Assistance to Victims Law; Article 9 of the Child and Adolescent Rights Protection Law (37,44)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 1 and 21–23 of the Modifications to the Prevention of and Sanction Against Trafficking in Persons and Assistance to Victims Law; Article 6 of the Crimes Against Sexual Integrity Law; Article 128 of the Penal Code (44-46)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 11 of the Possession and Trafficking of Drugs Law (47)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 8 of the Voluntary Military Service Law (48)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Article 19 of the Voluntary Military Service Law (48)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 10 of Law No. 26.200 (49)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Articles 16 and 29 of the National Education Law; Article 2 of the Law on Early Education (50-52)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 15–16 of the Child and Adolescent Rights Protection Law (37)

* No conscription (53)

During the reporting period, the Buenos Aires province Ministry of Labor issued a regulation to restrict children between the ages of 14 and 16 from working in family enterprises unless they are working directly under the authority of their parent or guardian. The regulation aims to address a loophole that enabled franchises or contractors to indirectly utilize and exploit child labor. (54,55)

Although the former Secretariat of Labor worked with the ILO in 2018 to update Argentina's list of hazardous work, the Argentine Government did not formally adopt or promulgate the proposed updates in 2020. (1,3) The minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (41-44,56)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Argentina

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MLES)	Carries out labor law enforcement efforts in coordination with provincial-level labor authorities in each of Argentina's 23 provinces and the City of Buenos Aires. (57) Enforces child labor laws in part through its Coordinating Body for the Prevention of Child Labor and Regulation of Adolescent Work (COODITIA) and collaborates with the National Registry of Rural Workers and Employers (RENATRE) in enforcing child labor laws in the agricultural sector. (13) In addition, maintains a national hotline through which labor violations can be reported and leads the Network of Businesses Against Child Labor ( Red de Empresas contra el Trabajo Infantil ), a network of companies promoting best practices in the private sector to combat child labor. Labor inspectors are tasked with enforcing laws related to child labor as part of MLES's broader enforcement strategy, the National Plan for the Regularization of Labor ( Plan Nacional de Regularización del Trabajo [PNRT]). (13) A specific line of action in the PNRT is to detect and eradicate child labor and irregular adolescent work, so the standard operating procedure for inspections includes efforts to detect child labor violations. (13)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Manages Line 145, the anonymous national hotline that allows the public to report suspected human trafficking cases. Through its Office of Rescue and Attention to Victims of Trafficking ( Oficina de Programa de Rescate ), provides emergency legal and other assistance to victims of labor and sex trafficking, including child victims. (13,56,58) Maintains regional offices that coordinate the provision of legal and social services to human trafficking victims in the provinces of Chaco, Chubut, La Pampa, La Rioja, Mendoza, Rio Negro, and Santa Fe. (13,34,59)
Public Prosecutor's Office	Through its Special Prosecutor's Office for Human Trafficking and Exploitation, detects, investigates, and prosecutes cases of human trafficking and labor exploitation. (60)
Federal and National Immigration Police	The Federal Police conduct human trafficking investigations through the Trafficking in Persons Division. (13,61) The National Immigration Police, directed by the National Immigration Directorate, oversee the rights of migrants and assist in investigating cases of transnational human trafficking. (13)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Argentina took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MLES) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Due to the pandemic, the government imposed movement restrictions that impacted the labor inspectorate's ability to carry out labor inspections. Furthermore, unlike previous years in which total number of inspections conducted by both the national and provincial governments was reported, in 2020, the government provided only the number of child labor inspections carried out by the Coordinating Body for the Prevention of Child Labor and Regulation of Adolescent Work. (13,64)

In 2020, the National Registry of Rural Workers and Employers (RENATRE) conducted targeted inspections to verify compliance with safety protocols established in response to the pandemic. During these operations, inspectors discovered at least 15 children harvesting onions in Santiago del Estero province. (65) Inspectors found that the children were working in extreme heat with no water or bathroom facilities for a period of 8 to 18 hours a day. (65-67) In similar inspections conducted in the province of Mendoza, 16 cases of child labor or children working without adequate protections were discovered in the agriculture, ranching, and forestry industries. (68) In response to these cases, RENATRE activated its Action Protocol for Child Labor in the Rural Sector. (66,68) Meanwhile, MLES inspectors reported discovering child labor in the wood industries in Corrientes province and one case of a child working in a sweatshop in Buenos Aires. (13)

While Argentina slightly increased its number of labor inspectors in 2020, the number is still likely insufficient for the size of Argentina's workforce, which includes approximately 17.7 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Argentina would employ about 1,200 labor inspectors. (69) The government does not report on the number of provincial inspectors, so the totals reflect only the number of federal inspectors; NGOs continue to report that the number is insufficient. (3,70) Moreover, the government does not publish labor enforcement data on the labor inspectorate budget or the total number of child labor penalties imposed or collected. (13,70)

MLES requires inspectors to refer victims of child labor to the Provincial Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor for social services assistance and its inspection protocol mandates that federal labor inspectors notify the relevant provincial child protection authorities after detecting a child labor violation. (3,70) Labor inspectors are also required to file a criminal complaint with the provincial courts of the relevant jurisdiction for any child labor violation detected. (3,70) MLES reported that its labor inspectors cooperated with law enforcement authorities in criminal matters resulting from the criminal complaints that inspectors filed after finding child labor violations. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Argentina took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (3)	Yes (13)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (3)	Yes (13)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (3)	Yes (13)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (3)	19 (13)
Number of Violations Found	29 (3)	12 (13,64)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (3)	9 (13)
Number of Convictions	5 (3)	5 (13)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (13)

During the reporting period, the Special Prosecutor's Office for Human Trafficking and Exploitation initiated prosecution of three labor trafficking cases and six cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children. The government secured one conviction for a case of labor trafficking involving two minors from Corrientes province, and upheld convictions in two separate cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children that included eight minor victims from Tucuman province. (13) The government also overturned an acquittal of a sex trafficker convicted for the commercial sexual exploitation of a child. (13) In July 2020, five gang members were convicted in Entre Rios Province for using two children, ages 12 and 14, to sell drugs. The suspects were sentenced to between 3 and 6 years in prison. (13)

Argentina

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Argentine law enforcement authorities report a lack of funding and resources. (13) Research has identified the need for the government to build the capacity of its judiciary and police to investigate cases of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (71)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor (CONAETI)	Housed in MLES, Employment, and Social Security, coordinates national efforts to monitor and eliminate child labor and implement the Third National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Regulation of Adolescent Work. (72-74) Led by the Secretariat of Promotion, Protection, and Technological Change and comprises 16 government agencies, representatives from UNICEF, ILO, industry associations, and labor unions. (3) The commission met virtually and regularly during the reporting period, with meetings focusing on addressing challenges during the pandemic that could exacerbate vulnerabilities to child labor. CONAETI also conducted various child labor trainings throughout the reporting period. (75-78) During the reporting period, the committee also unveiled its National Program to Strengthen COPRETI (Provincial Committees for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor) in an effort to improve coordination between the provincial and national governments. (13)
Coordination of Child Labor Eradication and Adolescent Work Protection Policies (MLES)	Housed in MLES, executes the policies established in the Third National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Regulation of Adolescent Work. (3) In 2020, the coordinating unit developed a new virtual training course focusing specifically on the impact that the pandemic could have on child labor. (79)
Coordinating Body for the Prevention of Child Labor and Regulation of Adolescent Work (COODITIA)	Housed in MLES, implements audits to detect child labor and irregular adolescent labor; trains inspectors on auditing and monitoring child and adolescent work, promotes the creation of special inspection units, and provides technical assistance and advice to provincial inspectors. (70,80) As part of a restructuring within MLES in 2020, COODITIA was elevated to Directorate rank within the ministry, granting it more resources and responsibilities. (13) The new directorate now has responsibilities that include conducting child labor inspections, verifying adolescent work, and monitoring for labor exploitation such as child trafficking. (64) COODITIA took part in inspection operations in Buenos Aires province during the reporting period that resulted in the discovery of two different instances of child labor. (81)
Provincial Committees for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor (COPRETI)	Created under a cooperative agreement between MLES and the Federal Work Council, coordinate activities implemented at a provincial level. There are currently 23 provincial committees in operation. (82) The committees coordinate between government, business, union, and civil society stakeholders within their respective provinces to implement actions to combat child labor at a local level. (83) The committees remained active during the reporting period and carried out a variety of activities. For example, the committee in Buenos Aires province launched a new strategic plan to combat child labor called " Cuidado. Sin Trabajo Infantil ," while the committee in Tres Arroyos launched a training course for provincial stakeholders on child labor and public policy. (13,84,85)
Executive Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking and Exploitation of People and the Protection and Assistance of Victims	National coordinating body on government anti-trafficking in persons policies comprising the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights; the Ministry of Security; the Ministry of Social Development; the Ministry of Women, Gender, and Diversity; and MLES. (29) Drafted and published the new biennial national action plan against human trafficking in December 2020, titled "100 Actions Against Trafficking." (29)

Research indicates that coordination to provide services to child victims of commercial sexual exploitation is ineffective, obstructing full implementation of some programs, and causing some programs' objectives and target groups to overlap. (87) During one of its virtual meetings in 2020, the National Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor acknowledged that, in addition to addressing the challenges of the pandemic, one of the central areas of concern for the committee was the need to strengthen cooperation between national- and provincial-level governments. (75)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of information on activities taken under each policy during the reporting period.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Third National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Regulation of Adolescent Work (2018–2022)	Aims to prevent and eliminate child labor, including its worst forms, and to regulate adolescent work. Promotes the dissemination of information on child labor, creates local roundtables on child labor, promotes families' livelihoods, strengthens the labor inspectorate, fosters civil society engagement on child labor issues, provides for a more inclusive educational system, raises awareness of the safety and health implications of child labor, and promotes institutional and legislative strengthening for child labor issues. (7,88-90) In 2020, RENATRE launched a new initiative as part of the national plan to train agricultural extension agents in identifying and responding to cases of child labor. (91)
National Action Plan to Improve the Safety and Health at Work of Adolescents and Youth (2020–2022)	Adopted in 2019, aims to coordinate the following actions: (1) improve statistics and research; (2) promote compliance and inspections; (3) encourage the incorporation of occupational safety and health in education and vocational training; and (4) develop networks and awareness and promotion activities. (92,93) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Strategic Framework for Cooperation Between Argentina and the UN System for Development (2021–2025)†	Relaunched in 2020, establishes development priorities for Argentina as agreed upon by the government and the agencies comprising the UN System for Development in Argentina. Envisions a cooperative strategy to transition Argentina out of the informal economy, including through the eradication of child labor and forced labor. (94)
Inter-Agency Agreement for Prevention of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker	Collaborative agreement between MLES and the Ministry of Education to integrate child labor prevention and protection of adolescent workers in curricula and teacher training courses. (7,95) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Biennial National Plan Against Human Trafficking and Exploitation, and for Protection and Assistance of Victims (TIP Action Plan 2020–2022)†	Approved by the Federal Council to Fight Human Trafficking and to Protect and Assist Victims, focuses on prevention, prosecution, and protection of human trafficking victims and incorporates an institutional goal of fortifying inter-agency coordination, including by establishing a unified database on human trafficking victims. The Federal Council coordinates the plan's implementation and includes NGO representation in its meetings. (1) In 2020, the Department of Justice approved a new biannual version of the plan, which contains 100 specific actions within a framework of 4 strategic themes: prevention, assistance, prosecution, and capacity building. (13,29,96-98) Under the previous plan, MLES released in 2020 a working guide intended to assist labor inspectors in identifying and responding to cases of human trafficking and labor exploitation. (29,99)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (100)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Universal Child Allowance Program (Asignación Universal)†	Government program funded in part by the World Bank that provides a cash transfer to unemployed parents and workers in the informal economy, contingent upon parents' fulfillment of health and education requirements for their children. (7,101) Through presidential decree, in 2020 the government issued revised criteria for the program, removing some restrictions such as the number of children per family eligible for the benefit. (102) In March 2020, in response to the pandemic, the government issued an additional economic payment to participant families in the amount of $32 (3,000 Argentine pesos) per child. (103,104)
RENATRE Awareness-Raising Campaigns†	RENATRE campaigns that raise awareness of child labor in agriculture and inform families and children of the right to education. (105) RENATRE was part of an awareness campaign in 2020 along with other government organizations and representatives of the blueberry industry to warn of the increased risks of child labor as a result of the pandemic. (106)
Good Harvest Program	Through Rural Social Educational Centers and in cooperation with provincial and municipal governments, unions, and civil society, provides services to children up to age 16 from migrant and rural families involved in seasonal harvests. (107) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Good Harvest Program during the reporting period.

Program	Description
National Campaign Against Child Labor in Brickmaking†	Developed in 2017 by MLES and the Argentine Brick Workers Union (UOLRA). (108) Aims to develop policies that improve labor inspections in this sector and to better support brick workers so their children do not have to work. (108,109) UOLRA launched its sixth campaign in October 2020, highlighting cooperative agreements established with the Buenos Aires Ministry of Labor and announcing it was working to establish Care Centers across the country for the children of brickmaking families. (110)
USDOL-Funded Projects	Project to Promote Workplace-Based Training for Vulnerable Youth in Argentina (Noemi Project) (2016–2021) , $3 million project implemented by Centro de Desarrollo y Autogestión (DyA) ; "P.A.R. Project": Multi-Stakeholder Strategy for Child Labor Elimination in Agriculture in Argentina (2019–2021) , $2.5 million project implemented by DyA ; "Offside Project": Improving the Capacity of Labor and Agriculture Stakeholders to Address Child Labor in Agricultural Areas of Argentina Project , $2.5 million project implemented by ILO; Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP16) , $215,000 global project implemented by ILO; Promoting Apprenticeship as a Path for Youth Employment in Argentina, Costa Rica, and Kenya through Global Apprenticeships Network (GAN) National Networks , $3.3 million multi-country project; Attaining Lasting Change (ATLAS) , $8 million global program implemented by Winrock International; and Evidence to Action: Increasing the Impact of Research to Mobilize Efforts against Forced Labor , $3 million project implemented by the ILO. (111-117) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

Research has identified the need for the government to increase funding for shelters and assistance to girl victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (70) Research found no evidence of social programs that specifically target children engaged in street begging and performing, windshield washing, and guarding parked cars, despite the prevalence of these activities that are designated as hazardous for children.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Argentina (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2020
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws on child labor to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2015 – 2020
	Publish information on the labor inspectorate budget, the number of child labor violations identified for which penalties were imposed, and the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected.	2015 – 2020
	Strengthen the capacity of Argentina's judiciary and police to investigate trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation cases.	2019 – 2020
Coordination	Improve government coordination, particularly between national and local government entities, in the provision of services to victims of all forms of child labor, including for children subjected to commercial sexual exploitation.	2017 – 2020
Government Policies	Publish information on activities taken under key policies to address child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking.	2018 – 2020
Social Programs	Publish information on activities taken under social programs to address child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking.	2019 – 2020
	Develop specific programs that target child labor in sectors in which child labor is prevalent, including street begging and performing, windshield washing, and guarding of parked cars, and increase funding for shelters and assistance for girl victims of human trafficking.	2018 – 2020
	Increase funding for shelters and assistance to girl victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.	2020

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2020, Armenia made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Beginning in April 2020, the Health and Labor Inspection Body took on some inspection responsibilities in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, including enforcing quarantine provisions and ensuring worker safety and health. The government's National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons also went into effect in June, and implementation in several areas began immediately. In addition, the government adopted a new referral mechanism to provide assistance to minor victims of trafficking in persons. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Armenia is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement a regression in law that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. Although some labor inspections resumed in 2020, labor inspectors still lack the authority to conduct unannounced inspections. Children in Armenia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, and no government programs exist to aid them.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Armenia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. (2,4,5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Armenia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	7.0 (24,602)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,3,10)
	Forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,10)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The Government of Armenia does not routinely collect or maintain official data on child labor. (11) Reports indicate that significant numbers of children, including some below the age of 14, leave school to work in the informal sectors in agriculture and construction, and increasing numbers of children are engaged in begging. (5,12) In February 2021, the government adopted procedures for identifying children who have dropped out of compulsory education, and created an institutional response mechanism to prevent child trafficking and child labor, as children outside of the education system are a high-risk population for exploitation. (13) However, there is no enforcement of the mandatory school attendance requirement, nor are there programs to identify, assess, and address the reasons for truancy or dropping out. (14)

Although Article 38 of the Constitution of Armenia and Article 6 of the Law of the Republic of Armenia on Education guarantee free universal education, children from ethnic minority and low-income families continue to have reduced access to education. (15-17) Children of families who travel for seasonal labor and work on farms in remote rural areas are also less likely to be enrolled in school and are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor in agriculture. (18) Reports also indicate that in rural areas, families may keep girls out of school because of cultural expectations or concerns about severe gender imbalance in classrooms. (5,19)

The Law on Education requires all schools to be inclusive for children with disabilities by 2025, and the 2017–2021 National Strategy for Child Rights Protection includes priority actions to ensure equitable and inclusive education. (17,20,21) However, NGOs report that children with disabilities still face difficulty accessing mainstream education due to inaccessible school buildings and a lack of special education teachers and other specialists, especially for students with mental disabilities. (21,22)

The government has reduced institutionalization of children in recent years; however, nearly 2,400 children remain in government boarding schools, orphanages, and special education institutions. (23,24) These children are more likely to experience physical and psychological violence and are at a higher risk of becoming victims of human trafficking. (10,23) Children living in these institutions are reportedly also vulnerable to exploitation in child labor, including labor within the institutions. (25,26)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Armenia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Armenia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of definitions for forced labor and light work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Articles 15 and 17 of the Labor Code; Article 57 of the Constitution; Article 41.6 of the Administrative Violations Code (15,27,28)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 257 of the Labor Code (27)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Decree on Approval of the List of Occupations and Work That Are Likely to be Heavy and Hazardous for Persons Under the Age of 18 Years, Pregnant Women, and Women Taking Care of a Child Under the Age of 1 Year; Articles 140, 148–149, 153, 155, 209, 249, and 257 of the Labor Code (27,29)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 57 of the Constitution; Article 3 of the Labor Code; Article 132 of the Criminal Code (15,27,30)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 132 of the Criminal Code (30)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 132, 166, and 261–263 of the Criminal Code (30)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 63, 165, and 166 of the Criminal Code (30)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	16‡	Law on Military Service and Status of the Military Servant; Article 11 of the Law on Conscription; Government Decree No. 525-N of April 26, 2012 (31-33)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 11 of the Law on Conscription (32)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 29 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Articles 165 and 224 of the Criminal Code (30,34)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	19	Article 18 of the Law on Education (17)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 38 of the Constitution; Article 6 of the Law on Education (15,17)

In 2020, the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MLSA) submitted for approval a concept paper to revise the Labor Code to define “forced labor.” However, the changes were not approved during the reporting period. (1,35) In addition, the labor inspectorate received preliminary approval for a legislative change that would allow unannounced inspections. (35) In September, Armenia finalized the ratification of the Council of Europe Convention on Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse, which requires criminalization of all forms of sexual offences against children. (1)

The Labor Code allows children ages 14 and 15 to work restricted hours with the permission of a parent or guardian, but does not identify specific activities that constitute light work. (27) In addition, the Constitution, Criminal Code, and Labor Code prohibit forced labor, but enforcement of this prohibition may be hindered by the failure of Armenian law to define “forced labor.” (15,27,30,36)

The minimum age law does not meet international standards because labor legislation does not apply to children working in the informal sector, including those who are self-employed. (27,28) In addition, the laws criminalizing commercial sexual exploitation of children are insufficient because they do not explicitly criminalize the users (clients) of commercial sex involving children. (30,37)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Armenia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MLSA)	Oversees child welfare issues and pursues enforcement of labor laws. Works to identify vulnerable populations, such as laborers in animal husbandry, children who are outside of the education system, and those attending schools for students with disabilities and behavioral issues. (35)
Health and Labor Inspection Body (HLIB)	Enforces labor laws in areas related to sanitary-epidemiological safety, health care and services, and pharmaceuticals. Responds to labor complaints through administrative proceedings. (1,9,38) Publishes an annual report on activities undertaken the previous year and plans for the upcoming year. (1,39) Operates a complaint hotline and online platform to which individuals can submit complaints. (1)
General Department of Criminal Police	Enforce laws against the worst forms of child labor and refer identified crimes to the Investigative Committee for further investigation. (1,40) Enforce anti-human trafficking laws and conduct preliminary investigations of alleged trafficking in persons cases. Every regional police unit throughout the country has a designated officer whose portfolio includes human trafficking. (40) All cases suspected to be human trafficking are referred to the anti-trafficking unit within the National Police's Department to Fight against Crimes against Human Beings and Property. (40,41) Through the Department on Defending the Rights of Minors and Combating Domestic Violence Within the Police, identifies and conducts preliminary investigation of crimes in which children are victims or perpetrators. (42) Operates a hotline to receive complaints related to human trafficking and migration issues. (40,43,44)
Department for the Investigation of Trafficking in Persons, Crimes against the Sexual Inviolability of Minors and Illegal Drug Trafficking Crimes within the Investigative Committee	Conducts in-depth investigations of all cases of human trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children referred to the Investigative Committee by the police. (40,41)

As part of a broader inspection reform agenda, Armenia's labor inspectorate was abolished in 2013, and the responsibility for conducting labor inspections was transferred to the new State Health Inspectorate, created the same year. (45) In 2014, legislative changes repealed Article 34 of the Labor Code, which had previously established the government's authority to implement labor legislation and collective bargaining agreements. (46) In 2015, subsequent changes to legislation regulating labor inspections left the State Health Inspectorate unable to conduct labor inspections. (36,47) In 2017, continued inspection reform led to the dissolution of the State Health Inspectorate and the creation of the Health Inspection Body, which was tasked with monitoring occupational safety and health standards for employees, along with monitoring a variety of public health standards. (48) In 2018, a law on the State Bodies of Governance Systems came into force that changed the Health Inspection Body to the Health and Labor Inspection Body (HLIB). (49)

In 2019, Article 33 of the Labor Code was amended to empower HLIB to issue penalties for violations and to conduct inspections in sectors for which inspection checklists have been approved. (50) Although this amendment was not scheduled to enter into force until July 2021, HLIB was granted emergency authority to perform some additional duties beginning in April 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic; as a result, HLIB had a leading role in enforcing quarantine provisions to ensure worker safety and health during the reporting period. (1,51) HLIB exercised oversight over all four areas under its control: epidemiological safety; health care and services; pharmaceuticals; and labor law, including enforcing child labor laws for the first time since HLIB's authority over labor issues was reinstated in 2019. (1) In October 2020, additional changes to the bylaws regulating the work of HLIB went into effect that granted it responsibility for upholding labor rights and worker health and safety. HLIB widely publicized its new responsibilities, emphasizing in particular its new authority to examine labor violations in response to written complaints. (1)

During the reporting period, HLIB was empowered to launch administrative procedures in response to complaints, including child labor complaints. HLIB is also authorized to issue penalties for any administrative violations they uncover and to refer cases to criminal law enforcement when appropriate. (52) When performing routine inspections, HLIB must inform employers of an upcoming inspection 3 business days in advance, and legislation limits the questions inspectors can ask to a legally predetermined checklist of issues. (40,53,54) However, HLIB has broader authority when responding to a complaint. In these instances, HLIB may issue notification to the employer via e-mail and immediately conduct a site visit. (52) In addition, inspectors responding to a complaint are not restricted to a predetermined checklist. (52) Although 25 new checklists were approved during 2020, checklists, including questions related to child labor, have not yet been approved for all industries. (1,40,53) Due to the ongoing restrictions on routine inspections, HLIB's ability to enforce child labor laws was insufficient in 2020. However, HLIB engaged in other activities to combat child labor, including posting videos on social media and conducting awareness-raising activities and regional training sessions on labor issues. (52)

In 2020, MLSA planned training sessions for regional professionals on the new Referral Mechanism for Minor Victims of Trafficking in Persons, proactive victim identification, and victim assistance. Scheduled trainings were postponed due to the pandemic. (35)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, the lack of authorization to conduct unannounced inspections in Armenia may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2020, HLIB had 28 labor inspectors. (1) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Armenia's workforce, which includes around 1.3 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transition economies, Armenia would employ about 65 labor inspectors. (56,57) HLIB has reported that it plans to hire a number of new employees, including increasing the number of inspectors to 80, by July 2021 to implement the expanded inspection mandate that will come into force at that time. (1,40,50) The government has also approved an increase of HLIB's budget to $2.7 million in 2021 and the allocation of a new building to HLIB. In addition, three of HLIB's regional centers in Ijevan, Sisian, and Vanadzor were moved to government-owned buildings to ensure better working conditions. (1) The government also provided HLIB with new equipment, including furniture, computers, and vehicles to assist in fulfilling its mandate. (1)

In February 2020, 30 HLIB employees took part in a week-long ILO training. The training focused on risk assessment and capacity building in anticipation of HLIB's expanded duties in 2021. (1,58)

In 2020, HLIB carried out 119 risk-based inspections, including 27 in the area of worker health and ensuring worker safety in the mining sector. No child labor violations were discovered during these inspections, although HLIB separately examined a number of cases in which children were engaged in sales, and issued a $400 fine in one case in which a minor younger than 14 was selling bread. (1) During the first 10 months of 2020, HLIB launched 823 administrative proceedings that were unrelated to the pandemic, 687 of which were initiated by HLIB and 136 in response to complaints. HLIB also undertook 33,474 inspections to monitor pandemic-related regulations. (1) The HLIB hotline received over 2,500 calls in 2020, a seven-fold increase over the previous year. In December, HLIB launched a new online platform to which workers can submit complaints. (1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Armenia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including investigative planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown	Yes (14)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (55)	Yes (14)

During the reporting period, the government identified five cases of trafficking of a minor child for the purpose of labor exploitation, including forced begging. (1) Law enforcement authorities initiated investigations into three cases of child labor exploitation involving four minor children—one in cattle breeding, two in forced begging, and one working in a store. (14)

The government introduced a 5-month training program for Armenia’s new patrol police force that includes information on combating trafficking in persons and identifying minor victims. The patrol police training began in November 2020, with the new force's launch scheduled for mid-2021. (35)

In 2020, legislation came into force that permits investigators to question the victims of a crime via video for reasons of health, age, or safety. Investigators are also now permitted to speak to a witness or victim in another country via diplomatic representation. (35) In addition, as of January 1, 2021, a new law came into force that limits interviews of minor witnesses and victims of crime to a maximum of 90 minutes. (35) However, law enforcement officials may not receive sufficient specialized training on interviewing victims of child trafficking, which in some cases can prevent local investigators from collecting sufficient evidence to build a prosecutable case. (43) Although the Criminal Procedural Code includes provisions to protect witnesses and minimize victim retraumatization, the government may not employ these measures in all human trafficking cases, including those involving minors. (44)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministerial Council to Combat Human Trafficking	Implements, coordinates, and monitors government efforts on trafficking in persons. Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister. (44,59) Held virtual discussions with the Inter-Agency Working Group Against Trafficking in Persons in early October 2020. (35)
Inter-Agency Working Group Against Trafficking in Persons	Advises and organizes the Ministerial Council to Combat Human Trafficking, and implements decisions made by the Council. Chaired by the MLSA. (40,59,60) Met in March 2020, but most activities were paused while the government reorganized, absorbed, or eliminated entities previously responsible for many of the relevant actions. (10,14,60)
Referral Mechanism for Minor Victims of Trafficking in Persons*	Established in June 2020, oversees the process by which minor victims are referred to the victim identification committee and are provided assistance. (1,60)
Working Group to Address Children's Issues	Established by an Order of the Chief of Police and consists of local government representatives, the MLSA, police, and the Human Rights Defender Office, as well as NGOs and international organizations. Holds regular sessions to discuss issues pertaining to children in difficult life situations, including the topics of child labor and begging. (14) Meetings were temporarily suspended due to the pandemic. (14)

In June 2020, the government adopted a new referral mechanism to identify and assist minor victims of trafficking in persons. (1) The Ministerial Council to Combat Human Trafficking and the Inter-Agency Working Group Against Trafficking in Persons met virtually during the reporting period to discuss the implementation of the National Action Plan (NAP) Against Trafficking in Persons. In addition, the Ministry of Justice devised a plan consisting of additional measures for both short-term and long-term improvement of the government's strategies to combat trafficking in persons, and the plan was agreed to by all relevant state agencies and approved by the Deputy Prime Minister, who heads the Council. (1,35) However, Armenia still lacks coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor, including street work, the services sector, and agriculture. (12)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan (NAP) Against Trafficking in Persons (2020–2022)*	Supported the development of policy and the implementation of activities to address human trafficking. Committed the government to train specialists in multiple spheres, including law enforcement, the courts, educators, and medical providers. In 2020, created a mechanism to monitor vulnerable children and those who are not attending school. (13,35)
National Strategy for Child Rights Protection (2017–2021)	Includes an action plan that calls for the development and introduction of oversight and monitoring mechanisms to prevent the involvement of children in the worst forms of child labor. (20) Sponsored the creation of a comprehensive report by the MLSA during the reporting period, which was submitted to the government and to a panel of independent experts to identify gaps and shortcomings to be addressed in the next iteration of the strategy. (14)
Concept on Combating Violence Against Children	Defines government priorities for combating violence against children and outlines a list of related activities. Addresses labor exploitation of children, especially in rural communities, and commercial sexual exploitation of children, especially child trafficking. (62) Launched an electronic platform during the reporting period in cooperation with the Ministry of Justice and international organizations which contains information on the implementation of all activities under this policy. (14)

* Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Although the implementation of the government's NAP Against Trafficking in Persons (2020–2022) had been delayed, the NAP entered into force on June 4, 2020, and implementation in several areas, such as public outreach and education, began immediately. (35)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Family Benefits Program†	Seeks to mitigate poverty for families with children by giving families a monthly payment based on their financial situation, the number of children in the family, and the geographical location of their home. (63) Was active during the reporting period. (14)
UNICEF Country Program for 2016–2020	Improved child protection systems, including through expanding programs for children in extreme poverty, improving social integration of children with disabilities, and developing a victim-witness protection system. Continued to be active during the reporting period. (64)
Shelter for Victims of Human Trafficking‡	A government-funded shelter operated in partnership with NGOs that provides medical, psychological, social, and legal services to victims of human trafficking, and access to education for children. In 2020, provided services to nine victims referred by law enforcement. (1,13,14)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (63)

Although the Government of Armenia has implemented programs to address child labor, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs to assist children engaged in child labor in street work or in agriculture.

During the reporting period, the government introduced additional programs to provide financial assistance to those affected by the pandemic and relief to those displaced by the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict. (1) However, personnel and resources are insufficient to meet the needs of many social services programs, and participation is low due to a lack of awareness-raising outreach by the government. (14)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Armenia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that labor legislation covers children working in the informal sector, including those who are self-employed.	2020
	Ensure that Armenian law specifies the types of light work acceptable for children ages 14 to 15.	2014 – 2020
	Facilitate enforcement of labor law by codifying a definition of forced labor.	2016 – 2020
	Criminally prohibit and penalize the use of a child for prostitution.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2018 – 2020
Enforcement	Ensure that the Health and Labor Inspection Body is empowered to conduct routine unannounced inspections.	2017 – 2020
	Draft and approve inspection checklists that fully empower the Health and Labor Inspection Body to conduct inspections for child labor violations in all industries, and ensure that such inspections are carried out.	2019 – 2020
	Strengthen the labor inspection by increasing the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2017 – 2020
	Provide regular refresher courses and trainings on new labor laws for labor inspectors.	2020
	Protect children by providing law enforcement officials with specialized training on interviewing victims of child trafficking.	2018 – 2020
	Implement existing witness protection mechanisms to protect victims of child trafficking who cooperate with law enforcement.	2011 – 2020

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor, including all its worst forms.	2009 – 2020
Social Programs	Improve understanding of child labor issues in Armenia by regularly collecting and maintaining data on child labor.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that all children, including children in remote areas, those from low-income families and families that travel for seasonal labor, and those belonging to ethnic minorities, have equal access to education.	2010 – 2020
	Strengthen support for potential victims through measures in the educational system to identify truant children and ensure they are not engaged in child labor.	2020
	Ensure the availability of out-of-care services for deinstitutionalized children in parallel with increased efforts to prevent institutionalization of children, and ensure that children currently residing in government institutions are not engaged in child labor.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that mainstream education is accessible to children with special education needs and children with disabilities by improving the accessibility of the physical infrastructure and increasing the availability of special education teachers and other specialists for students with mental disabilities.	2014 – 2020
	Implement programs to address child labor in street work and in agriculture.	2009 – 2020
	Allocate sufficient personnel and resources to publicize and provide social services throughout the country, offer sufficient training to service providers, and assign reasonable caseloads	2020

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2020, Azerbaijan made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved the National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Human Beings (2020–2024) and drafted criteria for resuming risk-based routine labor inspections on occupational safety and health. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Azerbaijan is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a law that delays advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. In 2017, the government extended a moratorium on labor inspections, including worksite inspections, until 2021. On March 9, 2021, this moratorium was extended again, through January 1, 2022. While inspectors can conduct desk reviews in response to complaints, the lack of proactive or onsite inspection mechanisms may leave potential violations of child labor laws undetected in workplaces. Children in Azerbaijan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. Coordinating bodies, including the State Committee on Family, Women and Children's Affairs, lack the capacity to effectively carry out their mandates. In addition, police typically treat children begging or engaging in street work as a family issue, rather than screening for indicators of forced begging. As a result, cases may not be properly referred for criminal investigation and prosecution.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Azerbaijan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. (I-9) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Azerbaijan.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.5 (70,034)
Attending School (%)	6 to 14	94.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		100.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (10)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from the Child Labor Survey (SIMPOC), 2005. (11)

Figure I. Working Children by Sector, Ages 7-14

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including harvesting potatoes and production of cotton, tea, and tobacco† (1,3-7,12,13)
Services	Street work, including begging, vending, carrying luggage, and gathering scrap metal (1,8,13-15) Washing and repairing cars (16-18) Catering, activities unknown (1,16,18)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3,8) Forced begging (1-3,7,8)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Child labor in Azerbaijan occurs in the agriculture sector; however, there are limited data available to indicate how many children are currently engaged in child labor in this or other sectors. (3,6,7,19) Although the prevalence of child labor in cotton harvesting is unknown, there were reports in 2018 and 2019 that children under age 15 worked picking cotton to augment family incomes. (3,20,21) Survey research conducted in 2019 by the State Committee for Family, Women and Child Affairs in three cities and five districts found that children under age 17 work in the household or in family businesses. Respondents reported that children who work outside the home do so to financially support their families. (22)

Crop production in Azerbaijan is governed by a "priority" system that conditions agricultural subsidies, services, and access to public resources, such as irrigation water, on whether farmers produce one or more crops that the government has designated as high priority. In 2020, priority crops included cotton, tobacco, sugar beets, hazelnuts, tomatoes, and other fruits and vegetables. (3) In some cases, regional and local government officials are held responsible for mobilizing sufficient labor to meet established production targets for one or more of these priority crops. (23-28) This system creates a risk that farmers and local officials may turn to exploitative labor practices, including child labor and forced labor, to ensure they are able to meet production targets for designated crops. (20,28)

Children in Azerbaijan are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation domestically. (1,2,8,9,29) Street children, some of whom become homeless after they are released from government-run care institutions, and children from marginalized communities are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking within Azerbaijan. (1,2,9,13,29,30) NGOs report that children who are forced to beg often show signs of sexual abuse. (31)

Although Article 5 of the Education Law guarantees free universal education, undocumented children and children with disabilities face difficulty accessing education. Children without identification documents are ineligible to enroll in school, which affects 35 to 40 percent of children referred annually to shelters for minors. (3) The court proceedings required to secure identification documents can take up to 2 or more years, during which time children cannot attend school. Although government-run shelters are able to provide interim individual education services while undocumented children await identification papers, NGO-run shelters lack the capacity to provide such services. (3) 67 percent of children with disabilities are not in school, facing barriers to education that include inaccessibility within the physical infrastructure of schools, lack of specialized training for teachers on inclusive education, and a general social stigma against individuals with disabilities. (19,32) Children from the Roma ethnic community also face barriers to education due to social stigma. In addition, children in some rural areas have low rates of school attendance. (1) Children not attending school are vulnerable to child labor.

Children's access to education in some regions was impeded in 2020 by the escalation of armed conflict between Azerbaijan and neighboring Armenia. The government reported that shelling in civilian areas near the conflict line, including in Tartar and Aghdam districts, damaged local schools. (33,34) There were also reports of attacks, some involving cluster munitions, which destroyed homes and, in isolated incidents, wounded or killed children in districts near the contact line and in Ganja, Azerbaijan's second-largest city. (35,36)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Azerbaijan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Azerbaijan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 42 and 249 of the Labor Code; Article 192 of the Code of Administrative Offenses (37,38)

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 28 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Article 170 of the Criminal Code (40,42)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	19	Article 36 of the Law on Military Obligation and Military Service (44)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 2, 3, and 12 of the Law on Military Obligation and Military Service (44)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 116 of the Criminal Code (42)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 19 of the Law on Education; Article 13 of the Law on General Education (45,46)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 5 and 19 of the Law on Education; Article 13 of the Law on General Education; Article 22 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Article 42 of the Constitution (40,41,45,46)

The laws criminalizing commercial sexual exploitation of children are insufficient because the crime of involving a child in prostitution established by Criminal Code Article 171 does not criminalize the users (clients) of prostitution involving children. Similarly, the criminalization of involvement of a child in "immoral actions" does not clearly criminalize the use or offering of a child for the production of pornography or pornographic performances. ### III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Azerbaijan may impede the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Protection of Population (MLSPP)	Enforces labor laws related to the worst forms of child labor through the State Labor Inspection Service. (1,47)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Functions as the central executive agency responsible for public security and the prevention of criminal offenses, including child trafficking and begging. (1,47) Through the Anti-Trafficking Division, enforces human trafficking laws, investigates human trafficking violations, and enforces criminal laws related to the use of children in illicit activities. (1,8) Refers children who are victims of human trafficking to social services for assistance with school enrollment, participation in recreational activities, and procurement of proper documentation. (1)
National Referral Mechanism for Trafficking in Persons	Refers victims of human trafficking to the relevant authorities to ensure the protection of their rights. (48,49) Refers human trafficking cases to the Anti-Trafficking Division for investigation. (1)

Sources report a lack of coordination between law enforcement agencies. (1-3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Azerbaijan may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown	Unknown

Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	9 (7)	3 (53)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown	3 (53)
Routine Inspections Conducted	No (51,52)	No (51,53)
Routine Inspections Targeted	No (51,52)	No (19,51)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	No (51,52)	No (51,53,54)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	No (51,52)	No (19,53)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (17,51,52)	Yes (17,19,51,52)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (47)	Yes (15,19)

The government suspended all routine and unannounced labor inspections in 2016 as part of a broader anti-corruption drive. In 2017, this moratorium was extended until 2021 as part of an effort to stimulate small and medium business growth, and remained in force during the reporting period. (1,17,22,51,55) In March 2021, the government extended this moratorium for another year, through January 1, 2022. (53,54) Although the State Labor Inspection Service (SLIS) is still able to receive and respond to complaints, this response cannot include onsite inspections. Instead, the SLIS investigates complaints by requesting information from the employer in question and, if necessary, relevant employees. (51-55) Based on information received, inspectors are empowered to identify violations and impose appropriate penalties. The SLIS can impose penalties directly against individuals but must refer cases to the courts to levy penalties against corporate entities. (51) The SLIS is also able to detect potential minimum age violations by monitoring an electronic database of labor contracts, but did not have the authority to impose penalties related to violations detected in this manner during the reporting period. (51)

The government has also reported that the SLIS is required to establish assessment criteria for determining a risk-based routine inspection plan before routine inspections could resume. (22) In 2020, the SLIS worked with the International Finance Corporation to draft a set of criteria for determining occupational safety and health (OSH) risk, which is currently pending approval by the Cabinet of Ministers. (19,22) Approval of the draft criteria may permit the SLIS to resume limited labor inspections for OSH issues, including hazardous child labor. (22)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Azerbaijan's workforce, which includes more than 5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transition economies, Azerbaijan would employ about 256 labor inspectors. (56,57) Government officials also assess the number of inspectors as insufficient to fully enforce child labor laws in Azerbaijan. (58)

The SLIS detected three child labor violations during the reporting period, all involving children working under the minimum age. One child was working in catering, one in car repair, and one in transporting goods. (53) A penalty of $1,765 (3,000 manat) was imposed in each instance. (53)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Azerbaijan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including investigative planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (7)	Yes (19)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (14,30)	Yes (31)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	2 (19,31,59)
Number of Violations Found	3 (3)	2 (19,31)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	8 (3)	0 (19)
Number of Convictions	1 (3)	1 (19)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (3)	Yes (19)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (49)	Yes (31)

In 2020, the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA) identified one forced labor case involving two minors. (31,59) Police also continued to investigate a forced child begging case opened in 2019. One case of forced child begging that a local NGO referred to law enforcement in 2018 concluded in 2020; the Baku Court on Grave Crimes sentenced the perpetrator to 8 years' imprisonment. (19) Although the government previously reported identifying one case of child commercial sexual exploitation in 2019 and five cases in 2018, the status of these cases is unknown. (3,30) The MOIA noted that some monitoring activities to detect the worst forms of child labor, especially commercial sexual exploitation of children, were partially suspended for portions of the reporting period due to the COVID-19 pandemic. (31)

During the reporting period, anti-trafficking police attended four trainings on victim identification. In addition, the Anti-Trafficking Division within MOIA conducted human trafficking training for new prosecutors in Baku and Nakhchivan, 150 police officers received training on preventing exploitation of vulnerable children, and the Ministry of Justice trained 20 judges on adjudication of human trafficking cases. (15,31)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Police typically treat children begging or engaging in street work as a family issue, rather than screening for indicators of forced begging. As a result, these situations are often referred to the Commission on Juvenile Issues and Protection of Minors' Rights for coordination of services, rather than to law enforcement agencies for investigation and, when warranted, criminal prosecution of forced begging cases. (1,30,49) In addition, research found that police declined to investigate the majority of forced begging cases referred to them and that children identified in child labor resumed work almost immediately after being identified by law enforcement officials. (3,58,60) Also, child labor law enforcement efforts are concentrated in Baku, with few investigations undertaken outside the capital. (29)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Commission on Juvenile Issues and Protection of Minors' Rights	Coordinates policies at the national level to protect children from the worst forms of child labor. (3) Located within the Cabinet of Ministers and acts as a national-level version of district-level Commissions on Juvenile Issues and Protection of Minors' Rights, which are located in individual district Executive Commissions. (3) Research was unable to determine whether the national-level Commission on Juvenile Issues and Protection of Minors' Rights was active during the reporting period.
National Coordinator and Inter-Agency Commission to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings	Coordinates policies to counter trafficking in persons and oversees implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings. Led by MOIA's Anti-Trafficking Division (ATD) and includes representatives from MLSP, Prosecutor General's Office, State Border and Migration Services, Ministry of Youth and Sports, and other government entities. (3,31) This coordinating mechanism was active in 2020. In addition, IOM and local NGOs reported good communication with the ATD and government counter-trafficking mechanisms. (31)
State Committee on Family, Women, and Children's Affairs (SCFWCA)	Coordinates child-related policies, including research on child labor. Works with local governments, particularly district-level Executive Commissions, to coordinate policies related to children and gather data on the situation of children and families in rural areas. (3) In 2020, the SCFWCA approved a strategy for improving child protection that includes child labor prevention activities, including awareness raising and establishing a monitoring mechanism to identify children who may be vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. The SCFWCA also provided workshops and trainings for vulnerable children and families affected by the COVID-19 pandemic and by escalating conflict between Azerbaijan and Armenia. (22,61)

Although Commissions on Juvenile Issues and Protection of Minors' Rights exist at both the national and local levels, research was unable to determine the relationship between these respective national and local coordinating bodies. (3) Reports also indicate that individual agencies do not understand their role in combating human trafficking or are unaware of how to coordinate effectively with other agencies, despite the existence of a national counter-trafficking coordination mechanism. (31) In addition, sources report that the efficacy of the State Committee on Family, Women, and Children's Affairs (SCFWCA) as a coordinating body is limited. (3,58) Although the SCFWCA is empowered to work with district-level Executive Committees to coordinate policy and research related to children, the body has limited capacity to do so. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Human Beings (2020–2024) †	Aims to further government efforts to combat human trafficking through enhanced coordination between relevant government agencies and improved protection for human trafficking victims. Includes action items to improve services for child trafficking victims, address forced child begging, and research and monitor forced labor and child trafficking risks. (62)
Strategy on Children of the Republic of Azerbaijan (2020–2030) †	Aims to improve child protection mechanisms and legislation. Through associated National Action Plan for implementation, includes action items on implementing international commitments under ILO Convention 182 and enhancing coordination to detect and prevent child labor and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (63,64)
State Program on Improvement of Official Statistics in the Republic of Azerbaijan (2018–2025)	Aims to improve and further develop the national statistics system. Includes an action item on developing a methodology for studying child labor and conducting survey research on the prevalence of child labor in Azerbaijan. (66) In 2020, the State Committee on Family, Women, and Child Affairs published an analysis of child labor data collected in 2019 using a pilot survey methodology. (14,22)
State Program for the Development of Inclusive Education for Children with Disabilities (2018–2024)	Aims to create inclusive education for children with disabilities. Currently piloting regional resource centers in nine regions to train teachers in inclusive methods. (3,47) In 2020, 630 children received services at community-based centers for children and families with special needs. (22)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (22,65)

Although the government has adopted the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings (2020–2024) and the Strategy on Children (2020–2030), research found no evidence of a policy on other relevant forms of child labor, including hazardous child labor in agriculture.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2016–2020)	Aimed to promote decent employment opportunities and improve social protection and labor administration mechanisms. Includes a focus on youth employment. (67) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Social Shelter and Rehabilitation Center for Minors †	MLSPP-run shelter in Baku for vulnerable children, including street children. (3,47) In 2020, continued to operate and provided children with temporary accommodation and assistance accessing education and receiving identity documents. (22,61)
Victims Assistance Centers †	Provide direct social services and social services referrals to victims of human trafficking, including children. Funded by MLSPP. (51) In 2020, provided support to 32 victims. (31)
Targeted Social Assistance Program †	MLSPP-run program that provides cash transfers to families. (1) Continued to provide benefits in 2020, and expanded the number of enrolled families. (68) Limited reports suggest that informal administrative fees may prevent eligible families from accessing benefits. (20)
MOIA Identification Document Program †	Provides identification documents to undocumented minors who may be street children or victims of human trafficking. (58) This program continued to operate in 2020. (59)

In 2020, the Council on State Support to Non-Governmental Organizations allocated approximately $101,000 (172,000 manat) to NGO projects related to human trafficking prevention and victim assistance. The government also provided a land grant to a local NGO for construction of a new shelter for human trafficking victims. (31) However, the level of government support for these NGO-run shelters is inconsistent. (2) Directors of these shelters note that the unpredictable nature of funding prevents long-term planning and capacity building of shelters, including those that serve child victims. (2,31,65,69)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection of Population provided services to 630 children and families with disabilities through community-based rehabilitation centers. The government reported that these community-based services are offered to families to prevent institutionalization of children. (22) The Ministry of Agriculture provided 15 trainings on child labor prevention to farmers in districts in which children are vulnerable to child labor, including the Saatli, Aghjabadi, Beylagan, Bilasuvar, Sabirabad, Neftchala, Kurdamir, Yevlakh, Hajigabul, Zardab, Samukh, Goranboy, Imishli, and Tartar districts. (70)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Azerbaijan (Table II).

Table II. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all working children are protected by law, including children working without a written employment agreement or outside of a formal employment relationship and children who are self-employed.	2011 – 2020
	Criminally prohibit the use of children for prostitution and the use and offering of children for the production of pornography and pornographic performances.	2019 – 2020
Enforcement	Resume routine, targeted, and unannounced labor inspections, including in response to complaints, to ensure that child labor laws are enforced.	2016 – 2020
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical guidance.	2016 – 2020
	Publish information on the labor inspectorate's operations, including funding levels and training provided to labor inspectors.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that children identified by law enforcement as engaged in child labor are referred to social services centers or other services, as appropriate, so that they do not return to child labor.	2018 – 2020
	Increase law enforcement investigations related to child labor outside Baku.	2018 – 2020
	Screen for forced labor indicators in child begging situations, including those referred by NGOs, and as appropriate, investigate and prosecute forcing children to beg as a criminal offense.	2018 – 2020
	Coordinate	Increase coordination between law enforcement agencies to enforce child labor laws.
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are capacitated and able to carry out their intended mandates, including across different agencies and levels of government.	2016 – 2020
	Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as hazardous work in agriculture.
Revise policies on priority crops that mandate production targets to help prevent child labor in agriculture.		2019 – 2020
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2020
	Ensure that children from marginalized groups and children with disabilities have equal access to education.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that undocumented children are able to access education.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that all eligible families are able to access benefits under social programs for vulnerable children and families.	2019 – 2020
	Publish activities undertaken to implement social programs to address child labor during the reporting period.	2020
	Ensure that NGO-run shelters for victims of human trafficking are sufficiently and consistently funded to provide adequate services to victims.	2015 – 2020

In 2020, Bangladesh made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government extended implementation of the National Plan of Action on the Elimination of Child Labor from 2021 to 2025. The Ministry of Labor and Employment also drafted an update to the hazardous work list, which if adopted, would add drying fish. In addition, the government constituted and funded seven anti-trafficking in persons tribunals to handle human trafficking cases. However, children in Bangladesh are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor in the production of dried fish and bricks. Children also perform dangerous tasks in garment and leather goods supply chains. The Bangladesh Labor Act does not apply to the informal sector, in which most child labor in Bangladesh occurs. Penalties for child labor violations can only be imposed after a lengthy legal process and, when courts do impose them, the fines are too low to deter child labor law violations. Moreover, the government did not publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts related to child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Bangladesh are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor in the production of dried fish and bricks. (1,2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in garment and leather goods supply chains. (2-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Bangladesh. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	9.2 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	88.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	8.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2019. These data are not comparable with data presented in last year's report due to changes in survey source, survey questionnaire, or age range surveyed. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Although research is limited, there are indications that an increased number of children have been forced into commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. (51) The Bangladesh Bureau of Statistics estimated that there were 1.28 million children working in hazardous sectors before the pandemic, and one NGO has observed a 33 percent increase in child labor and guessed 20 to 25 percent of children in its programs had moved into more hazardous jobs or returned to their villages since the onset of the pandemic. (2,31,40) Sources further indicate that children engaged in child labor worked longer hours with fewer breaks, earned lower salaries, and faced worse conditions as a result of the pandemic. (2) Hazardous sectors in which children work include tanneries, shipbreaking, and the dried fish industry. (5,8,35,45) In the dried fish industry, children work all day without protective gear and are exposed to the insecticide DDT (dichlorodiphenyl-trichloroethane), salt, and the sun. (45,100) In the shipbreaking sector, children are exposed to toxic materials such as asbestos, work in dangerous conditions without personal protective equipment, and often work at night. (34) Children who work in tanneries lack protective equipment and experience continuous exposure to heavy metals, formaldehyde, and other hazardous substances. (3,4) In addition, children working in informal garment production work as many as 16 hours a day and often carry heavy loads, use hazardous machinery, and handle chemicals without protective equipment. (25,101-103)

Reports of violence against child workers in various sectors, including in domestic work, have also been documented. (8,20,38,52-54) In 2018, a survey by an international organization found more than 400,000 children in domestic work in Bangladesh. Throughout Bangladesh, street children are coerced into criminality or forced to beg, and begging ringmasters sometimes maim children to increase earnings. (39) Some girls are forced into domestic service, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and are abused by their employers. (2,43,49,50) In 2020, at least eight girls working in domestic work were tortured, and three subsequently died. (55) Children are also forced, especially in border areas, to produce and transport drugs, especially “yaba” tablets (methamphetamine). (39)

Children throughout Bangladesh are sexually exploited through the country’s legal and illegal brothels, and child commercial sexual exploitation remained widespread. (39) False promises of work are used to lure poor women and children into exploitation, and oftentimes these women and girls, some as young as age 10, are charged exorbitant and fabricated debts they must work to repay. (39) Women and children living on the street or struggling economically and children fleeing abusive child marriages, are especially vulnerable to being sold to brothels for commercial sexual exploitation. Some children of sex workers are also put to work in brothels and made to take steroids to appear older. (39) In addition, children are trafficked to India where they are forced into labor or commercial sexual exploitation. (2) Research has found that Internet-based trafficking in persons increased during the pandemic, with traffickers adapting to technology by using popular apps to connect with victims. (51)

Although the 2010 National Education Policy raised the age of compulsory education from fifth grade (age 10) to eighth grade (age 14), the new compulsory education scheme is not enforceable until the legal framework is amended to reflect the revised policy. (31) Research has found many schools are overcrowded and over 80 percent run double shifts. Further, the Teacher Training Institute cannot keep up with the demand for teachers, particularly in rural areas. (2) To accommodate the larger number of students receiving compulsory education, Bangladesh is building new schools for students in higher grades. In the 2019–2020 fiscal year, Bangladesh completed 2,249 new schools, installed sanitation facilities in 850 schools, and installed tube wells in 1,175 schools. (31) While poverty was the most common reason children did not attend school, as 31 percent of families depend on child labor to survive, inadequate access to education remains a concern. (40)

In 2020, access to education in Bangladesh was severely inhibited due to the pandemic. Schools in Bangladesh closed in the spring and remained closed through the end of the reporting period. (2) While televised and online classes were made available to students in grades one through ten, the distance learning program did not adequately reach the most vulnerable children. In addition to pandemic-related closures, children in Bangladesh face barriers to education such as high costs for transportation, uniforms, and stationary. (2,56)

Over 400,000 Rohingya children are living in refugee camps in Bangladesh following the Burmese military's ethnic cleansing operations in 2017. Children residing in the camps are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor. (39,43,57,58) In 2020, the government began restricting humanitarian access, including education and protection programs, due to the pandemic. The government also erected barbed wire fences around refugee camps as a security measure. (59) As a result, refugee children are more vulnerable to exploitation and less able to access humanitarian assistance. (59) Rohingya girls are trafficked from the refugee camps for commercial sexual exploitation in Bangladesh, India, and Nepal. In some cases, girls are promised jobs in domestic service but are instead forced into commercial sexual exploitation. (39) Rohingya children recruited to work outside the refugee camps are reported to be underpaid or unpaid, unable to communicate with their families, and subjected to excessive working hours. (43,60) Rohingya boys typically work in construction, fishing, and shops. (39,50) Rohingya children are further sold into bonded labor in the fish drying industry by their parents, primarily in Cox's Bazar. Bonded laborers—both Bangladeshi children and Rohingya refugee children—work to pay off their parents' debts over a 9 month fishing season. (15,39)

Rohingya refugee children are not permitted to attend primary and secondary school in Bangladesh, including in private educational institutions, due to their lack of documentation. (40) The government has permitted international organizations, such as UNICEF, UNESCO, and UNHCR, to provide some basic education services to primary school-age Rohingya children, and some university-level students have received scholarships. (31,40,59) Aid groups are barred from teaching the Bangla language, using Bangladesh's educational curriculum, or providing accredited education to refugees. (2,40) However, the Government of Bangladesh agreed to allow international partners to implement the Myanmar Curriculum Pilot, which began rolling out in 2020, but was put on hold due to the pandemic. The pilot, based on refugees' interests, would allow children to follow Burma's educational curriculum and learn the Burmese language with the goal of preparing for their return in the future. (31)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bangladesh has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bangladesh's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 38 of the Constitution (72)
Compulsory Education Age	No	10	Section 2 of the Primary Education (Compulsory) Act (73)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution (72)

* No conscription (74)

Minimum age protections in the Bangladesh Labor Act do not cover children working in the informal sector, in which an estimated 93 percent of child labor in Bangladesh occurs, including domestic work, street work, and work on small agricultural farms. (39,56,61,75) In addition, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover producing garments and drying fish; both are areas of work in which there is evidence that children work in unsafe and unhealthy environments for long periods of time. (1,8,17-21,25,45,62,101-103)

Bangladesh prohibits, but does not criminalize, the use of children in pornographic performances and in the production of drugs. (64,66) Sources indicate that the minimum age for recruitment in the Army is 17 and requires parental consent in addition to birth documents verifying age. (69) Army recruitment and training take 1 year, ensuring that recruits reach the age of 18 before entering regular duty. (70) However, the minimum age for recruitment in the Air Force is 16. (68) In addition, there are no laws that set the minimum age of voluntary recruitment by the state armed forces. Although the Constitution prohibits the formation of non-state armed groups, the legal framework does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (72)

As mentioned earlier, though the 2010 National Education Policy raised the age of compulsory education from fifth grade (age 10) to eighth grade (age 14), the new compulsory education scheme is not yet enforceable. (31, 76) The compulsory education age is lower than the minimum age for work, making children ages 10 to 14 vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work.

In 2020, the Ministry of Labor and Employment drafted an update to the hazardous work list, which if adopted, would add drying fish. (2)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority and operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Inspection for Factories and Establishments (DIFE)	Enforces labor laws, including those relating to child labor and hazardous work. (77) DIFE is within the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE). (78)
Bangladesh Police	Enforce Penal Code provisions protecting children from forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (8) The Trafficking in Persons Monitoring Cell investigates cases of human trafficking and enforces the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking Act's anti-trafficking provisions. (79)
Bangladesh Labor Court	Prosecutes labor law violations, including those related to child labor, and imposes fines or sanctions against employers. (80) Research has found that fines are usually minimal and that perpetrators are usually not sentenced to jail for employing children. (31)
Child Protection Networks	Respond to violations against children, including child labor. Comprises officials from various agencies with mandates to protect children, prosecute violations, monitor interventions, and develop referral mechanisms between law enforcement and social welfare services at the district and sub-district levels. (81) Reporting indicates that Child Protection Networks, intended to be a referral mechanism between law enforcement and social services, are not operating due to a lack of funds. (82)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Bangladesh took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Department of Inspections for Factories and Establishments (DIFE) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of authority of labor inspectors to assess penalties.

† Data are from July 1, 2019 to June 30, 2020.

DIFE conducts routine inspections in assigned areas based on a checklist that includes child labor. In response to complaints, DIFE also conducts unannounced visits. (2) However, DIFE is only authorized to conduct unannounced inspections outside the export processing zones and special economic zones. (2,56,104) The lack of routine unannounced inspections in all sectors allows employers to hide child laborers. (39) Sources report that garment factories producing for local markets are rarely inspected despite a high prevalence of child labor in the sector. (2) Some employers move children to night shifts to evade inspectors, as night inspections are only conducted until 8 p.m. (2,34) In addition, the penalty for a child labor law violation, which can only be imposed by a court after a lengthy process, and the low amount of penalties imposed are inadequate to act as deterrents. (2,56) Research has found that the maximum penalty for a child labor law violation is approximately $59 (5,000 taka), which is insufficient to deter violations. (61,84)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Bangladesh's workforce, which includes more than 66 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Bangladesh would employ about 1,666 labor inspectors. (8,85-88) Sources indicate that DIFE is insufficiently funded and inspectors are reluctant to enforce labor laws because they believe factories will close and force the poor out of work. (2)

The government reported that, between July 2019 and December 2020, labor inspections led to the removal of 1,924 child laborers from 1,500 worksites. The government also reported that in 2020, 88 cases were filed against factory owners for child labor violations. (71) However, courts were closed for much of 2020, so the outcome of these cases and whether financial penalties were imposed are unknown. When discovered, children are not referred to schools or other social safety net programs, and research has found that it is possible they find work elsewhere. (31)

A previous reciprocal referral mechanism existed between labor authorities and social services. However, in 2020, research indicates that this reciprocal referral mechanism no longer exists. (71)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Bangladesh took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including publicly releasing criminal law enforcement information.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020

In 2020, the government constituted and funded seven anti-trafficking in persons tribunals to handle human trafficking cases. The tribunals functioned virtually until August 2020 when in-person court hearings resumed. (51)

During the reporting period, some police accepted bribes to not check documentation that workers in registered brothels were older than age 18 and to procure falsified documents for workers, some as young as age 10. (39) In addition, the government did not provide specific information on criminal law enforcement efforts against child labor crimes for inclusion in this report. However, research has found a small number of cases during the reporting period in which police arrested brick kiln owners for alleged abuse of child workers. (85) The government also reported initiating prosecutions against 333 defendants for forced labor crimes and 184 defendants for alleged sex trafficking crimes in 2020, while continuing prosecutions against 340 defendants indicted in previous reporting periods. The government did not provide disaggregated information as to whether any of these cases involved child victims. (51)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of capacity to operate effectively.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Child Labor Welfare Council	Coordinates efforts undertaken by the government to guide, coordinate, and monitor the implementation of the National Plan of Action on the Elimination of Child Labor. Chaired by MOLE, comprising officials representing relevant government ministries, international organizations, child advocacy groups, and employer and worker organizations. (86) In 2020, the Council visited multiple sectors, including shipbreaking (ship recycling), leather, and shrimp, to verify that child labor was absent, and educated employers about not using child labor. Findings about child labor-free sectors were to be announced in 2021. (31) Although meetings were held quarterly during the reporting period, research found that the Council is not operating effectively. (71)
Counter-Trafficking National Coordination Committee, Ministry of Home Affairs (MOHA)	Coordinates the work of government agencies and international and local NGOs on international and domestic human trafficking, including child trafficking, through bi-monthly meetings. Oversees district counter-trafficking committees, which manage counter-trafficking committees for sub-districts and smaller administrative units. (79) However, some of the district and sub-district level counter-trafficking committees struggled to operate effectively during lockdowns associated with the pandemic. (14,31)
Rescue, Recovery, Repatriation, and Integration Task Force, MOHA	Coordinates efforts by the Governments of Bangladesh and India to rescue, recover, repatriate, and reintegrate victims of human trafficking, particularly women and children, between the two countries. Liaises with various ministries, government departments, NGOs, and international organizations that assist trafficked children. (14,60,87) However, the government lacks the capacity to track its citizens abroad, case management systems have not been developed, and the process to repatriate human trafficking victims is lengthy. (87,88) Research was unable to determine whether the Task Force was active during the reporting period.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including incorporating child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Education Policy.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action on the Elimination of Child Labor (2012–2025)	Identifies strategies for developing institutional capacity, increasing access to education and health services, raising social awareness, strengthening law enforcement, and creating prevention and reintegration programs. (89) During the reporting period, the Child Labor Central Monitoring Committee submitted a new draft plan of action to MOLE, and the government extended implementation of the National Plan of Action on the Elimination of Child Labor from 2021 to 2025. (2) Research has found that MOLE is not effectively coordinating the implementation of this policy. (2,51) Research has also found that, at local levels, corruption and a lack of legal understanding were obstacles in implementation. (31)
Seventh Five Year Plan (2016–2020)	Includes elimination of the worst forms of child labor, with a focus on child domestic workers and other vulnerable groups. Sets out actions to be taken by the government, including forming a policy for children working in the formal sector; providing assistance to street children to protect them from exploitation, coordinating with stakeholders for effective rehabilitation, increasing working children's access to formal and non-formal learning, and providing livelihood support to poor households with children. (90) The Seventh Five Year Plan expired at the end of the reporting period and the government approved an Eighth Five Year Plan in December 2020. (2,31)
Domestic Workers Protection and Welfare Policy	Sets the minimum age for domestic work at 14 years; all children under age 18 require parental permission to engage in domestic work. (91) However, the policy is not legally enforceable until the legal framework is amended to reflect the revised policy. (92) In 2020, MOLE held public consultations with domestic workers, NGOs, and journalists to gather information before deciding whether to amend existing legislation or draft new legislation. MOLE, including the Secretary, also held awareness-raising workshops about the policy across the country for officials and citizens. (31)
National Plan of Action for Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking (2018–2022)	Establishes a plan to build government capacity to address trafficking in persons and provide economic and social safety nets for victims and vulnerable populations, particularly children. (93,94) Led by MOHA. In 2020, MOHA continued to meet and solicit advice from civil society organizations regarding trafficking issues. (51) However, during the reporting period, research has found that many MOHA officials with responsibilities for coordinating government trafficking efforts transitioned to new government positions, leading to a loss of institutional knowledge and government momentum in implementing the National Plan of Action for Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking. MOHA authorities claimed the National Authority—an institution that would serve as a national supervisory body on combating trafficking in persons—was set up in 2020, but sources reported the National Authority body was neither active, nor funded. (51) In addition, research found that due to the pandemic, MOHA was prevented from convening consultative workshops with the trafficking in persons civil society collective as in previous years. (51)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (76)

The government has a National Education Policy that sets the compulsory age for free education through eighth grade (age 14). However, the government has yet to include child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Education Policy. (76)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, issues exist in these social programs, including lack of adequate programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Elimination of Hazardous Child Labor, Phase IV (2018–2021)†	$35 million Government of Bangladesh-funded, 3 year project implemented by MOLE. Removed 90,000 children from hazardous labor in Phases I-III by providing informal and technical education, stipends, and awareness raising for employers and families. (40,95,96) Phase IV of the Elimination of Hazardous Child Labor program was delayed. (2,31)

Program	Description
Accelerating Protection for Children (2017–2021) †	Project funded by the government and UNICEF and implemented by the Ministry of Women and Children Affairs to provide life skills education, awareness, and self-protection techniques to adolescent girls and boys ages 10 to 19 years, and empower them as agents of social change to combat risks and protection issues like child marriage, child labor, reproductive health, and adolescent nutrition. In 2020, directly supported 118,722 adolescents and reached another 200,000 through digital platforms. (31)
Child Sensitive Social Protection in Bangladesh (CSPB) II †	Project implemented by the Ministry of Social Welfare's Department of Social Services with support by UNICEF to strengthen social services for street children engaged in child labor including protection from violence, abuse, and exploitation, safe accommodation; food; and education (non-formal and life skills). (31) In 2020, supported 2,000 street children in different urban locations and rescued 400 children from child labor through family reintegration and referral services, alternative care, and schooling using case management tools. Reached 20,000 children with psychosocial counselling and over 7,000 children with case management. (31)
Child Help Line 1098 †	Ministry of Social Welfare-implemented and UNICEF-supported 24-hour emergency hotline under the CSPB project. Connects children vulnerable to violence, abuse, and exploitation with social protection services. (71,98) During the pandemic, call agents received four times more calls than in other years. In 2020, the help line supported 180,000 children through information on child protection issues, rescue, and referrals. (31)
School Feeding Program †	Provides fortified biscuits to pre-primary and primary school children in high-poverty areas to encourage school attendance, as hunger and poverty are both drivers of child labor. The Ministry of Primary and Mass Education program serves 3 million children at 15,700 schools in 29 districts. (31)
Child Labor Improvements in Bangladesh (CLIMB) (2017–2021)	USDOL-funded project implemented by Winrock International that aims to build the capacity of civil society to more effectively detect and combat forced child labor and other labor abuses in the dried fish sector in Bangladesh. In 2020, this project provided direct relief to hundreds of families in response to the impact of the pandemic. (97) Additional information is available on the USDOL website .

The Ministry of Labor and Employment is expected to conduct a national survey on child labor by 2021. (8)

Research has found that the government's social programs often align with the priorities of various funders, and lack coordination among relevant ministries to address the cross-cutting nature of child labor issues. (2) In addition, while Bangladesh has other hotlines beyond the Child Help Line 1098, including the 16357 DIFE hotline to report labor law violations, and the national 109 hotline to report violence against women and children, the number of complaints received through these hotlines related to child labor and the government responses to them are unknown. (71)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bangladesh (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Amend the national law to reflect the amended Domestic Workers Protection and Welfare policy.	2018 – 2020
	Extend the law's minimum age protections to children working in the informal sector, including in domestic work, on the streets, and in small-scale agriculture.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive, in particular by including garment production and fish drying.	2016 – 2020
	Establish criminal prohibitions on the use of children for pornographic performances.	2015 – 2020
	Establish criminal prohibitions on the use of children in illicit activities, particularly in the production of drugs.	2015 – 2020
	Establish criminal prohibitions on the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that education is compulsory through eighth grade and is consistent with the minimum age for work.	2012 – 2020

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure enforcement of citations and penalties for labor law violations, including reducing the length of time taken to assess penalties for child labor law violations and increasing penalties for child labor law violations to be an adequate deterrent.	2014 – 2020
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that labor inspections are conducted unannounced and during overnight shifts.	2013 – 2020
	Create mechanisms for labor and criminal law enforcement to refer children involved in child labor to appropriate legal and social services.	2013 – 2020
	Ensure that law enforcement personnel are investigated, prosecuted, and convicted for falsifying age documents and accepting bribes to overlook age verification procedures, which contribute to offenses related to the worst forms of child labor, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2019 – 2020
	Publish information related to criminal law enforcement, including training, the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions, and penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2020
	Provide law enforcement with sufficient financial and technological resources to enforce violations involving human trafficking, forced labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2014 – 2020
Coordination	Ensure that the National Child Labor Welfare Council is operating effectively.	2020
	Ensure that counter-trafficking committees are able to function, including with adequate funding, and that its efforts include monitoring and reporting.	2019 – 2020
	Effectively coordinate with the Rescue, Recovery, Repatriation, and Integration Task Force to ensure the timely repatriation of human trafficking victims.	2018 – 2020
	Ensure all coordinating bodies are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2020
Government Policies	Ensure that the National Plan of Action on the Elimination of Child Labor is transparently implemented.	2020
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Education Policy.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that there is adequate funding for full implementation of the National Plan of Action for Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking, especially for measures protecting victims.	2020
	Publish activities undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor to address child labor during the reporting period.	2020
Social Programs	Implement programs that rehabilitate street children engaged in child labor and enroll them in school.	2020
	Provide sufficient education services for Rohingya refugee children, remove barriers to their school attendance, and implement programs to decrease their engagement in and subjection to child labor activities.	2017 – 2020
	Expand programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, including developing and implementing programs to address child labor in the informal garment, leather, and fish drying industries.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that Phase IV of the Elimination of Hazardous Child Labor program is implemented.	2020
	Ensure that the Child Help Line and other help lines are operating effectively.	2020
	Publish activities undertaken to implement social programs to address child labor during the reporting period.	2020

In 2020, Belize made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The National Child Labor Committee, along with its affiliates, validated the Protocol for Accompanied and Unaccompanied Minors, which outlines steps a labor inspector should take if one comes across a child laborer during an inspection. Moreover, the Terms of Reference for the new National Child Labor Policy were completed, but they have not yet been formalized in new legislation or regulation. Children in Belize are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in agriculture and construction. With the exception of some work categories that allow employment at age 14, the country's minimum age for work is 12 and does not meet international standards. In addition, the country lacks prohibitions against the use of children in illicit activities and does not appear to have programs to address child labor in agriculture, fisheries, or construction.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Belize are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in agriculture and construction. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Belize.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	1.6 (1,405)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	1.2

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of beans, bananas, citrus fruits, cereals, corn, rice, sugarcane, papayas, and vegetables (2-4,7-12)
	Fishing, including for fish, lobster, and conch (2-4,7,8)
	Butchering or raising livestock, including poultry and cattle (7,8,13)
Industry	Construction, carpentry, masonry, wood carving, carrying heavy loads, and using power tools (2-4,7,8)
	Quarrying, including operating stone crushers (3,8,9)
Services	Street and retail vending (3,4,8)
	Yard work, including using lawnmowers, weed-eaters, and machetes (7,8,13,14)
	Sewing (8)
	Working and cooking in food service, including using large mixers and grills (4,7,8,13)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Working in tourist sector, including in food and alcohol service and hospitality, and as tour guides, maintenance personnel, and security guards (2-4)
	Auto repair (7,8,13)
	Welding (8,13)
	Pumping gas (7,13)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,15,16)
	Use in illicit activities, including trafficking of drugs and weapons (2-4,8,17)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Belize lacks a recent comprehensive child labor study, which makes it difficult to clearly determine the sectors and activities in which working children are engaged. Although there is a plan to conduct a more thorough study under the Child Labor Secretariat and Inspectorate, the last known data available are from a 2010 study on child activity funded by the ILO. (2,3) However, reports suggest that children in rural areas work in the agriculture and fishing industries, and children in urban areas work in the construction and tourist industries. Children work on family-owned farms and accompany adults to employment sites to assist in planting and harvesting. (2,4)

Among Belize’s ethnic groups, Mennonites had the highest percentage of child labor, with approximately 9.5 percent of Mennonite children engaged in child labor. (3,7,8,14) Non-Mennonite children are also engaged in child labor on Mennonite-owned land. (10) Children working on Mennonite land often use dangerous tools like machetes, tractors, and plows, and work long hours in the sun without proper hydration. (4,10,14) Limited reporting also indicates that boys working mainly in Mennonite communities may be involved in operating heavy machinery and flying small airplanes to spray crops. (2,3)

Children in Belize are also engaged in child labor in diving and fishing for fish, lobster, and conch. Many of these children cannot swim or may be involved in swimming at extreme depths, and have been injured working with dangerous tools such as anchors, fish traps, chipping hammers, and spears. (2-4,8)

Government officials indicate that Belize has a reputation as being a destination for child sexual exploitation, with reports of children being trafficked in areas frequented by tourists or seasonal workers, such as San Pedro, Punta Gorda, and Belize City. (3,15,16) Another trafficking trend in Belize is the "sugar daddy" phenomenon, in which a wealthy male offers to pay school fees, provide cash payments, or purchase groceries or gifts for a family in exchange for sexual favors from a young, usually female, family member. (18) Girls from impoverished communities and LGBTQI children are particularly vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation and labor trafficking in Belize. (16,17,19) A limited number of sources also indicate that boys from Belize City and San Pedro were recruited to transport and sell drugs and firearms and commit murders as part of gang warfare. (2,3,14,17)

In Belize, primary and secondary education is tuition free up to age 14, but many children's access to education is hindered by the cost of school fees, textbooks, uniforms, and meals. (2,3,17,20,21) In 2020, approximately 60 percent of children benefited from a secondary school subsidy of $150 per year toward education expenses. (4) Still, some Spanish-speaking children face language barriers at schools that provide instruction only in English. (10) In addition, Belize lacks qualified teachers, basic supplies, and facilities to educate children. (3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Belize has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Belize's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and hazardous work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	12	Articles 54, 164, and 169 of the Labor Act; Articles 2–3 of the Shops Act (20,21)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	14	Articles 2 and 7 of the Families and Children Act; Articles 54 and 169 of the Labor Act (20,22)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 8 of the Constitution; Articles 157–158 of the Labor Act (20,23)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 11–14 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Act; Article 9 of the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (Prohibition) Act; Articles 49–51 of the Criminal Code (24-26)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 2, 11, and 13–14 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Act; Articles 2–9 of the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (Prohibition) Act; Articles 49–51 of the Criminal Code (24-26)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 16 of the Defence Act (27)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	Articles 2 and 59 of the Education and Training Act; Articles 2 and 34 of the Education Act (28,29)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 70 of the Education and Training Act; Article 45 of the Education Act (28,29)

* No conscription (27)

Belizean law does not conform to international standards because it sets the minimum age for employment at age 12. (20) However, the minimum legal age for work in wholesale and retail trade or business is set at age 14. (21) Belizean law is also inconsistent with international standards on hazardous work. Children under age 14 are prohibited from working in industrial undertakings—including activities such as mining, manufacturing, and construction—but children over age 14 are explicitly permitted to work in those types of activities. (20)

Belize

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although Belizean law indicates that children under age 18 are prohibited from being employed or engaged in any activity that may be detrimental to their health, education, or mental, physical, or moral development, the law does not specify which employment activities are detrimental to children. (20,22) Belizean law is inconsistent with international standards on light work, because the types of light work permissible for children have not yet been identified. (20,30) In 2020, the National Child Labor Committee's Legislative Review Sub-Committee expanded the hazardous work and light work list after consulting with stakeholders. (2,4) Although the hazardous work and light work list was originally drafted in 2018, legislative delays have impeded the government's efforts to enact and amend this or other legislation addressing child labor concerns. As of December 2020, the committee had not finalized its review. (2,4) A list of hazardous work prohibited for all children has not been adopted as law. (30,31)

In addition, the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

The Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (Prohibition) Act and the Criminal Code prohibit all forms of child sexual exploitation, with the former explicitly prohibiting child pornography. (24,25) However, consensual sex with children ages 16 or 17 is permitted, including in cases in which a person gives or promises remuneration, goods, food, or other benefits in exchange for the sexual act. This provision leaves children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (24,31) Research could not determine whether laws prohibit the use of children in specific illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. (32)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Rural Transformation, Community Development, Labor, and Local Government	Identifies cases and enforces laws related to child labor and hazardous child labor through its Labor Department. (9) During the reporting year, continued to implement the agenda items and maintain the curriculum of the Clear II project, which ended in 2019 and had provided the government with technical assistance to bring about meaningful reductions in child labor. (4)
Belize Police Department (BPD)	Investigates cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking through Sexual Offense and Family Violence Units. (3)
Ministry of Education, Culture, Science, and Technology	Investigates truancy offenses in schools and issues fines for these violations. (3,4,33)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecution	Prosecutes criminal offenses and quasi-criminal matters in court, including cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (4,13)
Child Labor Secretariat and Inspectorate	Identifies, coordinates, and reports on all child labor activities; collaborates with stakeholders to assist with the monitoring and enforcement of laws and policies that relate to child labor; and consults, educates, and raises awareness of child labor. Deals with all issues related to child labor and enables criminal authorities and social services to reciprocally refer children found in child labor. (3) After the situation has been assessed, relevant agencies get involved, such as the Department of Human Services and BPD. In 2020, the Child Labor Secretariat and Inspectorate Desk attended the Laureates and Leaders for Children virtual summit on "Fair Share for Children," which included training on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on marginalized children and the prevention of children working during the pandemic. (4,13)
Ministry of Human Development and Social Transformation, Department of Human Services	Receives referrals for child labor cases; trains immigration officials, labor inspectors, and BPD in making referrals; and handles human trafficking cases. (34) Provides victims with welfare services, including medical and social services and counseling assistance. (9)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Belize took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws, including insufficient inspections and penalties to deter child labor violations.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Yes (4)

In 2020, the National Child Labor Committee, the Child Labor Secretariat, and the Inspectorate Desk validated the Protocol for Accompanied and Unaccompanied Minors, which outlines steps a labor inspector should take if one comes across a child laborer during an inspection. (4,16,35) The protocol was developed in consultation with the Ministry of Human Development, Families, and Indigenous Peoples' Affairs, the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Council, and IOM. (4,16) In addition, the Labor Department coordinated with different government agencies to conduct Special Joint Child Labor Inspections in Corozal and Orange Walk districts in the agriculture and construction sectors. (4)

The government does not publish information regarding labor inspectorate funding. However, government officials indicate that the level of funding is insufficient and that the inspectorate has a need for more vehicles, fuel, and inspectors. (2,4) Although the Labor Department is required to visit every business at least once a year, it usually falls short of this goal due to a lack of resources. (2,8) In 2020, the number of inspections significantly decreased due to the COVID-19 pandemic. In addition, local NGOs report that the number of inspectors and funding is insufficient to conduct thorough and complete inspections, and that businesses in the Corozal Free Zones clear out their child workers prior to the inspectors' arrival, because unannounced inspections are difficult to implement. (4) Labor inspectors are able to assess penalties, but the current fine for child labor infractions is only $13.50. Thus, inspections and penalties may be insufficient to deter child labor violations in Belize. (2,36) Training is provided to new inspectors; however, funding is insufficient to address the inspectorate's full need throughout the year for refresher training on existing laws. (2)

Child labor complaints can be submitted to the Labor Department, the Belize Police Department, or the Department of Human Services. Limited reporting from local NGOs and the private sector indicates that it is difficult to follow up on the status of complaints made. (2,4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Belize took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Belize

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (3)	N/A (4)

Number of Convictions	0 (3)	0 (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (3)	No (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (4)

In 2020, courts were closed due to the pandemic from March through November, with very few sentencing sessions held between November and December, and no convictions were made. Moreover, no new criminal investigators were hired during the reporting year. (4)

There have been only two human trafficking convictions in Belize since 2005, only one of which involved a minor. Although the country's laws allow for the imprisonment of violators, human trafficking cases are often dismissed by lower courts. (1,36) Belize lacks official statistics on child sex tourism, and criminal investigators, police officers, and labor inspectors lacks sufficient resources—such as vehicles, fuel, office supplies, and adequate training—to investigate violations of criminal law, including the worst forms of child labor. (1,14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Child Labor Committee	Coordinates efforts among ministries to combat child labor and implement the National Child Labor Policy. Led by the Ministry of Rural Transformation, Community Development, Labor, and Local Government and 14 government and civil society members. (37,38) The Child Labor Secretariat and Inspectorate serves as the Secretary for the Committee. During the reporting period, consulted with stakeholders such as the Belize Sugar Industries and the Belize Chamber of Commerce and Industry to further refine and expand the hazardous and light work lists, but did not finalize the review as of December 2020. (4) The Committee distinguishes between children engaged in work that is beneficial to their development and those engaged in the worst forms of child labor. (35,39)
Anti-Trafficking in Persons Council	Identifies and rescues human trafficking victims, trains law enforcement officials, and educates the public about the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Led by the Chief Executive Officer of the Ministry of Human Development; includes 12 other government agencies and civil society organizations. (40) During the reporting period, the Council validated the Protocol for Accompanied and Unaccompanied Minors, in consultation with the National Child Labor Committee and the Child Labor Secretariat and Inspectorate Desk, the Ministry of Human Development, Families, and Indigenous Peoples' Affairs, and IOM. (4,16)
National Committee for Families and Children	Promotes, monitors, and evaluates Belize's compliance with its national and international commitments to children, including the UN CRC. (4) Implements the National Results Framework for Children and Adolescents 2017–2030, which is also referred to as the Children's Agenda. Collaborates with the Child Labor Secretariat and Inspectorate on special assignments and projects. (4,11,41,42) In 2020, began coordination of the Road Map To End Child Marriage and Early Unions in Belize, which includes activities to increase awareness of commercial sexual exploitation legislation. (43,44)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Policy	Focuses on strengthening child labor laws, creating legislation to address existing gaps, and providing educational assistance to children who have been or who are currently engaged in child labor. (45,46) Aims to strengthen government institutions and services and to train labor officers. (38,46) During the reporting year, the Terms of Reference for the new National Child Labor Policy were completed and submitted to stakeholders for comment, but have not yet been formalized in new legislation or regulation. (4)
CARE Model	Coordinates the protection, care, and monitoring of sexually exploited and trafficked children. Outlines the role of the Department of Human Services and BPD in receiving allegations of commercial sexual exploitation of children and referring children to services. (3) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the CARE Model during the reporting period.
National Results Framework for Children and Adolescents (Children's Agenda) 2017–2030	Sets out the government's agenda and priorities to protect the rights of children and adolescents, including in education, health, economic security and opportunity, and protection from discrimination, abuse, and exploitation, including child labor. (11,41,42) Raises awareness of the role of families in promoting early childhood education. (42) Research was unable to determine what activities took place to implement the National Results Framework for Children and Adolescents during the reporting period.
Road Map To End Child Marriage and Early Unions in Belize†	Increases awareness of commercial sexual exploitation legislation, particularly to protect children between the ages of 15 and 17 from exploitation. Coordinated by the National Committee for Families and Children, in partnership with UNICEF. (43,44)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (19)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Building Opportunities for Our Social Transformation	Conditional cash transfer program established in 2011. Continues to be implemented in Belize City in areas with the highest reported incidents of child sexual exploitation. (3) Provides small cash assistance to poor households subject to specific conditions, such as minimum school attendance of 85 percent. The program seeks to prevent the commercial sexual exploitation of children by wealthy men who pay families for access to vulnerable children. (3) In 2020, received $12.4 million from the World Bank to provide social assistance to poor and vulnerable households impacted by the pandemic. (48)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (49)

Research found no evidence of government programs to combat commercial sexual exploitation of children or to assist children working in agriculture, fisheries, or construction. (4) However, the government sponsored billboards specifically to combat child sex tourism at the international airport and at border crossing points. The government further participated in a multi-country program to identify and deny tourist entry to registered sex offenders. (50) During the reporting year, due to the pandemic and the change in government which occurred in November 2020, there were no new policies or programs created to address child labor. There were also no activities undertaken to expand funding and support for social programs. (4)

During the reporting year, teachers and education officials from eight public and private shelters received training on identifying human trafficking victims from the National Organization for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect, which included staff from King's Children Home, Hopewell Children's Home, Liberty's Children's Home, Marla's Children's Home, Dorothy Menzies Child Care, Hope Haven Children's Home, Coral Grove Group Home, and 14 Miles Transitional Home. (18)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Belize (Table 11).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the compulsory education age.	2020
	Ensure that the minimum age for work is age 14 in all sectors.	2013 – 2020
	Adopt a list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children and ensure that all children under age 18 are prohibited from engaging in hazardous work.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that the law prohibits all forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children ages 16 and 17.	2013 – 2020
	Ensure that laws prohibit the use of children in specific illicit activities, such as the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
Enforcement	Publish complete information on enforcement efforts to combat child labor, including labor inspectorate funding.	2020
	Ensure that law enforcement agencies have sufficient resources, including vehicles, fuel, and inspectors, to conduct labor inspections and criminal investigations.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that the level of inspections and penalties are sufficient to deter child labor law violations.	2018 – 2020
	Implement and fund adequate training systems for inspectors and criminal investigators, including on the worst forms of child labor.	2018 – 2020
	Prosecute and impose criminal penalties for the worst forms of child labor, and ensure that courts hear and try human trafficking cases.	2017 – 2020
Government Policies	Publish activities undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor to address child labor during the reporting period.	2020
Social Programs	Conduct a comprehensive study of children’s activities to determine whether they are engaged in or at risk for involvement in the worst forms of child labor; to inform policies and programs.	2018 – 2020
	Increase access to education by eliminating fees; improving educational facilities; hiring additional qualified teachers; providing textbooks, uniforms, and meals; and addressing language barriers for Spanish-speaking students.	2011 – 2020
	Implement programs to address commercial sexual exploitation of children and programs to assist children working in agriculture, fisheries, and construction.	2019 – 2020

In 2020, Benin made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The labor inspectorate nearly tripled the number of inspections conducted over the previous year, and the government passed legislation increasing the minimum age for apprenticeships from age 14 to 15. Moreover, the National Monitoring and Coordination Working Group for Child Protection met for the first time since 2017. However, children in Benin are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in the production of cotton and crushed granite, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work and street vending. There are many barriers to education, especially for children with disabilities. In addition, the government did not publicly release information on some of its criminal law enforcement efforts, and limited resources for the adequate enforcement of child labor laws may impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Benin are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in the production of cotton and crushed granite, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work and street vending. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Benin. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	24.7 (unknown)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	67.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	16.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		64.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2017–2018. (5)

These data are not comparable with data presented in last year's report due to changes in survey source, survey questionnaire, and age range surveyed.

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in domestic work, vending, construction, handicraft activities, artisanal mining, fishing, granite quarrying, and agriculture, including in the production of cotton, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,8,12)
	Forced begging (13)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child trafficking occurs mostly within Benin but also to other countries, primarily Gabon, Nigeria, and the Republic of the Congo, and for purposes of domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, and work in vending, agriculture, and mining. Children living in the northern regions of Benin are the most vulnerable to human trafficking. (1,3,13,15) Traditionally, under a practice known locally as vidomègon, children live with relatives or family friends and perform household services in exchange for educational opportunities. A majority of these children are girls, and many become victims of labor exploitation and sexual abuse. (1,3,13,16)

Evidence suggests that incidences of abuse, including corporal punishment and rape of students by teachers, hamper education access even though the government outlawed corporal punishment in 2015. (3,13,17) Children with disabilities also have especially limited access to the regular education system, and a lack of reliable transportation forces some children to walk long distances to school. (16,18-20) In rural areas, children are often unregistered due to parents' limited understanding of the procedures for receiving a birth certificate and the associated costs. Since birth certificates are required to enroll in school, some unregistered children may be denied access to education. (3,18,21,22)

During the reporting period, the government continued to conduct the Administrative Census for the Identification of the Population, an effort to comprehensively collect personal data on all Beninese citizens, including newborns and children, to create a national digital database and issue national biometric identification cards. Each registered Beninese citizen will be issued a biometric card bearing a unique identification number to be used for civil and administrative purposes. (23) The Directorate of Civil Registration, with the assistance of UNICEF, ran a project that permitted the issuance of birth certificates during routine vaccinations. The effort allowed 10,171 children whose births were registered in hospitals to get their birth certificates. (23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Benin has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Benin’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a minimum age for work that is lower than the age for compulsory education.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 166 and 301 of the Labor Code; Article 210 of the Child Code (24,25)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 210 and 353 of the Child Code; Article 1 of the Hazardous Occupations List (25,26)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Occupations List (26)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 3 and 303 of the Labor Code; Articles 212 and 353 of the Child Code; Article 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors (24,25,27)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 3 and 303 of the Labor Code; Articles 2–4, 6, 18, and 22 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors; Articles 212 and 352–353 of the Child Code; Articles 499–501 and 504 of the Penal Code (24,25,27,28)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 3 of the Law on the Prevention and Repression of Violence Against Women; Article 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors; Articles 212 and 378 of the Child Code; Article 504 of the Penal Code (25,27–29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 212 and 353 of the Child Code; Article 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors (25,27)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 6 of Law 2005-43 (30)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 6 of Law 2005-43; Title II, Article 32 of the Constitution (30,31)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 2 and 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors (27)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 24 of Act N° 2003-17; Article 4 of the Law on the Prevention and Repression of Violence Against Women (29,32)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 13 of the Constitution; Article 114 of the Child Code (25,31)

On February 26, 2020, Decree (Arrêté) no. 012 was passed, which increased the minimum age for apprenticeships from age 14 to age 15 in both the formal and informal sectors. (33) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (3,34) In addition, Article 22 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors prescribes insufficient penalties, especially in comparison to punishments for other serious crimes, such as rape. (7,27)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Civil Service (MOLCS)	Enforces child labor laws and investigates labor code infractions, including those related to child labor. (11,35) Refers cases of child labor to Social Promotion Centers ( Centres de Promotion Sociale or CPSs). (22) In 2020, MOLCS, with the support of UNICEF, organized a meeting with ministries involved in child labor prevention to discuss ways to curb child labor in sectors in which it is most prevalent. (23)
Ministry of the Interior and Public Security	Enforces criminal laws related to the protection of minors, including the worst forms of child labor, through the Central Office for the Protection of Minors (OCPM) under the Criminal Police Department. (36,37) Through OCPM, maintains a child trafficking database—Benin's Children ( Enfants du Benin )—to track and process child trafficking cases, and implements standard operating procedures that seek to improve the quality of services, harmonize police activities, and create a stronger working relationship between the police and other actors involved in child protection. In 2020, OCPM continued to expand local offices throughout the country and provide police with specific training for addressing abuses of children. (3) Through its vice squad (Brigade des Moeurs), the Ministry of the Interior and Public Security addresses human trafficking for sexual exploitation. (34) Although the government allocated a budget of approximately $118,000 (70 million CFA) to OCPM in 2019, an increase of 34 percent from the previous year, the budget allocation for this reporting period is not yet available. (23)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Benin took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Civil Service that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$207,000 (3)	$200,000 (23)
Number of Labor Inspectors	35 (22)	35 (23)

Number Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (3)	2,070 (23)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	463 (3)	1,273 (23)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	2 (22)	0 (23)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	2 (22)	N/A (23)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Yes (23)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (3)	Yes (23)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (3)	Yes (24)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Unknown (3)	Yes (23)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (3)	Yes (23)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (23)

During the reporting period, officials conducted more than 2,000 inspections, a dramatic increase over the previous year. (23) This was due, in part, to the government decentralizing labor inspections and basing inspectors close to their designated inspection areas. Inspections were conducted in open-air markets, workshops, bars, restaurants, and other worksites. (23) Furthermore, UNICEF provided additional financial support that contributed to the increased number of inspections. (38) The inspection teams observed 1,273 violations of labor standards and provisions related to child labor, including failure to observe the minimum age of employment, lack of apprenticeship contracts, and poor hygiene and safety conditions. (23,39) However, the scope of labor law enforcement may not have been sufficient as there were no inspections conducted in the agriculture or mining sectors. (23) In addition to 35 full-time labor inspectors, the government has employed an additional 25 administrators and controllers to conduct labor inspections. (22)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Benin's workforce, which includes more than 3.5 million workers. According to ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Benin would employ about 92 inspectors. (40,41) Sources indicate that the labor inspectorate's continued lack of financial resources hampered its ability to conduct labor inspections. (3,11) At the departmental level, the government conducted labor inspections in marketplaces, workshops, bars, restaurants, and other places in which children are exploited. Nonetheless, the national level labor inspection team did not have funding to supervise any inspections completed at the departmental level. (23)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Benin took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (3)	No (23)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (3)	N/A (23)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (22,37)	No (23)
Number of Investigations	2 (3)	Unknown (23)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (3)	Unknown (23)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (3)	Unknown (23)
Number of Convictions	2 (3)	Unknown (23)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (3)	No (23)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (3)	Yes (23)

The government has a mechanism to enable criminal authorities and social services to reciprocally refer children found in the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking, and civil servants regularly refer cases. The government also uses its child assistance hotline, which was launched in 2020, to refer cases of child labor, particularly those involving domestic servitude, because the hotline allows for anonymous tips. (23) The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts regarding the number of investigations, the number of violations found, the number of prosecutions initiated, or the number of convictions for the purpose of this report. (23)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Executive Committee to Combat Child Labor (Comite Directeur National de Lutte contre le Travail des Enfants, CDN)	Coordinates efforts to address child labor, falls under the jurisdiction of MOLCS, and includes delegates from ILO, UNICEF, trade unions, local NGOs, and other government ministries. (3) During the reporting period, CDN held a 3-day session, which was attended by 25 officials from government bodies, NGOs, trade unions, and employers' associations. Participants reviewed and approved a communications plan to fight child labor with a focus on the worst forms of child labor. (23) Participants also discussed the situation of child labor in Benin's open-space markets and new strategies to address it. (23)
National Monitoring and Coordination Working Group for Child Protection (CNSCPE)	Established by decree in 2006 and chaired by the Ministry of Social Affairs and Microfinance's Secretary General. Includes five technical committees: (1) trafficking and exploitation, (2) juvenile justice, (3) violence against children, (4) orphans and vulnerable children, and (5) early childhood. (23) Each committee has an action plan and may propose other activities to CNSCPE. Has 40 members drawn from various organizations involved with children's issues, including government ministries, NGOs, donor agencies, and international and bilateral technical partners. In June 2020, CNSCPE met for the first time since 2017. (23)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Ministerial Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates government efforts to address trafficking in persons through five committees: (1) prosecution, (2) prevention and protection, (3) statistics, (4) intellectual, and (5) policy. Led by the Ministry of Planning and Development and includes representatives of other key ministries and NGOs. (23,37,42) This Inter-Ministerial Task force did not meet in 2020. (23,42)
Ministry of Social Affairs and Microfinance	Offers social assistance and social support services to vulnerable populations and is the lead agency for child protection in Benin. (23,35) Through its Office of Family, Childhood, and Adolescence, provides assistance to trafficking victims by means of 85 CPS across the country. (7,12,22) Through the Family and Child Monitoring Office, maintains a database on child trafficking. (12) In 2020, the Ministry of Social Affairs and Microfinance continued to assist foreign trafficking victims, predominantly minors, before repatriating them to their home countries. (15)

Research found that there is a lack of effective coordination among agencies responsible for addressing the needs of vulnerable children. (3,22,23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including incorporating and implementing child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Education Sector Plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2019–2023)	Aims to reduce the worst forms of child labor in Benin by 70 percent by the end of 2023. Targets six focus areas: (1) strengthening the legislative and institutional framework related to child labor; (2) information, awareness, and social mobilization; (3) education and training; (4) victim monitoring, protection and referral; (5) inspection and suppression; (6) institutional mechanisms, and monitoring and evaluation of the plan. (23) No action was taken to further this policy during the reporting period. (39)
Cooperative Agreement to Combat Cross-Border Trafficking	Aims to protect migrant children and victims of trans-border human trafficking. On December 23, 2019, the Government of Benin signed a tripartite cooperative agreement with Burkina Faso and Togo committing to cooperate and assist each other in the investigation of human trafficking offenses. (3) On January 7, 2020, 14 law enforcement and government officials from Benin and Togo, with the support of international partners, held a 2-day session in Grand-Popo, Benin, to share experiences and discuss the challenges they face in fighting human trafficking in the two countries. Participants developed a Joint Strategic Actions Paper to strengthen the mechanism in place for combatting cross border human trafficking. (39)
National Action Plan to Fight Trafficking in Persons (2020–2024)	Aims to eradicate human trafficking in Benin by strengthening governmental systems and institutional framework. (43,44) During the reporting period, the government provided resources to implement this policy; however, research showed that these resources were inadequate. (39,44)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (17)

The Education Sector Plan (2018–2030) aims to improve access to education, including targeted interventions for orphaned children and children outside of the formal education system. However, the Education Sector Plan does not incorporate child labor elimination and prevention strategies. (6,45)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including with the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Government-Funded Shelters†	CPS provide food, shelter, education, and vocational training to vulnerable children, including victims of labor exploitation, in 85 centers. (3) OCPM also operates an interim care facility for human trafficking survivors before their placement in a long-term shelter. (3,7) During the reporting period, the government reduced the available capacity of these shelters in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. However, the shelters continued to function and support child trafficking survivors. (23)
Government-Funded Retraining Centers†	MOLCS, with the assistance of UNICEF, maintains a vocational school program to train survivors of child trafficking in a trade. (46) During the reporting period, UNICEF continued to fund and implement the program in which survivors of child abuse, including child trafficking and exploitation, are schooled or trained in a trade through a program called Second Chance School ( Ecole de Seconde Chance ). (39)
Integrated National School Feeding Program (2017–2021)†	$87 million Government of Benin-funded program managed by the World Food Program. (47) In 2020, the program covered 3,995 schools across Benin and helped reduce the number of school dropouts. (23)
McGovern–Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program (2019–2023)	U.S. Department of Agriculture-funded project implemented by Catholic Relief Services in the Alibori and Borgou regions. Aims to improve the literacy and attendance of school-age children, improve the health and dietary practices of students, and increase government capacity of and investment in school meal programs. (48) In 2020, the Government of Benin continued to fund the largest portion of this program. (23,49)
Rapid Pro	In November 2018, the government and UNICEF launched a platform (Rapid Pro) to allow parents to declare births through SMS text message, sparing parents the challenges related to the issuance of birth certificates. In 2020, the program registered the births of 1,679 children less than 1 year old. (23)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (11,50-52)

Although the Government of Benin has implemented programs to protect children from human trafficking, research was unable to determine whether the government implements programs to assist children engaged in other worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, and agriculture. (37)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Benin (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2020
	Create meaningful penalties for the transport and trafficking of minors and crimes involving labor exploitation.	2014 – 2020
Enforcement	Provide initial training and refresher courses on child labor for labor inspectors and criminal law enforcement officials.	2013 – 2020
	Increase financial resources to enforce laws against child labor.	2009 – 2020
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2015 – 2020
	Conduct inspections in sectors that have the highest incidence of child labor, such as in agriculture and mining.	2019 – 2020
	Publish criminal law enforcement data as it relates to the worst forms of child labor, including the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, number of convictions, and whether penalties were imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2020
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies meet and report their activities, including the Inter-Ministerial Task Force to Combat Trafficking in Persons.	2017 – 2020
	Ensure effective coordination among agencies on procedures and social services for abused and vulnerable children.	2019 – 2020
Government Policies	Ensure that existing policies addressing child labor are implemented as intended including the National Action Plans against both the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Trafficking in Persons.	2018 – 2020
	Ensure that child labor elimination and prevention strategies are integrated into the Education Sector Plan.	2010 – 2020

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Increase access to education by ensuring the safety of children in schools, providing access to schools for children with disabilities, providing reliable transportation to schools, and increasing birth registration rates.	2010 – 2020
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, and agriculture; and monitor and report annually on the progress of these programs.	2010 – 2020

In 2020, Bhutan made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Bhutanese Parliament passed the Penal Code (Amendment) Act of Bhutan 2021, which amended the legal definition of human trafficking to make the legislation consistent with international standards for adults, but it still includes the necessity of force, fraud, or coercion in child trafficking cases. The National Commission for Women and Children developed an internal Child Safeguarding and Protection Policy to promote and protect children from abuse and exploitation. However, although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Bhutan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Bhutan's minimum age for work is inconsistent with international standards, and education is not compulsory. The government has not adopted a national policy to address child labor, including its worst forms. The government did not publicly release information on its labor law enforcement and criminal law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Bhutan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Bhutan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.8 (6,338)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	84.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	3.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		100.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4 (MICS 4), 2010. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (6)
Industry	Construction, † activities unknown (7)
Services	Domestic work (6,8)
	Work in hospitality services (6,8)
	Work in restaurants and automobile workshops (8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Forced domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,8,9)
	Forced labor in karaoke bars, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8)
	Use in illicit activities, including the smuggling of tobacco (10)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

There is a lack of current data on child labor in Bhutan. To date, no national survey on child labor has been conducted. Media outlets have reported instances of child labor in Bhutan's restaurants and automobile workshop industries, some of which had indicators of forced labor. Traffickers have also exploited Indian child domestic workers in Bhutan. (8, 11)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The government provides a minimum of 11 years of free education to all Bhutanese citizens and has committed to increasing free education by an additional 2 years. However, children living in remote villages, children from nomadic communities and migrant populations, and children with disabilities face significant difficulties in accessing public schools. (2,9,12,13) Although they have access to primary education, a small number of children who are stateless lack access to the documentation necessary to enroll in higher education, making them more vulnerable to child labor and trafficking. (6,8,11) During the COVID-19 pandemic-related school closures in 2020, the Ministry of Education delivered lessons through television and radio, online learning, and mass distribution of self-instructional materials. (6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bhutan has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	N/A
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bhutan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	13	Sections 170–171 of the Labor and Employment Act; Regulation on Working Conditions 2012: Acceptable Forms of Child Labor (14,15)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 170–171 of the Labor and Employment Act (14)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Section 9(e) of the Labor and Employment Act; Section 9 of the Regulation on Acceptable Forms of Child Labor (14,15)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 6 and 9(a) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 154 and 379 of the Penal Code; Section 221 of the Child Care and Protection Act (14,16,17)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Section 9(a) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 221 and 224 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Sections 154 and 379–380 of the Penal Code (14,16-18)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 9(b) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 222–224 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Sections 225 and 375–380 of the Penal Code (14,16,17)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 9(c) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 216 and 220 of the Child Care and Protection Act (14,16)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Defense Service Rules and Regulations (19)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 9(a) of the Labor and Employment Act (14)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 9.16 of the Constitution of the Kingdom of Bhutan (20)

* No conscription (19)

During the reporting period, the Bhutanese Parliament passed the Penal Code (Amendment) Act of Bhutan 2021, which amended the legal definition of human trafficking to make the legislation consistent with international standards for adults, but it still includes the necessity of force, fraud, or coercion in child trafficking cases. (6,18,21-23)

The minimum age for work is not compliant with international standards because the Labor and Employment Act allows children under age 14 to work. (14) Education is not compulsory in Bhutan, which may increase the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (6,24)

Although the Government of Bhutan reports that the minimum age for voluntary recruitment into Bhutan's military is age 18, the relevant Defense Service Rules and Regulations were not available for public review. (19,25)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor, Ministry of Labor and Human Resources	Investigates child labor complaints and ensures that employers comply with child labor laws. Refers cases involving the worst forms of child labor to the police. (6) Regularly inspects companies for compliance with the Labor and Employment Act. Regulations on working conditions cover issues related to child labor, wages, worker compensation, the recruitment process for foreign workers, grievance procedures, penalties, and hours of work. (21) Foreign workers are required to pay fees for work permits and medical checkups. The regulation of work conditions is currently under review with technical support from the World Bank. (21)
Royal Bhutan Police	Investigate and enforce criminal laws relating to the worst forms of child labor. Include 3 Women and Child Protection Units and 10 Women and Child Protection Desks to enforce laws protecting women and children. (6,9) Refer abused and exploited children to child welfare officers and the National Commission for Women and Children. (6,17)
Child Justice Court	Adjudicates criminal and civil cases involving child labor. (6,17)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Bhutan took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Human Resources that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including limited resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The Department of Labor has not released its annual report with labor law enforcement information for the reporting period. (26) Although improvement notices and penalty memoranda were issued based on inspections, no child labor violations were reported because data were not disaggregated by child labor offenses. (6) Department of Labor officials acknowledged that limited financial and human resources place constraints on the number of inspections conducted and inspectors employed. (2)

While the number of labor inspectors is unknown, according to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Bhutan would need to employ roughly 10 labor inspectors as its workforce consists of over 397,900.

According to a Bhutanese Government official, additional training is needed for labor inspectors, in addition to the initial training for all new labor inspectors. (6)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Bhutan took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of data on criminal law enforcement efforts.

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020

A woman who brought a child to Bhutan from India as a domestic worker was convicted in 2019 of illegal transportation; however, the Bumthang Dzongkhag Court dismissed the child trafficking charges. During the reporting period, the Office of the Attorney General, in collaboration with the Royal Bhutan Police, National Commission of Women and Children, and local NGO Respect, Educate, Nurture, and Empower Women, appealed the case to be prosecuted as a human trafficking and child abuse case. (6)

The government does not publicly release information on criminal law enforcement efforts. (6)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Labor Task Force	Coordinates government efforts on child labor across multiple government agencies and ministries. Led by the Department of Labor, Ministry of Labor and Human Resources, and comprises representatives from government, international organizations, civil society, and the private sector. (27,28) Research was unable to determine whether the Child Labor Task Force was active during the reporting period.
National Commission for Women and Children	Coordinates the implementation of laws and policies that promote and protect the rights of women and children. Comprises a chairperson at the cabinet level and high-level officials who represent relevant government agencies, NGOs, and the private sector. (29) During the reporting period, the Commission developed an internal Child Safeguarding and Protection Policy to promote and protect children of Bhutan from abuse and exploitation, and held a 1-day orientation program in Thimphu on the policy to relevant stakeholders, including the Royal Bhutan Police. (30)
Trafficking in Persons Special Task Force	Coordinates anti-trafficking in persons efforts, including monitoring human trafficking trends in Bhutan and advising national policy on human trafficking. Headed by the Department of Law and Order, with participation from other relevant government agencies and civil society organizations. (2) Research found that the Task Force was unable to meet during the reporting period because of government shutdowns and the secondment (a job rotation from one organization to another) of some members to national pandemic response operations. (21)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established policies to address child labor. (6)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to the prevention or elimination of child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Shelters for Vulnerable Women and Children†	Includes Project Hope, a National Commission for Women and Children program that provides residential shelters for children at risk of labor exploitation. In 2019, the program was transferred to Respect, Educate, Nurture, and Empower Women (RENEW) as part of its shelter program. RENEW, a Thimphu-based NGO that receives government funding, provides shelter, counseling, and rehabilitation for women and children who have been victims of human trafficking. (2) The Nazhoen Lamtoen Children Half Way Home also provides shelter, counseling, and support services to children, in part through government funding. (26,31) During the reporting period, RENEW provided housing and counseling to a child who was allegedly a victim of human trafficking from India to Bhutan as a domestic worker, and supported the appeal of her case in court. (6)
Promoting Rights-Based Multi-Sectoral Responses to Prevent Trafficking in Persons in Bhutan (2019–2022)	$750,000 program funded by the USDOS Trafficking in Persons Office and implemented by UNODC to improve Bhutanese police investigation skills regarding human trafficking cases, improve information sharing, and implement the government's Standard Operating Procedure for Multi-Sectoral Response to Address Trafficking in Persons in Bhutan (TIP SOP). (2) During the reporting period, UNODC conducted two trainings on the TIP SOP with immigration officials. (6)

† Program is funded by the Government of Bhutan.

Although the Government of Bhutan has implemented programs that target children at risk of labor exploitation, research found that these programs do not adequately target children working in agriculture or domestic service, or children involved in the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bhutan (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2020
	Ensure that laws on child labor comply with the international standard for the minimum age for work.	2010 – 2020
	Make primary education compulsory and ensure that the compulsory age for education extends to the minimum age for employment.	2010 – 2020
	Criminally prohibit child trafficking without needing proof of the use of force, fraud, or coercion.	2018 – 2020
	Make publicly available the legal statute that prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into Bhutan's military.	2018 – 2020
Enforcement	Publish labor law enforcement data, including the amount of funding for the labor inspectorate, the number of labor inspectors, whether labor inspectors received training on new laws related to child labor, whether new and veteran labor inspectors received refresher training, the number of labor inspections conducted in total and at worksites, the number of violations found, the number of violations for which penalties were imposed, and the number of penalties imposed that were collected.	2017 – 2020
	Ensure that the Department of Labor has the resources necessary to enforce labor laws and combat child labor.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive adequate training to carry out their duties.	2020
	Ensure the number of labor inspectors in Bhutan meets the ILO's technical guidance.	2020
	Ensure that labor law enforcement investigation data are disaggregated by labor violation type to better target, prevent, and eliminate child labor.	2019 – 2020
	Publish criminal law enforcement information, including initial training for new criminal investigators, training on new laws related to the worst forms of child labor, refresher courses provided to criminal investigators, the number of investigations conducted, and the number of violations found.	2010 – 2020
	Ensure that all coordinating bodies to combat child labor are active and able to fulfill their mandate.	2019 – 2020
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies to combat child labor are active and able to fulfill their mandate.	2019 – 2020
Government Policies	Adopt a comprehensive policy or national action plan that eliminates the worst forms of child labor and includes child labor prevention strategies.	2014 – 2020
Social Programs	Conduct a national child labor survey, including research to determine child labor activities in farming and construction, and publish the results.	2013 – 2020
	Implement programs to make education more accessible for children living in remote locations, children from nomadic communities and migrant populations, children with disabilities, and children who are stateless.	2014 – 2020
	Create social programs targeting working children, particularly in agriculture, and children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic work.	2009 – 2020

In 2020, Bolivia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved a resolution allowing Venezuelan minors without identification documents or with expired documents to regularize their immigration status, enabling them to access the educational system. The Office of Women and Family in the municipality of Tarija began a project with the Ministry of Labor to create a list of children working in the streets and reintegrate this population into their families and schools. In addition, the Attorney General announced the formation of department-level special prosecutor offices dedicated to pursuing crimes of human trafficking and smuggling and installing special prosecutors with greater knowledge of these crimes. Finally, under the Juancito Pinto Program, more than 2.3 million participating students received $73 million in aid to encourage school retention in primary and secondary schools. However, children in Bolivia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and mining. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the production of sugarcane. Although Bolivian law requires that apprentices attend school, it does not set a minimum age for participation in apprenticeships. In addition, Article 1 of Supreme Decree No. 1875 sets the minimum age for compulsory military service at 17 years, which does not comply with international standards.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Bolivia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and mining. (1) Children perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including through the production and harvesting of sugarcane. (2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Bolivia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	19.4 (467,874)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	74.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	16.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.6

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Planting and harvesting corn and peanuts (5)
	Production and harvesting of Brazil nuts/chestnuts† and sugarcane† (2,5)
	Ranching and raising cattle† and plucking chickens (1,2,6-8)
Industry	Mining† of gold, silver, tin, and zinc (2,9,10)
	Construction,† including heavy lifting and shoveling (1,2,6)
	Production of bricks† (1,2)
Services	Street vending, juggling, shoe shining, and assisting transportation operators (2,6,11,12)
	Cleaning cemeteries (grave sites) (9,11-13)
	Domestic work (2,6,14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in ranching, and in the production and harvesting of Brazil nuts and sugarcane (14,15)
	Forced begging, and forced labor in mining and domestic work (1,2,6,7,14-16)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,6,17,18)
	Use in illicit activities, including robbery and producing or transporting drugs (7,14,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Indigenous children are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Some indigenous Guaraní families have been forced into labor in the harvest of sugarcane. (15) In Tarija, the sugarcane and Brazil nut harvest seasons attract over 3,000 internal migrants—many of them children—who are vulnerable to forced labor and human trafficking. (15)

The cultural practice known as padrinazgo, which involves rural families sending their children to urban areas to live with individuals for better access to education, social services, and food, often leads to forced labor, including in domestic work and third-party businesses. (15) Girls, on average age 14, were found to be subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, including sex trafficking, in El Alto. (2,6) Research indicates that the commercial sexual exploitation of Bolivian children thrives due to the strength of the legal sex industry in Bolivia, the persistence of poverty, cultural norms that contribute to the denigration of women and girls, and the demand for child sex tourism. (2,6,18) Bolivian children are also subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, including sex trafficking, and forced labor both within the country and abroad. (14) Research found that young females age 13 to 17 were increasingly being targeted for trafficking through cyber recruitment. (19) The government does not have a system in place to track data on forced child labor, commercial sexual exploitation of children, or engagement of children in illicit activities. (6)

Bolivian law requires children to attend school up to age 17. (20,21) Attendance rates for secondary education remain low in rural areas. (6) As a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, the government suspended in-person schooling in March of 2020 and initially announced a plan to end the school year and automatically advance students to the next grade level. This plan was later modified and the government committed to a hybrid learning model utilizing a mix of in-person, virtual, and television and radio instruction. (2) In January 2020, the government approved a resolution allowing Venezuelan minors without identification documents or with expired documents to regularize their immigration status. This would allow these children access to the Bolivian education system. (2,22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bolivia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bolivia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including compulsory recruitment by State military.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Articles 8 and 58 of the General Labor Law; Article 129 of the Child and Adolescent Code; Sentence 0025/2017 of the Plurinational Constitutional Tribunal; Article 3 of Law No. 1139 (23-26)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 58–59 of the General Labor Law; Articles 5 and 136 of the Child and Adolescent Code (23,24)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 136 of the Child and Adolescent Code (24)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 15, 46, and 61 of the Constitution; Article 291 of the Penal Code; Article 34 of the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling (20, 27,28)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 15 of the Constitution; Article 34 of the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling (20,28)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 34–35 of the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling; Articles 281 bis, 32, 321 bis, 322, and 323 bis of the Penal Code (28,29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 47, 48, and 56 of the Law on Coca and Controlled Substances (30)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	16*	Articles 2 of the General Directive of Pre-Military Recruitment; Articles 2 and 7 of the Law of National Military Service (31,32)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	No		Articles 108 and 249 of the Constitution; Article 1 of Supreme Decree No. 1875; Article 1 of Supreme Decree No. 21479 (20,33,34)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Article 81 of the Constitution; Articles 1, 8–9, and 11–14 of the Avelino Siñani-Elizardo Pérez Education Law (20,21)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 17 and 81 of the Constitution; Article 1 of the Avelino Siñani-Elizardo Pérez Education Law; Article 115 of the Child and Adolescent Code (24,20,21)

* The minimum age for combat is 18 per Article 36 of the Law of National Military Service (31)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (20,21)

Although legislation was passed in 2018 to clarify the minimum age for work in Bolivia as 14, because the minimum age for work is still lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

school before the completion of compulsory education. (24,26) The Child and Adolescent Code allows children ages 14 to 18 to work with authorization from the Offices of the Child Advocate on the conditions that the work is not precarious to the child's well-being and is not conducted for more than 8 hours a day and 40 hours a week. (26)

Although Bolivian law requires employers to grant apprentices time necessary to attend school, it does not set a minimum age for participation in apprenticeships. (23) Articles 108 and 249 of the Constitution require Bolivian males to perform compulsory military service in accordance with national law. (20) Article I of Supreme Decree No. 1875, passed in 2014, lowered the minimum age at which compulsory military service may begin from age 18, as previously established, to age 17, which does not comply with international standards. (33,34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws and addresses forced labor of indigenous peoples. Refers cases to the Labor Courts for adjudication of penalties and unpaid wages. (2) Engages municipal Offices of the Child Advocate to ensure the protection of children's rights. (1,35) Assists in the implementation of the Child and Adolescent Code. (1,24)
Municipal Offices of the Child Advocate	Authorize children from the age of 14 to engage in work and register them in the government's Child and Adolescent Information System (SINNA), pursuant to the Child and Adolescent Code. Protect the rights and welfare of children, including by accompanying child labor inspectors and referring criminal child labor cases to prosecutors and for social services. (1,24) SINNA is administered by the Ministry of Justice and Transparency. (24,26)
Prosecutor's Office	Enforces criminal laws against forced labor, trafficking of children, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities at the departmental level in coordination with the Attorney General. (1,36) The Attorney General's Office (AGO) oversees the investigations and prosecutions at the national level. The AGO's National Coordinator's Office oversees regional prosecutors who, in conjunction with the Bolivian National Police, pursue cases of human trafficking and maintain a database of these cases. (36)
Bolivian National Police	Maintain the Special Force in the Fight Against Crime, which runs the Trafficking in Persons Division, made up of 15 investigative human trafficking units and the Police Unit for Migratory Control and Assistance, which patrols national borders. (37)

In 2020, the Office of Women and Family within the municipality of Tarija began a project with the Ministry of Labor (MOL) to create a list of children working on the streets and utilize a multidisciplinary team to reintegrate this vulnerable population into their families and schools. A UNICEF representative estimated that approximately 80 percent of child workers in Tarija suffered some sort of physical violence during their experience working on the streets. (2)

Following the 2018 amendment of the Child and Adolescent Code, Municipal Offices of the Child Advocate are now responsible for registering working children ages 14 and older in the government's Child and Adolescent Information System. (1,26) Reports indicate that up to 15 percent of municipalities in Bolivia lack an Office of the Child Advocate; many more are reported to lack sufficient resources and the capacity to perform their mandate and raise awareness of children's rights and their parents' obligations under the Code. (15)

In La Paz and Santa Cruz, Child Advocate Offices reported additional barriers to implementation of the registration section of the Code. These barriers include lack of cooperation from parents to register their working children and prohibitive financial obstacles to obtain the proper paperwork required for registration. (15)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Bolivia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2019	2020

Due to changes in administration personnel following the 2020 presidential elections, figures regarding inspectorate funding were not available for inclusion in this report. Furthermore, the pandemic and subsequent budget cuts severely limited inspection operations due to government restrictions on movement and the reduction of the number of inspectors. (2) The MOL indicated that by October, its mobile inspection units were again operational and were conducting an estimated 20 inspections per week, but total figures and disaggregated data were not available for inclusion in this report. (2)

However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Bolivia's workforce, which includes approximately 5.7 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Bolivia would employ about 380 labor inspectors. (38) The MOL reported that its budget was insufficient to conduct labor inspections. (2)

The MOL, Prosecutor's Office, and the Ministry of Justice do not have a consolidated database or systematized records of the number of violations found related to child labor. (1,6)

The government reported that children removed from child labor are referred to the municipal Offices of the Child Advocate for services, but information on the number of children referred for services is not publicly available. (1,2,6) Rural offices of the Child Advocate in municipalities throughout the country lack proper funding, personnel, and materials. While municipalities are required to allot a certain percentage of their budget to the Offices of the Child Advocate, this percentage has decreased over the last few years. (1,2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Bolivia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training.

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (2)

In September 2020, the Attorney General announced the formation of department-level special prosecutor offices dedicated to pursuing crimes of human trafficking and smuggling and installing special prosecutors with greater knowledge of these crimes. From August 31 to September 11, the government, in cooperation with UNODC, provided virtual training to 48 of these new, specialized trafficking in persons prosecutors. (19)

However, the Government of Bolivia did not provide further data on criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in this report. The Municipal Offices of Children and Adolescents, which hold the municipal Child's Advocate Offices, also completely closed during the pandemic, so prosecutions against child labor offenders largely stopped. (2)

Research has shown that children rescued from the worst forms of child labor are often not referred to social services providers because some cities lack shelters and other social services for children. (15,17,39,40) Shelters maintained by departmental governments are underfunded and child victims are often cast out of shelters on the basis of fixed timelines—after spending the maximum number of days allowed—rather than an assessment of need. (17) The government did not report the number of children referred to receive social services. While children can report workforce abuse to the Child Advocate's Office, they rarely do. (15)

In addition, low rates of dedicated training on human trafficking hampered law enforcement efforts. The high rate of rotation among police, prosecutors, and judges—a standard practice to help combat corruption—leads to insufficient knowledge, lack of experience on human trafficking, and a judicial backlog for these types of cases. (39)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor	Coordinates national enforcement efforts on child labor issues. Led by MOL, and includes the ministries of Justice, Education, and Planning, and several NGOs. (1) Although the Bolivian government continued to undertake activities through this coordinating body in 2020, research could not determine specific activities and their efficacy in addressing child labor. (2)
Plurinational System for the Comprehensive Protection of Children and Adolescents	Coordinates national efforts to manage and implement the Plurinational Plan for Children and Adolescents, the Coordinating Council for Children and Adolescents, and the Congress on Children's Rights. Evaluates and advises on national plans, public policies, reports, and budget allocation relating to children's and adolescents' rights. (24) In coordination with the National Institute of Statistics, monitors and updates SINNA. Led by the Ministry of Justice. (24) Although the Bolivian government continued to undertake activities through this coordinating body in 2020, research could not determine specific activities and their efficacy in addressing child labor. (2)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Plurinational Council against Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons	Coordinates anti-trafficking efforts and implements national laws and policies on human trafficking and smuggling. (1,28,41) Chaired by the Minister of Justice and comprising eight ministries, the Public Advocate, and NGOs. (42) In cooperation with UNODC, the government led a series of virtual training sessions in August 2020 for government officials serving on the Council. The training reached 151 officials on the Council and focused on human trafficking prevention, protection, and prosecution. (19)
Department-Level Councils against Human Trafficking and Smuggling	Coordinate efforts of the Plurinational Council against Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons in Bolivia's nine departments. Comprising officials from the Special Force in the Fight Against Crime, MOL, the ministries of Migration and Education, the Human Rights Ombudsman's Office, and NGO representatives. (28,41) In 2020, in commemoration of "National Day against Human Trafficking," the departmental councils joined the Plurinational Council and UNODC to launch an informational campaign to raise public awareness on human trafficking crimes and encourage prevention. The campaign utilized digital platforms and social networks of public institutions and civil society to reach the public. (19)

On September 22, the government signed a memorandum of understanding with IOM to allow the implementation of a national information system to combat human trafficking. (19) The ILO determined that the National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor has not fulfilled its role as the central coordinating body, and its activities, while ongoing, have not resulted in any significant coordination. (1,43) Reports also indicate that some of MOL's departmental sub-commissions on child labor have not been active, due in part to a lack of resources. (16)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including developing and implementing a new national action plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Bolivian General Plan for Economic and Social Development (2016–2020)	Set goals for economic and social development including eliminating child labor. (44)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons (2015–2020)	Established eight lines of action drawn from the original five core areas of the Plurinational Policy to Combat Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons, including building capacity and coordination among criminal law enforcement agencies. (17,36) Although the plan was refined in 2016, an updated version awaits approval and publication. (6)

Research could not determine any activities undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor in 2020.

Bolivia's national policy for addressing child labor, the National Plan for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor (2000–2010), expired in 2010. (45)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding and adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors and regions.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Juancito Pinto Subsidy Program†	Government program that provides a conditional cash transfer to all primary and some secondary school students to increase school attendance and reduce the dropout rate. (46) The 2020 Juancito Pinto program provided $73 million (504 million Bolivianos) directly to the more than 2.3 million participating students to encourage school retention in primary and secondary schools. (2)
Safe Terminal Program†	A child sex tourism prevention campaign launched by the Bolivian government in 2018, which includes training, awareness activities, and informational workshops for officials of transport and accommodation companies in the city of La Paz. In the department of Tarija, the campaign focuses on the development and implementation of codes of ethics and conduct to promote children's rights in private sector companies' corporate social responsibility programs. (17) Although the government of Bolivia continued to support this program in 2020, research could not determine specific activities carried out. (2)
Human Rights of Children Working in Sugarcane, Brazil Nuts, and Mining†	Human Rights Ombudsman's Office program that promotes the elimination of the worst forms of child labor, along with labor and social protections for working adolescents ages 14 to 17. (43) Although the government of Bolivia continued to support this program in 2020, research could not determine specific activities carried out. (2)
Bolivian Foreign Trade Institute's Triple Seal Initiative‡	Initiative of the Department of Santa Cruz's Ministry of Labor. Collaborative effort with the Bolivian Institute of Standardization and Quality, UNICEF, and ILO to develop a voluntary certification program that recognizes companies that comply with Bolivian law and ILO conventions on child labor, forced labor, and worker discrimination in the production of their goods. (18) The project has led to the removal of over 5,000 children, or 95 percent of all child labor, from the sugarcane industry in the Department of Santa Cruz. (47) Although the government of Bolivia continued to support this program in 2020, research could not determine specific activities carried out. (2)
Child Trafficking Awareness-Raising Campaigns†	Government program implemented with the Bolivian Network for the Fight Against Human Trafficking and Smuggling that conducts awareness-raising campaigns to educate the public about the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling. (35) Although the government of Bolivia continued to support this program in 2020, research could not determine specific activities carried out. (2)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (1,16,48,49)

Although Bolivia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to address the extent of the problem, particularly in the production of Brazil nuts and sugarcane, ranching and cattle raising, mining, domestic work, street work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (16) The Juancito Pinto subsidy program continues to expand and has been adequate in rural areas. However, reports indicate that the $29 per year per student subsidy is insufficient to meaningfully cover costs, such as transportation, associated with attending school in larger cities. For example, reports indicate that costs associated with attending school in La Paz's sister city, El Alto, may reach $410 per year. (16)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bolivia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law prohibits children under the age of 14 from participating in apprenticeships.	2010 – 2020
	Ensure that the law establishes 18 as the minimum age for compulsory recruitment by the state military and criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2015 – 2020
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2020
Enforcement	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for child labor, including its worst forms.	2015 – 2020
	Publish information on child labor law enforcement, including labor inspectorate funding, the number of inspections conducted at worksites, the number of child labor violations as a result of inspections, and the number of penalties imposed and collected.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that inspectors receive refresher course trainings each year.	2020

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors responsible for enforcing laws on child labor to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2013 – 2020
	Provide sufficient funding to increase the Ministry of Labor's capacity to ensure the adequate enforcement of child labor laws.	2013 – 2020
	Ensure that there are systematized records or a consolidated database on the number of violations found related to child labor.	2019 – 2020
	Establish and maintain in every municipality an Office of the Child Advocate with sufficient resources to ensure that legal protections are extended to all children who are permitted to work, that parents are assisted in registering their children for work, and that coordination of the provision of services to children who are removed from child labor, including its worst forms, occurs in each region.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that Offices of the Child Advocate publicly report on the number of children referred for work authorizations and the number of children rescued from child labor and referred for social services.	2015 – 2020
	Publish information on training for criminal investigators, including whether they receive training on the worst forms of child labor and refresher training; the number of criminal child labor investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions.	2011 – 2020
	Ensure that penalties are imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2020
	Ensure that there are sufficient shelters for victims of the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking throughout the country and that victims are not cast out of shelters due to fixed timelines.	2018 – 2020
	Provide sufficient training, including training on human trafficking, to criminal law enforcement agencies to ensure adequate enforcement of laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Address issues of high rotation among police, prosecutors, and judges as well as judicial backlog to ensure adequate prosecution.	2015 – 2020
	Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies report specific activities taken to address child labor throughout the year.
Ensure that the National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor fulfills its central coordinating role and develops concrete mechanisms to improve coordination among participating agencies and organizations.		2009 – 2020
Ensure that all Ministry of Labor departmental sub-commissions designed to combat child labor convene and receive sufficient resources to carry out their functions.		2014 – 2020
Ensure that all Department-Level Councils against Human Trafficking are fully operational as required by the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling.		2014 – 2020
Government Policies	Establish and implement a new national policy to address child labor.	2010 – 2020
	Ensure that all policies that address child labor are active and take actions each reporting period, including the Bolivian General Plan for Economic and Social Development.	2019 – 2020
	Approve and publish a national action plan to address the trafficking and smuggling of persons.	2019 – 2020
Social Programs	Expand national programs, especially those targeting children in rural areas, to increase secondary school attendance.	2010 – 2020
	Increase the Juancito Pinto subsidy to ensure that school children are able to cover the costs associated with attending school.	2014 – 2020
	Expand social programs to address the worst forms of child labor at sites in which hazardous child labor exists, particularly in the production of Brazil nuts and sugarcane, ranching and cattle raising, mining, domestic work and street work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that all social programs that address the worst forms of child labor are active and publish information on activities each reporting period.	2019 – 2020

In 2020, Bosnia and Herzegovina made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Council of Ministers adopted the 2020–2023 National Strategy to Combat Trafficking in Persons as well as the National Action Plan to combat trafficking. The Republika Srpska entity has adopted an anti-trafficking action plan, and cantonal governments have adopted several local action plans. The Government of Bosnia and Herzegovina improved victim access to social services by merging resources for domestic and foreign victims of human trafficking into one fund. The Republika Srpska entity amended the chapter on crimes against citizens' rights and freedoms in the Criminal Code by introducing forced begging, domestic servitude, and sexual exploitation as forms of trafficking to make trafficking prosecutions easier. It also strengthened sentences, which now mandate 3 to 20 years of imprisonment. However, children in Bosnia and Herzegovina are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Border police officers and social workers failed to properly identify unaccompanied migrant and refugee children as potential victims of human trafficking due to a lack of proper protocols. Furthermore, laws on the minimum age for work do not meet international standards because they do not apply to children who are self-employed or working outside of formal employment relationships.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Bosnia and Herzegovina (BiH) are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in BiH. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	8.9 (44,017)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	83.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	10.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3 (MICS 3), 2006. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work, including vending and washing car windows (1-3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging and forced domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7-9)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,4,7)
	Use in illicit activities, including for pickpocketing (1,2,4)
	Use in the production of pornography (1,2,9,10)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Street begging is the most common form of child labor in BiH. (2,7) Organized groups sometimes traffic children to lucrative locations, both domestically and internationally, in regional and EU countries, where they are forced to beg. (2,4,11-13) In 2020, BiH was part of a major migration transit corridor through the Western Balkans, with most new arrivals to the country coming from Bangladesh, Afghanistan, and Pakistan. (13,14)

Children in the largest minority group in BiH, the Roma, are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor due to their difficulty in accessing education. The costs of school supplies and uniforms may be prohibitively expensive for some families. (8,15,16) Roma students also face discrimination from teachers, peers, and school administrators, which has resulted in a disproportionate number of Roma children being enrolled in schools for children with intellectual disabilities. (17) In addition, some Roma children lack birth registration documents, which are required to attend school in BiH. (8,9,18) Sources indicated that the government has not allocated enough financial resources for adequate implementation of inclusive education initiatives, particularly for students with disabilities. (1,7,18-20)

Schools in Republika Srpska (RS) deny the right for some Bosniak children to receive instruction in the Bosnian language; as a result, these children sometimes travel long distances to the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (FBiH) to receive education in their language. (2,18,21) In addition, discrimination persists under the "Two Schools Under One Roof" practice between Bosniaks and Croats in FBiH. This practice creates obstacles for students who wish to attend schools other than those which match their ethnic identity and also enables ethnic discrimination in schools, which can lead to absenteeism. (2,18,21) Children with disabilities generally face barriers to access education, which may make them vulnerable to child labor. Although the number of school programs for children with disabilities is increasing, parents of such children sometimes receive insufficient support from the government, and some schools are unable to provide accommodations for the children's disabilities. (21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

BiH has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Bosnia and Herzegovina is a democratic republic with a bicameral parliament. Governmental responsibilities lie with the state, the two entities of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (FBiH) and Republika Srpska (RS), and the self-governing Brčko District (BD). (19) The Government of Bosnia and Herzegovina has established laws and regulations related to child labor, at the state, entity, and district levels (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bosnia and Herzegovina's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and the prohibition of military recruitment by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

* No conscription (30)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (31)

The labor laws of FBiH, RS, and BD do not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected by the minimum age to work because the labor laws do not apply to children who are self-employed or working outside of formal employment relationships. In addition, FBiH, RS, and BD do not include street begging in their lists of hazardous occupations prohibited for children. (22-24) Although the Criminal Code in FBiH criminalizes human trafficking for forced labor, it fails to specifically outlaw forced labor, debt bondage, and slavery separately from trafficking in persons. (27)

Laws related to illicit activities in BiH are not sufficient because using, procuring, and offering children for the production and trafficking of drugs is not criminally prohibited. In addition, laws in BiH do not meet international standards for the prohibition of recruitment of minors by non-state armed groups. (26)

The Criminal Code of BiH fails to prohibit using children for prostitution, the production of pornography, or pornographic performances. Further, the Criminal Codes in FBiH and in BD do not criminally prohibit the use of children for prostitution. (26,27,29) Although the Criminal Code of RS prohibits using children who are victims of human trafficking for prostitution, the production of pornography, and pornographic performances, there is a gap in the law for children who are not victims of trafficking. (28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Related Entity	Role

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in BiH took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the labor law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including proper application of referral mechanisms.

Although the government did not provide information on its labor inspectorate funding for inclusion in this report, officials in each entity reported that labor inspectors had sufficient resources to carry out inspections in 2020. However, no labor inspectors received training on detecting hazardous child labor in agriculture, including handling agricultural chemicals. (2,35,36) Complaint mechanisms exist in all entities, including a mechanism for receiving online complaints, but research found that BiH does not have an official system for referring children identified during labor inspections to social services providers unless they are victims or potential victims of human trafficking. (2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in BiH took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement, including proper application of referral mechanisms.

Forced begging cases are pursued by cantonal- and entity-level police and cantonal-, entity-, and state-level prosecutors. (2,9,38) Children who are detained for begging are generally referred to social services providers, which are often run by NGOs with funding from the Ministry of Security or the Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees. (2,9,10) However, law enforcement officials sometimes penalize child victims of forced begging by issuing fines against the children. (2,39)

Throughout 2020, the international community, in cooperation with the National Coordinator, facilitated multiple trainings on indicators of trafficking in persons, with an emphasis on irregular migrants, including unaccompanied minors, for the Border Police and regional police forces. (2) However, research indicates that law enforcement officials and social workers would benefit from additional training on identifying children used for forced labor and begging, as these cases are often classified as child negligence or Roma custom instead. (2,3,9) The courts sometimes impose sentences under the legal minimum, decrease the severity of the sentences, or dismiss the charges against the perpetrators altogether. (2,8,9) In addition, enforcement officials are often unwilling to pursue investigations and prosecutions against parents involved in the trafficking of their children, particularly for forced labor, and the shelters subsequently return the children to the parents who were involved in the trafficking process. (2,8)

During the reporting period, FBiH courts convicted 10 traffickers and Federation judges issued sentences ranging from 1 year and 10 months' imprisonment to 10 years' imprisonment for six traffickers. In addition, one judge from Tuzla Canton issued a sentence of 10 years' imprisonment, the highest sentence to date for forced child begging, and the RS Supreme Court upheld a conviction and sentenced a child trafficker to 5 years' imprisonment. (38)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inclusion of all relevant agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Department of the State Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons (State Coordinator) within MOS	Coordinates human trafficking victim protection efforts among relevant ministries at the entity level and among prosecutors at the state, entity, and local levels, as well as with NGOs. (8,9,36,40) Oversees the human trafficking database, which includes data from NGOs, SIPA, SBP, and police agencies and prosecutors' offices at all levels. (9,36) Publishes data from this database in its annual report on human trafficking. (40) Oversees shelter management and monitors NGO compliance with the agreed-upon provisions on victims' assistance. (36) In 2020, the State Coordinator assisted 26 minors identified as potential victims of trafficking. (2)
Strike Force for Combating Trafficking in Persons and Organized Illegal Migration (Anti-Trafficking Strike Force)	Coordinates human trafficking investigations across government agencies. (36,40) Convenes monthly, with additional meetings scheduled as needed. (9,11) Chaired by the Chief State Prosecutor, includes BiH, FBiH, RS, and BD ministries and agencies. (1,8,40) In 2020, the Strike Force met several times throughout the year. (2,13)
Strategy Implementation Monitoring Team	In January 2020, the Council of Ministers adopted the 2020–2023 Strategy to Suppress Trafficking in Human Beings. The new Strategy will establish the Strategy Implementation Monitoring Team to replace the Inter-Ministerial Working Group, which was dissolved during the reporting period. (2)
Regional Monitoring Teams	Facilitate anti-human trafficking coordination among state, entity, and cantonal-level institutions, as well as between NGOs and intergovernmental organizations. (40,41) Include labor inspectors. (39) In 2020, 16 out of 18 total planned local coordinating teams were established and conducted research on the status of human trafficking in BiH. (2,13)

Although the Strike Force is meant to coordinate anti-trafficking efforts across agencies, representatives from the Ministries of Labor are not included. (2,8) During the reporting period, the Council of Ministers expanded the Strike Force with one additional prosecutor from the State Prosecutor's Office and one official from the Border Police. (2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Strategy to Suppress Trafficking in Human Beings in Bosnia and Herzegovina (2020–2023) †	The National Action Plan for the Strategy includes prevention activities to prevent forced labor, including child labor. In October 2020, the Council of Ministers adopted the state-level Action Plan for Implementation of the Strategy. (2)
Guidelines for Work of Regional Monitoring Teams	Enhances the cooperation of monitoring team members and the National Referral Mechanism. (9,42) Includes a section on mixed migration flows, in which unaccompanied migrant children and victims of human trafficking are addressed. (9) The Guidelines have been completed and are currently being prepared for printing and distribution to all relevant institutions and organizations in the country. (38)
Protocol on Cooperation and Treatment in Cases of Unlawful Behavior at the Detriment of Children in Canton Sarajevo	Prevents begging, exploitation of children, and abuse of children in Canton Sarajevo. (43,44) Sets rules on state cooperation on victim protection and mandates the provision of physical, psychological, health, and social protection for children. (44) As a direct result of the protocol, the Sarajevo Canton Prosecutor's Office is currently processing two child begging cases. During the reporting period, 23 children were rescued and accommodated in a safe house as a result of one of these cases. (38)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (45)

During the reporting period, the Government of BiH continued to implement the National Action Plan to Counter Trafficking, which includes provisions dedicated to preventing labor exploitation of Roma children. (2,38) In addition, Roma organizations and government agencies have expressed intentions to develop an auxiliary action plan to combat child begging; however, the plan has not been completed. (36)

In July 2020, the Government of BiH created a portal for potential victims of trafficking for use in the collection and analysis of statistical data on trafficking in human beings. (2)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including a lack of adequate funding.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Registration Project	UNHCR-funded project, implemented by NGO Vaša Prava , which promotes the registration of Roma people to increase their access to social benefits and schools. (40) Has helped 1,740 individuals register for citizenship since 2009 and continues to provide legal assistance to foreign victims of trafficking. (1,11) Active in 2020. (2)
Daily Centers†	Center for Social Welfare-supported and NGO-operated drop-in centers in seven locations across the country for vulnerable children, especially street children. (8,9,11) Provide direct assistance for children, including educational activities, counseling, food, and hygiene. (2) Sarajevo's Center for Social Welfare Mobile Team also engages in daily outreach to children on the streets and to families in vulnerable communities throughout the capital region. In 2020, the Daily Centers provided social services to the 163 potential victims of child trafficking identified by the State Prosecutor. (2)
Assistance for Trafficking Victims†	Government program that allocates small grants to local NGOs for the provision of shelter and social services to victims of human trafficking, including counseling, educational assistance and job training for domestic victims, and visa and legal services for foreign victims of human trafficking. (1,2) In 2020, MOS and the Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees allocated $37,100 for shelters. (2)
Prevention and Fight Against Trafficking in Human Beings in Bosnia and Herzegovina	Joint project by the EU and the Council of Europe. Debuted in October 2019 and offers $790,720 in funding over 3 years to assist BiH in its efforts to better identify victims of human trafficking and heighten public awareness of ongoing issues in the trafficking of persons. Plans to achieve goals through 12 trainings for labor inspectors, police officers, healthcare providers, and education professionals. (1) During the reporting period, the Council of Europe organized 2 trainings on trafficking in human beings for the purpose of labor exploitation (including child labor) for 40 participants. The training included labor inspectors, representatives of employment agencies, members of local anti-trafficking coordination teams, and union and private sector representatives. (2)

† Program is funded by the Government of BiH.

Because labor inspectors do not have a mandate to inspect informal work, staff from Daily Centers are often the first to identify children engaged in hazardous street work. Sarajevo's Mobile Team staff continues to lack sufficient resources for their work, especially reliable transportation. (35,36) Although most Daily Centers collaborate with local Centers for Social Welfare, Daily Centers are not institutionalized and, therefore, lack consistent financial and technical support. (35,36) This may limit the ability of Daily Centers to identify and assist children working on the streets. In addition, government support for outreach to street children in areas outside Sarajevo varies significantly. (2) Although the government provides some social services for low-income families through the Centers for Social Welfare, many families do not receive enough assistance to reduce their reliance on child labor, especially begging. (21,35,36)

During the reporting period, the government partly funded five NGO-run shelters. The Ministry of Human Rights and Refugees allocated $37,450 to four NGOs assisting domestic trafficking victims in 2020, and the Ministry of Security allocated $43,695 to two NGOs assisting foreign victims in 2020. (13,38) In addition, the government merged the internal domestic and foreign victim funds into one victim protection fund worth $81,148, which will be administered by the State Coordinator to provide more effective use of funds for victim assistance. (38)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in BiH (Table 11).

Area	Related Entity	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to all children, including those who are self-employed or working outside of formal employment relationships.	2015 – 2020
	FBiH	Criminalize forced labor, debt bondage, and slavery separately from human trafficking in FBiH's laws.	2018 – 2020
	BiH	Ensure that BiH law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including using, procuring, and offering children for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2020
	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure that the laws criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups and that children are not punished for engagement in non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
	BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and include sectors in which child labor is known to occur, including forced begging and use in illicit activities.	2016 – 2020
	BiH	Ensure that BiH law criminally prohibits using children for prostitution, production of pornography, or pornographic performances.	2019-2020
	FBiH, BD	Ensure that the laws of FBiH and BD criminally prohibit the use of children for prostitution.	2019 – 2020
	RS	Ensure that the use of children for prostitution, production of pornography, and pornographic performances is criminally prohibited separately from human trafficking.	2019 – 2020
	Enforcement	BD, FBiH, RS	Collect and publish information on labor and criminal law enforcement efforts, including labor inspectorate funding, number of inspections conducted, and number of prosecutions and convictions.
BD, FBiH, RS		Ensure that labor inspectors receive training on all sectors in which child labor is known to occur, including hazardous work in agriculture.	2017 – 2020
BiH, BD, FBiH, RS		Create an official mechanism for referring children identified during labor inspections to social services providers.	2018 – 2020
BD, FBiH, RS		Ensure that children are not penalized for being victims of the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2020
BiH, BD, FBiH, RS		Ensure that law enforcement, judiciary officials, and social services providers are trained on government protocols in detecting cases of child trafficking, including trafficking of migrant and refugee children, and are able to properly identify victims, classify violations, use referral mechanisms, and prosecute offenders according to the law.	2014 – 2020
Coordination	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure that all relevant ministries are represented in the Anti-Trafficking Strike Force and allocate sufficient funding to enable coordination and documentation of active investigations.	2017 – 2020
	BiH	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are active and able to implement their mandates.	2019 – 2020
Social Programs	BiH	Ensure that inclusive education initiatives receive adequate funding.	2009 – 2020
	BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure that all children have access to education by eliminating school-related fees, accommodating children with disabilities, and preventing discrimination of minority students.	2013 – 2020
	BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure that all children have access to birth registration or identity documentation required to enroll in school.	2011 – 2020
	FBiH, RS	Allow all Bosniak children in RS to access education in the Bosniak language and remove the "Two Schools Under One Roof" practice to eliminate discrimination in schools based on ethnicity in FBiH.	2018 – 2020
	BiH	Strengthen social protection measures by ensuring that programs such as Daily Centers and Centers for Social Welfare receive adequate financial and technical resources to assist vulnerable families and victims of child labor.	2014 – 2020
	BiH, BD, FBiH, RS	Ensure sufficient resources to provide social services and education to potential and actual victims of domestic or international human trafficking, including unaccompanied minors.	2014 – 2020
	BiH	Ensure that government support for outreach to street children extends beyond Sarajevo.	2019 – 2020

In 2020, Botswana made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government provided emergency food assistance packages to vulnerable families, reaching over 47,000 households affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. Criminal law enforcement officials also initiated two prosecutions related to the human trafficking of children for commercial sexual exploitation. However, children in Botswana are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, cattle herding, and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Key gaps remain in the country's legal framework, including the lack of a minimum age for compulsory education and list of hazardous work activities for children. In addition, social programs do not always reach intended child labor victims, especially those engaged in cattle herding and domestic work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Botswana are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, cattle herding, and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Botswana. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		100.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2013, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (4)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2021. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding and spraying of cattle (6-9)
Services	Street work, including vending (10) Domestic work (8-11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in herding cattle and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3) Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,12-14)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

There is little published information regarding the sectors and types of activities in which children are working. Children in Botswana are victims of commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (13,15) Research indicates that some children residing in the Dukwi Refugee Camp are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation as they await decisions regarding their refugee status. (10) Some parents in poor rural communities send their children to work as domestic servants in cities, or at farms or cattle posts, increasing their vulnerability to forced labor. (3,13) Children, particularly children from the San minority ethnic group, work on commercial farms in the Ghanzi Region, tending to and herding cattle. (6,8) An NGO reported that one of the work activities children perform on commercial farms is the "dipping" (spraying) of cattle, a process to remove ticks and flies. Such work may expose children to hazardous chemicals. (8) On some farms, employers may withhold food rations unless children perform work. (3,6,8,13)

Botswana law provides for free basic education; however, the costs of books, uniforms, and other materials are prohibitive for poorer families. (16,17) In addition, school enrollment requires an identity document, such as a birth certificate or national identity card. The government allows all children to enroll in primary education, even without these documents; however, migrant children and children born outside of health care facilities, or whose parents did not register them at birth, may not be able to enroll in secondary schools or register for national exams. (18) Schools also often lack adequate resources for students with disabilities, and children of the San ethnic group have limited access to educational facilities, including traveling long distances to reach schools and encountering language barriers and prejudice within schools, which cause children to drop out. (10,17,19,20) Moreover, pervasive physical and sexual abuse within schools, by both teachers and peers, contributes to children leaving education early and becoming vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (6,10,21,22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Botswana has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Botswana's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a compulsory education age that is consistent with the minimum age for work and inadequate legal protections for children from commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 2 and 107 of the Employment Act (23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 2 and 110 of the Employment Act (23)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2 and 71 of the Employment Act; Section 114 of the Children's Act; Articles 9 and 10 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act; Section 262 of the Penal Code (23-26)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 114 of the Children's Act; Article 175 of the Penal Code; Articles 9 and 10 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act (24-26)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 25 and 57–59 of the Children's Act (24)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 60 of the Children's Act (24)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 17 of the Botswana Defence Force Act (27)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 26 of the Children's Act (24)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 18 of the Children's Act (24)

* No conscription (27)

The Employment Act allows children to conduct light work activities at age 14, with restrictions on the number of hours a child can work during a single day and in a week and a requirement that the Labor Commissioner approve any forms of work outside of domestic service; however, the government has yet to determine the conditions or types of light work activities permitted for children. (16) The Employment Act also prohibits night work and hazardous underground work for children, but the government has not promulgated regulations identifying hazardous work activities for children. Although the government compiled a comprehensive list of hazardous occupations, the list has not yet been approved. (17,23,28) In addition, legal protections for children from commercial sexual exploitation do not meet international standards because the use of children for prostitution and pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. (24)

Despite the provision of free basic education, there is not a compulsory education age, which may increase children's vulnerability to child labor. (17,29)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Labor Productivity and Skills Development (MELSD)	Enforces child labor laws and conducts inspections under the Employment Act. (1,23) Facilitates coordination with local leaders and law enforcement officers. Posts labor inspectors to District Council offices to carry out their duties. (1) Coordinates with the Ministry of Local Government and Rural Development (MLGRD) to respond to cases of child labor and place children in safe environments. (10,30)
District and Municipal Council Child Welfare Divisions	Enforce child labor laws at the local levels. (1) The District and Municipal Council Child Welfare Divisions report to the Social Protection Department under the MLGRD (31)
Botswana Police Service (BPS)	Responds to cases of labor law violation, including child labor violations, based on referrals from MELSD. (7) Investigates cases of the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation of children and child trafficking. (1)
Ministry of Defense, Justice, and Security (MDJS)	Monitors suspected human trafficking cases and leads the Human Trafficking (Prohibition) Committee. (1)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Botswana took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment, Labor Productivity and Skills Development (MELSD) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial and human resource allocation.

Under the Employment Act, child labor violations are criminal offenses, resulting in 12 months imprisonment; as such, Botswana labor inspectors refer violations to police for investigation and imposition of penalties. (23)

The government did not provide complete information on the number of labor inspectors. (7) Research found that the labor inspectorate lacks sufficient resources to adequately enforce labor laws. (7) Some of Botswana's largest administrative districts have only 1 to 2 labor inspectors. (6,7) The government reported 54 labor inspectors participated in a workshop on modern inspection techniques during the reporting period, but did not say whether this number comprised the entire inspectorate. (31) While the complete number of labor inspectors is unknown, according to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Botswana would need to employ about 78 labor inspectors. (10,33,34) The inadequate number of labor inspectors likely inhibits enforcement of the agricultural sector; for example, there was only one labor inspector in Ghanzi District, a district that spans 117,000 square kilometers and where there are reports of child labor at farms and cattle posts. (6,7) Furthermore, labor inspectors are not authorized to inspect domestic households, and some labor inspectors have faced obstacles in accessing large farms, such as locked gates or denial of entry, inhibiting their ability to identify underage workers. (6,10)

Research indicates that the government significantly curtailed labor inspections in accordance with pandemic and public health mandates that restricted movement. As a result, labor inspections were mostly in response to complaints. (11)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Botswana took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including investigation planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (10)	Unknown (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (7)

The government did not provide complete information on its criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, including trainings of new investigators and refresher courses, number of convictions, and whether it imposed penalties for criminal child labor offenses. (7) During the reporting period, criminal law enforcement officials opened two separate investigations related to the human trafficking of two Zimbabwean children for commercial sexual exploitation, initiating prosecutions against the alleged offenders. (35) Research, however, could not determine whether there were additional investigations, prosecutions, and convictions related to the worst forms of child labor. (7) MELSD and the Botswana Police Service operate toll-free hotlines to report offenses, including child exploitation, but the government did not provide information on the number of calls related to the worst forms of child labor. (7,14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Advisory Committee on Child Labor	Oversees child labor issues and reports to the government three to four times a year. Includes representatives from government agencies, various NGOs, worker federations, and employer organizations. (1) Led by MELSD, with participation from the MLGRD, Ministry of Finance, and the Office of the President. (18) Research was unable to determine whether the Advisory Committee on Child Labor was active during the reporting period. (7)
Child Labor Committees	Identify child laborers at the village level. Include social workers; school teachers; members of the Village Development Committees, which are local government structures; labor inspectors; and community leaders, including chiefs and priests. (1) Research was unable to determine whether Child Labor Committees were active during the reporting period. (7)
Human Trafficking (Prohibition) Committee	Provides an inter-ministerial reporting and referral mechanism for children subjected to human trafficking. (18) Led by MDJS, with representation from MELSD, BPS, the Directorate of Public Prosecutions, and ministries responsible for gender affairs, social protection, immigration, and transportation. (1,36) The Human Trafficking (Prohibition) Committee met during the reporting period to oversee the integration of the Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan into other national strategies. (35)

The MDJS reported the need for technical support, training, and increased coordination among agencies to address human trafficking. It indicated that referral and rehabilitation services for victims of human trafficking are also needed. (1,14)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Outlines the government's plan to address child labor through legislation and policy, and includes awareness-raising programs and training on child labor for relevant stakeholders and implementers. (1) Research could not determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor during the reporting period. (7)

Botswana

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Policy	Description
Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan (2017–2020)	Outlined the government's plan to implement the Anti-Human Trafficking Act of 2015. Established goals to strengthen national coordination mechanisms to combat and prevent human trafficking through public awareness and cooperation among government departments and civil society. (37) During the reporting period, the government adopted measures to align the Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan with other national planning strategies. (35)

Child labor elimination and prevention strategies are not included in some national policies, including the Education and Training Sector Strategic Plan and the Botswana National Youth Policy. (38,39)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Government-Funded Programs to Prevent and Eliminate Child Labor†	Government-funded programs that aim to prevent child labor and increase protections for vulnerable children. Includes NGO-run shelters, with financial support from the government, that cater to human trafficking victims, including children; the National School Feeding Program, which provides meals to children (grades one through seven) in all public primary schools in the country; the Remote Area Dweller Program, which provides a second meal to school children living in remote areas and children from marginalized communities; the Orphan Care Program, which provides orphans with meals and subsidizes the cost of school fees and transportation costs; and the Needy Children and Needy Students program, managed by the MLGRD, which provides families with free meals, toiletries, and school uniforms. (1,40) During the pandemic, the government distributed food assistance packages to vulnerable families. (8,9) As of April 2020, 47,493 households had received assistance under the temporary program. (41) However, research could not determine whether activities were taken to implement other government-funded programs during the reporting period, including the National School Feeding Program, the Remote Area Dweller Program, the Orphan Care Program, and the Needy Children and Needy Students programs.

† Program is funded by the Government of Botswana.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (42)

There are no official government-run shelters to assist child victims of human trafficking; the government authorized and partially funds NGO-run shelters, but it does not provide its own services. (1,14) An NGO reported that established shelters lack resources to attend to the needs of older children. (9)

Although Botswana has programs that target child labor, the design and implementation of these programs are insufficient to fully address the scope of the problem, especially in commercial sexual exploitation, cattle herding, and domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Botswana (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish provisions specifying the types of light work acceptable for children age 14.	2016 – 2020
	Determine by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, after consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that the use of children in prostitution and pornographic performances are criminally prohibited.	2020
	Establish a compulsory education age consistent with the minimum age of employment.	2010 – 2020

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information regarding labor law enforcement efforts, including the number of labor inspectors.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that labor law enforcement officers receive refresher trainings.	2020
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate has sufficient human and financial resources to adequately enforce labor laws, including on farms and cattle posts.	2020
	Ensure the number of labor inspectors in Botswana meets the ILO's technical guidance.	2020
	Ensure that labor inspectors have authorization to worksite premises and are able to conduct inspections at farms and domestic households.	2018 – 2020
	Publish information about criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, including the training of investigators, number of convictions, and whether there were penalties imposed for criminal child labor offenses.	2017 – 2020
	Publish information on the number of complaints related to the worst forms of child labor received through the Ministry of Employment, Labor Productivity and Skills Development and the Botswana Police Service toll-free hotlines.	2020
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2018 – 2020
	Ensure that the Ministry of Defense, Justice, and Security receives sufficient training and that there is increased coordination among agencies to address victims of human trafficking.	2017 – 2020
	Ensure that there are adequate referral and rehabilitation services for human trafficking victims.	2018 – 2020
Government Policies	Publish activities undertaken to implement the National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor during the reporting period.	2017 – 2020
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into relevant policies, such as the Education and Training Sector Strategic Plan and the Botswana National Youth Policy.	2011 – 2020
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2020
	Enhance educational access for all children by defraying costs for uniforms and school materials.	2020
	Enhance efforts to remove educational barriers and make education accessible for all children by taking measures to reduce travel distances to reach schools, address language barriers and ethnic discrimination, prevent physical and sexual violence in schools, increase resources for students with disabilities, and ensure that children can enroll in school regardless of their ability to provide identification documents.	2020
	Publish activities undertaken to implement government-funded social programs during the reporting, including the National School Feeding Program, the Remote Area Dweller Program, the Orphan Care Program, and the Needy Children and Needy Students programs.	2020
	Establish official government-run shelters to assist child victims, while ensuring that shelters have sufficient resources to attend to the care of older children.	2020
	Develop programs to fully address the scope of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and cattle herding.	2012 – 2020

In 2020, Brazil made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government published two updated versions of the national "Dirty List" containing information on employers that the Ministry of Economy had found to be using slave labor, including that of children. The Labor Prosecutor's Office, the Federal Highway Police, and the Brazilian Association for the Defense of Women, Children, and Youth signed an agreement to incorporate human trafficking issues in the Mapear Project, which maps points along Brazil's federal highways that are high risk for the sexual exploitation of children and adolescents. Moreover, the National Commission for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor was re-established after its dismantlement in 2019, and the government approved a constitutional amendment to increase support for the Fund for the Maintenance and Development of Basic Education and the Appreciation of Teaching Professionals, with the aim of leveling the amount spent per student, per year, across the country. The government also secured a $1 billion loan for Bolsa Família to provide benefits to 3 million more participants, including 990,000 children. However, children in Brazil are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the production of coffee. Although Brazil made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, prohibitions against child trafficking require the use of threats, violence, coercion, fraud, or abuse to be established for the crime of child trafficking and, therefore, do not meet international labor standards. Furthermore, the reported number of labor inspectors is likely not sufficient to provide adequate coverage of the workforce, and local governments lack the capacity to fully implement and monitor the National Program to Eradicate Child Labor and other social protection programs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Brazil are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the production of coffee. (4,5) The 2019 National Household Survey, published in December 2020, estimated that approximately 1.8 million children ages 5 to 17 engaged in child labor—337,000 children ages 5 to 13, and 1.4 million adolescents ages 14 to 17. Of the 1.8 million children found in situations of child labor, 706,000 children were found to be working in hazardous conditions. (6) The survey also revealed a decrease of approximately 200,000 child laborers since 2016. (6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Brazil. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

	Use by gangs to perform illicit activities, including drug trafficking, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (32,38-40)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The COVID-19 pandemic severely affected the Brazilian economy, resulting in an increase in the number of children engaging in child labor. In June 2020, the Special Secretariat for Social Security and Labor reported a 271 percent increase in the number of child labor cases across the country. (41) Research conducted by UNICEF, in collaboration with the Labor Prosecutor's Office in São Paulo, also showed a 26 percent increase in the number of children engaged in child labor in the state between April and July 2020. (42,43) In addition, research found an increase in child labor in street work, including begging and vending, and labor prosecutors investigated several cases of children working for food delivery apps. (34,43,44)

The overall scope and magnitude of commercial sexual exploitation of children is unknown; however, in 2020, the Federal Highway Police, in collaboration with Childhood Brazil, published its biennial report identifying 3,651 areas along highways throughout the country where children are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation. Areas are assessed according to the risk of exploitation and the implementation of preventative mechanisms and strategies within each state. (3) According to the report, the states of Paraná, Minas Gerais, Bahia, Goiás and Rio Grande do Sul have the highest number of these vulnerable areas. Furthermore, the recent report also indicated a 0.4% decrease in these vulnerable areas in relation to its previous publication. (3) Child sex tourism is particularly common in tourist and coastal areas, and girls from other South American countries are also exploited for commercial sex in Brazil. (36,45)

The ILO and the Labor Prosecution Office (MPT) of Brazil published a report indicating that at least 8,000 children and adolescents in the country were found to be working in the production of cocoa. The study was conducted July 2017 through June 2018, and aims to expose companies and hold them accountable for their child labor and forced labor violations. (46,47)

Research found that some schools, particularly those in rural areas, are overcrowded, have poor infrastructure, and lack basic resources and teachers. (31,48) Although birth registration documents are required for school enrollment under Brazilian law, school registration cannot be denied to children lacking proper documentation. State and municipal governments implement this law and assist vulnerable families with acquiring birth registration documents; however, occasionally there may be delays in processing school registration while children are being registered for birth certificates. (12,49) In 2016, the Senate approved draft legislation that would alter the national Education Law to remove the requirement of birth certificates for school registration. Subsequently, the draft legislation was also approved by the Education Committee in 2018, and by the Constitution, Justice and Citizenship Committee in 2019. (50,51) The legislation is currently awaiting a final vote in Brazil's Chamber of Deputies. (12,50,51)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Brazil has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Brazil's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 403 of the Labor Code (52)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 2 of the Hazardous Work List (53)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Work List (53)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 149 and 149-A of the Penal Code (54,55)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Article 149-A of the Penal Code; Article 244-A of the Child and Adolescent Statute (55,56)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 218-A, 218-B, 227 and 228 of the Penal Code; Articles 240, 241 and 244-A of the Child and Adolescent Statute (54,56)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 33 and 40 of the National System of Public Policies on Drugs; Article 244-B of the Child and Adolescent Statute (56,57)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 127 of the Military Service Regulation (58)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 5 of the Military Service Law (59)

Brazil

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 4 of the National Education Law (60)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 4 of the National Education Law (60)

The national "Dirty List," which contains information on employers that the Ministry of Economy has found to be using slave labor, including that of children, was updated in April and October 2020. The April edition included 184 employers found to be using slave labor, 41 of which were new additions, while the October edition contained only 3 new employers. (61) The lower number of additions in the October version reflected the adoption of restrictive measures related to the pandemic, including for labor inspections. (61)

Prohibitions against child trafficking require the use of threats, violence, coercion, fraud, or abuse to be established for the crime of child trafficking and, therefore, do not meet international labor standards. (55) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (52,60)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Economy	Oversees the Special Secretariat of Social Security and Labor, which is responsible for the enforcement of labor laws, including those related to child labor and forced labor. Its Under Secretariat for Labor Inspection is responsible for conducting unannounced inspections at sites in which forced labor is suspected, including forced child labor. (41) Upon finding children in hazardous working conditions, Ministry of Economy officials immediately remove these children and return them to their families or refer them to social services providers. (62) In 2020, the Ministry launched the IPÉ system, a complaint mechanism developed in conjunction with ILO, which centralizes all forced labor complaints. All complaints are forwarded directly to the Inspection Division for the Eradication of Slave Labor overseen by the Special Secretariat of Social Security and Labor. (63)
Labor Prosecution Office (MPT)	Prosecutes child labor and forced labor violations by working with prosecutors from its National Committee to Combat Child and Adolescent Labor, an in-house body that coordinates efforts to combat child labor. Collects fines for forced labor violations and allocates funds for initiatives that address child labor and forced labor. (41) Led by the Ministry of Public Union. (41,64)
Military, Civil, and Federal Police	The Military Police operate at the local level and refer cases to the Civil Police for investigation. The Federal Police, in turn, work on interstate or international cases and maintain a database to track cases of human trafficking for sexual exploitation. (12) The Federal Highway Police also help identify areas in which children are at high risk of commercial sexual exploitation. (3,41)
Ministry of Justice and Public Security	Leads efforts to combat human trafficking, and oversees the operations of Advanced Posts ( Postos Avançados ) and state-run Anti-Trafficking Coordination Centers ( Núcleos de Enfrentamento ). Provides guidance to federal, state, and local government officials on referrals for victims of human trafficking, including to Anti-Trafficking Coordination Centers, Specialized Social Assistance Reference Centers, and NGOs. (41) Eight Advanced Posts operate throughout the country to identify human traffickers and potential victims in high-transit areas, including airports and bus stations. (41)
Special Courts for Childhood and Youth	Oversee legislative issues related to the eradication of child labor, and guarantee the fair and adequate entry of adolescents into the labor force, in compliance with the 1990 Child and Adolescent Statute. Provide protection and care to victims through court psychologists. (41,65)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Brazil took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Economy that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2019	2020

In 2020, labor inspectors received three training modules focused on addressing child labor issues. These training modules were part of a 4-module series developed in 2019, and totaled around 144 hours of training. (70) Two of the modules in the series are directed at the study of concepts and national and international legislation related to child labor and the other two address the performance of labor inspections in combating child labor. Of the 3 modules offered in 2020, 435 labor inspectors participated in Module I, 286 in Module II, and 60 in Module III. (70) Moreover, the four-module series has been added to the permanent course catalog at the National School of Labor Inspection and will be updated as necessary and offered to current and new inspectors. (70)

According to the Under Secretariat for Labor Inspection, 810 children and adolescents were removed from situations of child labor across the country during the reporting period. (41) The Municipal Secretariat to Combat Poverty in the city of Salvador also reported identifying 182 cases of child labor during the Carnival festivities, which represented a 22 percent decrease during the same period in 2019, and identified an additional 82 children and adolescents engaged in child labor from March to June 2020. Moreover, in November 2020, the Municipal Secretariat conducted an awareness campaign called "Protection League" on how to identify possible cases of child labor and alerting families to the risks of exposing children to child labor. (41,71)

In 2020, the MPT started investigating an increase in cases of children rolling straw cigarettes, particularly in the state of Minas Gerais. The tobacco industry is also being investigated for their involvement in this increase, which reportedly has worsened during the pandemic. (29,41)

Upon finding children in situations of child labor, including in hazardous working conditions, the Under Secretariat for Labor Inspection immediately removes them from the situation, while also collecting relevant data related to the violation. These data are forwarded to social service providers within the child and adolescent protection network, and reports are sent to the Public Ministry for further guidance. (68) In addition, children over age 14 may be referred to the country's apprenticeship program. (68)

Brazil

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Brazil's workforce, which includes approximately 104.2 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Brazil would employ about 6,947 labor inspectors. (72-74)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Brazil took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including holding violators of child labor laws accountable in accordance with the law.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (12)	Yes (41)

In November 2020, the MPT, Federal Highway Police, and the Brazilian Association for the Defense of Women, Children, and Youth signed an agreement to incorporate the topic of human trafficking in the Mapear Project, which maps high-risk areas for the sexual exploitation of children and adolescents along Brazil's federal highways. The agreement also aims to increase research on human trafficking with the goal of creating more efficient methodologies toward combating this crime. (75)

While the government did not provide comprehensive data on criminal law enforcement efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor, the Civil Police of Paraná arrested 14 people for child pornography during operation "Comprehensive Protection." The operation was the largest of its kind conducted in the state, involving 151 police officers serving 24 search and seizure warrants in 16 cities. (41,76) In addition, the Federal Criminal Court of São Paulo sentenced an Ecuadorian couple to 8 years in prison, in addition to fines, for subjecting workers, including adolescents, to forced labor conditions in a clothing factory in São Paulo. The couple was also convicted and sentenced for international human trafficking crimes for recruiting and bringing these victims into Brazil. (77) Research indicates that the victims lived in degrading conditions and were subjected to restricted mobility, surveillance, and had their personal documents confiscated. (77)

The Ministry of Justice, in collaboration with the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement in Brasilia, also launched its seventh phase of "Operation Protected Childhood" to combat online child pornography. The latest phase resulted in 109 arrests for crimes related to child pornography throughout 10 states. (78,79) The Civil Police in Minas Gerais also conducted "Operation Angel" aimed at combating the sexual exploitation of children. During the reporting period, investigations over the course of 6 months uncovered the sexual exploitation of girls ages 13–15, after being lured through a website with the promise of gifts. (41) The victims were photographed nude, often times after being drugged, and the material was posted to websites. Because of these investigations, the police arrested four suspects. (41)

During the reporting period, the UNODC began executing its 3-year regional TRACK4TIP program, supported by the U.S. Department of State, across South America and the Caribbean. The program aims to enhance the criminal justice response to human trafficking along migration routes throughout the region. (80,81) In October 2020, Brazilian and Paraguayan investigators and prosecutors held virtual meetings to launch the program. (80)

Although the Judiciary, the MPT, and the federal and state police have databases to track cases of human trafficking for sexual exploitation, information from these databases is not shared in a standardized way with relevant agencies across the country. (49,82) In addition, reports indicate that the judicial system does not sufficiently hold perpetrators accountable for child labor law violations, including forced child labor, which may lead to a sense of impunity among violators. (14,45)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor*	Leads implementation of the National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Working Adolescents. Although the commission was eliminated in 2019, it was re-established in December 2020 and restructured from its original multipartite composition to a tripartite structure made up of six government, six employer, and six employee representatives. (41) Government representatives include the ministries of Economy, Education, Citizenship, Health, Agriculture and Supply, and Women, Family and Human Rights. In addition, six special representatives are allowed to participate in meetings as observers, including from government agencies and national and international organizations. (83)
Inter-Sectoral Commission to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents	Creates proposals for programs and public policies to address sexual violence against children and adolescents. In addition, organizes and disseminates research and guidance on combating this crime. (84) Led by the Ministry of Women, Family and Human Rights. (84,85) In 2020, the government reduced the number of entities participating in this committee by half through Decree No.10.482. (86)
National Council for the Rights of Children and Adolescents	Coordinates the implementation of policies to protect children's and adolescents' rights, including the National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Working Adolescents. Led by the Ministry of Justice's Special Secretariat for Human Rights. (87) In 2020, in response to the pandemic, the Ministry of Economy and MPT coordinated to ensure that apprentices ages 16–17 were allowed to continue to receive remuneration and able to continue their apprenticeships in a virtual setting, whenever possible. (41,88)
Labor Justice Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents	Coordinates efforts to eliminate child labor and ensure that adolescents have decent work opportunities. (89) Includes 11 representatives from the Superior Labor Court and regional labor courts. (90) In June 2020, Bahia State's Secretariat of Justice and Human Rights organized an awareness-raising campaign called "COVID-19: Now more than ever, protect children and adolescents from child labor," aimed at preventing the potential increase of child labor cases during a period of increased unemployment and poverty. (91) In October 2020, in the state of Rio de Janeiro, the bar association Ordem dos Advogados , in partnership with the Association of Labor Justice Magistrates and other institutions, also launched a joint campaign against child labor in the state. The campaign aims to circulate videos recorded on social media platforms by known television personalities on the protection of the fundamental rights of children and adolescents. (92)
National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Led by the National Secretariat for Justice within the Ministry of Justice and Public Security. Coordinates activities to address human trafficking and advises the Ministry on public policies related to human trafficking, including child trafficking. (45,93) Comprising seven voting members distributed among government and civil society. (45) During the reporting period, the committee signed a technical agreement with the National Council of Justice, which aims to strengthen the National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and focuses on the connections between organized crime, corruption, and human trafficking. (94)
Anti-Trafficking Coordination Centers ( Núcleos de Enfrentamento )	Coordinate activities to combat human trafficking, including medical, legal, and psychological assistance, in 16 states and the Federal District. (12) In 2020, the Ministry of Justice and Public Security partnered with IOM on a project called Euro Front to create a platform that will allow for the sharing of human trafficking information between states. (80) This new system, which is expected to be completed by July 2021, will also provide participating states with standardized reports, improved record-keeping, and real-time status of human trafficking cases. (80)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was re-established during the reporting period.

Rio de Janeiro's Secretariat of Social Assistance and Human Rights published Decree 47739, which established a new Department of Childhood and Adolescence to create public policies related to children and adolescents. The new department will also oversee pre-existing social services programs offered by Social Assistance Reference Centers. (95) In addition, the Vitoria da Conquista city government in Bahia state published a decree establishing a Committee for the Network of Social Protection of Children and Adolescents. This new committee will include representatives from several government and social services entities, including the MPT, and focus on creating public policies related to the rights of children and adolescents, including the prevention of the worst forms of child labor. (96)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding and implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Working Adolescents III (2019–2022)	Aims to prioritize the prevention and eradication of child labor and the protection of adolescent workers; raise public awareness of child labor and its worst forms, including the risks of child labor; ensure relevant legislative compliance related to the prohibitions of child labor and its worst forms; strengthen family security and stability through the increase of employment opportunities; ensure access to quality education and establish health support systems to child labor victims. (97) In 2020, activities were not undertaken to implement the National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Working Adolescents due to the termination of the National Commission for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor in 2019. (83)
National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents (2013–2020)	Identified strategies to prevent the sexual exploitation of children, protect children's rights, and assist child victims. (98) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents during the reporting period.
National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking III (2018–2022)	Outlines the government's strategy to address human trafficking. Includes 58 objectives expanding 6 themes: policy management, information management, training, accountability, victim assistance and prevention, and public awareness raising. (45,99) In May 2020, the Federal Highway Police and NGO Childhood Brazil inspected 116 areas throughout 9 states identified as high risk for commercial sexual exploitation of children and adolescents. (41,100)
Federal Pact for the Eradication of Forced Labor	Aims to establish a database on forced labor, create state-level commissions to combat forced labor, and strengthen inter-agency coordination. Led by the Ministry of Justice's Special Secretariat for Human Rights, and currently signed by 23 of the 27 states. (45,101,102) In 2020, the Labor Inspectors Union began the campaign, "Child labor; a reality few can see," to bring awareness to the challenge of eradicating child labor in Brazil by 2025. (41)
National Education Plan (2014–2024)	Aims to expand access to education and improve the quality of education by allocating 10 percent of Brazil's gross domestic product to public education by 2024. (103) In August 2020, Congress approved a constitutional amendment increasing funding to the Fund for the Maintenance and Development of Basic Education and Appreciation of Teaching Professionals (FUNDEB), and making it a permanent instrument for financing public education. FUNDEB comprises funds from the 26 states and the Federal District. (104) The amendment aims to decrease inequality of resources between education networks by leveling the amount spent per student per year across the country. (104)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (105,106)

Despite the increased funding provided by the constitutional amendment, research found that greater resources are needed to ensure adequate implementation of the National Education Plan. (107,108)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to assist child victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Program to Eradicate Child Labor ( Programa de Erradicação do Trabalho Infantil [PETI] )†	Ministry of Citizenship (MOC) social assistance program that combats child labor through awareness-raising activities, victim identification and protection, and conditional cash transfers. (109) To receive program benefits, family participants must ensure that children are not working and maintain at least 85 percent school attendance. (110) In 2020, conducted awareness-raising campaign throughout municipal, state, and national level institutions. The campaign was coordinated virtually and involved a series of initiatives aimed at raising awareness about protecting the rights of children and adolescents. (41) The campaign also raised awareness of the Dial 100 Human Rights hotline, a human rights violation hotline that directs child labor complaints to appropriate institutions for followup. (41,111)
Family Stipend ( Bolsa Família )†	MOC program that provides families living in poverty with cash transfers. (112) In 2020, additional emergency aid was provided to combat the financial effects of the pandemic, and in October 2020, the World Bank approved a $1 billion loan to provide Bolsa Familia benefits to 3 million more participants, including 990,000 children. (113,114)
Specialized Social Assistance Reference Centers†	MOC program that provides vulnerable populations, including victims of child labor and commercial sexual exploitation, with psychological, social, and legal services. (115) During Carnival 2020, from February 15 to March 1, the Municipal Secretary of Assistance and Social Development in São Paulo carried out an awareness-raising campaign against child labor and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. During the same period, more than 600 socio-educational counselors, in the regions where the parades took place, worked to identify cases of child labor and potential child victims of sexual exploitation. (41)
South-South Cooperation Projects†	Government of Brazil-funded projects implemented by ILO to combat child labor and promote South-South cooperation. (116) In May 2020, representatives from the ILO, Brazilian Cooperation Agency, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and Brazilian Cotton Institute held a virtual meeting to discuss the Decent Work Cotton Project's 2019 progress report and approve the project's 2020 work plan. In addition, a network of labor inspectors was created to discuss labor issues with other Lusophone countries and USDOL during the reporting period. (117)
Roadmap to Assist Victims of Forced Labor*	Creates an integrated network of social services providers and standardizes assistance to victims of slave labor across the country. Led by the Ministry for Women, Family, and Human Rights. (120) In 2020, the Roadmap was disseminated to the states of Santa Catarina, Bahia, Rio de Janeiro, Maranhão, Ceará and Mato Grosso do Sul. (120)
USDOL-Funded Projects	Cooperation on Fair, Free, Equitable Employment (COFFEE) , a $2.2 million project implemented by Verité in Brazil, Colombia, and Mexico to develop tools for businesses to establish systems to prevent, detect, and combat child and forced labor in coffee supply chains. Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor , a global project with a $225,000 component in Brazil that supported a National Forced Labor Survey. As of the publication of this report, the results of the survey have not yet been published. (118,119) For additional information, please see our website .

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Brazil.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (121-126)

In July 2020, the Ministry for Women, Family, and Human Rights began implementing the Roadmap to Assist Victims of Forced Labor to the states of Santa Catarina, Bahia, Rio de Janeiro, Maranhão, Ceará, and Mato Grosso do Sul. The National Roadmap aims to create an integrated network of social services providers, support social services entities, and guarantee better results toward eradicating slave labor across the country. (120)

Throughout the reporting period, several states conducted awareness-raising campaigns addressing human trafficking and forced labor. As part of the Freedom in the Air campaign, the MPT and Infraero, the government's oversight organization for airports, signed an agreement to train airport professionals on how to recognize potential cases of human trafficking and the process for alerting law enforcement. (80) In addition, the Forum to Combat Trafficking in Persons in the State of Santa Catarina implemented an anti-human trafficking campaign in its capital city, which included awareness-raising messages in thirty local buses, mobile health posts, the local samba performance venue, a bus terminal, and a payment location for a local toll road. (80)

Because the National Program to Eradicate Child Labor is decentralized, municipal governments are responsible for implementation and monitoring, and must report back to state and federal governments. Challenges include responding to the needs of program participants, complex local contexts and geographic areas, excessive program requirements, and high staff turnover. (49) In addition, many states reported a lack of resources to adequately assist, identify, refer, and support child trafficking victims, and many did not have specialized shelters for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (36)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Brazil (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws do not require the use of threats, violence, coercion, fraud, or abuse to establish the crime of child trafficking.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2020
Enforcement	Publish information regarding the number of labor inspections conducted, number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, number of child labor penalties, including penalties imposed and collected, number of criminal investigations conducted, and number of violations found.	2012 – 2020
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure relevant enforcement agencies are able to coordinate on their efforts to collect data on cases regarding human trafficking for sexual exploitation, and ensure that the data are disaggregated by victims' ages.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that all violators of the worst forms of child labor violations are held accountable in accordance with the law.	2015 – 2020
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Working Adolescents and the National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents.	2020
	Provide adequate resources to ensure that the goals outlined in the National Education Plan are achieved.	2015 – 2020
Social Programs	Remove barriers to education, including by ensuring an adequate number of trained teachers, improving school infrastructure, and taking steps to enroll children in rural areas.	2013 – 2020
	Expand the accessibility and speedy processing of birth registration services.	2013 – 2020
	Ensure the government publishes the results of the National Forced Labor Survey.	2020
	Support local governments in the implementation and monitoring of the National Program to Eradicate Child Labor.	2009 – 2020
	Provide adequate resources to state governments to ensure that child trafficking victims receive appropriate social services, and ensure the availability of specialized shelters for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.	2012 – 2020

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in the British Virgin Islands, in 2020 the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The British Virgin Islands does not have a list of hazardous work prohibited for children and does not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the British Virgin Islands. (1-4) Table 1 provides one key indicator on children's education in the British Virgin Islands. Data on key indicators on children's work are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Primary Completion Rate (%)		79.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (2)
All other data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2021. (3)

The cost of uniforms, books, and lunches prevents some children from attending school. In addition, violence in schools can deter children from attending. (2,4) Children not in school may be vulnerable to engage in child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (BOTs) recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but are not constitutionally part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (5) Domestic UK law does not generally apply unless explicitly extended to the British Virgin Islands. Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that territory. (5) The following Conventions have been extended to and accepted by the British Virgin Islands. (Table 2).

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of the British Virgin Islands has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in the British Virgin Islands' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 3. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 128 of the Labor Code (6)

Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 201A of the Criminal Code (8)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 284A of the Criminal Code; Article 130 of the Labor Code (6,8)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Section 2b of the Education Amendment Act of 2014; Division 3, Paragraph 28 of the Education Act (9,10)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 22 of the Constitution Order; Section 17 of the Education Act (7,9)

* No conscription (11)

† No standing military (11)

In the British Virgin Islands, the Labor Code specifies that hazardous work be defined by the Minister of Labor, but the Minister of Labor has not defined hazardous work for children. (5,12,13) There is also no criminal prohibition against using children in illicit activities. As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (6,9,10)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the British Virgin Islands have established an institutional mechanism for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforces labor laws and collects data and statistics on violations of the Labor Code. (6)

In the British Virgin Islands, the Ministry of Labor proactively plans and conducts labor inspections. There is one labor inspector who assesses penalties for labor law violations. (12,14) The labor inspector may assess penalties for labor law violations during the initial inspection and is permitted to conduct unannounced inspections. The existence of only one labor inspector is a barrier to uncovering additional violations; however, the British Virgin Islands makes the most use of its single labor inspector by conducting annual inspections on newly established businesses and worksites and those reported by employees or other stakeholders for possible violations. (12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor. However, the Government of the British Virgin Islands has established child protection programs promoting children's rights, which may contribute to the prevention of child labor. (15,16)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor in the British Virgin Islands (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify international conventions on child labor.	2020
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2012 – 2020
	Ensure that the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs, is criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2020
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that all children can attend school by eliminating prohibitive school costs and violence in schools.	2018 – 2020

In 2020, Burkina Faso made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. With the support of UNICEF programs, 1,993 children who were victims of child labor and its worst forms received care and services following their removal from work in artisanal gold mining. The government also created a National Coordination Committee to enact the 2019–2023 National Strategy to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor, and it continued to carry out a new National Survey on Child Labor. However, children in Burkina Faso are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in farming and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in artisanal gold mining. The Labor Code does not identify the activities in which children may engage in light work. The government also lacked resources for the enforcement of child labor laws and did not release information on its criminal and labor enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Burkina Faso are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in farming and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in artisanal gold mining. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Burkina Faso. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Burkina Faso is a destination, transit point, and source for child trafficking to and from other West African countries. Child trafficking also occurs within Burkina Faso. (1,2,21,22) Children engage in artisanal gold mining, which is particularly arduous and often exposes children to dangerous chemicals such as cyanide and mercury used in the gold extraction process. (1,6,10,15,23) Burkina Faso is the third largest producer of cotton in Africa, with a reported 250,000 children involved in growing the crop, primarily on small family farms. (24) Children working in the cotton sector are exposed to many health risks, including exposure to pesticides, injury from the use of sharp tools, animal bites, and respiratory issues. (5) In addition, continued insecurity has led to the mass displacement of over one million IDPs in the last 2 years, including a large number of vulnerable children. (2,9,24)

Although the Law Orienting the Education System mandates free education until age 16, the costs of uniforms, school-related fees, teacher shortages, and school infrastructure shortfalls in rural areas hinder children’s access to education. (9,25,26) At the institutional level, there is a lack of infrastructure, leading some communities to create makeshift structures to serve as schools. Teacher shortages are common, especially in post-primary levels. (9) Part of this deficit is linked to poor personnel management, which results in the concentration of staff in towns to the detriment of rural areas. At the economic level, poverty constitutes the main factor restricting access to education, as public schools are not completely free; the fees for all levels of education sometimes pose heavy burdens on families. (9) A dearth of transportation, coupled with transportation costs, continues to restrict access to schooling in urban areas. At the social level, school violence exists and is exacerbated by the current security crisis. (9)

Children in Burkina Faso must have birth documentation (a birth certificate or supplemental birth judgment) to register for school. (9,27) A student may begin schooling without documentation, but documentation must be provided before the end of the first quarter following the child’s registration. (9) Because more than one in five children do not have a birth certificate, many children in Burkina Faso remain out of school and vulnerable to child labor. (9)

While research has found no evidence of discrimination based on ethnicity, refugees and IDPs face many education challenges, mainly due to the sudden increase in education needs in the communities hosting them. Less than 20 percent of displaced people manage to obtain school registration. (9) In some localities where armed attacks on schools have intensified, especially in the East and Sahel regions, there is a preference of some communities for other types of education such as Koranic schools. (9)

During the reporting period, the government was in the process of carrying out a new survey called the National Survey on Child Labor (Enquête Nationale sur le Travail des Enfants). This ongoing survey is conducted by the ministry in charge of labor. It began in June 2019 and ends in December 2021. Its budget, an estimated $275,353 (148,966,370 FCFA), is supported by the Government of Burkina Faso and its technical partners. (9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Burkina Faso has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Burkina Faso's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including unspecified light work provisions.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 152 of the Labor Code; Order Deviating the Age of Admission to Employment (28,29)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 149–150 of the Labor Code; Article 1 of the Hazardous Work List (28,30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 3–6 of the Hazardous Work List; Article 77 of the Mining Code (28-31)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 5 and 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 3–5 of the Law Suppressing the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography; Article 1 of the Law on Combating Trafficking of Persons and Similar Practices (28,32,33)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 1–5 and 14–15 of the Law on Combating Trafficking of Persons and Similar Practices (28,33)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 3–4, 7–10, and 20 of the Law Suppressing the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography (28,32)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code (28)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	20	Article 2 of the Decree Organizing Operations Related to Convoking the Contingent (34)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 153 and 424 of the Labor Code (28)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 4 of the Law Orienting the Education System (26)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 6 of the Law Orienting the Education System (26)

* No conscription (35)

The light work provisions in the Labor Code are not sufficiently specific to prevent children from involvement in child labor because activities that qualify as work, which may be permitted, are not identified in legislation. (28,29)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security (MFPTSS)	Enforces labor laws, including child labor laws and laws on the worst forms of child labor, and establishes a government policy to combat child labor. (36)
Ministry of Women, National Solidarity, Family, and Humanitarian Action (MFSNF)	Removes children from exploitative child labor, provides reintegration services through its mobile unit for intervention, and works with local village surveillance committees on awareness-raising efforts through participation in joint routine inspections with MFPTSS, the lead agency on child labor law enforcement. (37) Operates a free hotline to report child abuse. Maintains civil registry offices in maternity wards to register newborn babies. (38) Enlists its National Council for Childhood to oversee all policies aimed at the survival, protection, development, and participation of children in broader policy initiatives. (39)
Ministry of Territorial Administration, Decentralization, and Interior Security (MATDSI)	Through its Morals Brigade in the MATDSI National Police Force, oversees criminal cases involving children and women, which are referred to the Ministry of Justice for prosecution. (40) Assists MFPTSS by participating in joint routine inspections related to child labor in suspected human trafficking cases. (37)
Ministry of Justice	Appoints one or more judges who specialize in child protection issues to each high court to oversee juvenile court cases. Collaborates with MFSNF social workers in charge of child protection to conduct investigations on behalf of vulnerable children, including victims of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, exploitative child labor, and begging. (41)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Burkina Faso took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of human and financial resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes	Yes (9)

In 2020, the government reported that it employs 159 labor inspectors and 107 labor controllers—the first time it has published this information in recent years. (9) However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Burkina Faso's workforce, which includes over 8.5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Burkina Faso would employ roughly 213 labor inspectors. The government did not publicly release information on its labor law enforcement efforts. (9) Research indicates that 2020 data are still being compiled on labor law enforcement activities. (9)

During the reporting period, labor inspectors received training on the 2019–2023 National Strategy to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (SN/PFTE) and its Plan of Operational Action 2019–2021, and on general information concerning child labor. In addition, a session of the permanent labor administration/jurisdictions consultation framework was held in Ouagadougou on October 27, 2020, which strengthened the capacities of labor inspectors, judicial personnel, and those involved in the application of criminal labor legislation. (9) Furthermore, it ensured the convergence and complementarity of action in the application of social legislation, it identified and analyzed the constraints and obstacles to the proper application of social legislation, and it formulated opinions and recommendations for the attention of consultation stakeholders, public authorities, and social partners, on any question relating to the application of social legislation. Newly recruited labor inspectors received initial training at the National Academy for Administration and Judiciary (École Nationale d'Administration et de Magistrature) (ENAM). (9)

Research indicates that the labor inspectorate lacks adequate resources to enforce labor laws throughout the country, including the human and financial resources needed to carry out a sufficient number of preliminary labor inspections and follow-up inspections. (22,43)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Burkina Faso took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including inconsistent application of victim identification and referral procedures by authorities and frontline responders.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown	Unknown (9)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A (9)

Number of Violations Found	Unknown	Unknown (9)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown (9)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown (9)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown	Unknown (9)

Although the government has standard victim identification and referral procedures, criminal law enforcement authorities and frontline responders do not apply them uniformly. (22,43,45,46) The government did not publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts. Research could not find evidence that a referral mechanism has been set up. (9)

Research has found isolated cases of children being apprehended by the government during anti-terrorism sweeps, and has determined that in the current system, children are often treated as perpetrators. Research disclosed a case of two boys ages 8 and 12 years, respectively, who were picked up in a sweep on the Mali/Burkina border in May 2020. (9) The boys were released later that summer and returned to family with the help of a Burkinabe NGO, but their 17-year-old cousin remains in jail. (9) Research indicates that 15 children, possibly between the ages of 14 and 17, who were allegedly associated with non-state armed groups, were detained by the government and were being held at the High Security Prison outside the capital on terrorism charges. (44) With UNICEF's support, the government created a draft protocol for transferring detained children to their families or the appropriate institutions, which has yet to be finalized. (9,16) As of October 31, 2020, six children associated with armed groups have received support from UNICEF for family tracing, reunification, and family reintegration. (9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordination Committee for the National Strategy Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (CNC-SN/PFTE)*	Defines appropriate strategies for mobilizing the resources necessary to implement the National Strategy to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (SN/PFTE). Created in July 2020 by order of the Minister of Labor, comprises representatives from other ministries, civil society organizations, NGOs, unions, and employers. (9) Promotes consultation and synergy of action between the actors involved in SN/PFTE implementation. Validates the annual activity programs of SN/PFTE. (9) Monitors and evaluates the implementation and proposes necessary readjustments. Reviews and adopts the reports submitted to it by the Technical Secretariat. (9) Issues reasoned opinions on any question relating to the worst forms of child labor. (9)
MFPTSS Directorate to Combat Child Labor and its Worst Forms	Coordinates and leads interagency efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms; collects information on child labor; and conducts awareness-raising activities. Serves as the Secretariat for CNC/SN/PFTE. (47) Research was unable to determine whether the Directorate was active during the reporting period.
National Committee for Vigilance and Surveillance Against the Trafficking in Persons and Assimilated Practices (CNVS)	Coordinates actions at the national level to combat the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking. Oversees Committees for Vigilance and Surveillance in each of the regions. (21) MFSNF serves as the lead agency, with MATDSI playing a secondary role. Includes representatives from MFPTSS, the Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Women, National Solidarity, Family, and Humanitarian Action, as well as NGOs. (2, 16, 21) During the reporting period, the CNVS took the lead in organizing patrols, intercepting migrating children, reporting suspected trafficking cases, and offering care for victims of human trafficking. (16)
Child Protection Networks	Assist CNVS with bringing together state and non-state actors, coordinating and facilitating the collection of statistical data on human trafficking, specifically the trafficking of women and children. (9) Established by MFSNF, the networks comprise social workers, magistrates, judges, police officers, health workers, and NGOs in 23 of the country's 45 provinces. (48) Research was unable to determine whether the Child Protection Networks were active during the reporting period.
Cooperation Agreements with other Countries	Aim to combat cross-border trafficking in children. (2) Research was unable to determine whether cooperation agreements with other countries were active during the reporting period.
Parliamentary Network for the Promotion of Child Rights	Trains government officials on children's rights, including child labor laws and other issues affecting children. (42)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, the government created the National Coordination Committee of the 2019–2023 National Strategy to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (CNC-SN/PFTE). The main activities carried out in 2020 took place during two official meetings. (9) The first session, held in September 2020, served to officially install the members of the Comité National de Coordination (CNC) and to strengthen CNC members' knowledge of child labor issues. (9) In addition, it presented the national strategy and its operational action plan, and examined, amended, and validated the tools for monitoring and evaluating the implementation of SN/PFTE. The second session, which took place in December 2020, reviewed and adopted the 2019 implementation report of the 2019–2023 SN/PFTE. (9) As part of the implementation of the 2019–2023 SN/PFTE, the government has established a new mechanism to coordinate initiatives concerning child labor, in particular its worst forms. (9) The CNC-SN/PFTE is made up of representatives from the various ministries responsible for the fight against the worst forms of child labor, representatives from civil society organizations working in the protection of children's rights, social partners (workers' unions and employers), and NGOs. (9) However, all other mechanisms suffer from poor coordination among ministries and a lack of resources, such as computers and electricity, which continued to hamper the government's ability to coordinate efforts to fully address child trafficking. (23, 43)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of implementation of policies related to child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy to End the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2019–2023) (SN/PFTE)	Aims to combat the worst forms of child labor in Burkina Faso. (2) Developed by all of the entities involved in this effort—that is, law enforcement agencies focused on child labor and its worst forms, governmental bodies, non-governmental bodies, technical and financial partners, social partners, and civil society organizations, including children's associations. (9) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the SN/PFTE during the reporting period.
National Child Protection Strategy (2020–2023)†	Aims to strengthen the institutional, community, and family environment to ensure effective protection for children. (49)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
MFSNF Projects to Combat Human Trafficking†	Aims to combat human trafficking. Includes the operation of transit centers that provide food, medical assistance, and counseling to child trafficking victims and children vulnerable to trafficking. (21,45) Transit centers aim to reintegrate victims into their communities and facilitate repatriation of foreign victims when possible. The National Parenting Program assists parents in managing and educating their children to combat child trafficking. (21) Nationwide media campaigns to combat human trafficking provide advocacy, raise awareness, and build capacity for key actors involved in child protection issues, including child trafficking. (21) Watchdog and monitoring committees ensure that all cases of alleged trafficking of children are reported to the justice system by social workers. (50) During the reporting period, the 34 transit centers run by the MFSNF continued to operate with significant NGO and international organization support. (44)
Campaign to Remove Street Children	Project funded by NGO MinWomen, with coordination by the MFSNF, that began in August 2018 and includes outreach missions in the streets to identify and refer vulnerable children, including forced begging victims, to one of the four youth shelters established in the Somgandé, Basjuy, Nongremassom, and Cissin districts of Ouagadougou. (22,43) In August 2020, the MFSNF launched its third campaign to remove vulnerable children from the streets, including Koranic school students ( talibés ) exploited in forced begging. As a result of the campaign, the government identified and provided care to 275 vulnerable children. (44)
ILO-Implemented Projects to Combat Child Labor	ILO-implemented projects to combat child labor and forced labor in supply chains. Includes the Eliminating Child Labour and Forced Labour in the Cotton, Textile and Garment Value Chains: an Integrated Approach (2018–2022), a $7.5 million EU and Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) initiative of the UN-funded global project to combat child labor and forced labor in cotton and textile supply chains. (51) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Eliminating child labour and forced labour in the cotton, textile and garment value chains: an integrated approach project during the reporting period.
World Bank-Funded Projects	Include a $51 million Education Access and Quality Improvement Project to support the government in increasing access to preschool education in the two poorest regions and to secondary education in the five poorest regions, and to improve teaching and education; and a $50 million Social Safety Net Project to provide income support to poor households and lay the foundation for a basic safety net system in Burkina Faso. (52-54) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement World Bank-Funded Projects during the reporting period.
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP I6) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor (2019–2021)	USDOL-funded global project implemented by the ILO to support global and national efforts aimed at countering child labor and the forced labor of adults and children. Includes the Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP I6) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor (2019–2021) , a $170,000 program. (55) Additional information is available on the USDOL website .

† Program is funded by the Government of Burkina Faso.

During the reporting period, 1,993 children, including 726 girls, who were victims of child labor and its worst forms in artisanal gold mines in the Plateau Central and Centre Nord regions received appropriate care and services through UNICEF-supported programs. Some of the services provided to these children included removal, psychosocial support, family tracing and reunification, and access to education and to income-generating activities. (9) UNICEF partners Land of People Lausanno (Terre des Hommes Lausanne) and Association for the Communal Development and the Promotion of the Rights of Children (Association pour le Développement Communautaire et la Promotion des Droits de l'Enfant) worked with government entities to provide appropriate care to children. (9) During the reporting period, 899 children, including 189 girls, who were victims or presumed victims of human trafficking, benefited from social services that were technically and financially supported by UNICEF. In addition, 13,064 children, including 5,727 girls, “in a situation of mobility” and at risk of being victims of human trafficking, benefited from child protection and information or referral services through inter-sectoral one-stop shops. (9)

The National Program for the Fight Against Child Labor on Artisanal Gold Mining Sites and Quarries ended in 2019, and research was unable to determine whether a new phase was issued. Although Burkina Faso has social programs to address the worst forms of child labor in cotton production and gold mining, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. ## VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Burkina Faso (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws determine the activities in which light work may be permitted.	2016 – 2020
Enforcement	Ensure that labor law enforcement receives sufficient human and financial resources to fulfill its mandates, including hiring enough labor inspectors to meet ILO recommendations, conducting an adequate number of inspections, and following up after preliminary inspections to ensure remediation of notices to comply with labor law obligations.	2009 – 2020
	Publish statistics on labor law enforcement efforts, including the labor inspectorate's funding, number and type of labor inspections conducted, the number of child labor violations found, whether refresher courses are provided, the number of penalties imposed and collected, number of inspections conducted at worksites, and the number of targeted and routine inspections.	2009 – 2020
	Establish and publish data on a mechanism to log all calls to the government child protection hotline and to track cases of child labor for referral to law enforcement or social services providers.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement authorities and frontline responders apply standard victim identification and referral procedures uniformly.	2016 – 2020
	Publish statistics on criminal law enforcement efforts, including initial training, refresher courses, investigations undertaken, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions obtained, and penalties imposed, and whether a reciprocal referral mechanism exists between criminal authorities and social services.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure a referral mechanism between criminal authorities and social services is operational.	2019 – 2020
	Take active measures, including ensuring a mechanism is operational, to ensure that children are not inappropriately incarcerated, penalized, or physically harmed solely for unlawful acts committed as a direct result of their subjection to the worst forms of child labor, such as child soldiering.	2020
	Coordination	Publish activities undertaken by the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security Directorate to Combat Child Labor and its Worst Forms, the Child Protection Networks, and Cooperation Agreements with other countries.
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies receive adequate resources, such as computers and electricity, to accomplish their mandates.	2015 – 2020
	Enhance coordination and collaborative processes and procedures among ministries, law enforcement, and social services.	2019 – 2020
Government Policies	Publish activities undertaken to implement the 2019–2023 National Strategy to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (SN/PFTE) and the National Child Protection Strategy during the reporting period.	2020

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Establish a social program to ensure that IDP and other vulnerable children have access to education and thus reduce their risk of exposure to the worst forms of child labor.	2020
	Improve access to education by eliminating school-related fees and other costs, such as uniforms, by increasing the number of schools and teachers in rural areas, ensuring access to affordable transportation, as well as ending violence in schools.	2010 – 2020
	Ensure that children are registered at birth and that IDPs have access to the requisite documentation to gain access to social services, including education.	2010 – 2020
	Publish activities undertaken to implement Ministry of Women, National Solidarity, and Family Projects to Combat Human Trafficking, and World Bank-Funded Projects.	2020
	Expand existing programs to fully address child labor in cotton production and gold mining.	2009 – 2020

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2020, Burma is receiving an assessment of no advancement. Despite limited initiatives to address child labor, Burma is assessed as having made no advancement because it demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents. The military continued to work with international organizations to end recruitment of children for combat roles and implement a policy of releasing child soldiers. Despite this, the national military continued to force civilians, including the use of at least 700 children, to work in non-combat roles as porters, cleaners, cooks, and agricultural laborers in the conflict areas, including Rahkine, during the reporting period. Otherwise, the government made efforts by ratifying ILO C.138, implementing the National Complaints Mechanism for Forced Labor, and approving the National Action Plan on Preventing Grievous Injuries and Sexual Abuse on Children in Armed Conflicts (2020–2021). Children in Burma are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in recruitment of children for use in armed conflict and in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The vulnerability of Rohingya children to the worst forms of child labor remained high as many continued to be denied access to education and livelihoods through government restrictions on their movement. Penalties for recruitment and use of children by the military or for the military’s use of civilian populations for forced labor are not sufficient for the seriousness of the crime, and the government did not publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts to investigate, prosecute, and convict cases involving many of the worst forms of child labor. On February 1, 2021, the Burma military launched a coup and seized control of the state. The return of a military regime and the resulting instability may severely impact the ability of the Government of Burma to fully engage in combating the worst forms of child labor throughout the country. However, the findings in this report relate to the reporting period of January–December 2020 and do not cover the potential impacts of the military coup.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Burma are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced recruitment of children for use in armed conflict and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Burma.

Table I. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	0.4 (39,370)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	0.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		95.4

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including rubber, sugarcane, beans and pulses, rice, betel nut, and bamboo (1,4-8)
	Fishing and processing fish and seafood (4-6,8-12)
	Forestry, including on teak plantations (4,9,12)
Industry	Producing garments (13-16)
	Construction and carrying stones (1,4,8,9,17,18)
	Brickmaking (19)
	Quarrying and mining, including for jade and rubies(4,8,9,11,20,21)
Services	Domestic work (1,4,8,9,11,22-24)
	Working in teashops and restaurants, including waiting tables and washing dishes (1,4,8,9,17,25)
	Vending, including in fish markets, collecting garbage and recyclables, and working in transportation (9,5,17,26)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced recruitment of children by state and non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (1,8,27-29)
	Forced labor in agriculture, including harvesting bamboo and producing beans, rice, rubber, sugarcane, and teak (2,8)
	Forced labor in manufacturing bricks and construction (2,19)
	Forced labor in domestic work, teashops, and begging (9,8,11,23,24)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7-9,11,29)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The national military's "self-reliance" policy, which requires military forces to provide their own food and labor from local communities, has led to some units, reportedly including the Border Guard Police, to use civilians, including children, to porter goods, cook, and clean barracks in conflict areas. (2,8,29-30) During the reporting period, research indicated that children continued to work in these types of support roles, including 700 children forced into service by low-ranking national military officials in Rakhine State. (2,8,28-31,32)

In 2020, research indicated that children continued to be used by the national military in non-combat roles. In October, two boys in Rakhine Province were reportedly killed in crossfire after being forced by the national military to walk in front to ensure the path was clear of landmines and to act as human shields for soldiers. (2,8,12,28,31,30,33,34) Though there was no identified pattern of recruitment for combat roles, the UN Country Task Force for Monitoring and Reporting (CTFMR) on Grave Violations Against Children identified two cases of recruitment and use for combat roles of children under the age of 18 in the Burmese national military. (35) In the past, civilian brokers with military connections have sometimes facilitated entry into the military of underage recruits, in some instances bypassing standard age verification procedures by producing sophisticated counterfeit identity documents. (8,11,29,31,30)

As of June 2020, there were 145 suspected minors for whom age verification was pending. (8,27,31,35) However, the national military continued to adhere to the established 2019 principle of the "benefit of the doubt,"—which states that when the age of a recruit cannot be definitively verified, the person is discharged—and released at least 22 individuals whose ages could not be definitively verified. As of April 2020, 1,006 children had been released from the national military in accordance with the 2012 Joint Action Plan with the UN which aims to end all government recruitment and use of children in its national military. (11,31,36-38) Since the CTFMR was signed in 2012, the military has prosecuted and convicted 65 commissioned and non-commissioned officers for the recruitment of children into the national military. (27,31,37)

Children were also forcibly recruited and used in armed conflict by non-state armed groups, including the Kachin Independence Organization, Democratic en Benevolent Army (DKBA), the Karen National Liberation Army, the Shan State Progress Party/Shan State Army, the Ta'ang National Liberation Army, and the United Wa State Army. (27,30,32,35) The DKBA signed a joint action plan to end recruitment and use of children in armed conflict with the UN CTFMR in November 2020. (39)

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Research found that Burmese girls were trafficked to Burma's border with China for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. (9,29,30,32) A common trend in Burma is the recruitment of young women, including girls, under the false pretense of getting a high-paying job in China only to be sold into forced marriages with related violations of sexual and labor exploitation. (11,29,31)

The Ministry of Labor, Immigration, and Population (MOLIP) collected data for a survey in 2019 to help develop and establish a database that accurately reflects the current size and composition of the labor force in Burma—including information on child labor—but it has yet to be published. (9,40,41)

Since August 2017, an estimated 728,000 people, primarily from the Rohingya minority, have fled from Burma to Bangladesh following acts of violence and ethnic cleansing perpetrated by the military in northern Rakhine State. (2,42-46) As a result, an estimated 51 percent of Rohingya refugees—approximately 438,000 of whom are children—live in refugee camps in Bangladesh at sites in which they lack access to education, making them vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (9,11,43,47-50) Rohingya girls are trafficked from refugee camps, in some cases being promised jobs in domestic work, for commercial sexual exploitation in Bangladesh, India, and Nepal. (2,24,51) Research also found that increasing numbers of children, particularly girls, are leaving refugee and IDP camps to immigrate to countries such as Malaysia for marriages, but often find themselves in situations of forced labor, including domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (24,29,45,52-54) Rohingya children recruited to work outside the refugee camps, such as in shops, fishing, and transportation, are reported to be underpaid or unpaid, unable to communicate with their families, and subjected to excessive working hours. (52)

Approximately 130,000 Rohingya were forced to reside in IDP camps in Rakhine State after being internally displaced by ethnic violence within the State. Rohingya children residing in IDP camps are at an increased risk of the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor and sex trafficking, due to lack of schools particularly in IDP camps, movement restrictions, discriminatory policies and practices, and school closures due to ongoing violence, especially in Muslim villages. (8,29,30,43,45,55-57)

Rohingya children throughout Rakhine State continue to face severe restrictions on attending school due to discriminatory government policies and practices adopted following the 2012 riots and violent clashes between ethnic Rakhine and Rohingya communities. (58) Local officials and school authorities typically ban Rohingya children from attending government schools with ethnic Rakhine children. (58,59) In addition, Burmese law guarantees education only for Burmese citizens, and citizenship rates in Rohingya communities are extremely low. (55) Many Rohingya children also lack the documentation that is required to attend middle schools and high schools in Rakhine State because the government denies them citizenship or officials refuse to register their household residency. (9,28,60,61) While the government touted its citizenship processing campaigns, such campaigns are scarce and there has only been one in Rakhine State since 2017. (39) Since 2018, the government has forced over 13,000 Rohingya to accept National Verification Cards (NVC) in Rakhine State, including over 500 children; the NVC is required to begin the process of applying for citizenship and requires Rohingya to accept a concession of foreignness. Of the few Rohingya who do obtain citizenship, they are rarely granted full citizenship; they are instead relegated to naturalized citizenship and are not afforded full rights like those granted to full citizens. (2,28,30,55,62)

Furthermore, schools in Rohingya villages impacted by the violence that occurred in 2017 have not reopened, and it is expected that dozens of schools for ethnic Rakhine children will remain closed due to continued fighting between the national military and non-state armed groups in the area, which, in 2020, has displaced an additional 70,000—mostly ethnic Rakhine—into IDP camps. (55,63)

In addition to Rakhine State, children throughout Burma face barriers to education, such as costs associated with travel to schools located long distances away (especially when located in a different township than their own), a lack of schools and teachers, and expenses that include uniforms, books, transportation, and "extra fees" charged by teachers and schools. This leads many children to discontinue their studies after primary school, and increasing their vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor. (1,21,24,30,32,64) Refugee children and children from ethnic communities who speak different languages often face barriers in schools because the curriculum is taught in Burmese, despite there being no law explicitly requiring Burmese language instruction. (9,24,30,32) To address this specific issue, the Ministry of Education was working on an equivalency program that will allow students to sit for exams in their native tongue. (9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Burma has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

On June 8, 2020, the government ratified ILO C.138, becoming the 173rd ILO member state to ratify. (29,32,65,66)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Burma's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including criminally prohibiting child trafficking consistent with international standards and comprehensively identifying the types of hazardous work prohibited for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Chapter XIV, Section 48(b) of the Child Rights Law; Section 75 of the Factories Act; Article 14 of the Shops and Establishments Law (67-69)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Chapter I, Sections 3(b) and 3(t)(4), Chapter XIV, Section 48(a), and Chapter XXVII, Section 103(a)(3) of the Child Rights Law (69)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Sections 25 and 29 of the Factories Act; Article 14(d) of the Shops and Establishments Law; Rule 146 of the 2018 Mining Rules (67,68,70)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Chapter I, Section 3(t) and Chapter XXVII, Section 103(a)(2) of the Child Rights Law; Sections 3 and 24 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law; Sections 370–371 and 374 of the Penal Code; Section 27(a) of the Ward or Village Tracks Administrative Law (69,71-73)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Chapter I, Section 3(t) and Chapter XVIII, Section 66 of the Child Rights Law; Sections 3 and 24 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law; Sections 372 and 366(a) of the Penal Code (69,71,72)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Chapter I, Section 3(t)(2), Chapter XVIII, Section 66, and Chapter XXVII, Section 105(b) of the Child Rights Law; Sections 372–373 of the Penal Code (69,72)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Chapter I, Section 3(t)(3) and Chapter XIV, Section 48(a) of the Child Rights Law; Sections 20(a) and 22(c) of the Narcotics and Psychotropic Substances Law (69,74)

* No conscription (77)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (78,79)

During the reporting period, MOLIP prepared a draft hazardous work list and worked to finalize the implementing regulation for the Child Rights Law (2019), but both have yet to be promulgated. (9,11,29,32,34,61,69) In addition, two 2019 draft laws dealing with child labor issues in domestic work and the Occupational Safety and Health Bill, which seeks to expand the legal jurisdiction of the labor inspectorate to include additional industries, remained pending in 2020. (9,11,24,40,80-82)

Furthermore, the draft anti-trafficking in persons law, which will remove the requirement to demonstrate force, fraud, or coercion to constitute a child trafficking offense and allow for assets and proceeds found during trafficking in person cases to be seized, was still awaiting approval as of December 2020. (8,11,29,32,83) The implementing regulations for this bill are currently being drafted by the Ministry of Home Affairs. (39)

The legal framework does not sufficiently prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, as there are no criminal penalties associated with the use, procuring, and offering of a child for the production and trafficking of drugs. (12,69,74)

Children in Burma are required to attend school only up to age 10. This standard leaves children ages 10 through 13 vulnerable to child labor since they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. (30,78,79)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Immigration, and Population (MOLIP) – Factories and General Labor Laws Inspection Department (FGLLID)	Inspects factories, shops, and establishments for child labor law violations. (67,68) Only mandated to inspect for child labor in manufacturing establishments and factories as laid out in the Factories Law (1951) and the Shops and Establishment Law (2016). This leaves certain sectors, including agriculture, construction, mining, and fishing in which child labor is reported to occur, outside of the purview of the FGLLID. (9,29,30,32)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Home Affairs (MOHA) – Myanmar Police Force (MPF), Anti-Trafficking in Persons Division (ATIPD)	Investigates trafficking in persons crimes and engages in human trafficking prevention efforts through its 60 regional Anti-Trafficking Task Force (ATTF) police units. (11,29,32,84) Oversees nine specialized Child Protection Units in Rangoon, Mandalay, and Naypyidaw to address child exploitation cases, including child trafficking, and uses formal written procedures with questions to screen victims. (29,84) Staffed by 476 personnel and operates nine 24/7 hotlines dedicated to reporting human trafficking cases. (11,29) During the reporting period, the ATIPD and ATTF consulted and collaborated with law enforcement agencies in several countries that are part of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), including China, Laos, India, and Thailand, as part of formal dialogues on human trafficking and border issues. (8) In addition, focused on improving both hotline and online mechanisms for reporting trafficking in persons crimes during the COVID-19 pandemic. In conjunction with an NGO, conducted two online courses on police procedures on child protection, police procedures on sexual and gender-based crimes, and on social cohesion for 60 ATIPD officers. (29)
Ministry of Defense—Committee for the Prevention of Military Recruitment of Underage Children	Sanctions perpetrators that recruit or use children in the armed forces. (32,85)
Union Attorney General's Office	Responsible for prosecuting trafficking in persons crimes. During the reporting period, issued an order to formally establish Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Coordinators in each of the 74 prosecutorial districts in the country. (29) TIP Coordinators will act as district-level TIP focal points, helping to build prosecutorial expertise, collect and report data, support coordination between prosecutors and police, create focused TIP training opportunities, and improve TIP prosecution records throughout the country. (29,32) During the reporting period, deployed virtual teleconferencing equipment to regional law offices and moved new prosecutor onboarding to a remote platform. (29)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Transportation and Telecommunications worked with mobile phone operators to send quarterly text messages to all subscribers that included information related to trafficking in persons (TIP) awareness, including the anti-trafficking in persons hotline phone numbers. (29)

The Department of Social Welfare leads efforts on repatriation, reintegration, and rehabilitation of TIP victims, and continued to lack a sufficient number of case managers to cover the entire country. There continued to be instances of delays in offering case management services, and the Department of Rehabilitation lacked sufficient human resources to provide reintegration support. (9,11,29,31)

During the reporting period, the Myanmar Police Force (MPF) remained hampered by personnel turnover, resource constraints, and limited training, which resulted in areas of the country continuing to lack sufficient coverage. (9,8,11,29) Furthermore, MPF was limited in conducting normal police operations from April–August 2020 due to COVID-19 pandemic restrictions on the number of people who could be in the office. (29) Non-specialized police were sometimes unaware of how to pursue human trafficking investigations without the assistance of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Division's (ATIPD) Anti-Trafficking Task Force units, possibly resulting in some trafficking victims being turned away when attempting to report their cases. (8,29)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Burma took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Factories and General Labor Laws Inspection Department (FGLLID) that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws, including inspection planning.

In 2020, trainings for labor inspectors were halted and the number of labor inspections conducted declined sharply due to pandemic-related movement restrictions put in place by the government. Due to these restrictions, labor inspections were geographically limited to Burma's major urban centers, including Yangon, Mandalay, and Bago, and the FGLLID claimed that they did not uncover any child labor during their inspections in 2020. (32) However, in November, a bakery factory owner was charged with "violating the rights of children," after at least 18 children were alleged to have been in situations of forced child labor; prosecution was ongoing during the reporting period. (32,89)

Despite labor inspectors having the authority to conduct unannounced inspections, these do not occur regularly; when they do occur, factory owners are often given advanced notice, and labor inspectors often neglect to speak with workers. (2,9,32)

Research found that funding for the labor inspectorate is insufficient to cover transportation and equipment for labor inspectors, which discourages inspections of remote establishments. Furthermore, when a complaint is filed by a worker, inspections often are not conducted in a timely manner. (9,32) Research also indicated that when FGLLID imposes penalties on violators, the fines are too low to act as a deterrent to medium and large enterprises. (32) Due to capacity and resource constraints, FGLLID has limited data on its own labor market, including the number of factories, and a lack of basic resources such as furniture for labor inspector offices. (9)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Burma's workforce, which includes approximately 22 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Burma would employ about 558 inspectors. (32,77,90,91)

The government did not provide information on its labor inspectorate funding.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Burma took actions to combat the worst forms of child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the authority of MPF that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws, including penalties not commensurate with the seriousness of certain crimes.

In February, a group of mid-level civilian and military officers attended a course on how to facilitate increasing transparency of anti-trafficking in persons efforts made by the government; this effort resulted in the government providing monthly trafficking in persons data to foreign embassies and international organizations located in Burma. (29,92) The government also trained 60 diplomats and 35 attaches on human trafficking issues. (8)

In 2020, the ATIPD reported two cases of government complicity in the worst forms of child labor. In one case, a commissioned military officer was court-martialed and faces civilian charges for trafficking a young girl into China where she experienced sex and labor exploitation. (29) In the second case, a village leader faces charges for attempting to traffic a young girl to China for forced marriage. Both cases remain under active investigation and prosecution. (29) Also during the reporting period, a 2019 case involving a commissioned military officer and eight civilians who trafficked a young girl to China culminated in the court-martial and conviction of the officer and two of the co-conspirators. All three of the convicted individuals, including the military officer, were sentenced to 10 years in prison. (29) In addition, the case of a karaoke club and bar owner charged with human trafficking after allegedly forcing a child into commercial sexual exploitation remains under active prosecution. (29,92)

While the government continued training its personnel on age verification at recruitment centers, insufficient identity document access and security issues continued to present challenges to the full prevention of the recruitment of children. (2,31,84) While the national military has taken action against national military officials for these crimes, the penalties imposed on members of the military for recruiting and using child soldiers are not commensurate with the seriousness of these crimes. (2,8,12,31) In past years, most of these cases reportedly culminated in reprimands, demotions, relocations, fines, or decreases in pensions, penalties significantly less than those prescribed by criminal law, which mandates prison sentences. (2,8,9,30,93)

Research noted that some government and law enforcement officials allegedly participated in, facilitated, or profited from human trafficking. This included police officers and other government officials accepting bribes, and in some cases, individuals claiming to have ties to high-level officials purportedly pressuring victims not to seek legal redress against their traffickers. (8,29)

The government did not provide information on the number of investigations conducted, the number of prosecutions initiated, and the number of convictions related to child labor during the reporting period.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for the Rights of the Child	Institutes policies, guidelines, and measures needed to implement the Child Rights Law of 2019. (69) Chaired by the Minister of Social Welfare, Relief, and Resettlement. Creates and oversees Local Committees for the Rights of the Child, which are mandated to submit progress reports on functions and duties concerning the implementation of the Child Rights Law. (69) During the reporting period, held one virtual meeting. (32)

(94) Operates a hotline for reporting cases of child soldiering. (11,29) Co-chaired by the UN and UNICEF, members include Save the Children, World Vision, and relevant UN agencies, such as ILO. Mandated by UN Security Council Resolution 1612 in response to children in Burma being subjected to grave violations, including the recruitment and use of children as soldiers. (9,33,37,94) During the reporting period, permitted to directly engage and negotiate with ethnic armed groups, leading to the signing of an 18-month Joint Action Plan with the Democratic Karen Benevolent Army to prevent and end the recruitment and use of children in conflict. Allows for implementation monitoring, release and reintegration of child soldiers, prevention of future recruitment and use of children, and provides support efforts to hold violators accountable. (29,30,32,95) Committee for the Prevention of Grave Violations Against Children in Armed Conflicts (ACs): Formed in January 2019 and addresses issues directed at the national military within the annual UN Report on Children and Armed Conflict Annex related to the killing, maiming, and sexual assault of children in armed conflicts. (11,40) Members include 13 Ministries. Regularly meets with CTFMR to discuss additional measures to prevent grave violations against children in armed conflicts. (11,40) During the reporting period, established a complaint mechanism for Burmese citizens to report potential cases of any of the UN-defined "six grave violations" against children in armed conflict that are now prohibited under the 2019 Child Rights Law. Established a working group to screen and review complaints submitted through the complaint mechanism, and promoted phone numbers and e-mails for the complaint mechanism. (32) Worked on collaborating with Ministry of Defense and MOHA to include them in future complaint mechanism review meetings. In October, met and reviewed progress made by inter-ministerial partners. (32) National Committee on Implementation of Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict: Created in November 2020. Implements legal and management measures to prevent the use and recruitment of children under the age of 18 by the military, and builds awareness of this issue among the general population. (92) Chaired by the Minister for Social Welfare, Relief and Rehabilitation. (29,92) Has 16 members, including the Ministry of Defense, MOHA, Ministry of Health and Sports, Ministry of Information, and the Union Attorney General's Office. Met for the first time in December 2020. (29,92)
Child Labor Coordination: National Committee on Child Labor Eradication; and Technical Working Group on Child Labor, and Forced Labor Committee	National Committee on Child Labor Eradication: Oversees the implementation of the Myanmar Child Labor Eradication Project. (1,21,96) Chaired by the Vice President and consists of 37 members including representatives from 13 government ministries, the chief ministers of 10 states, the mayors of Rangoon and Mandalay, unions, and employer and civil society organizations. (9,96) Research was unable to determine whether this coordinating body was active during the reporting period. (32) Technical Working Group on Child Labor: Coordinates the implementation of ILO Convention 182, including drafting the list of hazardous work prohibited for children, developing a national plan of action against child labor, and establishing a mechanism for identifying, monitoring, and referring child labor cases. Chaired by MOLIP, consists of stakeholders from eight government ministries, employers, and civil society organizations. (12,97) During the reporting period, met and discussed the development of the hazardous work list and the development of standard operating procedures (SOP) for processing forced labor complaints that come through the National Complaints Mechanism for Forced Labor (NCM). (32) Forced Labor Committee: Met to discuss development of a detailed SOP for the NCM during the reporting period. (98)
Central Body for the Suppression of Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates efforts to address trafficking in persons. Chaired by the Minister of MOHA and includes six government agencies and several NGOs. (11,29,32,85) Creates, implements, and maintains an annual work plan to make progress toward goals established in the Third 5-year National Plan of Action to Counter Trafficking in Persons (NPA). (11,29,99) Includes three working groups: (1) Prevention of Trafficking in Persons and Protection of Trafficked Victims, headed by the Deputy Minister of MOHA; (2) Legal Framework and Prosecuting Measures, headed by the Deputy Attorney General; and (3) Repatriation and Rehabilitation of Trafficked Victims, headed by the Deputy Minister of the Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Rehabilitation (MSWRR). (11,29) During the reporting period, trained ATIPD officers on anti-trafficking issues. (8) Launched the National Standard Operating Procedure on Return/Repatriation, Reintegration, and Rehabilitation which provides guidelines for government, civil society, and private partners who offer services for survivors of human trafficking, but noted more could also be done to train local Department of Rehabilitation officials and auxiliary police officers on how to properly screen and identify victims of human trafficking. (29,32) From July–December 2020, virtually trained 183 government officials, including MSWRR and ATIPD staff, on best practices to standardize rehabilitation services and referral procedures using a victim-centric approach and "do no harm" principles. (29,32) In addition, in conjunction with NGOs, provided anti-trafficking in persons trainings. (29)
Township Committees of the Rights of the Child	Coordinate local child welfare and protection activities. Led by the Township Administrator and consist of government agencies, including the Department of Social Welfare, police, and NGOs. (1,78) Research was unable to determine whether these committees were active during the reporting period. (32)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

During the reporting period, the government virtually attended the Coordinate Mekong Ministerial Initiative against Trafficking (COMMIT) Regional Task Force and the 14th Annual Senior Official Meetings hosted by the Government of Vietnam. Senior Burmese government officials, including the Commander of ATIPD, participated and discussed national and transnational referral mechanisms, reviewed the COMMIT Memorandum of Understanding (MOU), and extended the Sub-Regional Plan of Action into 2022. (29) In addition, the government attended a virtual meeting with ASEAN counterparts and the Australian government to discuss countering trafficking in person in the Asia-Pacific region. In December, the Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Rehabilitation (MSWRR) hosted the 25th Burma-Thailand Case Management Virtual Meeting on Return and Reintegration of TIP victims with their counterparts from Thailand’s Ministry of Social Development and Human Security. (29)

Research indicates that the government continues to be hampered by limited inter-ministerial coordination, including communication, across all government ministries. (11)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the adoption of policies that address all relevant worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Myanmar Child Labor Eradication Project	Establishes a national plan of action to eliminate child labor, including hazardous child labor. (1) During the reporting period, continued to raise awareness around child labor and trained government officials and social partners on the importance of compliance with ILO C. 138 and the protection of children against hazardous work. (32)
Children in Armed Conflict: Joint Action Plan with the UN to Prevent the Recruitment and Use of Children for Military Purposes; and National Action Plan on Preventing Grievous Injuries and Sexual Abuse of Children in Armed Conflicts (2020–2021)†	Joint Action Plan with the UN to Prevent the Recruitment and Use of Children for Military Purposes aims to end all government recruitment and use of children in its armed forces. Seeks to ensure the release of children under age 18 from the armed forces and facilitate their reintegration into families and communities through the CTFMR. (100) Research was unable to determine specific activities undertaken during the reporting period to implement this policy.  National Action Plan on Preventing Grievous Injuries and Sexual Abuse of Children in Armed Conflicts (2020–2021) was finalized in August 2020. In November, formed a Monitoring and Evaluation Committee to implement the national action plan. (29) Chaired by the Director-General of the Department of Rehabilitation and a representative from the Department of Defense is the Deputy Chair. Responsible for verifying and monitoring that official government actions taken on complaints are handled according to official guidance. (29) Coordinates with government ministries and civil society organizations to establish annual work plans, and develops appropriate capacity building and awareness-raising campaigns related to prevention of the six grave violations against children in armed conflict. Issues annual report. (29)
Myanmar Sustainable Development Plan (2018–2030)	Sets out a strategy to expand the social safety net and social protection services, including the introduction of measures to keep children enrolled in schools and out of child labor. (101) Action Plan Item 4.3.6 specifically addresses eliminating child labor through education. (9,101) Research was unable to determine specific activities undertaken during the reporting period to implement this policy.
Myanmar Decent Work Country Programme (2018–2021)	Seeks to strengthen protections against child labor and forced labor by building on existing ILO programs in Burma and continuing engagement between ILO and the government. (46,102) Research was unable to determine specific activities undertaken during the reporting period to implement this policy.
Third 5-Year National Plan of Action (NPA) to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2017–2021)	Aims to effectively eliminate internal and cross-border trafficking in persons and to anticipate and forestall new forms of trafficking. (11,100) Third iteration of the NPA. Implemented by the Central Body for Suppression of Trafficking in Persons. (11,29) Employs three strategies, including: (1) prevent and suppress trafficking in persons; (2) protect all victims, in particular women and children; and (3) prevent forced labor of children, including in the recruitment of children into the armed forces, and prevent the sexual exploitation of children. (11,100) Research was unable to determine specific activities undertaken during the reporting period.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, the government officially signed an MOU with the Government of India on Cooperation for Prevention of Trafficking in Persons: Rescue, Recovery, Repatriation, and Re-Integration of Victims of Trafficking. (9,11,29,32,40) Both governments continue to actively work to develop working groups and task forces to prevent TIP crimes, share information on TIP crimes, and enhance cooperation on investigations and prosecutions while also protecting victim information. (29) The government also continued discussions with the Government of Vietnam on establishing a new MOU that would address anti-trafficking in persons measures. (29)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Defense issued three directives prohibiting the use and recruitment of child soldiers by the national military. (29,30,32) The first directive ordered adherence to all previously released directives to not recruit children under the age of 18 or use underage labor in military-owned factories, shops, and establishments. (29,32,103) The second directive outlined the prohibitions and punishments associated with the use and recruitment of children into the national military for both combat and non-combat roles, and the third directive ordered that national military personnel follow the National Action Plan on Preventing Grievous Injuries and Sexual Abuse of Children in Armed Conflicts (2020–2021). (29,104,105)

Although the government has adopted a policy to end the national military’s recruitment and use of child soldiers and a policy on hazardous child labor, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, including armed conflict by non-state armed groups, forced child labor, or commercial sexual exploitation of children. (31)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address all worst forms of child labor.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Complaints Mechanism for Forced Labor (NCM)*	Joint government-ILO program that gives citizens a permanent mechanism to lodge complaints of forced labor and seek remedies from the government, established in February 2020. (29,106) Includes the ability to report cases of child labor and child soldier recruitment. (31,32,98) During the reporting period, began publishing monthly statistics on forced labor complaints received through the mechanism, including 58 complaints received in 2020. (29,30,32,92,98)
Hotlines	UNICEF and World Vision-operated hotlines for reporting suspected cases of child recruitment or use of children by Burma’s military. (107) Research was unable to determine specific activities undertaken relative to the project.
USDOL-Funded Projects	Aim to increase awareness and knowledge of child labor; improve the legal and institutional environment to contribute to the elimination of child labor; improve availability and use of occupational safety and health data, and increase youth knowledge and awareness of the hazards and risks of child labor. Includes: the Myanmar Program on the Elimination of Child Labour (My-PEC) Project (2013-2021) , a $7.75 million global project implemented by ILO; SafeYouth@Work Project: Building a Generation of Safe and Healthy Workers , a global project implemented by the ILO; and Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor , a global project implemented by ILO. (9,108-111) For additional information, please see the USDOL website .

*Program was launched during the reporting period.

In 2020, the government implemented a permanent National Complaints Mechanism for Forced Labor (NCM), replacing the ILO-managed Forced Labor Complaints Mechanism that lapsed in 2018. During the reporting period, ILO continued to receive and forward child labor complaints to the NCM, but research found that there was no mechanism in place for the ILO to follow up on cases it referred to the NCM. (9,11,29,30,31,40,44,98,112) Additionally, research was unable to determine whether the mechanism was being adequately implemented due to the government's failure to communicate important developments to applicable stakeholders related to the NCM, including publishing NCM data online through MOLIP's website. (29,92,98)

During the reporting period, the MSWRR developed and implemented a standard operating procedure (SOP) for local-level victim support and rehabilitation, which provides provisions for the rehabilitation and reintegration of former child soldiers, and is in the process of creating a national-level SOP on child protection. (98) However, research found that due to a lack of resources and understanding of victim reintegration, and the decentralization of responsibility to state and regional governments, the protection of victims and the ability to adequately combat forced labor remain unaddressed and unclear. (30,32,113)

Overall, the government lacks sufficient social programs to adequately address the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (31,32)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Burma (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Publish the implementing regulations for the Child Rights Law and release a comprehensive hazardous work list that includes types of hazardous work prohibited for children, including all sectors and activities in which children engage in hazardous work.	2019 – 2020
	Finalize and implement the draft law on domestic work and the Occupational Safety and Health Bill.	2016 – 2020
	Publish and implement the anti-trafficking in persons bill, and ensure that the law does not require a demonstration of force, fraud, or coercion to constitute a child trafficking offense.	2020
	Ensure that the law provides criminal penalties for the use, procuring, and offering of children under age 18 in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that the age up to which education is compulsory is the same as the minimum age for work, as established by international standards.	2016 – 2020
Enforcement	Ensure that the Factories and General Labor Laws Inspection Department's mandate allows for inspections to occur in all sectors in which child labor is known to occur, including agriculture, mining, and fishing.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that labor inspections occur outside of the main urban centers.	2020
	Ensure all labor inspectors receive training related to the enforcement of child labor laws.	2020
	Ensure that the Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement has sufficient resources to provide services to victims of the worst forms of child labor, including reintegration support at the Department of Rehabilitation and increasing the number of case managers at the Department of Social Welfare.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that prior notice of unannounced inspections is not given to factory owners, that inspectors conduct thorough inspections which include talking with workers, that inspections are provided in a timely manner, and that labor laws are consistently enforced when a violation is found.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that the Factories and General Labor Laws Inspection Department has sufficient funding to cover transportation costs to remote areas, equipment for labor inspector offices, including furniture, and for maintaining up-to-date data on the labor market.	2019 – 2020
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2016 – 2020
	Publish data related to labor law enforcement, including the amount of funding for the labor inspectorate.	2016 – 2020
	Establish a permanent referral mechanism between the labor inspectorate and social services, and ensure that targeted routine inspections occur, and that initial and refresher training courses are offered for labor inspectors.	2016 – 2020
	Continue to improve military oversight and monitoring of recruitment procedures to prevent the recruitment of children.	2017 – 2020
	Ensure that the penalties for the recruitment and use of children in the military are appropriate for the seriousness of the crime.	2017 – 2020
	Publish data related to criminal law enforcement, including the number of investigations conducted, the number of prosecutions initiated, and the number of convictions.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that law enforcement officers, including non-specialized police units, receive training on how to pursue trafficking in persons cases to ease reliance on specialized police units, including the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Division.	2019 – 2020

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure Department of Rehabilitation and police officers are properly trained on the National Standard Operating Procedure on Return/Repatriation, Reintegration, and Rehabilitation guidelines so they can properly screen and identify victims of human trafficking.	2020
	Investigate and prosecute government and law enforcement officials alleged to have participated in, facilitated, or profited from human trafficking, including accepting bribes and pressuring victims not to seek legal redress against their perpetrators.	2020
Coordination	Ensure frequent and regular coordination, including communication, across all government ministries related to the worst forms of child labor.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure the National Committee on Child Labor Eradication and the Township Committees of the Rights of the Child are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2020
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as armed conflict by non-state armed groups, forced child labor, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2016 – 2020
	Publish activities undertaken to implement the Joint Action Plan with the UN to Prevent the Recruitment and Use of Children for Military Purposes, the Myanmar Sustainable Development Plan, the Myanmar Decent Work Country Program, and the Third 5-Year National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons during the reporting period.	2020
Social Programs	Cease the practice of using the "self-reliance" policy to compel forced labor of civilians, including children, by the national military.	2016 – 2020
	Cease the practice of recruiting, including by force and coercion, children as front line combatants by the national military and non-state armed groups in conflict areas.	2016 – 2020
	Publish the results from the 2019 survey data collected by the Ministry of Labor, Immigration, and Population, including information related to child labor.	2020
	Remove all restrictions on Rohingya access to education in Rakhine State, including a lack of schools, school closures in conflict areas, movement restrictions, and discriminatory policies and practices, including segregated schools.	2017 – 2020
	Provide full legal status to the Rohingya, including children, to decrease their vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor and allow them the ability to attend school.	2019 – 2020
	Develop and implement education programs that reduce physical barriers for children who live long distances from schools, eliminate prohibitive expenses for attending school, and accommodate children who face language barriers, including those from ethnic communities.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that conditions are safe in Rakhine State for the voluntary return of Rohingya refugees, including children in Bangladesh.	2018 – 2020
	Establish a system to allow for ILO follow-up on cases referred to the National Complaints Mechanism for Forced Labor; address the issue of decentralization of responsibility, and ensure that the government communicates important developments to all stakeholders in a timely fashion.	2020
	Develop and implement programs to address all worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2016 – 2020
	Provide sufficient resources to improve victim assistance and reintegration services to victims of forced labor.	2020
	Publish activities undertaken to implement the UNICEF and World Vision-operated hotlines for reporting suspected cases of child recruitment or use of children in armed conflict during the reporting period.	2020

In 2020, Burundi made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government passed a new labor code that made important progress in bringing Burundi's legal framework in line with international standards, such as raising the minimum age for work to age 16 and the minimum age for light work to age 15. Law enforcement authorities also implemented stringent measures to monitor the travel of unaccompanied children and identify cases of child trafficking. Meanwhile, the government launched two new programs to improve counter-trafficking capacity in Burundi and provide work alternatives to youth vulnerable to exploitation. However, children in Burundi are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. Burundi lacks a compulsory education age that is equal to the minimum age for work and the government failed to provide comprehensive criminal law enforcement data related to the worst forms of child labor. Other challenges remain, including a lack of resources to conduct labor inspections and criminal investigations; a lack of well-trained educators and infrastructure in the education sector; and insufficient social programs to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Burundi are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Burundi. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	33.2 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	69.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	30.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		59.4

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2016–2017. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of tea, coffee, sugarcane, cotton, palm oil, peat, potatoes, and rice (1,2,6-8)
	Fishing, including preparing materials and equipment, managing heavy fishing nets, preparing meals for fishermen, loading and unloading materials from vessels, and cleaning the vessels (1,2,6-11)
	Herding and feeding livestock (1,2,6,7)
Industry	Extracting, † washing, and transporting minerals in mines and quarries, including artisanal gold mines (1,2,6)
	Making and transporting bricks (2,7)
	Manufacturing, including soldering, welding, processing plastics and metals, and helping in garages and workshops (8)
Services	Domestic work (2,6-8)
	Street vending, including selling food, newspapers, cigarettes, and used clothes and shoes (1,2,6)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Burundi is one of the poorest countries in the world, with more than 90 percent of its citizens engaged in subsistence agriculture, and approximately 80 percent of the workforce employed in the informal economy. (1,15,16) Poverty often results in Burundian children leaving school for paid work. (17) During the 2017–2018 school year alone, the cycle for which the most recent data are available, 171,652 children dropped out of school, with many believed to have entered domestic work. (18)

Burundi is a source country for children subjected to forced labor and sex trafficking abroad, and children are trafficked within the country from rural areas for domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. There were no documented cases of child sex tourism in Burundi during the reporting period. (3,13,15) Reports indicate that an increasing number of children from the Batwa ethnic group are being transported from rural areas into Bujumbura with promises of work and subsequently are exploited. (2) Women who offer room and board to children sometimes force the children into commercial sexual exploitation to pay expenses. (3,13,19) Burundian girls are also trafficked internationally for commercial sexual exploitation in Kenya, Rwanda, Uganda, the Democratic Republic of Congo, and countries in the Middle East. (3,7,13,19,20) Evidence also suggests that children are trafficked to Tanzania for work in agriculture and for domestic work. (3)

Children work entire days transplanting rice and typically drop out of school in the pre-harvest season to guard rice plantations from birds. Children are also utilized as lookouts in the forestry industry to report illegal woodcutting or theft, placing them in potentially dangerous situations when thieves are present. (8) In fishing communities near Lake Tanganyika, boys are often engaged in fishing activities without pay while girls work as cooks or domestic employees and are at risk of sexual exploitation. (3,8) Civil society organizations indicate that up to 15 percent of children who are school dropouts in urban centers work in the charcoal trade, either packing, loading, and unpacking charcoal or working in fire pits. (8)

Although the government abolished school fees in 2012, families are often asked to pay for supplies, secondary school fees, and school building maintenance costs, which have prevented many children from accessing free public schooling. (2) A dearth of well-trained educators and poor infrastructure have also limited educational opportunity. For example, the lack of gender-separated bathrooms can contribute to lower attendance rates among girls. (2) Children with disabilities and mobility issues face discrimination in schools and a lack of appropriate materials and infrastructure, limiting access to education. (21) Moreover, because birth certificates are required to attend school, many unregistered children, in particular children of the Batwa ethnic group, remain out of school and vulnerable to child labor. (1,2,6,15)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Burundi has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Burundi's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of criminal penalties for forced labor.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 2 and 10 of the Labor Code; Article 3 of the Ministerial Ordinance to Regulate Child Labor (22,23)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (27)

* No conscription (26)

In November 2020, Burundi enacted a new Labor Code, notably establishing 15 as the minimum age for light work, with Ministerial Order 630 still outlining the types of light work permissible for underage children. (3,22,23) The Code also extends protections to children working in the informal sector. (23) Burundi's new Labor Code prohibits forced labor in any form and prohibits the use, recruitment, or offering of children in illicit activities, notably for the production and trafficking of drugs. (23) However, the Labor Code only imposes fines for violations of forced labor and the use of children in illicit activities. (23,25)

Burundi

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The prohibitions against hazardous work are not comprehensive, as they fail to cover agriculture, an area of work in which there is evidence of children working with dangerous machinery, equipment, and tools. (7,22)

Although the Constitution prohibits the use of children in armed conflict, the Penal Code criminalizes only the use of children under age 15 in armed conflict, leaving children between the ages of 15 and 18 vulnerable to this worst form of child labor. (25,29) However, Burundian law does prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by state armed forces, and available evidence indicates that the government continued to comply with this provision. (1,15,16)

Although the Law on Basic and Secondary Education provides for guaranteed, free education, it relies on funding from families. (27) Burundi implemented education reforms beginning in 2014 that have continued through the present reporting period because of delays caused by civil unrest in 2015. Burundi's education reform plans established that basic education is compulsory through the first 9 years of education, beginning when a child turns 6 years old. (30-31) The compulsory education age however is less than the minimum age for work, making children between the ages of 15 and 16 vulnerable to labor exploitation.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Employment	Administers and enforces all labor laws, including those on child labor, through the Inspector General of Work and Social Security. (32)
Ministry of Interior, Community Development and Public Security	Conducts criminal investigations on the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor, child trafficking, and the use of children in illicit activities. Through the Burundi National Police's Unit for the Protection of Minors and Morals, protects children from commercial sexual exploitation, illicit activity, forced labor, and military recruitment. (1,2,7,13,16)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes cases of the worst forms of child labor through its General Prosecutor's Office. (1,2,7)
Ministry of National Solidarity, Social Affairs, Human Rights, and Gender	Coordinates, monitors, and oversees children's advocacy and family services programs conducted by public and private organizations. Develops policies and national laws on the promotion and protection of children and families. (33,34) Refers cases to police officers and judicial officials for enforcement through its 89 Child Protection Committees at local levels; victims are referred to local NGOs for social services. (2,33,34)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Burundi took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Employment that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Burundi lacks local inspectors in 14 of its 18 provinces. (2) Furthermore, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Burundi's workforce, which includes approximately 5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Burundi would employ about 125 inspectors. (35,36) Although inspections were carried out throughout the country during the reporting period, reporting suggests that inspections are conducted exclusively in the formal sector, in which child labor is relatively rare, and exclude the agricultural sector. (2,37,38)

Government officials acknowledged the labor inspectorate budget in 2020 was not sufficient. (8) Research found that financial constraints hamper the Inspector General of Work and Social Security's enforcement of child labor laws because annual funding does not cover fuel costs, per diem, or office supplies, nor does the labor inspectorate own any vehicles. (6,7,39,40)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Burundi took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

During the reporting period, the General Immigration Authority, which issues travel documents and is responsible for border security, increased scrutiny of traveling unaccompanied children to target the trafficking of children abroad. It also issued a notice preventing travel of Burundian citizens to Gulf countries without permission from the Authority. (13) Similarly, the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Employment issued a ministerial order to suspend all recruitment agencies operating in the country in response to what it described as an increase in human trafficking during the reporting period. (13)

Law enforcement indicated they had arrested 4 alleged traffickers, 3 of whom were convicted and sentenced to between 3 and 7 years in prison, and identified and referred to care 16 child trafficking victims as a result of increased efforts to analyze border crossing documents. (13) The IOM indicated it had identified 25 child trafficking victims during the reporting period, 6 of whom had been repatriated from Tanzania and 17 of whom were identified in route to Tanzania. The IOM partnered with the government to cover repatriation costs, and the government subsequently partnered with a local NGO to place the six returning children in shelters. (13) Meanwhile, UNICEF reported providing services to 403 children, a majority of whom were victims of human trafficking and child labor. (8, 13)

The government did not provide complete information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (8)

Despite its efforts, the government lacked resources to fully implement criminal law enforcement strategies. For example, while the Burundi National Police Unit for the Protection of Minors and Morals was responsible for the investigation of trafficking in persons, sex trafficking, and child and forced labor issues, it lacked capacity and often did not receive referrals from other police units. (19) The government acknowledged that officials are unfamiliar with the 2014 anti-trafficking law and thus are not sufficiently familiar with the concepts of the worst forms of child labor. However, the government translated the 2014 anti-trafficking law into Kirundi and the government saw an increase in cases accurately filed and charged under the law. (13,38) Agencies lacked resources necessary to respond to victims' needs and had to rely primarily on services from civil society and international organizations. (19) Furthermore, Burundi lacks formal guidance for authorities on how to respond to cases potentially involving the worst forms of child labor, and law enforcement lacked sufficient training to properly identify victims. Although a referral mechanism between law enforcement and social services exists, civil society organizations indicate it is utilized on an ad hoc basis, thus making it difficult to ensure victims receive services. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including resource allocation.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Multi-Sector Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	National coordination body organized by the Ministry of National Solidarity, Social Affairs, Human Rights and Gender, and the Child and Family Department, that works with local non-governmental organizations to address child protection issues. (8) The committee met twice monthly during the reporting period after having been inactive in prior reporting periods. (8)
Ad Hoc Committee for Consultation and Monitoring on the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons	Under the office of the Vice President, responsible for coordinating national anti-trafficking efforts. Includes officials from the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Development Cooperation (MFADC), Justice, Interior, Community Development, and Public Security. (13) In what the IOM characterized as increased activity by the committee compared to previous years, in 2020, the Committee conducted training for more than 407 government officials and worked with the MFADC to repatriate and provide services to victims of human trafficking abroad. This included six victims from Tanzania who were minors. (13) During the reporting period, the Committee's Integrated Plan of Activities expired, and the Committee worked with the IOM to draft a new plan to extend through 2022. (13) The Committee also translated Burundi's 2014 Counter-Trafficking Law into the national language of Kirundi to disseminate it to anti-trafficking stakeholders such as immigration officers, judges, police, and local NGOs. (13)

The Multi-Sector Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor was active again during the reporting period, but participating NGOs have indicated that the committee is more effective in the areas around Bujumbura and lacks a presence upcountry, limiting its ability to respond to urgent cases outside of the capital region. (8)

While the Ad Hoc Committee was active during the reporting period, it did not receive any dedicated funds from the government for the fiscal year and thus was reliant upon funding sources from international organizations. (13) Furthermore, there is a lack of coordination and training among stakeholders to properly classify and respond to cases of human trafficking. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including inactive and expired policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for Combating Trafficking in Persons (2019–2020)	Aimed to significantly reduce human trafficking in Burundi by 2020 through the adoption of political, social, economic, and institutional measures. Identified women and children as being the most vulnerable to human trafficking, noting sectors of high prevalence and human trafficker profiles. (34,41) The policy ended in 2020 and has not been replaced. (8) The government reported that it continued implementing the 2018–2020 Integrated Plan of Activities to carry out the National Action Plan, and noted that it accomplished a majority of the activities during the reporting period. The government began working with the IOM to draft a new plan. (13)
Burundi National Development Plan (2018–2027)	Ten-year strategic plan that aims to address economic and social challenges in the country. Includes goals to address poverty and access to education, and seeks to address youth employment through strategies such as updates to the labor code and improvements in basic and vocational education. (42) During the reporting period, the government worked with IOM to recruit members of the Burundian diaspora to serve in consultative roles on the implementation of the plan. (43)

During the reporting period, research did not reveal any steps taken by the government to renew the expired National Revised Action Plan for the Fight Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Centers for Family Development†	Ministry of National Solidarity, Social Affairs, Human Rights and Gender-operated centers that address human rights issues, including child exploitation, and reintegrate victims in their home communities. Coordinate with Child Protection Committees to refer victims to local NGOs for care, when necessary. (33,44) The centers continued to operate during the reporting period, including providing services to six child trafficking victims repatriated from Tanzania. (3,13)
Country Program for the Promotion of Decent Work†*	Developed in 2020 by the Ministry of Labor in partnership with the ILO, aims to increase job opportunities for vulnerable populations such as youth who are at risk of being victims of human trafficking, and promote the application of international labor standards. (13)
IOM Anti-Trafficking Programs*	Includes the Burundi Counter-Trafficking (2019–2022) program launched in 2019 in partnership with the Kingdom of the Netherlands that aims to reinforce government anti-human trafficking efforts by improving coordination between government ministries, Burundi National Police, and civil society organizations. Also aims to strengthen the national referral system for the protection of and improve reintegration services for human trafficking victims. (19,45) In 2020, IOM bolstered its anti-trafficking programming in Burundi through the USAID-funded "National Response to Victim Protection, Prevention and Prosecution of Trafficking in Burundi" program. The 2 year, $1.5 million project seeks to improve Burundi's capacity by raising awareness, improving victim services, and centralizing government counter-trafficking efforts. (46)
"Back to School" Campaign†	UNICEF and Ministry of Education "Back to School" campaign to promote equitable access and retention in school for 2.6 million basic education students, half of them girls. (47) UNICEF continued its campaign to help modernize school facilities and update and improve curriculum, and held its annual supply distribution campaign in September 2020. (48,49)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Burundi.

Research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs to assist children working in agriculture. Further, the scope of existing programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Burundi (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that forced labor is criminally prohibited with possible penalties beyond fines.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that the use of children in illicit activities is criminally prohibited with possible penalties beyond fines.	2015 – 2020
	Establish by law a compulsory education age equal to the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that all children are protected from hazardous work activities, including in agriculture, which has hazardous conditions and in which child labor is known to occur.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2012 – 2020
Enforcement	Conduct targeted inspections in sectors and areas where child labor is known to be prevalent, including in agriculture and the informal sector.	2020
	Ensure the government conducts an adequate number of labor inspections and that inspections cover all areas of the country.	2019 – 2020
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2020
	Provide sufficient funding and resources to the Inspector General of Work and Social Security to cover needs such as fuel costs, per diem, office supplies, and vehicles.	2009 – 2020
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts including whether initial training is provided to investigators, the number of investigations conducted, violations identified, prosecutions initiated, and convictions achieved related to the criminal enforcement of child labor laws.	2017 – 2020
	Ensure that officials receive adequate training on laws pertaining to the worst forms of child labor.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies and agencies responsible for responding to human trafficking have the resources, guidance, and capacity necessary to investigate cases and provide services to victims.	2019 – 2020
	Strengthen referral mechanisms between law enforcement agencies, social services, and civil society organizations to ensure that cases are properly investigated and that victims receive services.	2020
Coordination	Improve the capacity of the Multi-Sector Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor to ensure coverage in areas outside of the capital city.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure the viability of established coordinating mechanisms by dedicating regular funding for their operation.	2019 – 2020
	Improve training and coordination among anti-trafficking in person stakeholders.	2020
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as a national child labor action plan or a national trafficking in persons action plan.	2015 – 2020
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on child labor prevalence across relevant sectors.	2020
	Increase access to education by eliminating school-related fees; increasing the number of well-trained educators; expanding infrastructure to accommodate the needs of female and disabled students; and increasing birth registration rates for populations such as the Batwa ethnic group.	2015 – 2020
	Institute and expand existing programs to address child labor, including in agriculture.	2009 – 2020

In 2020, Cabo Verde made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The National Assembly approved a draft law on Crimes of Aggression and Sexual Abuse Against Children and Adolescents, which increases penalties for sexual assault, including in cases of commercial sexual exploitation, sexting, and child sex tourism. The Observatory for Monitoring and Rapid Identification of Situations of Trafficking in Persons also developed internal procedures and a list of priorities related to human trafficking, including child trafficking. Furthermore, the government extended compulsory, tuition-free education through the 12th grade. However, children in Cabo Verde are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Law enforcement officials often lack the necessary resources to conduct thorough investigations, and communication among enforcement agencies is limited. In addition, social programs to assist children involved in agriculture and domestic work are not sufficient to address the scope of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Cabo Verde are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-6) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (6-8) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Cabo Verde.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	3.2 (2,392)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	90.1
Combining Work and School (%)	10 to 14	1.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		87.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (9)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Inquérito as Despesas e Receitas Familiares (HHS), 2001–2002. (10)

Figure I. Working Children by Sector, Ages 10-14

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including carrying heavy loads† (1,7,8,11)
	Raising livestock (11)
	Artisanal fishing in small boats† (8,11)
Industry	Construction (12)
Services	Domestic work (1,6-8)
	Street work, including vending, garbage scavenging,† car washing, and begging (6,7,13,14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-5)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (6,11)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The commercial sexual exploitation of boys and girls, including in the tourism industry, occurs in Cabo Verde. (3,4,6,11) Research indicates that the islands of Sal and Boa Vista register the highest incidences of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (2) Research further indicates that children are also victims of commercial sexual exploitation on the islands of Brava, Santiago, Fogo, and São Vicente. (6)

During the reporting year, the government extended compulsory, tuition-free education through the 12th grade. (8) According to the Cabo Verdean Institute for Children and Adolescents (ICCA), not all special needs students or children in remote areas had equal access to education. In some areas, mountainous topography obliged children to commute great distances to reach secondary schools. (8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Cabo Verde has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 261 of the Labor Code (15)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 264 of the Labor Code; Article 133 of the Civil Code (15,16)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		National List of Dangerous Work for Children (17)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 14 of Chapter 3 of the Labor Code; Articles 149, 271, and 271-A of the Penal Code (15,18)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 149 and 271-A of the Penal Code (18)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 144–145, 148–150, and 271-A of the Penal Code (18)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 8 of the Drug Trafficking Law (19)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 31 of the Military Service Law (20)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of the Military Service Law (20)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 268-C of the Penal Code (18)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Articles 13 and 20 of the Education Law (21)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 14 of the Education Law (21)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (22)

During the reporting period, the National Assembly approved a draft law on Crimes of Aggression and Sexual Abuse Against Children and Adolescents aimed at increasing penalties for sexual assault, including in cases of commercial sexual exploitation, sexting, and child sex tourism. The law would also revise the age of "children" upward from 14 to 16 in such cases. (8,23)

The Civil Code includes a list of light work activities that children age 14 are allowed to perform; however, the law does not prescribe the number of hours per week permissible for light work, nor does it specify the conditions under which light work may be performed. (16,24,25)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Inspector General for Labor	Monitors and enforces child labor laws, working closely with the Cabo Verdean Institute for Children and Adolescents (ICCA). (8)
Attorney General's Office	Determines whether cases have merit and can refer relevant cases to the Judicial Police for investigation. Prepares cases for trial. (8)
Judicial Police and National Police	Judicial Police conduct criminal investigations; National Police make arrests related to the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Cabo Verde took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Inspector General for Labor (IGT) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$26,000 (26)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspectors	21 (3)	21 (8)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	Yes (3)	Yes (27)

Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (3)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	1,752 (28)	723‡ (8)
Number Conducted at Worksite	1,752 (28)	723‡(8)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	0 (3)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	0 (3)	Unknown
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (3)	Yes (27)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (8)

‡ Data are from January 2020 to June 2020. (8)

Although the government did not report any child labor violations, ICCA recorded 24 reports of child labor violations during the reporting period. When IGT inspectors find a case of child labor, they inform ICCA for referral to social services providers. (3)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The government did not provide information on whether refresher courses were provided, the number of child labor violations found, or the number of penalties imposed or collected in relation to child labor violations during the reporting period.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Cabo Verde took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (29)	Unknown
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (29)	Unknown
Number of Investigations	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Convictions	Unknown	0 (30)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (8)

ICCA registered and assisted 172 reports of sexual abuse and exploitation of children in 2020, which may have included potential child trafficking victims. (28)

Reports indicate that the Judicial Police and the National Police often lack the necessary financial and human resources to conduct thorough investigations, including cases of child labor. (8,11)

The government did not maintain comprehensive anti-trafficking in persons law enforcement and victim protection data among its criminal enforcement agencies. (6) Although law enforcement agencies work well together, limited coordination between agencies, which sometimes struggle to share case information and updates, may hinder enforcement efforts. (11) In addition, reports indicate that the judicial system is overburdened with a backlog of cases, which can contribute to a lack of protection for child victims of the worst forms of child labor. (2,3)

The government did not provide information on its criminal enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for Child Labor Prevention and Eradication in Cabo Verde	Coordinates the execution of the National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and provides a functional mechanism for reciprocal referrals between law enforcement and social services. Led by ICCA, with the support of the Ministry of Youth, Labor and Development of Human Resources. (31) In 2020, coordinated activities with various partners, including civil society partners. (8)
Cabo Verdean Institute for Children and Adolescents (ICCA)	Coordinates and monitors the implementation of all national programs and activities to prevent and combat child labor. (32) In 2020, conducted an assessment of the National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor. ICCA also consulted with UNICEF, among others, to assess the impact of the National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents, and began developing a new action plan for 2021–2023. (8)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Children and Adolescent Committee to Prevent and Combat Sexual Abuse and Exploitation	Contributes to the prevention and elimination of child sexual exploitation by coordinating the activities of member organizations and public and private services. Supervises, monitors, and evaluates the National Plan to Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents. (11) Led by ICCA. (33) In 2020, coordinated with NGOs, public and private institutions, and religious organizations. (8)
Observatory for Monitoring and Rapid Identification of Situations of Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates and monitors all efforts to combat human trafficking. Comprises law enforcement, NGOs, civil society, and various government agencies. (11,34) Led by the Ministry of Justice and Labor. (11) In 2020, the Observatory met once and developed internal procedures and a list of priorities related to trafficking in persons and the exploitation of children. (8)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor	Prioritizes the eradication of child labor. Outlines specific objectives, including data collection, institutional capacity building, and enhancement of measures to prevent, protect, and remove children from involvement in child labor. (31) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor.
Code of Ethics Against the Sexual Exploitation of Children	Guides and governs agencies involved in the tourism sector to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children and adolescents. (35) Remained in force in 2020. (30)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2018–2021)	Prioritizes five strategic areas: prevention, awareness, protection, investigation, and coordination. (36) Establishes the Observatory for Monitoring and Rapid Identification of Situations of Trafficking in Persons. (11,34) Active in 2020. (30)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating and preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Labor Awareness Campaigns†	Government program implemented by ICCA and the National Committee for Child Labor Prevention and Eradication that conducts national awareness-raising campaigns on the worst forms of child labor. (37) ICCA conducted awareness-raising activities within communities during the reporting period. (30)
Help for At-Risk Children and Social Protection and Reintegration Centers†	ICCA-implemented program that provides education, health services, and professional training to vulnerable children and their families. Operates six day centers for street children vulnerable to sexual and labor exploitation, including sex trafficking. Moreover, ICCA operates three additional centers for street children through their Nôz Kaza project. (28) The government also operates five long-term social protection and reintegration centers that provide support and educational integration services to children who have experienced long-term trauma, including child trafficking. (38) All centers were active in 2020, and continued to provide support to numerous at-risk children. (38)
Child Emergency Centers†	ICCA-implemented program that operates two emergency centers for child victims of abuse and sexual exploitation on Santiago and São Vicente islands, operating 24/7. (31,37) Active in 2020. (8)
Cabo Verdean Foundation for Social Action in Education†	Government programs aimed at providing access to education for disadvantaged children by paying for school fees, materials, and meals. In 2020, launched a campaign to guarantee funds for school materials to 30,000 students from poor families, which will be distributed through the School Kits Program. (39)

† Program is funded by the Government of Cabo Verde.

Research indicates that awareness-raising efforts on human trafficking, including child sex tourism, remained insufficient on some of the nine inhabited islands. (6) Research also found that programs to assist children involved in agriculture and domestic work are not sufficient to address the scope of the problem.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Cabo Verde (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Prescribe by law the number of hours per week and conditions under which light work may be undertaken.	2015 – 2020
Enforcement	Ensure that criminal investigators receive sufficient financial and human resources to conduct thorough investigations, including investigations of child labor.	2014 – 2020
	Publish labor law enforcement data, including information on labor inspectorate funding, whether refresher courses are provided, the number of child labor violations found, and the number of penalties imposed and collected related to child labor.	2011 – 2020
	Develop a system to compile and share comprehensive anti-trafficking in persons and victim identification data among criminal enforcement agencies to improve coordination efforts.	2018 – 2020
	Make criminal law enforcement data publicly available, including information on training for new criminal investigators, whether refresher courses are provided, and the number of investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2011 – 2020
	Ensure that the judiciary has sufficient resources and personnel to allow cases to be prosecuted in a timely manner.	2019 – 2020
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor.	2020
Social Programs	Ensure that special needs students and children in remote areas have equal access to education, including by providing adequate transportation.	2020
	Conduct awareness-raising activities on human trafficking, including child sex tourism, on all nine inhabited islands.	2018 – 2020
	Institute programs to address child labor in agriculture and domestic work.	2010 – 2020

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2020, Cambodia made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government passed new prakas—ministry-level regulations—creating an annual public service fee for enterprises in specific sectors that will pay for announced inspections by the Ministry of Labor and Vocational Training in 2021. In an effort to address the rapid increase of cases related to the online sexual exploitation of children in the country, the Cambodian National Council for Children created a working group to strengthen local governance and provide parents information on how to monitor their child's online activity. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Cambodia is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued practices that delayed advancement to eliminate child labor. The government failed to take active measures to investigate, prosecute, convict, and sentence public officials who participate in or facilitate the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation of children and debt-based forced labor in brick kilns. In addition, judges were reported to have accepted bribes in return for dismissal of charges, acquittal, and reduced sentencing for individuals committing such crimes, especially for those with alleged ties to the government; this made children more vulnerable to child labor. Children in Cambodia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced labor in brickmaking. Insufficient resources hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws, especially in rural areas where a majority of child laborers work. In addition, continuing challenges in accessing basic education and the absence of a compulsory education requirement increase children's vulnerability to involvement in the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Cambodia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced labor in brickmaking. (1-3) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Cambodia.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	7.5 (243,371)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	87.6

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Fishing, including deep-sea† and night fishing† (6-11)
	Peeling shrimp and shucking crabs (13)
	Production of palm oil, bananas, tobacco, cassava, rubber, and rice (9-11,13,14)
	Growing, cutting, tying, carrying†, and spraying pesticides† on sugarcane (9,10,14,15)
	Logging† for the production of timber (8,9,13)
	Production of salt (16)
	Production of bovines (17,18)
Industry	Making bricks,† including feeding clay into brickmaking machines, removing wood fuel from trucks and feeding to brickmaking machines, drying bricks, transporting bricks to the oven,† and loading bricks onto and off of trucks (1,6,8,10,14,19,20)
	Construction,† including operating transportation equipment† (6,8-11,14,21)
	Production of textiles, including bleaching,† dyeing,† and finishing with chemicals;† garments; and footwear (6,10,13,14,22,23)
	Production of alcoholic beverages† (6,8,13)
	Work in slaughterhouses† for the production of meat† (6,8)
	Manufacturing of wood and metal† products (6)
Services	Domestic work (6,11,12,14,24)
	Work as security guards† and in entertainment,† including as bartenders,† masseurs,† dancers,† and waiters† (6,10,11,14)
	Street work, including car washing, begging, vending, scavenging, collecting garbage, and exploitation by orphanages to fraudulently lure donations from tourists (9-12,14,21,25-27)
	Work as garbage pickers in dumpsites (9,10,14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (10-12,24,27,28)
	Forced begging or street vending, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,11,12,14,29)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (21)
	Forced labor in the production of bricks (1,10,11,13,14,21,24,30,31)
	Forced labor in fishing (11)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In Cambodian brick factories, some children engage in forced labor, sometimes in dangerous conditions, to offset family debt to employers. (3,9-11,24,28,30,32) The rapid growth in the construction industry, particularly in Phnom Penh and Sihanoukville, has increased the demand for bricks and fueled child labor and debt bondage. (3,10,30,33) Failed harvests from droughts have compounded farmers' debts, which they sell to brick kiln owners, thus placing their families into hereditary debt bondage until the debts are repaid. (3,10,11,30,32,33,34,35) During the reporting period, the government released data from the 2019 census of all 486 operational kilns in the country, claiming to have found no instances of child labor or debt bondage. These results contradicted findings by independent researchers, which show high rates of child labor and debt bondage at brick kilns. (10,14,24,31,35-39)

In 2020, labor inspectors conducted surveys of 68 brick kilns, during which they interviewed workers, children, and kiln owners. However, the inspectors failed to take legal action or issue any fines or warnings related to child labor violations, claiming these visits were "educational" and they would impose fines in the future. (14,28,35,39) In addition, they continued to instruct owners to sign agreements saying that they would not loan money to their workers or engage in child labor. (14,28,35,39)

Research indicated that some children work on rubber plantations in northeastern Cambodia to help pay off loan debt taken on by their parents, putting them at risk for situations of debt bondage. There is also research indicating that children in domestic work face similar debt bondage conditions, including approximately 30 percent of child domestic workers under the age of 18. (14)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, two surveys conducted by NGOs found an increase in the number of children engaging in child labor due to economic hardships brought on by the COVID-19 pandemic. (14,40,41) The first nationwide survey of child labor since 2012, conducted in 2019 by the government and the ILO, has yet to be released and made publicly available. (10,13,14,37)

Children increasingly migrate to the Middle East and within Asia where traffickers may force them to work on fishing vessels, especially on Thai-owned and -operated fishing vessels, in the agriculture and construction sectors, in factories, domestic work (often through debt-based coercion), or they exploit them through commercial sexual exploitation. The pandemic decreased such migration along with all types of cross-border travel. (11,27,28) Children, girls in particular, are subject to human trafficking domestically, from rural to urban areas, and internationally, to countries such as Thailand and Vietnam, for commercial sexual exploitation (CSEC). (3,11,12,24,26,27) Girls as young as 14 are "bride trafficked" to China for CSEC, and research found that the number of these cases doubled during the reporting period due to pandemic-related job losses, especially in the garment, hospitality, and tourism sectors. (14,27,42)

The largely unregulated growth of Chinese casinos, entertainment establishments, and other commercial enterprises in Preah Sihanouk Province has led to an increase of Cambodian girls in forced labor, including sex trafficking. However, these numbers dropped sharply due to the pandemic and the government's ban on online gambling, which resulted in casinos shutting down due to a lack of revenue. (11,14,24,27)

Online sexual exploitation of children (OSEC) is reportedly increasing in Cambodia, facilitated by an increase in cheap, high-speed Internet access. (9,10,26,27,43,44) Furthermore, during the reporting period, a survey conducted by NGOs noted a rise in the reported number of OSEC cases after schools closed at the height of the pandemic. With children spending more time online, it noted that 15 percent of children reported having been contacted by strangers on social media, and 2 percent reported having been asked to share intimate pictures or videos, or to perform inappropriate acts in front of their webcams. (14,41,45) To help address the emergence of OSEC within Cambodia, a local NGO set up an online platform and a hotline for people to report instances of OSEC. (46,47)

Research has found that children who are placed in residential care facilities or orphanages in Cambodia are at a higher risk of engaging in the worst forms of child labor, including child sexual exploitation, and are exposed to conditions that can negatively affect their developmental and health outcomes. (10,11,26,27,48) Of the 265 residential care institutions housing 7,634 children, many private institutions reportedly exploit children as "sham" orphans to lure donations from foreigners. (10,26,48)

Although the Education Law establishes free basic education, unofficial school-related fees, such as for building maintenance and school uniforms, are prohibitive for some families. (10,14,21,49) Other barriers to education include denied enrollment for children without birth certificates, limited transportation to schools in remote areas and at "floating schools," lack of drinking water, sanitation and toilet facilities in some schools, language barriers, threat of corporal punishment, and an insufficient number of teachers. These barriers particularly affect ethnic minority children, children with disabilities, and children from rural and disadvantaged communities. (8,10,11,14,48,50-55) Furthermore, children may only transfer schools during two designated periods per year, resulting in some children repeating a year of schooling because of the disruption in the school year, which can contribute to dropout rates among children living in temporary settings, including migrant children. (14,55)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Education, Youth, and Sports (MOEYS) ordered all provincial Departments of Education to provide academic transcript certifications of foreign education for children of returning migrant families to help ensure that they could continue their studies upon their return to Cambodia. (28) In addition, MOEYS, in cooperation with several NGOs, designed and approved a new school curriculum entitled "Education to Prevent Trafficking in Persons," aimed at educating students from grade four through nine on the signs and dangers of human trafficking. The curriculum will be included in social studies and civic education coursework at public schools throughout Cambodia in 2021. (28) Furthermore, to address the needs of all Cambodian students—including indigenous students—MOEYS developed the Multilingual Education National Action Plan, 2019–2023, which has been implemented in 18 districts in the 5 targeted provinces of Ratanakiri, Stung Treng, Mondulakiri, Preah Vihear, and Kratié, and in 5 local languages. (56,57) This national action plan focuses on strengthening and extending equal and equitable educational access to indigenous and ethnic minority students, allowing them to increase their participation and commitment to attending school. (39,55,57)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Cambodia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Cambodia’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work and prohibiting the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 177 of the Labor Law (58)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 173 and 177 of the Labor Law; Regulation on the Prohibition of Hazardous Child Labor; Articles 339–340 of the Penal Code (58–60)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 2 of the Regulation on the Prohibition of Hazardous Child Labor (59)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 15–16 of the Labor Law; Articles 10, 12, 15–17, and 19 of the Law on Suppression of Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation; Article 80 of Law on Juvenile Justice (58,61,62)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 10, 12, 15–17, and 19 of the Law on Suppression of Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation (61)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 15, 28, 33–37, and 41 of the Law on Suppression of Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation; Articles 284, 289, and 346 of the Penal Code (60,61)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 345 of the Penal Code; Articles 3 and 47 of the Law on Control of Drugs (60,63)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 42 of the Law on General Statutes for the Military Personnel of the Royal Cambodian Armed Forces (64)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		The Law on General Statutes for the Military Personnel of the Royal Cambodian Armed Forces (64)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 31 of the Education Law (49)

Although the Labor Code prohibits work by children under age 15, the law does not apply to children outside of formal employment relationships and, therefore, does not conform to international standards that require all children be protected under the law that sets a minimum age for work. (48,59) The Ministry of Labor and Vocational Training (MOLVT)'s regulation on household work extends minimum age protections for domestic workers to age 18 and provides clear definitions of household work. However, the regulation does not specify legal protections for household workers employed in informal relationships, including when working for their relatives without a contract. (9,48,58,65,66)

Cambodian laws also do not sufficiently prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of children, as the use or offering of a child for pornographic performances is not criminally prohibited (21,60)

Education is free, but not compulsory, through grade nine. (48,49,66) The lack of compulsory schooling makes children under age 15 particularly vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to be in school but are not yet legally permitted to work. (49,58,66,67)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Vocational Training (MOLVT) – National Committee on Countering Child Labor (NCCL)	Overseen by MOLVT. The head of MOLVT's Child Labor Bureau also serves as the NCCL Secretary General. (10,14,68) Enforces child-related provisions of the Labor Law, and trains Commune Committees for Women and Children that oversee local child labor monitoring systems. (68) Includes 24 MOLVT inter-departmental inspection teams. (69) Tasked with removing children from child labor, including at brick kilns. (10) Employs 1 child labor inspector in each of Cambodia's 25 provinces. (9,52,70) During the reporting period, funded a "Core Intervention to Prevent and Withdraw Children from the Worst Forms of Child Labor" program, providing food, school kits, and part-time teachers for 400 vulnerable children living on or near brick kilns in four provinces, provided their families with $250, and offering skills training for children over age 15. Held a management course for labor inspectors and provided two training sessions for labor inspectors, including one on conducting online surveys of employers of young workers to 62 child labor department officials, and a second one to 50 labor inspectors on the worst forms of child labor. (14,39)
Ministry of the Interior—Cambodian National Police—Anti-Human Trafficking and Juvenile Protection Department (AHTJP), Anti-Cybercrime Department, and Department of Criminal Police of General Commissariat	Anti-Human Trafficking and Juvenile Protection Police are commanded by the Ministry of the Interior and report to the AHTJP Department Director. (21,26) Enforce laws against human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children (CSEC), in collaboration with municipal and provincial anti-human trafficking and juvenile protection offices. (21,26) Field complaints from the public about human trafficking, which can be filed through the anti-human trafficking hotline. (39) Oversee the Information and Technology Office, which searches for evidence of trafficking in persons and sexual exploitation of children on the Internet, in printed media, and in other sources. (27,68,69) During the reporting period, handled at least 21 cases and rescued 26 child victims of labor and sexual exploitation. (28) In February, arrested one suspected pimp who allegedly brought two underage girls for CSEC at a guesthouse in Phnom Penh; the case is ongoing. (14) In conjunction with a local NGO, placed placards with the anti-human trafficking hotline phone number on taxis and tuk-tuks throughout the country. Required all guesthouses and hotels in all 25 provinces to post a notice with the anti-human trafficking hotline phone number, and promoted the hotline phone number on the AHTJP and the Deputy Prime Minister's Facebook pages. (28)
	Cambodian National Police Anti-Cybercrime Department is located within the Central Security Department and is responsible for investigating telecommunications crimes, including crimes committed via the Internet. (26,27,71)
	Department of Criminal Police has broad responsibility for most criminal law enforcement, aside from specialized areas such as economic crimes, which are covered by other departments. (39,71)

Ministry of Defense—Cambodian Royal Armed Forces—Cambodia Royal Gendarmerie (CRG)—Bureau of Anti-Human Trafficking and Juvenile Protection	Mandated to enforce laws against human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children found within the military. (39)
Ministry of Tourism—Tourism Police Department	Tourism Police Department works to combat the sexual exploitation of children in travel and tourism and child trafficking. Disseminates public awareness materials to counter child sexual abuse. (27)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Social Affairs, Veterans, and Youth Rehabilitation (MOSAVY) launched a digital case management system called PRIMERO for child protection service providers; approved the Guidelines for Case Management during Infectious Disease Outbreaks; launched the Guidelines of Basic Competencies for Social Workforce; and launched the USAID-supported "Strong Family" Campaign, which aims to end violence against children and prevent unnecessary family separation. MOSAVY also organized two workshops on guidelines and procedures for identifying victims of human trafficking for law enforcement officials at the village and district level. (14,72,73)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Cambodia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MOLVT that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

During the reporting period, MOSAVY reported delivering services to 220 human trafficking victims, including 11 children. (28) In addition, MOSAVY processed the intake of 1,005 children it identified as either victims of, or vulnerable to, CSEC, including 63 children who had been deported by Thai authorities and sent back over the border to the MOSAVY-run Poipet Transit Center. (14)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, labor inspections were halted for several months at the height of the pandemic and moved instead to Internet-based assessments and factory self-assessments. MOLVT held trainings for labor inspectors on these changes. However, the National Committee on Countering Child Labor (NCCL) continued conducting joint labor inspections with inspectors from other labor bureaus in the garment sector—in parallel with the ILO's Better Factories Cambodia inspections—to improve inspection efficiency while continuing to implement its zero-tolerance policy for child labor. (10,14,39) Children discovered in garment factories are immediately removed and placed in vocational training or other studies, and upon reaching the legal working age, are guaranteed employment. (10,14,22,74) Children discovered working in other sectors are removed and referred to MOSAVY for assessment. (9,10,75)

The NCCL relies on other bureaus within MOLVT to alert them to possible child labor issues in their specific sectors before inspections occur. Due, however, to the segregated nature of MOLVT, bureaus are not equipped with the proper technical training and expertise to identify child labor, resulting in bureau staff typically asking very few questions during inspections. (9,10) In an effort to improve labor inspectors' performance, MOLVT requires that, in order to continue working as labor inspectors, all national-level labor inspectors take and pass a yearly online examination that aims to assess and improve overall technical skills and legal knowledge; it is unknown whether this training took place in 2020. (10,39,76) During the reporting period, the government issued two new prakas—ministry-level regulations—that established joint inspection teams composed of officials from MOLVT, the Ministry of Industry and Handicrafts, the Ministry of the Environment, and the Ministry of Tourism. These teams are tasked with monitoring adherence to labor laws in the garment, tourism, industrial, handicraft, and entertainment and nightlife sectors. (14,39,77,78) However, MOLVT was unable to cite any specific examples of such joint inspections occurring in 2020, and acknowledged that these prakas have not been fully implemented. (14)

The government only proactively inspects two sectors for child labor: the brick kiln industry and the export garment sector. During the reporting period, MOLVT cited the construction and entertainment industries as two additional focus areas for inspections. (10,14,74) However, research indicated that labor inspectors were rarely able to conduct inspections in the constructions sector, as owners who were closely affiliated with government officials were able to obstruct labor inspectors from accessing their properties. (10,14,28,39,76) MOLVT officials said they had not yet conducted inspections in the entertainment sector, in part because they were not sure if they had sufficient legal authority to do so. (71) In the brick kiln industry, authorities often provided brick kiln owners with advance notice of inspections, enabling them to conceal abuses, including child labor violations. In addition, many police officers are unaware that the policing of brick kilns falls under their investigative purview. (11)

The government, the ILO, and NGOs all agree that the labor inspectorate is insufficiently funded, resulting in insufficient training opportunities for labor inspectors and an insufficient number of labor inspections. This, in turn, impacts the ability of the labor inspectorate to conduct inspections outside of Phnom Penh and in rural communities due to lack of funding for transportation costs, resulting in most child labor inspections occurring in the city of Phnom Penh and in the provincial, formal-sector factories rather than in rural areas in which a majority of child laborers work. (6,9,10,14,48,76) The lack of funding is also one factor preventing the labor inspectorate from conducting inspections in hospitality and nightlife establishments after business hours, because the labor inspectorate is unable to pay inspectors for overtime work. (9,14,48) In addition, the labor inspectorate does not have the ability to inspect child labor abuses on private farms or domestic work, which is overseen by the Sub-National Committee of Women and Children. Police, however, investigated cases of violence against child domestic workers. (9,10,14) While unannounced inspections are permitted, they rarely happen in practice. (9,10,14,52)

According to the government, the labor inspectorate will have sufficient funding in 2021 due to the passing of a new prakas called the "Joint Prakas on Public Service Fees." This new regulation, which was approved in March 2020, requires factories in the garment, footwear, and travel goods sectors to pay an annual fee of $250 towards a fund that will help cover the cost of announced inspections. (14,79) Enterprises in other sectors have to pay an annual fee of $100. Government officials noted that this new regulation will help rectify the previous insufficiency in labor inspectorate funding. (14,79)

Cambodia

MOLVT has established regulations for children on hazardous work in several sectors, including in agriculture, brickmaking, and fishing. However, malfeasance within MOLVT and law enforcement agencies limits the capacity of local authorities to adequately enforce these regulations, resulting in penalties related to the worst forms of child labor rarely being imposed in accordance with the law. (8-10,14,48,80-82) Overall, research indicates that the government lacks the capacity to deal with child labor and is overwhelmed by the scale of the issue, particularly in Preah Sihanouk, leading to an increase in the number of child laborers at construction sites and entertainment venues, including casinos, hotels, and karaoke bars. (10,14) Such child labor has become less common since Cambodia banned online gambling in 2019, which resulted in the closure of most casinos and the suspension of many construction projects. However, NGOs report that this has been replaced by a rise in child begging and other street work due to the economic impact of the pandemic and lack of economic opportunities. (71)

The government did not publish data on the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Cambodia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Cambodian National Police that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (10)	Unknown (14)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (10)	N/A (14)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (10)	Unknown (14)
Number of Investigations	7 (10)	21 (39)
Number of Violations Found	30 (10)	31 (14)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (10)	Unknown (14)

Research found that criminal law enforcement officials, writ large, continued to fail to take significant actions on credible reports of government officials being complicit in the worst forms of child labor, including at entertainment establishments in which the commercial sexual exploitation of children is known to occur, and at brick kilns whose owners may subject families, including children, to debt-based forced labor in brick kilns. (11,14,24,48,75) In particular, police officers have reported that they sometimes avoid investigating child labor complaints at brick kilns, and instead assist in the capture and jailing of runaway brick kiln workers to avoid potential retaliation by politically connected owners who use their connections to avoid potential investigations and fines. (11,30,54,74,83) In 2020, the government failed to make significant efforts to investigate, prosecute, or convict government officials complicit in the worst forms of child labor. However, in February 2021, Prime Minister Hun Sen ordered that the Cambodian National Police arrest a district police chief accused of releasing a labor broker after they were arrested for facilitating the illegal movement of Cambodian migrant workers into Thailand; the case remains pending. (11,24,28,54,75)

In 2020, government officials profited directly from the commercial sexual exploitation of children and indirectly by being permissive of it, especially when undertaken in establishments owned by those with ties to the government. (11,28,74,84) Furthermore, research found that owners of entertainment establishments at which child sexual exploitation is known to occur sometimes used their connections to law enforcement officials to avoid investigation, prosecution, and fines. (11,24,54,74,84) Research also found instances when raids into these establishments were thwarted by “tip-offs” from working-level police in advance of the raids. (11,24,28) To minimize internal leaks, some provincial police chiefs turned over cases to the Anti-Human Trafficking Juvenile Police, which conducted independent raids without notifying the local authorities until moments before they began. (11,28)

Anti-trafficking police units lack the specific legal authority to conduct undercover trafficking in persons investigations, which constrains their ability to pursue human traffickers, including those involved in child sexual exploitation. (10,11,24,27,48,43) The government says it grants such authority to police on a case-by-case basis. (71) With the increasingly clandestine nature in which sex trafficking operations occur, anti-trafficking police were limited to investigating more obvious manifestations, including sex-on-premise establishments in which victims were more likely to self-report and testify. (11) In addition, many law enforcement officials, particularly those located in rural areas, are unaware of how to properly conduct anti-trafficking work, as most have not received training on basic law enforcement techniques. (11,24,28) Furthermore, law enforcement officials investigating suspected human trafficking cases are expected to personally cover all expenses, including transportation costs, and are rarely reimbursed in full or on time. This has led to officials reportedly pursuing cases for which costs will be covered on their behalf, and makes some law enforcement units more susceptible to malfeasance. (10,11,24,74)

Research also found that local officials allegedly facilitated cross-border human trafficking by accepting bribes to forge identity documents. (11) Intimidation of human trafficking victims and their families also occurred during the reporting period, perpetuated by a government regulation that bars NGOs from assisting human trafficking victims in seeking formal recognition and obtaining the required identification from the government to receive available victim services. This forced victims and their families to have to interact directly with criminal law enforcement authorities, resulting in most victims declining to file complaints and obtain the IDs necessary to receive services. (11,28)

In Cambodia, judges have discretion to determine whether perpetrators of crimes related to child labor will be imprisoned or fined and the amount of the fine. The penalties imposed are not uniformly administered and do not adhere to the parameters prescribed by law. (3,11,54) In some cases, citing resource constraints and pandemic-related shutdowns, not all trafficking in person cases were brought to court despite evidence being supplied by the police. Prosecutors and judges have been known to accept bribes in return for dismissal of charges, acquittal, and reduced sentencing, especially for those with alleged ties to the government. (11,27,28,54,74) Research also found that law enforcement misused resources at their disposal to detain, prosecute, and convict some individuals for politically motivated reasons or spurious trafficking in person charges. (11) Furthermore, law enforcement generally focused on deterring foreign involvement in CSEC, despite the fact that the local population constituted the main sources of demand. (11,28)

During the reporting period, the Phnom Penh Municipal Court opened the trial of a Chinese man and four Cambodians for allegedly trafficking at least four Cambodian girls to China to be brides for Chinese men. In October, prosecutors ordered the detention of an employer for torturing her 17-year-old domestic worker. (14) In addition, law enforcement authorities reported arresting five foreign individuals suspected of engaging in CSEC, but did not report whether they initiated prosecutions in any of these cases. (11)

Research indicates that the use of “judicial supervision,” where defendants are released on their own recognizance in advance of trial, has resulted in as many as 30 percent of human trafficking suspects not returning to participate in their criminal trials as law enforcement lacks the resources to monitor defendants. This severely limits the ability of law enforcement officials to hold criminals accountable, putting the population at risk. (11,24,28) Due to a lack of resources, including personnel, and a lack of clear guidelines in the criminal procedural code regarding judicial supervision, law enforcement rarely issued arrest warrants for absconded defendants unless NGOs were available to assist in the apprehension of said defendants. (11) In addition, the government has yet to fully implement the “Child Friendly Court” program that will make it easier for child victims to provide testimony by using video-conferencing technology instead of confronting defendants in person, which can result in re-traumatization. (11,24)

Cambodian law outlines channels for victim restitution, and research indicated an increase in the number of verdicts ordering traffickers to pay some form of financial recompense to victims. However, this restitution was extremely difficult to obtain due to a legal requirement delaying payment until after the completion of the trafficker’s jail term; convicted traffickers’ frequent abscondment further complicated this arrangement. (11,27,28) Coupled with the government lacking a procedure on how to calculate compensation, victims rarely received the amount promised, and many victims’ families settled out of court with traffickers or accepted bribes to drop the relevant charges. (11,27,28)

The government's ability to properly save and store data related to the worst forms of child labor was found to be inadequate, due to outdated data collection storage platforms and a lack of resources, including training, equipment, and funding. (24,28,39) The government did not provide information on initial training for new employees, refresher courses, the number of prosecutions initiated, the number of convictions, or the number of imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in the report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Protection Committees	Cambodian National Council for Children coordinates child labor issues at the national level, including implementation, monitoring, and evaluation of all child rights policies and programs. (8,26,27,39) Ensures that projects and programs follow the National Plan of Action on the Reduction of Child Labor and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (8) Includes concerned ministries, businesses, trade unions, and NGOs. Oversees Provincial Committees on the Protection of Child Rights and Provincial Committees on Child Labor. (8) Coordinates all government ministries, institutions, international NGOs, development partners, and the community in promoting and protecting children's rights. (85) Oversees the National Child Protection Commission that coordinates and collaborates with government, civil society organizations, and NGOs. (86) During the reporting period, created a working group to discuss plans on how to prevent online sexual exploitation of children (OSEC) by strengthening local governance and providing parents with information on how to monitor children's online activity. Held a 2-day workshop on investigative and judicial processes, and how to improve child protection in relation to OSEC. (47,87) Participants included 152 law enforcement officers, including 25 capital-provincial anti-human trafficking and juvenile protection officers and 12 anti-human trafficking officers from the Military Police. (39,87) In addition, provided a workshop on actions to combat CSEC to 73 participants, including children’s guardians, and provided relief assistance to 570 families in 6 provinces. (39) National Committee on Child Protection coordinates inter-ministerial action on strengthening Cambodia's child protection system, and preventing and combating all forms of abuses and violence against children. (14) Reviews and addresses gaps in the legal framework, government policies, and national action plans related to child protection and promoting the effectiveness of law enforcement. Provides technical advice and assistance to enhance child protection. (14) In January 2020, released initial analysis of OSEC in Cambodia and held a workshop on OSEC with 65 participants at the national, regional, and provincial levels to promote awareness of increased vulnerability during the pandemic. (14,39) National Committee to Prevent and Respond to Violence Against Children implements the National Action Plan to Prevent and Respond to Violence Against Children, and coordinates, promotes, and monitors implementation activities of the national action plan. (14) During the reporting period, publicized the 2020 World Day Against Child Labor and conducted training on "positive parenting tools" designed to prevent violence against children in the home and promote better communication strategies to 9,751 parents in 6 targeted provinces. (14) Held Ministry of Social Affairs, Veterans, and Youth Rehabilitation (MOSAVY)-led capacity building workshop on Law on Juvenile Justice for 340 local officials. (14) Conducted training on "Guidelines on Managing Violence Against Women and Children in the Health System" for 354 trainers in 15 referral hospitals and 135 health centers in 8 provinces. Coordinated with national police to provide special child protection rooms at local police stations in 25 communes in 5 priority provinces. (14) National Homeless Committee* aims to address and resolve issues related to homelessness and homeless people, including children. Established in 2020 and chaired by MOSAVY. (14,39)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Commune Committees for Women and Children	Advisory entities that raise awareness of child labor regulations, promote school attendance, collaborate with provincial labor departments to monitor for child labor violations, and refer children at risk of or engaged in child labor to social protection services at the local level. Led by Ministry of the Interior's Director General of General Department of Local Administration. (21,26,39,88) Research was unable to determine whether this coordinating body was active during the reporting period.
Anti-Human Trafficking in Persons Committee	National Committee for Counter Trafficking (NCCT) coordinates government, NGO, civil society, and private sector efforts to address trafficking in persons and sexual exploitation. (24,26,28,89) Produces an annual report documenting the government's anti-trafficking in persons efforts. (28) Focuses on children's affairs, international cooperation, justice, law enforcement, migration, prevention, protection, recovery, reintegration, and repatriation. (90) Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister and the Ministry of Interior, with 4 vice chair ministries and 14 participating ministries. (3,27,70) Oversees Provincial Committees for Counter Trafficking in each province. (3,28,70) Has six working groups with inter-ministerial membership, each chaired by one ministry, including Prevention (Minister of Education); Protection, Recovery, Reintegration, and Repatriation (Minister of Social Affairs); Law Enforcement (Chief of the Cambodian National Police); Justice (Minister of Justice); International Cooperation (Minister of Women's Affairs); and Migration and Labor (Minister of Labor). (24,27,28) During the reporting period, maintained a monitoring working group to oversee the efforts of the inter-agency committee and provincial subcommittees. In addition, delivered 192 trainings to 7,491 law enforcement officers on anti-trafficking in persons laws, investigative techniques, and evidence collection. (28) Collaborated with NGOs to train 10,000 tuk-tuk drivers in Phnom Penh on how to identify suspicious activity. (91) Maintained victim identification manual and screening tool app in use at the Poipet Transit Center, and provided service provider contact information to victims. (11,26,74) Produced an annual report documenting anti-trafficking efforts; however, the report was not exhaustive amidst insufficient data collection. Hosted interfaith forum on combating human trafficking attended by high-level government officials and religious leaders. (11) In addition, partnered with the Ministry of Tourism to produce billboards, signs, posters, pamphlets, and other materials targeting potential perpetrators of CSEC, and participated in a counter-trafficking in persons inter-ministerial meeting co-hosted by the U.S. Embassy and the Ministry of Women's Affairs focused on analyzing government efforts. (11,14,28,39)  Online Child Sexual Exploitation (OSEC) Committee* is overseen by the Cambodia National Council for Children and was established in 2020. (14,39) Works in collaboration with nearly 20 institutions and ministries to combat online abuse and exploitation of children. (39)
Coordinated Mekong Ministerial Initiative Against Trafficking (COMMIT)	High-level policy dialogue comprising the six nations of the Greater Mekong Sub-Region. Meets regularly to discuss regional anti-trafficking agenda and share information. (24,28,92) Coordinates through Cambodian COMMIT Task Force, chaired by senior officials from the ministries of Justice and Women's Affairs. (24,28) Maintains annual COMMIT Work Plan with anti-trafficking programming and policies. (92) UN Action for Cooperation against Trafficking in Persons acts as COMMIT Secretariat and convenes meetings. (92) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Women's Affairs attended a virtual COMMIT Regional Taskforce meeting and the 14th COMMIT Senior Officials' meeting to discuss the Comprehensive Approach to Combating Human Trafficking. (28,39)
Ministry of Tourism—Child Safety Committee in the Tourism Sector	Child Safety Committee in the Tourism Sector works to prevent and protect the sexual exploitation of children in travel and tourism. Located in 24 provinces in Cambodia. (27)

*Coordinating body was established during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, the government entered into an agreement with the Government of Thailand to establish standard operating procedures (SOPs) on bilateral anti-trafficking in persons law enforcement cooperation. The SOPs will establish official conduits for cooperation and information sharing between the two countries related to: 1) migrants and trafficking in persons; 2) regulating timely and effective investigation and prosecution on trafficking in persons; 3) outlining policies to govern victim rescue, and; 4) giving victims and witnesses additional legal protection. (28)

The Commune Committees for Women and Children continue to be underfunded. (39)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plans of Action on Combating the Worst Forms of Child Labor	National Plan of Action on the Reduction of Child Labor and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2016–2025) aims to build the capacity of law enforcement officers, strengthen the enforcement of relevant laws, raise public awareness of child labor issues, and enhance child labor monitoring systems at the community level. (21) Overseen by MOLVT. (14) During the reporting period, provincial committees to counter child labor prepared 5-year progress reports to be approved by the National Committee to Counter Child Labor. (14,39) Creates a roadmap to the complete eradication of the worst forms of child labor by 2025 in various sectors, including services, agriculture, mining, and energy. (23,39,66,85) Mandates awareness-raising activities, legal action, and collaborations with civil society actors. (85) During the reporting period, mandated the inspection of brick kilns. Resulted in the establishment of provincial committees, which will prepare 5-year progress reports for approval by the National Committee to Counter Child Labor. (39) Third 5-Year National Plan of Action on the Suppression of Human Trafficking, Smuggling, Labor, and Sexual Exploitation (2019–2023) is coordinated by NCCT, with input from the ministries of Justice; Women's Affairs; Foreign Affairs; Labor; and Social Affairs, Veterans, and Youth Rehabilitation. (9) Aims to prevent and eliminate all forms of human trafficking, including by strengthening criminal law enforcement to protect children from exploitation in entertainment venues, integrating anti-human trafficking and child safety issues into the public school curriculum, and promoting the inclusion of vulnerable children in both formal and informal education. (90) Focused on four strategies: 1) strengthening cooperation in the formulation and implementation of laws, policies, and legal standards; 2) promoting efforts to prevent of all forms of human trafficking; 3) strengthening the criminal justice system; and 4) increasing protection of victims. (28) This policy was implemented during the reporting period. (39)
Action Plan to Prevent and Respond to Violence Against Children (2017–2021)	Led by the Ministry of Women's Affairs. (69,86) Developed in response to the Cambodia Violence Against Children Survey conducted in 2013. (27,86) Aims to prevent and respond to violence against children, including the worst forms of child labor. (27,44,93) Provides OSEC-related interventions in policy and governance, including: providing training for teachers and developing curriculum to help children build online safety skills; providing OSEC materials to law enforcement; and developing an online hotline to help identify platforms that support the perpetuation of OSEC. (10,27) Works to properly assess the scale and specific nature of OSEC in Cambodia to inform developments. (10) During the reporting period, began drafting a Law on Child Protection and corresponding procedures for alternative care for children (such as adoption), including a prakas on child reintegration services. (14,39)
National Policies on the Elimination of Child Labor in the Fisheries and Agricultural Sectors	Action Plan for Gender Equality Promotion and Child Labor Elimination in the Fisheries Sector (2016–2020) was overseen by the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries under the Fisheries Administration of Cambodia (FiA). Aligned with the Strategic Planning Framework for Fisheries (2010–2019). (23) Sought to prevent and withdraw children from child labor and hazardous work in the fisheries sector. (94) During the reporting period, implemented awareness-raising activities, including four training workshops conducted in Kampong Chhnang and Pursat provinces with 60 participants, including 32 women. (39) The National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor in Fisheries (2010–2020) was overseen by the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry, and Fisheries under the FiA. Aligned with the Strategic Planning Framework for Fisheries (2010–2019). During the reporting period, began drafting 5-year action plans for 2021–2025. (39) Policy on Childhood Development and Protection in the Agricultural Sector (2016–2020) established a strategic framework to protect children working in the agricultural sector. Sought to prevent and reduce child labor, especially in hazardous work, and improve agricultural vocational training for youth ages 15–17. (7) Research was unable to determine actions taken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
National Child Protection Policies	National Social Protection Policy Framework (2016–2025) aims to implement the national strategic plan to ensure income security for all citizens, promote their welfare, strengthen social solidarity, and maximize the impact of poverty alleviation. (14) Research was unable to determine actions taken to implement this policy during the reporting period. National Social Protection Strategy (2017–2021) aims to expand access to healthcare, nutrition, and educational services, and to promote the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. (95,96) Research was unable to determine actions taken to implement this policy during the reporting period. Capacity Development Plan for Family Support, Foster Care, and Adoption (2018–2023) is overseen by MOSAVY. Improves services for children without parental care who are vulnerable to child labor, ensuring they can still live in a family setting. (9) Maintains a comprehensive database of all children living in residential and foster care. Funded by USAID through UNICEF. (9) During the reporting period, through technical support from UNICEF and Save the Children, MOSAVY revised the draft plan, which is pending ministerial approval. (39) Education Strategic Plan (2019–2023) seeks to ensure equitable access to education and improve the education system's response to human trafficking and child labor. (97) During the reporting period, adopted the Continuous Professional Development (CPD) Framework for Teachers and School Directors, the National Strategy for Development of Education Statistics, the Teacher Education College 5-Year Strategic Plan, the Performance Management System and Performance Appraisal, and the Community Preschool Curriculum and National Action Plan on Inclusive Education for Children with Disabilities. In addition, approximately 32 percent of all early grade teachers in Cambodia were trained on early grade reading. (39) Furthermore, 122,228 scholarships and one meal a day were provided to primary and secondary school students to promote access to school and prevent dropouts. (39)

Policy	Description
Strategic and Operational Plan for the Implementation of Juvenile Justice Law (2018–2020)	Overseen by MOSAVY, funded by UNICEF. Sought to build a sustainable juvenile justice system, and to provide effective protection and support to incarcerated juveniles who were vulnerable to child labor. (9) During the reporting period, focused on building a sustainable juvenile justice system, and providing effective protection and support to children in conflict with the law. As a result, children in conflict with the law who were in correction centers could more easily access education, healthcare, counseling, and guidance on vocational training. (14)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (90,97-100)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Cambodia Countering Trafficking in Persons (2015–2020)	$10 million, USAID-funded, 5-year (included a 1-year cost extension) program implemented by Winrock International to strengthen the capacity of government and community stakeholders to prevent human trafficking, protect at-risk populations, and increase the number of successful prosecutions of perpetrators. (69,101) During the reporting period, produced 919 social media posts on safe migration and human trafficking, reaching more than 1 million Cambodians. Distributed 1,700 information cards on safe migration and on how to disseminate information to others to prevent human trafficking. (14) Continued to support a free job-seeking platform, Bong Pheak , on which employers can post job opportunities for low-skilled and unskilled job seekers. In 2020, Bong Pheak registered 190 employers and posted 1,325 positions on its platform. (14)
Better Factories Cambodia†	USDOL, the Government of Cambodia, Garment Manufacturers in Cambodia, and ILO-funded program to monitor garment factories' compliance with national and international labor standards, including those related to child labor. (8,69,102) Additional information is available on the program's website. During the reporting period, completed 300 factory assessments and found 4 cases of child labor. Plans to expand assessments to travel goods sector and make joint assessments with MOLVT labor inspectors in mid-2021. (14)
UN WFP Country Program† (2020–2024)	Multi-government and private sector-funded program implemented in collaboration with the Government of Cambodia that includes a school feeding program for children in need. (103) During the reporting period, provided $600,000 in emergency assistance to help 3,725 families affected by natural disasters to purchase food, including $100,000 in emergency food distribution to more than 2,550 families in Pursat Province. (14)
Child Protection Programs: Family Care First (FCF REACT) (2015–2023) and Cambodia Child Protection Program	Family Care First (FCF REACT) is led by MOSAVY. Funded by the European Union, USAID, the GHR Foundation, Save the Children Hong Kong, and UNICEF. (37,69) Aims to support more than 7,000 Cambodian children to live in safe, nurturing, family-based care. (37,69,104) Secretariat and Advisory Board collaborate with ministries, institutions, and relevant NGOs to review, amend, and develop policies, legal standards, concept notes, and strategic plans to support the common goal of ensuring safe, nurturing family-based care for Cambodian children. (10) During the reporting period, USAID expanded monetary support through 2023 and MOSAVY provided non-monetary support. Endorsed and launched the Guidelines of Basic Competencies for Social Workforce and the Guidelines for Case Management during Infectious Disease Outbreaks. (14,72,73)  Cambodia Child Protection Program (2009–2023) is led by UNICEF and MOSAVY. Aims to strengthen the child protection system in Cambodia and to prevent and reduce violence against children and unnecessary family separation. (14,39) Builds capacity of national and sub-national authorities in all 25 provinces to formulate and implement nationally approved institutional and legal frameworks. Includes capacity building of the government and civil society child protection workforce to provide direct service delivery to vulnerable children and families. (14) During the reporting period, extended program through 2023 with MOSAVY providing non-monetary support. Continued technical support to the development of the Child Protection Law and the Child Protection Sector Plan. (14) Trained and deployed 20 new social workers to support children and families during the pandemic by providing awareness-raising trainings on violence against children. (14,39)
Cambodia Consortium for Out of School Children—Phase II (2017–2023)	Implemented by Education a Child, Aide et Action, and the Cambodian Consortium for Out of School Children, in collaboration with the Ministry of Education, Youth, and Sports. (105-108) Aims to improve access to equitable, high-quality education in 25 provinces in Cambodia for over 116,000 primary school children who are out of school. Focus is on equitable access, quality education, ownership, and accountability. (105,107)

† Program is funded by the Government of Cambodia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (109)

During the reporting period, the Cambodian Government, with support from the Australian and German Governments, reinvested in a 2018 cash-transfer program called the Identification of Poor Households (IDPoor).

Cambodia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

This program allowed the government to provide financial assistance to the most vulnerable populations during the pandemic, including children ages 0 to 5, thus preventing children from engaging in child labor. (39, I 10-I 12) From June 2020–January 2021, over 685,000 families received approximately $200 million through the IDPoor program. (39)

In addition, MOSAVY disseminated its guidelines on the “Minimum Standards on Residential Care for Victims of Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation” to shelters and other relevant stakeholders to address the management and proper care for victims of human trafficking and sexual exploitation living in residential care facilities in Cambodia. (28)

The government lacked sufficient funding to put a system in place to monitor and promote the reintegration of victims of forced labor and human trafficking, including children, leaving victims vulnerable and at higher risk of re-victimization, and leaving the government heavily reliant on NGOs to fill this need. (11,27,28,74)

Many poor households in rural communities lack access to a social protection safety net, which increases the vulnerability of children to child labor as a means to supplement family income. (3, I 13) Although Cambodia has implemented programs that target child labor, the scope and resources provided to these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. (9,10)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Cambodia (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children are protected by law, including children working outside of formal employment relationships and child household workers employed by their relatives.	2018 – 2020
	Criminally prohibit the offering and use of a child for pornographic performances.	2015 – 2020
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
	Institute a compulsory education age that is at least equal to the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2020
Enforcement	Build the capacity of labor law enforcement authorities to enforce child and forced labor regulations by providing more technical training opportunities on how to properly identify child labor during inspections, and offer sufficient resources to labor law authorities to ensure the enforcement of child labor laws through investigations and inspections, including unannounced inspections.	2012 – 2020
	Establish and uniformly administer penalties for violations of laws on child labor, including its worst forms, in accordance with the parameters prescribed by law.	2009 – 2020
	Collect, properly store, and publicly release disaggregated data on labor and criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of inspections conducted at worksites, initial training for new criminal investigators, refresher courses, the number of prosecutions initiated, the number of convictions, and the number imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that malfeasance is addressed in all law enforcement agencies, including not accepting bribes to influence the outcome of cases or forging identity documents for trafficking in persons purposes, providing tip off in advance of raids, and investigating and prosecuting politically connected individuals and government officials who are complicit in facilitating and profiting from the worst forms of child labor, including debt-based forced labor in brick kilns.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that all criminal law enforcement officials are sufficiently trained on the techniques of how to conduct anti-trafficking work, particularly those located in rural areas and in brick kilns.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that funding for criminal law enforcement agencies is sufficient to cover all expenses, including transportation costs, for law enforcement officials.	2019 – 2020
	Address the misuse of resources by law enforcement to convict defendants for politically motivated reasons, and ensure that all individuals accused of commercial sexual exploitation of children are prosecuted and charged according to the law.	2019 – 2020
	Protect and prevent intimidation of trafficking victims and allow them access to protection services pending court proceedings.	2020

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	Ensure that the Commune Committees for Women and Children is able to carry out its intended mandate.	2019 – 2020
	Increase funding for Commune Committees for Women and Children.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that annual reports produced by the National Committee for Counter Trafficking are comprehensive.	2020
Government Policies	Publish activities undertaken to implement the Policy on Childhood Development and Protection in the Agricultural Sector, the National Social Protection Policy Framework, and the National Social Protection Strategy during the reporting period.	2019 – 2020
Social Programs	Release the 2019 child labor survey and make the data publicly available.	2020
	Ensure that Residential Care Facilities and orphanages protect the health and well-being of children living in them.	2019 – 2020
	Increase access to free basic education by eliminating unofficial school-related fees and addressing issues related to limited transportation and inadequate school infrastructure, including the number of teachers, and the need for a birth certificate to enroll in school.	2013 – 2020
	Establish a system to accurately capture and monitor the reintegration of victims of the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking.	2019 – 2020
	Expand social protection safety nets in rural areas to ensure that poor children and their families have access to services that may mitigate the risk of involvement in child labor.	2016 – 2020
	Provide sufficient resources to all social programs so that they can fully address the extent of child labor in Cambodia, including online sexual exploitation of children.	2019 – 2020

In 2020, Cameroon made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography. Cameroonian police also arrested members of an international trafficking network that operated in Cameroon, Gabon, Equatorial Guinea, and Chad. In addition, the Forever Chocolate program, which provides school kits and livelihood support to families as a means to combat child labor in the production of cocoa, was expanded to Nkondjock, Sangmelima, Mbalmayo, and Ayos. However, children in Cameroon are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in cocoa production. In addition, the government has not prohibited the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs, and it has not prohibited the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups. Furthermore, labor inspectors do not regularly conduct inspections in the informal sector, in which the majority of child labor occurs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Cameroon are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in cocoa production. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Cameroon. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	43.7 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	80.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	42.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		65.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS 5), 2014. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of bananas, cocoa, palm oil, onions, and tea, including handling pesticides, using machetes, clearing fields, climbing trees, and lifting heavy loads† (6-9)
	Raising livestock (7-10)
	Fishing (7-11)
Industry	Working in artisanal gold mines† and gravel quarries,† transporting heavy loads† of sand or gravel, breaking stones, and digging or standing in stagnant water to extract minerals (3,7-9,12-15)
	Construction, including carrying heavy loads† of water, concrete, cement, and bricks (8,9)
Services	Domestic work (6-10)
	Working in restaurants and as phone booth operators (6-10)
	Working in transportation (6-10)
	Street work, including carrying heavy luggage and selling bush meat,† vending, and begging (6-10,16)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,6-9,14,15)
	Recruitment of children by Boko Haram , a non-state armed group, for use in armed conflict, including as suicide bombers and concubines and recruitment of children by community watch groups for strategic operations. In addition, Anglophone separatists recruited and used child soldiers in the Southwest and Northwest Regions, both for fighting government forces and for gathering intelligence, according to observers. (8,9,17)
	Forced labor in agriculture in the production of cocoa, cotton, onions, and tea; fishing; livestock raising; domestic work; spare parts shops; in artisanal gold mines and gravel quarries; street vending; and construction, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,7-9,14,15,18)
	Forced begging as talibés in Koranic schools (3,8,9,14,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Cameroon is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking from neighboring countries in Central and West Africa. (3,15,19) Due to increased awareness among parents of the risks associated with entrusting children to intermediaries who often promise to take children to urban centers to pursue education or an improved living arrangement, some perpetrators of human trafficking have resorted to kidnapping children. (3,9,15) An ongoing crisis in the Anglophone regions has contributed to a dramatic increase in underage prostitution, especially in areas with significant numbers of IDPs. (8)

The crisis in the Anglophone Northwest and Southwest Regions that began in 2016 as mass protests by lawyers and teachers has since evolved into an armed separatist conflict with more than 3,000 persons killed, more than 44,000 refugees, and more than 500,000 IDPs. Armed separatist groups have called for and violently enforced boycotts of schools in the Northwest and Southwest Regions leading to long-term disruptions of education for children. (6,9,20,21) Separatists frequently attacked and kidnapped students and teachers who attended classes, often releasing them only after collecting ransoms or incorporating them into their ranks to fight against government forces. On October 24, 2020, alleged separatists killed at least seven children attending classes at Mother Francisca International Bilingual Academy in Kumba, Southwest Region. (9,22) UNICEF stated in a September report that only 1,600 out of a total of 6,400 public schools were functional in the Anglophone regions. On October 8, the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported that only 19 percent of the 70,000 elementary school students in the Northwest Region, and 27 percent of 151,000 students in the Southwest Region were attending school due to fears of separatist reprisals. (9,23) Children in refugee or IDP camps are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, and may have a more difficult time accessing education due to a lack of school infrastructure, including potable water and sanitation facilities, teachers, and resources to pay for school-related expenses. (10,24)

In the Far North Region, terrorist activity by Boko Haram and ISIS-West Africa have also disrupted children’s schooling. The disruption of children’s access to education places children at high risk of becoming victims of exploitation and child labor. (9,25,26) In 2020, in the Far North Region, Boko Haram, which our report identifies as a non-state armed group, recruited and used 71 children in their operations including at least 2 children as suicide bombers. Of these 71 children, 49 were abducted. (9,17) Boko Haram also continues to forcibly recruit Cameroonian children as porters, cooks, and scouts. Boko Haram also used girls as forced suicide bombers and sex slaves and boys as child soldiers. (8,9,17) Some community neighborhood watch groups, known as Vigilance Committees, may have also coerced and recruited children as young as age 12 to serve as scouts against Boko Haram, although there is no evidence that suggests government sponsorship of such activities. (8,9)

The government requires children to have identification documents, including birth certificates, to fully access education. The Ministry of Basic Education identified 1,785,668 of the 4,942,000 primary students registered for the 2020–2021 academic year as not having birth certificates. (9) While there are no reports suggesting the authorities prevented access to education for children, those without birth certificates often found it difficult to register for end-of-course examinations to enter secondary school, which sometimes led students to drop out of school and, therefore, put them at a greater risk for being subjected to child labor. (9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Cameroon has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In January 2020, the Government of Cameroon ratified the UN Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography that Cameroon signed in October 2001. (9)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Cameroon's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities and the establishment of a compulsory education age that is consistent with the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children in Cameroon are only required to attend 6 years of primary school, which typically concludes at age 12; this standard makes most children ages 13 through 14 vulnerable to child labor as they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. In addition, there is no free basic education for children in Cameroon as established by law, increasing the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (32,33) Human trafficking provisions do not meet international standards, as they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking, and individuals ages 16 to 18 are not considered children. (29,30) In addition, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under age 18 are not comprehensive, as work at dangerous heights is not prohibited. (28,39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MINLSS)	Leads efforts to enforce all labor laws, including those related to child labor; promotes decent working conditions, and leads the National Committee to Combat Child Labor (CNLCTE) and the labor inspectorate. (11,40)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Prosecutes cases referred by the General Delegate for National Security (DGSN) or the Ministry of Defense's National Gendarmerie (SED), and contributes to investigations, as appropriate. (41)
General Delegate for National Security (DGSN)	Enforces laws against the worst forms of child labor and investigates violations in urban areas. (41) Through its Special Vice Squad, investigates cases of human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and other forms of abuse against women and children. (39,41) Refers cases to MOJ or the Ministry of Defense for investigation by SED. (42)
Ministry of Defense's National Gendarmerie (SED)	Investigates cases of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation in both urban and rural areas before referring cases to MOJ for prosecution. (42) Operates two toll-free numbers, 1501 and 113, for the reporting of human rights abuses, including trafficking in persons. (43)

Although it does not play a direct role in enforcement, Cameroon's National Commission on Human Rights and Freedoms advises government ministries on the enforcement of laws related to child labor and advocates for sanctions as appropriate. (10,44) Local representatives from the Ministry of Territorial Administration may settle child labor disputes or refer the case to the Ministry of Defense's National Gendarmerie, the General Delegate for National Security (DGSN), or the Ministry of Justice (MOJ) for further investigation and prosecution. (42) Article 109 of the Labor Code authorizes inspectors to take direct legal action before the court against people infringing on the provisions of the labor law. (8)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Cameroon took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MINLSS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† Data are from January 1, 2019 to October 31, 2019. (8)

The government did not provide certain information related to labor law enforcement efforts, including labor inspectorate funding and number of child labor violations found. According to the ILO's technical advice of 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Cameroon should employ about 660 labor inspectors but currently employs only 300. (9,37,40,41,45,46) Furthermore, inspectors are tasked with conciliation duties that may detract from time devoted to their primary duties; and labor inspectors do not regularly conduct inspections in the informal sector in which the majority of child labor occur. (8,9,27,47-49) In the formal sector, inspectors in the East Region Delegate of Social Affairs found that 605 children were subjected to child labor in 29 mining sites in the region. In general, the labor inspectorate lacked resources during the reporting period, and field inspectors, in particular, lacked transportation. (8,9)

Although the government has not created a formal mechanism for filing and responding to complaints about child labor, victims and their relatives can report directly to any of the institutions, including the Ministry of Social Affairs (MINAS), MINLSS, State Defense Secretariat, or MOJ. (6,9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Cameroon took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (8)	Yes (9)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (8)	N/A (9)

Number of Investigations	Unknown (8)	Unknown (9)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (8)	Unknown (9)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (8)	Unknown (9)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (8)	Unknown (9)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (8)	Unknown (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (9)

The government does not publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts. Criminal law enforcement agencies do not receive adequate funding or training to investigate the worst forms of child labor, and high staff turnover is a challenge. (3,6,9,10) Despite credible reports that children were involved in child labor, the government did not report that it investigated any child labor cases, and MINLSS officials stated that there were no reported cases of violations of laws related to child labor. Consequently, no new prosecutions were brought to trial during the reporting period. (9)

In a letter to the Secretary General of the Prime Minister's Office, the Head of the National Police, stated that the police had investigated six human trafficking cases and referred the traffickers to competent courts for judicial action. (9) In another letter to the Secretary General of the Prime Minister's Office, the Secretary of State for Defense in Charge of the National Gendarmerie, stated that the Gendarmerie investigated 199 human trafficking cases and referred them to the competent courts as of the end of August. Details on the ages of the victims, however, were not provided. (9) Research did not uncover information about any individuals involved in ongoing prosecutions that began in previous reporting periods and no data were available for the reporting period on numbers of violations, prosecutions initiated, convictions, or penalties in Cameroon. (9)

MINAS, the International Criminal Police Organization, and DGSN all maintain hotlines for reporting the worst forms of child labor. Calls are routed to the National Referral System for assistance to victims. (9,12,18,24,39,50) However, the system has not been well publicized since it was established in 2013, leaving the public unaware of its existence, and some calls may go unanswered. (24,51) Research was unable to determine how many cases of child labor were identified because of complaints made to these hotlines.

During the reporting period, Cameroonian Police arrested members of a human trafficking network which bought and sold newborn babies in the capital of Yaoundé. The trafficking network operations are believed to expand beyond Cameroon and include Gabon, Equatorial Guinea, and Chad. (52) Because of these instances of human trafficking, border police continued efforts to ensure that children do not cross borders without being accompanied by a parent. Adults accompanying children must show proof of their relationship with the child by presenting the child's identification documents. (7,53) The government continues to acknowledge that a lack of awareness of child trafficking issues may prevent citizens from reporting offenses to enforcement agencies and that children may be afraid to speak against perpetrators in court. (3) While there have been past reports that indicate the government has held children as young as age 5 in detention facilities for prolonged periods due to suspicion of being affiliated with Boko Haram, or to prevent them from being recruited into Boko Haram, there were no reports during the reporting period that the government detained or punished any children found engaged in child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, illegal or illicit activities, or armed conflict. (9,44,54-59)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of resources to carry out mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee to Combat Child Labor (CNLCTE)	Coordinates government efforts to combat child labor and proposes measures to harmonize Cameroon's legal framework to international standards. Implements the National Plan of Action to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking in Children that expired during the reporting period. (37,60,61) Led by MINLSS, includes representatives from 10 other ministries and government bodies. (40,60) In March 2020, members attended a 2 day capacity building workshop in Ebolowa, South Region, organized by MINLSS and ILO, during which they explored the different forms of child labor, assessed actions implemented in the fight against child labor since 2014, and analyzed priority actions moving forward. (9)
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates government efforts to combat human trafficking. Chaired by the Secretary General of the Office of the Prime Minister, includes members of eight ministries, law enforcement personnel, civil society organizations, and NGOs. (3,24) Oversees Regional Taskforces on Trafficking in Persons in Northwest, Southwest, and Littoral Provinces. (3,62) Held two formal sessions and two workshops for staff dedicated to anti-trafficking efforts during the reporting period. (63)
Ministry of Social Affairs (MINAS)	Coordinates efforts to combat human trafficking. Provides social services through its National Referral System. (10,11,43,64) Through its Minors Brigade, supports local police in their investigations of child trafficking and the use of children in hazardous work. Uses other programs to help identify, reintegrate, and educate street children. (43,44) In the first quarter of 2020, MINAS removed 381 human trafficking victims including 304 children from their situation of exploitation and provided them assistance in MINAS-run centers nation-wide. In addition, between April 1 and June 30, MINAS removed 162 children from the streets of Yaoundé as part of a pilot operation dubbed "Monitoring and Observation of Street Children." (9) On June 29, MINAS placed 40 of the children at the Betamba Childhood Institute at which they learn trades, returned 78 children to their families, placed 27 in MINAS-run centers, while the remaining few had to be released from the program due to their age. (9)

A lack of resources and socio-political unrest in the Anglophone regions hampered government efforts to effectively coordinate to combat the worst forms of child labor. (9,16)

In June 2020, the Government of Cameroon created a new National Committee to Combat Child Labor to replace the one that existed before. The new committee was created to enhance effectiveness and efficacy in the fight against child labor. (9)

Research indicates that the National Committee to Combat Child Labor had not made significant progress because of a lack of resources. There is also evidence to suggest that each of the government agencies represented in the committee looked for its own funding and initiated its own activities without significant coordination. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2014–2020)	Incorporated child labor concerns into the national strategy for work. (67) Research was unable to determine whether actions were undertaken by the committee during the reporting period. (9)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (9,14)

In 2020, the government joined the Alliance 8.7 program, an inclusive global partnership committed to achieving Target 8.7 of the 2030 Sustainable Development Goals. Target 8.7 seeks, among other objectives, to secure the prohibition and elimination of the worst forms of child labor. (9,68)

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper (2010–2020) or the Inter-Ministerial Committee's National Gender Policy Document (2011–2020). (69-71)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Project to Fight the Phenomenon of Street Children (Project 559)†	In conjunction with the National Employment Fund, this MINAS-funded program provides street children with health care, education, and psychosocial care, and supports the reintegration of street children by providing vocational training opportunities. (10,38,72) In 2020, the project provided support to 40 children at the Betamba Childhood Institute in the Center Region that serves as a rehabilitation center for adolescents and placed them in apprenticeships programs including carpentry, masonry, welding, and auto mechanics to prepare them to eventually return to their families and reintegrate into society. (9)

Program	Description
Support Project in Quality Management for Cocoa and Coffee Production/Forever Chocolate (2019–2025)†	Promotes labor standards in the cocoa industry, including the fight against child labor in conjunction with environmental protection. Identifies children in cocoa farming and those who are at risk of joining cocoa farms, and facilitates their return to school. (8) Implemented by NGO association Enfant Jeunesse Avenir , in partnership with Cameroon Cacao Industrial Corporation, Cameroon's biggest cocoa processor. Government ministries, including the Ministry of Health, MINAS, the Ministry of Women Empowerment and the Family, MINLSS, and the Ministry of Basic Education, are key stakeholders in the program. (8) The project is implemented in cocoa production basins using the Farmer Field School Extension Approach and is aimed at training cocoa farmers to produce cocoa free of child labor using environmentally friendly techniques. (8) The government also established a National Cocoa Academy led by the Ministry of Agriculture and Rural Development. The training institute is deployed in production basins with a view to popularizing good agricultural practices, including the prohibition of child labor on plantations. (8) In 2020, in addition to the four districts of Ntui, Bangassina, and Monatele (Center Region), and Tonga (West Region) where the program was initially implemented, Forever Chocolate was extended to include Nkondjock (Littoral Region), Sangmelima (South Region), Mbalmayo, and Ayoa (Center Region). The program, which supported children with school kits, sought to empower women and provide families with alternative sources of income to limit the involvement of children in child labor. (9)
Cameroon Institute of Childhood Rehabilitation Project (2017–2020)†	$2.9 million project that was financed by MINAS and its partners to rehabilitate a center in Betamba, which serves children in conflict with the law and provides vocational training to area youth. (10) Between April 1 and June 30, MINAS removed 162 homeless children from the streets of Yaoundé as part of a pilot operation called "Monitoring and Evaluating of Street Children." On June 29, MINAS placed 40 of those children at the Betamba Childhood Institute where they are sheltered, learning trades, and receiving psychosocial support. (63)
United States Government Programs (non-DOL)	$27 million U.S. Department of Agriculture funded McGovern-Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program, which improves literacy and nutrition in 265 primary schools. During the reporting period, in collaboration with the Ministry of Basic Education, it organized three workshops in the Adamawa, East, and North Regions to train 140 head teachers on school management. (9) In July 2020, they recognized 148 teachers from 148 primary schools selected by the Ministry of Basic Education in the East, Adamawa, and North Regions in recognition for outstanding services as part of a strategy to encourage teachers to meet the learning needs of children and ensure that students remain in school. The program also drilled 10 boreholes in 10 schools in the 3 regions and provided daily meals to 84,000 pupils, which encouraged children from poor communities to regularly attend classes. (9) Continued its activities from previous years of constructing classrooms, modern school toilets, kitchens, and food stores in addition to establishing school gardens, providing stationery to needy children and teachers, and supported the efficient management of school resources to deliver quality education. (9)
UNICEF Projects	Includes UNICEF Country Program (2018–2020), which prioritized strengthening the child protection system to prevent violence and exploitation, especially sexual violence against girls. Provided financial and technical support to the government for the implementation of an inclusive birth registration project, with a particular focus on indigenous communities. (6) Services for Displaced or Refugee Children is another UNICEF-funded program that provided educational services to children affected by conflict, including: CARE2, which offered accelerated education curriculums for children in refugee camps in the Far North; ETAPES, which established temporary schools and protection centers in Adamawa and East regions; and the Child Protection and Education Project, which worked with Catholic Relief Services in the East to enroll and retain refugee children in schools. (6,8,73)

† Program is funded by the Government of Cameroon.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (3,9,15)

Although the government has implemented programs to assist victims of child trafficking and children engaged in street work and domestic work, the scope of these programs is insufficient and does not fully address the extent of the problem in other sectors such as agriculture, mining, quarrying, and commercial sexual exploitation nor does it address the structural issues found within the school system. (1,6,9,74) Government-run centers can temporarily house victims, but space is limited. (24,75,76)

Some victims of child labor, as well as vulnerable children, were removed from their situation of exploitation and referred to social services. Research found NGOs removed child labor victims from their situation of exploitation and provided shelter and other temporary forms of assistance. (9) These include the Network for Human Rights Defenders in Central Africa, which provided housing and temporary assistance; Kumba-based Survival Network provided shelter and scholarships to two victims; and Justice and Peace Commission of the Bamenda Catholic archdiocese in the Northwest Region assisted IDPs associated with the Anglophone crisis; however, these organizations did not share an exact number of participants. (9)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Cameroon (Table II).

Table II. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws prohibiting child trafficking do not require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be considered child trafficking, and that all children under age 18 are protected.	2015 – 2020
	Criminally prohibit the use of children for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
	Establish a minimum age for compulsory education that is consistent with the minimum age for admission to work.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and include work at dangerous heights.	2014 – 2020
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2019 – 2020
Enforcement	Collect and publish comprehensive statistics on enforcement efforts including labor inspectorate funding, number of child labor violations found, the number of criminal labor law violations found, the number of investigations, the number of prosecutions, and the number of convictions.	2009 – 2020
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate and criminal law enforcement agencies receive an adequate amount of funding, training, and resources with which to conduct inspections and investigations.	2009 – 2020
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by conducting inspections in all sectors, including the informal sector.	2013 – 2020
	Ensure that all hotlines for reporting the worst forms of child labor are well publicized and operational, and that all calls are logged so that cases of child labor may be tracked for referral to law enforcement or social services providers.	2015 – 2020
	Raise awareness of child trafficking issues to encourage citizens to report offenses to enforcement agencies, and ensure that such cases are resolved within the judicial system.	2016 – 2020
Coordination	Ensure that existing coordinating mechanisms function effectively and receive sufficient resources to carry out their stated mandates.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that all of the Community Coordination Teams are active and undertaking activities in support of their missions.	2020
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper and the Inter-Ministerial Committee's National Gender Policy Document.	2010 – 2020
	Ensure all actions plans are active and being implemented according to their mandate.	2020
Social Programs	Ensure that the number of schools, teachers, potable water, and sanitation facilities are adequate throughout the country.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that social programs to address child labor are implemented in accordance with their mandates.	2018 – 2020
	Make additional efforts to provide all children with birth documentation.	2020
	Ensure that all children, regardless of refugee status, have access to education by eliminating school-related fees, and minimizing the disruption of the classroom. Ensure that schools are free from violence and not re-appropriated for other purposes.	2009 – 2020
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem in Cameroon, and institute programs to address child labor in agriculture, mining, quarrying, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that all government-run centers have sufficient space to accommodate victims of child trafficking and children engaged in street work and domestic work.	2016 – 2020

In 2020, the Central African Republic made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In addition to publishing data on labor inspections, child labor violations, and funding, the Central African Republic's Ministry of Labor doubled the size of its labor inspectorate in 2020. The government also began to implement an expansive child protection code, and expanded mechanisms to coordinate anti-trafficking and other child protection efforts. However, children in the Central African Republic are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including recruitment and use in armed conflict by non-state armed groups and in diamond mining, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture and domestic work. Additionally, the Central African Republic does not meet the international standard for minimum age protections since it does not include children working in the informal sector. Moreover, an estimated 1.3 million children lacked access to education because of ongoing instability.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Central African Republic are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including recruitment and use in armed conflict by non-state armed groups and in diamond mining, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture and domestic work. (1-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the Central African Republic.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	31.0 (373,742)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	63.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	28.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		40.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (8)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4 (MICS 4), 2010. (9)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working in agriculture, activities unknown (10)
	Working in forestry, including carrying tools (11)
	Fishing, activities unknown (10)
Industry	Diamond and gold mining, quarrying† (10,12-14)
	Working in sawmills, forges, and foundries, including sharpening sawblades and maintaining fires (11,15)
	Construction, activities unknown (10,15)
Services	Domestic work (12)
	Street work, including carrying heavy loads, garbage scavenging, and market vending (10,12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict, including as combatants, cooks, porters, informants, domestic workers, guards, and for sexual exploitation (12,16)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, markets, and mining, including in diamond mines, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (10,12,16-18)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The government and 14 armed groups signed the Political Agreement for Peace and Reconciliation in the Central African Republic in 2019. (21,22) The peace agreement called for the immediate cessation of recruitment of child soldiers by all parties involved in the conflict. (22) However, violence surrounding the December 2020 elections has stalled implementation of the peace agreement. (10,23) The government also maintains limited control of territory outside the capital, Bangui. Non-state armed groups contest about 80 percent of the territory. (7,24) Anti-Balaka-affiliated armed groups and ex-Séléka factions—including the Front Populaire pour la Renaissance de la Centrafrique (FPRC); Mouvement des Libérateurs Centrafricains pour la Justice; Mouvement Patriotique pour la Centrafrique; Unité pour la Paix en Centrafrique (UPC); and unaffiliated elements—continued to recruit children as combatants, informants, cooks, and sex slaves. (12) In December, major rebel groups formed the Coalition des Patriotes pour le Changement in response to ex-president Francois Bozizé being determined ineligible to be a presidential candidate in the December 2020 election. Violence around the contested election led to an increase in the recruitment and use of children in armed combat. (10,23) During the reporting period, the UN Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in CAR (MINUSCA) documented the recruitment of 256 children, including 94 girls, into the ranks of FPRC in Birao, and a dozen others among anti-Balaka forces in Bria. (7,12,25) Moreover, due to lack of funding and persistent insecurity, as many as 25 percent of children released since 2014 have not received reintegration support. (26,27)

Armed groups and criminal elements, including in some pastoralist groups, subjected children to forced domestic servitude and commercial sexual exploitation. (7,10,16) In some instances, relatives willfully exploited children in their extended families to generate additional income. (10) Girls may be trafficked into forced domestic work, especially in rural areas in which government presence is limited or non-existent. In maisons de joie (“houses of joy”), girls as young as age 13 are subject to commercial sexual exploitation. (7,16) Maisons de joie are typically private residences at which alcohol and food are served to middle- and upper-class customers. (16) The armed group UPC exploited child laborers at mining sites under their control. Children in rural areas were forced to work in artisanal diamond and gold mines, often for long hours and without protective equipment. (16) Children as young as age 9 are exposed to silver nitrate in gold mines, and often sustain injuries as a result. (6,7) An estimated 2.8 million people, including 1.3 million children, required humanitarian assistance during the reporting period. At least 100,000 IDPs were directly linked to post-electoral violence, and the Central African Republic’s IDP population ballooned to 681,930, half of whom were children. (21,23,25,26,28-30) Displacement and chronic food insecurity are aggravating risk factors for forced labor and sex trafficking. (6)

Schools closed in March 2020, amidst nationwide lockdowns in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. Many schools reopened briefly in October to administer exams. (10) An estimated 1.4 million children left the school system during the reporting period, with many unable to return due to conflict and economic hardship. (28) Prior to the pandemic, 9 percent of children enrolled in the 2019–2020 school year had dropped out of school. (28,30) The combined effects of resurgent violence in the north, structural fragility, and the pandemic have exacerbated this trend. The loss of income has compelled children to seek employment or remain at home. (28,29,31) The pandemic has also disrupted reintegration and rehabilitation services for victims of forced labor and armed group recruitment. (31)

Teachers fled conflict zones in Vakaga, Haut-Mbomou and parts of Ouham and Ouham Pendé, where infrastructure was destroyed and children were confined to their houses. (28,29) At least 14 schools were affected by electoral violence in 2020. Fewer than three in five children in the Central African Republic complete their primary education, and only 6 percent graduate from secondary school. (10) An estimated 1.3 million children lacked access to education because of ongoing instability. (25,32) The continued occupation of school buildings by non-state armed groups presents additional challenges. (12,33) The state's limited reach outside the capital impeded efforts to distribute educational resources in rural areas. (12,33,34)

The Central African Republic's 2020 Child Protection Code provides free birth registration for all children. (35) However, the country's birth registration rate, stymied by endemic poverty and administrative collapse, remains one of the lowest in Africa. (36) Electoral violence and the pandemic further hampered efforts to re-open civil registration centers in the provinces. (10) Despite the new provision, the Family Code and a Presidential Decree mandate that schools will only accept children with documented proof of identity, such as a birth record/certificate. Based on this legal requirement, undocumented children were denied access to education and other social services. (12) Nevertheless, the Ministry of Education has attempted to improve access to education by providing free school admission to children from IDP camps, waiving school exam fees for children affected by conflict, and expanding programs to provide birth registration, which may be required for school enrollment. (12,17,37,38) However, children continue to experience difficulties accessing education due to school fees, an absence of teachers, security concerns, destruction or looting of school materials and buildings by armed groups, and the unavailability of schools, especially in rural areas or IDP camps. (12,18,25,39,40)

The government did not collect or publish data on child work, child labor, or the worst forms of child labor in 2020. (10)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Central African Republic has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the Central African Republic's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 259 of the Labor Code; Article 63 of the Child Protection Code (35,41)

* No conscription (45,48)

The Child Protection Code (Code de la Protection des Enfants, CPE) was adopted by the National Assembly on February 27, 2020. (35,49) The law, which took effect on June 15, reinforces existing prohibitions on the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict. The CPE designates all former child soldiers as victims, and establishes separate judicial and social protection mechanisms to facilitate demobilization and reintegration. (35) The CPE also penalizes the worst forms of child labor with up to 3 years' imprisonment and a fine of $3,673 (2,000,000 FCFA). (35,50) The legislation further guarantees children ages 5 to 18 the right to free education, and makes primary education compulsory. (35) By the end of the reporting period, the Ministries of Justice, Interior, Social Welfare, Health, and Education had prepared five draft sectoral plans to guide the implementation of the CPE. (10)

Although the Labor Code prohibits work by children under age 14, the law does not apply to children outside of formal employment relationships. This fails to meet international standards, which require the protection of all children under minimum age for work laws. (41,51) Despite a 2016 study on hazardous work, the Central African Republic has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (12,41,52) Moreover, the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (44) Research was also unable to locate original copies of laws establishing the compulsory education age at 15. (35,47)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Through its General Directorate of Labor and Social Welfare and seven regional labor directorates, monitors and enforces laws related to child labor. (15)
The Juvenile Court*	Established under the 2020 Child Protection Code (CPE) to field all cases involving the health, safety, morals, and education of children. Maintains sole jurisdiction over criminal cases involving juvenile plaintiffs, defendants, witnesses, and victims of crime, including former child soldiers. (45,52) The court also oversees a special police unit for children, which is responsible for monitoring children's safety and welfare in industrial or mining areas. (45) This unit is also responsible for identifying criminal offenses against children. The judges will work with the police, the child protection brigade, the Children's Prosecutor, and social workers to refer child victims and monitor compliance with diversion measures. (35,41)
Internal Security Forces Police and Gendarmes	Enforces all laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Newly created Child Protection Units, under the expanded jurisdiction of the juvenile court system, will also be responsible for identifying criminal offenses against children. (51)
Ministry of Justice	Protects children through its Rapid Response for Child Protection team, and combats the worst forms of child labor through its courts and tribunals. (38,53)
Special Criminal Court	Investigates serious human rights abuses committed since 2003, including the use of children in armed conflict. Hybrid court includes international and national judges and prosecutors. (54,55)
Mixed Unit for Rapid Intervention and Repression of Sexual Violence (UMIRR)	Combats sexual violence against women and children. This mixed unit includes representatives from the Ministry of Social Affairs, Promotion of Gender, and Humanitarian Action (MSA); the Ministry of Justice; and law enforcement (gendarmerie, police, and civilians), and is tasked with fighting violence against women and children. (7,38) During the reporting period, the government partnered with the UN Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in CAR (MINUSCA) and the IOM to provide training to police, gendarmerie, UMIRR, and community leaders on recognizing signs of human trafficking. MINUSCA also trained security forces on preventing all forms of grave violations against children, participated in monitoring mechanisms, advocated for child protection, and worked with regional leaders to sensitize the local population and armed groups on children's rights. (7,10) UMIRR falls under the joint authority of the Ministry of Justice and the Ministry of Public Security and is part of a state organization supporting investigations into conflict-related sexual violence. UMIRR refers cases to the ordinary court system or to the Special Criminal Court. (56)

*Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

The CPE also established a National Council for the Promotion and Protection of Children, which will report directly to the Prime Minister, and a Children's Parliament. (35)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in the Central African Republic took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including adequate financial resource allocation.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In addition to publishing data on labor inspections, child labor violations, and funding, the MOL doubled the size of its labor inspectorate in 2020. (10) The increased number of labor inspectors was the result of a partnership agreement between the MOL and World Vision. World Vision provided logistical support that allowed inspectors to travel outside Bangui. (57) The government hired 70 additional labor inspectors, bringing the total number of labor inspectors employed to 145. (10) In 2020, 28 labor inspectors received training on the worst forms of child labor, violence, and harassment in the workplace. (10) An additional 30 inspectors underwent initial training organized by the African Regional Training Center for Labor Administration during the reporting period. (10)

Nevertheless, inadequate financial and material resources, including transportation, office facilities and supplies, and computers, hindered the government's efforts to combat child labor. (38,58,59) Moreover, the passage of Decree No. 12.177 in 2012 effectively removed regional labor directorates from the general directorate's chain of command. Thus, regional directorates are no longer required to submit periodic reports on inspection activities, as required under ILO C. 81. (58,60) Finally, civil unrest prevented labor inspectors outside Bangui from visiting artisanal mining sites. (7)

During the reporting period, the country's seven regional labor directorates conducted 130 investigations and identified 15 child labor law violations. (10) However, labor inspectors did not issue formal penalties or sanctions, with community reconciliation remaining the principle avenue for mediation. (10,41) Article 260 of the Labor Code empowers labor inspectors to refer violators to a magistrate court if a medical doctor determines a child laborer was exposed to hazardous conditions. Violators face up to 5 years in prison if found guilty. (10,41) A complaint mechanism for filing and responding to reports of child labor exists, but there was no evidence that it was operational during the reporting period. Due to limited resources, most children found in child labor were referred to NGOs. (12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in the Central African Republic took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (12)	No (10)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (12)	Yes (10)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (12)	Yes (10)
Number of Investigations	1 (12)	Unknown (10)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (12)	Unknown (10)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (12)	Unknown (10)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (12)	Unknown (10)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (12)	Unknown (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (12)	Yes (10)

In 2020, the CPE created specialized children's police units to monitor industrial or mining areas for hazardous conditions. (10,35,49,52) The CPE also broadens social protections and creates new enforcement mechanisms for victims of sexual exploitation, forced labor, or human trafficking, and includes provisions for at-risk groups such as demobilized child soldiers, children of religious and ethnic minorities, and non-residents. (7,12,35) Under the new law, children associated with armed groups are entitled to state social protection services and immunity from prosecution. (12,35,61)

The 2020 Trafficking in Persons National Action Plan extends the Mixed Unit for Rapid Intervention and Repression of Sexual Violence's (UMIRR) authority to include human trafficking, and UMIRR has investigated and referred cases to the High Court of Bangui. (7,10) Despite limited funding, UMIRR continuously investigated and referred the victims of gender-based violence to psycho-social assistance, though no convictions were reported. (61) In addition, the IOM trained civilian and law enforcement officials in human trafficking detection, including some child labor issues, during the reporting period. (7,10)

Nevertheless, during the reporting period, an indeterminate number of children were remanded to Bangui's Ngaragba prison for their alleged association with armed groups. These arrests are in contravention of both the CPE and international covenants to which the Central African Republic is signatory. (10,35,61) Of these children, 23 were ultimately released from prison; 6 of these were accused of child soldiering. A judge referred the children to a shelter in Bangui, but authorities did not properly implement the order. (61) By the end of the reporting period, approximately 25 children remained in prison, of which 9 were accused of "association with criminals." (61) Furthermore, juvenile criminal offenders were imprisoned with adults, despite a 2016 decree that prohibits this practice; separate juvenile cells and prisons exist in theory, but many were destroyed by violence. In addition, all prisons are overcrowded, requiring minors to share space with adults. (10,18,37,57,61) The non-enforcement of the law before the tribunal remains a problem. Instead, judges used mediation as a recourse to alternative dispute resolution. (10)

The pandemic and electoral violence led to an increase in the recruitment and use of child soldiers and criminal child labor violations. The Ministry of Justice was notified, without any specific categorization, of approximately 500 cases of child rights violations, including sexual exploitation, allegations of witchcraft, and maltreatment by family members, during the reporting period. (10) The government did not otherwise release statistics on criminal law enforcement. (10) The country's criminal court also partnered with an international organization in February 2020 to prosecute, convict, and sentence 33 militants and armed group leaders to verdicts from 10 to 15 years imprisonment (28 militants) to life in prison (5 armed group leaders) for crimes against humanity, including the recruitment and use of child soldiers. (7) The UN monitored and documented two Central African Armed Forces child labor violations during the reporting period. The incidents were not documented by the UN as labor violations, but rather grave child rights violations, which includes the use of children by parties to a conflict. (57) MINUSCA reported that, to the best of their knowledge, the perpetrators were not arrested. (10)

There is approximately 1 police officer for every 1,300 Central Africans. Government authority is largely absent outside the capital, and many security forces outside Bangui may lack the resources and knowledge to enforce the law, including a lack of access to copies of relevant laws. (10,61,62) Moreover, judicial authorities lack the staff and resources to conduct investigations outside Bangui. (6,62-64) Cases were widely resolved outside of formal legal proceedings due to a lack of public trust, access, or knowledge about the justice system. (63,65,66)

The MOL is supposed to work with other ministries and UNICEF to provide assistance to victims of child labor, including its worst forms. Due to a lack of resources, the government relies primarily on MINUSCA, NGOs, and UNICEF to provide social services to victims. (5,18,67,68) UMIRR operated a reporting hotline for victims of human trafficking, with the Ministers of Telecommunication and Security and the trafficking in persons coordination bureau advocating for its expansion and implementation during the reporting period. (6,57)

IV. Coordination of Government Efforts on Child Labor

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Central African Republic

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Soldier Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration (DDR) Mechanisms	The government works with Children Associated with Armed Forces or Groups (EAFGA), MINUSCA, UNICEF, and other partner agencies to demobilize and reintegrate children into community life. (7,12,22,38,67) However, research indicates that the EAFGA was not active during the reporting period. (10) In addition, the UN Country Task Forces on Monitoring and Reporting engages with signatories to Action Plans to end grave violations against children, and monitors their implementation. (33) In 2020, World Vision opened a new center to provide housing and social services for up to 30 demobilized child soldiers. (61) In accordance with the CPE, the Presidential Advisor for DDR coordinated with partners to initiate a process to release children held for their association with armed groups. (10)
National Inter-Ministerial Committee to Combat Human Trafficking	Coordinates drafting and implementation of the Central African Republic's national trafficking in persons (TIP) strategy and the National Action Plan to combat trafficking. Josiane Bemaka-Soui serves as the Presidential Advisor for TIP. (7,10) The president signed the action plan into law in March 2020, and the government allocated in-kind resources to implement plan components beginning in 2020. (7,16) However, it was not fully implemented due to multiple challenges, including lack of funding, the impacts of the pandemic, and ongoing civil unrest. (61) In addition to relevant ministries, including Justice and Interior, includes local and international NGOs and international organizations. The committee formally validated a 2020–2021 national action plan to combat human trafficking in March 2020. (7,10,16) The Presidential Advisor for TIP was also designated as the government focal point for Children's DDR during the reporting period. The Advisor established an informal coordination committee on child trafficking and DDR policies and programs. (10) The committee established ad hoc working groups to address these issues throughout the reporting period. (10) These efforts began to harmonize government-wide efforts to release scores of children detained for their association with criminal and armed groups. The Advisor sustained personal and vocal support to properly assist these children as victims instead of criminals. (10)
Ministry of Social Affairs, Promotion of Gender, and Humanitarian Action (MSA)	Oversees child soldier reintegration and leads the government's anti-trafficking policy efforts through the National Council on Child Protection. Along with the Ministry of the Promotion of Women, Family, and Protection of Children, refers victims of child trafficking to NGOs and maintains an orphanage for children at risk of child trafficking. (10,53) Rehabilitated human trafficking victims, including children, during the reporting period. (61)
Mechanisms for Monitoring Grave Violations of Children's Rights	The Country Task Force for Monitoring Grave Violations of Children's Rights is a national-level committee that meets twice per year at the strategic level and four times per year at the technical level to address children's rights, including the worst forms of child labor. (10) Provincial Child Protection Working Groups are regional government bodies that work to protect children from all violations, including the worst forms of child labor. (10,57) Held one meeting in 2020 and had continual advocacy with the government, which led to promulgation of the CPE into law. At the technical level, three meetings were held to analyze trends of children's rights violations. (57) Several sessions of training on monitoring, verification, and documentation of violations were conducted for child protection actors. Also, sensitization sessions on child rights and protection benefited community members and leaders, defense and security forces, and political actors. (57)

While the government has established mechanisms to address some of the worst forms of child labor—including human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and children in armed conflict—these efforts do not extend to other sectors, such as mining, in which child labor is prevalent. Research was unable to determine whether all coordinating bodies were active during the reporting period. (10,18,61)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Political Agreement for Peace and Reconciliation in the Central African Republic	Peace agreement signed by 14 armed groups and the Transitional Government in February 2019. Includes provisions to end the recruitment and use of children by armed groups, and to facilitate the separation of children from their ranks. (22,67,69) Armed groups listed by the UN for grave violations against children have signed Action Plans to implement these commitments. (70-72) The Action Plans cover the four areas for which the groups are listed, including recruitment and use of children, killing and maiming, rape and other forms of sexual violence, and attacks on schools and hospitals. (70-72) The Mouvement Patriotique pour la Centrafrique has appointed four commanders to serve as child protection focal points in areas under its control. (67,70) However, MINUSCA reported that armed groups continued to recruit child soldiers during the reporting period despite their pledges. (10)

Policy	Description
Child Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Policy	Based on the 2015 Bangui Forum, this policy aims to facilitate initiatives to disarm, demobilize, and reintegrate child soldiers, in cooperation with UN agencies, other ministries, and armed groups. (15,37,48,66,73) Through its National Strategy for Community-Based Reintegration of Children Formerly Associated with Armed Forces and Armed Groups, provides temporary care to children separated from armed groups and establishes Community Child Protection Networks throughout the country. (73-77) During the reporting period, UNICEF and partners helped the government demobilize and reintegrate 700 child soldiers who were liberated from armed groups. (7,10)
National Strategy to Fight Gender-Based Violence in CAR (2018–2021)	Aims to achieve "zero tolerance" for gender-based violence, including commercial sexual exploitation. (75) Written by the Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Family, and Protection of Children, in partnership with the UN Population Fund, UNHCR, UNICEF, and UN Women. (78) The EU funded the construction of a shelter for victims of gender-based violence, the House of Hope ( Maison de l'Espoir ), during the reporting period. (61)
National Recovery and Peacebuilding Plan (2017–2021)	Aims to re-establish peace and security, and support reconciliation by disarming and reintegrating children associated with armed groups, promoting legal reform, seeking justice for victims, and improving access to education. (17,48,75) While the government has made headway in DDR, research indicates that it made limited progress on improving access to education during the reporting period. (10)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (75)

The government did not include child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the National Strategy for the Education Sector (2008–2020). (79) Research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, and a draft of a national policy addressing the elimination of child labor has yet to be adopted. (52,53)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including with the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Programs	Coordinated the removal of children from forced labor situations and provided necessary social services for their rehabilitation, enrollment in schools or vocational training programs, and placement in stable homes. These programs provided basic education and vocational skills training to children that were most at risk for child labor exploitation and armed group recruitment. (10,23) During the year, UNICEF supported a pilot program to remove children from forced mining in Bozum, and provided them with social services through a local partner. (10) Research indicates that 50 former child soldiers and street children drilled wells under a UNICEF-run vocational training and rehabilitation program. (80) UNICEF provided direct social services to approximately 2,500 children during the year, and worked with the Ministry of Social Welfare to improve its case management system. (10,23,28) UNICEF also provided 592,000 children with formal and non-formal education, and 532,120 children with individual learning materials. Finally, UNICEF supported the government's efforts to administer final national examinations in remote areas. (28,30,81)
Shelters for Unaccompanied Children†	MSA- and UNICEF-supported centers that provide immediate care, food, and psychosocial support to vulnerable children and former child soldiers. (2) In 2020, 184,696 children affected by conflict were able to continue schooling through the establishment of temporary learning spaces. (23)
Education Programs	Programs to restore educational infrastructure include: a $23.4 million, EU-funded Education Program to rehabilitate and equip more than 300 schools in 4 prefectures and the capital; a Bangui Ministry of Mines and Ministry of National Education and Scientific Research program to construct schools in mining zones; and the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs' Education Clusters, led by UNICEF and in collaboration with the Ministry of Education, to provide access to education in conflict-affected areas. (23,37,38,74,79,82-84) In 2020, the government supported the UNICEF-funded programs "Temporary Spaces for Learning and Child Protection (STEPS)" and "Child Friendly Spaces." (10) Programs were closed from approximately April to August due to the pandemic, and re-opened following the implementation of COVID-19 mitigation guidelines. Together, they reached more than 200,000 children with psychosocial support, learning materials, and access to formal or non-formal education. (10,23,40,75)
Birth Registration Campaign†	In support of the 2014 decree mandating free birth registration to children born during the 2012–2014 conflict, re-opens civil registration centers in areas affected by conflict and provides registration to children. (37) The June 2020 CPE further mandates free birth registration for all children. The pandemic and electoral violence hampered efforts to re-open civil registration centers in the provinces. (12,61,75)

† Program is partially funded by the Government of the Central African Republic.

Central African Republic

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although the government participates in a program that assists former child soldiers, coordination with non-government actors is weak, and the scope of this program is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. (5,38,66,76) The absence of resources and government authority throughout much of the country significantly hindered the government's ability to combat child labor, and research found no evidence that the government has programs to assist children engaged in other worst forms of child labor. (38)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Central African Republic (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws establishing the compulsory education age are publicly available.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that all children are protected by law, including children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2017 – 2020
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations, and ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive.	2013 – 2020
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2020
Enforcement	Ensure that enforcement agencies have sufficient staff, resources and training to enforce laws related to child labor, including its worst forms.	2009 – 2020
	Initiate targeted inspections based on available child labor prevalence data, and expand inspections to include the informal sector.	2018 – 2020
	Ensure that the complaint mechanism for filing and responding to reports of child labor functions in accordance with its mandate, as required by ILO C. 182, and that penalties are imposed for child labor violations.	2018 – 2020
	Ensure that regional labor inspection offices are under the supervision and control of a central authority, and that regional inspectors are able to conduct inspections outside of Bangui, where many mining operations take place.	2018 – 2020
	Report criminal law enforcement data, including the number of investigations conducted, violations found, penalties imposed and collected, prosecutions initiated, and convictions obtained.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that courts and security services are sufficiently funded, that security forces are sufficiently trained, and that citizens can report violations and access formal judicial processes throughout the country.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that children are not imprisoned for their association with armed groups, are not kept in detention centers with adults, and are granted access to social services providers and humanitarian assistance when released from armed groups.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure non-state armed groups who are signatories to UN Action Plan to End Grave Violations Against Children uphold their commitments to these plans, including ceasing the recruitment and use of children.	2020
	Ensure that referral mechanisms for children found in child labor situations are well-funded and fully operational.	2019 – 2020
	Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all forms of child labor, including in mining, and ensure that existing coordination mechanisms are active.
Ensure that all coordinating bodies are able to carry out their intended mandates.		2020
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2020
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Strategy for the Education Sector.	2009 – 2020
Social Programs	Ensure that social programs to address the worst forms of child labor are funded and implemented in accordance with their mandates.	2018 – 2020
	Conduct a nationwide child labor prevalence survey to inform policies, programs, and enforcement actions.	2020

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Improve access to education for all children, including in rural areas, regardless of IDP status or religious affiliation, by eliminating school-related fees, making additional efforts to provide all children with birth registration, ensuring that ethnic and religious minorities are not denied access to education, establishing an adequate number of teachers and classrooms throughout the country, and ensuring that schools are safe spaces and free from armed groups.	2009 – 2020
	Expand programs to assist former child combatants and children associated with armed groups, support their reintegration into society, and improve coordination among relevant actors, while ensuring children are not inadvertently subjected to child labor under Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration programs,	2013 – 2020
	Allocate sufficient resources and implement programs to address the worst forms of child labor throughout the country.	2009 – 2020

In 2020, Chad made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Chad adopted a law extending fundamental protections to Chad's refugees and asylum seekers, including the right to access healthcare and education. The government also adopted Ordinance No. 002-PR-2020, which organizes a biometric population registry for births, marriages, and divorces. Lastly, Chad hosted a national workshop to develop a 2021–2026 nationwide school feeding program action plan. However, children in Chad are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in cattle herding and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. In addition, the government did not provide clear data on law enforcement efforts and has no active policies to address child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Chad are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in cattle herding and domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Chad. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	48.8 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	49.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	28.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		40.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2014–2015. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating and harvesting crops, including rice and corn (6,7)
	Production of charcoal (6,7)
	Herding livestock, including camels and cattle (3,7-9)
	Fishing, including catching, smoking, and selling fish (7)
Industry	Brickmaking (10)
	Carpentry (7)
	Gold mining† (1,7,9)
Services	Domestic work (2,7)
	Working in restaurants as barmaids and servers (3,7)
	Street work, including vending, garbage scavenging, and carrying heavy loads‡ (3,6,7,10,11)
	Begging† (2,7)
	Working as tailors and seamstresses (10)
	Working in auto repair shops (6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,7,9)
	Forced labor in agriculture, begging, cattle herding, domestic work, fishing, gold mining, charcoal production, and street vending, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,3,7,9)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In the Lake Chad region, human trafficking networks exploit children in fisheries, and traffickers in rural areas sell children in markets for use in cattle or camel herding. (3,9) Human traffickers exploit children in forced labor as beggars in urban areas, agricultural laborers on farms, gold miners in the north of the country, laborers in charcoal production, and as domestic workers. (9) Child herders, some of whom are victims of forced labor, follow traditional routes for grazing cattle and may cross ill-defined borders across the Sahel. (3,9,12) Domestically, boys sent to Koranic schools, or mouhadjirin, may be forced to beg and surrender the money they receive to their teachers. (2,3,7,9) Girls travelling to larger towns in search of work may be subjected to commercial sexual exploitation or domestic servitude. In addition, Nigerian terrorist groups Boko Haram and Islamic State-West Africa Province forcibly abduct minors to serve as child soldiers, suicide bombers, child brides, and forced laborers. (9,13)

Chad hosts more than 480,000 refugees and asylum seekers, the second largest per-capita population in Africa, more than half of whom are children. Refugee children from the Central African Republic are particularly vulnerable to exploitation. (9,14-17) The Boko Haram insurgency, flooding, and multiple epidemics have internally displaced 236,426 Chadians, 174,000 of whom live in the Lake Chad borderlands. (18-20) Children in Chad's refugee and IDP communities are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking due to their economic instability and lack of access to support systems. (1,13,18,19)

Both the Constitution and the Law Orienting the Education System mandate free and compulsory education in Chad. (21,22) Moreover, Chad was the first country in the region to integrate its network of refugee schools into the national education system; these schools are fully accredited and receive state funding. (23) However, children may travel long distances due to a shortage of schools, classrooms, and teachers. (3,24,25) Girls experience significantly higher dropout rates than boys, while children with disabilities may be unable to attend school altogether. (26-28) Some schools do not offer all grade levels, while others require payment of cost-prohibitive fees. (3,6,7) Following a nationwide lockdown to mitigate community transmission of COVID-19, classes resumed in October 2020 to allow students to complete the 2019–2020 academic year. (29) In the southeast, however, intense flooding in August and September prevented more than 37,772 primary-aged students from returning to school. (30,31) In Chad's eastern Lac province, which also faces repeated incursions from Boko Haram, 85 percent of primary-age children were out of school. (26) Moreover, birth certificates may be required for enrollment in school, although this rule is not consistently enforced, especially in rural areas. (3) Only 12 percent of children nationwide are registered at birth, with some areas experiencing birth registration rates as low as 5 percent. (6,32)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Chad has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Chad's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 52 of the Labor Code; Article I of the Decree Relating to Child Labor (33,34)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 6–7 of the Decree Relating to Child Labor (33)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 6 and 10 of the Decree Relating to Child Labor; Articles 5, 19, and 22 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons (33,35)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 20 of the Constitution; Chapter I, Article 5 of the Labor Code; Articles 5 and 15 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 292 (e), 292 (c), 327–328, and 331 of the Penal Code (22,34-36)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 3, 5, 6.2, and 7.1 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10 and 330–331 of the Penal Code (35,36)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 335, 336(a), 362, 364, 443, and 446 of the Penal Code; Articles 81–85 of the Law on Cyber Security and Fight Against Cyber Criminality; Articles 5, 16, and 22 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons (35-37)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 32 of the Law on the Organization of the Armed Forces; Article I of the Ordinance Prohibiting the Use of Children in Armed Conflict; Article 52 of Military Statute N° 006/PR/06; Article 5 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 286 (cc), 288 (g), and 370 of the Penal Code (35,36,38-40)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 32 of the Law on the Organization of the Armed Forces; Article 22 of the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child; Article 5, 18, and 22 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 286 (cc), 288 (g), and 370 of the Penal Code (35,36,38,41)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article I of the Ordinance Prohibiting the Use of Children in Armed Conflict; Articles 5, 18, and 22 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 286 (cc), 288 (g), and 370 of the Penal Code (35,36,39)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16‡	Articles 21, 23, 25, and 28 of the Law Orienting the Education System; Article 35 of the Constitution (21,22)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 9 of the Law Orienting the Education System; Article 35 of the Constitution (21,22)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (21)

On December 23, 2020, the government adopted Law No 027/PR/2020: Asylum in the Republic of Chad. The legislation extends fundamental protections to Chad's 480,000 refugees and asylum-seekers, including access to education. (7,42,43) The law conforms to the 1951 Refugee Convention and the Organization of African Unity's Convention on Refugees, and will be implemented in 2021–2022. (7,42,43) The legislation also mandates access to public health systems, social services, and the courts. (43) The government also adopted Ordinance No. 002-PR-2020, which organizes a biometric population registry for births, marriages, and divorces. (7)

Chadian jurisprudence does not currently prohibit the use, offering, or procuring of children for illicit activities. While the draft Child Protection Code (CPC) prohibits the use of children for illicit activities, the legislation has not been adopted. (2,6-8,44-46) Additional laws enhancing protections for human trafficking victims and children working in the informal sector, including amendments to the Family Code the Labor Code, are likewise pending adoption. (7,46) Finally, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (8,21,34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service, Employment, and Social Dialogue (MOPS)	Oversees Chad's labor inspectorate and enforces child labor laws. (3) Administers a directorate charged with combating the worst forms of child labor, and maintains a specific point of contact to assist in coordinating child protection and human trafficking issues. (3)
Ministry of Justice, Human Rights, and Guardian of the Seal (MOJ)	Drafts and enforces laws and coordinates efforts to protect human rights. Through its Directorate for Protection and Legal Monitoring of Children, enforces child labor laws. (3)
National Police's Child Protection Brigade (CPB)	Enforces and investigates allegations of child exploitation, including human trafficking and the worst forms of child labor, and acts as the coordinating institution for government responses. (1,6) Evacuates children to its headquarters in N'Djamena, from where they may be moved to Ministry of Women, Childhood Protection and National Solidarity (MWCPNS) temporary shelters in Koundoul. (3) Included 100 "focal points" spread throughout all 23 provinces during the reporting period. These focal points are not trained investigators, but they are responsible for coordinating investigations with hub offices and referring allegations to investigators. (3,7) The CPB or other local authorities notify MOJ's Directorate for Protection and Legal Monitoring of Children, UNICEF, and local NGOs when there is a case of child trafficking or abuse. (13) Allegations may be submitted directly by the public or by MOPS, MWCPNS, or MOJ. The government's regional child protection technical committees also identify and refer child trafficking victims to the CPB. (13) The CPB's central offices are located in Chad's largest cities (N'Djamena, Moundou, Sarh, Mongo, Mao, Abéché, and Lai). (3,7,13) However, research indicates that the CPB is not well known by the public, thus limiting its impact. (3,48)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Chad took actions to combat child labor. (3)

The Ministry of Public Service, Employment, and Social Dialogue (MOPS) recruited six new labor inspectors in 2020. (7) In addition to 36 full-time inspectors, MOPS employs 50 labor controllers who act in an advisory role (but are unable to conduct inspections themselves). (7) The ILO funded one refresher course related to child labor in 2020. However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Chad's workforce, which includes approximately 5.6 million workers. (2,49,50) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Chad would employ about 140 labor inspectors. (2,49,50) Chad does not maintain a central database for routine inspections, including child labor violations. In addition, the government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (7)

The MOPS' budget included labor inspectorate funding, but did not specify the amount. (7) Ongoing austerity measures, exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic, hindered the government's ability to conduct worksite inspections. (7) Labor inspectors lacked sufficient resources, including transportation, to conduct investigations outside the city in which they are based. (3,6,7,9) Research indicates that the informal sector, in which many children work, is also largely unmonitored. (2,24) In cases involving children working as herders, local officials or NGO lawyers have negotiated settlements with employers for damages or fulfillment of contract terms on behalf of victims' families, including victims of forced labor. (13) Victims may file civil suits to seek damages from traffickers. (7) In some cases, these children are victims of forced labor. (7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Chad took actions to combat child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (3)	Unknown (7)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (7)

The government does not maintain a centralized criminal records database. All criminal records are handwritten and hard copies are stored at courts and regional tribunals. (3,7) Therefore, the government did not provide clear information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (3) Judiciary and enforcement agencies have not been fully trained on the 2018 President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; therefore, some perpetrators of human trafficking were released. (47,51,52) Furthermore, child victims may be housed with their traffickers due to a lack of available service providers. (52)

Civil society organizations typically assist with providing temporary shelter, legal assistance, and family reintegration services; they also track prosecutions and convictions. (3,9) A lack of infrastructure, erratic and insufficient funding allocations, and under-enforcement of existing penalties also pose barriers to enforcement. (3,24,47)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including funding and efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Working Group on the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates government efforts on child trafficking, provides training, conducts awareness-raising activities, and strengthens the network of government organizations that address human trafficking. Chaired by MWCPNS's Child Protection Directorate and includes representatives from four other ministries, including MOPS. (48) The group did not meet during the reporting period. (3)
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Child Soldiers	Coordinates government efforts to eliminate the use of children in armed conflict and address the worst forms of child labor. Located in each of the eight military regions and includes representatives from the government, army, gendarmerie, and civil society organizations. Conducts awareness-raising activities and training in the military. (3) A child soldiers task force, comprising UNICEF, the Ministry of Defense, MOJ, and MWCPNS, periodically screens recruitment pools for minimum age requirement violations. There is no indication that the government recruits or uses child soldiers. (13) Research was unable to determine whether the committee was active during the reporting period. (3)
MWCPNS's Regional Child Protection Committees	Coordinate regional government efforts to address the worst forms of child labor and refer victims, as appropriate. (1,13,47) Members include judiciary, police, labor inspectors, educators, civil society, and social services providers. (47) Help identify and refer child trafficking victims to appropriate officials. (13,53) Celebrated the "Day of the African Child" in June 2020 with at-risk youth at the Dakoua Espoir Welcome Center. The event focused on providing access to education for all children and underlining the importance of education to the economic, social and cultural development of all societies. (7) However, the COVID-19 pandemic severely impacted government budgets and restrictions on nonessential business exacerbated prevailing capacity constraints. A lack of funding and personnel limited further activities. (7)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Road Map to Implement the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons	Adopted in 2019, with the ultimate goal of implementing a National Action Plan and coordinated interagency enforcement of the 2018 President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons. (1,3) Includes provisions for training members of the courts, local authorities, traditional and religious leaders, members of civil society, and members of enforcement agencies. (13) The 2018 law also designates the National Committee to Fight Against Trafficking to design the national trafficking action plan. (47,51) The committee was not established during the reporting period. (7,13,47)
Ministry of Economy and Development Planning (MEDP) Policies	Includes the 5-Year Plan for Development (2016–2020), which aims to conduct a survey on child labor every 3 years, increase the rate of birth registrations, increase educational opportunities, and strengthen the human and financial capacity of MOPS's directorate charged with combating the worst forms of child labor. (52,54) Vision 2030, another MEDP policy, aims to increase educational opportunities, establish social protection policies, and implement a national employment policy with a youth focus. (55) Research was unable to determine whether either policy was active during the reporting period.
Interim Education Plan (2018–2020)	Includes measures to adopt bilingual basic education (French and Arabic) and integrate Chad's refugee camp schools into the national school system. Education Cannot Wait, a UNICEF-funded program, was partially developed under the auspices of the Interim Education Plan. (7,56,57) In 2020, the government announced a 1-year extension of the plan. (7,57) Research was unable to determine whether the policy was active during the reporting period. (7)
National Biometric Population Registry†	Adopted in 2020 under Ordinance No. 002-PR-2020, which creates a national biometric population registry and permits the organization of civil registry in the Republic of Chad, including for births, marriages, and divorces. A dedicated database will facilitate identification of victims and perpetrators of child labor. (7,58)
Comprehensive Refugee Response Framework ‡	Integrates schools in refugee camps into Chad's national education system, per UNHCR's Global Compact on Refugees Framework. (59) Government implementing partners include the Ministry of Administration and Territory, Ministry of Economy and Development Pacification, Ministry of Education, Ministry of Health, and Ministry for Child Protection. Other partners include Chad's National Commission for the Reception and Reintegration of Refugees and Returnees, Cellule Filets Sociaux , and local authorities at the provincial, prefecture levels. (59) These efforts are supported by international donor agencies and NGOs such as the Jesuit Refugee Service Chad, whose Darfuri camp mentorship program (2019–2022) pairs Sudanese refugee teachers with local Chadian teachers. (59,60) The passage of Law No 027/PR/2020: Asylum in the Republic of Chad formally guarantees refugees and asylum-seekers the right to free movement, access to public health services, and education. (42,59,61)

† The policy was adopted during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (6,62,63)

Although the government adopted a roadmap to address trafficking in persons, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor. (7)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including funding and adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
World Bank-Funded Projects	Aims to improve safety nets and provide access to basic services. Includes: Safety Nets Project (2016–2020), a $10 million project to provide conditional cash transfers and cash-to-work programs; Refugees and Host Communities Support (2018–2023), a $60 million project to improve access to health and education services for refugees and host communities by rehabilitating and constructing primary schools; the Education Sector Reform Project Phase 2 (2013–2020), a $65 million project to improve education conditions in primary and secondary schools; and the Sahel Women Empowerment and Demographic Dividend–AF Phase 2 (2014–2023), a $170 million project to provide girls, adolescents, and women access to quality education. By November 2020, the Sahel Women Empowerment program had reached 158,181 vulnerable girls with school kits, housing, payment of school fees, and academic support. (64) By the end of the reporting period, the Education Sector Reform project had recruited and trained 10,965 teachers, and the primary completion rate in targeted areas nearly doubled. (61,64-68)
UNICEF Programs	Implemented distance learning programs in the wake of pandemic-related school closures during the reporting period. To this end, UNICEF targeted 5,405 secondary school students in N'Djamena, Logone Oriental, Moyen Chari and Lac provinces with radio and TV education. (30) UNICEF also supported the Ministry of Education in distributing school supplies to 5,448 refugees, IDPs, and host community students. In 2020, a total of 27,893 children in Lac province, and 59,209 across all provinces, received school supplies (30) UNICEF's $21 million Education Cannot Wait (2020–2022) program supports education for 230,000 at-risk children. (69) The program was developed under the Ministry of National Education's Transitional Education Plan, Program to Strengthen Literacy, Humanitarian Response Plan and Education Cluster Strategy. (56,69) Interventions include early childhood education initiatives, and out-of-school adolescent children (ages 9 to 14) will benefit from non-formal education and literacy programs. (56,69)
Ministry of Women, Childhood Protection and National Solidarity (MWCPNS)†	Protects children's rights, provides temporary shelter to victims, and assists with reintegration when appropriate. Through its Child Protection Directorate, leads government efforts on child protection, including from child labor, and liaises with the Child Protection Directorate at MOJ. (6,47) With UNICEF and local NGO support, MWCPNS-run shelters provide temporary assistance to victims of child trafficking, including food, education, medical and psychological care, and reintegration services. (1,3) The National Solidarity Fund, maintained by the Prime Minister's Office, funds temporary shelter or reunification assistance for victims. (70) Child Protection Directorates at various ministries and the CPB work together to provide support and reintegration services to victims of exploitation. (3) Shelters continued to provide victim services during the reporting period. (3)
UNDAF (2017–2021)	Aims to provide access to quality education for children who are school aged, refugees, and vulnerable, and to improve social protection and promote good governance. (71) Research was unable to determine whether the program was implemented during the reporting period.
WFP Strategic Plan (2019–2023)	$1.3 billion program funded by WFP to improve food security and educational outcomes. Aims to provide technical assistance to the Ministry of Education, distribute school lunches to crisis-affected areas, and disperse cash to girls who are attending school. (72) In December 2020, the WFP, Regional Centre of Excellence against Hunger and Malnutrition, and the Government of Chad hosted a national workshop to create a joint 2021–2026 action plan to create a nationwide school feeding program. The program aims to provide school children with locally-sourced school meals. (73) The workshop convened 45 participants from key line ministries and institutions involved in the implementation of the National Policy for School Feeding, Nutrition and Health, the Global Child Nutrition Forum, and the International Food Policy Research Institute. (73)

† Program is funded by the Government of Chad.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (47)

The government's funding of social programs continued to be limited due to austerity measures during the reporting period, and social services are limited to urban areas. (3,7) Although Chad has programs that target child labor, their scope is insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem, particularly the use of child labor in herding cattle, forced child labor in domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (74)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Chad (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws specifically prohibit children from being used, offered, or procured for illicit activities.	2011 – 2020
	Ratify pending legislation enhancing protections for human trafficking victims and children working in the informal sector, including the Child Protection Code, the Family Code, and amendments to the Labor Code.	2019 – 2020
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2020
Enforcement	Ensure that the roles of enforcement agencies are well-known and understood by the public.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that law enforcement agencies receive sufficient resources, including training, to carry out their mandate.	2020
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by authorizing inspectors to assess penalties, and by providing inspectors with sufficient resources, including training, to conduct inspections in both the formal and informal sectors.	2014 – 2020
	Collect, store, and publish data on law enforcement efforts in a central database, including information about labor inspectorate funding, the number and type of inspections conducted, whether violations were found, penalties imposed and fees collected, and the number of criminal investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and convictions obtained.	2014 – 2020
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2012 – 2020
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies are sufficiently funded, law enforcement officers are trained, and existing penalties are enforced according to the law.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure a sufficient number of service providers are available for child victims so victims are not housed with their traffickers.	2020
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating committees receive adequate resources to carry out their mandates.	2014 – 2020
Government Policies	Adopt a policy to combat all relevant worst forms of child labor in Chad and ensure that existing policies are implemented.	2009 – 2020
	Publish activities undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor to address child labor during the reporting period.	2020
Social Programs	Ensure access to education for all children by eliminating school-related fees; ensure that schools are safe; and increase the number of schools, grade levels, classrooms, and teachers available throughout the country, including for children in refugee camps.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that all children are issued birth certificates, which may be required for school enrollment.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that existing programs receive adequate funding to support victims of child labor throughout the country, and that programs are implemented as intended.	2016 – 2020
	Establish or expand programs to provide services to children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, such as the use of forced child labor in herding cattle, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2020

In 2020, Chile made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government published Law 21.271, which amended the Labor Code to require that a new list of hazardous activities and occupations for children and adolescents be published by the government, and ratified the International Labor Organization's 2014 Forced Labor Protocol. In addition, the National Prosecutor's Office organized multiple trainings for prosecutors and public health officials related to the protection of rights of child victims of sexual exploitation. The government also established the Tacna-Arica Bi-regional Roundtable to coordinate efforts between the Governments of Chile and Peru to prevent and eradicate child labor in the border area. Under the National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Workers, the government held conferences, virtual seminars, trainings, and lectures dedicated to fighting child labor. Finally, the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare published the results of the Child Labor Vulnerability Index, which was designed to measure child labor vulnerability across Chile's 16 regions. However, children in Chile are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also subjected to involvement in the production and trafficking of drugs. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, existing prohibitions related to forced labor do not meet international standards because forced labor is criminally prohibited only when it results from human trafficking. Furthermore, prohibitions related to the use of children for illicit activities do not meet international standards.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Chile are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children are also subjected to involvement in the production and trafficking of drugs. (1,2) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Chile.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.8 (94,025)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	99.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		96.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (3)

Figure I. Working Children by Sector, Ages 5-14

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

	Forced labor in agriculture, mining, construction, street vending, domestic work, and garment and hospitality sectors, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,10,12)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, including in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,5,8,9,12-14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The results of the 2012 National Survey of Activities of Children and Adolescents (Encuesta de Actividades de Niños, Niñas y Adolescentes) indicate that 70.6 percent of working children ages 5 to 17 are engaged in work classified as dangerous. (1) In 2020, the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MINTRAB) published the results of the Child Labor Vulnerability Index, a statistical tool prepared by the ILO and the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean. This tool comprises 12 variables, grouped into 5 categories and for which levels of child labor vulnerability are assigned by territorial distribution. (7) For the elaboration of this index, administrative and public information was collected from the 2017 Economic Characterization Survey, the 2017 Census, and Labor Directorate administrative records. The final results are displayed in 17 profiles, one at the national level and one for each of Chile’s 16 regions. (7)

In Chile, children, some of whom may be human trafficking victims, are used to steal or produce, sell, and transport drugs near the borders of Peru and Bolivia. (2,8,12) In 2020, the National Minors’ Service (SENAME) removed 603 children from situations of child labor and provided them with social services. (7) According to SENAME’s Worst Forms of Child Labor Single Registry, 337 children were involved in the production and trafficking of drugs during the reporting period. (7)

Education is compulsory through secondary school; however, some educational barriers do exist in Chile, including the lack of transportation to schools in rural areas and discrimination in educational settings, specifically for migrant children. (5,7,15) Indigenous children and adolescents from Otavalo, Ecuador, are especially vulnerable to human trafficking for labor exploitation in Chile. (10) Children are also involved in street work, especially in Santiago, including selling handicrafts, clothes, or other goods. (8) In Coquimbo, children sell products in street markets and work as jugglers. (6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Chile has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Chile's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of forced labor.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 13 of the Labor Code (16)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 13–14 and 18 of the Labor Code (16)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Chapter 1, Article 13 of the Armed Forces Recruitment and Mobilization Law No. 2.306 (26)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 26 of Law No. 20.357 (27)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18‡	Articles 4, 25, and 27 of the General Education Law No. 20.370 (28)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 4 of the General Education Law No. 20.370 (28)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (28)

In October 2020, Law 21.271 was published. This law amends the Labor Code by establishing that a new list of hazardous activities and occupations for children and adolescents must be published by the Chilean Government. (7) The law will enter into force on the first day of the month following publication of the regulations that prohibit the activities identified as dangerous. During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare and the Ministry of Health continued to work on drafting regulations. (7) In addition, in January 2021, the Congress of Chile ratified the ILO's Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention No. 29. (13)

Chile

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

However, Chilean laws related to forced labor are not sufficient because they do not criminally prohibit forced labor except when it results from human trafficking. (20,21,29) Prohibitions related to the use of children for illicit activities do not meet international standards because they only criminalize supplying children with drugs or inducing children to use drugs. (24,25) In addition, as Chile's minimum age for work is lower than the age for compulsory education, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (16,28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MINTRAB)	Designs and implements national strategies on child labor and generates awareness on child labor and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (7) Enforces child labor laws, coordinating with the National Minors' Service and the Department of Child Labor Eradication. (2,12)
National Minors' Service (SENAME)	Coordinates the provision of services to vulnerable children, particularly those living on the streets, and victims of commercial sexual exploitation, in coordination with Offices of the Protection of Rights and the Department of Child Labor Eradication. (5,30-32) Operates under the Ministry of Justice and Social Provision. In coordination with MINTRAB and the ILO, oversees the Worst Forms of Child Labor Single Registry ( Sistema de Registro Único e Intervención de la Peores Formas de Trabajo Infantil ), which tracks such incidents and provides information on programs designed to assist child workers. (33) The Offices of the Protection of Rights ( Oficinas de Protección de Derechos ) refer cases of children whose rights have been violated to appropriate social services and monitor cases of the worst forms of child labor. These offices are located in municipalities throughout the country and are part of the larger social protection network overseen by SENAME. (34)
National Investigations Police (PDI)	Investigate and prevent the worst forms of child labor by conducting community outreach activities, including trainings and information sessions. (35) Operate under the Ministry of the Interior. (10) Within PDI, the Human Trafficking Brigade investigates the trafficking of children, modern slavery, and organized crime. (35,36) The Sexual Assault Victim Care Center provides support to child victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (35)
National Uniformed Police ( Carabineros )	Investigate, prevent, and detect crimes, including child labor violations, by conducting community policing and specialized investigations. Under the Directorate for Family Protection, provide specialized orientation on policies and operating plans for detection and prevention of domestic violence and child abuse, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (14) Operate under the Ministry of the Interior. (10) Receive referrals on the worst forms of child labor from the National Labor Directorate. (5)
National Prosecutor's Office ( Fiscalía Nacional )	Investigates and prosecutes crimes, including those involving commercial sexual exploitation and the trafficking of children. Trains and coordinates with inter-agency partners, including PDI, Carabineros , and regional and local prosecutor's offices. (5,37,38)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Chile took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the National Labor Directorate that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2019	2020

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (7)

In Chile there are no inspectors specialized in child labor; instead, they are all required to investigate and enforce child labor laws. (7) During the reporting period, 66 labor violations related to child labor laws were found, for which sanctions were imposed. The collected penalties related to these infractions amounted to $96,563 for the reporting period. (7) Fewer labor inspections were conducted during the reporting period as a result of restrictions put in place due to the COVID-19 pandemic, as all businesses with the exception of essential services were closed from May to July 2020. (7) SENAME reported that 603 children and adolescents found in irregular or illegal situations related to child labor were removed from those situations and received social services during the reporting period. Although the labor inspectorate did not provide information on the number of inspections conducted at work sites during the reporting period, which were affected by the pandemic, inspections were conducted in person as well as remotely. (7)

The number of vehicles available to labor inspectors is insufficient, especially in areas where distances between regional offices and employers can be great. (9) The number of labor inspectors is also likely insufficient for the size of Chile's workforce, which includes nearly 9 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Chile would employ about 592 inspectors. (42)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Chile took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including penalties for promoting or facilitating the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (5)	Yes (7)

*The National Prosecutor's database does not differentiate between investigations and prosecutions.

In 2020, SENAME reported that the Worst Forms of Child Labor Single Registry recorded 337 cases related to drug production/drug trafficking or the use of children and adolescents in other illicit activities between January and December of 2020. (7) The National Prosecutor's Office (MP) also prosecuted two defendants for the commercial sexual exploitation of children and adolescents. (13) The MP also organized multiple trainings

Chile

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

for prosecutors, MP officials, and public health officials during the reporting period. These included interview techniques of minor children, investigations of commercial sexual exploitation of minors, the protection of rights of child and adolescent victims, and comprehensive forensic evaluation of minor victims of sex crimes. (13) The National Investigations Police's Human Trafficking Brigade (BRITRAP) also conducted training for officers and civilian employees assigned to the new BRITRAP established in Arica. (13)

Legislation to create a new national service responsible specifically for youth and family shelters under the Ministry of Social Development's Under Secretary for Children passed in 2020. The new service is expected to begin operation in 2021. (13)

Despite these efforts, judges frequently suspend or commute sentences of individuals convicted of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (5,12) In addition, the penalties for promoting or facilitating the commercial sexual exploitation of children, ranging from 3 to 20 years imprisonment, are not commensurate with those for other serious crimes, such as rape. (12,43) Moreover, there is a lack of adequate shelters for child victims of trafficking in persons. (36)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Department of Child Labor Eradication	Ensures Chile's compliance with international treaties that protect children and adolescents in the labor market, in both formal and informal settings, in coordination with the National Minors' Service ( Servicio Nacional de Menores or SENAME). Housed within the Sub Secretariat of Labor. (32,44) Also coordinates both the Social Observatory to Eradicate Child Labor, which conducts technical studies on child and adolescent labor issues and evaluates current policies to eliminate child labor; and the National Advisory Committee on Child Labor. (5,45) Implements the National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Workers (2015–2025). (5,46)
National Advisory Committee to Eradicate Child Labor	Oversees implementation of the National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Workers (2015–2025) with the Social Observatory to Eradicate Child Labor. (14) Led by MINTRAB and includes representatives from the ministries of Agriculture, Education, and Justice; the National Statistics Institute; the National Tourism Service; SENAME; PDI; and the Carabineros . (47) The Regional Advisory Committees for the Eradication of Child Labor are led by the Regional Secretary of Labor and replicate at the regional level the functioning of the National Advisory Committee to Eradicate Child Labor. (10) In 2020, held two sessions, one of which analyzed the challenges of the implementation of the public policy in the context of the health crisis caused by the pandemic, and to coordinate actions to commemorate the World Day Against Child Labor. As of November 2020, 21 sessions had been held by the Regional Advisory Committees. (7)
Under Secretariat for Children	Manages, coordinates, and supervises the development and implementation of public policies and programs aimed at protecting children and adolescents, among them the Subsystem of Integral Protection of Children, " Chile Crece Contigo " program. Located under the Ministry of Social Development and Family. (2,7,48,49) Responsible for implementing the National Childhood Policy and its respective Action Plan through coordination mechanisms for intersectoral work. (2,7,48,49) Supports dissemination, training, and awareness-raising actions aimed at promoting rights, and developing studies and research, preparing annual reports on the general state of childhood and adolescence, and collaborating with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in the preparation of documents the government must present to the specialized bodies and committees at the UN. Also seeks to generate social, economic, and cultural conditions that allow families to adequately care for and protect children and adolescents, guaranteeing their protection and the exercise of their rights. (7) In 2020, convened the Inter-Sectoral Technical Committee comprising 35 institutions. (7)
Inter-Agency Task Force on Trafficking in Persons (MITP)	Coordinates the government's anti-human trafficking efforts. Includes three sub-committees: awareness and prevention, control and prosecution, and protection and support for victims. (36) Led by the Ministry of the Interior with support from law enforcement agencies, Ministry of Foreign Relations, Ministry of Justice, National Prosecutor's Office, SENAME, and others. (5,51) Created regional task forces throughout the country. (5,36) In coordination with the Ministry of Labor and the ILO, the MITP organized a webinar titled "The Role of Companies in Eradicating Child Labor and Trafficking in Persons" in 2020, which was attended by 120 public officials and private sector representatives. (13) In April 2020, the task force also published a statistical report on government-collected demographic data on victims of human trafficking in Chile, which were collected between 2011 and 2019. (52)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The Tacna-Arica Bi-regional Roundtable*	Focuses on fulfilling the commitments made at the Presidential Meeting and the Third Meeting of Ministers between Peru and Chile, held in October 2019. (7) Established in 2020, the roundtable had its first meeting on October 9, 2020. It is jointly coordinated between the Regional Ministerial Secretariat of Arica and Parinacota of Chile and the Regional Directorate of Labor and Employment Promotion of the Tacna Region of Peru. (7) MINTRAB, through the Department of Child Labor Eradication, functions as technical support to the roundtable. Set up to coordinate efforts and exchange experiences to prevent and eradicate child labor in the border area. (7) During the reporting period, met two times, and held its first activity in December 2020. This activity involved a training on the role of the police, both from Chile and Peru, in the prevention and the eradication child labor. (7)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Workers (2015–2025)	Establishes a strategy to eradicate child labor by: combining efforts across national and regional agencies and private and public entities, and requiring regions to establish a strategy to address child labor issues in the area. (47) MINTRAB oversees the implementation of regional strategies, including the design and implementation of regional operating plans. (14) In 2020, 46 activities were reported in different regions of the country and in the Department for the Eradication of Child Labor. These include dissemination conferences, virtual seminars, trainings, lectures, subscription of letters of commitment with various institutions, and collaboration agreements with universities to promote regional research on the subject. (7) In addition, the development of actions at the national level included promulgation of Law 21.271, preparation of the list of activities related to Law No. 21.27, and participation in technical engagements for the ILO's Survey of Activities of Boys, Girls, and Adolescents 2021. (7)
National Plan of Action for Children and Adolescents (2018–2025)	The Action Plan works to consolidate, monitor, and improve all public initiatives that protect the rights of children and adolescents. It was created by the Under Secretary for Childhood. (5,29,53) Among the Plan's many objectives is the increased coordination and strengthening of the National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Workers 2015–2025, including expanding programs that help families at risk of child labor find employment so that their children will be less likely to work. (29,50,53) MINTRAB participates and provides information and guidance regarding child labor. (54) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement this plan.
Third Action Plan against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents (ESCNNA)	Creates cooperation mechanisms for private and public institutions to collaborate on preventing and detecting commercial sexual exploitation of children and providing social services and rights restitution to victims. (55,56) During the reporting period, SENAME, in conjunction with the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights, reactivated ESCNNA, with the aim of clarifying Chile's commitments to address the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (7)
National Action Plan Against Human Trafficking (2019–2022)	Seeks to prevent and combat human trafficking, with a focus on women and children. Encompasses four strategic areas: prevention and awareness raising; prosecution; victims' assistance and protection; and inter-institutional cooperation and coordination. (57) MITP developed the Action Plan in 2019, which was approved at the working level but is awaiting approval at the ministerial level. However, all member agencies worked under the new plan's guidelines in 2019. (36,58,59) In 2020, SENAME, through its Professional Development Unit of the National Directorate of the Service, implemented the course "Human Trafficking: Conceptualization, Detection and Referral of the Child–Adolescent Victim of Trafficking Population" as part of its commitments in the National Plan. (7)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (60,61)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of funding provided for these programs.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
SENAME Programs for Children at Risk of or Engaged in the Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Approximately 132 programs serving disadvantaged youth and children at risk of or engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. Includes programs implemented by municipal governments and local branches of the Office for the Rights of Children. (62) SENAME also administers 18 programs to serve child victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (62) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement this initiative.
USDOL-Funded Projects	Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP 16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor , a project that improves knowledge of these issues through research and data-driven techniques, strengthens policies and improves government capacity, and strengthens partnerships to accelerate progress. (64) Additional information is available on the USDOL website .

† Program is funded by the Government of Chile.

In 2020, MINTRAB did not finance any of the social programs established to address child labor issues in the country. This was due to the budget reduction suffered by government institutions, as a result of the need to direct government resources towards the management of the pandemic. (7)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Chile (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Criminally prohibit forced labor.	2016 – 2020
	Criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities.	2019 – 2020
	Raise the minimum age for work to the age up to which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2020
Enforcement	Ensure that inspectors have sufficient transportation resources, such as vehicles, to carry out their duties.	2016 – 2020
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2018 – 2020
	Publish information on the number of inspections conducted at work sites during the reporting period.	2020
	Ensure that penalties for promoting or facilitating the commercial sexual exploitation of children are commensurate with those for other serious crimes, and that judges do not suspend or commute such sentences.	2016 – 2020
	Publish information on the number of investigations and criminal violations found related to the worst forms of child labor.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that there are adequate shelters available for child victims of trafficking in persons.	2019 – 2020
	Publish information on activities undertaken to implement the National Plan of Action for Children and Adolescents during the reporting period.	2020
Social Programs	Conduct research to determine the activities carried out by children working in forestry, hunting, and fishing to inform policies and programs.	2020
	Ensure that educational barriers, such as the lack of transportation to school in rural areas and discrimination of migrant children in educational settings, are addressed to prevent child labor.	2018 – 2020
	Ensure that programs established to address child labor are properly funded, active, and activities are published.	2020

- 64 U.S. Department of Labor. Technical Progress Report: MAPI6 Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor. October 2019. Source on file.

For the 2020 reporting period, no assessment has been made regarding Christmas Island's efforts to advance the elimination of the worst forms of child labor because there is no evidence of a worst forms of child labor problem and the territory has a good legal and enforcement framework on child labor. Nevertheless, in 2020, the Government of Western Australia assented to the Work Health and Safety Act 2020, which will strengthen laws and regulations related to occupational safety and health on Christmas Island, including prohibitions on hazardous child labor. In addition, the Government of Australia adopted a new National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and Slavery 2020–2025.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists on Christmas Island. (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Christmas Island is non-self governing and is included as part of the territory of the Australian Commonwealth. (2-4) Under the Acts Interpretation Act 1901 (Cth), all laws of the Commonwealth are applicable to Christmas Island as if it were a part of mainland Australia. (3,5) The following conventions, which have been ratified by Australia, have therefore been extended to Christmas Island (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Christmas Island is subject to the laws and regulations related to child labor of the Commonwealth of Australia and the state of Western Australia (Table 2). The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	17.5	Section 190 of the Children and Community Services Act 2004 (WA) (CI); Section 29 of the School Education Act 1999 (WA) (CI) (6,7)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Regulations 6.2, 6.6, and Schedule 6.3 of the Occupational Health and Safety Regulations 1996 (WA) (CI); Section 10.4 of the Mines Safety and Inspection Regulations 1995 (WA) (CI); Section 193 of the Children and Community Services Act 2004 (WA) (CI) (6,8,9)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Regulations 6.2, 6.6, and Schedule 6.3 of the Occupational Health and Safety Regulations (WA) (CI) 1996; Classes of Licenses for High Risk Work; Section 10.4 of the Mines Safety and Inspection Regulations 1995 (WA) (CI) (8-10)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 270.6 and 270.7 of the Criminal Code Act 1995 (Cth); Sections 270.6, 270.7, and 271.9 of the Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013 (Cth) (11,12)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Division 270 and 271 of the Criminal Code Act 1995 (Cth) (11)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 16–18 of the Prostitution Act 2000 (WA) (CI); Section 192 of the Children and Community Services Act 2004 (WA) (CI); Section 217 of the Criminal Code Act Compilation Act 1913 (WA) (CI) (6,13,14)

NO ASSESSMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Divisions 309–310 of the Criminal Code Act 1995 (Cth) (11)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Canberra Act 2600 (15)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Canberra Act 2600 (15)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Sections 268.68 and 268.88 of the Criminal Code Act 1995 (Cth) (11)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17.5	Section 6 of the School Education Act 1999 (WA) (CI) (7)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 98 of the School Education Act 1999 (WA) (CI) (7)

* No conscription (15)

In 2020, the Government of Western Australia assented to the Work Health and Safety Act 2020, which will strengthen laws and regulations related to occupational safety and health on Christmas Island, including prohibitions on hazardous child labor. This act will enter into force once the government finalizes implementing regulations, which are being drafted. (16,17)

On Christmas Island, the Children and Community Services Act 2004 (WA) (CI) sets the minimum age for light work in delivery-types of employment at age 10 if the child is accompanied by a parent or an authorized adult. This is not in compliance with international standards, which set the minimum age for light work at age 13. (6,18) However, the government has noted that there are no delivery services, no post or letter boxes, and no newspaper on Christmas Island; as a result, there are no types of light work present on Christmas Island in which children under age 13 could engage. (4)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the Government of Australia has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Western Australia Department of Communities	Enforces laws related to the minimum age for work through a Service Delivery Arrangement, under which Australian Government services are provided on Christmas Island. (4,19)
Western Australia Department of Mines, Industry Regulation and Safety	Enforces laws related to hazardous child labor and occupational safety and health through a Service Delivery Arrangement under which Australian Government services are provided on Christmas Island. (4,19)
Australian Federal Police	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (20) Oversee the Child Protection Operations Team, which coordinates and investigates online and multi-jurisdictional child sexual exploitation issues, including child pornography; and the Human Trafficking Teams, which investigate human trafficking for the purposes of transnational sexual and labor exploitation. (21,22)

Labor Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor.

Criminal Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for criminal law enforcement actions to address child labor.

However, in 2020, one case involving a child subjected to use in the production of pornography on Christmas Island was prosecuted to conclusion, based on an investigation launched in 2019. The perpetrator was convicted and sentenced to 4 years and 4 months in prison under Sections 217(2), 218, and 220 of the Criminal Code Compilation Act 1913 (WA)(CI). (4,14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor. However, the Government of Australia has established mechanisms to coordinate government efforts on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Departmental Committee on Human Trafficking (IDC)	Deals with child labor issues, including its worst forms, from a counter-trafficking perspective. Comprises 12 government agencies, including the Australian Federal Police, Department of Employment, and Department of Foreign Affairs, and is chaired by the Australian Border Force. (4,21) Includes an Operational Working Group subcommittee that meets monthly and refers emerging policy issues for IDC consideration. (4) In 2020, the IDC met twice in plenary sessions and held sub-group meetings at the operational level approximately every 6 weeks. The Committee's work during the reporting period focused on developing the updated National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and Slavery 2020–2025. (4)

In June 2020, the Inter-Departmental Committee on Human Trafficking provided the Australian Government's first annual report to parliament on implementation of the Modern Slavery Act, which establishes requirements for businesses and organizations to report on efforts to reduce the risk of human trafficking and the worst forms of child labor in their supply chains. In December 2020, the government published its own Modern Slavery Statement, indicating efforts to reduce child labor and human trafficking risks in federal government operations and procurement supply chains. (4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for government policies to address child labor. However, the Government of Australia has established policies related to child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and Slavery 2020–2025†	Sets five strategic priorities for addressing modern slavery, which the National Action Plan defines as trafficking in persons, slavery, slavery-like practices, and the worst forms of child labor. Priorities include: (a) prevention; (b) disruption, investigation, and prosecution; (c) support and protection for victims; (d) partnerships; and (e) research. (4,26)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

However, federal cash transfer programs for youth and families are available to residents of Christmas Island. These programs were active in 2020 and may have assisted in preventing child labor on Christmas Island during the reporting period. (4)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, there are no actions needed to advance the continued prevention of child labor on Christmas Island.

Cocos (Keeling) Islands

NO ASSESSMENT

For the 2020 reporting period, no assessment has been made regarding the Cocos (Keeling) Islands' efforts to advance the elimination of the worst forms of child labor because there is no evidence of a worst forms of child labor problem and the territory has a good legal and enforcement framework on child labor. Nevertheless, in 2020, the Government of Western Australia assented to the Work Health and Safety Act 2020, which will strengthen laws and regulations related to occupational safety and health in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands, including prohibitions on hazardous child labor. In addition, the Government of Australia adopted a new National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and Slavery 2020–2025.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands. (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Cocos (Keeling) Islands are non-self governing and are included as part of the territory of the Australian Commonwealth. (2-4) Under the Acts Interpretation Act 1901 (Cth), all laws of the Commonwealth are applicable to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands as if they were a part of mainland Australia. (3,5) The following conventions, which have been ratified by Australia, have therefore been extended to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Cocos (Keeling) Islands are subject to the laws and regulations related to child labor of the Commonwealth of Australia and the state of Western Australia (Table 2). The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	17.5	Section 190 of the Children and Community Services Act 2004 (WA)(CKI); Section 29 of the School Education Act 1999 (WA) (CKI) (6,7)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Regulations 6.2 and 6.6 and Schedule 6.3 of the Occupational Health and Safety Regulations 1996 (WA) (CKI); Section 10.4 of the Mines Safety and Inspection Regulations 1995 (WA) (CKI); Section 193 of the Children and Community Services Act 2004 (WA) (CKI) (6,8,9)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Regulations 6.2 and 6.6 and Schedule 6.3 of the Occupational Health and Safety Regulations 1996 (WA) (CKI); Classes of Licenses for High Risk Work; Section 10.4 of the Mines Safety and Inspection Regulations 1995 (WA) (CKI) (8-10)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 270.6 and 270.7 of the Criminal Code Act 1995 (Cth); Sections 270.6, 270.7, and 271.9 of the Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013 (Cth) (11,12)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Divisions 270 and 271 of the Criminal Code Act 1995 (Cth) (11)

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17.5	Section 6 of the School Education Act (WA) (CKI) (7)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 98 of the School Education Act (WA) (CKI) (7)

* No conscription (15)

In 2020, the Government of Western Australia assented to the Work Health and Safety Act 2020, which will strengthen laws and regulations related to occupational safety and health in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands, including prohibitions on hazardous child labor. This act will enter into force once the government finalizes implementing regulations, which are being drafted. (16,17)

In the Cocos (Keeling) Islands, the Children and Community Services Act 2004 (WA) (CKI) sets the minimum age for light work in delivery-types of employment at age 10 if the child is accompanied by a parent or an authorized adult. This is not in compliance with international standards, which set the minimum age for light work at age 13. (6) However, the government has noted that there is no delivery service, no post boxes, and no newspaper in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands, although there is a twice-monthly government-produced community newsletter that students deliver on Saturdays. (1) Based on available information, local policies governing the light work involved in distribution of this newsletter are in line with international standards. (1)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the Government of Australia has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Western Australia Department of Communities	Enforces laws related to the minimum age for work through a Service Delivery Arrangement, under which Australian Government services are provided in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands. (1,18)
Western Australia Department of Mines, Industry Regulation and Safety	Enforces laws related to hazardous child labor and occupational safety and health through a Service Delivery Arrangement, under which Australian Government services are provided in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands. (1,18)
Australian Federal Police	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (19) Oversee the Child Protection Operations Team, which coordinates and investigates online and multi-jurisdictional child sexual exploitation issues, including child pornography; and the Human Trafficking Teams, which investigate human trafficking for the purposes of transnational sexual and labor exploitation. (20,21)

Labor Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for labor law enforcement actions to address child labor.

Criminal Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for criminal law enforcement actions to address child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor. However, the Government of Australia has established mechanisms to coordinate government efforts on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Departmental Committee on Human Trafficking (IDC)	Deals with child labor issues, including its worst forms, from a counter-trafficking perspective. Comprises 12 government agencies, including the Australian Federal Police, Department of Employment, and Department of Foreign Affairs, and is chaired by the Australian Border Force. (1,21) Includes an Operational Working Group subcommittee that meets monthly and refers emerging policy issues for IDC consideration. (1) In 2020, IDC met twice in plenary sessions and held sub-group meetings at the operational level approximately every 6 weeks. The Committee's work during the reporting period focused on developing the updated National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and Slavery 2020–2025. (1)

In June 2020, the Inter-Departmental Committee on Human Trafficking provided the Australian Government's first annual report to parliament on implementation of the Modern Slavery Act, which establishes requirements for businesses and organizations to report on efforts to reduce the risk of human trafficking and the worst forms of child labor in their supply chains. In December 2020, the government published its own Modern Slavery Statement that discussed efforts to reduce child labor and human trafficking risks in federal government operations and procurement supply chains. (1,22)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for government policies to address child labor. However, the Government of Australia has established policies related to child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and Slavery 2020–2025†	Sets five strategic priorities for addressing modern slavery, which the National Action Plan defines as trafficking in persons, slavery, slavery-like practices, and the worst forms of child labor. Priorities include: (a) prevention; (b) disruption, investigation, and prosecution; (c) support and protection for victims; (d) partnerships; and (e) research. (1,23)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

However, federal cash transfer programs for youth and families are available to residents of the Cocos (Keeling) Islands. These programs were active in 2020 and may have assisted in preventing child labor in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands during the reporting period. (1)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, there are no actions needed to advance the continued prevention of child labor in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands.

In 2020, Colombia made significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In early 2021, the government issued a decree that granted a 10-year Temporary Protective Status to the 1.7 million Venezuelans living in Colombia, providing them access to formal work, healthcare, and education for children. The Ministry of Labor conducted trainings for new and veteran inspectors and the Colombian Institute for Family Well-Being coordinated the "Pact for Growth and Employment Generation in Agro-Industrial Sugarcane," a public-private roundtable that addresses the protection of child rights, including preventing child labor. The Inter-Agency Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons also completed its evaluation of the 2018 national action plan and launched the new National Strategy for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (2020–2024). Furthermore, the government launched a new program, "Generación Sacúdete," which worked with 28,096 children and adolescents in 898 municipalities across 31 departments to help develop life goals. However, children in Colombia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The government does not employ a sufficient number of labor inspectors. Research also indicates that existing social programs are insufficient to address the scope of the worst forms of child labor in Colombia.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Colombia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) The government publishes annual statistics on children’s work from its National Household Survey, based on research conducted in the fourth quarter of every year. (3-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Colombia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	2.5 (210,431)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	93.7

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of coffee, including the application of pesticides;† production of sugarcane,† cocoa, pome and stone fruits, grapes, and unrefined brown sugar (panela) (4,8-13)
	Animal husbandry,† hunting,† and fishing,† including conch and crab harvesting (4,8,10-14)
Industry	Mining† coal, emeralds, gold, tungsten, coltan, and clay (8,10,11,15)
	Producing bricks and wood charcoal (4,10,15)
	Construction,† particularly of large-scale projects (4)
	Cutting and transporting lumber,† and creating artisanal woodwork such as handicrafts and decorative items (8,11,16,17)
	Processing shrimp and langoustines† (11)
Services	Street work,† including vending and helping shoppers carry bags in urban markets,† begging,† guarding or washing cars and motorcycles,† and selling massages and hair braiding to tourists in beach areas (2,4,8,11,18-26)
	Recycling† and garbage scavenging† (1,8,18,27)
	Domestic work,† including caring for children,† cooking, gardening, and shopping for the home (4,8-11,28)
	Working in retail establishments, hotels, and restaurants (3,4,8,10,11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,11,29-32)
	Use in the production of pornography (4,8,11,12,23,33)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (4,32,34)
	Use in illicit activities by illegal armed groups and criminal organizations to commit homicides, traffic drugs, and forced begging; and in the production of marijuana and coca (stimulant plant), each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,32,34,35)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Reports indicate that the forced recruitment and use of minors in Colombia by illegal armed groups, including Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de Colombia dissidents, the National Liberation Army, and non-ideological criminal organizations such as the Gulf Clan, continued in 2020. (4,11,34) The government reported at least 83 cases of children forcibly recruited into armed groups in 2020, with most cases occurring in rural areas and in the departments of Caquetá, Cauca, Putumayo, Antioquia, and Arauca. Security forces also rescued at least 495 children from armed groups. (4) Children are typically recruited by armed groups to perform intelligence and logistical activities, store and transport weapons, and are exploited in commercial sex. (8,23,32,34)

Commercial sexual exploitation of children occurs more often in private homes rented online than in commercial establishments. (11) Children are particularly vulnerable in areas with foreign tourism, in mining communities, and in areas with large construction projects. (4) Some child victims of commercial sexual exploitation are allegedly recruited in schools by other students and, in some cases, prostitution ring members conduct surveillance around schools in search of girls. (4,11,31) Indigenous women and children and Venezuelans and their children, are particularly vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation, domestic servitude, forced begging, and recruitment by armed groups. (31-33) Young girls suffer commercial sexual exploitation along the highway between Medellín and Bogotá. (11,29) In mining areas, trafficking of children for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation is widespread. (8,11,23,36)

Reports indicate that armed groups and criminal gangs recruit Colombian and Venezuelan children as young as age 12 to produce and traffic drugs and commit homicides and extortion. (4,35,37,38)

Although basic education is free and compulsory for all children up to age 18, in practice children in rural parts of the country face barriers to accessing education due to lack of infrastructure and teachers as well as violence. (4) The COVID-19 pandemic had a significant impact on access to education. Official figures indicate 158,000 students had left the public education system through October due to the pandemic, but civil society organizations suggest the figure is higher. (4,5) Despite these challenges, the government reported that as of October 2020, there were 363,126 Venezuelan children that matriculated in Colombia’s education system, up from 206,138 children in October 2019. (4,5) The Ministry of Labor (MOL) reported unemployment and informal work increased as a result of the pandemic and economic fallout. According to government statistics, unemployment reached a peak of 21.4 percent in May and poverty rose to 42.5 percent in 2020. (4,5) These economic challenges increased the risk of labor trafficking, including forced begging, and commercial sexual exploitation for adults and children in Colombia, including for vulnerable populations such as Venezuelan migrants. (4,5,32)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Colombia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Colombia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the difference in the minimum age for work and the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 35 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence (39)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 117 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence (39)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 3 of Resolution 1796 (40)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Articles 141 and 188A of the Penal Code (41,42)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Articles 188A–188C of the Penal Code (41,42)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 213–219B of the Penal Code (42)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 162, 188D, and 384 of the Penal Code (42)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 81 of Law 1861 (43)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 4 of Law 1861 (43)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 162 of the Penal Code; Article 20 of Law 1098; Article 14 of Law 418 (39,42,44)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Decree 4807 of 2011 (45)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 2.3.1.6.4.1 and 2.3.1.6.4.2 of Decree 1075; Article 1 of Decree 4807; Article 28 of the Child and Adolescent Code (39,45,46)

In March 2021, the Colombian Government issued Decree 216, which granted a 10-year Temporary Protective Status (TPS) to more than 1.7 million Venezuelans living in Colombia. The TPS will allow authorities to identify

Venezuelans with irregular status in a national biometric registry and grant them formal access to work, healthcare, banking, and education for children. (5,47,48)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor's (MOL) Inspection, Monitoring, Control, and Territorial Management Department	Receives complaints of labor law violations and conducts labor inspections, including inspections to verify labor conditions for adolescent workers and compliance with other child labor provisions. Oversees the Internal Working Group on Child Labor Eradication. (11,49) Also operates the Comprehensive Child Labor Information System, a child labor monitoring system that identifies children engaged in or at risk of child labor. (11) Collects fines for labor violations assessed after January 1, 2020, and administers proceeds through a fund designated to strengthen the labor inspectorate. (4,5)
Active Search Team for Trafficking in Persons, Sexual Exploitation of Children, Girls, and Adolescents and Related Crimes (Bogotá)	Uses a proactive investigation model to identify crimes related to human trafficking and the sexual exploitation of children, including girls, in Bogotá instead of waiting for victims to seek attention at the national level. Created in 2018 by the Bogotá Mayor's office. (23,50)
National Police	Investigate cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking and house the Child Protection Police unit. (11) Judicial police and the Technical Investigation Corps support the Attorney General's Office throughout the investigation process. (11)
Attorney General's Office (AGO)	Investigates and prosecutes cases of child recruitment for use in armed conflict and illicit activities, commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, and human trafficking, with support from the Office's Technical Investigation Unit, which also advises the Attorney General in the design of policies and strategies related to the role of judicial police investigators. (8,11,39) Also oversees the Articulation Group for Combating Trafficking in Persons, which includes prosecutors, analysts, and judicial police engaged in combating organized crime and human trafficking. (51)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Colombia took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2019	2020

As a result of the pandemic, MOL issued Resolutions 0784 and 0876 in March and April 2020, respectively, which temporarily suspended certain activities that required physical contact such as field-based inspections and hearings of labor conflicts. (4,5,54,55) The resolutions also suspended the labor inspectorate's review and adjudication of labor complaints, including those for violations not directly related to the pandemic. (4,5) Although these restrictions ended in September, the government did not provide information on the number of worksite inspections, violations identified, or penalties applied outside of this suspension for inclusion in this report. (4) These pandemic-related suspensions affected the labor inspectorate's 2020 budget, which was partially dependent on fine collection. (56)

Nonetheless, MOL used virtual capabilities during the pandemic to carry out 7,624 virtual labor inspections and to conduct trainings for new and veteran inspectors, including training 107 new inspectors on a "Fundamental Rights at Work" course that included several modules on child labor. (4)

Reports indicate that resource allocation for labor law enforcement in rural areas, such as Amazonas and Vichada, is insufficient. (4,57) In some cases, inspectors carry out inspections in a small geographic area due to a lack of transportation to reach areas accessible only by boats or small planes. (1) In addition, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Colombia's workforce, which includes more than 22 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Colombia would employ about 1,645 inspectors. (5,9,58)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Colombia took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for new employees and funding.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020

In 2020, the Attorney General's Office (AGO) reported that out of the criminal cases investigated pertaining to the worst forms of child labor, 11 percent were related to the use of children in illicit activities, 40 percent to the use of children in pornography, and the remaining were related to forced recruitment, commercial sexual exploitation, and human trafficking. Of the 71 individuals charged, 35 percent were charged for the use of children in illicit activities. (4) During the reporting period, 421 criminal investigators were trained on concepts related to the worst forms of child labor, 75 were trained on identifying human trafficking, and another 206 were trained on investigating and prosecuting human trafficking crimes. (4) To better address human trafficking crimes,

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

the AGO led five inter-governmental trainings on trafficking identification for 5,431 government employees and 459 AGO investigators. The Ministry of the Interior (MOI) also conducted mock trials as an educational tool for those involved in prosecuting such crimes. (32)

Although the government took action on crimes related to the commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking of children and collected data on these crimes, the AGO reported that its case management system tracks criminal proceedings through conviction only and does not include information on sentencing. (4,11,60,61) In addition, although the AGO maintains some information on emblematic criminal cases regarding trafficking in persons, including those involving children, it does not maintain or publish comprehensive, annual statistics on convictions and sentencing for cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (4,62)

Civil society has noted a lack of specific budget allocations by government institutions for addressing trafficking in persons. (23)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the inconsistent coordination in human trafficking victim identification.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Agency Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (CIETI)	Coordinates efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor as specified in Article 3(d) of ILO Convention 182. (4) Chaired by MOL, includes 13 government agencies and representatives from trade unions, business associations, and civil society organizations. Oversees department-level CIETIs throughout the country, each comprising municipal-level committees. (9,63) In 2020, 28 department-level CIETIs participated in virtual trainings and workshops on the National Policy Guidelines to Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor. Local CIETIs also worked with the Mobile Teams for Comprehensive Protection (EMPIs) to give technical assistance across 417 municipalities. (4)
National Inter-Agency Committee for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Commercial Sexual Exploitation	Coordinates and implements efforts to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Led by MOL and comprises 15 government agencies. In 2020, the committee carried out various activities under the National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children. (9)
Colombian Institute for Family Well-Being (ICBF)	Operates Mobile Teams for Comprehensive Protection Against Child Labor to coordinate government actions to protect children's rights, including protection from child labor. Supports demobilized child soldiers by strengthening family networks and increasing access to health services, food, education, and shelter. (11,16) Serves as Administrator of the Fund Against Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents. (64) Processes child labor complaints, operates telephone hotlines to report child labor cases, and provides social services to children engaged in or at risk of child labor. (8,11) ICBF is the lead agency among those comprising the National System of Family Well-Being, which promotes inter-agency coordination to protect children's rights, including those related to child labor, and designs, implements, monitors, and evaluates policies related to childhood and adolescence. (5,9,65) During the reporting period, ICBF provided capacity-building assistance to various local CIETIs focusing on child labor prevention and offered trafficking in persons-related trainings to regional officials. ICBF also coordinated the "Pact for Growth and Employment Generation in Agro-Industrial Sugarcane*," a public-private roundtable that addresses the protection of child rights, including preventing child labor. (4)
Inter-Agency Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Leads and coordinates efforts among government agencies to combat human trafficking. Created by Law 985, chaired by the Ministry of the Interior (MOI), and comprises 16 government entities and six permanent invitees, including private sector and international organizations. (1) In 2020, the committee completed its evaluation of the 2018 national action plan on trafficking in persons and launched the new National Strategy for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (2020–2024), which included consultations with stakeholders in civil society, academia, and the international community. The committee also conducted 100 trafficking in persons-related trainings with government officials, including sessions to develop national action plans, and promoted the "Zero Complicity" anti-trafficking in persons campaign. (4)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Sectorial Commission for the Prevention of the Recruitment and Use of Children by Illegal Armed Groups (CIPRUNNA)	Guides, coordinates, and monitors the actions carried out by state entities at both the national and territorial level to prevent violations of children and adolescents' rights, with a fundamental focus on protection from child recruitment by illegal armed groups, including for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation. (4,66) Led by the Presidency's Office for Human Rights and International Affairs, comprises 22 entities, including AGO and MOL as permanent members. (4,11,66-68) In 2020, adopted an action plan to implement the National Policy for the Prevention of Recruitment, Use, and Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents by Illegal Armed Groups or Organized Criminal Groups. The action plan prioritizes 200 municipalities based on level of risk to children of recruitment by armed groups. (4)

‡ The government has other coordinating mechanisms that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (69-72)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

In 2020, MOI's Anti-Trafficking Team achieved a longstanding goal of constructing action plans to combat human trafficking in all 32 departments. The Team also created a specific Caribbean-focused action plan to fight child sex tourism and enacted new human trafficking victim protection and assistance procedures in 13 departments. (32)

Research indicates there is inconsistent coordination in the areas of human trafficking victim identification and assistance, which may hinder anti-trafficking efforts. (23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy Guidelines to Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor and Protect the Adolescent Worker (2017–2027)	Aims to address child labor in the agriculture sector; develop child labor prevention strategies, improve the quality and coverage of child protection services, protect adolescent workers from hazardous work, create strategies to address child labor in domestic work, and establish evaluation and monitoring mechanisms to assess progress. (73) The policy also contains a Roadmap for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Mining and a cooperative agreement between the Ministry of Mining and Energy and ICBF to prevent child labor in mining. (74,75) As part of the implementation of the policy, MOL updated the Comprehensive Child Labor Information System (SIRITI) in 2020 by adding a mechanism through which the public can anonymously report child labor cases. Following its review and updating of SIRITI cases, MOL reported that, as of December, the system registered 13,791 cases of children in or at risk of child labor. (4)
National Policy on Childhood and Adolescence (2018–2022)	Articulates multiple sub-policies on the worst forms of child labor; protection of adolescents, prevention and eradication of commercial sexual exploitation of children, and prevention of the recruitment and use of children by non-state armed groups. (8,76) Focuses on the comprehensive welfare and development of children and adolescents, recognizing them as rights-bearing subjects and integral to national development. (8,76) During the reporting period, ICBF continued implementation of its Strategy for the Prevention of Specific Risks, which includes goals to eliminate and prevent child labor, and released an operating manual for the strategy. (4)
National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (2018–2028)	National policy that guides Colombian Government actions at the national, departmental, and municipal levels for the prevention of commercial sexual exploitation, victim assistance, and the strengthening of sentencing for abusers. (77) As part of this national strategy, the Colombian Government maintains an "Eyes Everywhere" ("Ojos en Todas Partes") public awareness campaign, which aims to prevent child sex tourism. Led by the Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Tourism, and implemented in coordination with ICBF and the National Tourism Fund. (1,8,23) The "Eyes Everywhere" campaign continued throughout the reporting period with the goal of better identifying solicitors and victims of child sex tourism. (4) In commemoration of the International Day Against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children, the government launched its "Protecting Them Begins with Me" campaign, under which it conducted 31 virtual trainings on preventing the exploitation of children. (4,78)
National Strategy for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (2020–2024)†	Aims to prevent human trafficking by focusing on providing immediate assistance to victims, promoting effective inter-agency coordination, international cooperation, and research and knowledge management. (79) Established by Decree 1818 in 2020 and led by the Inter-Agency Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons. (4) The new strategy also prioritizes migration and border-related risks, including armed conflict, violence, and sex trafficking, and emphasizes prevention among migrant populations. (4)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Policy	Description
National Policy for the Prevention of Recruitment, Use, and Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents by Illegal Armed Groups or Organized Criminal Groups (2018–2028)	Directs actions to prevent the recruitment and use of children by armed groups. Aims to address violence against children, including the worst forms of child labor, and improve inter-agency coordination. (80) The government also has a Roadmap for the Restoration of Rights, Assistance, and Reparation for Children and Adolescent Victims of the Armed Conflict that establishes protocols to assist child victims of armed conflict and is implemented through inter-institutional mechanisms in various departments. (10,81) In 2020, the Presidency's Office for Human Rights and International Affairs reported that CIPRUNNA adopted an action plan to implement the National Policy for the Prevention of Recruitment, Use, and Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents by Illegal Armed Groups or Organized Criminal Groups. The action plan prioritizes 200 municipalities based on level of risk to children of recruitment by armed groups. (4)

† The policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (8,82)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Campaigns Against Child Labor†	ICBF-led campaigns to increase coordination among ICBF, Child Protection Police, MOL, and municipal authorities on child labor issues, and to promote education about the risks of hazardous work. (83) In 2020, continued to use 44 mobile teams to conduct numerous child labor prevention efforts, including "active searches" for children engaged in child labor. Accompanied by Child Protection Police and other local officials, the mobile teams conducted searches in 84 municipalities, in which a total of 2,304 children were found engaged in child labor. (4) ICBF also launched a new program, "Generación Sacúdete," which worked with 28,096 children and adolescents in 898 municipalities across 31 departments to help them develop life skills. (4) In addition, ICBF implemented the new "My Hands Teach You" ( Mis Manos Te Enseñan ) program in response to the pandemic lockdown, supporting 1.7 million vulnerable children with education and nutritional assistance at home. (4,84)
Programs Addressing Trafficking in Persons†	Eye on Trafficking aims to increase awareness of human trafficking among high school students, and School Environments in Coexistence and Peace focuses on identifying potential human trafficking victims. (9) The Ministry of Foreign Affairs' campaign, "Do Not Ignore Trafficking" ( #AnteLaTrataNoSeHaga ), is directed at border populations with limited access to digital platforms. (85) The "#EsoEsCuento" ("Don't be Fooled") campaign to prevent human trafficking continued in 2020, through 227 outreach events reaching 31 regions of the country. (4)
Model for Identification of Child Labor Risks	Pilot project led by ILO's Regional Initiative: Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor. Aims to design a system that classifies territories according to their probability of risk for child labor and identifies the principal factors associated with this risk based on existing databases in participating countries. (86) Nearly every country in Latin America participates in the initiative. (87) This program continued during the reporting period. (88)
Development for Social Prosperity Programs†	More Families in Action ( Más Familias en Acción ) uses a conditional cash transfer program to combat poverty and build human capital; United Network ( Red Unidos ) coordinates actions to reduce inequality and end extreme poverty; Healthy Generations ( Generaciones con Bienestar ) operates a children's rights program offering cultural and recreational activities for children ages 6 to 17 identified as vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor; and Youth in Action ( Jóvenes en Acción ) provides technical job training and conditional cash transfers to vulnerable urban youth ages 16 to 24. (89-91) The programs continued throughout the reporting period. (4,56)

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	We Are a Treasure (Somos Tesoro) , a $11.25 million, 7 year project to combat child labor and promote safe work in the mining sector, implemented by PACT, Inc., in partnership with the Alliance for Responsible Mining, Mi Sangre Foundation, and the Fund for Environmental Action and Childhood; Somos Tesoro ended in 2020, and celebrated 7 years of work on formalizing mining, reducing economic vulnerability, providing educational opportunities, and strengthening legislation and policies on mining. (92,93) Other projects include Preventing and Reducing Child Labor and Forced Labor in Palm Oil Supply Chains (Palma Futuro) , a $6 million project implemented by Partners of the Americas that works to improve the implementation of social compliance systems that promote acceptable conditions of work and the prevention and reduction of child and forced labor in palm oil supply chains; Colombia Avanza , a $2 million Partners of the Americas project that focuses on building the capacity of civil society to more adequately combat child labor and other abuses in Colombia's coffee sector; Cooperation on Fair, Free and Equitable Employment (COFFEE) , a $2 million project implemented by Verite to help businesses establish systems to prevent, detect, and eliminate child labor and other forms of exploitation from their supply chains; Building the Capacity of Civil Society to Combat Child Labor and Improve Working Conditions in Colombia (Pitares) , a $2 million project implemented by PACT that strengthens the capacity of civil society organizations to detect and address child labor and working conditions in gold mining; Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAPI6) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor , a $2 million project implemented by the ILO that improves knowledge on these issues through data-driven techniques, strengthens policies and improves government capacity, and strengthens partnerships to accelerate progress. Continues to work with MOL on the Electronic Case Management System, virtual training campus for labor inspectors, and supporting strategic compliance planning, and strengthening fine collection; and Equal Access to Quality Jobs for Women and Girls in Agriculture (EQUAL) , a $5 million project in support of the Women's Global and Prosperity Initiative implemented by PACT. (94-100) The project is aimed at reducing the risk of child labor, forced labor, and other violations of labor rights by empowering vulnerable women and girls working in the production of unrefined brown sugar (panela) and the cut flowers sector and promoting better understanding of labor rights. (100) Additional information is available on the USDOL website .

† Program is funded by the Government of Colombia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (8,10,101,102)

Despite these efforts, research indicates that existing social programs are insufficient to address the scope of the worst forms of child labor problem in Colombia. (4,11)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Colombia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work to the age at which education is compulsory.	2018 – 2020
Enforcement	Ensure that all labor inspectors have sufficient resources, especially in rural areas, to perform inspections.	2009 – 2020
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2020
	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the number of inspections conducted, child labor violations found, penalties imposed and collected for child labor violations, and whether routine inspections were conducted.	2009 – 2020
	Publish information on whether new criminal investigators receive initial training.	2018 – 2020
	Collect and publish data on penalties and sentencing for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor.	2018 – 2020
Coordination	Ensure that government efforts on human trafficking victim identification and assistance are adequately coordinated among agencies.	2018 – 2020
Social Programs	Expand efforts to improve access to education for all children, including by improving transportation infrastructure, building more schools in rural areas, and by increasing the number of teachers.	2013 – 2020
	Expand social programs to sufficiently address the scope of the worst forms of child labor.	2020

In 2020, Comoros made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government passed a new penal code that criminalizes child trafficking, forced labor, and hazardous child labor. It also raised its compulsory education age to 16, in line with international standards. In addition, Comoros reactivated its anti-trafficking task force and developed a new anti-trafficking action plan. However, children in Comoros are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in agriculture. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work. Limited resources for the enforcement of child labor laws may impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor. Furthermore, labor and criminal investigators lack the resources and funds necessary to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor, and Comoros lacks a national action plan to combat child labor. Finally, social programs to combat child labor may be insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Comoros are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in agriculture. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Comoros.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	23.0 (42,145)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	81.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	20.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		76.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2012. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of manioc,† beans,† vanilla,† cloves,† and ylang-ylang† (3,6,7)
	Animal husbandry† (1,3,7)
	Fishing† (1,3,7)
Industry	Construction,† including in carpentry† (1,3,7)
	Extracting and selling marine sand (3,6)
Services	Domestic work† (1,7,8)
	Street vending (1,9)
	Repairing cars† and bicycles,† including tire vulcanization,† and battery charging† (1,6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in domestic work, construction, street vending, baking, fishing, and agriculture (2,6,7,10)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Comoros

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Data detailing the prevalence of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor in Comoros are not available; however, anecdotal reports suggest that some children are subjected to domestic servitude and forced labor in the agricultural and fishing sectors. (3,10) Children from poor or rural families are at higher risk of being placed into forced labor. (3,11) Some parents who are unable to care for their children send them to wealthier families, who are expected to provide food, shelter, and schooling for the children in exchange for housework. In practice, some may become domestic workers and victims of labor exploitation and abuse. (3,7,11,12) In Comoros, it is a traditional practice to send children to Koranic teachers to receive an education. Some Koranic teachers, however, may force their students to work rather than attend school, or to earn funds to pay school fees; girls usually perform domestic work, and boys perform agricultural labor. (3,11-13) In nearby Mayotte, which is administered by France, reports indicate that there are more than 3,000 unaccompanied children from Comoros, some of whom are exploited in the worst forms of child labor or may be vulnerable to trafficking. (2,11,14) There are reports that drug traffickers use teenagers to transport drugs on boats to Mayotte. (7)

Children in Comoros often work on family farms or family fishing boats, performing agricultural tasks with sharp tools, carrying heavy loads of products, and climbing tall heights to harvest fruit. In construction, children work without basic safety or protective equipment. (7)

In 2020, Comoros revised its education law, raising the compulsory age of education up from 12 years of age previously. (3,15) The law establishes compulsory education between ages 3 and 16. (16) However, no law establishes free basic education. (3,17,15) Although approximately equal numbers of boys and girls attended public primary schools, fewer girls completed primary education. Due to a lack of facilities to accommodate female menstrual cycles, girls often miss school or leave altogether. (3,13,18) Furthermore, poor school infrastructure, the limited availability of teachers, and physical and sexual violence in schools may impede access to education and increase the vulnerability of children to the worst forms of child labor. (3,7,8,19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

On January 25, 2020, the President of Comoros issued Decree No. 20-024-PR, which allowed Comoros to begin the ratification process with the UN on the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons. (7,11) Comoros officially acceded to the Protocol in June of 2020. (3,20) Comoros has thus ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Comoros's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of minimum age protections for all children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 129 of the Labor Code (21)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 131(d) of the Labor Code; Article 7 of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (21,22)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		List of Dangerous Occupations; Article 131(d) of the Labor Code; Article 7 of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (21-23)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2.1 and 131 of the Labor Code; Article 13 of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (21,22)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Article 131 of the Labor Code; Articles 13 and 14 of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (21,22)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 131 of the Labor Code; Articles 8–11 and 13 of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking; Articles 322 and 323 of the Penal Code (21,22,25)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 131(c) of the Labor Code; Article 6(c) of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (21,22)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Articles 41, 52, and 58 of Law No. 97-06/AF (26)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 6(a) of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (22)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 2 of the Outline Act on the Education System; Article 4 on the Decree on Education Policy (17,16)
Free Public Education	No		Article 1 of the Outline Act on the Education System; Preamble of the Constitution (17,27)

* No conscription (28)

In 2020, Comoros's National Assembly passed a new penal code that criminalizes child trafficking, forced child labor, child labor in hazardous occupations, and other instances of the worst forms of child labor. Under the law, convicted child traffickers are subject to a 10 to 20 year prison sentence and fines up to $75,000. (10,24) However, Comoros's Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking defines child trafficking as requiring the use of force, fraud, or coercion. (2,22) While the Labor Code does not stipulate this requirement, it also does not exclude the means of force, fraud, or coercion for child trafficking victims. (13,21,22) The new Penal Code also does not exclude the means of force, fraud, or coercion for child trafficking victims. (24) Thus, Comoros's child trafficking laws do not meet international standards.

The Labor Code allows children under age 15 to perform light work in domestic work or agriculture if it does not interfere with their education or physical or moral development. The Labor Code, however, does not set 13 as the minimum age for light work, specify the conditions under which light work may be conducted, or limit the number of hours for light work, as defined by international standards on child labor. (13,17,21) In addition, the Labor Code applies only to workers who perform work under a formal employment agreement, which does not conform to international standards requiring that all children be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (13,21)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws, investigates allegations of child labor, and refers cases of the worst forms of child labor for criminal investigation. (3,13)
Police Morals and Minors Brigade	Investigates allegations of child abuse, including child trafficking, and refers cases for prosecution. (1,29,30) Operates nationwide, covering the islands of Grande Comore, Anjouan, and Mohéli. Collaborates with Services d'Écoute (Listening Services). (6,31)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes criminal cases, including those related to child trafficking. Has specialized courts for minors, with judges responsible for the prosecution of cases involving forced labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. (1,3,28)
National Commission for Human Rights and Freedoms	Receives complaints about the worst forms of child labor, investigates violations, and refers cases to the Ministry of Justice for prosecution. (9,32)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Comoros took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial and human resource allocation.

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (7)	No (3)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (7)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (3)

During the reporting period, the labor inspectorate significantly increased its number of inspections compared to the previous year, with inspectors conducting on-site visits to verify compliance with COVID-19 pandemic regulations. However, none of the inspections were child-labor specific. (3)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Comoros's workforce, which includes approximately 278,500 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Comoros would employ about 7 inspectors. (33,34) Reports indicate that there is a lack of training, equipment, transportation, and funding available to conduct child labor inspections and legal proceedings. (2,3,31,34,35) Inspectors have indicated that although there is a budget for fixed costs such as salaries, there is no operating budget for the labor inspectorate, and labor inspectors have to rely on their own funds for costs such as transportation. (2,3,7)

Although the labor inspectorate is permitted to conduct unannounced inspections, in practice, inspectors usually only respond when MOL receives complaints, and they conduct inspections only in the formal sector, even though most child labor is concentrated in the informal sector. The labor inspectorate is required to submit a yearly report detailing its work, including statistics on inspections, offenses identified, and penalties imposed; however, no report of this type was identified during the reporting period. (3) Finally, although a reciprocal referral mechanism was established under the National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Comoros 2010–2015, it does not appear that this mechanism is currently active. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Comoros took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Police Morals and Minors Brigade that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating financial and human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (7)	No (3)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (7)	N/A (3)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (7)	Yes (10)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (7)	Unknown (3)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (7)	Unknown (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (7)	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (7)	Unknown (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (7)	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (3)

During the reporting period, the National Commission for Human Rights and Liberty partnered with UNICEF to conduct training for 60 members of the National Police and Gendarmerie on trafficking in persons concepts. Similarly, the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Task Force worked with UNODC to conduct a series of virtual trainings related to the UN Convention Against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, especially women and children. (3,36)

Reports indicate that a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding inhibit criminal law enforcement efforts on the worst forms of child labor. (2,3,30)

The government did not provide comprehensive data on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee Against Child Labor	Coordinates government efforts on child labor. Chaired by MOL. (1,8) Research could not determine whether the National Committee Against Child Labor was active or received funding during the reporting period.
Inter-Agency Anti-Trafficking Task Force*	Reconstituted in late December of 2019 under the direction of the Foreign Ministry. Comprises multiple government agencies, the Services d'Écoute , NGOs, and international organizations. Leads government efforts in anti-trafficking policies. (3) During the reporting period, the Task Force adopted a short-term national action plan to combat trafficking in persons in 2020. (3,36)
National Commission for Solidarity, Social Protection, and the Promotion of Gender	Coordinates new government efforts to strengthen partnerships with state and non-state actors engaged in child protection issues. (7) Research could not determine whether the Commission was active or received funding during the reporting period.

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy for the Protection of Children (2016–2021)	Aims to improve child protection in Comoros; includes components to combat the worst forms of child labor, with a focus on child trafficking. Led by the Ministry of Health, Solidarity, Social Cohesion, and Gender Promotion. (1,8,29,37) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Policy for the Protection of Children during the reporting period.
Anti-Human Trafficking Action Plan†	Drafted in 2020, outlines nine strategic priorities and identifies the roles various government ministries play within those priorities. Managed by the Inter-Agency Anti-Trafficking Task Force, includes goals such as improving resources for law enforcement personnel responsible for responding to child trafficking cases, and working with international stakeholders to combat the trafficking of children from Comoros to Mayotte. (3,38)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Although child labor is integrated into some government policies, Comoros has not adopted a new national action plan to address child labor. (7)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Listening Services ( Services d'Écoute )†	Government program that provides protective services and offers immediate assistance to vulnerable and abused children. Comprises four government-operated units on the islands of Anjouan, Grande Comore, and Mohéli. (31,44-46) Investigates allegations of violence against children, including the worst forms of child labor, and refers perpetrators to criminal authorities for prosecution. (7,31,47) During the reporting period, the program reported it had provided services to 189 children and women across all three islands, including counseling, legal guidance, medical support, and protection. (3)
UNICEF Country Program (2015–2021)	$20,885 UNICEF-funded program that supports the government's efforts to strengthen children's rights to survival, development, education, protection, and social inclusion. (47,39) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Comoros.

An independent evaluation of Services d'Écoute found that it responded to the needs of child victims of violence and improved the professionalism of those responding to child victims. However, program personnel lack relevant training in social services provision and in international standards on child protection, which has resulted in incomplete casework and a lack of follow up with, or evaluations of, child victims. (46,48)

Although the government has programs that target child labor, their scope is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in agriculture and domestic work. (28-30,49)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Comoros (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law's light work provisions set 13 as the minimum age, prescribe the number of hours per week that light work may be undertaken, and specify the conditions under which light work may be conducted, as defined by international standards on child labor.	2012 – 2020
	Establish by law the right to free basic education.	2020
	Ensure that the law's minimum age for work provisions and protections apply to children in unpaid or non-contractual work.	2015 – 2020
	Align child sex trafficking laws with international standards by ensuring that force, fraud, or coercion are not required elements in child trafficking cases.	2019 – 2020
Enforcement	Provide the labor inspectorate with an operating budget for resources, training, transportation, and equipment to provide adequate coverage of the workforce.	2009 – 2020
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2018 – 2020
	Ensure that inspectors carry out inspections in the informal sector.	2020
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate uses its authority to conduct unannounced inspections rather than relying solely on complaints received to initiate inspections.	2017 – 2020
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate fulfills its mandate to collect and publish data and statistics related to inspection efforts.	2019 – 2020
	Establish and use a functioning reciprocal mechanism between labor enforcement authorities and social services.	2019 – 2020
	Publish information on the number of criminal law investigations, violations found, penalties assessed, prosecutions initiated, and convictions related to cases of the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2020
	Increase the number of trained criminal law enforcement personnel and trainings, as well as the allocation of resources, transportation, and equipment, to enhance criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that there are sufficient funds and resources to investigate crimes related to the worst forms of child labor.	2018 – 2020
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating mechanisms are active and receive adequate funding to fulfill their missions.	2014 – 2020
Government Policies	Ensure that relevant policies are implemented, address child labor-related mandates, and report on yearly activities.	2019 – 2020
	Adopt a new National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor and develop other relevant policies to combat the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2020
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers to education, including for girls and poor children, by increasing school capacity, infrastructure, and teacher availability, and by addressing school violence.	2014 – 2020
	Collect and publish data on the prevalence of child labor and the types of work children perform in Comoros.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that social program personnel, such as those in the Services d'Écoute , have adequate and relevant training to be able to appropriately respond to the needs of child victims, including those abused by religious leaders.	2019 – 2020
	Implement and expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, particularly in agriculture and domestic work.	2009 – 2020

Congo, Democratic Republic of the

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2020, the Democratic Republic of the Congo made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The national anti-trafficking coordinating body successfully prosecuted several cases of forced child labor, human trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation. The Ministry of Defense also issued a zero-tolerance policy for child recruitment, and the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo identified and began prosecuting an army officer responsible for operating a child trafficking ring. Moreover, the government's universal primary education decree continued to reduce the number of children vulnerable to labor exploitation and the government task force on the Africa Growth and Opportunity Act, in conjunction with the Ministry of Employment, Labor, and Social Welfare, published a manual to address child labor in the Democratic Republic of the Congo's agricultural sector. However, children in the Democratic Republic of the Congo are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in the forced mining of gold, tin ore (cassiterite), tantalum ore (coltan), and tungsten ore (wolframite), and are used in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of forcible recruitment or abduction by non-state armed groups. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, it did not publish labor or criminal law enforcement data. The government also failed to take active measures to ensure that children are not inappropriately incarcerated, penalized, or physically harmed solely for unlawful acts as a direct result of being a victim of the worst forms of child labor. Other gaps remain, including a lack of trained enforcement personnel, limited financial resources, and poor coordination of government efforts to combat child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in the forced mining of gold, tin ore (cassiterite), tantalum ore (coltan), and tungsten ore (wolframite), and are used in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of forcible recruitment or abduction by non-state armed groups. (1-7) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in the DRC. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	17.4 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	68.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	16.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		69.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2015, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (8)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2017–2018. (9)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including tilling fields, planting seeds, watering crops, carrying heavy loads,† weeding, harvesting crops, and use of chemical products and machetes in the production of beans, corn, manioc, rice, and sweet potatoes (10-14)
	Fishing, including maintaining fishing tools, baiting hooks, transporting heavy loads, using explosives, and salting, smoking, and packaging fish (10,12-14)
	Herding and raising livestock such as chickens, goats, and pigs, including feeding, cleaning cages or stalls, and disposing of waste (13,15)
	Hunting (10,15)
Industry	Mining,† including carrying heavy loads,† digging, sifting, sorting, transporting, using explosives, washing, and working underground† in the production of diamonds, copper, cobalt ore (heterogenite), gold, tin ore (cassiterite), tantalum ore (coltan), and tungsten ore (wolframite) (1,4,5,10-14,16-19)
	Working as auto mechanics, in carpentry, and in craft workshops (10)
	Working on construction sites and building roads (10)
Services	Domestic work (10-14)
	Driving motorcycle taxis (12)
	Street work, including vending, garbage scavenging, and carrying heavy loads (10,12-14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced mining of gold, tantalum (coltan), tin (cassiterite), and tungsten (wolframite), each sometimes as a result of debt bondage (3-5,13,14,20)
	Forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4,10,18,21-24)
	Use in illicit activities for non-state armed groups, including carrying stolen goods, and smuggling minerals (20,21,25,26)
	Forced recruitment or abduction of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict, including as checkpoint monitors, combatants, concubines, domestic workers, field hands, human shields, looters, porters, spies, and tax collectors at mining sites (14,20,27)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in the DRC's eastern provinces were particularly vulnerable to recruitment by non-state armed groups, forced labor in artisanal mining, and forced prostitution. (28-30) UNICEF and other international organizations estimate that between 40 and 70 percent of non-state armed groups in central DRC include children, some as young as age 5. (26,31) By the end of the reporting period, the government and international partners had secured commitments from 35 armed groups to end the recruitment and use of children and other grave violations. (27,32) However, some of the 150 non-state armed groups, criminal gangs, and illicit smuggling networks operating in the DRC continued to abduct, recruit, or use children in armed conflict during the reporting period. (3,27,33) Major non-state armed groups included Nyatura, Mai-Mai Mazembe, the Allied Democratic Forces (ADF), Nduma Défense du Congo-Rénové-Guidon (NDC-R Guidon), Kamuina Nsapu, Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda-Forces combattantes abacunguzi (FDLR), Raia Mutomboki, Conseil national pour la renaissance et la démocratie, Alliance des patriotes pour un Congo libre et souverain, Union des révolutionnaires pour la défense du peuple Congolais (URDPC/CODECO) and the Armée de libération du Congo (ALC/CODECO). (27,28,34) Armed groups that surrendered to the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (FARDC) submitted to Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration (DDR) programs that separated children from their ranks. A DDR ordinance is imminent but did not pass during the reporting period. (35) In the absence of a coherent national DDR strategy, some factions continued to recruit children. (14,36)

Armed groups subjected children to forced labor in artisanal mines in Ituri, North Kivu, South Kivu, and Maniema, where forced labor, conflict, and mining are often intertwined. (14,37,38) Non-state armed groups in Ituri reportedly seized young children from their homes, forcing them to transport heavy loads or perform domestic work. (13) In eastern Congo's conflict-affected regions, children extract and transport tin (cassiterite), tantalum (coltan), tungsten (wolframite), diamonds, and gold. Thousands of children also work in cobalt and copper mines in the DRC's southern Copperbelt region. (39-41) Prevalence is highest in the country's artisanal and small-scale mining (ASM) sector, which operates with minimal oversight. Child labor has been detected at one in four ASM sites in the DRC, with informal or illegal ASM operations leaving children uniquely exposed to hazardous working conditions and, in some instances, to forced labor. (29,40,42) As many as 35,000 of the DRC's 255,000 artisanal cobalt miners are children. (43)

During the reporting period, international border closures caused by the COVID-19 pandemic led to an uptick in cross-border smuggling of untagged gold, tantalum, and tin from North and South Kivu into Rwanda and Burundi. (28) Lockdowns also prevented mining authorities from accessing artisanal gold-mining sites. (28) Criminal trafficking networks targeted girls in Kinshasa, some of whom were forcibly trafficked into commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic labor in Lebanon. Children in the Kasai region were also trafficked into forced begging schemes that brought them to Kinshasa. (14,37,44) Despite strong evidence that children are subjected to participation in armed conflict, commercial sexual exploitation, and forced labor in mining, the prevalence and nature of child labor in other sectors remains unclear because a comprehensive, stand-alone child labor survey has never been conducted in the DRC. (14)

Tens of thousands of civilians have been displaced in eastern Congo's Ituri Province because of conflict, making thousands of children vulnerable to sex trafficking, forced labor, or commercial sexual exploitation. In Tanganyika and Ituri, flooding and interethnic conflict destroyed 700 schools, leaving 500,000 children out of school. In addition, non-state armed groups attacked more than 60 schools in the DRC between January and October 2020, while the FARDC targeted one school. Attacks against schools in 2020 left 45,000 children without access to the classroom. (27,37,45)

UNICEF estimates that only 25 percent of children under age 5 have birth certificates. (46) Low rates of birth registration leave many children vulnerable to child labor because it makes age verification difficult during FARDC recruitment campaigns and hinders efforts to identify and separate children associated with armed groups. (4,47) While Congolese law provides for free, compulsory education, only slightly more than half of the DRC's 51,574 public schools were financed by the state. At public schools that did not receive government funding, parents were asked to pay school fees, which were often prohibitively high, to support teacher salaries. (48,49) In 2019, President Felix Tshisekedi implemented a free primary education initiative to expand funding for public schools, and in 2020, new teachers were hired and plans approved for school construction. (13,50-52) Nevertheless, significant obstacles remain. Nationwide school closures to contain the pandemic led to an increase in working children, particularly in mines. (52,53) Non-state armed groups attacked 52 schools between January and July 2020, while the FARDC targeted one school. (27,36,45,54)

Schools remained overcrowded, understaffed, and geographically dispersed, requiring students to travel long distances. Many have been structurally damaged by conflicts or used as shelters for IDPs. (1,2,24,26,47,55)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The DRC has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the DRC's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including its compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 6 of the Labor Code; Article 50 of the Child Protection Code (56-58)

In 2019, the Agency for Prevention and the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (APLTP) drafted and submitted to the National Assembly an aggressive national anti-trafficking law. However, due to the pandemic, the law's scheduled adoption in the 2020 legislative session was postponed. (14,50) The DRC also expanded oversight of, and control over, its artisanal mining sector in which child labor is prevalent, including in copper- and cobalt-rich areas. (50,69)

Children in the DRC are required to attend school only up to age 12. This standard means children ages 12 through 15 are vulnerable to child labor as they are not required to attend school, but are also not legally permitted to work. (57,63,66) Moreover, some implementing decrees for the Child Protection Code have not been adopted. (57,70) Without these decrees, multiple provisions, including the provision on light work, cannot be enforced.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Labor, and Social Welfare (MOL)	Investigates cases related to child labor, including its worst forms. (72) Refers cases of child labor to the Ministry of Justice (MOJ) for prosecution. (12)
Ministry of Mines	Includes the Service for Assistance and Supervision of Artisanal and Small-Scale Mining, the government agency responsible for artisanal and small-scale mining (ASM) regulation and training, and the Division of Mines, which oversees mining-related departments and public services, including large-scale mining, at the provincial level. (73-75)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Enforces criminal laws related to child labor. (12) Oversees five juvenile courts in Kinshasa and 19 UNICEF-funded child protection courts throughout the country. (13) Assists the International Criminal Court in conducting investigations and prosecuting individuals charged with using children in armed conflict. (12,33,47)
Ministry of the Interior (MOI)	Investigates allegations of human trafficking rings, refers child labor cases to the MOJ for prosecution, and coordinates support and reintegration services with the Ministry of Social Affairs, Solidarity, and Humanitarian Action. (12,33) Includes the Special Police Unit for Women and Children, which combats conflict-related sexual and gender-based violence against women and children, protects children and women who are victims of physical abuse, and ensures the demobilization of children. (12,13) The Congolese National Police (PNC) Child Protection and Sexual Violence Directorate has a formal mechanism in place with local NGOs to screen for possible human trafficking victims among vulnerable groups. (44) The Mining and Hydrocarbon Police are charged with enforcing the mining code, including prohibitions against child labor, at artisanal and large scale mining sites. (75,76)
Office of the President's Personal Representative on Sexual Violence and Child Recruitment	Supports and coordinates the efforts of government officials and international bodies to combat sexual violence and the use of children in armed conflict. (72,77) Compiles data on prosecutions in military and civil courts involving sexual violence against girls and maintains a hotline for reporting cases. (33)
Ministry of Defense (MOD)	Investigates and prosecutes in military courts military officials suspected of recruiting and using child soldiers, and leads the implementation of the Action Plan to End the Recruitment and Use of Child Soldiers. Through its Department of Child Protection, coordinates actions with UNICEF. (12) Through its Children Associated with Armed Forces and Armed Groups Unit, coordinates demobilization, disarmament, and reintegration activities. (33,78)
Ministry of Gender and Family (MOGF)	Oversees and investigates cases related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (12)

The Ministry of Social Affairs, Solidarity, and Humanitarian Affairs monitors humanitarian programs and coordinates with key actors to promote social services to vulnerable groups, including street children, human trafficking victims, and child soldiers. (15) In April, as part of pandemic-related protection measures, Ministry of the Interior (MOI) officials held a training for Kinshasa police officers emphasizing collateral consequences of mandated quarantines, including acts that can be considered forms of trafficking in persons, such as sexual exploitation and the trafficking of children. (37)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in the DRC took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment, Labor, and Social Welfare (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial resource allocation.

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of the DRC's workforce, which includes over 31 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, the DRC would employ about 784 labor inspectors. (79,80) Moreover, as the government did not directly fund the Central Labor Inspectorate in 2020, MOL relied on provincial labor inspectorates, the mining police, industrial mining companies, and NGOs to conduct inspections and defray the costs. (14) Regional labor inspectorates rely on fees collected from violators to sustain their operations. (14) Despite these challenges, provincial authorities conducted inspections in the formal mining sector in the Katanga region, including in Haut Katanga, Tanganyika, and Lualaba, where child labor is known to occur. (14) Approximately 80 percent of the DRC's labor force is engaged in the informal sector, including subsistence agriculture, which is also the DRC's largest rural employer. (81,82) To support labor inspections in the agricultural sector, the government task force on the Africa Growth and Opportunity Act, in conjunction with MOL, published a roadmap to address child labor in the DRC's agricultural sector. The government also made a commitment to survey child labor prevalence in the rice sector in Kongo-Central Province in 2021. (14,83)

Labor inspectors did not receive child labor law enforcement training in 2020. (14) Mines are inspected by mining and hydrocarbon police, NGOs, industrial mining companies, armed forces, and two specialized divisions within the Minister of Mines. Conflict mineral sites subject to international due diligence requirements are validated as child labor- and conflict-free by local monitoring committees, or CLS. (84) The CLS include territorial administrators, state mining services, state security forces, traditional authorities, and mining operators. (84) With support from the U.S. Department of State, IOM trained 250 mining police in North and South Kivu on inspection and validation techniques. Topics included child labor detection, hazards assessment, and additional compliance measures. (14) Under a USAID program aimed at boosting gender equity in artisanal mining, 20 female mine inspectors were also trained and inducted in South Kivu. Trainers used specific modules designed from the Voluntary Principles for the Security of Human Rights, with a specific focus on child protection in mining areas. (14) In addition, the Congolese National Police (PNC) worked with NGOs to protect children in artisanal gold mining sites in North and South Kivu. At the Omape artisanal mining site near Walikale, PNC, in collaboration with the NGO Caritas, conducted night patrols to check for the presence of children working in the mines at night. (14,37) In 2020, the NGO PACT identified and extricated 18 children working in artisanal mines in the east. (14,37) Separately, the APLTP discovered 100 children working in an artisanal gold mine in South Kivu, and they were also removed. The provincial labor inspectorate in South Kivu was actively investigating the case at the close of the reporting period. (14)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in the DRC took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In August 2020, the National Commissioner of the Congolese National Police adopted a set of regulations, approved through inter-ministerial consensus, that defines for the first time the function and duties of the Mining Police, including the protection and enforcement of human rights in mining areas. In specific cases of human rights abuses, including the worst forms of child labor, the guidelines instruct the mining police to arrest suspects, preserve evidence, and exercise the authorities of the child protection unit in cases in which the specialized services are absent. (14)

Unlike previous years, in 2020, military courts identified and began prosecuting multiple army officers for cases of child trafficking, child soldier recruitment, and sexual slavery. In June 2020, two FARDC soldiers from the 2105th regiment, accused of kidnapping underage girls for sexual enslavement, stood trial before a military tribunal in Kasai. (14,44) The military prosecutor's office in Tshikapa also uncovered a child trafficking ring run by a FARDC captain and a civilian woman. The captain was arrested and was awaiting trial at the end of the reporting period. (14,44) Military prosecutors planned to request a sentence of 5 years for both the FARDC officer and the civilian. (14,44) In September, military prosecutors in Goma also opened a case against ex-warlord and prolific child soldier recruiter Bahati Kibira Kapasi, leader of the armed group Union of Patriots for the Defense of Congo. The following month, the government secured a landmark conviction against Ntabo Ntaberi Sheka, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for war crimes, including child soldier recruitment. (14,37,86) Sheka, who commanded the Nduma Défense du Congo (NDC) until 2015, created a command-and-control structure based on child soldier recruitment. Jean-Claude "Kamutoto" Lukambo, a co-defendant and former child soldier who rose to command the NDC's child soldier recruitment and training division, was sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment. (14,37,86) The conviction also identified recently ousted NDC-R head Congolese "General" Shimiray Mwiswa Guidon, who split from Sheka's NDC in 2015, as complicit in Sheka's crimes; however, Guidon remains at large. Prosecutors also indicted members of the Bana Mura for child sexual enslavement in the Kasai region. (14,37,86,87)

In January 2020, police in Lubumbashi arrested 3 men accused of running a child trafficking ring; 22 child victims were freed during the arrest. (50) Research was unable to verify if the men were prosecuted or to confirm the case's disposition by the end of the reporting period. (14,44) The APLTP also investigated cases of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and child abuse, and initiated 13 prosecutions for trafficking in persons and commercial sexual exploitation during the reporting period. These included three cases of child recruitment, one case of forced child labor, and seven cases of commercial sexual exploitation. (14,37) In addition, DRC and Republic of the Congo authorities disrupted a cross-border child trafficking ring, and MOI officials opened an investigation into a child trafficking network between the DRC and Zambia. (14,37) Research indicates that 58,305 children, including victims of criminal labor exploitation, were processed through the DRC's 21 Children's

Tribunals in 2020. However, the closure of civilian criminal courts in March, following national lockdowns due to COVID-19, resulted in an overall reduction in the volume of criminal hearings. (14,44) Similarly, police and prosecutorial investigations declined significantly. Lockdowns prevented actors from conducting necessary field travel, greatly reducing the number of victims identified. (44) Moreover, poor coordination in conducting investigations, collecting data, and providing services to victims continued to hinder the government's ability to adequately combat the worst forms of child labor. (3,33) Research indicates that both the military and civilian justice systems lack the capacity and resources to investigate and prosecute child labor violations. (4,22,72)

In 2020, the FARDC made progress compared with prior years in preventing child recruitment within state security forces following an August decree by the Minister of Defense reiterating zero tolerance for child recruitment. (14) There were three cases of the FARDC using children in non-combat capacities in 2020, all of whom, according to the UN Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo's (MONUSCO) Child Protection Services, were demobilized. (14) The FARDC also separated 2,101 children from armed groups during the reporting period and referred them to UNICEF-run transition centers, which provided them with medical and psychosocial support and livelihood training. (14)

Until July 2020, FARDC elements in North Kivu collaborated with UN- and U.S.-sanctioned Congolese "General" Shimiray Mwissa Guidon's NDC-R, an armed group and occasional proxy for the FARDC that recruits children, sometimes forcibly, into its ranks. (30,87-91) Congolese forces, including senior FARDC commander General Innocent Gahizi, allowed the group to move freely throughout the province and tolerated NDC-R's use of FARDC uniforms. Colonel Yves Kijenge, FARDC commander of the 341st Regiment, also supplied the group with weapons and ammunition. (50,88,90) Under this arrangement, which allowed the NDC-R to establish illegal taxation schemes and control of lucrative gold mining sites, the group emerged as the dominant non-state group in the Masisi and Walikale regions of the eastern DRC. (50,81,88-90) In June 2019, military prosecutors in North Kivu issued an arrest warrant for Guidon for child recruitment, mass rape, and other crimes committed between 2015 and 2020 as leader of the NDC-R. (50,89,90) They further allege that sanctioned high-ranking FARDC commanders protected Guidon during this period, although these officers have not yet been charged. In July 2020 Guidon was deposed by Gilbert Chuo Bwira, his second-in-command, with FARDC support. (28,92) In August 2020, 584 combatants under Bwira's command, including 29 children, surrendered to the FARDC. The children were removed by MONUSCO's child protection unit and taken to the UNICEF-funded community demobilization center in Goma. (93-95)

Despite efforts to prevent child recruitment by state security forces, children whom the FARDC separated from armed groups were occasionally detained for 2 to 14 days. In 2020, 85 children were detained following separation from armed groups, 78 of whom were released shortly thereafter. However, 7 children were held in detention for periods ranging from 2 to 9 months. (14,44) When children are detained, official procedure requires the government to alert MONUSCO, to whom the children are handed over. Prior to that handover, children may be held in local detention cells, which suffer from overcrowding, lack of food and health services, and poor sanitation. (14,44)

The FARDC, mining police, and private security forces, including those guarding large-scale mining concessions, reportedly subject child laborers on ASM sites to extortion and physical abuse. (96) There is no evidence the government took action to address these abuses. Moreover, some FARDC elements collected illegal fees from traders to transport gold in FARDC trucks on routine operations between Misisi and Bukavu. (28) Members of the 130th Regiment of the FARDC illegally owned and taxed artisanal gold mines in Mongbwalu, Ituri Province. The pandemic lockdown exacerbated these trends. Research indicates that members of the FARDC's 3407th Regiment facilitated the transport of gold on behalf of non-state armed group Mai-Mai Yakutumba. (28)

Penalties for criminal violations related to the worst forms of child labor—including the use of children in armed conflict—are 1 to 3 years of imprisonment with fines of up to $123 (200,000 Congolese Francs). (13,20,22,56,57,59,70,71)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (NCCL)	Oversees the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor and monitors its implementation. (97,98) Led by MOL and includes representatives from 12 other ministries, local NGOs, and civil society. (12,97,98) In 2020, the DRC's Minister of Mines joined the Cobalt Action Partnership (CAP), a public-private initiative that promotes due diligence in the cobalt supply chain. The CAP's objectives include the formalization of ASM operations and eradication of child labor in cobalt mining. (99)
Regulatory and Control Authority for Strategic Minerals ( Autorité de Régulation et de Contrôle des Marchés des Substances Minérales Stratégique ) (ARECOMS)	Created under a 2019 mining decree, ARECOMS is a new regulatory agency that will oversee supply chains of "strategic minerals" such as cobalt and coltan to ensure children, pregnant women, and other vulnerable populations are not working in mining sites. (37,69) A separate body, Entreprise Générale du Cobalt (EGC), is a subsidiary of the state-owned mining company Gécamines, which has exclusive authority to buy and sell artisanally mined cobalt. (69) The EGC aims to ensure price stability and fairness by removing unregulated middlemen from the supply chain, thereby decreasing the potential for child labor. (50,69,100)
Child Soldier Monitoring, Verification, Demobilization, Reintegration Mechanisms	Includes the Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission (UEPN-DDR), which coordinates verification and release of children associated with armed groups. Working with the MOGF, the UN Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO), UNICEF, and NGOs, refers demobilized child soldiers to social service providers for family reunification and reinsertion. (12,33,78) The commission is led by MOD's Children Associated with Armed Forces and Armed Groups unit. (33,78) In addition, the Country Task Forces on Monitoring and Reporting, which is co-chaired by the UN, documents all grave violations committed against children. With UN support, the Centers for Transit and Orientation in North Kivu Province provided psychological counseling, basic education, and job skills training to ex-child soldiers during the reporting period. In 2020, the centers supported and helped reintegrate 2,210 children who were formerly associated with armed groups. (14,44) In October 2020, the commander of the Mai-Mai Apana Pale-Makilo faction signed a unilateral declaration to end and prevent the recruitment and use of and prevent sexual violence against children. The commander of the Mai-Mai Ilunga also signed a roadmap to end child recruitment in December 2020. (54) As of November 2020, 35 armed group commanders had committed to releasing children recruited into their ranks. (32,50)
Joint Technical Working Group	Coordinates the implementation of the UN Child Soldiers Action Plan and activities at the provincial level in North Kivu, South Kivu, and Orientale provinces. Led by the MOGF and includes representatives from four other ministries and the UN. (3,5,101) In addition, organizes training on child soldier screening, monitoring, verification, and demobilization processes, and participates in advocacy events. (3,27,102) Throughout the reporting period, the working group conducted 14 trainings on age verification procedures and enforcement of the UN Secretary-General's principles on Children in Armed Conflict. (14,44)
Inter-Ministerial Commission Responsible for Addressing the Issue of Child Labor in Mines and on Mine Sites in the DRC	Coordinates efforts to eradicate child labor in the DRC's mining sector and serves as an adviser to other ministries combating child labor in mining. The Ministry of Mines organized a meeting in November 2020 for international missions and donors on combating child labor in artisanal mining in Kolwezi, the capital of the copper- and cobalt-rich Lualaba Province, which resulted in the Kolwezi Declaration. The Kolwezi Declaration is a new partnership between the Ministry of Mines and international partners ("Technical and Financial Partners") that calls for "responsible and ethical artisanal mining free of child labor." (14) The Declaration also reinforces the commitments outlined in the Operational Plan of the National Sector Strategy to Fight Against Child Labor in Mining (2017–2025). (14)
Agency for Prevention and the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (APLTP)	Investigates, prosecutes, and sentences traffickers, including government officials complicit in human trafficking. Advocates on behalf of victims of trafficking. (50) Embedded in the Office of the Presidency, replaces a previous trafficking in persons working group. Includes government officials from PNC and FARDC, local NGOs, and international organizations that formulate, coordinate, monitor, and evaluate government efforts to combat human trafficking. (50) In 2020, the APLTP worked with civil society organizations to identify and report 100 children working in artisanal gold-mining sites in South Kivu. (14) The government also funded the APLTP's national awareness-raising campaign, with assistance from international donors. (14) Despite the pandemic, the APLTP-led inter-agency trafficking in persons committee met 50 times and held 5 technical working group meetings. This schedule enabled the APLTP to achieve notable success on human trafficking issues, including multiple arrests and convictions. (14,37,44) During the year, the APLTP also developed reference cards for use by law enforcement and intelligence officials and civil society organizations, to facilitate identification of victims and appropriate sharing of case data. In addition, the APLTP distributed standardized identification forms for care providers to input data on human trafficking victims. (14,44)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The creation of APLTP in April 2019 addressed a long-standing need to increase coordination among various anti-human trafficking actors within the government. (50) Nevertheless, overlapping objectives and duplication of efforts, combined with a lack of resources and trained personnel, may have impeded the government's ability to coordinate actions to combat the worst forms of child labor. (24,33) In addition, the Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission is supposed to take the lead on child soldier issues; however, research indicates that, in practice, that role has often been assumed by the Country Task Forces on Monitoring and Reporting. (33)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including whether relevant policies were active.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2012–2025)	Developed by NCCL in consultation with UNICEF to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the DRC by the end of 2025. (10,103) Promotes the enforcement of laws prohibiting the worst forms of child labor; universal primary education; monitoring and evaluation efforts; and improved coordination of stakeholders. Also seeks to raise awareness of the worst forms of child labor, empower communities to stop child labor practices, and provide prevention and reintegration services. (10,103) In September 2020, the DRC's First Lady, Denise Nyakeru Tshisekedi, in collaboration with World Vision, hosted an advocacy workshop to combat child labor. Two recommendations came out of this gathering: to reinforce inspections and to support the extension of the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor from 2020 to 2025. (14)
Child Soldiers Action Plans	The DRC has several key policies to address children in armed conflict. The UEPN-DDR's National Disarmament, Demobilization, Repatriation, Reintegration, and Resettlement (DDR III) plan aims to provide rehabilitation and reintegration services to demobilized combatants, including children. (3,104,105) DDR III is implemented with UN and international support and within the 2013 Framework Agreement for Peace, Security, and Cooperation for the DRC and the Great Lakes Region. (104,106,107) Requires children separated from armed groups to be immediately transferred to UNICEF. (33) The Action Plan to End the Recruitment and Use of Child Soldiers (Child Soldiers Action Plan) is a UN-backed plan that aims to prevent and end the use of children in armed forces, provide support and reintegration services, pursue accountability for perpetrators, and create a partnership framework for the UN and the government. (108,109) Includes standard operating procedures for age verification to help the FARDC avoid underage recruitment. (2,3,5) MOD worked with MONUSCO and UNICEF to identify and remove child recruits from the FARDC and non-state armed groups. (94) In December 2020, MONUSCO's Child Protection Section organized a training workshop for the FARDC's 34th military region. The training was carried out in conjunction with the Joint Technical Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict, PNC, the National Intelligence Agency, and the General Directorate of Migration. MOD also provided training on age verification and child protection to the FARDC and police in 2020. (14) Throughout the year, a joint UN and DRC government technical working group on preventing child soldiers held 14 trainings on age verification procedures and the Children in Armed Conflict mandate. (14) A total of 1,543 FARDC and PNC officers attended these workshops. Moreover, the DRC's police and military continued to use a written standard operating procedure on age verification to avoid child recruitment, resulting in the screening of 2,489 recruits and the identification and removal prior to training of 53 children. (14)
Action Plans to Address Child Labor in Mining	Includes the National Sectoral Strategy to Combat Child Labor in Artisanal Mines and Artisanal Mining Sites (2017–2025), developed by the Ministry of Mines. Seeks to eradicate child labor in artisanal mining by 2025. The strategy aims to strengthen relevant laws, improve data collection on the prevalence of child labor in the mining sector, promote responsible sourcing regulations, improve child protection measures, and build stakeholder capacity to address these issues. (110) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Mines organized a workshop to operationalize this strategy. (13,50) In addition, the government allocated $10.8 million (19 billion Congolese Francs) to the ministry to reduce child labor in the mining sector. (13) More broadly, the Inter-Ministerial Commission's Triennial Action Plan (2017–2020) aspired to eradicate child labor in mining by 2020, particularly in the tin, tantalum, tungsten, cobalt, and copper sectors by monitoring existing policies and strengthening measures to remove children from mining sites. (111) Research was unable to determine whether the plan was renewed during the reporting period. The government is also cooperating with the Public-Private Alliance for Responsible Minerals Trade to end child labor in the cobalt sector. (50) In 2020, the National Minister of Mines hosted an international partners' and donors' workshop in Kolwezi, the capital of Lualaba Province and one of the country's two centers for copper and cobalt production. (14) This conference led to the development of a new strategy to mitigate child labor in the mining sector. A follow-up meeting is scheduled for late 2021 to reevaluate the government's progress on this front. (14) Mining police in Walikale and Rubaya also worked with the human rights NGO Association for the Development for Rural Initiatives to conduct community awareness-raising sessions on child labor with the aim of encouraging families to bring children sent to mines back home. (14)

Policy	Description
APLTP's National Action Plan (2020–2024)†	Addresses all forms of trafficking in persons, including foreign-born and domestic victims and child soldiers. (50) Aims to prevent human trafficking through national awareness-raising and government training programs; victim identification and care; and law enforcement cooperation and coordination. (50) The 5 year National Strategy and accompanying 2020–2024 anti-trafficking National Action Plan are the first such guidance documents in the DRC's history. (50) In 2020, APLTP produced an unofficial report on trafficking in persons that documented incidents involving children. (14) APLTP will further benefit from a $3 million USAID-funded 2020–2023 counter-trafficking program. (14) The government launched a trafficking in persons awareness-raising campaign in November 2020. The campaign included community radio messaging in multiple languages, the production of public-awareness campaign films, the creation of a free trafficking in persons resource library to be hosted on the websites of the offices of the Presidency and the MOJ, and a national hotline for reporting human trafficking cases. (14) In addition, the APLTP developed new screening procedures to identify trafficking victims. (14)
National Action Plan Against Sexual Violence in Conflict	Supports UN Resolution 1325 on women, peace, and security, which aims to prevent the recruitment of children, particularly girls, into armed groups; to provide social services upon their release; and to ensure perpetrators are prosecuted. (112,113) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (21,22,114,115)

Although the DRC has developed a number of action plans to combat child labor, only some received dedicated funding. (19,23,33,40)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all relevant sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Programs to Support Vulnerable Children†	Aim to improve child protection with the support of donors and the government. Includes a $4 million Government of Japan-funded program that aims to provide education, vocational training, reintegration kits, and school feeding programs to 13,000 children and to construct a training center for youth in North Kivu Province; a $97 million Government of Canada-funded program that aims to assist 95,000 at-risk youth living near mining sites; and a MINASA and NGO program to reintegrate children removed from the street into communities and to reunify children formerly associated with armed groups with their families. (3,12,33,116) The government-run Center for the Transit and Orientation of Young Children in North Kivu Province also provides psychological counseling, basic education, and job skills training to ex-child soldiers. During the reporting period, the center supervised and helped reintegrate 400 children who had left armed groups. (50)
UNICEF-Funded Programs	Under the auspices of the government's Free Primary Education Program, and with support from UNICEF and Global Partnership for Education, the Ministry of Primary, Secondary and Technical Education reached 9,013,021 children and adolescents in 21 provinces with at least one form of distance education, including 91 radio stations and 7 television channels. (14,117,118) Since the beginning of the pandemic, UNICEF distributed 135,619 workbooks in 12 provinces, and provided 6,788 solar-powered radios to children in vulnerable households in 19 provinces to allow them to follow distance-learning classes. (117-119) Despite the school closures, more than 7 million Congolese children were able to continue learning through educational programs on the radio, workbooks, and other learning tools. Nearly 450,000 exercise books have been distributed, including to those living in remote areas of the country. (117-119) The government estimates that 4.5 million additional children were enrolled in primary schools through the program. (14)
USAID-Funded Projects*	The USAID-PACT Sustainable Mine Site Validation (SMSV, 2020-2024) is a four-year cooperative agreement that will implement a technically and financially sustainable Mine Site Qualification and Validation model in North and South Kivu that adheres to the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development's Due Diligence Guidance for Responsible Supply Chains of Minerals; the International Conference on the Great Lakes Region; Regional Certification Mechanism; and DRC law. (120) The SMSV also aims to develop strategies to fight child labor, including by raising awareness of child labor issues among local stakeholders, and by building the capacity of mining inspectors and local stakeholder committees (CLS) to qualify and validate mine sites. (120)

Program	Description
World Bank-Funded Projects†	Projects in support of reestablishing peace and stability. Includes Human Development Systems Strengthening (2014–2020), a $46.8 million project that aims to increase birth registration and improve school infrastructure; and Education Quality Improvement Project (2017–2021), a $100 million project that aims to improve the quality of primary school education. (107,121,122) In June 2020, the World Bank also approved an $800 million Emergency Equity and System Strengthening in Education Project† that aims to improve primary education systems in 10 of the DRC's most restive provinces. The program targets nine million children for re-enrollment once pandemic restrictions are lifted and aims to enroll an additional one million previously out-of-school children. (123-125) By December 2020, the Human Development Systems Project had issued 600,000 birth certificates to children under age 5. (126)
USDOL-Funded Projects	Includes Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP 16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor , a $20 million project implemented by the ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, strengthen policies and government capacity, and promote partnerships to combat child labor and forced labor. Along with IOM and the Walk Free Foundation, the MAP 16 project conducted research on forced labor, including forced child labor, in conflict zones in the DRC in 2018. The research is due to be published in 2021. (127) Also includes Combating Child Labor in the Democratic Republic of the Congo's Cobalt Industry (2018–2021) (COTECCO) , a $3.5 million project implemented by the ILO in Kolwezi, Lualaba Province, aimed at reducing child labor and improving working conditions in the mining sector. (128,129) During the reporting period, the provincial ministers of mines attended workshops funded by COTECCO in the provinces of Tanganyika, Haut Katanga, and Lualaba. The Mining Chamber of the Federation of Congolese Enterprises also participated in these workshops. (13,14,128) Additional information is available on the USDOL website .

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (130,131)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Defense worked closely with the UN to identify and remove child recruits from the FARDC. (50) However, the scope of child DDR programs remains insufficient. The reintegration process is slow, funding is inadequate, and collaboration between partners is weak. (3,22,47,132,133) Children separated from armed groups remain vulnerable to stigmatization and re-recruitment. Girls, who make up an estimated 30 to 40 percent of children associated with armed groups, often survive prolonged sexual and physical abuse in captivity and face social exclusion upon their return. Because this cycle of rejection increases their risk of re-recruitment, girls should be specifically targeted in the DDR process. (5,47,132-135) Research also indicates that the government needs to strengthen its efforts to assist street children and to implement programs specifically designed to assist children engaged in forced labor in agriculture, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (4,22,23,47)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the DRC (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish by law a compulsory education age that aligns with the minimum age for employment.	2013 – 2020
Enforcement	Issue appropriate decrees to ensure that enacted laws are implemented, including those related to light work provisions.	2009 – 2020
	Increase penalties for the worst forms of child labor so that they are sufficiently stringent to serve as a deterrent.	2013 – 2020
	Collect and publish complete data on labor enforcement efforts, including labor inspectorate funding, whether initial training and training on new laws were provided and the number of violations found, penalties imposed, and fines collected.	2020
	Fully fund civil and criminal enforcement agencies responsible for conducting inspections or investigations, and ensure that labor inspectors are able to conduct worksite inspections throughout the country.	2015 – 2020
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice and ensure that inspectors and criminal law enforcement agencies receive adequate training and funding to carry out their duties, including refresher courses as appropriate.	2011 – 2020

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Collect and publish complete data related to criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of investigations conducted and violations found related to the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2020
	Hold perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor, including child soldiering, accountable.	2017 – 2020
	Ensure that both the military and civilian criminal justice systems have the resources to investigate and prosecute child labor violations, and that judges, prosecutors, and investigators receive training on new and existing laws on the worst forms of child labor.	2011 – 2020
	Improve coordination among relevant criminal enforcement agencies in conducting investigations, collecting data, and providing services to victims.	2017 – 2020
	Cease the practice of subjecting children to physical violence and detention for their alleged association with armed groups.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that security forces do not subject children to human rights violations, including extortion and physical abuse, in artisanal small-scale mining operations.	2019 – 2020
Coordination	Improve coordination among relevant ministries and agencies to avoid duplication of efforts and ensure that they receive adequate resources and trained personnel to combat the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that the Disarmament, Demobilization, Repatriation, Reintegration, and Resettlement Commission is able to coordinate the implementation of DDR III as intended.	2015 – 2020
Government Policies	Ensure all relevant policies, national action plans, and sectoral strategies to address the worst forms of child labor are adopted, funded, and implemented as intended.	2011 – 2020
Social Programs	Conduct a stand-alone child labor survey to better inform child labor policies and practices.	2013 – 2020
	Improve access to education by ensuring that all children are registered at birth or are issued identification documents.	2012 – 2020
	Improve access to education for all children by regulating classroom size, training additional teachers, subsidizing fees, and building additional schools. Take steps to ensure student safety while at school and while students are in transit both to and from school facilities. Make additional efforts to prevent schools from being attacked and occupied by armed groups.	2012 – 2020
	Expand efforts to address the needs of demobilized children and incorporate stigmatization, gender, and re-recruitment concerns into programs to reintegrate such children.	2009 – 2020
	Establish or expand social programs designed to assist children engaged in forced labor in agriculture, street work, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation, and implement existing programs as intended.	2009 – 2020

In 2020, the Republic of the Congo made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government carried out prosecutions and achieved convictions of seven child traffickers and enacted standalone human trafficking legislation that defines the crime and provides for more stringent sentences. It also concluded a verbal agreement with the Democratic Republic of the Congo that prevents minors from entering the neighboring country without their parents or parental consent to help stop child trafficking between the two countries. However, children in the Republic of the Congo are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The government has yet to accede to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons and existing programs are not sufficient to address the scope of child labor in all relevant sectors. In addition, information on children's work is extremely limited, as there has never been a national child labor survey or similar research conducted in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Republic of the Congo (ROC) are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic work, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the ROC. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	25.4 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	27.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		71.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS 5), 2014–2015. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including in the production of manioc, peanuts, corn, plantains, potatoes, and sugarcane (2,5)
	Fishing (2)
Industry	Working in stone quarries,† including breaking stones (2,3)
Services	Domestic work (2-5)
	Market vending and carrying heavy loads† (2-5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3-5,8)
	Forced labor in farming, including in the production of cocoa, and in domestic work and working in stone quarries, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,5)
	Forced labor in market vending and working in bakeries (1,5)
	Forced labor of indigenous Baka, Aka, and Kola children in farming, including in the production of manioc, and in fishing, hunting, and domestic work (1,2,5,9)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In some rural areas, the majority ethnic Bantu population forces non-majority, indigenous children—such as from the Baka, Aka, and Kola groups—to perform agricultural work, including forced work, for low wages and under the threat of physical abuse. Within the ROC, internal child trafficking networks relocate children from rural areas to urban centers for forced labor in domestic work and market vending. (3,5) In urban environments, children from West Africa work in forced domestic servitude for West African families in the major cities of Pointe-Noire and Brazzaville. (4,5) A majority of foreign children subjected to forced domestic work or commercial sexual exploitation in the ROC originate from the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), and other West African nations, including Benin. (1,3,5,9,10) However, information on children's work is limited because there has never been a national child labor survey or similar research conducted in the ROC. (2,11) During the reporting period, the ROC Government came to a verbal agreement with the DRC to prevent minors entering the ROC without their parents or parental consent, in order to help combat child trafficking; however, both sides agreed on the need to continue and formalize collaboration. The ROC Government also has a written agreement with the Beninese Government for the same purpose. (5,11)

The Constitution stipulates that education is free until age 16; in practice, however, some parents are required to pay for books, uniforms, and school fees, which may limit access to education for some children. (2,12,13) Prohibitive school fees, over-enrollment, the absence of sanitation facilities, a lack of teachers, and sexual abuse in schools also pose barriers to education for some children, particularly in refugee or IDP camps and non-urban areas. (2,3,5,12,14) Indigenous children throughout the country may experience discrimination, linguistic barriers, prohibitive school fees, and long distances to travel to schools. (3,5,13,15,16) The government offered an expenses subsidy—"tuition waiver"—for indigenous children, a program that provides money to families for students to buy uniforms, supplies, and procure health insurance, but research indicated that schools provided this waiver inconsistently during the reporting period. (5,11) The implementation of six ministerial decrees aimed at protecting indigenous peoples' rights resulted in an increase in the number of indigenous children enrolled in the school system, with one decree guaranteeing the right to a birth certificate, and another the right to access primary schooling. (17)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The ROC has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the ROC's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a minimum age for voluntary recruitment into state armed forces.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 116 of the Labor Code; Article 68 of the Child Protection Code (18,19)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 68 of the Child Protection Code; Articles 4, 5, 8, and 9 of Order 2224 of 1953 (19,20)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 4, 5, 8, and 9 of Order 2224 of 1953 (20)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 4 of the Labor Code; Articles 68 and 122 of the Child Protection Code; Article 33 of the Constitution (18,19,21)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 2, 4, 5, and 6 of Law No. 22-2019 on Combating Trafficking in Persons (22)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 60, 65–68, and 122 of the Child Protection Code; Articles 334 and 335 of the Penal Code (19,23)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 68–70 and 122 of the Child Protection Code (19)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	No		Article 49 of the Child Protection Code (19)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 49 of the Child Protection Code (19)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 49 and 111 of the Child Protection Code (19)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 29 of the Constitution; Articles 1 and 3 of the Education Law (21,24)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 29 of the Constitution; Article 1 of the Education Law (21,24)

* No conscription (25)

In 2019, the government enacted the country's first standalone human trafficking legislation, which entered into force in 2020, defines human trafficking crimes, and prescribes more stringent sentences for the most severe offenses. (5,11,17,29) National laws do not set a minimum age for voluntary recruitment into the armed forces. (16,19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security	Enforces child labor laws. (13) Conducts initial inspections before referring cases to the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights (MOJ) for prosecution. (2)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights (MOJ)	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor. Dedicates two judges—one judge in Brazzaville and one in Pointe-Noire—to child protection cases. (2) Leads child labor law enforcement efforts. (3)
Ministry of the Interior's National Police	Enforce criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor and conduct initial investigations into cases of forced labor, human trafficking, and the use of children in illicit activities. (2,3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in the ROC took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the limited scope of inspections.

Training opportunities for labor inspectors, particularly for lower-level staff, are very limited due to a lack of resources, including budget shortfalls, and a lack of Internet access. (9, 11) Although the government lacks a formal process for referring children found in situations of child labor to appropriate social services providers, individual labor inspectors may leverage personal connections with inter-ministerial counterparts to refer children found during inspections to social services. (3-5) The government did not provide comprehensive information about labor law enforcement operations, such as number of inspections, violations found, and penalties applied, for inclusion in this report. (5)

During the reporting period, labor inspections were suspended starting in May 2020 as a response to the COVID-19 pandemic, and were reinstated in March 2021. (5,26) In addition, inspectors do not have access to government vehicles and rely on the employers, whose businesses are being inspected, to provide transportation. (27)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in the ROC took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (4)	Yes (11)

Authorities successfully prosecuted and convicted seven adults for child trafficking for the purposes of forced child labor. (11) Authorities removed eight Beninese children, who had been trafficked into the ROC, from situations of exploitation and forced child labor. The children were ultimately repatriated to Benin. (5)

The government provides funding for prosecution, investigation, and convictions of suspected traffickers in the context of broader judicial and law enforcement programs. (4) In general, the MOJ and the Ministry of Social Affairs, Humanitarian Action and Solidarity (MSA) experienced difficulties in prosecuting offenders due to a weak judicial system, poor recordkeeping, a large backlog of cases in the high court, courts that convene infrequently and irregularly, and criminal law enforcement officials' and judges' unequal knowledge of anti-trafficking legislation and the Child Protection Code. (1,9)

The MSA, MOL, MOJ, and the National Police work together to enforce criminal laws against child trafficking; however, their efforts are limited to Brazzaville and Pointe-Noire. In addition, the National Police sometimes require payments from NGOs and other stakeholders to assist in operations to rescue victims of child trafficking. (2,9) Research found that many police did not understand what constituted child labor, and that court and Ministry of Justice and Human Rights (MOJ) personnel did not fully understand or know how to handle child labor cases. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of adequate resources.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Social Affairs, Humanitarian Action and Solidarity (MSA)	Promotes the rights of vulnerable groups and contributes to anti-trafficking efforts by providing social welfare assistance to victims. (2,13) May conduct initial inspections before referring cases to MOJ for prosecution. (2) Through its Director General of Social Affairs, oversees government strategy to combat human trafficking. (9) Through its Task Force, leads efforts to combat human trafficking in Pointe-Noire, designates foster families to receive victims, and assists in repatriating or reintegrating victims. (2)
Anti-Trafficking Coordinating Committee for Pointe-Noire (MSA Task Force)	With UNICEF support, coordinates all efforts to combat trafficking of West African children in Pointe-Noire. Chaired by MSA with representatives from other government agencies and civil society organizations. (1,2,4) Seeks to prevent and prosecutes cases of human trafficking and provides support to victims through placement with foster families. (28) During the reporting period, the committee provided funding for foster homes for child trafficking victims. (1) The Committee was active during the reporting year, meeting four times. (11)
National Commission to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates government efforts on trafficking in persons and forced labor as a federal-level, inter-ministerial committee. (4) Article 34 of the 2019 Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons provides a dedicated line item for funding. (29) Met four times during the reporting year in Brazzaville and in Pointe-Noire to discuss child labor issues and steps the government is taking to address violations of Congolese law. (4,11)

The government has not provided the MSA Task Force with a specific operating budget since 2014, limiting the task force's activities due to lack of funds. In addition, a local NGO has indicated that it refers cases to the Beninese consulate rather than the MSA Task Force because the majority of victims are Beninese and the MSA Task Force is unable to provide the NGO with financial support. (1,9) Furthermore, there is no coordinating body to oversee efforts to combat child labor at the national level. (2,28) Although there is a line item in the MSA's budget for activities to combat human trafficking, funds are disbursed irregularly or not at all. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a national child labor action plan.

Congo, Republic of the

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Education Sector Strategy (2015–2025)	Developed as an update to the previous 2012–2020 strategy, focuses on the priorities of offering quality basic education for all, addressing the human resources needs for its developing economy, and creating mechanisms for the efficient management of an educational system. (30)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (9,10)

During the reporting period, the government came to a verbal bilateral agreement with the DRC that prevents minors from entering the ROC without the accompaniment of their parents. (5,11) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Policy (2015–2025), and research found no evidence of a general policy on child labor. (30) Furthermore, research did not discover a national action plan that addresses trafficking in persons.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Safety Net Program (LISUNGI) and Additional Financing (2014–2022)	World Bank-funded project that grants improved access to health and education services to poor families in Brazzaville, Cuvette, and Pointe-Noire. (11,32) Includes a cash transfer program for 127 households conditioned upon regular health visits and that all children maintained an 80 percent school attendance rate each month. (3,32) In response to the COVID-19 pandemic, the government reinforced its “Lisungi” social safety net program for approximately 200,000 households nationwide. Households received an additional $85 from government COVID-19 Solidarity Fund. (5)
McGovern-Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program (2017–2022)	$30 million United States Department of Agriculture-funded, 5-year project implemented by WFP in Bouenza, Cuvette, Lékoumou, Likouala, Plateaux, Pool, and Sangha. Aims to improve literacy of school-age children, increase healthy dietary practices, build capacity of government institutions, improve policy and regulatory framework, and increase government support and engagement of local organizations and community groups. (33)
Observe, Reflect, Act Schools	Ministry of Education program supported by UNICEF, the EU, and WFP to improve access to education for indigenous children through a two or three-year preparatory program. (15) Identifies children who should be added to the civil register, provides school supplies to students, and raises awareness among indigenous families about the importance of education. The schools continued to operate during the reporting period, but sources indicate that they are funded primarily by international organizations. (11,34,35)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (12)

Existing government programs are not sufficient to address the scope of child labor in all relevant sectors, such as domestic work or commercial sexual exploitation. (2)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the ROC (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that the minimum age for voluntary state military recruitment is no lower than age 16.	2015 – 2020
Enforcement	Ensure that the government has a formal process for referring children to the appropriate social services when they are found in situations of child labor.	2020

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information related to labor and criminal law enforcement statistics, including the funding level for the labor inspectorate, the number and type of labor inspections conducted, violations found, penalties imposed and collected for child labor violations, number of criminal investigations conducted, and convictions secured.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that all criminal law enforcement personnel, including from the police forces, courts and the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights, are properly trained to know how to identify, recognize, prosecute, and handle worst forms of child labor cases.	2020
	Institutionalize training for all labor inspectors, investigators, and law enforcement officers, including offering periodic refresher courses.	2014 – 2020
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by ensuring that inspectors have adequate resources to carry out their mandated inspection duties.	2015 – 2020
	Remove barriers to enforcement and prosecution by strengthening the judicial system through improved recordkeeping, decreased court backlogs, more frequent hearings, and improved training for criminal law enforcement officials and judges on trafficking in persons legislation.	2014 – 2020
	Expand criminal enforcement efforts beyond large cities.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that criminal enforcement agencies such as the National Police are properly funded and do not seek payment from stakeholders to conduct investigations and operations.	2014 – 2020
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies receive adequate resources to function as intended.	2014 – 2020
	Establish a coordinating mechanism to combat child labor, including its worst forms, at the national level.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that Ministry of Social Affairs, Humanitarian Action and Solidarity funds are budgeted to combat human trafficking are regularly dispersed.	2019 – 2020
Government Policies	Adopt a plan that addresses all relevant forms of trafficking in persons.	2020
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing relevant policies.	2009 – 2020
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor and the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2020
Social Programs	Conduct a national child labor survey or similar research to determine the activities carried out by working children to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2020
	Improve access to education for all children, including those in non-urban areas, regardless of refugee status or ethnicity, by eliminating all school-related fees, regulating classroom size, removing linguistic barriers, providing sanitation facilities, building additional schools, training additional teachers, and ensuring that students are not subject to sexual abuse.	2009 – 2020
	Fund and implement social programs to address the worst forms of child labor, including programs to expand access to free education, and to address child domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.	2018 – 2020
	Ensure indigenous children do not experience discrimination or barriers to education.	2020
	Ensure that the "tuition waiver program" for indigenous children is consistently applied.	2020

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Cook Islands, in 2020 the government made moderate advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Cook Islands increased its labor inspectorate budget and, for the first time, published labor law enforcement data. In addition, the first Cook Islands Labor Force Survey was completed in November 2020, providing essential data for the government's efforts to bring its laws into line with international standards. Although the Cook Islands made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, the law does not criminally prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, or pornographic performances, or the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Cook Islands. Table I provides one key indicator on children's education in the Cook Islands. Data on key indicators on children's work are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Primary Completion Rate (%)		120.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (1)

The Government of the Cook Islands completed its first Labor Force Survey in November 2020. The survey was conducted by the Statistics Office of the Ministry of Finance and Economic Management and the Ministry of Internal Affairs' Labor and Consumer Services section, with the ILO providing additional technical and financial support. (2-4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Cook Islands is self-governing in free association with New Zealand, and it follows a combination of its own laws and some of the laws of New Zealand and the United Kingdom that were enacted prior to self-government in 1965. (5,6) Since 1988, no treaty signed, ratified, accepted, approved, or acceded to by New Zealand extends to the Cook Islands, unless New Zealand acted expressly on behalf of the Cook Islands. (5) The Cook Islands has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table I).

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in the Cook Islands' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 3 of the Prohibition of Forced or Compulsory Labor Ordinance; Article 109I of the Crimes Amendment Act (9,10)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 109I of the Crimes Amendment Act (10)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Articles 36–37 of the Government of New Zealand's Defence Act (11)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 23.1 of the Education Act (12)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 22.2 of the Education Act (12)

* No conscription (11)

† No standing military (13)

The Employment Relations Act prohibits children younger than age 13 from being employed. (7) The Act also prohibits a school-age person, defined as ages 13 to 16, from working during normal school hours, working for more than 10 hours a week outside of school hours, or doing work that is not considered light work. (7) However, the legal framework does not determine the sectors in which light work is permitted. (7) The Cook Islands does not criminalize the use of children in illicit activities, particularly in the production and trafficking of drugs. (10) New Zealand is responsible for the defense of the territory at the Cook Islands' request. (11,13) Education is free and compulsory for all child citizens and permanent residents of the Cook Islands at the primary and secondary levels. (12,14)

With the completion of the first Cook Islands Labor Force Survey in November 2020, essential data have been made available for utilization in the government's future efforts to bring its laws into line with international standards. (3,4)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the Government of the Cook Islands has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Internal Affairs	Enforces labor laws through the Labor Division and provides child services. Lead agency for implementing the UN CRC. (5)
Cook Islands Police Service	Enforces child labor laws. (5)

Labor law enforcement on the Cook Islands lies with the Ministry of Internal Affairs' Labor Division's four labor inspectors. The Labor Division is responsible for monitoring labor protections and occupational safety and health. (5) The Cook Islands increased its labor inspectorate budget from $163,232 in 2019 to $228,500 in 2020. During the reporting period, the Labor Division conducted 55 inspections. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, the Government of the Cook Islands has established policies related to child labor (Table 4).

Table 5. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Cook Islands National Youth Policy (2015–2020)	Identified priority areas for youth, including education and work opportunities, health, and youth risk and resilience. (15) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Youth Policy during the reporting period. (14)
National Policy Framework for Children (2017–2021)	Provides a framework to protect the rights of children, with outcomes focused on their health, education, safety, economic opportunities, and international connectivity. Aims to protect the rights of children by strengthening data collection on children to improve the government's understanding of child abuse and children's experiences in the legal system, and improves collaboration between the government, parents, and the community. (16) During the reporting period, the Government of the Cook Islands continued to support the National Policy Framework's efforts to protect children from harmful labor exploitation. (3)
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	A multi-national strategic framework program consisting of 14 South Pacific nations. Addresses, develops, and implements strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (17) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Internal Affairs' Child and Family Services office reviewed the Child Protection Policy and Strategic Plan for the Cook Islands in conjunction with UNICEF Pacific. (3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for social programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in the Cook Islands (Table 5).

Table 6. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, and pornographic performances.	2012 – 2020
	Ensure that the law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor.	2017 – 2020
Government Policies	Publish activities undertaken to implement the Cook Islands National Youth Policy.	2015 – 2020

In 2020, Costa Rica made significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In November, the government ratified the Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labour Convention of 1930. The government also provided updated statistics on child labor prevalence and published the first findings of its Child Labor Risk Identification Model. In addition, the Attorney General published disaggregated data on efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor, and the Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker began drafting a new National Action Plan to combat the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Costa Rica are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the production of coffee. Furthermore, existing social programs are not accessible to workers in all sectors, and the labor inspectorate lacks a sufficient number of inspectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Costa Rica are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the production of coffee. (I-10) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Costa Rica.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in the production of pornography (16,22,23)
	Forced labor in the agriculture, construction, fishing, street vending, and commercial sectors (7,18,22,24)
	Domestic servitude (18,21)
	Use in transporting or selling drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (21)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Costa Rica, including migrant children, are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in tourist destinations, border areas, and in the Northern and Pacific coastal zones. Costa Rica is also a destination country for child sex tourism, particularly with tourists from Europe and the United States. (21,25) Migrant children, typically from Nicaragua, are subjected to forced labor in agriculture, domestic servitude, and commercial sexual exploitation. (20,21,25)

In 2020, Costa Rica published updated child labor data through its National Household Survey, which showed that the number of working children between the ages of 12 through 17 had dropped from 13,328 in 2018 to 6,706 in 2019. (26) While the government highlighted the data as an indication of the near eradication of child labor, its last survey to incorporate children between the ages of 5 and 17 was conducted in 2016. (18)

A third of children engaged in child labor in Costa Rica work in agriculture, with the highest incidences of child labor occurring in coastal regions, in provinces such as Limon, Puntarenas, and Guanacaste. Migrant, indigenous, and Afro-descendant children are at the greatest risk of labor exploitation. (27,28)

Although preschool and general basic education are free and compulsory, children in rural areas, girls, LGBTI youth, and children from indigenous and Afro-descendant communities face challenges, such as discrimination and gender stereotypes, in accessing and completing their education. (1,5,29,30,31) Because of the COVID-19 pandemic, an estimated 324,000 students may have lost access to education due to a lack of Internet connection after the government shut down schools and transitioned to a virtual learning model to reduce transmission of the virus. (18)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Costa Rica has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Costa Rica’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of non-state military recruitment of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 3, 78, 92, and 101 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (31)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Articles 57 and 59 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code; Article 78 of the Constitution (31,38)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 59 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code; Article 8 of the Education Law; Article 78 of the Constitution (31,38,40)

† No standing military (38)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (31,38)

During the reporting period, Costa Rica ratified the Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labour Convention of 1930, which commits the government to take national action to combat, prevent, raise awareness of, and support victims of forced and compulsory labor. The Protocol will enter into force in Costa Rica in November of 2021. (18,41,42)

Two bills drafted in 2019 to amend the country's comprehensive list of hazardous occupations had yet to be sent to the National Assembly, pending inter-agency commission review and Ministry of Labor approval. The draft bills would restrict the participation of minors in public presentations and shows, particularly routines that pose the risk of death, have content contrary to morality, are performed during restricted hours, or interfere with compulsory education. (18,43) The bills would also restrict some fishing activities. (18)

Costa Rica's minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, making children between ages 15 and 17 vulnerable to child labor exploitation.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MTSS)	Monitors and enforces provisions in the Labor Code related to child labor, including conducting inspections and verification at worksites to ensure children are not engaged in hazardous labor or engaging in work that compromises a child's education. (31) Through the Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (OATIA), responds to and attempts to prevent child labor through policy development and public awareness campaigns. (44) Protects adolescent labor rights by conducting school and workplace visits, providing referrals to government services, and writing socio-labor studies and technical reports to inform policies and programs. (31)
Attorney General's Office	Enforces criminal laws protecting children, including laws prohibiting forced child labor, human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the use of children in illicit activities. Coordinates with the Judicial Investigative Police, Immigration Police, Uniformed Police, and municipal police forces, and administers the following investigative and prosecutorial units: Specialized Prosecutorial Unit against Trafficking in Persons, Organized Crime Unit, Specialized Prosecutorial Unit for Gender Issues, and Juvenile Justice Unit. (10,16,45)
Judicial Investigative Police	Investigate child labor violations, including child trafficking, child commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. (20)
National Child Welfare Agency (PANI)	Leads the coordination of government and civil society efforts in child and adolescent protection. (46) Ensures that child labor victims receive social services, including temporary shelter, legal advice, counseling, and reintegration into the educational system. (31)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Costa Rica took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MTSS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including penalty assessment authorization.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$14,000,000 (10)	$8,300,000 (18)
Number of Labor Inspectors	123 (10)	123 (18)
Inspectorate Authorized to Assess Penalties	Yes (33)	Yes (33)
Initial Training for New Labor Inspectors	Yes (10)	Yes (18)
Training on New Laws Related to Child Labor	N/A	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (10)	Yes (18)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	18,082 (10)	6,424 (47)
Number Conducted at Worksite	18,082 (10)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	23 (10)	10 (18)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown	Unknown
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Yes (18)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (10)	Yes (18)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (33)	Yes (33)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Yes (18)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (10)	Yes (18)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (18)

While the labor inspectorate identified 10 child labor violations during the reporting period, the Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (OATIA) also identified 231 minors working. Meanwhile, the National Child Welfare Agency reported receiving 43 reports of minors engaged in child labor and exploitation. (18) In 2020, the Labor Inspection Office (DNI) within MTSS forwarded one case of child labor to OATIA so that social services could be provided. Meanwhile, OATIA referred 129 working minors to the Joint Institute for Social Assistance (IMAS) for inclusion in the cash transfer program for adolescent workers. (18)

During the reporting period, the DNI was forced to cease inspections in April and May due to the pandemic, and it modified its inspection strategy to conduct some onsite and some virtual inspections. It is not clear if the pandemic was the sole cause in the drop in total number of inspections. (18)

In 2020, MTSS reported its budget for only the DNI, as opposed to its entire program budget as it has reported in previous years. The DNI has indicated that its 2020 budget was sufficient to meet its needs. (10) However, enforcement of child labor laws, particularly in rural areas, is reportedly challenging due to insufficient funds for travel, facilities, and per diem costs incurred during inspections. (1,16) In addition, the Labor Inspection Office has acknowledged that the number of labor inspectors was insufficient to cover the target population. (10,18) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Costa Rica's workforce, which includes more than 2 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Costa Rica would employ about 148 inspectors. (48,49) Government monitoring and enforcement of child labor laws is also limited in the informal sector, in which most child labor occurs, especially hazardous adolescent work. (2,13,23,50) Informal work is more common in agriculture than in other sectors in Costa Rica. (2)

The government did not provide information on number of worksite inspections conducted or amount of penalties imposed or collected for child labor violations for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Costa Rica took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (10)	Yes (18)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (10)	Yes (18)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (10)	Yes (18)
Number of Investigations	91 (10)	31 (18)
Number of Violations Found	79 (10)	12 (18)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	16 (10)	4 (18)
Number of Convictions	9 (10)	2 (18)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (20)	Yes (18)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (18)

The Attorney General's Office provided disaggregated data of its criminal law enforcement efforts in 2020 in relation to the worst forms of child labor, which showed charges including forced begging, commercial sexual exploitation, domestic servitude, labor exploitation, and the distribution or possession of pornographic material. It investigated 31 cases, including 10 cases involving child trafficking and 21 cases of child pornography. (18) In one case, a defendant was sentenced to 27 years imprisonment for the commercial sexual exploitation of minors to whom he had offered modeling jobs. (18) In another case, two Nicaraguans were arrested for the commercial sexual exploitation of a minor, who was trafficked by her stepmother. (51)

During the reporting period, investigators received initial training and training on human trafficking and smuggling laws that were modified in 2019. The Attorney General's Office indicated that the pandemic had affected its operations and thus training during the reporting period was insufficient. (18)

Reports indicate that the judiciary, prosecutors, and the police require additional staff, training, and resources to identify victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, refer victims to appropriate social services, and investigate, prosecute, and convict perpetrators. Due to the pandemic, the government issued significant budget cuts in 2020 that further reduced resources for criminal law enforcement agencies. (6,20,24,52) In addition, a lack of training and resources for municipal-level authorities hampered the abilities of local governments to respond to cases that could involve the worst forms of child labor. (25) Costa Rica does not have a database to track human trafficking cases, making it difficult to target enforcement and prevention efforts. (24)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including sufficient resources to ensure coordination among relevant agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MTSS Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (OATIA)	Coordinates government policies and programs to combat child labor. (2,4) Oversees the Inter-Institutional Coordinating Protocol for the Protection of Working Minors. (53) In 2020, OATIA, in collaboration with the ILO, the U.S. Department of Labor, and other agencies, published the results of the Child Labor Risk Identification Model, a statistical tool designed to identify localities with the greatest risk of child labor to develop targeted policies and strategies. (18,27,54)
National Committee for the Elimination of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Work	Develops and promotes policy and program initiatives focused on eliminating child labor and regulating adolescent work. Overseen by OATIA and includes a technical secretariat that comprises representatives from various sectors. (4) During the reporting period, Costa Rica began drafting a new roadmap to combat child labor to replace the one that expired in 2020. Work on the roadmap included hosting individual stakeholder workshops in anticipation of a national workshop. (18,47)
National Coalition against Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons (CONATT)	Leads government efforts to combat human trafficking and coordinates with OATIA and the National Commission Against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents (CONACOES). (6,16) Coordinates anti-trafficking efforts among 22 public institutions, civil society organizations, and international organizations. Responsible for developing and implementing anti-trafficking policies, providing care to victims, prosecuting perpetrators, and providing training to government agencies. (25) During the reporting period, CONATT conducted trainings for various stakeholders on human trafficking and migration, including targeted trainings in San Carlos, Alajuela. The trainings reached around 2,500 individuals, a decrease from previous years since most trainings were conducted virtually due to the pandemic. (18,25)
National Commission Against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents (CONACOES)	Prevents the commercial sexual exploitation of children and provides assistance and protection to victims. (16) Led by the National Council of Childhood and Adolescence; coordinates with OATIA and CONATT to address the worst forms of child labor. (16,55) In 2020, the commission held regular plenary and sub-commission sessions focusing on developing sub-commission work plans for 2021. (18)

Reports indicate that coordination is lacking between institutions responsible for investigating the worst forms of child labor and those providing social services to victims. (4,6) OATIA has reported that its office needs additional staff to better assist children engaged in child labor and their families. In addition, OATIA has noted that its office shares one vehicle with two other MTSS units, which limits its ability to provide oversight of child labor programs. (45)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap against Child Labor and the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2010–2020)	Aimed to eradicate all forms of child labor in Costa Rica by 2020 by strengthening anti-poverty, health, and educational programs and policies, and by raising awareness of child labor. (56,57) The roadmap expired in 2020 and the government began drafting a new roadmap for 2021. (18)
Inter-Institutional Coordinating Protocol for the Protection of Working Minors	Outlines provision of services for child laborers through collaboration between MTSS, PANI, the Ministry of Public Education, and the Joint Institute of Social Assistance (IMAS), and their regional and local agencies and the private sector. (2,4,58) The government implemented the protocol during the reporting period, as demonstrated by referrals of child labor cases to various support agencies. (18)

Policy	Description
National Plan for Development (2019–2022)	Outlines the government's objectives, priorities, and goals in the use of resources and in the implementation of policies, plans, and projects over a 4-year period. The plan incorporates labor rights, child welfare and development, and poverty reduction, and integrates child labor as an indicator for establishing decent work and reducing employment insecurity. (10,59) In 2020, an action plan was developed and agencies received training on steps to take to meet the goals of the development plan. (60) The government also published data in 2020 indicating that the plan had met three of its five goals in 2019, including reducing poverty. (61)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the accessibility of programs to all relevant groups.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Bridge to Development†	Aims to reduce poverty and eliminate vulnerability, including child labor, by providing social services to families in poor communities. (4,23,62) In 2020, the program expanded to include 19,000 families in the Chorotega region. (63) The program also launched a new joint initiative in 2020 that focuses on implementing strategies to improve female economic independence with a focus on environmental sustainability. The new initiative implemented three "innovation laboratories" in the Buenos Aires, Puntarenas, and Limon cantons. (64)
Face of Justice Shelter†	NGO-run shelter for child victims of human trafficking that provides PANI-funded monthly subsidies to victims and care from full-time staff, including a trauma psychologist and health practitioner. (22,24) The organization announced in 2020 that it had received funding to build a new shelter for child victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation referred by PANI, and indicated the shelter would have space for 24 female survivors. (65,66)
Houses of Joy (Casas de la Alegría)†	Public-private alliance that provides culturally sensitive daycare and meals to Ngäbe Buglé , indigenous children whose parents work on coffee farms in Coto Brus. Aims to promote social inclusion and developmental opportunities for indigenous children and provide an alternative to child labor during the coffee harvest. (3,16,23,67-69) IMAS funds meals, caregiver salaries, and training; farm owners provide the land and classrooms, with financial contributions from UNICEF for building and teaching materials. (1,23,55,58,68) In 2020, Casas de Alegría initiated a cooperative expansion with Cooperativas de Las Americas and the EU to renovate facilities and incorporate home appliances, and to implement strategies for improving employment conditions for agricultural workers. (70,71)
Let's Get Ahead Program (Avancemos)†	IMAS program that provides monthly conditional cash transfers to low-income families to keep children in school and out of exploitative work. (2,30,72) In 2020, IMAS increased funding for all of its social programs by nearly 65 percent, including for the Avancemos program, which received over $49 million during the reporting period. The program served 163,434 students in 2020. (73) In addition, during the reporting period, IMAS conducted a survey of Avancemos participants to gauge perceptions of the program's effectiveness during the pandemic. (74)
USDOL-Funded Projects	Youth Pathways to Leadership, Learning, and Livelihoods in Costa Rica , $3 million project implemented by Youth Build International; (75) Promoting Apprenticeship as a Path for Youth Employment in Argentina, Costa Rica, and Kenya through Global Apprenticeships Network (GAN) National Networks , $3.3 million multi-country project that works with employers, government agencies, civil society organizations, and other actors to promote apprenticeships and other types of work-based training opportunities for vulnerable youth; (76) Implementing a Culture of Labor Compliance in Costa Rica's Agricultural Export Sector , $2 million project implemented by the Foundation for Peace and Democracy (FUNDAPEM). (77) For additional information, please see our website .

† Program is funded by the Government of Costa Rica.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (78,79)

Research indicates that Ngäbe Buglé, indigenous children in Costa Rica who migrate with their families to work seasonally on coffee farms, face additional challenges in accessing social services due to long distances to service providers, language barriers, and complications in obtaining required documents from government institutions. (3,14)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Costa Rica (Table II).

Table II. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
	Raise the minimum age for work to be commensurate with the compulsory age for education.	2020
Enforcement	Publish information on the number of inspections conducted at worksites, and of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2017 – 2020
	Allocate sufficient resources to ensure regular labor inspections in rural areas and the informal sector, including child labor inspections, particularly in agriculture.	2015 – 2020
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that the judiciary, prosecutors, municipal authorities, and the police have sufficient staff, training, and resources to investigate, prosecute, and convict perpetrators of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children, and identify victims of child trafficking and refer them to appropriate social services.	2017 – 2020
	Develop a mechanism to properly track human trafficking cases to improve enforcement and prevention efforts.	2019 – 2020
Coordination	Strengthen coordination and information sharing between institutions responsible for investigating child labor and providing social services to victims.	2015 – 2020
	Increase transportation and human resources for the Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker so that the office can improve program oversight.	2015 – 2020
Government Policies	Adopt and implement a new roadmap to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.	2020
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including children in rural areas, girls, LGBTI youth, children from indigenous and Afro-descendant communities, and migrant children.	2015 – 2020
	Improve access to social services, particularly for migrant, Ngäbe Buglé indigenous children in coffee-growing areas.	2015 – 2020

In 2020, Côte d'Ivoire made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government rescued 138 children from suspected traffickers, the Ministry of Women, Family, and Children created a team of social workers to identify victims of child labor, and the Ministry of Security and Interior created new units to investigate cases of child labor and human trafficking. In addition, as part of its COVID-19 pandemic response, the government established a fund for low-income families known to be vulnerable to child labor. Children in Côte d'Ivoire are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in the harvesting of cocoa and coffee, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, it did not impose penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor. In addition, labor inspectors are not authorized to assess penalties, and a lack of financial resources and personnel may have hindered labor law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Côte d'Ivoire are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in the harvesting of cocoa and coffee, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1,2) According to a Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey conducted in 2016, 21.5 percent of children ages 5 to 17 are engaged in hazardous work. (3) During the reporting period, NORC at the University of Chicago released a report detailing findings from a sectorally representative survey conducted in Côte d'Ivoire and Ghana during the cocoa harvesting season of 2018–2019. This report found an increase in child labor (and hazardous child labor) in cocoa production during the 10 year timeframe since the survey in 2008–2009. (4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Côte d'Ivoire. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	25.6 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	70.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	21.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		78.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS 5), 2016. (3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cocoa, including burning† and clearing fields;† cutting down trees† to expand cocoa plantations; spraying pesticides;† harvesting, drying, and fermenting cocoa beans; using sharp tools to break pods;† and transporting heavy loads† of cocoa pods and water (1,2,4,6-11)
	Production of cereals, pineapple, bananas, and coffee, including applying chemical fertilizers,† spraying pesticides,† cutting down trees,† and burning† and clearing fields† (2,6,12)
	Production of palm oil, cashews, honey, and rubber (1,2,11)
	Fishing, including deep sea diving;† repairing and hauling nets; and cleaning,† salting, drying, descaling, and selling fish (1,2,12)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of charcoal† (1,6,10)
	Forestry (11,13)
Industry	Mining,† including crushing and transporting stones, blasting rocks, digging, working underground, sieving, and extracting gold with mercury or cyanide (1,9,11,12,14)
	Manufacturing, including repairing automobiles (11,12)
	Construction,† activities unknown (12)
Services	Domestic work (2,3,9,11,12,15)
	Working in transportation and carrying goods† (1,6,9,11,12)
	Street vending and commerce (2,6,9,11,12,14)
	Work in restaurants (2,14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in mining, carpentry, construction, domestic work, street vending, restaurants, and agriculture, including in the production of cocoa, coffee, cotton, and rubber; each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,6,11)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (11,14)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (16)
	Forced begging as talibés by Koranic teachers, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (17)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children from Côte d'Ivoire are subjected to human trafficking for forced labor in domestic work within the country and North Africa. Children are also brought from neighboring West African countries to Côte d'Ivoire for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, including in begging, cocoa production, and artisanal mining. (2,6,7,15)

School is mandatory for children ages 6 to 16 in Côte d'Ivoire. Although the Law on Education provides for free education, students are often required to pay for textbooks, school fees, or uniforms, which may be prohibitive to some families. (2,11,18-21) In addition, birth registration identity documents are required for students to take entrance exams for secondary school, posing a barrier to continued education beyond primary level. (2,11,22) A shortage of teachers, poor school infrastructure, lack of transportation systems in rural areas, inadequate sanitation facilities, and violence have negatively impacted children's ability to attend school. (2) Research also suggests that some students are physically and sexually abused at school, which may deter some students from attending school. (2,11,20,21,23) According to the Ministry of National Education, more than one in four girls in Côte d'Ivoire does not attend primary school. (24) During the reporting period, from March 16 through May 10, schools in Côte d'Ivoire were closed to in-person learning as a response to the COVID-19 pandemic. (11) Results from the government's Child Labor Monitoring and Remediation System indicate that children working in hazardous working conditions increased during the reporting cycle, which is at least partially attributed to the pandemic. (25) Research showed that despite an upward spike in child labor during the partial government shutdown as a reaction to the pandemic, in cocoa producing areas the level of child labor returned to pre-pandemic levels at the end of the partial government shut down. (26) Research released during the reporting period showed that between 2008 and 2019, there were significant increases in cocoa production and during that time, child labor in high producing zones remained stable. However, in small- and medium-producing zones, child labor increased. During this time, there was an increase in children attending schools in cocoa-growing areas. (4) Results from the government's Child Labor Monitoring and Remediation System indicate that there was an increase in numbers of children working in hazardous working conditions during the reporting cycle, which is at least partially attributed to the partial lockdown that occurred during the pandemic. (4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Côte d'Ivoire has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 23.2 of the Labor Code; Article 16 of the Constitution (27,28)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 4 of the Prohibitions of Hazardous Work List (29)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 5–11 of the Prohibitions of Hazardous Work List; Articles 6 and 19 of the Prohibition of Trafficking and the Worst Forms of Child Labor Law (29,30)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 5 of the Constitution; Articles 7, 11–14, 20–23, and 26 of the Prohibition of Trafficking and the Worst Forms of Child Labor Law; Article 3 of the Labor Code (27,28,30)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 5 of the Constitution; Articles 11, 12, 20–22, and 26 of the Prohibition of Trafficking and the Worst Forms of Child Labor Law; Article 370 of the Penal Code; Articles 4.4 and 6 of the Anti-Trafficking Law (27,30-32)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 8, 9, 15, and 24–29 of the Prohibition of Trafficking and the Worst Forms of Child Labor Law; Articles 4.4 and 6 of the Anti-Trafficking Law (29,30,32)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 4 and 30 of the Prohibition of Trafficking and the Worst Forms of Child Labor Law (30)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 56.4 of the Armed Forces Code; Articles 7–8 and 18 of the Law Determining the Conditions for Entering the Military (33,34)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Article 56.4 of the Armed Forces Code (33)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 4 and 31 of the Prohibition of Trafficking and the Worst Forms of Child Labor Law (30)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 10 of the Constitution; Article 2.1 of the Law on Education (27,35,36)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 2 of the Law on Education (36)

* No conscription (34,37,38)

The civil code is being revised to include more specific designations of the minimum age at which certain types of work can be performed. (2)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Côte d'Ivoire

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Social Protection (MEPS)	Develops, proposes, and enforces all labor laws, including those related to child labor. (2,11,23) The Anti-Trafficking Unit, a Sub-Directorate, and the Ministry of Women, Family, and Children provide support to victims of child trafficking and other forms of child labor. (2,15) MEPS has authority over the child labor monitoring system, Système d'Observation et de Suivi du Travail des Enfants en Côte d'Ivoire (SOSTECI), which enables communities to collect and analyze statistical data on the worst forms of child labor. (2,9,11,12) The General Labor Directorate in Abidjan coordinates the regional offices and their efforts to combat child labor. (11,16,39)
Ministry of the Interior and Security*	Through its Anti-Trafficking Unit, leads efforts to enforce criminal laws against child trafficking. Through its Brigades Mondaine (Vice Squads), combats commercial sexual exploitation, including the exploitation of children. (2) Through its Unit for Combating Transnational Organized Crime, supports UNODC's West Africa Coast Initiative, which aims to improve cross-border cooperation to combat crimes, including human trafficking. (37,40) In June 2020, the Ministry of Interior and Security established six special police units, called Anti-Child Trafficking and Juvenile Delinquency Division units—or La Sous-direction de la Police Criminelle chargée de la Lutte Contre la Traite d'Enfants et la Délinquance Juvenile (SDLTEDJ)—to deploy across the country and investigate child labor and child trafficking cases. Each unit consists of 10–20 officers, with 2 motorcycles, a 4-wheel drive vehicle, computers, and office materials. (11) During the reporting period, these units received 2-to-3 weeks of specialized training in Abidjan before deploying to these cities where child labor is known to occur: San Pedro, Soubré, Bouaké, Bondoukou, Korhogo, and Man. (11,14)
Ministry of Defense	Through its National Gendarmerie, investigates child labor violations in rural areas where there is no police presence. (2)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Investigates and prosecutes crimes related to child labor, including its worst forms. Through its Directorate of Judicial Protection of Childhood and Youth, assists with investigations and implements the ministry's child protection policy. (2) The Ministry of Justice and Human Rights is charged with rehabilitating children who have been detained or arrested. (11)
Ministry of Women, Family, and Children	Leads the government's efforts to combat human trafficking and implements a National Policy on Child Protection. (2,41) Provides support to child labor victims in coordination with MEPS. (2,42) During the reporting period, created a "street team" of social workers to identify victims of child labor. (11) Also continued to run specialized shelters to support victims of human trafficking, as well as the hotline (116), which reportedly received 43,456 calls reporting cases of child exploitation or violence against children. (11)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

On December 15, 2020, the Ministry of Security and Civil Protection and the Ministry of Territorial Administration and Decentralization were combined into the new Ministry of the Interior and Security. (11)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Côte d'Ivoire took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment and Social Protection (MEPS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties for violations.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† Data are from January 1, 2019 to September 30, 2019. (2)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Côte d'Ivoire's workforce, which includes approximately 8,747,000 workers. (45) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Côte d'Ivoire would employ about 584 labor inspectors. (45,46) Labor inspectors are also tasked with dispute conciliation, which may detract from their primary duties of inspection. (28,47) The labor inspectorate suffers from a lack of resources, including insufficient staff. (23,28) While some labor inspections are done in the informal sector, the majority of the inspections are done in the formal sector where child labor is less likely to occur. (11,48,49)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Côte d'Ivoire took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (2)	N/A (11)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (2)	Yes (11)
Number of Investigations	131 (2)	500 (11)
Number of Violations Found	218 (2)	298 (11)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	143 (2)	298 (11)
Number of Convictions	15 (2)	Unknown (11)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (2)	0 (11)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (2)	Yes (11)

Despite an increase in vehicles and computers, and an increase in the number of violations identified and prosecutions initiated, the Anti-Trafficking Unit continued to lack the resources and personnel to adequately enforce criminal child labor laws throughout the country. (7,49,50) The government did not provide any additional details regarding the conviction of individual defendants nor the imposition of penalties. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination of data collection among ministries and regions.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Monitoring Committee on Actions to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor (CNS)	Supervises, monitors, and evaluates all government activities related to child labor and child trafficking, including making policy recommendations and harmonizing laws with international conventions. (2,49,50) Chaired by the First Lady of Côte d'Ivoire and comprises 16 international and domestic partners. (2,14,15,49,51) During the reporting period, CNS continued to implement National Action Plan activities and provided an additional $200,000 (100 million CFA) to SDLTEDJ. (11,14)
Inter-Ministerial Committee on the Fight Against Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor	Designs, coordinates, and implements all government actions to combat the worst forms of child labor, and monitors relevant programs implemented by partner organizations. (52,49,51,53) Chaired by MEPS, includes representatives from 12 other ministries. (15,49,51,53) Research was unable to determine whether the Inter-Ministerial Committee on the Fight Against Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor was active during the reporting period. (11)
National Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking (CNLTP)	Formed in support of the 2016 Anti-Trafficking Law and chaired by the Prime Minister; aims to fight human trafficking throughout Côte d'Ivoire. Oversees the implementation of the National Action Plan and Strategy Against Human Trafficking, coordinates government efforts, and monitors implementation of all projects related to human trafficking. (54) Includes representation at the local level through dedicated units charged with implementing the National Action Plan and Strategy Against Human Trafficking. (54,55) The Ministry of Women, Family, and Children serves as the executive secretariat and the committee comprises 13 ministries. (16) In February 2020, the CNLTP and the Police Unit charged with Combating Transnational Crimes ( L'Unité de Lutte Contre la Criminalité Transnationale , or UCT) with technical and financial assistance from UNODC, rescued 138 child victims of trafficking and forced labor in Abengourou, a city near the Ghanaian border. (11)
Office of the First Lady	Engages with international partners on child labor issues in the cocoa trade and puts pressure on industry sourcing cocoa from Côte d'Ivoire to increase traceability. (56,57) The Ivorian First Lady's office remains the key driver of the government's anti-trafficking efforts. (56) During the reporting period, the government closed schools from March to May to attempt to limit transmission of COVID-19. Due to concerns that this closure would result in an increase in child labor, the Ivorian First Lady issued a communiqué in April 2020 urging authorities to remain vigilant against child labor and warning parents not to use the school closure as a pretext to put their children to work. (14)

Research indicates that the First Lady's interest in combating child labor and child trafficking motivated ministries and law enforcement agencies to increase their anti-trafficking efforts. International organizations praised the First Lady for marshaling resources to fight child labor and child trafficking, and for the visibility she brought to these issues. (14) Coordination of data collection among ministries and among different regions remains a challenge. (16)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including funding and mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor (2019–2021)	Coordinated by CNS and the Inter-Ministerial Committee to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor, aims to significantly reduce the number of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor by drawing on best practices and building on lessons learned from the implementation of previous national action plans. Priorities include increasing efforts to mobilize resources at the national level, reinforcing regional cooperation and public-private partnerships, incorporating worst forms of child labor considerations into national and sector-specific programming, and reinforcing the monitoring and evaluation of the national strategy for the fight against human trafficking and the worst forms of child labor. (58) During the reporting period, the government continued to implement this plan with aid from national and international NGOs, UNICEF, and ILO. The 2019–2021 NAP is still not fully funded, but the government has not disclosed the shortfall. (11)
2010 Declaration of Joint Action to Support the Implementation of the Harkin-Engel Protocol (2010 Declaration) and Its Accompanying Framework of Action	Joint declaration by the Governments of Ghana, Côte d'Ivoire, and the United States, as well as the International Chocolate and Cocoa Industry. (52,59,60) Provides key stakeholders with resources and facilitates coordination of efforts to reduce the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-producing areas. Aims to ensure that all project efforts implemented under the Declaration and Framework align with Côte d'Ivoire's national action plans to promote coherence and sustainability. (52,59-61) Governments of Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire; USDOL-funded projects; and some industry-funded projects carried out activities that support the spirit of this policy during the reporting period. The annual Child Labor in Cocoa Coordinating Group meeting was postponed from November 2020 to a later date. (11)

Policy	Description
Policies Involving SOSTECl	Aim to strengthen and expand SOSTECl. Include partnership agreement between the International Cocoa Initiative and CNS in support of the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor. (2) The Decent Work Country Program (2017–2020), in collaboration with ILO, aimed to improve working conditions, strengthen SOSTECl, and combat the worst forms of child labor. (62,63) The National Development Plan (2016–2020) allocated almost $6.1 million over 5 years to conduct diagnostic studies on child labor and child trafficking, construct three child protection centers, and develop a national action plan to combat human trafficking, particularly of girls. (64) During the reporting period, the government continued to support SOSTECl to detect and provide remediation support to children engaged in child labor. (11)
National Action Plan and Strategy Against Human Trafficking (2016–2020)	With the support of UNODC and coordinated by CNLTP, $14.8 million project that aimed to prevent human trafficking, expand social services for victims by improving physical infrastructure, provide training for law enforcement personnel and other stakeholders, promote coordination, and collect data on human trafficking. (58,65,66) During the reporting period, research shows projects continued to take place in support of this plan. Projects included implementing the Child Labor Monitoring and Remediation System, training of government counterparts, and support to public-private coordination efforts. (11)
Labor Inspection Strategy (2019–2021)	Through the Ministry of Employment and Social Protection with assistance from ILO, aims to enable the government to ensure the application of legal provisions for the improvement of working conditions and the removal of children from work through the inspection of worksites, the provision of counseling, and monitoring. (13,48) In 2020, undertook activities related to building the capacity of the inspectors, monitoring of inspection units, and raising public awareness.
Compulsory Education Policy	In support of the Law on Education, aims to achieve 100 percent enrollment in primary school by 2020 and 100 percent enrollment in junior high by 2025. (18) The government focused on increasing school enrollment in parts of the country where child labor is prevalent, such as in cocoa-growing regions. School enrollment of children in cocoa-growing regions increased from 59 percent in the 2008–2009 academic year to 85 percent in the 2018–2019 academic year. (10,11) In 2020, the government reported transferring $157 million (84 billion CFA)—up from $22.3 million (12 billion CFA) in 2017—of the education budget for school construction to local governments, communities, regional councils, and districts. (11) However, there remains insufficient classroom space in rural areas for the number of students enrolled. During the reporting period, UNICEF estimated the country needs another 30,000 classrooms. (11)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (19,20)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Industry-Funded Projects	Aim to increase sustainability in the cocoa sector; improve farmer livelihoods and access to education – including increasing access to education opportunities for children – and combat the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-growing areas. Some projects support the World Cocoa Foundation's CocoaAction (2014–2020) strategy and the spirit of the 2010 Declaration. (61,67,68) In November 2017, the governments of Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire signed an agreement to fight deforestation and protect the cocoa supply chain. During the reporting period, private industry continued to implement the Cocoa and Forests Initiative to this end. (69) A study released in July 2020 by the International Cocoa Initiative, a Swiss-based non-profit foundation funded by chocolate and cocoa companies, found that child labor in the cocoa sector had increased during the pandemic. (14,25)
Programs to Promote Education†	Aim to raise school attendance rates in rural areas, particularly among girls, by providing school meals, facilitating birth registration, and constructing community schools ( écoles de proximité ). Include the $42.5 million, WFP-funded Integrated Program for Sustainable School Feeding; the Ministry of National Education School Feeding Program; (70) the McGovern-Dole School Feeding Program, a $25 million joint initiative between WFP and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, in coordination with the Ministry of National Education, that benefited approximately 132,362 school children in FY 2020; (71) and the Millennium Challenge Corporation Compact Skills for Employability and Productivity Project, in year 2 of 5 year compact that provides $118 million for secondary education and $37 million for Technical and Vocational Education Project (TVET). (72) Research was unable to determine whether activities took place in 2020 for TVET.

Côte d'Ivoire

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
World Bank-Funded Projects	Aim to improve access to education and provide poverty relief. Include: Second Fiscal Management, Education, Energy and Cocoa Reforms Development Policy Operation (2017–2020), closed on June 30, 2020; a $125 million project that closely aligned with the 2016–2020 National Development Plan; Productive Social Safety Net (2015–2020), which disbursed cash transfers to 100,000 households in 2020 and has since been extended to 2024; and a $50 million cash transfer project to poor households in the Central, Northern, and Western regions of Côte d'Ivoire. (73-75)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects in cocoa-growing areas of Côte d'Ivoire and Ghana aimed to eliminate child labor through research, monitoring, enforcement, and implementation and expansion of SOSTECl. These projects include: FLIP : $1,490,318 added to Verite-implemented project to expand work into Côte d'Ivoire in 2020. (76) CACAO : Implemented by Save the Children, $4,000,000 awarded in December, 2020. (77) Additional information is available on the USDOL website .

† Program is funded by the Government of Côte d'Ivoire.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (78)

During the reporting period, the government undertook various activities, such as awareness-raising campaigns; construction of classrooms, school canteens, including providing 119,527 students with lunch, and housing for teachers; construction of health facilities and housing for nurses; and donations of school kits and personal protective equipment to prevent transmission of COVID-19. (11) In addition, the government continued to facilitate the delivery of birth certificates. (11)

Despite an increase in activities, the scope of existing programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem in Côte d'Ivoire. (2) Current programming is not expansive enough, evidenced by the fact the child labor prevalence rate has not declined. The industry funded NORC report-also released in October 2020 - found that programs like the Child labor monitoring and remediation system (CLMRS), access to quality to education, programs to increase farmer yields and household income need to be scaled and expanded to impact more families. (4)

In April 2020, as part of its pandemic response, the government established a support fund for low-income families known to be more vulnerable to the conditions that often engender child labor. As of December 30, the government reported spending $26.9 million (14.5 billion CFA) in direct cash transfers to support 194,245 households. (11)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Côte d'Ivoire (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspectorate to authorize and assess penalties.	2014 – 2020
	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the number of child labor violations found and whether penalties were imposed or collected.	2016 – 2020
	Ensure that labor inspectorates and criminal law enforcement agencies receive a sufficient amount of funding to conduct inspections and investigations throughout the country, including in the informal sector.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies receive the resources, personnel, and training needed to adequately enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2018 – 2020
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2020
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of convictions and penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2019 – 2020
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are active and are able to carry out their mandates.	2017 – 2020

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Ensure that the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor is fully funded and all funds are disbursed.	2019 – 2020
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into all relevant policies.	2013 – 2020
Social Programs	Improve access to education by eliminating all school-related fees; improving the accessibility of schools; ensuring that schools are free of physical and sexual abuse; and increasing the number of teachers, sanitation facilities, and schools, particularly in rural areas. Ensure that all children have access to birth registration and identity documents.	2011 – 2020
	Ensure that social programs to address child labor are active and report activities.	2020
	Expand existing programs and institute new ones aimed at addressing the full scope of the child labor problem in Côte d'Ivoire.	2009 – 2020
	Ensure that victims of the worst forms of child labor are able to access social services throughout the country.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that there are sufficient classrooms available for all students enrolled.	2020

In 2020, Djibouti made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor unveiled a national labor inspection strategy, and for the first time, the labor inspectorate targeted sectors and geographical areas where children are at risk of child labor, including its worst forms. The Ministry of Education and Professional Training also maintained continuity of education for Djibouti's most vulnerable children, including refugees, following nationwide school closures to contain the COVID-19 pandemic. However, children in Djibouti are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in street work. Minimum age provisions apply only to children with a formal employment contract, which does not comply with international standards. Law enforcement efforts are also inadequate to prevent and combat child labor, in part because labor inspectors lack the authority to assess penalties. In addition, the government did not make adequate efforts to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor due to lack of financial and human resource allocations and reporting mechanisms.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Djibouti are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in street work. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Djibouti.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	12.3 (23,693)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	67.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	10.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		63.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2020, published by the UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3 (MICS 3), 2006. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Caring for livestock, including goats and cattle (6)
Services	Domestic work† (2)
	Street work, such as shining shoes, washing and guarding cars, cleaning storefronts, sorting merchandise, collecting garbage, begging, and selling items (2,7,8)
	Working in restaurants, small shops, and family businesses (2)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,7-9)
	Forced domestic work and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,7-9)
	Use in illicit activities, including the selling of marijuana (6)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Reports suggest that children, including undocumented migrant girls, are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation in Djibouti City and along the Ethiopia-Djibouti trucking corridor. (7,10) Djibouti is also host to the largest number of foreign military installations in the world, including thousands of military personnel and security contractors. This foreign military presence heightens the risks of commercial sexual exploitation of girls. (11) Djibouti is a heavily trafficked transit country for mixed-migration flows from Ethiopia, Yemen, the East Africa region, and the Arabian Peninsula. In 2019, roughly 200,000 migrants (600–1,000 per day) transited through the country, 47 percent of whom were children. (12-14) Djibouti City alone hosted more than 30,000 refugees and asylum seekers and 150,000 people on the move. (12,13,15) Border closures in Ethiopia and Yemen in the wake of the pandemic cut off well-travelled migration routes. Many migrants, including children, in transit to the Arabian Peninsula border were stranded in Djibouti. (12,16)

Nationwide school closures to contain the pandemic disrupted education for at least 138,000 children. Close to 40 percent of these children lacked access to distance learning equipment. (3) Children in refugee camps attend schools located within the camps. (3) Some undocumented children were allowed to attend school but could not sit for exams. Many undocumented migrant or street children in Djibouti City do not have access to public education. (3) In addition, Djibouti requires national birth certificates or UNHCR refugee documentation to graduate, which may serve as a disincentive for undocumented children to attend school, and, as a result, they remain vulnerable to exploitation. (2) They may be allowed to attend public schools outside the camps if they are able to furnish refugee documents. Private schools are out of reach for these children because they cannot afford to pay the tuition fees. (3) Children in rural areas, where access to documentation is limited, also face obstacles to attaining birth certificates. (2)

Djibouti's primary school enrollment rate increased from 75 percent to 92 percent between 2009 and 2019. (12) However, enrollment rates are lower for girls and for all children living in rural or impoverished areas, making these children more vulnerable to child labor. (17) Although primary and middle schools are tuition free, other school-related expenses may prevent children from attending school. (18,19) Despite the passage of a National Refugee Law in 2017, which guarantees education as a fundamental right to refugees and asylum seekers lawfully residing in Djibouti, over 40 percent of refugees ages 6 to 16 were not enrolled in school. (13,14,20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Djibouti has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Djibouti's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 5 of the Labor Code (21)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 108 and 110 of the Labor Code (21)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 110 of the Labor Code (21)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2 and 290 of the Labor Code; Article 23 of the Law Regarding Terrorism and Other Serious Crimes (21,22)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 1 of the Law on the Fight Against the Trafficking of Persons and the Illegal Smuggling of Migrants; Article 23 of the Law Regarding Terrorism and Other Serious Crimes (22,23)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 394, 396, and 462–463 of the Penal Code; Articles 1 and 8 of the Law on the Fight Against the Trafficking of Persons and the Illegal Smuggling of Migrants (23,24)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 355–356 and 461 of the Penal Code (24)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 1 of the National Army Amendment Decree (25)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 149–151 and 461 of the Penal Code (24)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 4 and 14 of the Law on the Orientation of the Education System (26)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Law on the Orientation of the Education System (26)

* No conscription (27)

The Labor Code's minimum age provision applies only to children who perform work under a formal employment agreement, which does not conform to international standards requiring the protection of all children under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (21,24,28,29) Djibouti's hazardous work provision is also incomplete. Although the Labor Code prohibits the employment of children between the ages of 16 and 18 in domestic work, hotels, and bars, Article 111 calls for the creation of a more complete hazardous work list, which has not been adopted. (21,24,29-31) Furthermore, laws do not specifically criminalize the offering or procuring of child for pornographic performances or the use of a child for prostitution. (23,24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces all labor laws, including child labor laws and regulations. (8) Through its General Inspectorate of Labor and Social Laws (GILSL), regulates youth employment. (2,28)
Djibouti National Police, including the Brigade for Minors	Enforce criminal laws and investigate crimes related to child labor. (8) During the reporting period, the government created a specialized office within the National Directorate of the Police to coordinate migration issues, including trafficking in persons. The National Police also operated an anti-vice and minor protection squad, the Brigade for Minors, to handle crime committed by children. (2,3,32)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes child labor cases referred by MOL. (8)
National Commission on Human Rights	Receives complaints and investigates cases of human rights violations, including child labor. (8,33) Assists victims in obtaining legal aid to prosecute violators. (33)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in Djibouti took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Due to the pandemic, labor inspections were restricted to Djibouti City. Thus while the MOL's General Inspectorate of Labor and Social Laws (GILSL) normally conducts site visits in al-Sabieh, Dikhil, Tadjourah, and Obock, labor inspectors did not target these regions in 2020. (3) Nevertheless, for the first time, the GILSL targeted sectors in which children are at risk of child labor, including in construction, transport, trade, hotels, and restaurants. (3) During the reporting period, GILSL also inspected business in public works, transportation and warehouses, banks, and market services. (3) Inspectors removed six children as a result of an inspection. The government did not indicate whether these children received social services or not. (3)

In 2020, three MOL officials underwent workplace health and security training at the Arab Labor Organization, and 18 controllers completed a 1-year diploma course at the National Institute of Public Administration. (3) MOL requires additional offices and equipment for effective regional inspection coverage. The inauguration of a new MOL building during the reporting period is expected to address some of these concerns. (3) The government also made efforts to publicize its laws on child labor. To this end, the MOL continued to publish notices in local newspapers reminding businesses that child labor is strictly forbidden in Djibouti. (3) MOL also published its 2020–2024 labor inspection plan, which assesses the current number of labor inspection personnel as insufficient to cover the entire country. (3) The GILSL currently employs 30 inspectors and controllers, and plans to hire an additional 20 controllers by the end of 2024. (2,3)

Labor inspections are not routinely scheduled. They are carried out in reaction to repeated or serious complaints, and are limited to the formal sector, despite the fact that the majority of child labor violations occur in the informal sector. (2) The labor inspectorate is also not able to assess penalties. (2) Finally, although a mechanism for filing and responding to labor complaints exists, reports indicate that it is inefficient and opaque. (2) MOL did not issue any violations, penalties, or fines for child labor in 2020. (3)

The government does not publish data on child labor violations. Funding for the GILSL reportedly increased in 2020, but the government did not provide budget figures for this report. (3,34)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in Djibouti took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Djibouti National Police that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including prosecution planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (2)	Unknown (3)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (2)	N/A (3)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (2)	Unknown (3)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (2)	30 (3)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (2)	2 (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (2)	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (2)	Unknown (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (2)	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (2)	Yes (3)

During the reporting period, the government dedicated additional resources to the protection of vulnerable populations. (3) The police continued to make periodic arrests on suspicion of human trafficking for labor or commercial sexual exploitation of minors. Police also maintained their presence along key child trafficking corridors, particularly along the Siesta Beach road in Djibouti City. (35) However, due to procedural errors made in the investigation phase, a number of cases were ultimately not prosecutable. (35)

Djibouti maintains a referral mechanism for victims of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, or abandonment, but not for children found in other types of child labor. The government does not publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts. (2) NGOs communicate human trafficking indicators to the police, who refer these cases to the prosecutor's office. (6,29,35) The NGO Caritas International implements separate memorandums of understanding with the Ministry of Women and Family and the National Commission of Human Rights. (3,35) During the reporting period, a youth judge regularly visited Caritas facilities to provide counselling. The government also provided lawyers pro bono to represent unaccompanied children in court. (3) In addition, the government allocated the Ministry of Women and Family Affairs a plot of land to build a shelter and counseling center for women and children who are victims of violence. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor outside the scope of human trafficking.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Anti-Trafficking Working Group	Coordinates efforts to combat human trafficking through the development of a collaboration and outreach strategy focusing on the operationalization of the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2015–2022). The inter-agency working group is led by the Ministry of Justice, and includes representatives from the MOL and the Ministry of the Interior. (1,36) The Anti-Trafficking Working Group did not meet regularly due to the pandemic, disrupting intra-agency coordination. The working group attempted to host video conference meetings after the 4 month government lockdown, but was not successful due to low participation. (3,32) Low participation rates precipitated a steep drop in the number of human trafficking cases investigated and prosecuted throughout the year. (3)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Council for Children	Coordinates, implements, and monitors child protection policies and programs. Guides and defines government policy on child protection, including efforts to implement the Convention on the Rights of the Child. (37) Led by the Prime Minister and includes eight other agencies, representatives from NGOs, the private sector, and elected officials. (38) Advocates for (1) newborn refugees and migrants to receive birth certificates; (2) education under governmental programs for refugees and asylum seekers; and (3) family reunification for unaccompanied migrant minors. (6) Research was unable to determine whether the Council was active in 2020.
Ministry of Women and Family	Creates child protection policies, and coordinates their implementation. The ministry also develops and implements programs to combat all forms of violence against children. (2,3) Through its National Policy for Children in Djibouti, focuses on the survival, development, protection, and participation of children. (2,35) The working group includes representatives from the Ministry of Justice, the National Police/Gendarmerie, the Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Health, the National Women's Union, the infant orphanage Daryel, and the National Agency for the Disabled, all of which coordinate efforts on the care of children at risk and child victims of violence. Despite challenges associated with the pandemic, the Ministry of Women and Family continued to hold regular meetings to coordinate efforts on child protection. (3) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Women and Family also undertook, in collaboration with the MOL and the Secretary of State for Youth and Sports, a 3 day onsite public awareness campaign to warn traders and entrepreneurs in Djibouti City against the use of minors in the workplace. (3)

Although the government has established an Anti-Trafficking Working Group, research did not find evidence that the government coordinates efforts to address other forms of child labor, including street work.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2015–2022)	Aims to strengthen the legislative framework to combat human trafficking, protect and assist human trafficking victims, and establish a national referral mechanism between law enforcement officials and social services providers. (39) The Anti-Trafficking Working Group, which coordinates the action plan's implementation, did not meet regularly due to the pandemic. (3)
Government of Djibouti Policies	Includes the National Policy for Children in Djibouti (2018–2022), which sets out fundamental rights for children, including access to basic social services and mobilizes national resources toward these ends. (40) The National Strategic Action Plan for Children in Djibouti, which was renewed in 2017, provides political and strategic guidelines for implementing the country's child protection policy. (41) The National Education Plan (2017–2020) aimed to expand preschool education opportunities for children in underserved regions, while reforming secondary, technical, and vocational education nationwide. The plan targeted a 100 percent primary enrollment rate, with a 90 percent enrollment rate for children ages 11 to 14. (40,42) The National Social Protection Strategy (2018–2022) seeks to broaden social protections for vulnerable children and youth. (40) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement these policies during the reporting period.
UNDAF (2018–2022)	Focuses primarily on programs that build capacity for victim recognition and protection, and assists the government in the development of its "Vision 2035" plan, which is aligned with the UN 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. The government has launched or expanded several new policies and programs under this framework, including a revised Social Protection Strategy. (34,40)

In 2020, and for the fifth consecutive year, the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons was not operational. During the reporting period, the task force extended the implementation period for two more years, to 2022. (3) Research was unable to determine whether existing policies address other forms of child labor, including street and domestic work.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Ministry of Women and the Family Programs	Includes the Social Assistance Program (2016–present), which provides children and their families in vulnerable communities with education and in-kind support. Between 2016 and 2019, 3,086 families benefited from food aid and 500 school kits were distributed. (40) Similarly, the Support Project for Girls and Women in Precarious Situations (2017–present) is a multi-sectoral program aimed at reducing girls' economic and social vulnerability through education and training. (40) The Country Strategic Option Program (2019–2024) is a rural poverty-reduction program established under Djibouti's revised Social Protection Strategy. (40,43) Djibouti's Support Program for Children with Academic Difficulties, established in 2017, aims to provide academic support for children from low-income families. (40) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement these social programs during the reporting period.
Comprehensive Refugee Response Framework	Government commitment, under the UNHCR, to provide refugees with access to education, healthcare, employment, and income generation. During the reporting period, the Ministry of Social Affairs and Solidarity collaborated with UNHCR to launch a biometric registration and social assistance campaign for urban refugees. (3) These registered populations will receive food aid. The operation covers 1,200 urban and vulnerable refugee households living in Djibouti City and affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. (3,12,44) IOM's Assisted Voluntary Return and Reintegration (VARR)* supported NGOs, including SOS Children Village and Caritas Djibouti, in hosting migrant street children in 2020. (32) Government agencies and law enforcement, the Ethiopian embassy in Djibouti, and IOM coordinated efforts through VARR to facilitate the voluntary return of 537 migrants, including 102 minors, 412 to their country of origin. The large majority of returnees were Ethiopian. (32) IOM funded the construction of facilities that host and provide services to vulnerable children, including victims of human trafficking referred by state and non-state services, many of whom previously slept on the street or at Siesta Beach. (16,35) Caritas's overnight shelter opened in June 2019, and has since hosted 137 children. (35)
UNICEF-Funded Projects	In collaboration with the Government of Djibouti through the National Office for Assistance to Refugees and Affected Populations, the Humanitarian Action for Children Project and the UNICEF Country Program promote access to quality education for children, especially from rural and poor urban areas; increase birth registration; and provide support for orphans and vulnerable children. (8,46) UNICEF also supported 440 migrant street children, providing literacy and vocational training and other social services, and funded the training of the newly created Brigade for Minors within the Police Department. (2,13) In March 2020, the Minister of Social Affairs and Solidarity (MASS) and the UNICEF Resident Representative signed a memorandum of understanding for a 2020–2021 national social protection strategy. The strategy defines collaboration between the two parties in capacity-building for social workers, care of vulnerable families, and child protection. (3) In May 2020, MASS and UNICEF signed the biannual work plan for development and child protection for the period 2020–2021. The aim is to consolidate achievements to date and focus on ensuring the sustainability of care of children from vulnerable families through integrated and multi-sectoral services. (3)
World Bank-Funded Programs	The Integrated Cash Transfer and Human Capital Project (2019–2022) seeks to expand the social safety net system and provide basic services in targeted poor communities. (2,47,48) The Expanding Opportunities for Learning Project (2019–2024), a $28 million project, supports Djibouti's efforts to expand access to quality education for 35,000 at-risk or underserved children, including girls, refugees, and disabled students. The Government of Djibouti and the International Development Association (IDA) agreed to co-finance the program, which aims to expand access to and improve retention in primary and lower secondary education for disadvantaged and vulnerable population groups. The project also plans to build the capacity of teachers and administrators in underserved areas. (14,49-51) During the reporting period, the World Bank coordinated efforts to expand education opportunities with the Global Partnership for Education and other implementing partners. (49-51) In December 2020, the World Bank approved a $30 million IDA grant to improve living conditions and socio-economic inclusion of Djibouti's most vulnerable host communities and refugees, including children. (3)
WFP Djibouti Country Strategic Plan (2020–2024)*	Supports the government's priorities for achieving food and nutrition security through activities that constitute a significant shift from previous WFP programs: stronger partnerships to strengthen national capacity in school feeding, nutrition, social protection, emergency preparedness, agricultural production support for rural and urban women and men equitably, vocational training for peace, and prosperity and supply chain management. (3,52) It provides for a gradual transition from WFP's previous activities by focusing on support for nationally led social protection programming. Provided social protection, human capital development, and resilience programming. (52-54) Replaces the WFP's Djibouti Transitional Interim Country Strategic Plan. (52,54) In December 2020, provided unconditional in-kind food distributions and cash-based transfers to 71,874 refugees, asylum seekers, migrants, and vulnerable households in rural and urban areas. The WFP also supported the National Family Solidarity Program†. The program, implemented by the State Secretariat for National Solidarity, establishes cash transfers to support Djiboutian households in extreme poverty. (45,55)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Djibouti.

‡ The government had other programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (27,56,57)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Government of Djibouti, in line with the 2017 Djibouti Declaration on Refugee Education, is working to implement its commitment to integrate child refugees into its national education system. (14,20,58,59) Nevertheless, research found no evidence of programs to assist children involved in domestic work, street work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (29) There are no official government-run shelters to assist child victims. The government has authorized NGOs to host migrant street children and orphans overnight, but it does not provide support or services to assist in these efforts. (6,9) In 2020, the Ministry of Education and Professional Training collaborated with international partners to maintain continuity of education for Djibouti's most vulnerable children, including refugees, unaccompanied and separated children, those in remote areas, and children with disabilities. (3)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Djibouti (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children are afforded minimum age for work protections under the law, including children working outside formal employment relationships.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use of children in prostitution and the procuring or offering of a child for pornographic performances.	2012 – 2020
	Ensure that hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive.	2009 – 2020
Enforcement	Ensure that all regions are targeted for labor inspections, that the labor inspectorate has the necessary equipment for regional inspection coverage, and that labor inspections are conducted routinely.	2017 – 2020
	Employ inspectors or controllers dedicated to child labor law enforcement, and ensure that inspections target the informal sector, in which the majority of child labor occurs.	2018 – 2020
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2019 – 2020
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by allowing inspectors to assess penalties.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that a labor complaint mechanism exists, and that it is effective and transparent.	2010 – 2020
	Ensure that a criminal referral mechanism exists for all forms of child labor and that it is efficient and transparent.	2018 – 2020
	Provide the necessary resources, including training, for the Djibouti National Police to make viable referrals for the prosecution of child labor-related violations.	2017 – 2020
	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat all forms of child labor and ensure existing mechanisms function as mandated.	2009 – 2020
Government Policies	Take concrete steps to combat child trafficking by implementing the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons.	2017 – 2020
	Implement existing policies to address all forms child labor, including street and domestic work.	2016 – 2020
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children in rural areas, including girls, by removing school-related expenses.	2015 – 2020
	Ensure that all children, including refugees and asylum seekers, have access to education by removing requirements for national birth certificates or UNHCR refugee documentation to attend school.	2019 – 2020
	Implement programs to specifically address children involved in domestic work, street work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2020

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Dominica, in 2020 the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Dominica's legal framework does not protect children from exploitative work outside of the school year, and the government has not determined the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. The country also lacks prohibitions against the use of children in pornography, or pornographic performances, and the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. During the reporting period, the government did not respond to requests for information related to its efforts to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Dominica. (1-3)

No current survey data on the child labor situation in Dominica are available. (1-3)

In 2020, due to the COVID-19 pandemic, there were limited school closures, but generally, access to education continued. (3) Children from the Kalinago community face barriers to secondary education that could make them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Because there is no secondary school in the Kalinago territory, students encounter transportation and social integration challenges as they travel outside of the territory to attend school. (1,3,4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Dominica has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in Dominica's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for hazardous work.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 2 and 46 of the Education Act 1997 (5)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Article 4 of the Constitution; Sections 2, 8, 10, and 13 of the Transnational Organized Crime (Prevention and Control) Act (6,7)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Sections 2, 8, 10, and 13 of the Transnational Organized Crime (Prevention and Control) Act (7)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 2, 8, 10, and 13 of the Transnational Organized Crime (Prevention and Control) Act; Article 18 of the Sexual Offenses Act (7,8)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 2 of the Education Act 1997 (5)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 15 of the Education Act 1997 (5)

† No standing military (9)

Article 46 of the Education Act prohibits the employment of children ages 5 to 16 during the school year, but allows students ages 14 and older to work during school vacations or in school-sponsored employment training programs without defining the conditions, specific activities, or number of hours permissible for light work. (5)

Pursuant to Section 7(1) of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act, children under age 18 are prohibited from working at night, unless they are working with family members. (11) The law does not otherwise prohibit the employment of children in work that is likely to jeopardize their health, safety, or morals. (10, 11) Specifically, Dominica does not have national laws or regulations that define the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (7) The government also has not established a minimum age for hazardous work. Dominica's laws related to forced labor are not sufficient because they do not criminally prohibit forced labor except when it results from human trafficking. In addition, laws related to child trafficking are not sufficient because they are limited to international human trafficking. (7) The government has not enacted laws or regulations explicitly prohibiting the use of children in pornography, pornographic performances, or illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. (10)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Division, Ministry of Justice, Immigration and National Security	Conducts inspections and enforces laws related to child labor. Authorized to conduct unannounced inspections at any location with employees and to take legal action against employers violating child labor laws. (3,10) Reports to police and social services those cases in which children are found in exploitative labor situations. (10)
Ministry of Health and Social Services	Conducts inspections and enforces laws related to child labor. Reports to police those cases in which children are found in exploitative labor situations. (3,10) Provides social services, including education, housing, counseling, and financial aid, to children in child labor cases. (10)
Police Force	Enforces criminal laws, including those related to child labor. (1,3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including with implementation.

Table 4. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Basic Needs Trust Fund	Caribbean Development Bank-implemented program supervised by the Ministry for Ecclesiastical Affairs, Family, and Gender Affairs that aims to reduce poverty through livelihood services, improved infrastructure, capacity-building projects, and technical services. (12)
Education Trust Fund† and School Textbook Provision Scheme†	The Education Trust Fund is a government-funded program implemented by the Ministry of Education and Human Resource Development that provides financial assistance for textbooks, transportation, registration, and exam fees to students in secondary school who would otherwise be unable to complete their education. (13)
School Feeding Program†	Government-funded program implemented by the Ministry of Education and Human Resource Development that provides lunch to primary school students in targeted areas. (14)
Climate Resilience Agency of Dominica (CREAD) and Climate Resilience Act	Launched in 2018 in partnership with the Clinton Foundation, CREAD funds, designs, procures, implements, and coordinates climate resilience projects, which include rebuilding and repairing major roads and infrastructure, including approximately 20 schools and 27 health facilities damaged by Hurricane Maria in 2017, and providing support for 8,500 farmers across the island. (15-17) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement CREAD during the reporting period.
Chances†	Government-funded program implemented by the Ministry of Youth Development and Empowerment, Youth at Risk, Gender Affairs, Seniors Security and Dominicans with Disabilities that supports an emergency residential shelter to provide short-term services to abused and neglected children. The shelter can accept victims of the worst forms of child labor. (1,10,18,19)

† Program is funded by the Government of Dominica.

The Organization of Eastern Caribbean States and UNICEF published a National Child Protection Action Plan effective through early 2021 to guide the implementation of recommendations for Dominica's child justice framework. Research was unable to determine whether Dominica has completed the recommendations or adopted the action plan. (1-3)

Although the government had social programs in 2020 that could address child labor, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the programs during the reporting period. (2,3)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Dominica (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Define the conditions, activities, and number of hours permissible for light work.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that the minimum age for hazardous work is age 18 for all children.	2015 – 2020
	Determine and codify the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2018 – 2020
	Criminally prohibit forced labor.	2019 – 2020
	Criminally prohibit domestic child trafficking.	2019 – 2020
	Enact legislation to specifically prohibit using, procuring, or offering a child for the production of pornography or pornographic performances.	2011 – 2020
	Prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
Enforcement	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2020
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including members of the Kalinago community who are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, by ensuring access to secondary education within the Kalinago territory.	2018 – 2020
	Adopt a national policy to improve Dominica's child justice framework as recommended by the National Child Protection Action Plan published in 2018 by the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States and UNICEF.	2020
	Publish activities undertaken to implement social programs to address child labor during the reporting period.	2020

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2020, the Dominican Republic made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government established the Oportunidad 14–24 program, with the aim of reintegrating high-risk and socially vulnerable adolescents and young people into technical or vocational education and training programs. To address the education challenges produced by the COVID-19 pandemic, the government procured 800,000 tablets and laptops to facilitate instruction, as well as distributed booklets with academic content and activities to nearly two million students. The Attorney General's Office also obtained three convictions against individuals for criminal violations related to the worst forms of child labor. However, children in the Dominican Republic are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Other gaps remain, including limited human and financial resources for the enforcement of child labor laws. Labor inspectors also lack the authority to assess penalties for violations related to child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Dominican Republic are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-5) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (6-8) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in the Dominican Republic.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in the Dominican Republic are victims of commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in tourist locations and major urban areas. (28) In addition, the Dominican Republic is a destination country for child sex tourists primarily from Northern America and Europe. (29) The porous border between Haiti and the Dominican Republic has allowed some Haitian children to be trafficked into the Dominican Republic, where they are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and forced to work in domestic work, street vending, or begging. (1,2,5,21,30-33) Some children, including Haitian children and Dominican-born children of Haitian descent, work in agricultural production, often alongside their parents, and live in communities that frequently lack basic services, including schools. (26,34,35) Large populations of children, primarily Haitians or Dominicans of Haitian descent, live on the streets and were particularly vulnerable to trafficking. During the reporting period, the government noted an increase in domestic trafficking victims, specifically children, brought from the interior of the country to coastal tourist areas. (29)

Many Dominican-born persons of Haitian descent, including children, continue to remain in undocumented status because of a 2010 constitutional change and a 2013 Constitutional Tribunal Judgement. (36) These changes retroactively revised the Dominican Republic's citizenship transmission laws, by declaring that all persons born after 1929 to non-citizens in the Dominican Republic were not eligible for citizenship. As a result, thousands of people had their citizenship revoked, most of which were children of Haitian descent. (28,36) Afterwards, the government established new legal provisions aimed at providing legal pathways for these individuals to regularize their immigration status in the country. Yet, many of those of Haitian descent affected by the changes have been unable to obtain legal residency documents or have their citizenship reinstated. (28,36) Approximately 26,000 of an estimated 135,000 Dominican-born individuals affected by the change in law, most of whom are of Haitian descent, had their citizenship reinstated as of December 2019. (28,36,37) The government has also issued identity documentation, but not yet citizenship, to approximately 8,700 people who could prove they were born in the Dominican Republic prior to 2013 but had never registered their birth. (36,38,39) During the reporting period, the outgoing President issued a presidential decree naturalizing 749 of these individuals, nearly all of them minors, but the government has not yet brought the decree into effect. (40) In addition, thousands of other applicants remain trapped in legal limbo. Although their cases have been approved, the government has not yet issues a decree finalizing the naturalization process. (40) Due to the slow implementation of the program, coupled with response measures for the COVID-19 pandemic, many applicants have seen their interim identity and residency documents expire. (40) Local NGOs report that the applicants are often unable to renew their documents due to government office closures, high fees, and a requirement to present a foreign passport despite the fact that these applicants are Dominican-born. Individuals with expired documents are at heightened risk of labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (40) Some Dominican-born children of Haitian descent have been deported. (41) Children of undocumented migrant parents, many of Haitian descent, are particularly vulnerable to labor exploitation because they may lack birth or residency documents. This increases the likelihood that these children may be denied access to education or may be engaged in child labor, including its worst forms, because labor inspectors may not be able to verify their ages. (1,3,4,24,30,42,43) In addition, Haitian children who remain in the Dominican Republic, after their parents have been repatriated to Haiti due to their undocumented status, are more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (44)

During the reporting period, due to the pandemic, public schools were entirely closed from March to November. In November, instruction moved to a remote and virtual format for the remainder of 2020. (19) To continue providing schooling for children during the pandemic, the government developed several initiatives, such as: procuring 800,000 tablets and laptops to facilitate instruction, as well as the use of television, radio, and take-home workbooks to reach students without access to computers or internet. Even with all these initiatives, the government was still unable to reach all the children who lost access to education due to the change to a remote learning environment as a result of the pandemic. (19)

National law guarantees free public education, requires that all children attend school until age 14, and prohibits the exclusion of children from the educational system based on a lack of identity documents. (45-48) Parents are also instructed to obtain birth registration documents for their children, and the Ministry of Education provides free legal services to help parents obtain identity documents. In addition, national policy allows undocumented children to enroll in school. (49) The Ministry of Education's Office of Community Participation is the point of contact to handle school denial cases for children without identity documents and has reissued a directive to public schools, noting that all children must be allowed to attend school, regardless of their documentation. Parents may also appeal to the district government or the Ministry of Education's regional office if their child is denied educational access. (18,49-52) Research did not identify cases of children without identity documents being denied access to education during the reporting period. (19) However, the Ministry of Education's current Operations Manual of Public Education Centers incorrectly requires school administrators to request children to present identity documents to enroll in school. (53) Moreover, the Ministry of Education requires that students have a birth certificate on file to issue a high school diploma. As a result, children without identity documents are unable to prove that they have completed high school. (54,55)

Teacher shortages and a lack of school infrastructure create barriers to accessing education in the Dominican Republic. (19) In addition, a high percentage of students drop out at the primary and secondary levels. (2,36,56-58) These issues particularly affect children living in rural areas and in communities predominantly of Haitian descent. Sources also indicate that some children of Haitian descent face discrimination by teachers and peers, travel long distances to schools, and are unable to afford school fees and supplies. (2,36,56-58)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Dominican Republic has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the Dominican Republic's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of military recruitment by non-state armed groups.

* No conscription (64)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (47,61)

On December 21, the National Congress approved a new law prohibiting child marriage. Although this law does not directly address child labor issues, it is expected to indirectly assist in prevention efforts, because some reports indicate that child marriage has been used in recent years as a cover for children subjected to labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (19,29)

Laws related to forced labor are not sufficient because they do not criminally prohibit forced labor except when it results from human trafficking. (45,60,61) In addition, the prohibition against child trafficking is insufficient because it requires threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking under the Law Against Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons; and although the Code for the Protection System and Fundamental Rights of Boys, Girls, and Adolescents criminally prohibits accepting, offering, or transferring children without requiring threats, the use of force, or coercion as an element, it does not criminally prohibit the recruitment or harboring of children. (45,60)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MT)	Leads efforts to eliminate child labor; conducts labor inspections, and oversees the Child Labor Directorate. Refers children found in exploitative conditions to social services, mainly the National Council for Children and Adolescents. (21,36,65)
Office of the Attorney General	Prosecutes crimes involving children, including criminal violations related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children and other worst forms of child labor. Oversees the Special Prosecutor for Migrant Smuggling and Human Trafficking, which receives notifications of alleged violations related to the worst forms of child labor through a hotline. (4,26,30,66,67)
National Police's Trafficking in Persons Unit and the Directorate of Migration	Enforces criminal laws, including those prohibiting the worst forms of child labor; and coordinates with the Office of the Attorney General in the prosecution of perpetrators. Under the Ministry of the Interior. (15,26,30,66)
Specialized Corps for Tourist Safety	Prevents child sex abuse and commercial sexual exploitation in tourist areas, rescues child victims, and arrests and brings to justice child sex offenders. Overseen by the Ministry of Defense. (26)
Local Vigilance Committees	Prevent child labor at the local level by alerting law enforcement of activities linked to child labor, directing victims of child labor to social services, and working closely with the National Steering Committee to Eliminate Child Labor to raise awareness of child labor. (17,68) There are a total of 49 Local Vigilance Committees nationwide. (69-71)
National Council for Children and Adolescents	Develops and implements policies and programs to eradicate all forms of violence against children, including child labor; and improve the employability of young people. Coordinates with MT to protect children against labor exploitation and enforce labor laws. (36)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2020, labor law enforcement agencies in the Dominican Republic took actions to combat child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor (MT) that may hinder labor law enforcement, including the authority to assess penalties.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The MT was working at approximately 40 percent capacity during most of 2020 due to the countermeasures established to address the pandemic, which likely impacted the agency's ability to carry out its mandate. (19) The circumstances caused by, and surrounding, the pandemic led to a 41 percent decrease in the total number of labor inspections conducted in 2020 when compared to the previous year. (40) Moreover, the reported budget for the labor inspectorate in 2020 represented an approximate 23 percent decrease in funding from 2019, which might be reflective of budget cuts made all over the government due to the economic contraction induced by the pandemic. (19)

During the reporting period, the MT employed 215 full-time labor inspectors, which is an increase from 2019. (3) Even so, that number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of the Dominican Republic's workforce, which includes more than 4.7 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, the Dominican Republic would employ about 315 labor inspectors. (72-74) In 2020, a total of 41,953 labor inspections were conducted, representing approximately 195 inspections completed by each inspector. This is a high number of inspections conducted by each inspector, and it is likely that this high number impacts the quality of such inspections. (19)

Labor inspectors are authorized to re-inspect worksites to ensure that violations are remedied. However, re-inspections occur less frequently and are more difficult, and less consistent, in remote rural areas. (59,75) In addition, evidence suggests that some inspection reports do not set a time frame for the remediation of the violations identified. (76)

The 2008 General Inspection Protocol and the 2011 Inspection Protocol for Agriculture instruct inspectors to assess child labor violations by reviewing workers' identity documents and employers' records, making observations, and conducting interviews. (75) However, the MT indicated that improvements could be made with respect to how inspectors conduct interviews, ask follow-up questions, and use inspection data to strengthen the inspection system, to ascertain the ages of workers and guarantee that children under age 18 are not participating in dangerous or unhealthy work. Moreover, reports indicate that in some cases, Spanish-speaking inspectors working without translation assistance have been responsible for interviewing Creole-speaking workers with limited or no Spanish-language abilities, which may have hindered those inspections. (15)

During the reporting period, the MT reported that 266 children and adolescents were identified through labor inspections in rural and urban areas and were removed from child labor. (19) Research indicates that inspections are not always conducted in a timely manner after requests are made. In addition, evidence suggests that inspection reports often contain errors and contradictions that undermine the credibility of these reports. (23,76) Research also indicates that substandard labor inspections, incomplete labor inspection reports, and a lack of prosecutorial resources have hindered the ability of the Office of the Attorney General (AG) to pursue prosecutions on criminal matters involving child labor issues. A formal referral mechanism allows the MT to refer child labor victims found during labor inspections to the National Council for Children and Adolescents for social services. (17,20)

The government did not provide information on the number of penalties imposed that were collected, whether routine inspections were targeted, and whether unannounced inspections were conducted for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2020, criminal law enforcement agencies in the Dominican Republic took actions to combat child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2019	2020
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (3)	Yes (19)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (3)	N/A (19)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (3)	Unknown (19)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (3)	Unknown (19)
Number of Violations Found	0 (3)	Unknown (19)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (3)	Unknown (19)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (3)	3 (77)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (3)	Unknown (19)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (19)

The government did not provide comprehensive information on its criminal law enforcement efforts during the reporting period, but the AG indicated that in 2020 a total of eight cases of child labor and 41 cases of commercial sexual exploitation of minors were reported. The AG also reported three convictions against individuals for criminal violations related to the worst forms of child labor. (77) However, despite these efforts by the government, reports indicate that the capacity of enforcement agencies to identify, investigate, and prosecute criminal cases related to human trafficking is limited due to a lack of human and financial resources. (4,15,30,40,52) In addition, the lack of an appropriate case tracking system limits coordination between the MT and the AG. Reports also indicate that some cases referred to the AG by the MT are not subsequently investigated and prosecuted by the AG, which is partially due to this lack of coordination. (4,8,78) Moreover, research finds that the National Council for Children and Adolescents does not have the resources, facilities, and institutional capacity to meet the demand for services nationwide. (1,2,4,79)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including insufficient funding for key coordinating bodies to carry out their mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee to Eliminate Child Labor	Develops policies, approves programs, and coordinates, monitors, and evaluates efforts to combat child labor in the Dominican Republic. Overseen by MT and comprises ministerial representatives, labor unions, private sector representatives, and NGOs. (21,36,80) Oversees the system for referring children found during inspections to appropriate social services. (3) Also comprises local steering committees in each province that meet to coordinate government efforts. The committee met 5 times during the reporting period, and 15 of the steering committees met multiple times for a total of 96 meetings. (19) In February 2020, 45 government officials attended a training to raise awareness on the prevention and eradication of child labor. (81) Its members participated in the launch of the campaign Lanza tu Dardo contra el Trabajo Infantil , a campaign designed to raise awareness about the issue of child labor in the country. (82)
Inter-Agency Commission Against Trafficking in Persons (CITIM)	Coordinates efforts to combat human trafficking and is responsible for developing and implementing national plans. Led by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and comprises 14 government agencies, including MT and law enforcement agencies. (30,83) In 2020, CITIM functioned normally after moving its meetings online in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. In collaboration with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, CITIM published its annual report of the government's efforts to combat human trafficking for the previous year. (40,84)
Social Policies Coordination Cabinet	Coordinates all social policies and conditional cash transfer programs, such as the Progressing with Solidarity (PROSOLI) program. Led by the Vice President. (15) Research was unable to determine whether the Social Policies Coordination Cabinet Coordinating Body was active during the reporting period.

In 2020, the government created the Cabinet for Children and Adolescents, with the aim to provide effective protection for the rights of children and adolescents, as well as promote their full personal and social development. Its objectives include establishing consensus, designing, and implementing policies on child marriage, adolescent pregnancy, and other problems affecting children and adolescents in the country. (85) Yet, there is no indication that the Cabinet functions as a coordinating mechanism to address child labor. Evidence suggests that the local and municipal committees of the National Steering Committee to Eliminate Child Labor face limitations in their coordination efforts due to a lack of financial resources to adequately carry out their mandates. (18)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including insufficient funding for implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategic Plan to Eradicate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2006–2020)	Identified the roles and responsibilities of government agencies and municipal representatives in eradicating the worst forms of child labor. Prioritized prevention, protection, assistance, and the progressive eradication of the worst forms of child labor. (15,86) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement the National Strategic Plan to Eradicate the Worst Forms of Child Labor.
Roadmap Toward the Elimination of Child Labor in the Dominican Republic (2016–2020)	Aimed to eliminate child labor and set targets and indicators for poverty reduction, health, education, institutional coordination, awareness raising, and information sharing. (2,20,65,87) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement the Roadmap.
National Action Plan against Human Trafficking and Illicit Smuggling of Migrants (2017–2020)	Identified the roles and responsibilities of government agencies in preventing and combating trafficking in persons and assisting trafficking victims. In 2020, the government reported undertaking an assessment of this plan, as well as beginning to develop the subsequent plan, though this process is still ongoing. (40)
Education Pact (2014–2030)	Includes strategies to combat child labor and seeks to improve the quality of, and access to, primary and secondary education by increasing attendance and graduation rates and enrolling more students in the Extended School Day Program. (88,89) Implemented by the Ministry of Education and supported by the World Bank. Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement the Education Pact.
National Development Strategy 2030	Aims to reduce poverty and inequality and includes programs that aim to combat child labor, provide universal education to all children, and expand access to secondary school, including for students without identity documents. Implemented by the Ministry of Economy. (20,56,90) During the reporting period, the government continued to dedicate 4 percent of the nation's GDP to education as indicated by the National Development Strategy. (3,19,91)

In 2020, the National Institute of Migration of the Dominican Republic carried out a study on Boys, Girls, and Adolescents of foreign origin at risk of trafficking in the Dominican Republic. (77) In this study they explore the characteristics of the phenomenon of trafficking for purposes of sexual and labor exploitation. The study was conducted with the purpose of generating data to support the future creation of public policies, the study had not been published at the end of the reporting period. (77) However, despite these government efforts, an insufficient allocation of resources has slowed efforts to fully implement key policies related to child labor, including conducting planned activities in a timely manner. (1,92)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
PROSOLI†	Main poverty eradication strategy by the government that serves as the primary line of social protection action. Focuses on social intervention through the integration of conditional cash transfers, socio-educational support, and links with other government programs and services. (93) Seven components help articulate its actions: identification, comprehensive health, education, human training and citizen awareness, food security, nutrition and income generation, habitability and protection of the environment, and access to information and communication technologies. (93) Addresses families in vulnerable situations, particularly low-income families, with one of its goals being to increase children's school attendance and reduce child labor. (2,57,93,94) To carry out its mission, it has established several projects, among which is Progresando Unidos , which aims to strengthen interventions in provinces with a large number of households in extreme poverty. (95,96) In 2020, PROSOLI conducted induction workshops for new trainers, coordinators, regional directors, and operational staff to instruct them on its functioning and operation. (97) PROSOLI also contributed approximately $35,000 dollars to the National Institute of Professional Technical Training as part of the initiatives undertaken to carry out the Oportunidad 14–24* program. (98) PROSOLI also sponsored the campaign Ahora Más que Nunca Sin Trabajo Infantil , as part of the annual celebration of World Day Against Child Labor. This campaign aimed to raise awareness in the country about child labor. (99)
Oportunidad 14–24†*	Aims at reintegrating high-risk and socially vulnerable adolescents and young people into technical or vocational education and training programs. It will provide adolescents and young people between ages 14 to 24 with limited resources access to technical professional training, scholarships, a monthly provision of raw food, and transportation to study centers. (100-103)
Extended School Day Program ( Jornada Escolar Extendida )†	Ministry of Education program to extend school hours to a full day (8 a.m. to 4 p.m.) to improve educational achievement and reduce child labor. (1,104) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement this program.
Line 700 Hotline‡	Office of the First Lady's free hotline to enable citizens to report cases of the worst forms of child labor. (105,106) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement this program.
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL-funded projects that aim to eliminate child labor, including Project to Reduce Child Labor and Improve Working Conditions in Agriculture in the Dominican Republic (FORMITRA) (2017–2022) , a $5 million project implemented by ILO to support the efforts of the Government of the Dominican Republic to address child labor and strengthen labor law enforcement in agriculture. (108) During the reporting year, this project provided training to 68 individuals, including 61 labor inspectors, on fundamental principles and rights at work. (109) The training was administered by a Senior Technical Specialist from the ILO, and its main objective was to develop and strengthen the capacities of labor inspectors. In addition, the FORMITRA project assisted in developing a training program for labor inspectors in the country. (109) Additional information is available on the USDOL website .

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of the Dominican Republic.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2,14,57,100,107,110,111)

In 2020, in an effort to improve the national education system, the government allocated 4 percent of the national GDP in its budget for primary and secondary education for the eighth consecutive year. (1-3,8,19,20) In addition, in response to the pandemic, the Ministry of Education, through the technical guidance of UNICEF and financial support of USAID, was able to distribute booklets with academic content and activities to nearly 2 million students in public schools. The government also opened school buildings for food distribution activities during the pandemic. (19) Although the Dominican Republic has programs that target the worst forms of child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly to address commercial sexual exploitation of children and harmful work in the agricultural sector. (1,2)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Dominican Republic (Table 11).

Dominican Republic

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits forced labor.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that laws prohibiting child trafficking do not require threats, the use of force, or coercion as elements of the crime.	2019 – 2020
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2020
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice to provide adequate coverage of the workforce, especially in remote rural areas.	2009 – 2020
	Determine whether the inspection ratio for each labor inspector is appropriate to ensure the quality and scope of inspections.	2020
	Improve case tracking so that labor inspectors are able to promptly follow up on violation remediation to improve enforcement of laws prohibiting child labor and discourage the use of child labor by employers.	2012 – 2020
	Establish a system to verify the age of young workers to better protect children without birth certificates or other legal documentation from exploitation.	2012 – 2020
	Ensure that labor inspectors are able to communicate with Creole-speaking workers, including those who may be underage, to adequately conduct inspections for child labor violations.	2012 – 2020
	Improve training of inspectors to increase the quality of interviews with employers and workers, gather consistent documentation, conduct timely re-inspection to ensure compliance, and use inspection data to enable prosecution.	2012 – 2020
	Publish comprehensive information on the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected, if routine targeted inspections and unannounced inspections were conducted, as well as the training provided to criminal law enforcement, the number of criminal law enforcement investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, and penalties imposed.	2009 – 2020
	Increase the human and financial resources to ensure adequate criminal law enforcement related to child labor.	2009 – 2020
	Improve coordination and case tracking systems between the Ministry of Labor and the Office of the Attorney General to ensure that violations are adequately investigated and prosecuted.	2013 – 2020
	Ensure that the National Council for Children and Adolescents has sufficient resources and facilities to provide the necessary care for victims of child labor.	2015 – 2020
	Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are able to carry out their intended mandates.
Ensure that the National Steering Committee to Eliminate Child Labor's Local and Municipal Committees have sufficient resources to effectively coordinate efforts to address child labor.		2013 – 2020
Government Policies	Take steps to implement the policies related to child labor on an annual basis and publish information about these efforts.	2020
	Ensure that appropriate funding exists to effectively implement and coordinate policies related to child labor.	2009 – 2020
Social Programs	Increase efforts to issue identity documents to all children to reduce their vulnerability to labor exploitation.	2011 – 2020
	Address the specific educational needs of vulnerable populations, including unaccompanied migrant children, children of parents who have been deported, and undocumented children.	2011 – 2020
	Increase school infrastructure and teacher availability, especially in rural areas, remove supply and school-related fees, and expand efforts to reduce discrimination in schools.	2011 – 2020
	Update all Ministry of Education's school manuals to align with Dominican law guaranteeing that children without birth certificates or identity documents are able to enroll in schools, and ensure that all children receive diplomas certifying school completion.	2017 – 2020
	Ensure that all social programs are adequately funded, implemented, and report on their yearly efforts.	2020
	Expand social protection programs, particularly for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and harmful agricultural work.	2010 – 2020

In 2020, Ecuador made significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Economic and Social Inclusion provided assistance to approximately 11,530 children and adolescents vulnerable to child labor and the Attorney General's Office indicted 39 individuals for child labor crimes. In addition, the Technical Secretariat for the Lifetime Plan sent out technical brigades to remote areas in all provinces to assist with medical checkups and other social services for children. The Ministry of Labor also signed a Framework Agreement for Inter-Institutional Cooperation with the Association of Municipalities of Ecuador to implement public policies and programs aimed at the prevention and eradication of child labor. Finally, technical teams from the Ministry of Economic and Social Inclusion visited 8,425 families to help keep children in school despite the partial lockdown triggered by the COVID-19 pandemic. However, children in Ecuador are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in mining. The labor inspectorate continues to lack sufficient resources and children continue to face barriers to education, especially in rural areas.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ecuador are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in mining. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ecuador.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	8.2 (302,796)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	8.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		104.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (3)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's Analysis of Statistics from Encuesta Nacional de Empleo, Desempleo y Subempleo (ENEMDU), 2019. (4)

Although the National Council for Inter-Generational Equity worked closely with the Ministry of Economic and Social Inclusion (MIES) to complete a partial study on child labor that was published in early 2019, the government has not conducted a comprehensive nationwide child labor survey since 2012. Both government and civil society agree that a lack of updated statistics hampers efforts in eradicating child labor. (1,2,5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of bananas, coffee, cocoa, palm oil, and flowers, including the use of chemical products† and machetes† (1,2,6,7)
	Fishing† (1,2,6)
	Hazardous work in the carving† and threading† of abacá fiber(1,2,8)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity (Cont.)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Industry	Gold mining† and small-scale mining† (1,9)
	Production of bricks† (1,2)
Industry	Construction,† including loading construction materials, mixing materials to make concrete, and brickwork (1,2,6,10)
Services	Domestic work† (1,2,11)
	Street work, including begging, shoe shining, selling newspapers, and vending (1,12-14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,12,15)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking and robbery (1,5,16,17)
	Recruitment of children by Colombian non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (9,16,17)
	Use in the production of pornography (1,2,16,18)
	Forced labor in banana and palm plantations, floriculture, mining; and in domestic work, street vending, and begging, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,5,9,15,16,19,20)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Civil society and government sources reported incidences of Peruvian adolescents being recruited under false promises of employment into forced labor in illegal mines in Ecuador. (9,18,21) Migrant and refugee children from Colombia and Venezuela are particularly vulnerable to street work, including forced begging. They are also vulnerable to exploitative labor practices in some parts of the fishing sector in the coastal region and artisanal mining in southern Ecuador and in the northern province of Imbabura. (1,2,9,12,16) Indigenous children between the ages of 6 and 10 from the highlands are victims of trafficking in forced begging in Guayaquil and Quito, initially under false promises of employment. (1,7,22)

Migrant and refugee children from other Latin American countries, girls from poor families, and indigenous and Afro-Ecuadorian girls are used in child prostitution. (1,2,15,17) Child prostitution in Ecuador also occurs near illegal mining sites. (1,2,10,22) Venezuelan, Colombian, and Peruvian girls are victims of sex trafficking in Ecuador. (1,2,12,17) Networks for commercial sexual exploitation, including sex trafficking, also recruit children from schools, and, increasingly, through social media platforms that encourage children to recruit their friends and classmates. (16,18) On Ecuador’s northern border, traffickers force children into criminality, recruiting them to engage in drug trafficking and robbery. (1,2,17)

Despite education being free in Ecuador, children face barriers to accessing education, including having to pay for uniforms and textbooks, lack of space and teachers, inadequate school infrastructure, teen pregnancy, and lack of transportation for children who must attend schools far from their homes. (1,2,9,23) The lack of schools in rural areas specifically affects indigenous and refugee children, who must travel long distances to attend school. (2,9) Many indigenous children abandon school early, both in rural and urban areas. (6) This situation worsened due to the COVID-19 pandemic, as all in-person education activities were canceled affecting an estimated 4.6 million students. These students were supposed to shift to an online distance-learning method but lack of access to Internet and electronic devices increased absentee and dropout rates, especially in rural areas. (2) Reports indicate that at least 100,000 children did not register for school for the 2020–2021 academic year, partially due to a lack of access to digital devices to continue remote education. (2) Reports indicate that as many as 65 percent of school-age Venezuelan refugee and migrant children are not enrolled in Ecuador’s educational system. While identity documents are not required for attending school, some local officials demanded these documents for processing enrollment applications for refugee and migrant children. (2,24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ecuador has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).
