Section prompt: I would like to better understand how you spent your time in a typical day last week. Think of a typical day last week, not weekends or holidays. We'll start by asking you to list all the activities you did from the time you woke up until you slept at night chronologically. For each activity also specify the time during which you did a particular activity. For example, one activity listing could be that you swept the house after waking up from 6:30 am to 6:45am.

Enumerator Prompt: Enumerator, ask the girl to list all activities after waking up in a chronological order. Record the wake up time, and each activity start time should be equal to the previous end time. For example, if the girl woke up at 6am then activity 1 should have a start time of 6 am. For each activity she lists record it from the activity code list, if something is not mentioned in the codes then add the activity under others. Please note start and end time in 24 hr format. Add more activity rows if required. Note that the last activity would be sleeping.

If you can't find them all that is OK. Keep track of how you got the item. For any items that are harder for you to find, write down some of the problems you had trying to get the item and what you tried to do to deal with the problem. We'll come back on [Monday] to see how many you could find. Don't worry—you'll be able to give back anything you've borrowed from others; we won't keep it. Good luck!

Scavenger Hunt follow-up questions [added since last translation]

During the follow-up visit with girls who participate in the scavenger hunt, start by having the girl bring the items she was able to retrieve from her list. Begin by informally discussing with the girl what the process was like and whether it was fun. Then go item by item and have the girl describe how she got the item, with whom she had to negotiate to get the item, any obstacles she encountered. For those items that she does not have, ask whether she attempted to get the item and what happened. Do not methodically go through table, but allow child to freely tell how the items were or were not retrieved
