Break Time for Nursing Mothers

- The Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) requires employers to provide break time and space for a covered nonexempt nursing mother to express breast milk for her nursing child for one year after her child's birth.
- Employers must allow covered employees reasonable break time to express breast milk each time such employee has a need to express milk.
 - The space must be:

- functional for expressing milk
- shielded from view
- free from intrusion
- available as needed, AND
- NOT a bathroom.

Exempt employees may be covered under a State law providing breaks for nursing mothers. If an employer has fewer than 50 employees and can demonstrate that compliance with this law would impose an undue hardship on the employer, that employer does not have to provide nursing breaks.

NOTE: Employers are not required to pay nursing mothers for breaks taken for the purpose of expressing milk. However, where employers already provide paid breaks, the employer must pay an employee who uses those breaks to express milk.
